Delmar law professor wins Stoneman award

By Mel Hyman

Opening the doors of opportunity for women has always been a priority for Albany Law School Professor Bernard Harvith.

The Delmar native was the first chairperson of the school's faculty recruitment committee, which had as its primary aim the hiring of women faculty members.

"That was more than 20 years ago," Harvith recalled, "and there were no women faculty members except for the librarian. The school, which was founded in 1851, is one of the five oldest law schools in the country.

Today, more than 20 percent of the law school faculty are women and in a switch of sorts, the school librarian is a man.

"We've been able to reverse a number of stereotypes," Harvith said. "I've also been very active in helping women graduates obtain employment."

For his efforts, Harvith was presented with the first-ever Kate Stoneman Award.

Hearing tonight on BC budget

By Dev Tobin

The public gets one last chance to comment on the Bethlehem Central School District's 1994-95 budget tonight (April 13), at 8 p.m. in the district offices, 90 Adams Place.

The budget calls for spending $35,712,430 next year, and would result in an estimated tax rate increase for district residents of 4.99 percent in Bethlehem and 5.47 in New Scotland.

The estimated tax rates for next year would be $15.81 per thousand of assessed value for Bethlehem district residents and $15.85 per thousand for New Scotland district residents.

Spending is up $1,962,684 from this year. Aside from salary hikes per collective bargaining agreements, the major new expenses in the budget are for six middle school teachers, a resource room teacher and a technology coordinator.

Also on the ballot at the May 4 vote is a school bus purchase proposition totaling $568,500, a $1,280,000 refinancing of

Judge sides with town in Slingerlands vault

By Mel Hyman

The historic Slingerland family vault, a source of controversy for years, will apparently revert to town ownership after a state Supreme Court ruling that Bethlehem has a perfect legal right to the property.

In 1990, the town brought a lawsuit in Supreme Court seeking title to the 19th century cemetery plot, which is located in a mounded area across from the Toll Gate off New Scotland Road.

Anthony Pizzitola, who owns the property surrounding the burial mound, has claimed dominion over the site since he purchased a large tract of land at the junction of New Scotland Road and Kenwood Avenue in 1981. Pizzitola has allegedly interfered with people seeking to visit the burial vault, which is the reason the town initiated the suit, according to Town Attorney Bernard Kaplowitz.

The court decision, written by Supreme Court Justice Lawrence Kahn, noted that the town's case might have failed because of technical oversights. But on the issue of ownership, Judge Kahn wrote, "the Town of Bethlehem has acquired title to the property in question and may legitimately preclude defendants from maintaining any control over the land. Clearly, the defendants have no legal title to the cemetery plot..."

Kahn's decision said three of the four heirs of the late William H. Slingerland ceded ownership over to the town in the 1980s. The fourth surviving heir with rights to the mausoleum was never located.

But the Pizzitola family's attorney sees it differently, noting that Judge Kahn indicated that a dismissal of the case was warranted, even though he declined to do so.

"It looks like the town lost. Case dismissed," said Albany attorney James Bruner, who represented Anthony, Fulvia and Vincent Pizzitola in the action. While

The Slingerlands Family Vault

Kahn made mention of the deeds, he dismissed the injunction sought by the town on other grounds, Bruner said.

"If the town has unlimited resources and wants to go back and initiate another lawsuit," they are free to do so, Bruner said.

Kaplowitz said that while Judge Kahn indicated he could dismiss the town's suit, he opted not to because the town was so clearly in the right. Kaplowitz said that

Water project on agenda

By Mel Hyman

Representatives from J. Kenneth Fraser and Associates will present an overview of Bethlehem's planned $10.7 million water system at tonight's meeting of the town board.

After describing the project in detail, the engineering consultants will propose a schedule for awarding construction contracts for the water purification plant and transmission mains.

Tonight's meeting will be new board members George Lenhardt and Ted Putney's first opportunity to ask questions about the project. Though the proposal sailed through during the second term of former Supervisor Ken Ringler, it has since become a source of controversy.

A new group, called Clean Water for Bethlehem, has surfaced over the past few months. Citing concerns over the tapping of an aquifer under the Hudson River, the group has called for limiting use of the water to commercial customers such as the Selkirk Cogen facility off Route 32.

The new plant would be located off Clapper Road. Water would be transmitted to the plant from a series of wells installed along the Hudson River shoreline near Route 144.

Despite assurances about the water's purity by the state Health Department and Department of Environmental Conservation, Clean Water for Bethlehem members worry about what

V'ville student jailed on assault charge

By Dev Tobin

Name-calling escalated into fist-throwing Monday afternoon, and a Voorheesville high school student is in Albany County Jail facing a felony assault charge.

Sheriff's deputies from the Voorheesville patrol charged Ronald Hollins, 17, of Severson Hill Road, with second-degree assault for allegedly inflicting serious injuries on a fellow student in a hallway fight near the cafeteria of Clayton A. Bouton Junior-Senior High School.

Another student, Brian Galicki, 17, of 12 South Main St., was charged with third-degree assault, a misdemeanor.

"It started as a verbal argument and went on from there," said Investigator Craig Apple. Hollins struck the victim several times in the face with his fist, and Galicki kicked him when he was down, Apple said.

The victim suffered a broken nose, a black eye and scratches about the face. He was treated and released Monday at Albany Memorial Hospital.

Second-degree assault involves assault with a weapon or assault causing serious injury, Apple said.

"If you see the pictures of this kid's face, you'd understand the charge," he said.

One more arrest of a high school student who participated in the fight was expected to be made on Tuesday, Apple added.

Hollins was arraigned before Town Justice Kenneth Connolly and sent to Albany County jail under $1,000 bail. He remained in jail as of Tuesday morning.

Galicki was issued an appearance ticket to answer the charge against him in town court Thursday, April 14.

Felony DWI charged

State Police arrested a Glenmont woman on a felony charge of driving while intoxicated over the weekend.

Gertrude Smith, 37, of Windmill Drive, was arrested on Sunday, April 10, after a traffic stop in the Town of Bethlehem. She was initially stopped for failing to keep right, State Police said.

She was also charged with aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.

She was released pending a future appearance in Bethlehem Town Court.

Deputies arrest three for DWI

Sheriff's deputies in the Voorheesville patrol arrested three men for driving while intoxicated in New Scotland.

Richard J. Smith, 34, of Jones Lane, Berne, was charged with DWI after he was stopped on Font Grove Road for failure to keep right at 1:16 a.m. on April 8.

Smith is scheduled to appear in town court on May 5.

Raymond E. Cole, 49, of 2144 Truax Lane, Berne, was charged with felony DWI following an accident investigation on Stovepipe Road at 3:11 p.m. April 3.

Cole was scheduled to appear in town court on April 5.

Nicholas Chochos, 26, of 83 Hurst Ave., Albany, was charged with DWI and unlawful possession of marijuana following police investigation of an accident on Krumkill Road at 2:10 a.m. April 2.

Chochos is scheduled to appear in town court on April 14.

Police probe assault

Bethlehem police are treating the assault of a Hunter Road woman last week as an isolated incident and say there is no evidence that a serial rapist is on the loose.

Except for The Spotlight's coverage of the attack, Lt. Frederick Holligan said he was dismayed over media reports — especially those on TV — that seemed to play upon people's fears. There is no evidence as of yet to determine whether the 31-year-old woman who was awakened from her sleep was raped or sexually assaulted.

Lab results that could clarify this are not expected for some time, he said. In the meantime, Bethlehem police detectives are working nonstop on the case.

"We've put in hundreds of hours on this and have developed some good leads. Our people have stopped at every single house between Delaware Avenue and North Street," he said, and "have come up with some good information."

Soon after the attack on Sunday, April 3, Bethlehem police were informed that an Albany County sheriff's deputy did spot two men in the vicinity of the CVS Pharmacy on Delaware Avenue, but no further information as to their activities could be ascertained.

Police K9s were able to follow the intruder's tracks from the victim's home out to Delaware Avenue where they lost the scent.

Holligan said police have been unable to put together a composite of the attacker because it was dark inside the house, and the woman was traumatized.

Thus far the investigation has focused to a large extent on the activities of the victim — as well as her roommate — in the days and hours preceding the attack. Police are also scrutinizing some articles left behind by the intruder.

The victim did report that a cloth was placed over her mouth after the man jumped on her in the bedroom, but Holligan said it was unclear whether the smell of alcohol that she detected was on the man himself or on the material.

The victim was treated and released from Albany Medical Center Hospital for facial injuries. Police patrols in the area have increased significantly since the attack.

V'ville sheriff's patrol reports crime decline

By Dev Tobin

Despite the conventional wisdom that crime is widespread and worsening, national and local statistics reveal a more reassuring, if less sensational, story.

Reflecting national trends, the 1993 annual activity report of the Albany County Sheriff's Department's Voorheesville substation is generally good news, featuring dramatic declines in a wide range of crimes from drunken driving to burglary.

