By Susan Graves

Ryland "Hugh" Hewitt of Slingerlands will assume the duties of editorial page editor beginning with the March 22 edition of The Spotlight. Hewitt will replace John Larabee, who has accepted a position on the suburban desk with The Detroit News.

Hewitt, a native of Elmira, is a retired professor from the University at Albany and was the founder and former executive director of the Capital Area Speech Center, Inc. He also was formerly the executive director of the Northeastern New York Speech Center for 11 years. "I came up from those days when we did a lot," said Hewitt.

No stranger to Spotlight Newspapers staff, Hewitt has worked as a freelance photographer and writer for the papers for the past three years. Hewitt's photographs have been featured in at least a dozen area exhibits.

Hewitt, 72, earned his doctorate from Cornell University in phonetics and linguistics "because it was fascinating," and has continued his love affair with language and words throughout his life.

Manning to file suit to keep deli plan alive

By Mel Hyman

Albany restaurateur John Manning will soon file an Article 78 proceeding in state Supreme Court appealing the Bethlehem planning board's decision denying his application to establish a delicatessen/catering service at 273 Delaware Ave.

"I'm working on it as we speak," said Michael Biscone of Ravena, Manning's attorney in the long drawn-out affair.

Town planners last month rejected

Manning's effort to convert a home at the corner of Rural Place and Delaware Avenue into a takeout deli by a 6-1 margin.

Mr. Manning would like to, and plans to, put a deli and catering service in that location.

N. Scotland councilman: Extend moratorium again

By Dev Tobin

There will be no rush to judgment on the proposed changes to New Scotland's zoning law, as the town board will consider extending the current moratorium on large subdivisions by another 90 days at most.

Councilman Scott Houghtaling proposed the extension as a way to allow the planning board to have the full 60 days allowed by law to complete its report on the controversial changes.

Houghtaling said that the extra time will also allow town residents to be more fully informed, via maps and summaries of the new law, before the town board decides whether to adopt the changes.

The moratorium extension could expire before 90 days, if the town board

Coeymans still target for regional landfill

EnCon is a neutral entity, McArdle said, with the expertise to conduct an in-depth review of the project's environmental impact.

Unfortunately, people still have strong negative feelings about landfills, which are not based in reality, he said. "We've had a (regional) landfill in the city for the past 50 or 60 years and most people would be hard-pressed to tell you where it is."

With the stiff environmental regulations now in effect for such facilities, the chance of seepage into nearby ground-water supplies is "virtually nil."

"This will be a well-constructed facility that could be economically advantageous to the town," he said.

A significant "host fee" could be negotiated that would remove a major share of the property tax burden for local

Library expands board to seven

The Bethlehem Public Library board of trustees has expanded from five to seven members.

As a result, there will be three open positions on the ballot this spring. The original library charter granted by the state Regents in 1913 called for five members, but in recent years the library has grown, and the board's responsibilities have expanded.

In September 1994, the trustees voted to increase their number as the school district had done some years earlier. The board's petition to expand was granted in December 1994.

The board named William F. Howard and John R. Hathaway as new trustees.

Hathaway is a Delmar resident and an architect with Einhorn, Yaffe & Prescott.

Howard is also a Delmar resident and an author of several books on the Civil War. He works as an administrator for the state.

Board members serve five year terms. Joyce Strand is not running for re-election this year, so there will be a total of three seats up for election in May.

Residents of the school district who would like to run for a seat can obtain petitions at the library. Petitions must be signed by at least 50 Bethlehem residents and are due at the school district offices on Adams Street and Hawthorne Avenue in Delmar by 4:30 p.m. on Monday, April 3.

The election will be on Wednesday, May 3.

Parents denounce Elsmere class size

By Dev Tobin

To Elsmere Elementary School parents, the numbers speak for themselves — every second, third, fourth and fifth-grade class is slated to have 26 or 27 pupils next year.

"We cannot accept 26 to 27 when the district average is 23 to 24," said Cynthia Flynn-Sobiecki, one of about a dozen impassioned parents who argued for another teacher at last week's budget workshop.

To Bethlehem Central School District administrators and school board members, trying to put together a budget with no additional teaching positions, despite an expected enrollment increase of 158 students, means just saying no, at least for now, to a 14th teacher at Elsmere.

"We work very hard to have equity in class size over time (among the district's five elementary schools)," said Superintendent Leslie Loomis. "All of us would prefer to be able to add teachers at this level, but I don't think this is the year we can do that."

