Clearwater presents petitions to Fuller

By Mel Hyman

With less than a week to go before Election Day, the Clearwater for Bethlehem group made good on a promise Tuesday.

Descending on Supervisor Sheila Fuller's office in the town hall, they hand-delivered more than 2,000 signatures on a petition opposing the town's plan to use water from a new $13.2 million treatment facility.

Fran Royo of Clearwater presents petitions against the town water project to Supervisor Sheila Fuller.
Hugh Hewitt

The project, which can pump up to six million gallons per day from an aquifer underneath the Hudson River to a state-of-the-art treatment plant on Clapper Road, has been hotly debated this year even though the project is already under construction and due to go on line in late 1995.

The bulk of the water will be used by the Selkirk Cogeneration facility along Route 32 with the remainder earmarked for residential consumption in case the town's primary drinking water supply — the Alcove Reservoir in New Scotland — cannot meet demands.

"Town officials have ignored our arguments that the plan is expensive, unproven and possibly unsafe," said Clearwater member Frances Royo. "They have rejected all efforts to compromise on this clearly unpopular plan. They might be able to ignore a small, community group, but do they really think they can ignore 2,000 people?"

Eleanor Shapiro, a retired school teacher who collected the bulk of the signatures while standing outside the Bethlehem Public Library and Grand Union store in Elsmere, said that on occasion, people were standing in line to sign the petitions.

"I'm very disappointed to see something as important as water mired in political rhetoric," Fuller said. "The biggest concern I have is how the issue has been misrepresented to the public. I do know when they were soliciting signatures for the petitions they were characterizing the water supply as Hudson River water with PCBs (polychlorinated biphenols).

"We believe that 2,000 signatures is a very significant number for a town of

Davis, Burkhard stump down to wire

Dem hopes for voice on board

By Mel Hyman

Last year, Democrat Bill Burkhard made a strong showing in the race for two open seats on the Bethlehem Town Board. This year, he's hoping that discontent over the water issue and dissatisfaction with an all-Republican town board will push him over the top.

Burkhard

Burkhard faces GOP Councilwoman Doris Davis, who was appointed to the town board in January when then-Councilwoman Sheila Fuller resigned in order to assume the supervisor's job.

"I just feel that the town is entitled to a two-party system of government," Burkhard said. "As a Democrat, you know it's going to be an uphill battle, but we've made great strides over the last 25 years in closing the enrollment gap." Burkhard, 59, is former chairman of the Bethlehem Democratic Committee. "I've

Incumbent 'in tune' with town

By Susan Graves

Doris Davis, Republican/Conservative candidate for a one-year term on the town board, wants to maintain the quality of life in Bethlehem.

Davis

At the same time, Davis, who was appointed to fill Sheila Fuller's unexpired term when Fuller was elected supervisor, is having the time of her life. "I absolutely love working on this campaign," she said.

Although some politicians find door-to-door campaigning a real chore, Davis said she thrives on meeting and talking with people. An avid walker, jogger and biker, she said the door-to-door route is an opportunity to "get exercise at the same time I'm talking to people."

She believes, however, that once the campaign is over the personal contact has to be continued. "As a town board member, I'll be involved. I think to be effective you have to be in tune — to

Emergency calls: dial correctly

Bethlehem Police caution that anyone calling in an emergency on a cellular phone should dial 439-1234 and not 911.

The 911 emergency exchange is only for land-based telephones and not for those used while in transport. The switchboard number 439-1234 should also be used when calling in an emergency from a land telephone outside the town of Bethlehem.

The number to call for information and non-emergencies is 439-9973. The number 439-1503 should be dialed when making an anonymous report of offenses related to the use or sale of alcoholic beverages.

Faso, Schwartz head for Tuesday's finish line

Incumbent is Cuomo critic

By Mel Hyman

Earlier this year, state Assemblyman John Faso was hoping that an aggressive, high profile campaign would net him the GOP nomination for state comptroller.

On the eve of the state Republican convention in May, he was in reach of the nomination when the rug was pulled out from under him by Conservative Herb London, who reportedly agreed to back the Republican nominee for governor in return for the comptroller's nod.

After 11 months on the campaign trail and visits to every county in the state, Faso dropped out of the comptroller's race, and announced his re-election bid for the 102nd District Assembly seat that he occupied since 1987.

He is opposed by Selkirk businessman Tony Schwartz. The 102nd Assembly District includes Bethlehem, Westerlo, Coeymans and Rensselaerville in Albany County, all of Schoharie County, all of Greene County except for Catskill and four towns in Columbia County.

This will be the second year in a row that Faso, who hails from Columbia County, is facing a Bethlehem Democrat. In 1992 he defeated Delmar attorney Joseph Glazer.

Faso adamantly denies that he has ignored his constituents while in pursuit of higher political office. "I've had many constituents congratulate me on how I handled that whole thing with the comptroller's race. We haven't received a single letter or call accusing me of being neglectful.

"Schwartz is running for office," Faso added, "and he has to try and say something."

An outspoken critic of Gov. Mario Cuomo, Faso struck out at state fiscal practices and successfully sued the governor in 1991 for failing to submit budget bills to the Legislature on a timely basis.

Faso also won a court decision in 1994 overturning Cuomo's establishment of a Citizens Utility Board by executive order.

The bill was strongly supported by consumer groups, but never made it out of the Republican-controlled state Senate.

Faso, 42, works as an attorney for a Hudson law firm. He and his wife Mary Frances have two children.

Selkirk man faces uphill fight

By Mel Hyman

Bethlehem resident Tony Schwartz has no illusions about what he's up against.

A political newcomer, he is trying to unseat an incumbent with eight years in the state Legislature (Assemblyman John Faso, R-Kinderhook). But he said he senses some vulnerability because Faso spent a great deal of time away from Albany during 1993 and 1994 campaigning for the Republican nomination for state comptroller.

"Mr. Faso is more interested in his own political ambitions," Schwartz said. "I feel the people in the 102nd want and deserve a person in the Assembly who will listen to their needs and who they can contact at any time—24 hours a day."

Despite running in a solidly Republican district, Schwartz, 45, has taken the race seriously and gone door-to-door whenever he's had free time from his business, Albany Associates Cleaning Service.

During the campaign, Schwartz lashed out at Faso for a poor rating he received from the Environmental Planning Lobby, a statewide advocacy group based in Albany.

Tony Schwartz

"John Faso is no friend of the environment, that's for sure. Only six of the 150 people in the Assembly had worse records. This is something that affects people's lives."

Schwartz promised to do everything possible to prevent a regional landfill from being built in the town of Coeymans, one of four towns in Albany County included in the 102nd legislative district. Bethlehem, Westerlo and Rensselaerville are the others.

Trying to cash in on the anti-incumbent fever gripping the country, Schwartz prides himself on the fact that, unlike most politicians in Albany, he is not a lawyer. He also supports term limits for state legislators.

Schwartz has pledged to vote against any pay raises for state legislators and said he would return any raise approved by the Legislature above the $57,500 that legislators now receive for their part-time positions.

Faso also opposes hiking legislative salaries, as has rumored to be the plan once the November election is over, but he has refused to say whether he would accept a pay raise if signed into law, Schwartz charged.

Since he left the Navy in 1973, he has served as a sergeant in the Albany County Sheriff's Department, and operated his own business since 1981.

In 1993, Schwartz ran for the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Board of Education and received 70 percent of the vote. In addition to sitting on the school board, Schwartz is past president of Local 775 of Council 82, an affiliate of the AFL-CIO.

Schwartz and his wife Elaine have four children. They live on Whitehead Street in Selkirk.

Mixed reviews for Grand Union rehab

By Mel Hyman

By and large, visitors to the Grand Union market in Elsmere Saturday were unhappy, although not irate, by the pace of merchandising changes taking place.

At the same time, the confusion faced by shoppers these past two weeks has only served to underscore the near-unanimous call for another supermarket for Bethlehem.

"It's confusing," said Ed Dennin of Delmar. "I wish they could have left things the way they were, but they need more space I guess so people can buy more things they don't need."

"Half of Delmar goes to the Shop 'n Save on Central Avenue," Dennin remarked.

The town could "certainly" use another supermarket, if for no other reason than to compete with the high prices at Grand Union, he said.

"They (Grand Union) were supposed to be finished by today," said Ann Parrot of Delmar. "I found everything I was looking for, but I had to look around. They're definitely not finished."

"Of course there should be another supermarket," she said. "It's not that they don't have everything, but their prices are higher. Not on everything, but that's why we need something else handy as an alternative."

"It would be nice to have another supermarket," said Jack Cassidy of Delmar. "I heard about the one they want to put in Slingerlands from the paper. To me (Grand Union) is very convenient. I could find everything I needed in there today, but it was nice when we had another store in town like the Albany Public Market."

"What we need is some competition for this store," said an Elsmere resident who asked not to be identified. "It was a bit confusing in there. They don't have enough of the items I need. I guess because there's not enough space. And then they let you stand in a line a hundred years."

It's confusing. I wish they could have left things the way they were, but they need more space so people can buy more things they don't need.

Ed Dennin

The discontent was not universal, however, as Marie Donovan of Albany praised Grand Union for its "good quality meats and vegetables."

"I come here every week," she said. "They're busy doing something, but I found everything I needed. Whatever they're doing I presume it's for the betterment of the store. But maybe I'm too good-natured."

Don Vaillancourt, Grand Union corporate vice president for communications, said the changes are meant to weed out the poor sellers, expand the good-sellers and offer more of the items that customers have been asking for such as health foods and items high in nutrition.

"It's something we do on a regular basis in every store in our chain," he said.

Vaillancourt adamantly denied that Grand Union's prices were higher than its competitors. "We just reduced prices on 2,000 items."

The "remerchandising projects normally take two to three weeks," he said.

"We really need another supermarket," said Marion Hartheimer of Slingerlands. "That's the way I feel about it I only come here when I really have to. I normally go to the Price Chopper in Pine Hills."

Confusion created by the store overhaul "wasn't that bad," said Brenda Moore of Watervliet, who shops locally because she looks after an older couple in Delmar.

"Because I shop here a lot, I could figure it out." But there should "definitely" be another supermarket in town, she said.

"I have no complaint against Grand Union," said Ada Court of South Bethlehem, "but it would be nice to have someone else to go to. ... It's a pleasure to shop in Price Chopper and Shop 'n Save. Competition in Bethlehem might help moderate Grand Union prices, which are a little expensive."

Duncan gets free ride

By Dev Tobin

After his appointment as New Scotland highway superintendent earlier this year, Darrell Duncan would have faced the first election of his life next Tuesday, but his Republican opponent had a last-minute change of heart.

Duncan was picked by the all-Democratic town board to replace Republican Michael Hotaling, who resigned last summer.

Duncan still has to campaign, since there will be a name on the Republican line, even though the nominee told town GOP officials that he does not want the job.

"I've put some posters out, and have been campaigning on weekends," Duncan said.

Democratic Supervisor Herb Reilly said that the GOP non-candidate may still get a lot of votes, particularly from people who vote a straight GOP ticket in the once-rock-ribbed Republican town.

New Scotland Democrats, who held a pre-election fund-raiser Friday at the home of Town Attorney John Biscone, will put out signs for Duncan and work to help elect Democratic legislative and statewide candidates, Reilly said.

"Gov. Cuomo will do well in town, but I don't know about winning it," Reilly said. "He's like Reggie Jackson, Mr. October, he's coming on strong."

Town GOP Chairwoman Judith VonRonne said she expected Republican candidates will do well in New Scotland.

"This is a good year for the Republicans, with excellent candidates at every level," she said.

State Senate hopeful Mike Hoblock and gubernatorial candidate George Pataki have "excellent prospects in town," she said.

Although disappointed that the highway candidate backed out, VonRonne said that party activists will still "get out and meet the people," and distribute campaign materials before next Tuesday.

McEneny misses race challenge

By Dev Tobin

This year's conventional wisdom is that incumbents are facing an angry electorate eager to bounce them from office.

Albany is a one-horse town, and Pataki has a gun aimed at our horse.