"Generally crime is down, but it seems that media-grabbing crime is up," said Lt. Scott Giroux, who took over command of the substation in October.

Public awareness of crimes like child abduction is very high, although the substation had no verifiable reports of such cases in either 1992 or 1993.

"Last week, we had a complaint about an attempted abduction, and it turned out to be two ladies from New York City who were lost and asking for directions," Giroux said. "But I'd rather check out 10 false complaints than miss one and have someone abducted."

In another area of high public awareness, driving while intoxicated arrests dropped from 143 in 1992 to 103 last year, and arrests for driving while ability impaired fell from 14 to 7.

"We're still out there looking for them, but the numbers are way down," Giroux said.

"The message must be getting out," added Giroux, noting that the decline is even more impressive considering that the patrol made 260 DWI arrests in 1991.

Denis Foley of Delmar, administrator of the sheriff's STOP-DWI program, agreed that "visible, proactive" education and enforcement efforts "are really making a difference, especially in the rural areas."

Foley noted that alcohol-related accidents are generally more severe in rural areas, where drunken drivers drive faster on narrower roads, compared to urban or suburban areas.

The continued reduction in arrests by the Voorheesville substation is reflected in the fact that DWI-related fatalities countywide are down 30 percent over the last 10 years, Foley added.

Juvenile arrests, which are often connected to underage alcohol use, also declined, from 65 in 1992 to 18 last year.

Calls to the patrol were less in 1993 (89,535, compared to 101,876 in 1992) and reports of several other types of crimes showed a marked decline.

For instance, burglary complaints were down by almost half in 1993 (31, compared to 60 in 1992) and criminal mischief complaints were cut exactly in half (22, compared to 44 in 1992).

Arrests for a variety of drug-related crimes were also down substantially, but Giroux noted that many drug cases were referred to the sheriff's drug interdiction unit, which then recorded the arrests.

For more serious crimes, the 1993 station report noted five rape complaints, up from just one in 1992; no murders, as opposed to one in 1992; one negligent manslaughter, compared to none in 1992; three arson cases, up from one in 1992; two motor vehicle thefts, down from six in 1992; and no robberies or kidnappings in either year.

Deputies from the Voorheesville station patrol more than half of Albany County — the towns of New Scotland, Coeymans, Westerlo, Berne, Knox and Rensselaerville. The station is staffed by six sergeants, five investigators, 24 deputies and two civilians.

Aside from road patrol, Voorheesville deputies provide a range of services, including DARE instruction in local schools, marine patrol on the Hudson River, snowmobile patrol during periods of heavy winter weather, and K-9 dogs for search and rescue and drug searches.

Village supermarket still on track

By Dev Tobin

No news is good news, at least according to the man who wants to open a supermarket in Voorheesville.

Meeting with officials of the village of Voorheesville and the town of New Scotland, James Nichols was upbeat about his proposal to operate a full-service supermarket in the building on Maple Avenue that has been vacant since Grand Union moved out 10 years ago.

But Nichols was reluctant to provide even an estimate of a time frame for the project.

"I've been meeting regularly with the landlord, the wholesaler and the bank, but I can't give you a timetable," he told the local leaders. "It's going to be a while, but there is light at the end of the tunnel. We will get a market open there — it's not smoke anymore, it's past that stage."

Nichols came to the meeting "to put a face on the proposal," noting that he is a 30-year veteran of the grocery business who has been looking for an opportunity to fulfill a "lifelong dream" and strike out on his own.

Nichols looked at 20 stores over the past few years, and settled on the Voorheesville location because "It's really beautiful up here, and there are good schools," an important consideration since he and his wife Elaine have five children.

Nichols is currently the general manager of Peck's Markets, a three-store chain in Sullivan County.

Nichols said that he is working with a second wholesaler, SuperValu of Keene, N.H., after negotiations with the Scrivner wholesale company fell through late last year.

One bit of good news, Nichols said, is that SuperValu will not require another feasibility survey (to determine whether the area could support a supermarket) similar to the positive one performed by Scrivner last year.

Nichols outlined his plans for a market with a scratch bakery, and fresh deli, produce, meats and seafood.

"We won't be as big as some of the other stores — we may have three rows of Tide instead of 10 rows of Tide," he said, adding that convenient location will be an advantage in competition with larger supermarkets on Route 20, about four miles from the village.

We will get a market open there — it's not smoke anymore, it's past that stage.

James Nichols

"We will put all our stress on customer service. I know people don't like to stand in line," he said. "Our theory is very simple — you treat people the way you want to be treated."

One aspect of that is item pricing, Nichols said. "I don't know if Albany County has an item-pricing law (it does), but we will do item pricing. We won't expect customers to go to the shelf and not know the price," he said.

Nichols said his store's prices would be competitive with the everyday prices of other local supermarkets. He estimated that the store would employ about 50 full- and part-time workers.

One feature Nichols will try out at the market is Fresh and Fast at Five, hot dinner entrees prepared with the busy family in mind, he said.

He also plans to set up a consumer committee who will meet monthly with the market's key people to provide feedback and discuss new ideas.

The local leaders were impressed with Nichols' project.

"Everybody is very interested in having this happen," said Voorheesville Mayor Edward Clark. "We'll be glad to help in any way we can."

"The market would be a tremendous asset to the community," said New Scotland Supervisor Herb Reilly. "There's a need for the services and for employment — 50 jobs is a lot of jobs."

NS sets master plan hearings

More than four years in the making, New Scotland's update of its comprehensive land use plan is rounding third and headed for home.

The final round of public comment on the document begins at an informational hearing tonight, April 13, at 7 p.m. in the auditorium of Clayton A. Bouton Junior-Senior High School, Route 85A.

The town planning board will also hold informal meetings on the update with concerned citizens at town hall on Saturday, April 16, from 9 a.m. to noon, and on Tuesday, April 19, from 7 to 9 p.m.

For information, call 765-3356.

BC shadows get hands-on career experience

By Dev Tobin

In the vintage radio serial, the Shadow knows what evil lurks in the hearts of men.

At Bethlehem Central High School, "shadows" get to know what lies ahead of them after their academic careers.

In the school's shadow program, juniors and seniors spend all or part of a day with an adult at his or her job. They apply for the program in January, and do their shadow day in March or April.

"Too often students don't see the connection between education and the world of work," said Jill Rifkin, one of the three parent co-chairwomen of the program.

"They can go through school with no experience of the kind of work they may want to do," she said. "The shadow program is a wonderful opportunity to explore any career you could possibly be interested in."

Claire Sellitti, another parent co-chairwoman, knows the program helps students direct themselves.

"My oldest daughters shadowed a graphic artist four years ago, and now she's studying computer graphic design at Parsons," she said.

Coordinating the program is plenty of work for the approximately 20 parent volunteers, who brainstorm on finding appropriate "sponsors" to shadow, then work with individual students to guide them through the process.

"Without the parents, there is no shadow program," Sellitti said.

Sponsors who have agreed to be shadowed this year include

Dr. Nina Caires was recently shadowed by BC student Lora Gurley.

Hugh Hewitt

teachers, lawyers, doctors, nurses, social workers, police officers, chefs, engineers, veterinarians, a corporate pilot, a state Assemblyman and a state Supreme Court judge.

With 84 participants this year, the 10-year-old shadow program has been growing lately, Sellitti said. "A few years ago, it used to be in the 40s."

While some shadows find that the experience solidifies a career choice, others find that the job is not what they thought it would be, Rifkin said.

"So many people are dissatisfied with the jobs they have," she noted. "This gives students a chance to try it out for a day. If it helps them avoid career mistakes, it's invaluable."

In their written reports on the shadow day, students assert the value of the shadow experience.

"I learned so much about the field. I even watched Dr. Caires operate on a cat," said Lora Gurley of her day with veterinarian Dr. Nina Caires. "Now I'm much more certain I want to pursue veterinary medicine as a career."

Kim Hempstead said her day shadowing a respiratory therapist at St. Peter's Hospital "gave me a full outlook on the job of a respiratory therapist. It was a good hands-on experience that really helped me make my decision for the future."

For Shannon MacDowell, a day with attorney Peter Gerstenzang led her to the conclusion, "I know I don't want to go into criminal law."

Fears of community fade as years pass

Glenmont Job Corps celebrates staying power

By Dev Tobin

"A new day of opportunity is dawning. The days of the dole in our country are numbered."

So said President Lyndon Johnson 30 years ago when he signed the Great Society anti-poverty bill that included Job Corps training for under-privileged youth.

Well, welfare is still with us, but the Job Corps has helped untold thousands of young people learn marketable job skills, avoid dependence on public assistance and stay out of jail.

This week, the Glenmont Job Corps Center, perhaps the least welcome project ever in the town of Bethlehem, will host a regional celebration of the 30th anniversary of the Job Corps with displays and demonstrations at the North Concourse of the Empire State Plaza.