Loomis pointed out that Elsmere's average class size "has done very well over the past five years," never ranking lower than third among the five schools.

Under the current proposal, Elsmere's average class size of 24.7 next year would be the highest in the district.

The other schools' average class sizes range from 23.25 (Slingerlands) to 24.35 (Clarksville). Typically, first-grade classes will have 19 to 24 pupils, while fifth-grade classes will have 23 to 28.

"We're not asking for special treatment — we would like to see all class sizes under 23," said parent Joanne Labate, pointing out that three years ago Elsmere had 14 teachers to handle a similar enrollment.

Loomis said that he will work with Elsmere Principal Dorothy Whitney on a new organizational plan that would lower second and third-grade class sizes while increasing Elsmere's first-grade class sizes, which had been projected at 19 to 20.

Even if the hiring freeze remains for next year, growing enrollment will eventually mean more teachers, several board members emphasized.

Board member Dr. Stuart Lyman noted that "to maintain a constant student-teacher ratio, we may need as many as 28 additional staff in the next five years."

Board member Dennis Stevens said the board may want to reconsider the hiring freeze to avoid a budget shock in the future.

"I'm concerned about having to take too large a bite at once," Stevens said.

BC enrollment is estimated to continue growing over the next 10 years, reaching its highest level ever in the mid-2000s.

With more than half of next year's enrollment growth occurring at the high school, Loomis noted that adding an elementary teacher cannot have the highest priority.

The board will discuss high school staffing and programs tonight (Wednesday) after its regular meeting at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of Bethlehem Central Middle School.

On the agenda for the regular meeting will be a presentation on energy performance contracting, which allows school districts to perform energy-related improvements at no cost to the taxpayers.

Elsmere Boy Scouts celebrate milestone

By Susan Graves

Boy Scout Troop 58 is celebrating its 75th anniversary this year, maintaining its distinction as oldest active troop in Bethlehem. In fact, the troop is the oldest continuously active troop in the Fort Orange District and one of the oldest in the Twin Rivers Council.

At its recent birthday dinner at the American Legion Post in Elsmere, many current and former leaders gathered to honor the troop formed in 1921.

Guertze family members go back a long way with the troop.

John Guertze was a Scout in the 1940s and remembers camping trips in the Helderbergs on the King property. "We used to hike up to Indian Ladder — ride our bikes up — and come home on Sunday."

And Donald Guertze, whose two grandsons are active in the troop today, still thinks of what he was taught when he was a Scout — "Do a good turn daily." He said once the good deed for the day was accomplished, he would move a coin from his left pocket to his right as a reminder the good deed had been done.

Former Troop 58 leader Ken Bauer said Scouting is the "greatest organization for making boys into mature adults."

Barbara Guertze, whose two sons are in Troop 58, said she has

BC backs away from natural-gas buses

By Dev Tobin

The Bethlehem Central School District's experiment with buying natural-gas-fueled buses is over for now, as the $140,000 in state grants that supported the program may have disappeared into the miasma of the state budget crisis.

Last week, the school board approved changing this year's bus proposition (for four 66-passenger buses and one 30-passenger bus) from natural gas to diesel after hearing that the district had not yet been reimbursed for the grant to buy buses in the current year.

The $100,000 grant for 1994-95 is federal money that was to come through the State Energy Office, which Gov. George Pataki has earmarked for elimination.

As a result, the $100,000 "may be in jeopardy, but we're still hoping to get it" according to Franz Zwicklbauer, assistant superintendent for business. "We were promised that money."

The $40,000 remainder of the BC grant was for buying natural-gas-fueled buses in 1995-96.

Changing from natural gas to diesel reduces the proposition amount from $399,300 to $311,300.

The district currently operates seven natural gas buses, which pollute far less than diesel buses and also are less costly to maintain, according to Robert Peters, BC's transportation supervisor.

In a related matter, the school board approved an $850,000 technology proposition for the May 3 ballot.

The proposition would fund three computers in each elementary classroom for three months and 50 laptop computers with associated peripherals to be split between the middle school and the high school.

Teachers urged the board to act on technology, arguing that much of the district's equipment had become outdated.

Both the bus and the technology propositions would be funded through five-year lease-purchase agreements with the first payments due in fall 1996. Therefore, neither proposition would have an impact on next year's taxes.