John McEneny

John McEneny

But the conventional wisdom is wrong once again, at least for the handful of Capital District legislators, including freshman Assemblyman John McEneny, D-Albany, who are running without opposition.

While most politicians (and all political families) would welcome a respite from the campaign grind, McEneny maintains that he is disappointed that no one challenged him.

"I don't send out newsletters and I didn't raise a lot of money. I deliberately tried to make it easy for someone to run against me," he said. "I'd love to debate the issues and defend my record."

Described as "entrenched" by local Republicans, McEneny has not been complacent, still getting out five nights a week to meet with constituents and party activists and help other candidates.

Even on weekends, he's still working, he said. "I went to the Cathedral of All Saints Medieval Faire and handled five constituent complaints."

McEneny said that entrenchment is in the eye of the beholder, noting that while he received the second highest vote total of all assembly members in 1992, the man who received the most votes, Arnold Proskin of Loudonville, lost in a primary this year.

"Proskin ran unopposed and would have looked entrenched in 1992," he noted wryly.

Besides running in a solidly Democratic district, McEneny said he also benefited in the 1992 general election from a high level of name recognition resulting from an assembly primary and his successful county legislative campaign in 1991.

In 1992, McEneny received more than 70 percent of the vote in defeating Republican John Bailey of Voorheesville.

With no opponent to debate this time around, McEneny trained his sights on Republican gubernatorial candidate George Pataki's plan to reduce the state work force by 23 percent.

"Albany is a one-horse town, and Pataki has a gun aimed at our horse," he said.

McEneny said that, thanks to state government employment, Albany County generally has the lowest, or second-lowest, unemployment rate of New York's 61 counties.

"If you think losing 1,000 jobs at GE is bad, it's nothing compared to what Pataki will do" if elected, McEneny said.

Several thousand state worker layoffs would have a ripple effect throughout the local economy, reducing the sale of goods and services and lowering real estate values, he said.

Rebutting the conservative charge that government is bloated, McEneny said, "There has been a general freeze on state hiring for a long time, and anyone who works for the state knows of empty desks and offices and work not being done."

McEneny said that public concern over rising taxes is far more related to the school portion of the local property tax than to state taxes.

"Most of the calls I get from taxpayers are complaints about school taxes," he said, noting that the top state income tax rate had been reduced by more than half, from 17.5 percent to under 8 percent, under Democratic Govs. Hugh Carey and Mario Cuomo.

McEneny, 51, and his wife Barbara have four children. They live on Colonial Avenue in Albany.

The 104th Assembly District, represented for many years by Dick Connors, includes western and southern areas in the city of Albany, plus the towns of New Scotland, Guilderland, Knox and Berne.

Ex-cop wants bigger garage

By Mel Hyman

Early one morning two years ago, the back window of John Bellizzi's car was shattered by bullets while sitting in the driveway.

That's not an ordinary occurrence on Brockley Drive in Delmar, but for Bellizzi, a former director of the state Bureau of Narcotics Enforcement, you could almost say it goes with the territory.

Saying he wants to prevent any future violence to himself, his wife or his neighbors, Bellizzi is looking to build an addition on his garage so that he can keep both family cars, which are equipped with expensive phone equipment, under lock and key.

Also, having a family car in the driveway could be a "tip-off that someone's home," he said.

To add on to the garage, Bellizzi must obtain a variance from the Bethlehem Zoning Board of Appeals, because the extension would encroach five feet on the minimum setback requirements for the neighborhood.

The zoning code as it pertains to Brockley Drive requires that structures be set back 10 feet from adjacent property lines.

A resident of Brockley Drive for more than 35 years, Bellizzi argued that the setback variance should not be such a big deal, especially since he lays claim to having "one of the best-kept houses in the area."

Expanding the garage will improve the area because there won't be any cars parked outside in the driveway, Bellizzi told the ZBA during a Wednesday, Oct. 19, public hearing.

The variance request is not frivolous, Bellizzi said. "We know there are mid-level drug pushers right in this area. Personally, I just dispensed $76,000 in reward money to informants" who helped convict four Colombians involved with murdering a Hispanic newspaper editor in New York City.

The Colombian drug cartel is a "very vicious group" that doesn't hesitate to remove people who get in their way, Bellizzi said. "A colleague of mine in New York City was recently accosted by some Colombians and it ended in a shoot-out."

Bellizzi, who currently works as executive director of the International Narcotics Enforcement Officers Association, admits to carrying a personal firearm that he's licensed for.

Bellizzi added that he's also concerned about the safety of his wife Celeste, who is editor of the association's magazine Narc Officer. "She's in regular touch with government leaders like the president of Colombia."

Whether Bellizzi is granted a variance hinges on the ZBA's determination that the applicant's "need and desire" are sufficient. Also considered will be the opinion of neighbors, most of whom oppose the variance.

Gerry Clark, who lives next door to Bellizzi at 55 Brockley Drive, told ZBA members at the public hearing that a 20-foot minimum space between buildings was barely enough. When you decrease that by another five-and-a-half feet you end up "aesthetically with little more than a bowling alley."

That could result in a "direct devaluation" of property values, Clark told the board, "and that doesn't make us happy campers."

Kristina MacCormick, who lives two houses down from Bellizzi at 57 Brockley, said that the distances between houses in this section of the street are already "quite narrow. I feel that if a variance like this were granted it would set a precedent and the neighborhood would be damaged by it."

Not everyone is opposed, however. Marie Capone asked the board to grant the variance because "It's for their safety."

The ZBA is scheduled to discuss the matter at its meeting tonight (Wednesday) at town hall.

BC cracks down on Greeks

By Dev Tobin

Fraternity and sorority activities have gone on at Bethlehem Central High School since before the current building was built, and on-campus pledge weeks continue despite school sanctions.

This year's tougher discipline policy at BCHS reiterates the ban on fraternity/sorority activities, and last week several students were disciplined for engaging in "scrubbing," a form of hazing where similarly dressed initiates ask for money.

"Pledge activities can disrupt the educational process, so high school administrators have taken a strong stand against fraternity/sorority activity on campus during school hours," said Superintendent Leslie Loomis.

The problem with fraternities and sororities is that they "determine their own membership, and there's no guarantee that the selection process is equitable and non-discriminatory," Loomis said.

Beta Gamma Rho sorority toned down its pledge week activities this year, but initiates were still threatened with suspension, according to Lauren Staff, a sorority member.

"We used to sing and dance in the halls between class, but we were told not to do that this year," said Staff, adding that the pledges wore all-white, but did not "disrupt the educational process," as alleged by Principal Jon Hunter.

"I think it's a violation of our First Amendment rights," Staff said, adding that Halloween costumes that some students wore on Monday were more "disruptive" than wearing white. "It's not the clothes; it's the personal distaste for sororities."

"It's not as simple as just wearing all-white," Hunter replied. "Other activities go on that can perpetuate models of harassment throughout the school."

Hunter added that pledge week activities "label young women and force them to act in demeaning ways."

Staff said that sorority members planned to attend tonight's school board meeting to discuss their concerns with the board. The meeting is at 8 p.m. in the district offices, 90 Adams Place.

Matters of Opinion

A show of citizenship

If you live in Bethlehem there are five men whose hands you should shake and to whom you should say thanks when you meet them on the street.

They, along with a number of others from a much larger initial group, gave up huge chunks of their free time during the past five and a half years to work on our behalf. In the process they saved us taxpayers some $300,000.

We're referring to the last remaining members of the town's Land Use Management Advisory Committee, or LUMAC. Jeff Lipnicky was its chairman; Ted Putney, Martin Barr, Samuel Messina and James Blendell were members.

During those five-plus years LUMAC has been gathering recommendations, studying, thinking about and trying to plan the future of Bethlehem's still undeveloped land. The goal was to foresee and accommodate, yet control, growth while preserving the essential character of this unique place.

Had we hired professionals to do the job it would have cost that 300 grand.

They have done us a great service.

It is now up to the town board and town zoners and planners to hold hearings on, modify as deemed necessary and then implement LUMAC's recommendations.

That this report should gather dust on someone's shelf is unthinkable.

Help us lead

If we're over 18 and not otherwise disenfranchised we have one great gift to give to our nation. We can vote.

Voting is the only means we have of keeping the government, and therefore the country, under our control. The men who created that government knew that, over time, only the ballot could effectively stand between democracy and despotism or anarchy. The People, who would wield that ballot, would always lead wisely, they believed.

You are one of The People. We need you to go to the polls next Tuesday, to share with us your wisdom and to help us lead.

Your bulletin board

This week's Spotlight contains an unusually large number of letters from our readers. Politics is in the air.

One value inherent in a community newspaper is that we include a broad cross-section of reader opinion. Each week we print as many letters as are printable, election season or not. Doing so, we believe, keeps our readers well informed and makes us a better paper.

Cops don't trick or treat

It should come as no surprise, human nature being what it is, that a few malcontents have been playing with the County's new 911 emergency response telephone service.

These intellectual giants have not figured out that when you make a call, the cops know where your calling from. That's what the system is all about, after all: to give the exact location of a call's origin.

Police say a few of the calls have been made by mistake. People programming the speed dial option on their telephones, for instance. In that case a return call from the dispatcher revealed the error.

But most are initiated by people who get their jollies in strange ways. Apparently, though, they don't realize that false alarms are against the law. As in, illegal. So one day soon, while they're still giggling up their sleeve, a couple of unhappy cops are going to appear at their door.

Now that will be a surprise!

The private diary as public literature

The writer of this Point of View is a retired professor from the University at Albany and editor of the first Bethlehem bicentennial publication, Bethlehem Revisited.

By Floyd I. Brewer

The forthcoming publication of Bethlehem Diary raises questions about the diary as a literary form.

Is it good literature or a heavily biased account of one person's warped values? Are diaries good sources for future historians and journalists? If so, why aren't more of them published?

I suspect the answer to such questions will depend heavily on the skill and training of the author of a particular diary. However, diaries are largely an untapped source of information, and there is a great need to learn more about life in towns such as Bethlehem and Colonie through the eyes of residents with special training and skills.

Wouldn't you like to know in some detail how an engineer feels about the rampant growth in either of these towns, and the factors in his world view that generate such feelings? You might find out if he writes a diary. And wouldn't a diary written by a town supervisor be fascinating and instructive? Such an account would clearly be of great interest to future historians.

A performing artist's view of the cultural life in the surrounding area? A homemaker's down-to-earth view of life in a suburb? You can extend this list to include any number of people whose views about life in a town rarely appear in the press, yet could well be a rich source of information. They might be encouraged to keep a diary and publish a condensed version, if they knew more about the diary as a literary form.

The daily diary (from the Latin dies, meaning "day") has become a more acceptable literary form in recent years, yet few are published. This is probably because the "diary" still conjures up a less-than-scholarly vision of a secret memoir destined to be placed in a locked drawer after each entry is written, and thrown out by indifferent relatives following the death of the author.

Unfortunately, this scenario is all too common in modern times, much to the dismay of historians and journalists who want to document their books and stories with choice information from such sources. Sure, a diary is one writer's opinion of how and why particular events transpired, but this can be checked against facts about the same events obtained from other sources.

One merely has to look back over history to discover the enormous benefits that can accrue through well-written diaries. Where would Roman history fans be without Julius Caesar's (100-44 B.C.) Commentaries on the Gallic wars, which combine a description of the events with his personal response to them? And what student of good literature hasn't profited from reading Samuel Pepy's first diary completed in 1669? His unusual ability to blend piety, sensuality, and a keen awareness of the world around him, more than makes up for the lack of polish in his choice of phrases.

All aspiring diary writers can benefit therapeutically from recording the things that characterize their daily lives.

Further, how could a diehard outdoor hiker possibly avoid rushing to Jaffrey, New Hampshire, after reading Ralph Waldo Emerson's diary account of his trip up Mount Monadnock in 1866? And, who hasn't been brought to tears after reading The Diary of a Young Girl by Anne Frank? Published in 1952, it is one person's response to crowded living under desperate conditions surrounded by death and destruction.