Seventeen years ago, neighbors filled meeting rooms and the letters column of The Spotlight complaining about the center's feared effect on public safety and property values.

Housed in the former Our Lady of Angels seminary off Route 144 between Van Wies Point and Cedar Hill, the center has since quietly gone about its business of providing education and job training to low-income youths without fulfilling the neighbors' fears.

Margaret Law of Van Wies Point recalled that she was very much opposed to the center when it was proposed in 1976.

"We were not consulted beforehand, and the reports we had of other Job Corps centers were just dreadful, so naturally we were concerned," Law said.

"There were a few problems in the early days, but overall they

Leslie Hutcherson, an Iroquois Job Corps Center student, mixes mortar as part of demonstration activities this week at the Empire State Plaza commemorating the program's 30th anniversary nationally. Dev Tobin have been a very good neighbor," said Law, who has served on the center's local advisory board since the beginning.

Center Director Rose Walker Cook said that aside from being good neighbors, Job Corps training produces solid taxpaying citizens, returning an estimated $1.41 for every dollar invested.

With programs in nursing, secretarial, culinary arts and automotive body and mechanical work, the center provides training in areas where jobs are available, Cook noted.

Sometimes, the center's program can overcome years of educational neglect. Cook recalled that one recent graduate came to the center with third-grade reading and fourth-grade math skills.

There were a few problems in the early days, but overall they have been a very good neighbor.

Margaret Law

"With the individual attention we can give and learning at his own pace, he left here with 12th-grade reading and ninth-grade math skills," Cook said.

"He got his driver's license, is working toward his GED, got an apartment and has been working at a local car dealership for eight months."

Cook noted that the residential setting and strict rules of the center provide a structure that most students did not have before.

There are currently 345 students at the Glenmont Center, which employs roughly 130 people.

The center, with a budget of about $5 million, is run by Career Systems Development Corp. under contract to the U.S. Department of Labor.

Matters of Opinion

Uncontested school elections

A maxim attributed to Marian Wright Edelman, the noted civil rights and children's rights leader, goes something like this: "If you want to avoid criticism, don't say anything, don't do anything, and don't stand for anything."

In the Bethlehem Central District, where numerous groups are continually contending for one or another cause (and where, perhaps, safety in numbers could be considered the watchword), it appears that Ms. Edelman's advice is taken to heart.

When district residents go to the polling place (there's only one) next month, they will find exactly two citizens available for the two open places on the Board of Education. The two names are those of the individuals currently occupying the seats; their terms are expiring, they are seeking reelection—and no other citizen, from among all those who say they seek "excellence," is willing to step forward and offer credentials and ideas.

It would be slightly reassuring to be able to brush this off as an oversight, but unfortunately the fact is that only an uncontested election was offered to voters last year as well.

The budget and the golden egg

Though it's far from the largest community in the Capital District, the Village of Voorheesville offers an example for all municipalities this budget-making season. The proposed tax rate in the village is budgeted to go down by 7.8 percent in the coming year.

The assigned reason is the availability of the higher level of Albany County's sales tax, 40 percent of which reverts to cities, towns, and villages. We at The Spotlight are on record, over the past several years, against the higher sales tax simply because it lessens the pressure on local-government officials to exercise desirable stringency in performing their duties efficiently.

In Voorheesville's case, however, there's a reason for congratulation to the extent that the windfall is being passed along to the taxpayers (to a considerable degree) rather than being committed to expenditures for new purposes. That is the kind of spending that tends to become frozen into planning and budgeting permanently.

It's worth noting, further, that the largest new item in the budget establishes a reserve fund hedging against the prospect of a certain expenditure during the year.

All this appears to be a realistic approach to keeping the interests of all the people foremost in mind.

'Save Networks'—but how?

If, as intimated in last week's paper, the funding source for the Bethlehem Networks Project dries up and disappears after three years of plugging away to "promote positive programs" for young people, a real challenge for the entire community is the inevitable result.

In the three years, nearly a quarter-million dollars have been invested in Networks by the State of New York through something called the Governor's Task Force on Integrated Projects. As the new state budget hatches, it seems quite possible that the previously available money—primarily intended to get such programs off and running—may no longer be a resource.

If Networks' efforts are to continue, in that case, funding would have to be forthcoming from some other source or sources. Whatever the shortfall might turn out to be, the efforts presumably would be curtailed accordingly. Grants could be obtained, very possibly, though the lag between application and receipt of funds can be considerable. And such underwriting very often is on a one-time or temporary basis.

The likelihood, then, is that sooner or later—probably sooner—the burden for continuing Networks' projects would fall on the community as a whole. The extent of such support could be expected to depend on the degree of understanding and acceptance of the projects. Very possibly the nature of their formulation and execution would need to be modified. But such positive services should not be permitted to languish.

Bethlehem residents and that amorphous group known as "community leaders" should expect a clarion call to "Save Networks" and be prepared to answer promptly and with great commitment, even more dedicated to effective results than has been the case over these past few years of striving and of some successes.

'Don't tread on me!'

Bosnia or even Czechoslovakia it ain't, but New Scotland town is proud of every one of its fifty-seven square miles, especially where they border any of the half-dozen adjoining towns. New Scotland's Minute Men, in the person of the Town Councilmen, stand ready to defend those borders in a way that evokes admiration.

As probably everyone knows, a land developer has hoped to smuggle fifteen of New Scotland's green acres right across the border into Guilderland. The Town Board, which recognizes a land grab when it sees one, fired back. Supervisor Herb Reilly viewed this—probably correctly—as potentially "the beginning of the piecemeal dismantling of the town." In a manner that would have done a Wallace or a Bruce proud back in the original Scotland, he and his sharpshooting allies rebuffed the would-be intruder. In truth, the canny New Scots had been hoping for a sweetener in the form of certain water rights. With that plum denied, they stood their ground. "One if by land," you'll recall.

Town Board's interface with Engineer questioned

Editor, The Spotlight:

I have followed with interest the reports on Bethlehem's new water supply.

Is the Town Engineer speaking in behalf of all elected Town Board officials?

Shouldn't the board members be responsible for determining residential and industrial water rates? Are board members satisfied that the new source of water will not be subject to accidental spills in the Hudson River?

Shouldn't the Town Engineer be responsible for providing technical guidance to elected Town Board officials and let the board members object to the alleged secret meetings of a citizens group?

Faso sees play in Cuomo move on government size

Editor, The Spotlight:

Governor Cuomo's proposal to create an "independent" commission aimed at reducing the size and scope of government is an election-year ploy to distract attention from his own record.

This is a proposal from someone who is out of ideas. It is almost as if the Governor has forgotten who has been in charge for the past twelve years.

The voters have told us repeatedly, they want change and they are fast losing confidence in the ability of the state government to turn things around. The Governor's idea of "change" is to cede to an eleven-member commission appointed by himself and legislative leaders the responsibility for deciding which state agencies or operations could be accepted or rejected, but not changed, by the Governor and Legislature.

This proposal smacks of insincerity. First, the appointments to this so-called "independent" commission would be by those who have failed to control the size and the cost of state government in the first place. It's just the latest form of the "save me before I spend again" mentality that reveals just how fiscally undisciplined state government has become.

This year's budget—if it ever gets adopted—promises more of the same: more state spending on the bureaucracy and little tax relief for the beleaguered middle class.

The state operations budget passed last week provides for no restructuring or reform of the state bureaucracy, only marginal tinkering and a whopping $900 million increase in spending over 1993-94. That's a $50 increase in costs for every man, woman, and child in this state.

Special-needs students deserving of 'our talents'

Editor, The Spotlight:

I was concerned to read a recent letter from Kay Moody regarding the attention given learning-disabled children in the Bethlehem School District.

As an educator I know that there are no easy solutions to best meeting the needs of children with or without disabilities. I also am aware that I don't know all the particulars of this case. Like Mrs. Moody, I have always wanted the best education for my children. Unlike Mrs. Moody, I believe that my children have benefitted from many excellent teachers and a strong academic program.

Can't we in Bethlehem use our considerable talents to enable special-needs students to benefit from an equally outstanding education?

Your Opinion Matters

A pox on either or both your houses

In his Point of View column on this page, Governor Cuomo refers to the idea of a unicameral legislature for New York. That is a welcome thought, in my own view. This column has advocated it at least once in the past, and I still believe that it has intriguing possibilities despite its undoubtedly worse-than-cloudy outlook.

The Governor mentions two potential advantages: economy and a break away from gridlock between the two houses of the legislature. Those are valid points, and worthy of genuine consideration, which of course they are not going to receive any time in this century and maybe the next one also.

As the previous comment in this column observed, there's no reason in any state, including New York, to have a Senate and an Assembly (under whatever name). The United States Congress has two entities within it because one represents the entire citizenry and the second (the Senate) presumably represents the interests of the states as such—at least, that is the way its members are allotted and chosen.

