Delmar/Elsmere break new ground

Fire companies agree to merger

By Mel Hyman

In a precedent-setting move — at least in this area — the Delmar and Elsmere fire districts have agreed to consolidate apparatus and manpower in order to save money and boost morale.

The joint venture has been in effect on an informal, trial basis for the past year. It was recently made official by a contract signed by Elsmere Board of Fire Commissioners chairman Fred Webster and Delmar Board of Fire Commissioners chairman Gerald Day.

Part of the agreement involves use of the Delmar fire substation on Feura Bush Road by Elsmere, which will pay rent to Delmar for allowing it to park one of its pumers there.

That obviates the need for Elsmere to build a new firehouse for that part of the district located south of the Delmar Bypass. Even though Elsmere already owns land at the corner of Wemple and Feura Bush roads, not having to build a new fire station is expected to save the district about $750,000, according to Webster.

By the sharing of apparatus in the Feura Bush Road substation, both Delmar and Elsmere will save when it comes time to replace equipment.

"When the time comes, we'll only have to replace one pumper instead of two," Webster said. "That should save us about $240,000."

With the addition of the Elsmere engine to the Feura Bush Road substation, Delmar plans to sell one of the two pumers it now has stationed there.

The other benefit from the consolidation involves the shared use of manpower.

Hahn to step down after three decades

By Mel Hyman

After more than 31 years in public office, Bethlehem Receiver of Taxes Ken Hahn can almost be considered an institution.

Even institutions, of course, eventually come to an end, and Hahn is no exception. He does not plan to seek re-election to the $42,000-a-year job next November.

Most town residents would be hard pressed to recall the name of another receiver of taxes for the town of Bethlehem. Ken Hahn has been in office since Jan. 1, 1964. His current term ended on Dec. 31, and judging by the comments of current and former town officials, he leaves some awfully big shoes to fill.

N. Scotland doctor makes history with land donation

By Dev Tobin

A New Scotland family's backyard park has become the first preserve of the Albany County Land Conservancy.

Dr. William Holt donated 148 acres of land along Copeland Hill Road in memory of his late wife Winifred Matthews Holt, according to Mark King of the Albany County Land Conservancy.

King described the Winifred Matthews Holt Preserve as a "very scenic area, on a hillside overlooking the Indian Fields area."

"There are no rare species or eagles' nests; it's just a very nice spot for people who like to get out into the woods," King said.

The land is "typical of Helderberg hill-tops, with somewhat stunted vegetation," King said. The Holts planted 40,000 conifers on the parcel, to complement the native hardwoods there, he added.

The Holts also built a small pond and created several trails through the property, "working with the land to enhance its natural beauty," King said.

"We won't have to blaze any new trails,

Dr. William Holt, left, discusses his gift of land to the Albany County Land Conservancy with its president, Dr. David Shern.

just mark the ones that are already there," he added.

The conservancy is working on a plan for the property that will probably allow limited public use of the preserve, King said.

"We may open up some views toward Bennett Hill and Clarksville to the northwest," in addition to creating a detailed

Girl in serious condition after Normanskill accident

A 10-year-old Delmar girl was listed in serious condition in the intensive care unit of the Albany Medical Center Hospital Tuesday after an 11-car New Year's Eve pile-up in which a Slingerlands woman was killed.

Elizabeth Drew, of Euclid Avenue, sustained trauma to her head when the vehicle driven by her father William Drew, 47, of the same address, was struck by a vehicle traveling westbound on the Normanskill Bridge.

The 9:01 p.m. accident was caused by icy conditions, said Bethlehem Police Det. John Cox. William Drew was listed in fair condition Tuesday at Albany Medical Center with serious leg injuries, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Drew's vehicle, which was traveling eastbound (toward Albany) was struck by a car driven by Edward Salsberg, 48, of 2134 New Scotland Road, Slingerlands.

When Salsberg's car slid out of control, according to Cox, the passenger side of his vehicle was crushed by the vehicle driven by Drew. Salsberg's wife, 46-year-old Bonnie Dekin was killed by the impact.

Dekin was transported to the Albany Medical Center Hospital where she was pronounced dead from multiple internal injuries, Cox said. Two other cars collided with the Drew and Salsberg vehicles, but no other serious injuries were reported.

Five other cars collided as a result of the chain reaction caused by the original accident, with no significant injuries or damage incurred.

"When I got there, just trying to stand on the bridge or the sidewalk was unbelievable," Cox said. "The entire bridge was a sheet of ice."

Ambulance squads from Delmar and Selkirk responded to the accident scene.

BC looks to upgrade high school computers

By Dev Tobin

Ten years is almost an eon in the Information Age, as computer capabilities have improved exponentially, making even 2-year-old equipment obsolete.

So the computer lab at Bethlehem Central High School, with its often-inoperable 8086 and 8088 machines that date from the mid-1980s, is long past due for an overhaul.

At its last meeting, the BC school board approved spending about $39,000 over three years to buy 21 multimedia interactive 486 PC's for the high school computer lab, bringing the school's major computer instructional center into the 1990s in one fell swoop.

The old equipment is "so archaic something needed to be done," said Richard Gross, BC's technology coordinator.

Despite the "outstanding" repair efforts of the occupational education staff, "We were fighting a losing battle with equipment that simply has reached the end of its useful life," Gross said.

The new computers will "allow teachers to teach as opposed to constantly troubleshooting deteriorating equipment," he added.

Due to the lab's upgrade, students will be able to perform advanced CAD/CAM operations in the principles of engineering course and other advanced applications in business courses, said Judith Wooster, assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction.

Gross said that added benefits of the new equipment include providing a central location for staff development technology courses, and acquiring a hardware platform that is consistent with anticipated future technology expansion needs.

He said he hoped the new machines would be delivered by the start of school yesterday.

The old machines will be used for parts to help repair other dated computers in the district, providing students with an opportunity to explore the way computers are put together, along with computer repair and maintenance, said Gross.

The high school computer lab purchase is the second (and last) major investment in technology for BC this year.

Over the summer, the district bought 20 Power Macs, which were used for in-service training for teachers in August, then distributed to district schools (four to the high school, six to the middle school, and two to each of the elementary schools.)

The district is studying its future technology needs as part of the current long-range planning process.

Ben & Jerry's plans to add subs

By Mel Hyman

Ben & Jerry's fans will have go on a temporary diet while the Main Square store closes so it can undergo some minor remodeling for several weeks.

The changes are needed to make room for a new "companion" business, according to Tom Rowlands, owner of the Ben & Jerry's franchise that opened here in 1988.

"The new business will be called Seattle Sub & Pita Co. and will sell french bread, subs and pita-rolled sandwiches," Rowlands said.

"I am very excited," he said. "The two businesses will complement each other so well, each lending support to the other."

For several years now, Rowlands has been searching for a eatery that would be compatible with the Ben & Jerry's operation to increase the sales volume at the Delmar location.