Also, state aid will reduce the net cost to taxpayers of the bus proposition by more than 45 percent, but the state does not provide any aid for technology purchases, Zwicklbauer noted.

watched them grow from "immature kids" to responsible junior assistant Scoutmasters.

"Through skills — mostly outdoors — it helps them learn how to exist," Bauer said. "They have self-confidence in their ability to do almost anything."

Troop 58, sponsored by the American Legion, continues to lean heavily on outdoor programs to foster self-reliance. "There (outdoors) they learn to cooperate with their fellows, cooking, collecting firewood and digging a latrine," said Bauer.

The Guertzes agree that skills learned in Scouting are lifelong advantages. Even when accidents occur, "It's a learning experience," John Guertze said.

Though numbers have fluctuated throughout the years, Troop 58 is going strong with 30 members. Boys can join at age 11, and receive information about Scouting in school or through members of the troop.

taxpayers.

The project's impact, he added, would "certainly be less than your typical industrial facility."

But that is little consolation for members of the Coalition of Concerned Citizens, a group of Coeymans, Ravena and Selkirk residents who remain adamantly opposed to siting a landfill in the town. A recent meeting drew more than 75 to RCS Middle School to discuss strategies for derailing the project.

The coalition has made the following points:

- Despite official assurances, state-of-the-art landfills sometimes leak.
 - The proposed landfill would be located a mile from the district's middle school and high school, plus it would be in close proximity to the Coeymans Creek, a trout-spawning tributary of the Hudson River.
 - The site would lie only a few miles south of Bethlehem's new drinking water supply on Schermerhorn Island.
 - Truck traffic on Route 144 would increase to one truck every three minutes.
 - The assessed valuation of nearby properties would plummet.
- These are just some of the groups' beliefs, according to spokeswoman Linda Marshall. "Supervisor Victor Carrk reaffirmed 100-fold (at the March 3 CCC meeting) his opposition to the project and there's a tremendous amount of support for him and the entire town board."

Like Bethlehem, Coeymans has an ordinance on the books stating that no refuse can be brought into the town for disposal, she noted. "We may need an additional ordinance to beef this up," said Marshall. "Basically this is a David and Goliath battle — the big city against the little town."

The choice of Coeymans as the site for a regional landfill was made after a lengthy selection process in which an original list of 15 sites was whittled down to three — one in Bethlehem and two in Coeymans.

Prior to the final choice being made, strong opposition to the Bethlehem site was expressed by former Supervisor Kenneth Ringler, as well as by South Bethlehem farmers whose land was eyed by the city.

For Albany — and the 14 communities now participating in the ANSWERS consortium — the need to find a new way of disposing of the region's garbage has not disappeared. In fact, it's more urgent than ever, McArdle said.

The city's Sheridan Avenue incineration plant has been closed for about a year and all the garbage coming into ANSWERS (including Bethlehem's) is being buried at the Rapp Road landfill. But Rapp Road has only about two years of useful life remaining, McArdle said.

"We don't want to be known as the town in this county with a regional dump. No one will want to invest here, and already people are talking about how their property values will decline," Carrk said.

Zoning law proposal back in planners' court

By Dev Tobin

The controversy over proposed zoning law amendments shifted from the New Scotland town board to the planning board last week.

At a special workshop meeting, the planning board got its first official look at the controversial changes that it must review and report on, and heard many of the arguments against them.

Board chairman Robert Stapf, a member of the ad hoc committee that proposed the zoning law amendments, said that part of the board's report will include written comments from residents, which he hoped would focus on solutions to perceived problems with the changes.

The town board seemed ready to vote to approve the amendments following a public hearing on Feb. 27, but several opponents pointed out that a review and report by the planning board were required by the current law.

The controversy centers on a proposed two-acre density requirement for the RA zone, which includes most of the town below the Helderberg escarpment and outside the hamlets of New Salem, Clarksville, Unionville and Feura Bush.

Current RA zoning permits one-acre lots, with half-acre lots allowed if public water and sewer are provided.

Board member Ray MacKay said that the board should limit its review to the issue of whether the proposed changes are consistent with the town's master plan, which was updated in 1994 after several years of work.

MacKay emphasized that the board "was charged with rendering a report, not rewriting the law."

MacKay commented that the two-acre density proposal, particularly for the "northeast quadrant," appeared to be "a major deviation" from the master plan, which had identified the area east of Voorheesville and north of Route 85 as being suitable for moderate to high-density residential development.