But there is no such division existing or possible within a state. The Senate here does not represent a geographical division or group of divisions; if it did, then we should have truly one Senator for each county. In fact, the State Senate's membership numerically does virtually duplicate the number of counties, but if representation by county ever was practical, that was ended by the "one person, one vote" formula imposed on all legislative bodies by the Supreme Court. As it happens, Albany County now is the only one of all the sixty-two that has one senator and only one, all to itself.

Commentary

Governor Cuomo was having a bit of fun, prodding the phlegmatic legislators with his comment about a single-house legislative body. But underneath, he is being very realistic in outlining the potential advantages.

And speaking of the legislature, as someone was, one of the more ambitious members, John Faso, has come forward with a proposal for a law that would be somewhat harder on juveniles who show up at school packing a gun. His legislation also covers certain other offenses involving possession or use of a firearm, and also would make juveniles' fingerprints available for criminal prosecutions.

As Mr. Faso points out, "Current laws safeguard young people from criminal prosecution for certain crimes," and he contends that "Such laws must give way so that youths are forced to take responsibility for their crimes." This sounds like a decent-enough proposition, and I herewith offer a few suggestions intended to be helpful in determining when an offender is a "juvenile." In my opinion, the concept of immunity for "juveniles" is abetted by overuse of the expressions "kid" and "kids." Adults have become habituated with these terms and apply them loosely to young people of all ages, toddlers on up to citizens of voting age. An irresponsible "kid" of 3 grows up chronologically to become lumped with all the other "kids" in town, often with no sense of maturing expectations of responsibility. It's kidhood that endows the immunity which troubles Mr. Faso and similar purposefully realistic thinkers. Think and speak of young people with realistic acceptance of them as maturing individuals coming into understanding and acceptance of responsibility and there'll be less occasion to define them as juveniles or adults in police procedures and courts of law. Just a thought, but it's probably preferable to caning.

Getting the day off to a good start

Far too many of us are satisfied with a "cuppa" as breakfast, maybe a short swig of formerly frozen citrus, or perhaps to indulge in an egg McMuffin. There are those who really do think of Folger's instant as "the best part" of a morning. Sugared flakes for a de luxe touch.

On the other hand, some people have learned how to sit down for the morning meal, take time for the long view provided by that day's New York Times, talk things over, even abide the delivered opinions of an "autocrat at the breakfast table," à la the elder Holmes.

Some of these stray thoughts are promoted by the April issue of "Gourmet," which in a variety of places re-introduces the concept of real breakfasts. All those mentioned are taken in public surroundings, but they're rather easily transferable to the home kitchen and table.

Let's sample a few:

Begin with a choice of apricot and cranberry scones, cinnamon rolls, buttermilk-dill quick bread, and griddled chili Cheddar corn bread with jalapeno jelly. Along with freshly squeezed orange juice, topped off with thick but light graham flour pancakes with hints of cinnamon and ginger.

Perhaps you would prefer chicken hash, creamy oatmeal, thick slices of wheat toast, and pecan sour cream coffecake.

These are suggestions from breakfast menus in San Francisco area cafes and diners. Places with names like Ella's, Dottie's True Blue, and Bette's. Sears Fine Foods provides "world famous" sourdough French toast with strawberry preserves, and "eighteen Swedish pancakes," described as thin and airy, a bit larger than silver dollars, served in three stacks to the plate. Plus apple dumpling, corned beef hash, and pecan or strawberry waffles.

Constant Reader

There's an "eggless wonder"—a scramble of potatoes, green chilies, squash, and Jack cheese with tomatillo salsa. Bette's has properly soft-scrambled eggs which, in the "Mexican scramble," come with chorizo, black beans, and hot salsas. Perhaps you'd prefer potato pancakes with sour cream and apple sauce.

One of the best things about these spots, I'd say, is their hours: Bette's, for instance, opens at 6:30 and serves breakfast until 2:30 and (weekends) until 4 p.m.

Up at Hastings House in Vancouver Island, British Columbia, breakfast may include a spiced carrot muffin lashed with preserves and pancakes swathed in Canadian maple syrup and accompanied by a strawberry-rhubarb compote. At nearby Sooke Harbour House, breakfast includes oven-puffed pancakes, called "Dutch Babies," with red huckleberry maple syrup puree.

You may not be familiar with Saugatuck, Michigan, on the southeast coast of Lake Michigan, but it has two-dozen weekend spots, where you can find breakfasts such as this at Fairchild House: Champagne, fresh fruit topped with strawberry rum sorbet, eggs-and-crab Benedict garnished with fresh asparagus, and sauteed morels.

A heavily illustrated article on "Bed-and-Breakfasts in Provence" strangely omits anything at all about breakfasts, though there's plenty of descriptive talk of lunches and dinners. The morning meal is relegated to one allusion: "the B&B owner's most important question: 'What time do you want breakfast?'"

In the same issue, I was quite taken by a short essay by Barbara Kafka, "Saving Grace," in which she advocates "reinstating some version of grace before meals" as a means of reversing the decline of the family meal. She seeks to have her children "stop and savor what they are eating, to pause and appreciate it rather than stuffing it down as fuel and necessity. . . ."

Children raised in such a way, she proposes, "are less likely to join the overweight, the bulimic, and the anorectic among us."

Or, as Mr. Durante used to remind us, "You've got to start each day with a song, even when things go wrong!"

Revise our Constitution, Governor Cuomo urges

New York's Governor wrote this Point of View for The Spotlight Newspapers. In it, he advocates holding a constitutional convention as soon as possible to initiate governmental reforms. The Spotlight has published previous columns, letters, and editorials on the subject of a convention, pro and con.

By Mario M. Cuomo

The New York State Constitution enables the Legislature to call a convention to revise or amend the Constitution at any time. Moreover, it requires that every twenty years the Legislature must, through a state-wide ballot, ask the people if they would like to hold a convention to re-examine their Constitution.

The next time the people must be offered this opportunity will be in 1997. There is no good reason, however, to wait until then. I believe New York State should hold a constitutional convention as soon as possible to put in place the badly needed governmental reforms that the State Legislature has ignored for years.

What kind of reforms might a convention achieve?

It could begin with those that will restore the people's faith in the political process:

We could make it easier for New Yorkers to vote by permitting them to register on election day and by allowing greater use of absentee ballots.

We could make it easier for political outsiders to run for office by simplifying New York's ballot-access laws which serve only to prevent interested and bright, but politically inexperienced, citizens from becoming candidates.

Finally, we could provide public campaign financing and limit the amount of money political candidates may accept and spend. This would greatly reduce the influence of money on our elections.

The scope of reforms that could be enacted would be limited only by the will of the people.

The Constitution could be changed to limit the amount of money the State can borrow and give voters greater say in determining what projects receive State funding.

A convention has been needed for many years to consider ideas the Legislature refuses to act on

We could require the Assembly and the Senate to vote on bills that are either supported by a certain minimum number of people across the state or passed by one of the two houses.

We might even consider whether the legislative process could be improved by reforming the structure of our State Legislature. For example, one certain way to reduce legislative gridlock is to abolish the current two-house Legislature and create in its place a one-house body. For those concerned about spending, as we all should be, just think how much money that would save.

Other ideas that have been suggested in the area of political reform include term limitations, initiative and referendum, casino gambling, life imprisonment without parole, and the reintroduction of the death penalty.

While I do not support all of these proposals, I strongly support the right of New Yorkers to debate and determine them.

The truth is that we have needed a constitutional convention for many years. The ideas I have mentioned are not new. Since I have been Governor, I have recommended to the Legislature that it enact most of these reforms as well as many others. But time and again the Legislature has refused to act. The reason is simple but disturbing:

Many incumbents are reluctant to change a system from which they have benefitted. They achieved power with the system the way it is, and they are reluctant to allow any threats to their own influence.

Ironically, we have created the same kind of aristocratic bureaucracy the Founding Fathers sought to prevent. In this state,

Obscure crosswalk still ignored by most drivers

Editor, The Spotlight:

"They don't give out tickets in this town," someone said this morning, referring to the marked crosswalk on Delaware Avenue at the Delmar Post Office. The driver had just been reminded of the traffic violation evidenced by his car parked across the pedestrian walkway. The incident is not an isolated one.

It reminded an observer of a photo and news story in the Spotlight in mid-January 1991. That article about a like situation stated, "Bethlehem police officials, who have been issuing warning tickets to drivers who park in front of the Post Office said, they think it will

School bus warnings' should be used, heeded

Editor, The Spotlight:

One morning recently an ambulette school bus had stopped at a Bethlehem residence to receive a small child. Its red lights were not flashing. It was on the highway.

When the violation was brought to the attention to the driver the response was "they (motorists) don't always stop anyway."

This attitude needs correcting by any bus drivers who may have it. The intent of this letter is to encourage that correction.

simply take time for people to get used to the new markers and the new rules."

How much time will it take? Now it's more than three years.