"The truth is that Ben & Jerry stores need a regional draw to be truly successful," he said. "The company would never approve a store in a community the size of Delmar today."

But the Delmar community has always been supportive and Rowlands said he's bristled at the thought of ever having to close the location. "This idea will keep everyone happy, and pose little inconvenience to our current customers."

The new business is not a chain, even though the name suggests it.

Ben & Jerry's in Main Square is closed for remodeling that will add a sandwich store. Doug Persons

"I wanted to choose something that sounded upscale and cutting edge," Rowlands said, "because that's how I see this new sandwich shop—slightly upscale from your typical fast food sub business. Besides, I liked the alliteration of Seattle Sub."

Seattle Sub and Pita Co. will offer the standard submarine sandwich on a better quality bread, as well as an interesting variety of foods served on a large pita bread. Many of the pita sandwiches will have extra ingredients like cranberry sauce, avocado, pineapple and bacon.

"Ben & Jerry's was open-minded about the whole idea," Rowlands said, "but they were very concerned about mixing corporate identities. They did not want it to appear there was a sub shop inside a Ben & Jerry's or vice-versa."

The new seating area, therefore, will be generic while the counter area will resemble a food court in a mall with two businesses side-by-side.

"The awning which serves as our sign will be a little more difficult," said Rowlands, "and with the approvals needed from the town it is unlikely we will be able to change it before our grand reopening."

"Look for Seattle Sub & Pita Co. around the third week in January, he said. "We'll just have to get a little creative about announcing it."

Planning board attorney to step down

By Mel Hyman

Bethlehem planning board attorney Robert Alessi plans to leave his position as soon as a replacement can be found.

At its January organizational meeting, the town board will appoint Jeffrey Pohl to replace Alessi (see story below).

With a growing private practice in environmental law, and a burgeoning family to boot, Alessi has decided he needs to reduce his workload so that he can spend more time at home.

"I have a 2-year-old daughter and my wife (Ellen) is expecting another child in April," he said.

In addition, five years of intensive work for the planning board seemed to be enough, he added.

"It seemed like it was time to step aside for someone else," Alessi said.

Alessi, 36, was often called upon by outgoing board chairman Martin Barr — both men began their tenure with the panel in January 1990 — for advice and clarification.

Alessi said that while the job did take time, it usually felt more like fun than work. "It's been a great experience. I really enjoyed the interchange with members of the public, and it was a pleasure to serve with people of great intellect and fairness."

Robert Alessi

"I appreciated the confidence that the town board expressed in me in supporting my reappointment every year," he said. "I am hopeful that in the future I can return to public service."

Alessi said he also gave up an adjunct professorship at Albany Law School — which he has held for the past five years — so that he could devote more time to his family.

The appointment of Douglas Hasbrouck to the board chairmanship should ensure a continuation of the high quality effort produced under Barr's stewardship, Alessi said.

Barr will be a tough act to follow, but Hasbrouck, who has served on the board since 1991, has "tremendous expertise" and "unquestioned integrity," Alessi commented.

New McDonald's planned on Route 9W in Glenmont

The Bethlehem planning board on Tuesday considered a proposed new McDonald's restaurant for the vacant parcel between the Glenmont Plaza and the Mobil station near the junction of Feura Bush Road and Route 9W.

Proposed by the McDonald's Corp., plans for the freestanding store call for 2,917 square feet with a seating capacity of 52. There will be parking available for 46 vehicles.

Assuming the necessary town approvals are granted, construction is scheduled to begin this April and continue through August.

A McDonald's restaurant was planned for this site back in 1990, according to town planner Jeff Lipnicky, but the applicants did not follow up on the proposal.

The main concerns planners have regarding the current proposal are the effects of lighting and signs.

"We're asking them to tone down the lights and the signs in order for (the restaurant) to fit in better with the residential character of the surrounding area," Lipnicky said.

Meanwhile, the McDonald's restaurant on Delaware Avenue in Elsmere closed on Sunday, Jan. 1, for a major overhaul.

It is scheduled to reopen with a new kitchen and totally new interior around the middle of March.

RCS students form group to fight Coeymans dump

By Dev Tobin

Joining parents, administrators, school board members and town officials, students at Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk High School have formed their own group to fight a proposed ANSWERS regional landfill.

The student group, Fear For the Future, issued a statement condemning Albany, the lead municipality in ANSWERS, for targeting Coeymans, a town that is not a member of the regional solid-waste group.

With the landfill on Rapp Road in Albany due to close in 1996, ANSWERS is currently preparing a draft environmental impact statement to site a new landfill on a 320-acre site about a mile-and-a-half northeast of the RCS Middle and Senior High School campus on Route 9W.

In a petition signed by a majority in the high school, students called the landfill proposal "taxation without representation" and in "blatant disregard of Coeymans' town laws."

Aside from not joining the ANSWERS consortium, Coeymans also passed a local law banning the importation of solid waste. The ANSWERS group includes every other municipality in the county except Colonie, plus the cities of Schenectady and Rensselaer.

The student group held its initial rally on the last day of school before the Christmas break, and it was really successful, according to Ben Marshall, one of the student organizers.

Marshall said that the students' interest in fighting the landfill disproves the stereotype that young people are politically apathetic.

"Students will respond when we feel something unjust has occurred," he said.

The high school's participation in government class will likely pick up the landfill siting issue as a project, and high school students are also working to improve recycling at the school, Marshall added.

"The ANSWERS garbage has nothing to do with the town of Coeymans," Marshall argued. "Coeymans said 'No,' and that was supposed to be the end of it."

'Das Boot' by Gene Lewis is one of the Delmar resident's works on display at the Broadway Gallery.

Bethlehem artists featured at gallery

The work of two Bethlehem artists will be featured at the Broadway Gallery on 991 Broadway in Albany on Friday, Jan. 6.

There will be an opening reception for Delmar resident Gene Lewis from 5 to 8 p.m. His works, Travels in Time - Space and Fantasy will be on display.

In addition, fiber art by Anita Rabbinnoff-Goldman of Feura Bush will be exhibited, with an opening reception from 5 to 8 p.m.

In addition to the receptions for the artists, Snickering Witches will present Dancing through the Darkness in an evening of performance honoring the solstice.

Stories from around the world and songs of the seasons will be performed from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

Two additional paramedics join Delmar Rescue Squad

Two additional paramedics have joined the ranks of the Delmar Fire Department Rescue Squad, according to Delmar Fire Chief James Kerr.

Lt. Timothy Mirable of the Delmar Fire Department and Battalion Chief Larry Powers of the Onesquethaw Fire Department recently completed paramedic training and are now on line as practicing paramedics for the Delmar Rescue Squad.

The paramedic training course consists of about 1,600 hours of classroom study and practical work at local hospitals, along with many hours of independent study required to successfully complete the training.

Paramedics Mirable and Powers bring the total number of paramedics on the Delmar Rescue squad to seven.