The major proposed development in that area, the 170-lot Tall Timbers subdivision on Hilton Road, would have been allowed under current zoning, but would have to win town board approval if included in the new RA zone, as the amendments and accompanying map will do.

Residents who spoke at the workshop opposed the zoning changes.

Roz Robinson, who agreed with MacKay, said changing the zoning in the northeast quadrant "flies in the face of the master plan. This is being pushed to encourage a particular developer — Tall Timbers."

Colleen Stanton urged the board to take its time for review and report, and not "rush this along" to complete its work before a moratorium on large subdivisions expires in mid-April.

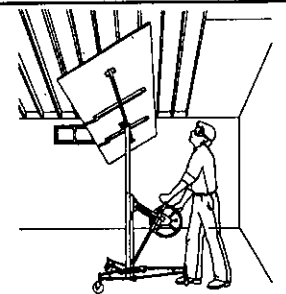

"It would be very dangerous to push this to a public hearing so quickly," said Stanton, adding that she is working to prepare a statement of the changes' impact on agriculture.

The planning board held its second workshop on the zoning changes last night, and will meet again on Tuesday, March 21, at 7 p.m.

Delmar photographers plan workshop

By Susan Graves

Two Delmar "sharpshooters" have targeted October for a photographic adventure in Acadia National Park in Maine.

Tom Knight of Knight Photographic Services and Chuck McKinney, a past president and active member of the Schenectady Photographic Society, will lead a four-day workshop that promises to offer "endless photographic possibilities" in the country's smallest national park.

Both Knight and McKinney, who are lovers of the outdoors, have already visited and photographed the park and expect to help workshop participants capture a variety of nature photo opportunities, including scenes of the coast, swamps and mountains. "There's a lot of Americana" as well as Acadia, said Knight, who has invited two National Geographic photographers to review the work of workshop members later on in the fall.

Three classroom sessions will also be included in the workshop to deal with different aspects of exposure and composition, Knight said.

The photo enthusiasts will gather at 5 a.m. in order to have an opportunity to get shots of the day's first light. Knight said participants should have a 35 mm camera with at least two lenses to get the most out of the workshop.

"It's a good opportunity for everybody to learn, even us," said McKinney, who contributed to Bethlehem's two bicentennial publications, Bethlehem Revisited and the Bethlehem Diary.

"Tom and I both have a love of landscapes and nature photography out of doors," and Acadia has unlimited opportunity, he said.

McKinney said another unique thing about the Acadia workshop is that it is for Capital District area photographers. "It's a little different approach than a lot of the workshops" on photography, he said. "It's something I've always wanted to do."

The workshop will be limited to 20 participants. The workshop will be from Wednesday, Oct. 11, to Sunday, Oct 15, and is expected to fill up quickly. The fee for the four days is $200 and a $50 deposit is required at the time of registration.

The fee does not include lodging, transportation, meals, park entrance fee, film or film processing. Fees do include a pre-workshop kit, guide service to choice locations at optimum light, classroom instruction and personal assistance in the field, a workbook with instructional material, and the critique by National Geographic photographers Yva Mamatiuk and

Deputies arrest three on DWI charges

Sheriff's deputies from the Voorheesville patrol arrested three people recently for driving while intoxicated.

Gregory Phillips, 30, of Guilderland, was stopped on Joslin Road in Voorheesville for a traffic violation on Saturday, March 4, at about 1 a.m. After failing several field sobriety tests, he was arrested for DWI, police said. He is due to answer the charge in village court on April 3.

BC budget needs input

How thankless can an unpaid job be? You might want to ask a Bethlehem Central school board member.

Editorials

Halfway through the Bethlehem Central budget season, school board members have yet to hear from anyone who wholeheartedly supports efforts to control school spending, which has more than doubled over the past decade.

Considering a close vote last year and uncertainty about state aid, the board undertook on its own to propose a hiring freeze for next year, and to ask the administration for reductions in the "normal" growth of the budget.

The response of the community, judging by parent speakers at recent work sessions on athletics, technology and K-8 staffing and programs, is unanimous — spend more, and we will help you pass the budget.

Parent participation in the budget process is expected and to be applauded. But where are the district residents who are in favor of controlling school spending?

Perhaps some of them have ideas on where school operations could be made more efficient. Perhaps some of them are concerned that relentlessly higher school taxes will force them to sell their homes.