Yellow-painting the crosswalk the width of the highway should also serve to supplement the crosswalk markers which are 99 percent disregarded. Let's pray that the time for motorists (and those pedestrians who neglect to use the marked crossway) to "get used to it" will not extend to an accident,

'Law' flyer commended

Editor, The Spotlight:

The informative flyer produced by the Bethlehem Community Partnership has received a very good response.

Various school districts have asked for permission to reproduce the fact sheet and are distributing it to students and/or parents, and the New York State Public High Schools Athletic Association is publishing the information in its magazine for distribution to school districts state-wide. The information was reprinted in Bethlehem Highlights, and of course The Spotlight featured it.

I believe that all persons associated with this project can be proud of it. It provides information about teen-agers, alcohol, parents, and the law (including liability).

Destroyer's shipmates arranging reunion

Editor, The Spotlight:

I recently spoke with a shipmate whom I had not seen or spoken with in the last forty-four years. We had lived, worked, and spent two years of our life together—we were closer than family. He left for another ship to be rated and I remained behind. He was from Maryland and I from New York. I recently found out by talking with someone from California, a total stranger (other than the fact that we both served on the same ship twenty years apart.) My buddy had married a girl from New York and lived only twenty minutes away. We are getting together with our wives for a very special visit.

This brings me to why I am writing. I know there are many other seamen who served with us or after us who would like to renew old friendships. There is a reunion for the USS Eugene Greene (DD711) destroyer that will take place in September. We would appreciate it very much if you could publish the reunion as a community service. We are trying to locate as many of the men who served as possible. We feel there may be others who receive The Spotlight.

'Graduation Celebration' support is solicited

Editor, The Spotlight:

Over the past few weeks there have been a number of letters lauding Bethlehem as a town that cares about its community members. Once again, I am fortunate to witness this caring. The 1994 Graduation Celebration Committee (that organizes and raises funds for the night-long, alcohol free celebration for all seniors following graduation) recently sent out its annual letter to community organizations and business people.

The initial response has been heartening and I want to publicly thank those who have already sent in their donations.

If you have not yet contributed, I hope that this letter might inspire you to do so. The celebration is, after all, not only designed to honor the graduates, but also to safeguard their lives. Donations should be made to: "Graduation Celebration," c/o Ann Seegal, 324 Elm Ave. S., Delmar.

Cuomo

the Republicans have controlled the Senate for fifty-one of the last fifty-two years and the Democrats have controlled the Assembly for nearly twenty years.

It's no wonder they fear change; they have everything to lose. But the people have everything to win.

These are just a few of the reasons we should hold a constitutional convention—and there are no sound reasons why we should not.

One argument against holding a convention suggests that it would be divisive. Open public debate of important issues and ideas is inherently divisive. It is, also, however, the foremost principle of democracy.

The people of this state have a proud history of rising to meet our problems and challenges and overcoming them—and I am confident we will do so again.

Others argue that if a convention were held it would fail to achieve any important reforms, as was a criticism of the last convention. I submit that, rather than using the problems of past conventions as an excuse for never trying again, we determine what went wrong with past conventions and what changes can be made in the convention process that will

We should examine problems of earlier conventions and take heed of their lessons ensure the next one is representative of the people and lives up to its great potential.

Identifying such changes was the charge I gave the Temporary State Commission on Constitutional Revision that I created by executive order last spring. I expect to receive a report from the commission soon.

I am confident that a convention composed of delegates elected wisely and fairly will propose important reforms to our Constitution and that New Yorkers will vote in favor of many of them.

Whether or not a convention produces constitutional action on all the issues I have mentioned, it would be certain to generate serious public debate on the forces shaping our lives today.

Just as important, by demonstrating that the people still have the power to change their government, a convention could create an appetite for ongoing legislative reform that would rejuvenate and transform state government.

Our Constitution invites us on a regular basis to debate its content and make changes where needed. Let's accept the invitation.

Eagles' Nest Bike Shop rechristened as Delmar Sports

The Eagles' Nest Bike Shop is no longer just bikes.

It's a general sports equipment shop that, in addition to bicycles, now sells baseball, soccer and lacrosse equipment, plus an assortment of athletic wear and uniforms.

Even the name is different. It's called Delmar Sports. The location has stayed the same, however: 561 Delaware Ave.

"We are trying to fill a niche in town created by the loss of C.B. Sports," said owner Robert Van Aernem. "We're not trying to be a high-end professional shop even though our prices are comparable to what they charge in places like Herman's."

Rather, Delmar Sports will primarily look to serve the nonfunded sports teams from the high school, Van Aernem said, by offering them "a place in town where they can buy their equipment."

Van Aernem has had a bicycle sales and repair business in town since 1984. He's been at his current location for five years.

Even though the emphasis is changing, Van Aernem has no intention of abandoning the bicycle business. Bikes are expected to remain the shop's bread-and-butter and Van Aernem said if he doesn't have the one you need in stock, he can order it for you.

Bike prices these days range from $85 for a new kid's bike to $4,100 for a full-suspension, 21-speed model.

A grand opening for Delmar Sports was held last weekend. Store hours will be expanded from when "Eagles" alone ruled the roost.

On Monday, Wednesday and Friday the store will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday hours will be from 2 to 8 p.m. Saturday hours will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sunday hours will be 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

N. Scotland OK's changes for transfer waste station

By Dev Tobin

For town residents who do-it-yourself with their household solid waste, the town's transfer station on Flat Rock Road will become more convenient, according to a schedule of improvements approved by the town board Monday.

The station will now be open on Wednesdays from May to October, and a new ramp will be installed alongside the roll-off containers to make it easier to dispose of recyclables, said Michael Hotaling, highway department superintendent.

Currently, the station is open only on Saturdays, and many residents cannot make it that day, he said. An additional person will be on duty Saturday to ensure that recyclable materials are not contaminated.

"It's critical that the material be separated properly, and that is hard for one person to control," Hotaling said.

Another improvement will be good news for the station's neighbors, as the town will begin chipping yard waste instead of burning it, Hotaling said.

As much as possible, the mulch will be used by the highway department, he added.

The board also approved a new fee schedule for the transfer station. The basic permit will be $5 for three years, plus $3 a cubic yard for brush and a sliding schedule for large items, from $1 for a kitchen chair to $30 for a piano.

In other highway department matters, the board approved buying a new dump truck and spreader for $79,750 and a new tractor and mower for $25,625.

The board also OK'd engineering and repair work on an ice build-up and leak problem in the Feura Bush water tank.

Hotaling requested, and the board approved, consulting engineering work to try to resolve a longstanding drainage problem in the Olive Street area of Clarksville.

In other business, the board approved trying to help a low-income senior citizen receive a property tax exemption for last year.

Supervisor Herb Reilly said that the man and a sworn witness say that the proper form was sent in, but that it must have been lost in the mail.

"He got the exemption for six years in a row before last year, and his income is well below the threshold for a 50 percent property tax exemption," Reilly noted.

Postcard-perfect view of the past

The New Scotland Historical Association will present Picturing the Past: A Photo Heritage Day on Saturday, April 16, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Wyman Osterhout Community Center in New Salem.

The program is intended to document the history of the town of New Scotland through pictures, documents, diaries and letters pertaining to its past that may be lanquishing in the attics of long-time town residents. Photos and other materials pertinent to the town's history will be photographed that day and returned to their owners. Also available will be "while-you-wait" antique appraisals by Charles Clark. Refreshments will also be available.

Photos of patriotic or historical celebrations, schools, bridges and mills, farm scenes, architecture, big storms, fire departments, or the Punkintown Fair are of particular interest.

The program is free and open to the public.

The Osterhout Center is located on The Old Road off Route 85 in New Salem.

For information, call 861-6022.

'Promises, Promises' set for Bethlehem Town Hall

The Village Stage is proud to bring you its 1994 Spring presentation "Promises, Promises."

"Promises, Promises" is the Neil Simon adaption of Billy Wilder's Oscar winning film "The Apartment" (best picture 1960). The dialogue crackles with his waspishly accurate wisecracks. The Neil Simon style would make you believe its a comedy but its more a morality play combining irony, burlesque, soap opera and truth.

The Burt Bacharach-Hal David score gives a musical background to the play, featuring the modern-pop tempos stylish in the '70's. But its not a musical per se; more like a play with music. The story outdistances the musical significance.

The hero, C.C. Baxter, uses the key to his apartment to gain the key to the executive washroom. Company executives find a have for their girl friends and he finds a haven for his ambition.

Baxter is never happy with the compromises he makes on the way up the corporate ladder. He is muddled and unhappy until he falls in love. He falls in love with a girl who visits his apartment but not with him. To find out what happens come visit our show at Bethlehem Town Hall Friday and Saturday, May 13 and 14 at 8 p.m. General admission is $8. Seniors and students $5.