Finally, it is well known that David Souter's "great secret" is the diary he has kept since age 13. Will this very private man publish excerpts of his life as a Supreme Court justice when he leaves the court? I can hardly wait to read his version of the heated disagreements he is having with Justice

Scalia. We would not have access to these and a thousand other great diaries throughout history if dedicated writers with the necessary self-discipline hadn't taken pen in hand and recorded their innermost feelings about their daily lives.

Of course, most of us with average self-discipline aren't going to equal the prolific record of Edward Robb Ellis who, according to the Guinness Book of World Records, had written 37,000 pages in his diaries at last count. Nor do we have the depth of commitment to the diary cause like James Cummings, who has amassed a private library of more than 15,000 diaries (he calls them journals).

Still, all aspiring diary writers can benefit therapeutically from recording their efforts to contribute to the political life of their town, stop smoking, stay happily married, enjoy the wonders of nature, pursue their favorite volunteer work, and a hundred other things that characterize their daily lives. How many such descriptions have been committed to a bonfire with little thought about their value to future generations?

By now, it should be obvious that this is an unabashed effort to encourage more people in Bethlehem and the greater Albany area to buy one of those big red books and start their own diaries. Annual sales of such books have grown to 10 million worldwide; hundreds are sold in this area. Surely a few of them are worthy of publication.

Scheduled to be released sometime in December, Bethlehem Diary: Stories and Reflections, 1983-1993, is full of behind-the-scenes stories about family life, personalities and events in Bethlehem, and the latest archaeological digs, a cornucopia of subjects reflecting the senior author's experiences over the 10 years leading up to the town's bicentennial year.

In her introductory statement to Bethlehem Diary, Editor-in-Chief Teresa Buckley writes:

"This was no simple chronicle of the weather and local events. Floyd Brewer examined the factors that shaped his life, the changing relationships with his wife and

Community blood roiled over water project

Woman will drink bottled water

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am yet another concerned town of Bethlehem taxpayer who is upset about the town's decision to replace Alcove reservoir water with that drawn from an aquifer disturbingly close to the Hudson River. There have been excellent letters printed in The Spotlight from knowledgeable residents which have provided enough data to question the judgment of town officials and to justify a review of the decision. My concerns follow.

The aquifer apparently is high in iron and manganese. Bill Keller wrote a cogent, carefully researched letter in the Oct. 19 issue of your paper regarding the ramifications of using water with these minerals in high concentration.

My own unpleasant experience with a potable water source high in manganese and iron came during several years living in a small town in coastal Massachusetts, where water badly stained appliances, clothes, clogged pipes and created gastrointestinal problems in some residents.

Those of us who attempted to minimize the problem with individual home filter units found that the iron content was too great for the filters to accommodate without clogging within a brief time, thus making the effort to scrub the water too costly.

Having experienced on a small scale some of the problems attending a water source high in mineral content, I can better appreciate the dynamics of a sand bed filter and its important role in removing iron from the water. However, how soon will the proposed water plan become complicated by a sand bed saturated with metals and other matter and what do we do then? One experienced letter writer estimated a 10-year life for this municipal water system. What then and at what cost to taxpayers?

I have yet to be convinced that an aquifer just 30 feet from the Hudson River will not reflect river pollutants from time to time, pollutants which might not be detected until after entry into the town water lines. The 30 feet distance from the river that has been mentioned is considered a shallow well depth when digging a residential well and is not considered of sufficient depth to filter out surface contaminants.

There appear to be viable alternatives which are more appealing to me. Prudence would dictate that where possible a trial period should occur, during which time the system would be thoroughly monitored before it is put into residential usage.

The town staunchly has argued that there will be no additional costs to homeowners, since industry will pay for the new water system. Fine, so build the plant, lay the pipes and have industry as the sole user while several years of close monitoring is done.

When the time comes to expand the existing water system due to population growth in Bethlehem, then thoroughly review the collected data and make a decision at that time regarding the efficacy of using the aquifer as a potable water source.

In the interim, the city of Albany has indicated that it is willing to renegotiate an equitable water user fee for Bethlehem residents. As a taxpayer, I would prefer to pay a higher water fee for Alcove reservoir water than to subject myself to drinking water which may prove inferior.

Our supervisor Sheila Fuller has outlined the process by which town officials presented the water issue and events which lead to a decision.

She is satisfied that all requirements were met, but I doubt that a matter of this magnitude would have been ignored by so many residents, had the public notification and education process been handled as forthrightly as it should. For an issue as critical to the life of this community as its water quality, the decision should have been for the voters to decide.

I hope that something can be done to arrest the process already in progress. I intend to begin purchasing bottled water the day the Hudson aquifer source is put on line, but I truly hope that I won't have to reach this point.

Evelyn W. Keller

Alcove for drinking, Hudson for industry

Editor, The Spotlight:

Clearwater exposed the letter of April 24, 1992, in which the Health Department advised the town of Bethlehem to stay with the cleaner source — the Alcove. That the Health Department finally gave approval does not alter the fact that they declared the Alcove to be a cleaner source than the Hudson River. The source remains the same.

The Health Department does not consider PCBs to be a problem.

• Does not consider the glycol

Editor, The Spotlight:

Let me see now.

According to the information I've been able to dig out, Town Supervisor Sheila Fuller has five (5) kids, all of whom live in town; Councilwoman Doris Davis has two (2) kids, both of whom live in town; Councilman George Lenhardt has two (2) kids, both of whom live in town; Councilman Fred Webster has one (1) kid who lives in town; Town Engineer Bruce Secor has two (2) kids who live in town; and former Supervisor Ken Ringler, an original proponent of the new water system, has one (1) kid who lives in town.

And yet, the purveyors of scare tactics would have us believe the absolutely absurd proposition that all of these public officials have callously and without any regard for the safety of their kids

(not to mention themselves and the rest of us) embarked on a plan for a new water supply in our town that is unsafe and of low quality.

What nonsense. What absolute nonsense.

The simple fact is this. The opponents of the new system have misrepresented the facts and completely politicized the issue. The town has done its job and done it well.

A carefully researched and thought-out plan has been commenced that will provide an abundant and safe supply (of water) at a very reasonable cost independent of the city of Albany and its antiquated system.

Come on Clearwater, Ms. Burtis and Mr. Burkhard. Cut out the nonsense.

Robert K. Oliver

that was found in the water to be a problem.

• Does not consider the legal dumping of huge quantities of chemicals into the Hudson to be a problem.

• Does not consider the sewage plants that line the Hudson to be a problem.

Clearwater is concerned about the proposed testing and monitoring schedule. We do not need to take this risk.

There is a simple solution. Use the Hudson River water for industry. Keep the Alcove Reservoir for our drinking water.

Matters of Opinion

Residents pen strong views on water source

Consultant takes issue with Kelleher article

Editor, The Spotlight:

I read Mr. Kelleher's article on the town of Bethlehem's new water system and disagree with his statements and conclusions.

To set the record straight, I offer my thoughts on the subject since I have been the town's water consultant for the past 30 years.

In addition, I have been water consultant to approximately 25 water systems both in New York state and Florida. I hold a B.S. in chemistry from City University of New York and a master's degree in environmental engineering from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy.

The following observations and statements in Mr. Kelleher's article are not true:

1. The new water plant is experimental. (This is certainly not true. Actually, this type of water treatment plant has been in operation for many years in many cities throughout the United States.)

2. Odor problem exist. (There have been no taste or odor problems in either the well supply or the pilot plant.)

3. Iron bacteria are massive. (I tested the well supply for iron bacteria and found the concentration to be less than many existing systems here in the Albany area.)

4. The well will be clogged with iron bacteria. (There is no evidence of this happening in the well supply.)

5. The town never heard of chlorine shock treatment. (Shock treatment was used as a precaution in the well system after the filter media was in place. Sterilization is standard practice for a new well system.)

6. Iron bacteria is a cold water organism. (In many water systems, iron bacteria grow at most temperatures found in this area.)

7. Oxygen in river water is transferred to the well. (There is no proof that this will happen. In fact, laboratory results show the opposite to be true.)

8. The infiltration gallery is clogged with ferrous hydroxide. (Any ferrous hydroxide found does not have a clogging effect in laboratory jar and filtration tests.)

9. The infiltration gallery depends upon leaching of anaerobic deposits containing PCB's. (Testing has shown that there is no anaerobic leaching and no detectable PCB's.)

10. Organic matter leaches from the river bottom. (The well supply is low in organic matter and no evidence has been found to support the statement.)

11. The treatment process may not be successful. (The treatment process was shown to be successful and review by the Albany County Health Department and the New York State Health Department was in agreement. There are over 300 existing water plants using this type of purification process successfully.)

12. Ozone may fail to take out the taste and odor. (There were no taste and odor problems in the well supply when tested. Many types of taste and odor removal have been included in the process design as a precaution should taste and odor occur in the future.)

My conclusion after reading Mr. Kelleher's article on the town's new water system is that he is not presenting an accurate review or statement of facts for this project.

The water treatment process is based on proven technology, supported by experts in the field of ground water and water supply. The new water project will provide a safe, high quality source of drinking water to meet the long range needs of Bethlehem.

Officials spew forth polluted message

Editor, The Spotlight:

Voting Republican in Bethlehem is like putting coins into a defective vending machine. It's futile. You don't get the product and you can say goodbye to your money.

I did it again last November and now I have that same old feeling.

I oppose drinking, cooking and bathing with water extracted from certified, multiply-contaminated sewage.

However, it is unfortunate that objections to proclamations from town hall are considered heresy and akin to throwing stones at Caesar's wife.

Clearwater's objections to residential use are supported by facts obtained through state and federal health and environmental agencies. This documentation warns of the high risk factors of tapping into this river of pollution.

Through political control, the administration has chosen to minimize that information and has committed itself to predicting that sophisticated, modern machinery will protect us all from ingesting myriad poisons.

Meanwhile, residents are resigned to being herded down the old garden path, wrapped in a technological security blanket, purchased from our 100-year old vending machine.

Cogen letter was misleading

Editor, The Spotlight:

A recent letter to The Spotlight from the general manager of Selkirk Cogen, indicating that Cogen's water payments will cover the cost of Bethlehem's new water plant, is misleading.

The letter stated "... therefore Selkirk Cogen will be operational for 20 years - 10 years past when it is estimated its water payments will have covered the cost of the town's new plant."

Let's look at the facts.

The 1992 water agreement between Cogen and the town of Bethlehem obligates Cogen to purchase a guaranteed amount of water representing $1.1 million annually, which includes the water rent and district property tax.

Bethlehem's new $13.9 million water system will require an annual bond payment of $1.017 million over the next 27 years in addition to annual costs of operating and maintaining the second water treatment plant. O & M costs will

Let's think about effects for younger generation

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to thank you for airing the issues regarding the "Hudson River" drinking water in your newspaper. One of the great things about living in Bethlehem is The Spotlight and the information and service that it provides to its readers.

Most of us suffer from "information overload" and find it impossible with our busy schedules to fully understand all of the serious issues that face us today. Just feeding ourselves has become a major mental juggling act when we go to the market and try to figure out which foods are safe and healthy and which foods are going to cause us long term health problems.

Most of us can relate to words like fat, sugar, nitrates, nitrites, hydrogenated, etc. But most of us get lost when we start reading about PCBs and other chemicals whose names we cannot even pronounce.

When I first became aware of the planned change in the source of drinking water for Bethlehem, I assumed that our town officials would make the best decision about how to solve the water problem, and was content to sit back and let the issue play itself out.

As I read more about the issue in The Spotlight, I realized that this issue was more serious than I realized and I, like Eleanor Shapiro, sought out Clearwater to find out what was going on. I also decided that the issue was serious enough to give up some of my precious time and I have spent some time gathering signatures on the petition to the town board.

I do not want to drink water that is any less pure than the water that we have been drinking up to now. The treatment plants cannot remove all of the chemicals from the Hudson River water.

I am personally concerned with the unknown long term effects of drinking chemicals. I am concerned for the younger generation of Bethlehem residents who have been consuming alar in their apple juice, bovine growth hormones in their milk (did you read about the pus problem in cattle that have been injected with BGH), and who knows what else in the liquids that they consume all the time.