New Scotland board ties up loose ends

At its year-end meeting, the New Scotland town board made routine end-of-year transfers, accepted a road and appointed an engineering firm to represent the town in upcoming improvements to the Swift Road pumphouse.

Supervisor Herb Reilly said the transfers covered expenses for legal work involving reassessment contractor Cole-Layer-Trumble, a small deficit at the town's solid waste transfer station, and mapping work done by the town's zoning law review committee.

The board accepted a continuation of Overlook Road in Carradale Estates off Swift Road, along with a bond of $16,1265 to complete the top course of pavement and make one minor road repair.

The board also appointed Fraser & Associates as a consultant on upgrading the Swift Road pumphouse, with an escrow account of $15,700 set aside for that work.

Bethlehem Recycling Corner

By Sharon Fisher, town recycling coordinator

As the holidays wind down, more recycling ideas come to mind. First, remember not to place newspaper and other paper curbside for recycling if it is raining or snowing. Wet paper is no good for recycling.

If newspaper is baled wet, the potential for fire is similar to wet hay in the barn. Keep all recyclable paper dry.

Candle wax can be difficult to remove. Use the proper candle holders or candle drip catchers to prevent wax spills. Blow out candles gently or use a candle snuffer to prevent wax being blown all over a favorite tablecloth.

If an accident occurs, scrape off as much wax as possible. Place a paper towel on top and bottom of the wax stain and apply a hot iron. Move the towel around and repeat to continue absorbing wax.

Did you receive popcorn tins? They make great wastebaskets, recycling bins or a good place to keep stored items safe and dry.

All plastic store bags can be recycled at the Grand Union in the green bin located in the front of the store. The bag should be turned inside out to make sure that all paper slips have been removed. Paper is a contaminant in the plastic bag recycling process.

All paper bags: brown, green, red or white, can be recycled as paper bags if they are not shiny. Please remove plastic handles.

Did you receive more cologne, with 10 bottles already in the cupboard? Please don't throw this liquid in the trash. If the scent is pleasant, a few drops in the toilet bowl will substitute for potpourri in the bathroom. Clear, brown and green empty bottles can be recycled. Other colored bottles or ceramic containers are not recyclable.

It's time for the calendar shuffle. Heavy, glossy calendars can be recycled with magazines. If similar to copy paper, non shiny calendars can be considered office paper. The metal/plastic spiral or strip on the top of the calendar must be removed. It can be as easy as cutting across the top.

Leftover ice cubes can slowly water indoor or outdoor plants, rather than be tossed into the sink. The dirt left in the plant pot can be dumped near a bush, tree or in the garden to replenish lost soil, rather than in the trash with the pot that can not be recycled.

Have a happy and safe New Year.

Matters of Opinion

Coming commerce

The announcement in last week's Spotlight that Cohoes Savings Bank has opened a branch in Delmar is another welcome though nagging reminder that the commercial growth option will continue for Bethlehem in 1995.

New Scotland's value system soon will receive a similar nudge when SuperValu Foods opens in the old Grand Union building on Maple Street in Voorhæsville.

Both towns understandably would like to remain more or less as they are. And if growth is inevitable they would prefer it to be residential, on five-acre lots. But with the costs of education and other services soaring, residential development alone can no longer foot the entire bill; as we have said repeatedly, both towns must come to grips with the expansionist pressures on their industrial and commercial bases.

Cohoes Savings, SuperValu Foods, the Price Chopper supermarket planned for Slingerlands and the Southgate shopping center for Glenmont all offer the kind of relief Bethlehem and New Scotland taxpayers need more of. Such relief will continue to be available, however, only if the public's attitude and the zoning codes in each town are sufficiently modernized to accommodate it.

You're too late

It's only human nature, we suppose, that those who sit by while the work is being done still feel free to complain about the end result.

Recent complaints from the local farm lobby about the town's just-completed land use master plan are a good example.

Specifically, the Farm Bureau of Albany County wants the Town Board "to delay acceptance" of the plan until the committee which drafted it is expanded "to include farmer residents as members."

Now LUMAC members (LUMAC is the acronym by which the committee is known) were appointed by the Town Board. No interest group which sought it was denied representation. There were no pre-conceived criteria for membership. The committee met on several occasions with members of the farming community, farmers were canvassed in random surveys mailed out during the drafting process, and LUMAC held a number of workshops for farmers — workshops that were advertised in and covered by The Spotlight.

It thus is unreasonable, to say the least, for the farm lobby to unreasonably demand that seven years' work be shelved, and the process restarted, just to get one or more of its members on the committee. LUMAC is at present actively soliciting public reaction to its draft plan and soon will reconvene to take up the objections and suggestions for modification it receives. That is the appropriate route for local agricultural interests unhappy with the preliminary findings to follow. It's too late in the game to do anything else.

Kenneth Hahn

One of the best arguments against term limits we can think of has been Ken Hahn.

Hahn has been Bethlehem's Receiver of Taxes since 1964 and the town has been lucky to have him.

During that time the number of tax bills the town sends out each year has doubled and the amount billed has almost quintupled. Hahn and his staff have collected all but the smallest fraction of the amounts due and every penny shows up on his books.

Still, he doesn't fit the image of the taxman. People actually like him. They trust him. As former Supervisor Ken Ringler noted, Hahn has worked hard to build and then to preserve good relationships with Bethlehem's people.

Ken Hahn announced last week he won't run for reelection in November. Which is unfortunate for there's no doubt he'll be missed.

Feeding wildlife during winter can do more harm than good

The writer of this Point of View is director of the Five Rivers Education Center on Game Farm Road in Delmar.

By Alan Mapes

Feeding birds and other wild animals is a popular winter activity around the Capital District. Songbirds, pigeons, crows, ducks, geese, wild turkeys, squirrels, raccoons and deer all are fed by well-meaning nature lovers.

But is this feeding of wild creatures a good idea - for the animals or for the people involved?

Sorry to do this, but my answer is the old "yes and no." Let me suggest some of the good and bad sides to the question so that you can decide for yourself.

Winter is certainly a stressful time for many of the wild animals that share the area with us. Some can happily avoid the hardships of finding food during winter. Many of our birds and several kinds of bats simply leave; they fly south to more hospitable places.

Other animals, like bears, raccoons and skunks, get nice and fat in the fall and sleep most of the winter away. A few, like woodchucks and some bats will actually hibernate. They slow their metabolism way down and stay in a state of suspended animation.

For the ones that stay active all winter, however, life can be hard. Many of these animals will take the opportunity for an easy meal if it is offered. With birds, there do not seem to be many down sides to feeding. Birds are easy to attract (most of the time) and it is wonderful to see these creatures up close.

Your feeders and the ground around them should be kept clean, of course, since moldy seed can cause respiratory diseases. Other diseases, like salmonella, can be transmitted between birds at feeders, as it was with pine siskins a couple of winters ago.