The Stage is fortunate to have a top flight staff supporting the production. Returning to Bethlehem after directing the 1989 production of "Come Blow Your Horn," are the Hoffmanns. Gary is directing, Melissa producing, Caren Lessner is directing the choreography. Caren has a long list of success in the area with Schenectady Light Opera Company and Guelderland Family Players.

Tom Watthews, who is stage director, is memorable for his acting and as a director at BCHS.

Views On Dental Health

Dr. Virginia Plaisted, D.D.S.

PROTECTING PRIMARY TEETH

By the time your child is five or six, all of his primary teeth will have formed. Then the process begins of acquiring the permanent teeth that can last a lifetime with good dental care.

As the primary teeth gradually loosen and fall out, they are soon replaced with permanent teeth. But what about a primary molar tooth that is lost well ahead of its time, long before the permanent tooth is ready to replace it? This can be caused by accident or disease or decay.

If that space remains vacant for a long time, the teeth on either side of it will try to fill the space. This will throw them out of line and may cause the permanent teeth to come in crooked.

To protect your child's permanent teeth, any primary molar tooth lost ahead of its time should be replaced by a space maintainer until the permanent tooth is ready to erupt. If this should happen to your child, see your dentist for treatment.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the offices of:

Community readers take to TV Hats off to fund-raiser

This year more than 70 local residents will help the library celebrate National Library Week by joining in "Bethlehem Reads," a televised salute to books and reading.

Local residents were videotaped as they read aloud in TV31's library studio. The taped readings will be cablecast on TV31/Bethlehem next week from April 18 to 24.

"Bethlehem Reads" will be shown in its entirety from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Wednesday, April 20, and will be shown simultaneously in the library. April 20 has been designated as "Great American Read Aloud" day by the American Library Association.

An encore showing the first part of "Bethlehem Reads" will be cablecast on Thursday, April 21, beginning at 1 p.m. The conclusion of the encore presentation will be cablecast on Friday, April 22, beginning at noon.

Readers will be honored at a reception sponsored by the Friends of the Library on Monday, April 18, at 7 p.m. A special hour-long preview tape featuring excerpts from each reading will be shown at the reception. The preview tape will be cablecast on TV31 on Tuesday, April 19, beginning at 7 p.m.

Selections range from touching to amusing to inspirational, from Erna Bombeck's If Life is a Bowl of Cherries, What Am I Doing in the Pits? to Anne Morrow Lindbergh's Gift from the Sea. Many readers chose passages that related to them or their family in a very personal way.

Marjory Chesney read from a slim volume titled First You Have to Row a Little Boat, by Richard Bode. It uses sailing as a metaphor for negotiating life, evoking summers in Maine, where her husband taught their children, and grandchildren, to sail.

Amy Svirsky Abolafia's reading also had her family in mind, her young son Jacob to be exact. "No More Miracles" is her son's favorite story from the collection of stories from scripture, Does God Have a Big Toe?, written by Rabbi Marc Gellman for his own children.

Richard Hauser's reading from The Old Patagonian Express, Paul Theroux' account of his travels by rail through the Americas, harkens back to his past. Hauser, the son of Methodist missionaries, was born and raised in Chile and is a regular traveler. He brought to his taping a prized possession, a photograph of himself in the cab of an ancient steam engine — the Patagonian Express.

Some readers chose readings which related to their life's work. Jim Leonard, a former drama instructor at SUNYA, considered many passages from novels, but as a theater professor, finally chose a play. He read an excerpt from Oscar Wilde's The Importance of Being Ernest.

Teacher and story teller Marni Schwartz read The Crow Boy by Taro Yashima. The children's picture book tells the story of how a teacher helps a shy and withdrawn boy to learn to appreciate his talents and himself.

Another former teacher, Al Restifo, read from Shel Silverstein's fable The Giving Tree. Eric and Bernice Leighton read from the classic When We Were Very Young by A.A. Milne, and Lorraine Smith read Oh, the Places You'll Go!, the last of Dr. Seuss' remarkable creations.

Delmar resident Rosamond Hooper-Hamersley summed it all up for all of "Bethlehem Reads." When asked why she chose to read from Dickens' A Christmas Carol, she said simply "I just always loved it."

Art show on display throughout April

By Rowena Hewitt

On Saturday, April 9, the United Methodist Women of Slingerlands held a luncheon in the Fellowship Hall. More than 80 women from Albany and the Tri-village area attended the event, which featured a hat show by Evelyn Sturdevan.

Hewitt

The United Methodist Women is the largest women's organization in the world. In this country there are over a million and a half members, and in Africa and Korea the numbers are rapidly rising.

The purpose of the United Methodist Women is to support mission projects. When my grandmother was a young Methodist minister's wife more than 100 years ago, the mission work took the form of "missionary barrels."

The women of the church would clean out their closets of unwanted clothes, bring them to the parsonage and would have a very pleasant afternoon while packing them in barrels. Then somebody's husband would arrive with a horse and buggy (or more probably a sleigh because this was on the coast of Maine and everyone knows it snows there 11 months of the year) and haul it off to the train station. There, it would start its long journey to some distant outpost where somebody's sister-in-law's cousin's daughter's husband would be preaching.

Months later, a letter would return to the church offering grateful thanks for all the women had done. Everyone was happy.

Unfortunately, that kind of mission work is not possible in our modern world.

Now, our missionaries overseas are highly educated doctors, ministers, teachers, medical technicians and social workers. They are running institutions nearly as up-to-date as our own. What they need is financial support to keep these sophisticated organizations running smoothly.

And then there are the mistakes that occasionally happen.

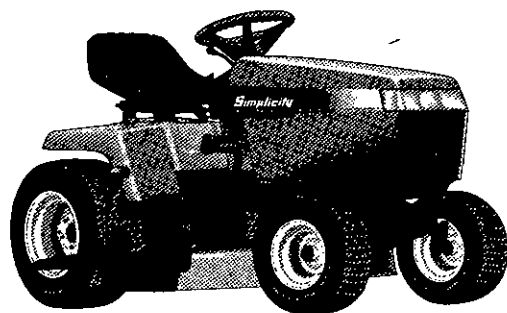

I was doing volunteer work in a refugee camp in Amman, Jordan, years ago, when we received a bale of clothing from the United States. Since most of our aid was coming from England and Europe, I was delighted to show them that we in the States also cared. Imagine my distress when the package was opened and the contents were entirely — bikinis.

Horrors! Here we were on the edge of one of the largest deserts in the world, in an Arab country where many women were still heavily veiled and swimming pools were in short supply. I did not dare look at any of my Arab co-workers and they weren't anxious to have a long conversation with me, either. Those miserable bikinis were totally wasted. They weren't even usable for cleaning cloths.

So, the time for our mission work in the United States is more efficiently used in raising money than packing boxes.

The luncheon last Saturday raised several hundred dollars that will be sent to the institutions most in need. We are grateful for the support of our friends and neighbors in the Tri-village area.

Dorothy Kelly cited by AARP

Dorothy M. Kelly of Delmar received one of the 1994 National Community Service Awards from the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP).

Kelly, who is a member of the Bethlehem Tri-Village Chapter 1598, was selected by the chapter's board of directors for her outstanding contributions to the community.

As chairperson of the Community Services Committee, Kelly organized a team of members to work at Red Cross bloodmobiles in Albany County. She arranged to have new volunteers take the Red Cross training program so that the chapter could continue to provide this needed service.

Kelly served with the program from January 1986 until January, 1989. The program serves roughly 400 people on an annual basis, and is still an important part of chapter activities.

The AARP award is presented each year during National Volunteer Week (April 17 to 23) to recognize the exceptional volunteer service of an individual or couple from each of the association's more than 4,000 local chapters and from some 2,600 local retired teachers' associations nationwide.

Programs for kids on recess

Spring recess for the school district coincides with National Library Week this year, and the library plans a wide variety of programs for children to mark the occasion.

The ever-popular Barbara Bennett will be on hand to present her Build It! Lego workshop on Monday, April 18, from 11 a.m. to noon. Designed for kids in kindergarten and up, the program will provide an opportunity to create whatever they wish from the colorful building bricks.

For inspiration, children can check out a display of Lego sets in the exhibit case on loan from Brendan Shields of Voorheesville.

The action will shift to the heavens on Wednesday, April 20, when the Albany Area Amateur Astronomers set up their telescopes on the library's back lawn. Set a little later than usual, from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m., the family-oriented evening will allow participants to scan the night sky. In the event of inclement weather, a star show will be screened in the community room.

Storyteller Bill Cliff, who was snowed out for his last visit to the library, will present a Spring Song and Story Fest on Thursday, April 21, at 2 p.m. The program will treat school-age youngsters to a mini trip around the world with tunes and tales from Africa, India and Europe.

All three programs are free and open to the public. For information, call the library at 765-2791.

Coming up for poets of all ages is the third annual Poetry Performance Day scheduled for Saturday, April 30. This very "happening" event has become an important part of the Capital District's burgeoning poetry scene and attracts scores of well-known and not-so-well-known local writers to read selections of their own work or favorite poems by others.