We need to seriously rethink the water issue. We need to make sure that we are supplying homes with the cleanest water that money can buy. We need elected officials who will be honest with us about the real cost of treating the water from the Hudson River. We need elected officials who will represent the real needs of the residents of Bethlehem. We are not just Democrats and Republicans. We are real folk who chose to live in this community because it offers a quality of life not available in many American communities anymore.

A couple of weeks ago, I found out that Bill Burkhard was opposed to the Hudson River drinking water. I think that it is important for us to show our opposition to the proposal and to vote for the candidate for town board who supports our concern about this issue.

Non-subscriber chides paper for lack of balanced coverage

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am not a subscriber to The Spotlight, but I picked up a copy of your newspaper this week Oct. 26, because it is close to election time and I wanted to get a better sense of town issues and candidates.

I was dismayed to find no attempt at balanced reporting on these matters.

The paper read like the official town newspaper. The letters on the controversial water issue were all from town officials in-involved in the project.

The "Point of View" section was again a forum for town opinion. There is one party candidate running for the town board, yet his candidacy was totally ignored.

Diversity of opinion, citizen involvement in government are hallmarks of a vibrant electorate.

The newspaper and town officials seemed to decry this and call instead for "cheerleader citizens."

Theresa Rodrigues

exceed $400,000 per year. The figures don't support the statement that Cogen water payments in 10 years will have covered the cost of the new plant.

In April 1992, the town of Bethlehem drafted a water supply agreement to furnish water to Cogen. This multi-million dollar, multi-year agreement was concluded in less than one month with no scrutiny by the town board or the public.

The draft Cogen/Bethlehem agreement was transmitted on April 2, 1992, by town engineer Bruce Secor to members of the town board.

In less than one week, the town board approved the agreement by unanimous vote with no discussion. Supervisor Kenneth Ringler signed the agreement on behalf of the town on 4/20/92.

In order to make a meaningful comparison of water costs all charges must be included, such as water rents and water property tax. Data on unit water cost (per 1000 gallons) would reveal that Bethlehem users pay significantly more than Cogen and other large industrial users.

The Albany residential water rates are significantly less than Bethlehem's water rates.

On the economic issue alone, Bethlehem should be looking at the regionalization of our water supply.

Community pours out thoughts on water plan

This reader gives kudos to Spotlight for coverage

Editor, The Spotlight:

I have followed with great interest the controversy relative to the town's efforts to expand our existing water supply system.

As the debate has raged on, what has become more and more apparent is that there is very little in the way of factual support for the claims of those in opposition.

This was perhaps best demonstrated by the two most recent issues of The Spotlight.

The issue two weeks ago contained a "Point of View" article by an engineer which appeared to disclose a technical flaw in the proposed facility, while still another article (by a Spotlight reporter) featured a woman who objected to the supposed lack of information and opportunity for public input provided by the town board.

It has become more and more apparent that there is very little in the way of factual support for those in opposition to the new water system.

Then last week two letters from engineers involved in the planning and design of the proposed system, clearly and decisively presented the facts, while at the same time putting to rest the accusations of the previous week.

It turns out that not only is the system not "experimental" as claimed by the previous week's "Point of View" author, but in fact, is being successfully utilized in more than 300 plants located in New York state and nationwide.

Meanwhile, another Point of

Letters

View' article by town Supervisor Sheila Fuller outlined in plain English the findings made by professionals employed to explore various alternative sources and systems and at the same time took us step-by-step through the public decision-making process that commenced in 1990.

Clearly there was plenty of notice and plenty of opportunity to provide public input.

And finally, there was a letter from former town Supervisor Ken Ringler, who perhaps summed things up best by observing:

Enough is enough! Clear-water and certain politicians have distorted the facts, taken reports out of context and ignored the N.Y. State Health Department's assurances that our system is totally safe.

I couldn't agree more.

I, for one, am extremely satisfied with what we enjoy in our town and have every confidence that the type of government we have enjoyed in the past will continue in the future.

Thank you Spotlight for providing an extra forum to explore subjects of this nature.

Town leaders locked into letter of the law

Editor, The Spotlight:

What the on-going arguments about the water system in Bethlehem should make clear to all intelligent citizens is that the scientific issue is and will be open to debate far into the future.

The real issue is political. The point is how we evaluate the way the citizens of the town were given the opportunity to engage in this process of interpretation and evaluation. This is the issue that we must address in the election and in how we view the way our elected officials, and all those with political and economic interests in this project, continue to argue for it rather than acknowledging the political realities of the situation.

The "truth" and "objective reality" of the water situation in Bethlehem are subject to debate within political as well as scientific contexts. The fact is that citizens of Bethlehem are now subject to the interpretation accepted by our current political leaders. Their arguments against those who favor another interpretation revert solely to the "truth" and "validity" of the position they have already enacted. This was clear in the last issue of The Spotlight. The opinions in letters and the Point of View column represent for the most part those of individuals with political and economic interests in the project: Sheila Fuller the current Town Supervisor; Kenneth Ringler, former town supervisor;

Robert Frazer of the engineering firm that proposed and designed the system; Jack Halstuch, a consultant to the water project; and Dennis Geran from a company that is supplying water treatment equipment for the project.

Democracy acknowledges the principle of interpretation that underlies all social political structures and has a built in system of checks and balances. Although the Bethlehem town government follows the letter of the law perhaps it would be more to our advantage if they were more true to its spirit and interpreted its principles more openly in behalf of its citizens.

Vote for Burkhard a 'sane statement'

Editor, The Spotlight:

Too many of us have forgotten not only the lessons of our most intellectually challenging years—when critical thinking and a refusal to silently and blindly accept authority were honorable traits—but also how to apply pure, common sense. I am, not surprisingly, referring to the water issue and the opportunity to make a sane statement by voting for Bill Burkhard for Town Board.

It seems so obvious to me that our current board, and the Republicans and Independent candidates, are not only arrogant but, worse, plain stupid. How could anyone with half a brain turn a deaf ear to so many engineering and environmental professionals who have raised doubt after doubt about the new water system?

Last week there was yet another in the frightening series of warnings in The Spotlight regarding hazards; this time it was iron deposits not only creating a bad stench and horrible taste to the water, but also clogging up the system so badly that it will take more and more money to repair and keep the system going. Shoddy research, poor performance, and even cover-ups are obvious. Even more horrible is the fact that some board members noted these problems but voted in favor of the new system anyway. What has happened?

Even more scary is the fall back position that goes something like this: "Well, the state department of health wouldn't say it was OK if that weren't true." Why does anyone in this day and age, when cover up after cover-up is revealed, when we have so many doubts

(and rightly so) about what government says that we no longer are surprised when we hear of salmonella discoveries being hush-hush, deadly viruses being mishandled, or AIDS research being delayed, etc., etc., etc., believe this garbage? The only way to react, for those of us who have not decided to entirely relinquish our decision making capabilities to elected officials, is to put someone on the board who is not one of them.

Arrogance is disgusting, but stupidity is dangerous. Don't make deaf and blind followers of all of us. Elect Bill Burkhard.

Governor salutes School Board

Editor, The Spotlight:

For many of us, time presents a problem. There are just not enough hours in the day to accomplish all that we need to do. We balance job responsibilities with those of our families, and somehow try to schedule fun and improve ourselves and our communities.

Nine of the most dedicated residents of our community serve on the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk school board. Despite their busy days and their myriad responsibilities, they volunteer an enormous amount of time and energy to our students. Their job is not an easy one, particularly in these times of shrinking resources and increasing and ever-changing demands placed on schools.

Governor Cuomo has declared the week of Oct. 31 through Nov. 4 to be School Board Recognition Week. Since the late 1700s the New York State has empowered its citizens to elect school boards in order to ensure that the schools belong to the people. School boards all over the state's strive hard to maintain that value.

As a resident, taxpayer, parent and educator, I thank Sarah Hafenstein, Mona Selover, Jim Feuerbach, Joseph Laux, Diane Louis, Maurice Satin, Joseph Scalzo, Anthony Schwartz, and Russell Sykes, for your investment in our children's—our country's—futures.

A democracy of barrenness

Editor, The Spotlight:

I've been reading all that is going on with regard to the Southgate Project and other building projects in our surrounding Capital District area.

It saddens me to read how many citizens feel that the more buildings we have, the more important we are.

I've been living in the town of Bethlehem for almost four years and within that short period of time I've seen the population grow. Obviously people selected Bethlehem because of its small town quality. I know I did. This could change if we continue to allow developers to build, make their money and be on their way leaving us in their dust!

Why can't we have land with just trees and grass? Why must there always be a mall?

In reading Kathleen Norris' book, Dakota, I came upon this passage which seemed to say what I feel is happening across our country and right here in Bethlehem:

"In the last volume of Ole Rolvaag's Giants in the Earth trilogy, a country pastor, addressing Norwegian farmers in Dakota who are losing their 'old country' ways to become good Americans, declares that 'a people that has lost its traditions is doomed. If this process of leveling down, of making everybody alike... is allowed to continue, the most impoverished land spiritually on the face of the earth; out of our highly praised melting pot will come a dull... smug complacency, barren of all creative thought... Soon we will have reached the perfect democracy of barrenness... Dead will be the hidden life of the heart which is nourished by tradition, the idioms of languages and our attitude to life. It is out of these elements that character grows.'"

Bethlehem in Hebrew means "house of bread". Let us not lose sight of that significant phrase but look carefully at the nourishment that comes from our hearths. The traditions and values that have given Bethlehem its special place in the Capital District are the same as those for which people have chosen to settle here. "The spirit of a place cannot be transported or replaced" but I think it can be lost.

Fortunate it's Faso

Editor, The Spotlight:

I noted with interest that Assemblyman John Faso's critics repeatedly comment on his interest in seeking higher office. I can understand being opposed to someone because they lack the qualifications necessary for the job, but I've never known someone to be attacked when they are qualified!

People that follow the state political scene recognize John Faso as one of the brightest, most articulate members, Democrat or Republican, in the Legislature. I happen to agree with Mr. Faso on most issues, particularly his efforts to promote fiscal responsibility in Albany.

Even if you don't agree with him, the 102nd Assembly District is fortunate to be represented by a dedicated and hard-working legislator. And, notice, his critics don't dispute that fact.

Davis sees issues through eyes of residents

Editor, The Spotlight:

Bethlehem is a really special community. It is a place where people wait in line for the library to open on Sunday afternoon, where student workers are trusted with the responsibility of running many of the town's businesses during the evening hours, and where residents accept with sincerity the responsibility to speak out on issues that affect our way of life.

It is a place where residents take seriously their responsibility to vote and to elect those representatives they perceive as sharing their concerns about the quality of life in our town.

It is with this in mind that I take

An independent thinker

Editor, The Spotlight:

Doris Davis has been portrayed her by opponent as not being 'independent' as a member of the Bethlehem Town Board.

It's a superficial charge that's easy to make in a political campaign. Her opponent knows that most residents (like himself) generally don't attend Town meetings, and therefore won't know differently.

Independent thought is exactly what Doris Davis has brought to Town government. She was earlier appointed to the Planning Board after her effective advocacy concerning town planning generally, and a residential development project specifically. Those of us who served with Doris on the Town Planning Board didn't have Where've you been?

Editor, The Spotlight:

I'm amused and confused. The Democratic nominee for councilman states the incumbent, Doris Davis, voted 467 times with the majority position. Is that bad? Certainly not. Which of these 467 votes would you have dissented on, Mr. Nominee, except for the new water system, of course. Perhaps you would have voted against the Senior Citizen program. Would you, if elected, have a rubber stamp imprinted "against"? I'm sure you would.

I'm amused, Mr. Nominee, because I have never heard of your attendance at a town board meeting or planning board meeting except after you became a nominee. I never have heard a shout of dissent from you until now.

No, Mr. Nominee, you have been weighed in the balance and found wanting. You have taken the wrong fork in the trail. If you are sincere I'm sure your voice of objection would have been heard throughout the years, not just at election time.