This year the House Finches got an eye disease that is passed from one bird to another. The Department of Environmental Conservation is recommending that people stop feeding for two weeks if they find affected finches at their feeders. Feeding can be resumed after that, with a good cleaning of feeders recommended. Most of the time wild birds can find their own food, but our offerings can increase survival rates during times of toughest winter weather.

More controversial is the feeding of animals like raccoons opossums and deer.

Stick to small birds when you want to feed wild animals. Enjoy the others when you see them, but let them keep their wildness and their dignity.

Raccoon rabies has made us very aware of the dangers in attracting animals to our homes and I would certainly recommend not putting out tables scraps to bring in raccoons. Rabies is forecast to be with us at varying levels over the coming years.

Most questionable is the feeding of white-tailed deer. Most of us love to see deer; their grace and speed are inspiring whether you are a photographer, a hunter or just a backyard wildlife enthusiast. But feeding them can be bad for you, your neighbors and for the deer themselves.

Most homeowners in the Capital District are painfully aware of what deer do to landscape shrubbery. The white cedar, rhododendron and holly around my house are strongly fenced early in the fall.

Why is feeding bad for the deer? Like cows, deer have several stomach chambers and have microscopic organisms in their guts that help digest the rough plant food they eat. Deer normally live on "browse" (twigs, buds and evergreen needles) during winter. The proper kinds of bacteria are present in their stomachs to digest certain foods. A deer can fill up on the alfalfa hay you put out in the backyard, but may not be able to digest it; deer can starve with full stomachs.

Successful deer feeding must be started early in the fall and must be continued regularly all winter long. That way the deer will adapt to digesting the food offered. Multiple feeding stations are needed to ensure the younger, weaker deer get some of the food. The strongest deer will claim a single feeding station and keep out the deer that need food the most. Despite our visions of Disney, little Bambi eats last, if there is anything left. All of this adds up to a lot of trouble and expense — and the deer will still eat your neighbor's shrubs.

My advice? Stick to small birds when you want to feed wild animals. Enjoy the others when you see them, but let them keep their wildness and their dignity.

'Parameters of concern' in water source

Editor, The Spotlight:

It is inevitable that the water controversy will continue.

In the process of obtaining information about the Hudson River water project, Clearwater keeps turning up more disturbing information. Recently, monitoring and sampling records were obtained from the Department of Environmental Conservation. The data consisted of the results of water samples collected at a monitoring site on the Hudson River at Glenmont.

The report, based on the sampling, reads as follows: "the water quality at this site has been rated POOR due to the moderate macroinvertebrate impact, a fish consumption advisory, and the number of parameters of concern in the water column." It continues, "The water column analyses show iron, lead and phenol to be parameters of concern."

If samples exceed the assessment criteria more than 15 percent of the time, it is designated a parameter of concern. At the Glenmont site phenol values greater than the criteria occur 50 percent of the time. Phenols are toxic and water soluble. They also create taste and odor problems in water.

This is the water that will be drawn into the aquifer from the Hudson River and will be the source of our water supply. Why are we trading a superior source for one characterized as "poor"? Surely, avoidance is a more prudent approach than extensive chemical treatment. Also, an issue of this magnitude should never have been decided without a referendum.

If you wish to read this report, Clearwater has started a file at the library. Ask at the Reference Desk.

On conquering Alzheimer's

Editor, The Spotlight:

Former President Ronald Reagan's announcement that he is in the early stages of Alzheimer's disease was poignant and courageous. He and his wife, Nancy, gave us all the model for facing the reality of Alzheimer's disease with honesty and dignity.

Most of us know enough about Alzheimer's to fear it. In fact, family members very often refuse to recognize obvious symptoms because they can't bear the thought of a loved one falling victim to Alzheimer's disease. Getting a diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease is the essential first step in getting help. Those who learn about the disease develop caregiving skills and get support are most able to ensure the best possible quality of life for the afflicted individual.

We can conquer this disease, but we must make doing so a top priority. As the largest funder of Alzheimer research outside of the federal government, the Alzheimer's Association can fund only 20 percent of the excellent grant applications we receive. If we as a society don't make the investment in research now, one out of 10 of us can expect to have Alzheimer's disease after age 65; half of us will have it in our 80s.

Alzheimer's disease is one of the most significant health issues of our time, yet it has not received the attention it deserves. Part of the reason is paralyzing denial. While there are an estimated four million Americans with the disease, many have not been diagnosed; as a result, they are not receiving the help they need.

There are other important reasons for this neglect. For one thing, our nation's health care system is dedicated to making sick people well, but Alzheimer's so far has no cure. Organ transplants with their astronomical expenses are covered by many health insurance policies. But Alzheimer's disease is not covered by most health insurance policies or even Medicare.

Ignoring "Old-Timers Disease" also overlooks the fact that as much as 10 percent of cases are people in their 40s and 50s. Moreover, many adult children and grandchildren are caregivers of elderly parents and grandparents.

Researchers say they can develop interventions within the next decade that can delay the onset of Alzheimer's disease by perhaps five years. This would mean that many thousands of individuals might be able to maintain their mental capacities and independence to the end of their lives.

A simpler life

Editor, The Spotlight:

I wish to thank you for printing my Christmas memory in your Dec. 21 issue of The Spotlight. I have had several phone calls, and letters thanking me for re-awakening memories of youthful experiences which were similar to mine.

If there is one thing which I think that all of the comments I have received seem to be saying is that they wish to return to that time when life was simpler, problems were easier to resolve and the world was still full of promise. What a glorious gift hope is, and the innocent giving of self will always help rekindle it. Let us all pray that charity, kindness and selflessness will always survive the world's efforts to squelch them. As the poets say: "Let there be peace on earth, and let it begin with me," "for we are of such stuff as dreams are made," "and that the angels envy."

Thank you again, and may all of your new years be richer and finer than the ones that went before.

New York cannot afford food program cuts

Editor, The Spotlight:

As part of their Contract with America, Newt Gingrich and the House Republican leadership are proposing to eliminate this nation's federal nutrition programs.

Programs such as food stamps, school meals, summer meals, and WIC (Women, Infants and Children) would be combined into a single block grant to be given to the states. States would not be required to administer any of the existing programs. It is likely that some states would eliminate the food stamp program. States would also be able to write new restrictions for any of the programs.

Maximum first year funding for the block grant would be capped

Parish remembers seniors

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the people who were responsible for the wonderful luncheon held for the seniors at St. Thomas School on Dec. 17.

The food was wonderful and the service magnificent. The seniors of St. Thomas Parish are truly grateful for the time and effort that the Parish puts into making us feel remembered at this time of year. Thank you for a wonderful time, and for the lovely gifts. I am sure that each decoration will be hung with a warm sense of love. Thank you.