This year's extravaganza will feature for the first time an outrageous competition known popularly as a "poetry slam" that will be judged by local personages. To sign up for either the slam or a more sedate 10-minute reading, call Barbara Vink.

Beginning readers and their families will want to stop by tonight, April 13, at 7 p.m. for Berenstain Bears Everywhere! - The special evening story hour will honor one of America's best-loved storytelling teams on their 51st anniversary.

Regularly scheduled story hours will be held though April 15 and will resume on April 25 for spring sessions.

V'ville boys' coach sees improvement

By Kelly Griffin

As the area's baseball season begins this week, the Voorheesville boys varsity squad will be out on the field looking to improve on last spring's 6-12 league record.

Voorheesville has five players returning from last year's squad. Unfortunately, this advantage is offset substantially by the loss of powerhouses Kyle Tracy, Greg Sullivan, Derek Lewis, Mike Welker and Sean Bruno to graduation.

Despite these setbacks, however, a solid experience cast of players remains. "We lost the nucleus of last season," said head coach Don McDonald, "but I don't like to think of this year as rebuilding."

"It's just time for players to step in and do the job. Everyone will be called upon to play different positions. They are all capable of this."

Returning veterans include seniors Nick Iarossi, Jamie Duncan, Steve Halligan, Craig Panthen and Brian Smith. They will be counted on to carry much of the load.

Joining them are senior Kurt Pahl, juniors Kevin Nugent and Ron Hollins, and sophomores Brandon Emerick, Tom Iarossi and Sean Devine.

Softball

Of these 11 players, seven will be included in the pitching rotation. That roster consists of Nick and Tom Iarossi, Duncan, Halligan, Nugent, Hollins and Emerick.

"I expect us to be competitive this year," McDonald said. "I'm very surprised by the improvement the kids have shown since we started practice. They seem to be doing just about everything right fundamentally. I'm expecting a lot from them."

The Blackbirds will travel to Cohoes for the season-opener today (Wednesday, April 13) at 4 p.m.

Blackbird on the hill

V'ville's Larina Suker pitched a one-hitter during last Friday's 1-0 victory over Schalmont. She had a no-hitter during the season-opener, which the Lady Blackbirds lost. The girls are 2-1 on the year. Elaine McLain

BC lacrosse teams show promise

By Catherine Barker

The spring season looks promising for the Bethlehem varsity lacrosse teams.

Although both the boys and girls got off to shaky starts against Columbia, there is still enthusiasm and anticipation among the coaches and players.

The boys began with the Colonie tournament, where they had strong outings against Pittsfield, Glens Falls and Colonie — winning all three games.

But they were edged out for the tournament title by Colonie, which accumulated more total points despite their loss to Bethlehem in the final game.

In the boys' first official game, they dropped a 5-3 decision to Columbia. Then it was another tough loss as they succumbed to Colonie, 20-5.

The girls opened their season against Columbia, a "traditionally strong team," according to coach Nancy McKenna, and dropped a 20-9 decision. Seniors Jessica Murphy scored three goals and Jennifer Greggo scored one for Bethlehem. Senior Kelly Link had 14 saves in goal for BC.

McKenna said the sloppy condition of the playing fields at BC has been a setback for the team. Though practices have been rough, there is a "magic out there in the form of hard work and commitment to do better," she said.

Bethlehem may find it hard to repeat as baseball champs

By Joshua Kagan

BC is trying to do what only a select few teams at any level of sports have done: three-peat.

The Eagles will try to match last year's 19-5 Section II championship season, and their championship seasons from two and four years ago.

"I think anything is possible," BC coach Ken Hodge said. "We're going to try. I don't think it's going to be an easy road. One of our goals is to get into sectionals and get a shot at it."

This season the Eagles will miss many stars from last year's team — namely their entire infield and one starting pitcher — and will have to look to new leadership this year.

"Mike Breslin's been doing a pretty good job of (leading)," Hodge said. "He'll be catching, or DHing or playing the outfield. But he's taken over quite a bit and he's good in that role."

The Eagles do not seem too worried about their infield, which is still not set. Matt D'Ambrosi, who played centerfield last year, is expected to play shortstop. His position is the only one set. Pitchers Brian Dudzik, Nate Kosoc and Brian Garver will see action in the infield; with Dudzik at first or second base, Kosoc at third base or possible the outfield and Garver at first base. All have played the infield in the past, but not at the varsity level.

"I'm more concerned about the outfield than I am the infield right now," Hodge said. "With D'Ambrosi in the infield, my primary concern is finding a center fielder. We have a lot of people vying for that spot. We may have to switch some people around."

Seth Friedman will play in the outfield, in left or center. Gary Van Wormer will probably play right field and also pitch, mostly as a reliever in nonleague games. Mike Soronen will also pitch some.

Bethlehem's pitching staff is the most experienced and probably the strongest aspect of their team. Dudzik, Kosoc, Garver and Van Wormer pitched last year.

"I think (the staff) is great," Breslin said. "I think Kosoc, Dudzik and Garver are three great starters who are really top notch in the league."

Bethlehem's strongest opposition will most likely come from Shenendehowa, who the Eagles beat 2-1 in the sectional semifinals last year. The Plainsmen have virtually all of last season's team returning and were ranked 24th in the nation in a preseason USA Today poll.

"Right now, we've got our sights set on Shen because they got national rank in USA Today," Breslin said. We can "absolutely (repeat). I'd say we're as good as last year's team."

"Burnt Hills should be all right," Hodge said. Burnt Hills won the Suburban Council Gold Division over BC last year. "I think Scotia will be strong. Shen has a strong team. And Shaker, which was very, very young last year, has a lot of players back."

U-14 girls beat Valley Falls

The U-14 Bethlehem girls travel team got off on the right foot during its initial game in the State Cup Competition on Sunday, April 10, registering a 2-0 win over the Valley Stream Rascals of Long Island.

The defense, led by Winnie Corrigan, Lisa Engelstein, Katie Fireovid, Melissa Kanuk, Lauren Rice and Diana Woodworth, allowed no shots on goal through the first half, despite playing against an extremely strong headwind.

Meanwhile the midfielders and forwards did an excellent job taking the pressure off the defense with repeated drives on the Valley Stream goal.

Early in the second half, Lilly Corrigan scored on a scramble in front of the net. The Bethlehem girls then withstood a furious charge by Valley Stream through the remainder of the second half.

Near the end of the game, Rice started the final tally by heading the ball to Kanuk who passed to Lilly Corrigan. Karly Decker put it in the open net for the final score.

Real estate award

Cathy Griffin, left, office manager, Bill Jilbert, operating officer and senior vice president, Western Region, The Prudential Real Estate Affiliates, Inc., congratulate Bernice Ott, sales associate at Manor Homes, Delmar Office, who was recently named to the company's Presidential Circle, Residential, for 1993. The national award recognizes sales associates who earn a certain amount of commissions or close 60 residential transactions for the year.

The award, which was also bestowed upon Chief Judge Judith S. Kaye of the New York State Court of Appeals and distinguished lawyer Helen Pratt of Dansville, was made last month at the school's inaugural celebration of Kate Stoneman Day.

Stoneman, who was also the first woman graduate of Albany Law School, passed the New York Bar Exam in 1886 and was denied membership in the bar because she was a woman. After lobbying the state legislature she succeeded in forcing an amendment to the state Code of Civil Procedure, paving her way to become the first woman admitted to the New York State bar.

"(The award) meant a great deal to me," Harvith said. "It was especially touching since these were the first awards given out."

While Albany Law School for many years lagged behind other institutions in hiring women faculty, at this point in time, "We do compare favorably" with others schools, he said.

Besides his faculty recruitment efforts on behalf of women, Harvith initiated the "Women and the Law" course at the school. He has also concentrated on environmental law, land use planning and first amendment rights during his 26-year tenure at the school.

Acting Law School Dean John C. Welsh said Harvith was a staunch advocate of women both in admissions and with regard to faculty recruitment.

The award citation also noted his service on behalf of the Bethlehem Central School District, where he has served as a school board member since 1972, including a seven-year stint as president.

SPOTLIGHT ON

Family Entertainment

The familiar characters of "The Wizard of Oz" will be played by Brad Wills (the Tinman), Lennie Watts (the Cowardly Lion), Kim Smith (Dorothy) and Matthew McDougall (the Scarecrow) in Musicals America's upcoming Proctor's Theatre performances.

Oh, Auntie Em! There's no place like Proctor's!

Pair of musical classics to grace Schenectady theater stage

By Donna Moskowitz

Capital District music lovers can visit the Midwest and the land of Oz this week right in the heart of Schenectady.

"Oklahoma" will be at Proctor's Theatre on Thursday, April 14, at 8 p.m., while a stage version of "The Wizard of Oz" will be performed Saturday, April 16, at 2 and 8 p.m.