I'm happy living in the town of Bethlehem and I'm grateful for the things the town government has given us. I'm glad I live here and I'll bet you are too!

this opportunity to share my reasons for supporting Doris Davis for election to the Bethlehem Town Board. I have known Doris for about 12 years and have seen her commitment to the community in everything she does. Doris has worked hard as a Republican committeeman to see that voters in her district were aware of the issues and able to exercise their right to vote. She has been a strong, consistent voice for responsible planning in the town and as a member of the town board she can be counted on to consider all issues in light of their impact on the citizens of our town.

Doris is not a single issue candidate. She made her decision about the town's water supply not based on how it would impact her candidacy but rather on how she felt she could assure a safe, accessible water supply for future generations.

I do not know Doris' family nor does she know mine. But I know that when Doris votes for issues such as the water system, she has both her family and mine in mind as well as the families of all Bethlehem residents. I trust Doris to speak for me because I know that she, too, values the things that make Bethlehem special.

Matters of Opinion

You're gonna miss me at the store

Editor, The Spotlight:

In the Oct. 5 Spotlight, a fellow Delmar Grand Union refugee wrote about his much better experiences at a competitor's supermarket, only 15 minutes away.

We have been shopping at the East Greenbush Shop 'N Save for the past year and enjoy it immensely. This market has a greater variety of merchandise, a "bagger" stationed at every check-out line, personable employees and terrific prices, all in a spotless setting.

What prompts this letter was an unfortunate shopping trip to the Delmar Grand Union a recent Saturday. As always, the prices were high: Cocoa Krispies—$4.09 vs. $2.99, house brand orange juice—$2.39 vs. $1.69, 12-pack

Letters

Pepsi Cola—$3.69 vs. $2.99 and Colombo fat-free yogurt—83 cents vs. 59 cents.

Additionally, at the meat counter, there was but a single London broil. When we requested a second one, the clerk only agreed reluctantly to get us an additional piece of meat, and told us we would have to wait 15 minutes—(the time it would have taken us to get to Shop 'N Save).

As always, the high point of our excursion was "checking out" Grand Union's answer to "how can we be sure that we haven't missed the opportunity to aggravate every person who has patronized our store today?" A wonderful, soda-sipping cashier fulfilled Grand Union's mandate and eventually we were on our way.

We have found that due to the adequate number of staff at Shop 'N Save and the speed at which they work, our shopping trips to East Greenbush take no longer than if we stayed right here in Delmar and the money we save is just the added bonus we need to continue doing so.

Everybody wants into the act

Editor, The Spotlight:

Well, there it was in the Oct. 26 issue of The Spotlight, the last minute party push, hauling out the former town supervisor, the local businesses, and let's not forget the "scientific back-up." Why, even our son's Bethlehem Central school bus driver got into the act, telling him he should get rid of an opponent's lawn sign—a candidate our son himself supports.

It is the same old horse-puckey we heard with the incinerator. Opponents are always depicted, with a pinkish tinge, as emotional and unscientific, but it was Doris Davis who voted on the water issue "with her heart" after a maudlin speech on motherhood, not water. (Though she did allow the Hudson looked clean when she was boating.)

As with the water, in 1992 the board listened only to those "experts" who supported a huge garbage-burner for our town. Those opposed were entirely discredited, thrown into the "emotional bin." However, I am sure last January's Albany ANSWERS' sootfall, which extended to areas of Bethlehem, made residents grateful our populace was intelligent and educated enough to have seen the incinerator for the snake oil it was. And remember it was Mr. Ringler and board members who supported the incinerator designed by the same engineers as ANSWERS.

There is something wrong with a government that time and again ignores or demeans input from voters—the populace—those people to whom they are ultimately beholden.

Your Opinion Matters

Editor, The Spotlight:

Governor Cuomo has always said government must help those who cannot help themselves. He has lived by that word for the past 12 years, helping our state's most vulnerable populations.

Governor Cuomo signed into law a bill which mandates that doctors cannot charge more than 5 percent above the approved Medicare rate.

Governor Cuomo approved life line banking legislation to require banks to offer low cost banking services to all consumers.

Editor, The Spotlight:

Democrat town board candidate Bill Burkhard indicates in his political advertising that he will provide leadership for Bethlehem in the 21st century.

I don't believe that the town or I can wait another five years for Mr. Burkhard's leadership.

So if it's all the same to Mr. Burkhard, I believe I'll vote for Doris Davis to provide leadership from now until the next millennium, when, Mr. Burkhard says he'll be ready to take over.

Editor, The Spotlight:

In my first letter to The Spotlight, I want to call attention to a great opportunity for Bethlehem residents to help a truly energetic, resourceful, and dynamic leader remain on the Town Board. Doris Davis already has demonstrated many times over that she is well aware of our feelings about the town's pressing problems, that she has the courage to make definitive decisions when necessary, and that she will represent us fairly on the big issues when the chips are down.

My work on the town's history over the past decade has shown that people with Doris Davis' qualifications and skills, who want to serve on the Board, are few and far between. Let's keep a good thing going!

Thank you to all who attended the School's Out office warming on October 19. You have offered words of congratulations, encouragement, support, gifts, and expressed your excitement for the growth of School's Out.

Editor, the Spotlight:

On October 22, there was a Line Dance hosted by B.C.C.O., the parent teacher organization of Bethlehem High School. All guests received a bandana compliments of CDPHP. Everyone who attended enjoyed dancing the night away as well as socializing with friends and neighbors. We would like to thank Lyman's, R. Van Hoesen and Olsen's Nursery for lending us the decorations for the evening as well as the many parents who baked desserts. The next "B.C.C.O. Line Dance" is scheduled for the third weekend in January, so hold the date and join in the fun. See y'all.

With Burkhard, 'cute' doesn't cut it

Editor, The Spotlight:

Bill Burkhard is the typical Albany Democrat candidate who's willing to say or imply anything he can that might mislead the voters and win him a few votes in the process, and he proved it in his ad last week. After wallowing in verbosity that ends up saying absolutely nothing of substance, he sneaks in a cute little phrase that tells you a whole lot about what the man is really like. I quote: "One piece of advice is clear, as clear and unquestionable as the water we're getting now." Well isn't that cute?

What isn't clear I suggest is exactly where Mr. Burkhard does stand on the issue. He stated publicly in a debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters last year that it would be a first-rate plant.

Interesting. This is the same Bill Burkhard who is allowing an unsigned letter condemning the town's water plan as unsafe and too costly and urging residents to vote for him, to be handed out with Democrat campaign literature and the same Bill Burkhard who sneaks phrases into his ads to convey a message without having the nerve to state it outright.

As he says in the same ad, "The choice is yours."

Work, Carpinello vying for Supreme Court seat

By Dev Tobin

The Third Judicial District sprawls through the mid-Hudson Valley, encompassing the counties of Albany, Rensselaer, Columbia, Greene, Sullivan and Ulster.

Which counties state Supreme Court justices come from is controversial this year, as a cross-endorsement agreement between the Democrats and Republicans party leaders broke down, leading to a contested race.

Family Court Judge Mary MacMaster Work of Ulster County was nominated by the Democrats after the Republicans endorsed East Greenbush Town Justice Anthony Carpinello.

Work said that Carpinello's endorsement abrogated an agreement to cross-endorse an Ulster County Republican to replace Judge Joseph Torraca, an Ulster County Republican who this year reached the mandatory retirement age of 70.

Work charged that while Ulster County and Rensselaer County are similar in size, Carpinello's election would give Rensselaer four judges and leave Ulster with just one.

Lawyers in Ulster County are "up in arms about having to travel to Albany to find a judge" with two judges in Kingston, Work said, and the situation would get worse if only one judge is based there.

Carpinello responded that the Ulster County Republican chairman "engineered a double-cross" when the GOP judicial nominating convention refused to pick his candidate.

"This parochialism of 'us vs. them' is totally inappropriate in a race this important," Carpinello said. "The issue should be who is the more qualified."

Carpinello added that Ulster would effectively have more than one judge since Torraca, who will likely be reappointed, and Karen Peters, a Supreme Court judge assigned to the Appellate Division, both have offices in Kingston.

Both Work and Carpinello agreed that Supreme Court judgeships should be countywide, like most other trial-level courts, rather than multi-county as now.

Both also noted that, with limited resources, it was difficult to campaign effectively in such a large district.

Work said that her four-and-a-half years experience on the Family Court bench has prepared her well for dealing with divorce actions, which she said make up about a third of the Supreme Court docket.

Anthony Carpinello

"I've tried many cases and written published decisions," she said. "And I work to ensure that people find justice, fairness and compassion in court."

Carpinello said that, as a lifelong resident, his knowledge of the region and its people "will be invaluable to me as a Supreme Court judge."

Another controversy in the race involves third-party nominations.

Carpinello defended radio ads where he says he's proud that he was not nominated for the Liberal line on the ballot.

"I'm proud to be the nominee of the Conservative party, and generally agree with their philosophy," Carpinello said.

"It's reflective of the kind of person I am and what kind of judge I will be," he added.

Work said that she applied for both the Conservative and Liberal designations because "You have to be judge for everybody across the spectrum."

Work, 48, is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and New York University Law School. She was appointed to the Family Court judgeship by Gov. Mario Cuomo in March 1990, then won election in her own right in November 1990.

Prior to her appointment, she worked for the Ulster County Department of Social Services, had a private practice, and also worked for Bronx Legal Services.

She, her husband Victor, and their three sons live in Wallkill.

Carpinello is a graduate of Union College and Albany Law School.

Besides serving as town justice, Carpinello is an attorney with the Albany office of Hiscock & Barclay. He previously served eight years in the Rensselaer County Legislature and seven years on the East Greenbush town board.

He, his wife Sharon, and their two children live in East Greenbush.

In New York, State Supreme Court is a trial-level court that handles divorce, torts, real estate, commercial, contract and other civil matters. Judges serve a 14-year term and are currently paid $112,000 a year.

Town Politics and Water

I am Bill Kelleher a 67-year-old retired engineer, having worked for New York State. I am a registered Republican. My wife Dorothy and I have lived here for over 36 years. We raised 3 children in this community and have one child and two grandchildren still living here. That's why I was sad when I noticed the bitter feelings at the July 13, 1994 Town Board hearing on the new water supply.

However, I soon found out why. The Town Board is simply not listening to its people. We must elect Bill Burkhard to send a clear signal to the town that we should hire outside consultants to best determine how to get us out of this ill conceived water project. Two weeks ago, I wrote a Point of View for The Spotlight on the project and last week the town replied. Now here are my rebuttals.

WELLS: Mr. Fraser, the Design Engineer, used Lincoln, Nebraska's new Ranney Well to justify his one sided infiltration gallery. Ranney type wells have been used for over 60 years and are very common. The differences between the Ranney Well at Lincoln and the town's infiltration gallery are very substantial. Please contact me if you want a detailed explanation.

IRON: Lincoln's chemist says the iron in the well is less than 0.02 parts per million (ppm). The town's well is 5.0 ppm. Mr. Fraser and I would not be in disagreement if the iron in the town's water were to be 0.02 ppm.

AMMONIA: Lincoln's raw water has less than 0.01 ppm of ammonia. The town's well has 1 to 2.7 ppm of ammonia. DEC's standard for ammonia in ground water is 2.0 ppm. It is clear to both Lincoln's chemist and myself that there is a major source of human waste getting into the town's well.

SLUDGE DEPOSITS: Rain water infiltrating through natural humus material does not contain ammonia. However, sludge deposits on the bottom of rivers below sewage treatment plants do. It is obvious that the well water represents leachate from sludge deposits that is eventually filtered through sand.

OZONE BY-PRODUCTS: If Vly Creek and Alcove Reservoir waters contain natural humus are eventually treated with ozone, there would be no toxic ozone by-products. This is the consensus of opinion of the scientific community after over 10 years of study including animal studies. However, it is wrong to say that ozonization of filtered leachate from sludges containing decomposing PCB's is safe. Absolutely no studies have been made on the ozone by-products to make such a statement.