Holiday donations

Editor, The Spotlight:

On Thursday, Dec. 15 Ms. Schade, Mrs. Judge, and Mrs. Szczech's classes made a trip to the Elsmere Grand Union.

Seventy-two students from the three classes all brought in money to buy non-perishable foods for the Bethlehem School Food Drive. Most of us had earned the money by working at home. Parents from each class went with us to help shop for the food. The Grand Union donated a 20 pound turkey to the food drive.

at least $3.4 billion a year below current funding levels, a nine percent cut. The block grant would not be an entitlement program; funding for all nutrition programs would be discretionary and would not grow to meet increased need during any given year, such as during a recession. Presently, food stamps and school meals are provided to all families which meet the income guidelines. If the Republican plan goes through, benefits would have to be reduced or waiting lists would have to be started.

The federal nutrition programs are an important safety net for low-income families and their children. In New York State, more than 2 million New Yorkers are receiving food stamps, including nearly a million children. More than a million children in New York participate in the school lunch program. Any money saved in cutting nutrition programs will be lost later in increased health care costs and other social problems; six of the ten leading causes of death in the U.S. are linked to malnutrition.

Eliminating successful programs that provide vital nutrition to families and children will only lead to increased hunger in this country. The Republican leadership has suggested that private charities can step in to meet any increased need for food and other services. Those of us on the front line, those who are already struggling to feed hungry Americans, know that we could not meet this increased demand. Emergency food programs are already helping to feed 2 million New Yorkers annually. These programs are already unable to keep up with the demand and often must turn hungry people away, especially since both public and private donations of food and money have been decreasing.

Those receiving food assistance are already living in the depths of poverty. Further cuts in these programs will worsen their situation and deepen their suffering, which is something that this country can ill afford, nor allow.

I hope that readers will contact their Congressional representatives to urge them to save our federal nutrition programs.

Lecturer to discuss winter depression

Feeling blue after the holidays? Are you sleeping and eating more, running on less energy, or feeling less productive at work?

You may be experiencing seasonal affective disorder, appropriately known as SAD. Dr. Denise McCarthy of the Center for Cognitive Therapy in Albany will present a program about the winter blues on Tuesday, Jan. 17, at 7:30 p.m. at the library.

McCarthy will discuss the symptoms, causes, effects and treatments of the disorder and suggest ways that people can cope with depression experienced during winter.

Call the reference desk to register for this free program at 439-9314.

Fewer hours of sunlight in the winter months can cause some people to develop malaise and depression. During the 1980s, SAD gained widespread scientific acceptance. Researchers estimate that it may affect as many as five percent of Americans.

SAD is most pronounced in January and February, but can occur anytime between November and March. It is more prevalent the farther north you go and affects more women than men. It occurs most often to people in their 20s to 40s.

No one knows for certain what causes SAD, but researchers believe light deprivation is at the root of the problem. There are several theories about how too little sunlight entering the eye triggers changes in body chemistry.

According to McCarthy, many people get the winter blues, but few actually develop the very specific, clinical symptoms of seasonal affective disorder.

For mild cases, doing things such as brightening the decor of one's home or office, or scheduling some outdoor exercise during the daytime might help. Clinical help may be needed to treat severe cases. Treatment may involve stress management techniques, anti-depressant drugs or light therapy using bright artificial lights.

McCarthy holds a doctorate in clinical psychology from Antioch/New England Graduate School and is a member of the Anxiety Disorders Association of America. She has been an associate psychologist at the Capital District Psychiatric Center and has a private practice in Albany.

Captures Helderberg title with win over BC

Voorheesville shows it can play with the big guys

By Kelly Griffin

The king of the Helderbergs has been crowned and it's Voorheesville High.

The Blackbirds defeated Guilderland and Bethlehem, both Class A schools, on their way to the title last Tuesday and Wednesday in Bethlehem's Helderberg tournament.

"We had a great week," said V'ville's head coach Skip Carrk. "It's a feather in a little school's cap to beat big schools like those two."

In the finals of the tournament, V'ville went up against host Bethlehem. The 'Birds kept an even pace with the Eagles, and the score stood 31-31 at halftime.

In the third quarter, V'ville shifted into high gear. It went on a 13-0 scoring run and never looked back. The final score was 61-53 in Voorheesville's favor.

"We worked very hard, both the starters and the guys off the bench," said Carrk. "It was certainly a win that was well-deserved. It was a real team victory."

On Tuesday, Dec. 27, the 'Birds faced Guilderland in the opening round. They fell behind in the third quarter, which motivated them to go on a 15-2 streak to recapture the lead. Voorheesville was victorious 59-54.

Standout center and tournament MVP Dave Burch shone in both games, scoring 26 points versus Guilderland and 25 against Bethlehem. He also tallied 21 rebounds in the two games combined.

Senior forward Josh White was tough underneath for the Blackbirds, pulling down 22 rebounds for the week.

Junior Mike Beadnell chipped in 10 points in the Guilderland game, and was named to the All-Tournament team.

I think that, after those two wins, we have a lot of momentum to carry into the next segment.

Skip Carrk

"A lot of people did very well for us this week," said Carrk, "Andy Bayus, starting for the injured Jacob VanRyn, gave a great performance. Jacob is a very solid player, and Andy stepped it up so we didn't miss him as much."

"Joe Robichaud, Robert Baron and Ryan Foster were all strong off the bench for us," Carrk said.

"This week was more fun than most weeks because of the holidays and vacation. It was also a turning point in our season. I think that, after those two wins, we have a lot of momentum to carry into the next segment."

BC girls top CCHS, win holiday classic

By Janice Gallagher

The Bethlehem girls' basketball team continued its winning streak this vacation by beating rival Catholic Central in the Lady Crusader Classic tournament last week 56-50.

Junior point guard Katie Sherwin had 20 points and senior forward Karena Zornow had 16 to spearhead the victory.

Zornow

"We weren't expected to win because they had beaten us earlier this year, but the team came together and took their tournament from them," said Sherwin.

"It was very exciting. ... We knew what we had to do, and we had to play as a team. We were really psyched, and in the end it paid off."

The Eagles jumped out to an early lead, but the Lady Crusaders came back in the fourth quarter to make it a tight game.

The Eagles lost to Catholic Central on Dec. 2, but Zornow said, "I knew we had a good shot at winning this game. Our defense has picked up since the beginning of the year, and I think that made all the difference on Friday."

Zornow, the co-captain of the team, was also the tournament MVP and had 10 rebounds in the game. "We wanted to show them we were good enough not only to be on the court with them, but to beat them," she said.

Senior forward Julie Davidson had 12 rebounds, and freshman

Nicole Conway added 13 points.

The Eagles got to the finals of the tournament by beating Saratoga on Wednesday, Dec. 28, by a score of 40-29. Conway had 14 points, and Zornow scored 12.

"We had just played them and won, so it was harder to get up for the game. But we ended up playing well," Zornow said. The girls faced Saratoga on Dec. 16, and defeated them 50-32.