"Oklahoma" was the first collaboration of the famous musical team of Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II. When the Theater Guild premiered the show in 1943, it was a major hit, playing for five years and 2,200 performances.

Based on the play "Green Grow the Lilacs" by Lynn Riggs, the musical featured original dances by Agnes De Mille, and such memorable tunes as "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning," "The Surrey with the Fringe on Top," and "Oklahoma."

"Oklahoma" is touring the country in celebration of the 50th anniversary of the musical, according to Jackie Euard, publicity coordinator for Proctor's.

The story, set in Indian territory in 1907, revolves around two romances, Curly McClain's love for Laurey Williams, and Will Parker's affection for Ado Annie. Though matters get a little complicated, almost everyone winds up living happily ever after.

As soon as the production of "Oklahoma" rides off into the sunset, the crew will begin setting up the sets for another popular musical.

"The Wizard of Oz" contains the same wonderful music and story line as the 1939 classic movie, produced as a live

Broadway-style production. The musical is "taken right from the MGM screenplay and score," said Euard.

Based on L. Frank Baum's book about Dorothy, who inadvertently leaves Kansas and winds up in the magical land of Oz, the story describes her adventures trying to find her way home.

The Proctor's production doesn't skimp on elaborate costumes or special effects. There will be flying witches, dancing trees, winged monkeys, Munchkins — even a tornado.

The musical also features a giant-sized puppet portraying the Wizard of Oz, and puppet Munchkins. The Big Nazo Puppets of Providence, R.I., created a series of Oz inhabitants, many of them larger than life.

"The puppets are absolutely beautiful. They did a wonderful job," said Euard.

The show even features a song, "The Jitterbug," that was cut from the movie, she said.

John Carver Sullivan, who designed costumes for last year's "Music Man" at Proctor's, is responsible for the 175 costumes for "The Wizard of Oz." He designed costumes for the Broadway production of "Moose Murder" starring Eve Arden, and has also designed costumes for regional theater performances of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Dracula."

Set designer Kent Homchick has created an enchanting Oz, complete with a glittering Emerald City, Euard said. Homchick previously designed the set of "The Wizard of Oz" for Theatre by the Sea, and is a set designer for the American Conservatory Theater of San Francisco, Euard said.

In addition to live performances, both musicals will also feature music by an orchestra, Euard said.

Even though almost everyone in the United States has already seen the "Wizard of Oz" on film, watching live theater can be a new experience for both children and adults.

"Theater is good for children. It gives them a different perspective, different from television," Euard said.

Tickets for "Oklahoma" and "The Wizard of Oz" are available at Proctor's Box Office, 346-6204, and all TicketMaster locations. The cost is $32.50, $28.50 and $22.50 for adults, and $15.50 for children 12 years old and under. Groups of 20 or more may call 382-5392 to arrange for discount tickets.

Laurey Williams (played by April Harr) resists an unwelcome advance from Jud Fry (Craig Benham) in a scene from Rodgers and Hammerstein's classic American musical "Oklahoma," scheduled for Proctor's on Thursday, April 14, as part of special 50th anniversary tour.

Dear Liar features story about George Bernard Shaw and pen pal

While George Bernard Shaw was writing his successful plays early in this century, he was also carrying on a voluminous, platonic correspondence with one of the most famous actresses on the English stage, Mrs. Patrick Campbell.

Shaw was smitten with her talents and her personality and the letters have become almost as famous as his other writings, so much so that they form the basis of a two-character play, Dear Liar, that was fashioned by writer-actor Jerome Kilty.

The letters were spiced with wit and references to other personalities of their day so that they become important historically as well.

Martin P. Kelly

This Thursday, Friday and Saturday (April 14, 15 and 16) and April 22, 23 and 24, the Steamer 10 Company theater in Albany offers a production staged by director Joseph Balfior.

The production features Eileen Schuyler as Mrs. Campbell and Larry Maranville as Shaw.

For Schuyler, this production is a reunion with Balfior who has directed her in the past, notably in The Belle of Amherst.

The challenge for Balfior in Dear Liar is to attain the dynamic nature of these letters through his actors while evoking a pristine love affair. Long an admirer of Shaw's plays, Balfior now has an opportunity to work with Shaw's words for the first time in years.

Reservations and information at 438-5503.

First signs of spring bring news of summer theater stirrings

More than 900 actors and technicians have been interviewed by co-artistic directors Lynn Haydn and Linda MacNish of the Mac-Haydn Theatre of Chatham to obtain performers for the 1994 summer season. Many of these performers were auditioned at Chatham while others were seen in New York and in Savannah, Ga.

The actors will be hired to help open the season May 18 with Nunsense which will be followed in succeeding weeks by: Superman (June 1); Singing in the Rain (June 15); City of Angels (June 29); She Loves Me (July 13); Guys and Dolls (July 27); The Secret Garden (Aug. 17); and Jesus Christ, Superstar (Aug. 31). Most of the productions will play for two weeks.

Part of the casting difficulties will be to hire the usual expert singers and actors along with some excellent tap dancers, principally for Singing in the Rain and also fine child performers for the area summer premiere of The Secret Garden.

Information can be obtained at 392-9292.

Proctors brings two big musicals to town this week

Almost 51 years after it premiered on Broadway without much hope for success, Rodgers and Hammerstein's Oklahoma is still alive and kicking, being played almost every day somewhere in the world.

As an example, a touring production of this famed musical about farmers and ranchers at the turn of the century will play at Proctor's in Schenectady for one performance Thursday, April 14.

The production features a young New York company that is now touring the East in a revival that is pulling new and older audiences to the songs which have become modern classics.

Proctor's will also bring a touring production of the musical version of The Wizard of Oz to its stage Saturday, April 16, for two performances at 2 and 8 p.m.

This production contains the music made famous in the 1939 Judy Garland movie in which the song, Over the Rainbow, became permanently identified with the story of the Kansas girl swept into an imaginary land.

Reservations and info for both shows at 346-6294.

Vault

according to Kahn's decision it would be futile for Pizzitola to keep fighting over the plot of land, because even though the town lost on technical grounds, it won on the merits and could easily prevail by refileing the suit.

"Our lines of communication with the town are open," Bruner said. "The last thing we want to see is more litigation," which would not be in the best interests of the "town, the Pizzitolas or the residents."

The Pizzitolas are ready to negotiate with the town on issues such as egress and maintenance if the town board is so inclined, Bruner said.

Upon his death in 1910, William H. Slingerland left a tract of land for his heirs at the junction of New Scotland Road and Kenwood Avenue. The parcel originally contained the old Slingerlands family home.

Pizzitola purchased the land outright in 1981 from Charlie Sanders. But, as Judge Kahn said, when the Slingerland heirs sold the family tract to Schade in 1920, they excluded the sliver of land containing the family vault. The Slingerland family retained ingress and egress rights to the mausoleum regardless of what happened to the surrounding property.

What happened, according to Kaplowitz, is that Pizzitola sometimes prevented groups of school children from visiting the site because of concerns over liability. Moreover, some of the neighbors along New Scotland Road have complained that Pizzitola had cut and removed brush and trees from the property as well as running a bulldozer over part of it.

"Baloney," said Pizzitola last week. "Those trees were diseased and were on my property. This is America, isn't it? ... (The plot) was a secret for years. When I took over, suddenly the town decided they wanted it. It was there for over 70 years and nobody did anything until my wife and I and the kids started to take care it."

Pizzitola said he is not opposed to people visiting the site, but he's insistent about having liability insurance because they would be crossing his property to reach the mausoleum.

"Would you let someone on your property without insurance?" he asked. "No one has stopped anything from happening."

In 1980, the Bethlehem Town Board approved a resolution declaring the site to be of historical significance. A year later, Floyd Brewer took the Bethlehem Archaeology Group to the mausoleum on its first dig. Brewer, who was senior editor of "Bethlehem Revisited, A Bicentennial Story 1793-1993," discovered that the vault and its surroundings had been vandalized over the years and was in serious need of repair. Pieces of a long-lost marble marker were found in the soil and Brewer was able to reassemble it.

As the marker notes, the vault was constructed in 1852 and contained the remains of two of the town's most prominent citizens — John I. and William Henry Slingerland. Outside of the Nicoll-Sill house, "I know of no other site in town that contains such rich and important information about a family," Brewer said.

The late U.S. Congressman John A. Slingerland was probably the "most famous citizen the town has ever had," Brewer said. His brother William Henry Slingerland, was a renowned engineer and architect who designed the town's first water system.

"Now that the town board would appear to have control over it, maybe they'll find some funds for restoration," Brewer said. For example, a heavy chain that once linked a series of cement posts that cordoned off the mausoleum area was stolen long ago.

"It would cost maybe $4,000 or $5,000" to make the necessary repairs such as replacing a door that is caving in, replacing the heavy chain that cordoned off a 14-foot outside area and erecting a stand with a glass-enclosed legend that explains the site's historical significance, Brewer said.