EXPERIMENTAL PLANT: A report obtained under a freedom of information act clearly shows that the town's proposed treatment plant is experimental. I have compared this report in detail with a 570 page ozone design book put out by the American Water Works Association and its counterpart in France. I would be glad to meet with the town board and explain why.

GREEN ISLAND: It is noted that Shelia Fuller is still using the false propaganda that Green Island's water supply is the same as the town's system. Green Island's supply is not an infiltration gallery, has no iron problem and certainly does not have 2.7 ppm of ammonia. The town should have listened to people like Ron Johnson who took the time to go up to Green Island and found proof that it is not the same as the town's system.

Bethlehem Recycling Corner

By Sharon Fisher, town recycling coordinator

The town of Bethlehem will conduct a pilot clothing and textile recycling collection from Wednesday, Nov. 2, to Monday, Nov. 28, at town hall, 445 Delaware Ave.

The clothing and textiles must be placed in special textile recycling bags, which are available at town hall, Elm Avenue Park, the town highway garage and the Rupert Road Transfer Station.

Clean and dry fabrics should be placed in the bag and sealed with a tie or rubber band. The bags can then be deposited in the recycling bin in the parking lot at town hall.

Keep the door to the bin closed since the textiles must be kept dry.

Acceptable items include clothing, curtains, drapes, sheets, towels, blankets, bedspreads and wearable paired shoes (tied together).

If you are not sure what items to include, call the Recycling Hotline at 767-9618 weekdays between 8 a.m. and noon.

Do not include unmatched or unwearable shoes, high heels, rugs, furniture or other household items. There will be a reusable donations list available at the bin for suggestions to deal with unacceptable items. If you already contribute a local charity that accepts winter coats or other items, continue to donate to them.

The textiles will be delivered to the Dumont Export Corp. in Philadelphia. The 55-year-old family business recycles about 96 percent of all textiles they receive.

The textiles will be sorted according to grade and can be reused as clothing, wiping rags or fiber.

Follow instructions and use the designated textile bag. Some surrounding communities are participating in the pilot program to ascertain the feasibility of a regional effort on a twice-a-year basis.

Nationwide, more than four million tons of post-consumer textiles enter the waste stream every year. Only about a quarter of this amount is donated to charitable organizations.

This program is an attempt to keep textiles out of the landfill and to increase recycling totals.

When voters vote on her record, Doris Davis will be returned to the Bethlehem Town Board.

Dear Bethlehem Voter:

For almost a year, I have been fortunate to serve you as an appointed member of the Town Board. This has been an extraordinary year of listening and learning, participating at scores of community meetings, and, of course, voting at Town Hall on your behalf.

Over that time I have continuously sought your guidance through community forums and activities, and door-to-door outreach. If I've missed you, I hope you will call or write with questions or suggestions for Bethlehem's future.

Please compare my nearly thirty-year record of community involvement with that of my opponent -- who described himself during his last campaign as "an observer of local events."

When all is said and done at the end of a Town election season, the fundamental question for voters is whether an incumbent candidate has worked diligently and effectively to help deliver good government.

Because I've worked hard for your trust and confidence, please vote to return me to the Bethlehem Town Board on Election Day, November 8th.

Working and moving forward together, I'm confident that we can sustain and build upon the many qualities of Bethlehem that make it a special place to live.

I will be grateful for your support.

Sincerely,

Doris Davis

Delmar seafood market offers variety

By Mel Hyman

Bruce Hess graduated from Bethlehem Central High School and still has an affinity for his hometown.

Recently, he chose Delmar to open his own business and he's glad he did so. The Ocean Deck Seafood Market, conveniently located at the Four Corners, offers just about anything you could want in terms of fresh fish and seafood.

Forget about those long lines in the supermarket and uncertainty about how long that slippery little critter has been chilling on the ice.

Bruce and his wife Dana will take time to explain the differences in fish and let you pick out just what you like. Bruce used to work for Two Cousins in Albany, the longtime fresh fish outlet on Livingston Avenue, so he knows of what he speaks.

The bottom line, according to Hess, is that you no longer need to travel into Albany to find your favorite catch of the day such as tuna, salmon, shrimp, mussels, squid, halibut, red snapper, flounder, sole, haddock and the like.

Or in case you're looking for something more exotic like orange roughy, lobster tails, or soft shell crabs, it's a good bet that you can find it at 389 Kenwood Ave.

There is also cooked food and sandwiches available if you're strapped for time, including french fries, clam rolls, fried oyster rolls,

ENOUGH CERTAINLY IS ENOUGH!

Our Town Board has washed its hands of those residents who want nothing to do with water that originates in the Hudson River. They claim they've listened to the citizens and have done the right thing. But what is the record?

- They contracted to sell industrial water that they didn't have-
- They took bids to build a water plant that, it turns out, was underfunded-
- They ordered certain plant upgrades, to be paid for from "savings", while at the same time asking for another $3.2 million to pay for the job-
- They defended themselves by saying their actions were in accord with the best technical and governmental advice-
- They criticized, belittled and ignored the views of those who objected to this project.

The Spotlight remembers

This week in 1984, these stories were making headlines in The Spotlight.

- A new playground at Elm Avenue Park opened, after more than a year of work by MOBNAP (Mothers Of Bethlehem Need A Playground), town officials and many volunteers. Representing MOBNAP were Marie Brown of Glenmont, Judy Languish of Elmsmere, Roberta Ponemon of Slingerlands, and Lorraine Smith of Delmar.

- Larry Dedrick announced his resignation from the Voorheesville village board of trustees, who appointed Edward Donohue as a replacement.

- In the 1985 Bethlehem town budget, salaries for town officials that were increased more than 6 percent from 1984 included $37,835 for Supervisor Thomas Corrigan; $37,835 for Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor; $31,425 for Highway Superintendent Martin Cross; and $16,539 for Court Clerk Barbara Hodom.

- Allen Mills of Delmar was named organist/artist in residence at Proctor's Theatre in Schenectady.

- One-year-old Nicholas Lyons took home Most Original Costume honors at a Halloween party sponsored by the New Scotland Kiwanis in Voorheesville. Lyons was dressed as a New York Yankee infielder.

The same study notes that girls learn better in a single-sex environment.

Delmar man named to national transit post

By Dev Tobin

While at a low ebb now, public transportation will be an important part of the region's future, for both environmental and economic reasons, according to Robert Roche of Delmar, chairman of the Capital District Transportation Authority.

Roche, who was recently named a national director of the American Public Transit Association, said that while the CDTA system has improved its service, most people are still wedded to driving their own cars.

"The hardest thing for CDTA is to offset five decades of Detroit convincing us that we need to commute in our own vehicles every day," Roche said. "We have to educate people to the need and benefits of using public transportation."

For suburban commuters, one obvious benefit is that cars will last longer if not used for the five-days-a-week, stop-and-go drive into work, Roche noted.

Another problem for CDTA is

that the bus service has been marketed primarily toward poor people, when public transportation should be casting a wider net, he said.

In Bethlehem, Roche said that it was difficult to overcome ingrained commuting habits.

"People in Delmar are used to going to Albany via Delaware Avenue, the old United Transit route. It's hard to get them to go backward to the Elm Avenue Park-and-Ride," he said.

However, CDTA is interested in more than bus service for commuters, Roche said.

"Everybody I know uses Amtrak to go to New York City, so we'll be looking to improve bus service from the station in Rensselaer to downtown and Wolf Road," he said, adding that CDTA will also look into light-rail alternatives to commuter buses.

CDTA should also have a role in modernizing the airport and making it part of a larger intermodal transportation system, according to Roche.

"The only transportation professionals in the four-county area are at CDTA," he said. "It makes no sense for another authority to run the airport."

Roche's seat on the national association's board will help keep CDTA abreast of "a lot of wonderful, energetic ideas" from around the country and around the world, he said.

"The refined public transportation systems in Europe move many more people and save a lot of energy for more productive uses," he said. "And in San Diego, the park-and-rides have newsstands, coffee shops and photo drops."

Roche first got involved in regional transit issues back in the mid-1970s when, as county attorney, he worked on trying to get airlines to pay for a new terminal at the Albany County Airport.

The hardest thing for CDTA is to offset five decades of Detroit convincing us that we need to commute in our own vehicles every day.

Robert Roche

When a vacancy on the CDTA board opened up in 1990, a "friend of the governor's" asked if I had an interest in serving," he recalled. Roche became CDTA chairman in 1993.

Because of his work responsibilities, Roche himself often drives to the Albany law firm where he is a senior partner, but said he still enjoys those days when he can leave the driving to someone else.

"I love it when I can leave my car in the Elm Avenue Park-and-Ride, take an express bus, and be downtown in 12 minutes," he said.

Hudson River Drinking Water Hazards

- 230 companies, factories and municipal sewage treatment plants release billions of gallons of wastewater into the Hudson River every day upstream of Bethlehem. (Environmental Protection Agency)

- 325 miles of rivers and streams in the Hudson River drainage basin are considered to be impaired by chemical pollution. (DEC 1992 Water Quality Report)

- In 1990, Rensselaer Co. had the highest reported discharges into the Hudson River Basin. Over 2.5 million pounds, or 52% of the total.

(Hudson River Sloop Clearwater Inc.)

- Fewer than 2% of the chemicals currently used for commercial purposes have been tested sufficiently for a complete health hazard assessment to be made. Adequate information to support even a partial hazard assessment is available for only 14% of the chemicals; for 70% no information is available.

(State of the Environment, William Reilly).

The risks are too great.

NS budget workshop and hearings slated

The New Scotland town board will meet for a 1995 budget workshop tonight (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. at town hall, and will hold a public hearing on the budget next Wednesday, Nov. 9.

Depending on the outcome of the workshop and the hearing, the board may adopt the budget at its regular meeting on Monday, Nov. 14, according to Supervisor Herb Reilly.

"We may need to meet again for another workshop," Reilly said.

The tentative budget of just over $3 million calls for a tax rate decrease for residents outside the village of Voorheesville of 8.8 percent, while village residents would face a 6.7 tax hike for their town taxes.

Reilly noted that additional revenue from the 8 percent sales tax (which village residents do not share in their town taxes) helped moderate the tax impact of the budget, which proposes an increase of more than 8 percent in spending.

Next Wednesday, public hearings are scheduled as follows: Onesquethaw Fire District, 6:50 p.m.; Onesquethaw Volunteer Ambulance Service, 7 p.m.; New Salem Fire District, 7:10 p.m.; Voorheesville Volunteer Ambulance Service, 7:20 p.m.; and the preliminary town budget, 7:30 p.m.

Dear Neighbor,

During these difficult times, our district should have a strong, locally-based Assemblyman. As a local resident, I have a deep commitment to you and our community. I have the necessary skills and experience to promote and protect our interests in the New York State Assembly. I realize the job won't be easy, but together, we can make a difference.

I pledge to you that I will be involved in the local issues that affect our everyday lives. I will work with our town officials to help resolve these local issues.

I am asking you to please put aside party politics. Forget about Democrat or Republican. I will work for you to make the 102nd Assembly District a better place.

Please give me your support on Election Day, Tuesday, November 8.

Thank You,

RE: Town of Bethlehem Water
Treatment and Source
Facilities, Albany County

Dear Mr. Secor:

In light of the articles recently appearing in the local media regarding the Town of Bethlehem's water treatment plant and infiltration gallery, I believe it is necessary that this Department clarify its position on the project.

This Department fully supports the project which includes the infiltration gallery, ozonation, chemical treatment, filtration and post-disinfection facilities. The fact that our office endorsed the water supply application and formally approved the final plans and specifications on April 11 and May 9, 1994, documents this. If we had any concerns regarding the reliability and safety of the finished water quality resulting from these facilities, we certainly would not have issued this approval.

With respect to our April 27, 1992 letter that has recently been referred to, it should be noted that at that time the pilot infiltration gallery, intended to document satisfactory raw water quality, was not yet completed. The subsequent satisfactory raw water quality, coupled with a well-designed treatment process, convinced us of the merits of the proposed project. In other words, the project evolved significantly between the issuance of the April 27, 1992 letter and the approval dates of April 11 and May 9, 1994. We are fully confident that the drinking water produced by this facility when completed will be of excellent sanitary quality.