The Eagles' next few games are against less competitive teams. They play at Mohonasen this Friday (Jan. 6).

"We will now see how good we really are, because with games against weaker teams, it's much harder to get up for them and play our best," said senior co-captain Colleen Doody. "You tend to play to the level of your competitor."

The Eagles improved their league record to 4-0 with a 38-29 win against Niskayuna on Wednesday, Dec. 21, but were not satisfied with their level of play.

"We had to practice hard, run a lot and shoot a lot between the Niskayuna game and the tournament. Our shots just weren't going in against Nisky," said Sherwin, who had a game-high 11 points.

The girls next game is on the road against Mohonasen on Friday, Jan. 6. They return home on Wednesday, Jan. 11, to play Columbia.

Freshman Meade having an impact

By Joshua White

The Voorheesville girls basketball team defeated overmatched Greenville last week 57-20 in a nonleague game.

The Lady Birds jumped out to a 18-3 first quarter lead and didn't look back. After that, Voorheesville went on a 34-1 run over the remainder of the first half to take a 30-point halftime lead, 34-4.

"We played solid defense," said head coach Jack Adams. "Also, we executed our offense well and had good looks at the basket."

The Lady Birds' ferocious first half defense frustrated the Lady Spartans' shot selection. Finding themselves ahead 44-8 at the end of the third quarter, the Lady Birds backed off their full-court press.

Basketball

Birds with 13 points and grabbed eight rebounds. Meade poured in 12 points and also added eight steals.

On Tuesday, Dec. 20, the Lady Birds played host to Schalmont. The Lady Sabres used an 11-0 run midway through the fourth quarter and a 6-3 run in overtime to edge the Lady Birds 43-40.

At the end of the first quarter, the score was tied at 12. The second quarter was nip-and-tuck as well. Baskets were traded and the Lady Sabres led at the intermission 19-18.

The third quarter belonged to the Lady Birds. They took off on a 12-2 run over the first six minutes of the period.

The Lady Sabres answered with their own fourth quarter run to send the game into overtime. Schalmont's six overtime points proved to be the difference.

"We had a 10-point lead and it turned into a 1-point deficit," said Adams. "In the last six minutes of regulation, we only scored one point. We took good shots but just couldn't convert. It was a game we should have won in regulation."

"We did a lot of good things," said Adams. "The kids did a great job defensively. Our offense is improving but needs to get better."

Meade continued her solid play by scoring 14 points and playing superb defense against Schalmont's star guard Kelly Paolino. Seniors Kristin Dougherty and Jen Person each scored seven points.

Glad expects an improved 2nd half

By Zack Beck

The future looks bright for Bethlehem hockey.

With 10 games to go, coach Tom Glad is confident the team will improve and be more competitive against teams they have been trounced by in the past.

In only its first varsity season, BC has had a tough year although the Eagles did manage a 4-2 win over Troy High and narrowly lost to a tough LaSalle squad. This year's varsity team includes nine seniors, six juniors, three sophomores and four freshmen.

On Saturday, Jan. 7, BC will skate into the Albany County Hockey Rink with a 1-7 league record and face a tough Saratoga squad.

Bethlehem will have to meet the challenge with a quick offense led by Joey Castiglione, John Czajka, John Quinlan and captain Brad Mattox.

A hard-hitting defense led by Chris Thorton, Ethan Drake, Mike Esmond, Kevin Gallagher and Greg Hopke will attempt to protect the BC goalmouth. Joel Dzekciorius, Sharif Kabir and Peter Powell will mind the nets.

SuperValu schedules grand opening Saturday

By Dev Tobin

The Voorheesville supermarket drought comes to an end Saturday at 8 a.m., as the gift wrap comes off the windows and the new SuperValu on Maple Avenue formally opens.

For almost 11 years, since the Grand Union closed, the village has been without a full-service market.

It's been a hectic six months for Jim and Elaine Nichols, whose vision of running their own supermarket is scant days from reality.

The Nichols family moved to Voorheesville this summer from Sullivan County, where Jim was the general manager of a three-store supermarket chain. He has been working on the project for more than a year, receiving final loan approvals last summer.

The SuperValu organization, a major grocery wholesaler from Keene, N.H., will provide brand-name and IGA-brand groceries for the Voorheesville store, which will be independently owned by the Nichols.

The Voorheesville store has been refurbished inside and out, with new floors, walls and ceiling, as well as new shelves, refrigerated cases and electronic check-out system, Jim Nichols said. The parking lot has also been repaved and restriped.

The shelves are all stocked with non-perishables, and deliveries of produce, meat, dairy products and bread will be taking place later this week, he said.

Training of the store's 20 full-time and 50 part-time employees will continue through this week, said Elaine Nichols, a former teacher who will be the store's office, personnel and promotions manager.

Some people, seeing the lights on and cars parked in front, have been coming in to try to buy groceries already, Elaine Nichols said.

Service will be important at SuperValu, Jim Nichols said. "We will stress customer service because I know people don't like to stand in line."

While smaller than the superstores built by local supermarket chains, the Voorheesville SuperValu will offer a complete range of products and services, including fresh produce, seafood, meats, deli and a hot food takeout service, Fresh and Fast at Five, Jim Nichols said.

Brian Robertson stocks frozen pizzas in the new freezers at the Voorheesville SuperValu.
Doug Persons

As much as possible, the store will feature local products, including cider from nearby Indian Ladder Farms, "the best and freshest we can get," he said.

The store's prices will be competitive with the larger supermarkets, Jim Nichols said, and the first SuperValu circular bears that out, with turkeys at 48 cents a pound, milk at $1.68 a gallon, hard or Genoa salami at $2.49 a pound, three pounds of bananas for $1 and broccoli at 99 cents a head.

Part of the grand opening will be a contest for a year of free groceries ($50 a week's worth), Jim Nichols added.

For Bill Candido of Voorheesville Pharmacy, the supermarket opening is "wonderful for the village. The way I see the Nichols go at it, I expect they'll do well."

Candido had worked on finding a new market for the space back in the mid-1980s, so he was especially pleased that the new supermarket is finally set to open.

The SuperValu will be open Monday through Saturday from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m., and Sunday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

1984 closing hit hard

By Dev Tobin

Eleven years ago, the news that Grand Union was closing its Voorheesville market sent "waves of shock and dismay through the village," Lyn Stapf noted in her front-page article in the Jan. 11, 1984 edition of The Spotlight.

Stapf's day-by-day account, from Tuesday's appearance of "cash only" signs at the registers to Saturday's bargain hunters facing near-empty shelves, featured several interviews with disheartened shoppers.

The sense of loss was obvious. Store employee and village resident Andrea Stewart's four-word question captured the community's mood, "Isn't it just awful?"

Young mother Tawn Hollick expressed a common sentiment, "I don't care what store goes in there, as long as it's a supermarket."

For Joan Roberts, the convenience of the supermarket on Maple Avenue was paramount.

"The store was never run well, but I did all my shopping here," she said.

In the same vein, an anonymous shopper added, "They have never been competitive in services or commodities, but they were all we had."

No one looked forward to trekking up to Western Avenue to the nearest supermarket, and village officials convened an ad hoc committee to work to bring in another supermarket.

"I just want to keep a viable store in the place," said Village Trustee Darf Reh, who worked with Don Meacham, village attorney, and William Candido, proprietor of the adjacent Voorheesville Pharmacy, on the committee.

Prospects for a new supermarket looked bleak, since Price Chopper (the other major chain in the area) was "definitely not interested." Price Chopper did offer a van service to bring senior citizens to its supermarket at the 20 Mall in Guilderland.

At the time, the chains were going through a modernization phase, building new "superstores" of about 60,000 square feet, about three times the area of the Voorheesville building.

Grand Union still had eight years to go on its lease, so technically it was up to them to find another tenant, noted landlord Robert Wiggand. "I'll do whatever I can to bring in another supermarket."

respond to fire calls, whether they come from Delmar or Elsmere.

That should be a boon to both districts, Webster said, because only a small percentage of the 70 or so volunteers from each district live south of the bypass.

"Each department is essentially doubling its manpower," he said.

The consolidation was prompted in large part by tremendous growth in the area of Bethlehem south of the bypass. When Delmar built the Feura Bush Road substation in 1970, the area was just starting to develop, said Day. With the arrival of subdivisions such as Lauralana Heights, Elm Estates, Colonial Acres and Bicentennial Woods, hundreds of new homes have been built and the population has boomed.

There are plans for several new subdivisions for the area encompassed by the two fire districts, including 195 new single-family homes as part of the proposed Haswell Farms project. A spate of new commercial growth is also predicted for the Glenmont area.

"This is the first agreement of this type in Albany County, and possibly in upstate New York," Webster said. "I've heard of another such arrangement on Long Island where they share facilities, but not manpower."

Volunteers firefighters have traditionally been resistant to change and protective of their turf, Day said. "I don't think anyone else has really looked at it like we have."

Further down the line, Day and Webster said they hope to hold joint training sessions so that volunteers unable to attend drills or exercises scheduled for their own district can attend sessions conducted by the other district.

Delmar Fire Chief James Kerr and Elsmere Chief Richard Webster agreed that above and beyond saving money, the consolidation would boost morale for volunteers living south of the bypass.

Now that both Elsmere and Delmar have trucks ready and available for the Feura Bush Road area, Webster said, "The guys will be a lot more eager to respond." Before they were "waiting and waiting" for manpower, he said, but now with "both groups of men available, they are getting out a lot more quickly."

"It's part of the pride thing," Kerr said. "A lot of firefighters have that go get 'em attitude. They like to be on the first truck out."

Hahn

"There has never been a more dedicated public employee," said former Bethlehem Supervisor Ken Ringler. "He would bend over backward and go the extra mile for anyone who didn't understand the system or had difficulties with the process. His one-on-one interaction with people was wonderful."

"He's been a tremendous asset to town government," said Supervisor Sheila Fuller. "He's a wealth of information, and people, especially senior citizens, have a great deal of trust in him."

Hahn is a perfectionist when it comes to keeping the books, Fuller said. During the past year, for example, he collected more than $47 million in town, county and school taxes and not a penny went unaccounted for.

Hahn also takes a personal interest in people, which is not all that common in this day and age, she added. "If he sees a change in a person's water bill, he'll call them up and ask if it could be leaky faucet or toilet."

Town Democrats might be cheering Hahn's decision not to run for another four-year term because he has been extremely active in local GOP politics since he first ran for office in November 1963. But the 66-year-old Republican said he plans to remain involved in politics, particularly when it comes to enlisting the support of Conservative Party members for Republicans seeking to run on that line in the general election.

When Hahn first took over the reins the number of tax bills sent out was approximately 5,600. That number has nearly doubled since then with about 11,300 properties listed on the tax rolls for 1993. About $47 million came into the office last year compared with about $10 million in revenues recorded for 1964.

"We've seen a lot of growth," Hahn said. "When I started everything was handwritten — the tax rolls and all the bills. The first innovation that really helped out was when the addressograph machine came along."

Over the years, Hahn has had opposition for six of the eight times he's run, but never had a close call. Despite being a staunch Republican, he's also shown himself to be independent-minded, as evidenced by his endorsement of Democrat Bill Burkhard for town board in 1993.

Hahn threw his support behind Burkhard because Republican Town Councilman George Lenhardt, who was running for his first full four-year term, supported the late Charles Fritts during a 1987 Republican primary for receiver of taxes.

That was the only time Hahn faced challenge from within his own party and it harkened back to 1986 when he supported Gary Swan over town GOP chairman Bernard Kaplowitz in a Republican primary for the state Assembly seat vacated by former Assemblyman Larry Lane.

Hahn said he's proud of the efficient manner he's been able to run his office over the years and he credits his staff — both full- and part-time — with helping to achieve a high level of accuracy.

It will be a switch having so much free time on his hands, but besides remaining active in politics, Hahn said he'll pursue his "second love," which is drum and bugle corps music.

"They have a high fatality rate and they require a lot of money to keep going," he said. "I plan to do whatever I can to support them."

Bethlehem Superintendent of Schools Les Loomis said Hahn's commitment and competence will be missed. "Quite a small amount of school taxes go uncollected. The accuracy and thoroughness with which he runs his department has contributed to the extraordinary high level of taxes collected by the district."

Ski happy trails at nearby West Mt.

By Susan Graves

If you're in a New York skiing state of mind, you might want to check out the slopes at West Mountain in Queensbury, a 45-minute drive from Albany.

"There's no need to get up at 6 and rush because we'll start when you get to the mountain," said Jordan Serlin, who works in media relations for West Mountain. And, "We're close," in relation to the Capital District, he added.

West Mountain has also undergone some revisions to make skiing or snowboarding more appealing this year. There is one new trail, the Coy Dog, three new night-skiing trails, new tower-mount snowguns, improved lighting, a state-of-the-art snow groomer and a night lift ticket, Serlin said. About 70 percent of the skiing area of the mountain is lighted for night skiing.

Further, Serlin added, there are all the comforts of home, including town lodges, two cafeterias, a gift shop and ski and snowboard rentals available.

To sweeten the package even more, there are more than 100 instructors, who specialize in all ability levels. Special lesson and lift-ticket combination programs also can make a ski outing easy on the pocketbook.

Special four-week programs include:

- Sunday afternoons, beginning on Jan. 8, include lift privileges from 1:30 to 6 p.m. with a one-hour lesson at 2 p.m. For all ages and abilities, the cost of the program is $65.

- Friday daytime programs beginning Jan. 6, offer 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. lift access with an hour-and-a-half lesson at 10 a.m. at a cost of $50.