We wish you success on the completion of the project. If you have any questions on our position, feel free to contact me at (518) 458-6756.

Sincerely,

John M. Dunn, P.E.

Children's programs set in honor of book week

Programs for children of all ages are in store to celebrate National Children's Book Week from Nov. 14 to 20.

This year marks the 75th anniversary of the observance sponsored by the Children's Book Council. Some say the old days were better, but not as far as children's books are concerned.

According to children's author and book week spokesman James Trelease, there has never been a wider selection of well-written and wonderfully illustrated books for children.

"Three times the number are being published now than 10 years ago," he noted.

Hundreds of children's book stores, unheard-of a decade ago, now dot the land, and the long gray line of school textbooks is giving way to intelligent and enchanting trade books in the classroom, he said.

In honor of this year's book week theme, "Books for Everyone, Everyone for Books," the library is inviting every child and young adult to participate in a "Wish Upon a Book" contest.

Beginning Nov. 1, children who come to the library can make a wish for the book they would most like to own. A drawing for the winner will be held on Thursday, Nov. 17, at 4 p.m. You do not have to be present to win.

Children ages 3 through 6, are invited to the library to enjoy films and lots of finger play fun at "Preschool Films," on Friday, Nov. 4, at 10:30 a.m.

Short films based on classic children's stories will be shown, including "Little Red Riding Hood," "The Three Little Pigs" and "The Ugly Duckling."

Families of children ages 3 and up, get ready for a truly special concert with Don and Victoria Armstrong on Sunday, Nov. 13, at 2 p.m.

"Kid Coyote" will feature stories and songs of the American Southwest. Everyone will want to join in on these tunes that reflect the spirit and wonder of western life.

RSVP for this free program by calling the children's room.

Holiday gift-giving time is near, and books make the perfect gift. They come already assembled, need no batteries, don't break down or go out of style.

Susan Novotny of the Book House at Stuyvesant Plaza and Beverly Provost and Polly Hartman of the children's room will pool their expertise to help you make your gift book selections at a "Season's Best for Giving" program on Tuesday, Nov. 15, at 7 p.m.

They will display books for children of all ages and will be available to make recommendations for special needs. This program is for adults only; call the library to RSVP.

During National Children's Book Week, pre-teens in grade five and up are invited to the library for their very own "After School Theatre" Video Film Festival.

The videos are all based on Newberry Award-winning books. Bring a friend. Sit on the floor, munch free popcorn, and enjoy the show.

Sign up for one or all of the following films: Tuesday, Nov. 15,

4 p.m. "Jacob Have I Loved" (57 min.); Wednesday, Nov. 16, 4 p.m. "Island of the Blue Dolphins" (99 min.); and Thursday, Nov. 17, 4 p.m. "The Bridge to Terabithia" (58 min.)

A fun-filled trip for toddlers "Over the River and Through the Woods," will wrap up Book Week on Saturday, Nov. 19, at 10:30 a.m. and Monday, Nov. 21, at 10:30 a.m.

There will be stories, songs and finger plays. Children are invited to bring a Matchbox car to recreate their own journey on the road to adventure.

Children age 22 months to 3 years, and attending adult, can sign up by calling 439-9314.

BC boys advance in tournament

By Janice Gallagher

Bethlehem advanced a notch in Section II boys soccer tournament last week with a hard-fought 3-2 overtime victory over Troy.

All Bethlehem goals in the Friday, Oct. 28, matchup were scored by junior varsity players who were moved up to the varsity for sectionals. Two goals were scored by freshman Kevin Russell, and the winning goal was tallied by sophomore Ben Samelson-Jones.

Troy scored first off a breakaway, and at halftime led 1-0. In the second half, senior Kyle VanRiper crossed a high ball to Russell, who headed it in.

Soccer

A few minutes later senior Willie Sanchez and Russell had a two-on-one with the Troy sweeper. Sanchez passed to Russell who tucked the ball in the net for his second goal.

"It felt incredible to score for the team, but I wasn't expecting it," said Russell. "We were very excited about the performance of Kevin Russell," said coach John Bramley.

Troy came back, putting in a close-range shot with five minutes left to tie the game at 2-2, which forced the game into overtime.

In the last two minutes of overtime, Sanchez put a powerful shot on goal that the Troy goalie bobbled. Samelson-Jones was there to finish the rebound off for the winning goal.

Senior Pete Deane and junior Nick Turner combined for six saves, while the Troy goalie had 10 saves.

"The general team performance was excellent in overcoming a difficult team," said Bramley. "Troy was 10-1 going into the game, and they were used to winning. We did a great job at taking the game away from them."

Girls net team stands tall

The Bethlehem girls varsity tennis team had a very successful season winning nine matches and losing two, and sharing the championship of the gold division with Niskayuna—a team they defeated in the regular season.

In Section II play they finished third, losing in the senior finals.

Playing #1 most of the season was Annette Granjy, followed by Jen Piorkowski, Francesa Bracaglia, Nancy Ann Oberheim (the undefeated team member), Sarah Burtis and playing #6 singles, eighth grader Stephanie Katz.

At doubles were seniors Becky Bloom and Becky Furman, Carrie Danziger and eighth grader Grace Tsan, and at third doubles, Jen Burroughs and Abby Miller. Rounding out the squad were

Tennis

Molly Hunter, Marni Hillinger, Jen Hahn and Emily Fireovid. Returning next year will be eight sophomores.

At individual sectionals, Bracaglia and Bloom played until the third round when they were defeated by seeded players.

In doubles, the teams of Nancy Ann Oberheim and Sarah Burtis, seeded eighth, and Jen Piorkowski and Annette Granjy, seeded sixth were successful until the quarterfinals where they were defeated by the second and third seeded teams. Both BC teams played excellent tennis and completed a very successful season.

VV boys top Catskill

By Kelly Griffin

After finishing third in the Colonial Council, the Voorheesville boys soccer team blazed its way into the quarterfinals of the Class CC tournament last week with a decisive win over Catskill.

"We were a lot better than they were," said coach Bob Crandall. "It was a fairly easy win for us."

Voorheesville dominated the flow of the game and enjoyed a 21-2 advantage in shots on goal.

"We shut down their speed and their offense," Crandall said. "Our defense worked very well together. It's the first time they really have all year. It's a nice time to have things fall into place."

The Blackbirds scored three times before halftime and once again in the second half on their way to a 4-0 win.

Senior tri-captain Scott Basal scored the first goal off an assist by Adam Kellar. Junior Chris Clarke netted the next tally, while Kellar drove home the third goal off a Chris Dutkewicz corner kick and the fourth goal as well.

Prior to the sectional tournament, the 'Birds defeated Mechanicville 4-0 in their last regular season game on Monday, Oct. 24.

Kellar had two goals in that game while Clarke and Greg Sanderson each chipped in one. That win gave Vville an 11-4-3 regular season record and placed them third in the league.

Rejuvenated BC nearly tops Shen

By Joshua Kagan

Bethlehem's football season came to a close Friday, Oct. 28, in a crossover game at Shenendehowa that the Plainsmen won 20-13.

Shenendehowa's running game was the story as the Plainsmen, who physically dominated the Eagles on the line, rushed for over 250 yards.

"They were much bigger than we were up front," BC coach John Sodergren said. "When they found the run they were patient with it. They didn't pass as much as we wanted."

Bethlehem jumped out to a 13-0 lead in the second quarter. Quarterback Dan McGuire threw a 41-yard touchdown pass to tight end Shawn Martin and wide receiver Nate Kosoc had a 68-yard scoring toss to Chris DiMurcia on an option play.

"Our running game wasn't as good as we hoped," Sodergren said. "We established it enough early to use the play action pass, but in the second half, we didn't run it well enough."

McGuire came in to play quarterback midway through the sixth game of the season after Josh Naylor went down for the season with a thumb injury.

"I've had to step up," said McGuire. "I've been able to read stuff better. These past few weeks have helped me a lot. I'm already for next season."

The Eagles finished the year with a record of 2-7, their only wins coming against 0-9 Catholic Central and 2-7 Guilderland.

"I had no problem with our effort," Sodergren said. "We continued to improve as the season went on and we were competitive in the last five weeks."

"If we had beaten Shen, it would have been a great ending to the season," said McGuire. "I think we're better than 2-7. In the last four or five games, we really came together as a team and were much better."

16 BC girls in sectionals, after team winds up 8-3

By Janice Gallagher

The Bethlehem girls swim team, which finished a successful season at 8-3, is sending 16 of 37 team members to the Section II tournament on Nov. 11 and 12 at RPI.

Sectionals is "anybody's meet," said senior swimming co-captain Karen Recene.

"It's wide open," agreed swimming coach Sandy Banas. "The competition has gotten harder, but we're more of a contender now. It is basically between Shaker, Niskayuna, Shen and us this year."

Among Bethlehem's strongest swimmers are three returning athletes who made it to the state level of competition last year.

Junior Meghan Tougher is ranked number one in the Section in the 100 breaststroke; sophomore Maggie Wolfert is ranked third in the 100 and 200 freestyle; and sophomore Nadine Mauer is expected to be strong in the 200 IM and the 100 breaststroke.

Other swimmers expected to make a good showing at sectionals are junior Cailin Brennan in the 100 butterfly, sophomore Erica

Swimming

McDonough in the 100 backstroke, and freshman Maggie Tettebach in the 50 and 100 freestyle.

The divers have also been strong this season, with two of the seven divers qualifying for sectionals. Senior diving captain Trish Caimano and junior Melissa Dominelli both qualified, but Dominelli will be unable to attend because of prior commitments.

The divers, led by coach Jan Fecteau, did remarkably well considering that three of the seven divers had never dived before competitively.

"The newcomers did a beautiful job and helped us have one of our best seasons ever," said Caimano. Junior Sara Haskins, a first-time diver, almost made it to sectionals.

Recene and Caimano both agreed that the best meet of the season was a hard-fought loss to Shaker. "Shaker was supposed to blow us away, but we came within 10 points of them," said Recene. "The outcome came down to the wire."

"All three losses (to Shenendehowa, Shaker and Niskayuna) were within 12 points, which for swimming is very close," said Banas. "Those wins were just beyond reach, and hopefully next year we'll have enough to pull it through."

"We have a young team with only five graduating seniors, so the future looks bright."

Two winners in each event at sectionals will go on to the state competition on Nov. 18 and 19 at RPI.

RCS ends winning season on up note

By Kevin Van Derzee

The RCS (Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk) Indians ended their season on a winning note with a 26-18 victory over Cocksackie-Athens last Friday.

"It was a good win and a good way to end the season," said coach

Gary Van Derzee.

After receiving the opening kickoff, the Indians followed the legs of Jeremy Stanton for a touchdown.

RCS struck again when Kevin Latant went in from one yard out. Quarterback Steve Burns found Stanton wide open in the end zone for a two-point conversion.

RCS scored once more on a six-yard scamper by Stanton before Cocksackie finally got on the board. With the score 20-6, Burns found flanker Jim Pasquini all alone down the sideline for a 48-yard touchdown.

"We have a promising future with the success of our varsity and JV teams this year," Van Derzee said. Combined the varsity and junior varsity teams were 14-4.

Voorheesville girls keep the good times going

By Jacob Van Ryn

The Voorheesville girls soccer team began its sectional play with a hard-fought, 4-1 victory over Cambridge.

In the first half of play, the 'Birds got off to a poor start. "We came out very slowly, and did not play well at all," said coach Jim Hladun. "Our shots were not on target. It was as if we were not into the game."

Jane Meade got the scoring started for the 'Birds on a nicely placed shot. This would be the only goal during the first half for either squad.

"Although we had the lead," Hladun said, "I knew that we had to play better in order to win this game. Cambridge was not going to roll over just because we had a 1-0 lead."

As it turned out, Hladun was right. Cambridge scored shortly after the start of the second half, and all of a sudden the team that had dominated the Colonial Council and been rewarded with a number one seed was in jeopardy of losing in their first sectional game.