- Also on Friday nights starting Jan. 6, a program from 7 to 10:30 p.m. with an hour-and-a-half lesson at 7:30 for $50.

- A Super Senior Program kicks off today, Jan. 4, at 9:30 a.m. with a continental breakfast. Lift access for the four weeks is from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. with a training session at 10 a.m. The cost for the program is $55.

Equipment rental for all four-week programs costs $40.

And if Mother Nature isn't cooperating, West Mountain's new snow grooming machine helps make the man-made powder almost like the real thing, said Serlin. "With granular snow, this is really great at breaking up ice rocks," he said.

Also new this year is the $19 night lift ticket available Monday through Friday from 5:30 to 10:30 p.m.

On Monday, Jan. 9, West Mountain will host the first in an ongoing hospitality ski party series. The event is open to anyone who works in the hospitality industry, including chefs, kitchen staff, waiters and waitresses, bartenders, receptionists, owners and managers. For $10, participants Skiers enjoy the view from one of the trails at West Mountain, while observers enjoy some of the activities at the bottom of the mountain. Many of this year's special programs begin this week.

A Christmas Carol impresses critics in Philly but fails to draw audiences

The production of A Christmas Carol which opened Thanksgiving weekend at the Palace Theater in Albany and after 18 performances moved to Philadelphia for 16 additional performances, suffered the same fate in that city as it did in Albany.

The show which played for a second year in Albany, simply didn't draw as well as last season. Overall, it drew fewer people than in 1993.

The producers had hoped that the Philadelphia audience would make up for the poor Albany showing. But, it didn't despite getting good reviews.

What originally was announced two years ago as an annual event at the holidays is now destined to be scuttled. The only prospect, given the fact that scenery, properties and costumes are still in the hands of the producers, is a touring show.

Martin P. Kelly

This may be the only route for the show to go. In this way, the show would be booked at theaters throughout the east for the month before Christmas, playing one-nighters or several days' engagements in different cities.

A person close to the production believes that this is the only hope for the producers to salvage the project. Once the show is booked into a theater, then the theater would be responsible for selling the tickets in that community. The producers would have a guaranteed fee to bring the show into the various cities.

Would Albany be one of those cities? Possibly! But, it would mean that at the Palace Theater in Albany, for instance, the theater's board of trustees, representing the city which owns the building, would have to guarantee the fees for performances and then sell the tickets. It could represent several hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The problem for the producers of A Christmas Carol is the need to make a decision quickly. Often, bookings at theaters around the country during the holiday season are booked a year ahead of time. At the Palace Theater for example, the Albany Symphony and the Berkshire Ballet Company required December bookings and in many instances, theaters around the country have local shows which they do for Christmas.

In any event, a decision will have to be made during January by the producers of A Christmas Carol.

Whatever their decision, most certainly they will not play the musical show in Albany for several weeks. If it comes here at all, it will be as a touring show.

Neil Simon play in rehearsal at ACT for early January opening in Albany

Doug deLisle's staging of Neil Simon's Fools is currently in final rehearsals for its opening Friday (January 6) at the Albany Civic Theater.

Described as a comic fable for adults, Simon's comedy played briefly in New York but has become a favorite among regional and community theaters.

DeLisle has newcomers to the company David Girard and Bonnie Brodsky as the leads in the production. Most of the 14-member cast are new to ACT. Only Louise Koenig has appeared previously on the ACT stage.

Some of the actors for the production were brought to the attention of the director by their work in a children's show done by ACT.

Interestingly, Fools is one of the reasons Neil Simon is planning to produce his next show, London Suite, off-Broadway. The playwright's last three productions on Broadway have been costly to produce and have not pulled in audiences to give them runs such as his earlier works.

He told the Press Club in Washington recently that he thinks the costs to bring a production to Broadway are prohibitive. "You have to charge too much for tickets," he said.

Broadway producers are not happy Simon is taking this stand. They're afraid it will start a trend where only musicals will be done on Broadway and all other shows done off-Broadway.

Right now, there is only one non-musical show on Broadway. An Inspector Calls, a British import, has lasted through the season. All other shows are musicals.

It appears Simon has a point. Tickets and reservations for the ACT production of Fools are available at 462-1297.

Donation

biological inventory of the property, he said.

The county land trust will closely monitor public use of the preserve, looking out for timber thieves, beer parties and illegal camping.

"If it becomes a problem, we may have to limit use to guided walks," King said.

The Holts first contacted the Nature Conservancy, the pioneer national land trust organization that concentrates its efforts on endangered species and habitats. The property did not fit the Nature Conservancy's criteria, so the Holts were referred to the fledgling county land trust, King said.

"They could have had houses on the property with spectacular views, but that's not what they wanted," King added.

The Albany County Land Conservancy is a non-profit land trust founded in 1992 to protect open space in the county through conservation easements (permanent development restrictions) and voluntary donations. The Holt property is its first donation, and the group is also working on its first easement, King said.

Land trusts based on the Nature Conservancy model have grown in recent years, as federal and state funds for land acquisition and preservation have become limited, he said.

"Land preservation is just one of the many demands on government," King said. "Government agencies are aware they can't do it all."

The Spotlight remembers

This week in 1985, these stories were making headlines in The Spotlight.

- After three terms in office, Bethlehem Supervisor Thomas Corrigan announced that he would not run for re-election.
- Bethlehem Planning Board Chairman Charles Redmond announced his resignation. Redmond had served for 24 years on the board.
- A major revision of the Bethlehem zoning code, limiting certain business uses along Delaware Avenue, was approved by the town board.
- William Wright of Delmar was elected president of the Albany County Volunteer Firemen's Association. Other officers with local connections were George Mears of North Bethlehem, first vice president; William James of North Bethlehem, treasurer; George Bloodgood of Selkirk, chaplain; and Frank DeCere of North Bethlehem, sergeant-at-arms.
- In a game marked by poor shooting on both sides, Voorheesville defeated Bethlehem 47-33 in the semifinal of the Helderberg Tournament. Brett Hotaling, with 17 points and 14 rebounds, and Brian Rubini, with 11 points and nine assists, led the Blackbirds.

Good neighbors

Delmar woman tapped for business post

Victoria Ryan of Delmar has been appointed business development coordinator for the Coltin Group of Burnt Hills, which develops and markets systems for the recycled pulp industry.

Ryan comes to Coltin from the office of former Albany County Executive Michael Hoblock, where she served as an economic policy analyst. Hoblock was elected to the state Senate in November, and the Albany County Legislature recently appointed Michael Breslin to take his place as county executive.

With the county, Ryan worked on building a coordinated economic development alliance with the Albany-Colonie Regional Chamber of Commerce, developing and publishing marketing materials to attract new industry to the county, and improving hotel room tax collection.

At Coltin, Ryan will develop and implement a grants service program for the pulp and paper industry, in addition to public relations, marketing and project administration duties.