After Cambridge scored, the 'Birds brought their level of play to another level and scored three goals in a span of 15 minutes.

"Cambridge's goal was a wake up call for us," Hladun said. "It put a little bit of fear in us and made us play harder."

The run began when Cristie Arena scored on a shot from about 20 yards away. After that, Julia Guastella scored on a beautiful, left-footed shot and Jen Delaney scored her first goal of the season giving the 'Birds a three-goal margin.

On the defensive end, Kristin

Dougherty played an outstanding game. "She played with a lot of hustle, and made a difference in that game," said Hladun.

"It was a good start for us, but it (the sectional title) is certainly not going to be handed to us. We'll have to earn it."

Earlier in the week, the 'Birds faced state-ranked Oneonta in a non-league matchup.

"They are one of the better teams in the state, they possess a great deal of speed and movement," said Hladun.

The 'Birds defeated Oneonta 2-1, and in the process received a great deal of respect around the state.

"Not only did that victory solidify our number one ranking in the section, I think we will be given a state ranking in the coming week," Hladun said. "It was definitely a good win for us," said Hladun.

The 'Birds continue their sectional play this week against Greenville in the semifinals.

Said Hladun, "We'll just keep doing what we've been doing, and hopefully we'll continue our success."

V'ville junior Shannon Magee brings the ball upfield during the 'Birds' win over Oneonta.

28,000," said Clearwater member Bill Burkhard, who is also running for town board next week on the Democratic line.

"That's four to five times the number of residents who attended the public hearing, which packed the auditorium in town hall. ... The (all-Republican) town board has this aura of infallibility so that it won't even consider our request that the water be used for industrial purposes only."

Fuller said that "Scare tactics have been used throughout this campaign. We have letters from the (state) Health Department and EnCon (Department of Environmental Conservation) clearly stating that the water is safe, and these individuals know it."

She added that Burkhard, who is an employee of the state Health Department, had changed his position from last year when he ran for town board and said he had no qualms about the project given the strict standards set by the health agency.

Burkhard said that while he was satisfied the new water supply would not endanger anyone's health, he remained opposed to it because it was a "huge waste of money" and not needed given that Albany was still willing to sell the town water for its backup supply.

Clearwater spokeswoman Linda Burtis said that if the group had become political, it was because "We had no alternative. That's what this is all about."

She also ruled out ever running for office in the town, saying "That's not why I got involved."

Burkhard

door-to-door who would like to see more balance on the board."

A good example of how a lack of diversity can lead to mistakes, Burkhard said, is the controversy over whether Bethlehem should be building a $13 million water treatment facility near the Hudson River.

Burkhard has aligned himself with members of the Clearwater for Bethlehem group, which opposes using water from an aquifer beneath the Hudson River for residential purposes.

"I never saw the necessity of it," he said. "There was an adequate supply from Albany, and Bethlehem overreacted to the notice of cancellation (from Albany) to go their own way. The whole thing is a huge waste of money."

During the campaign, Burkhard has called his opponent "bland as pabulum"—a remark which ruffled a lot of feathers. But never one to mince words, Burkhard continued to repeat his charge that Davis is part of the Republican elite and rarely deviates from the party line.

On the issue of development, Burkhard said the master plan now being considered in its final form by the town board, is "an excellent start."

At the same time, it is just an advisory document, he cautioned, and it will take tough, independent-minded board members to put teeth into it.

On the subject of taxes, Burkhard claimed that property taxes have remained stable in the town only because of added revenues provided by an increase in the county-wide sales tax to 8 percent.

The last and only Democrat to serve on the town board in modern times was Bob Burns, who was elected in 1987.

His former wife Susan Burns nearly duplicated the feat last year when she was nosed out for a seat on the board by Councilman Ted Putney.

"We (Democrats) have always said that there is a value in intelligent debate," Burkhard said. "Right now you rarely, if ever, see that on the board. They think and act like a bloc."

An administrator with the state Department of Health, Burkhard lives with his family in Elsmere.

listen and to talk with residents," she said.

She estimates that she's talked to thousands of residents since she began her campaign in earnest in August. Many people, she said, had questions about the new additional water source from an aquifer underneath the Hudson River, but even more said they want a new supermarket in town.

Davis thinks opponents of the water project have misled the public. "I think scare tactics have been used; it seems very unfair, almost cruel," she said.

Davis, who joined the board after the water plant had already been approved, said she did some investigative work on her own before she made a decision about the project.

"When I came (on the board), I had to vote on approving (additional funds for the project), so what I decided I had to do was talk to people outside the town," she said. Of the engineers, hydrologists and geologists she talked to, "Everyone said 'Your town is doing the right thing.'"

And as far as another supermarket is concerned, she said she is trying to let people know that the town cannot "tell a chain 'You have to go to this particular piece of real estate,'" adding that the town has worked hard to attract a chain to the community.

Some residents have posed the idea of placing a competitive market in the Town Squire Plaza in Glenmont, where there is empty space.

Price Chopper is currently proposing a store in Slingerlands near the end of Cherry Avenue Extension.

"I can't judge that particular plan unless I see it," said Davis, who nonetheless favors an alternative for shoppers. "I think we need an alternative and one that doesn't affect the residential quality of life."

She is concerned about overall development in Bethlehem and "that it be reasonable." Davis was appointed to the planning board in 1991 before she joined the town board last year. Town board members earn an annual salary of $8,250.

Davis is running against Democrat Bill Burkhard of Elsmere.

Davis, 52, also a resident of Elsmere, is a former teacher. She currently works for the majority counsel's office in the state Senate.

She and her husband, Jim, have two grown sons.

THE YOUTH NETWORK

A BETHLEHEM NETWORKS PROJECT

Networks provides on-your-own training

Sixty people attended a recent Home and On Your Own workshop sponsored by the Bethlehem Networks Project and Bethlehem School's Out.

Fourth and fifth-graders and their parents took advantage of this excellent opportunity to learn home and on your own skills, such as what to do in an emergency and how to prepare a child to be on his/her own.

Thanks to Jim Corbett and Vince Rinaldi of the Bethlehem police for doing an excellent job of discussing safety issues and to BC guidance counselors Maryalice Svare and Gwen Guillet, who assisted families to plan for times when youngsters are home alone.

Ben & Jerry's provided Peace Pops at a very reasonable cost at the training that was held at the First United Methodist Church in Delmar.

We have held Home and On Your Own training during the last six months and all sessions have been filled. We plan to do another workshop during the winter for fourth and fifth-graders and parents. We appreciate all the community groups who helped with this effort.

Call Bethlehem Networks Project at 439-7740 for information about future trainings.

Round Table Revisited

Traveling exhibit explores Arthurian realms

Was there a real King Arthur, or are his exploits only a legend of mythical proportion? If so, when did the legends begin?

And why are we in the 20th century still fascinated by the adventures of Arthur, Guinevere, Lancelot and the knights and William K. Sanford Library in Colonie.

In conjunction with the exhibit, a variety of programs for adults and children celebrating the themes of the Arthurian legend are scheduled throughout the six-week period. The exhibition, which is visiting local libraries from San Marino, Calif., to Albany, Ga., is organized by the American Library Association and Chicago's Newberry Library. The Sanford Library is one of only 64 libraries nationwide, and the only Capital District library, to host "The Many Realms of King Arthur."

Based upon the collections of Arthurian materials at the Newberry Library and the New York Public Library, the exhibit traces the development of the Arthurian legends from their genesis in the Middle Ages to their latest adaptations in the 20th century. "The Many Realms of King Arthur" shows the various forms in which the story has been told, through media as diverse as poetry, popular song, musical theater, comic books and video games.

The Arthurian legend offers something for everyone, it seems. It contains elements of historical epic, romance, redemption and tragedy. It addresses such issues as love, loyalty and duty, and raises ladies of the Round Table?

The exhibit will display Arthurian art such as Daniel MacLeese's "Arthur in the Death Barge," depicting mortally wounded King Arthur being taken to the Vale of Avalon to be healed.

A colorful visual exploration of these questions and others from the Middle Ages will be on display Friday, Nov. 4, through Thursday, Dec. 15, when the national traveling exhibition "The Many Realms of King Arthur," comes to the questions about just warfare and codes of morality — values and ideals that are as important today as they were centuries ago.

The legend is also about religion, in particular the quest for the Holy Grail. This aspect of the story explores the relationship between humans and God and chronicles the tension it can cause.

"The Many Realms of King Arthur" offers viewers an opportunity to rediscover a colorful, exciting and enduring legend.

For information about the exhibit and its programs, or to schedule school class tours, contact the outreach librarian at 458-9274.

The William K. Sanford Library is located on Albany-Shaker Road, just east of Wolf Road.

New Neil Simon play to test off-Broadway market

Although Neil Simon has written 27 plays for Broadway and won a Pulitzer Prize for Lost in Yonkers, he may be forced to produce his next play, London Suite, in an off-Broadway theater.

His last two plays, Jake's Girls and The Boys on the 23rd Floor were not financial successes. Most current plays on Broadway can't compete with the big musical blockbusters such as Beauty and the Beast, Phantom of the Opera, Sunset Boulevard and revivals such as Show Boat.

Edward Albee set the pace last spring when he had his Pulitzer Prize-winning play, Three Tall Women, produced in an off-Broadway theater. The reduced production costs made it possible for Albee's play to find an audience and win an award. What it didn't win was a Tony Award because off-Broadway plays aren't eligible. Simon's London Suite may change that thinking because of his considerable track record for hits. The previews of London Suite in Seattle have gained good reviews which indicate a successful run in New York.

Simon who at one time in his career was making $40,000 a week in royalties is hardly financially strapped. But, the savvy playwright knows the less expensive production costs off Broadway make it possible to charge less for tickets. This can produce a longer run in a smaller theater that will build a reputation for future productions of the show around the country.

As for the Tony Awards, the snubbing of Albee last spring won't easily be repeated with Simon if the play is as good as advance notices indicate. Eventually, this prestigious award will have to take notice of off Broadway plays.

Two theaters plan readings of new and established plays

The New York State Theatre Institute will present concert readings of new plays this weekend in a program to encourage new playwrights.

Saturday, November 5, at 8 p.m. Final Edition, a new drama by Donald C. Drake, will be presented in a bare bones reading without sets, costumes or lighting.

--Helena Binder Bress is directing this reading of the play which deals with the reaction of reporters to a scandalous front page story in a large Philadelphia newspaper.

This reading will be performed at the Bush Memorial Center on the Russell Sage College campus in Troy.

The second play in the series will be read on Sunday, November 6, at 2 p.m. at the same location.

Freda Scott Giles will direct the reading of Madeleine L'Engle's fantasy, A Wrinkle in Time. It has been adapted for the by Marjorie Bradley Kellogg.

Tickets for the readings will be $5. Info at 274-3256.

Meanwhile, rehearsals are underway for a stage reading of Tom Stoppard's radio play, Artist Descending A Staircase by Theatre Voices at the Albany City Arts Building. Admission is free.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Friday, November 11; 3:30 and 8 p.m. Saturday, November 12, and 3 p.m. on Sunday, November 13. Following four on stage readings, the play will be broadcast on public radio station WAMC.

New play about Casey family cycle prepares for premiere

Rye Twist, the third play in a cycle of three plays about Irish immigrants early in this century, is in rehearsal preparing for a November 11 opening at St. Andrew's Dinner Theater in Albany.

The comedy is rooted again in an Irish boarding house in New York as were the earlier plays, Home to the Greenhorn and Rememberin' Molly. The time is 1925 and several boarders are testing the restraints of Prohibition.

Joan A. Jamison, executive producer of Riverview Entertainment Productions, is staging the eight-character comedy. Info and reservations at 463-3811.

Around Theaters!

Inspecting Carol opens at Capital Repertory Company November 11 and runs through December 11. Pay-what-you-will preview Sunday, November 6 (462-4534)...Angel Street, Victorian drama at Albany Civic Theater through November 6 (462-1297)...Light Up The Sky, comedy about the theater world, at The Egg, Albany, Friday and Saturday, November 4 and 5 at 8 p.m. (473-1845).