Maybe so, but we don't know, because they have not shared their thoughts with the public at school board meetings, or even in letters to the editor of The Spotlight.

There are three more budget meetings this month, Wednesday evenings in the auditorium of Bethlehem Central Middle School. All district residents have the responsibility to speak now and not wait for the vote.

Cost or quality control?

It's both unexpected and encouraging to learn that Bethlehem Central School District spending for special education is starting to come under control.

According to Cheryl MacCulloch, BC's director of pupil personnel services, referrals for "psychoeducational" evaluation are down by almost 50 percent from three years ago.

MacCulloch's proposal that 13 students be returned to the district from BOCES has been approved. The move will save more than $100,000. We hope this cost of savings will not come at the cost of quality education.

Mighty Caseys

It's hard to believe that our Tri-Village Little League will start its 41st season this spring. Or that more than 600 youngsters between 7 to 12 will participate. These are highly impressive statistics. Good news is that the program is about $1700 richer as a result of the Las Vegas Night fund-raiser of last Saturday.

The Little Leaguers and their parents are well aware of the time, patience and attention given by the coaches and other adults who volunteer each season. Let's hope the support of parents and the general public continues during the coming season.

'Take your time' on new zoning ordinance

Editor, The Spotlight:

The following was submitted as an open letter to the New Scotland Planning Board.

You are being charged with the complicated task of reviewing the proposed changes to the Town of New Scotland's Zoning Law. The revised zoning law will be used as a tool to guide the Town of New Scotland's development and future planning proposals for the next 15-20 years.

Some of you who spoke at the meeting held on Monday, Feb. 27 at the high school indicated you never got the final revised document for your 60-day review as required by the town's zoning law. I personally contacted each one of you on the afternoon of Feb. 27, with the exception of Ms. Belleville who was in Florida. All of you admitted to me that as the process of updating the town's zoning laws was being conducted by the ad hoc committee, you were advised of the committee's meeting dates and times but were never given the intricate details of what the committee was doing regarding the actual changes to the zoning law. All of you admitted to me that you were never given a final document for your review.

What does all of this tell you? Did the ad hoc committee want your input to be minimal? Did the ad hoc committee have its own agenda which did not include seeking advice and recommendations from a massive pool of knowledge, namely the six members of the planning board who were not consulted? The fact that the ad hoc committee did not turn over the final document as it was required to do by law for your 60-day review indicates it lacked confidence in your knowledge and it was an insult to each and every one of you who have made sound decisions in the past.

I can see no reason for some of the blatant contradictions to the Master Plan which were incorporated into the new zoning law except that the ad hoc committee, for some unknown reason, chose to ignore what the majority of residents in our town wanted and instead catered to a small group of anti-business, anti-development residents in the Town of New Scotland who stand to gain from the proposed changes that were made.

You are all intelligent people. Realize the importance of what you are being asked to do. Take your time in the review process and seek public input. Give the residents of New Scotland the opportunity to be heard. Take the 60 days that you are allowed by law and conduct question and answer sessions in various parts of the town.

Don't be fooled by the one liners that are thrown out at you such as the increase in residential development will put a strain on our public services, or have a negative impact on our school district. Consult with those people qualified to show you the impact the zoning law changes will have on various areas of concern within our town. These changes have the capacity to impact all areas of concern, namely industrial, commercial, schools, residential, churches, community organizations, fire districts, rescue squads and any others that you can think of. You have the opportunity to decide how you want the proposed changes to impact each and every area of concern in our town. Ask yourself these questions:

- Do I want to increase industrialization and commercialism in New Scotland so that our tax base is broadened, thus allowing a greater flow of tax revenue into our town and school district?

- Will the "controlled growth" of residential development in those areas of town designated by the Master Plan harm the school district or will it keep the school district alive with concerned, dedicated and enthusiastic residents?

- Do I want to maintain the abundant "pool" of volunteers that we draw from for our fire districts, our rescue squads, our community organizations such as the Kiwanis, our PTA and our churches?

- Does the recent proposal by Councilman Decker to divide our town into a northern and southern area create unity within our town or does it create more divisiveness?

Only you can decide if the impact of the proposed changes creates a picture of "doom and gloom" for the Town of New Scotland or if it allows for controlled growth and at the same time minimizes the impact on all areas of concern in a manner that is fair to all of our town's residents and in a way that we all can live with.

I appeal to each of you to understand the importance of not rushing through your review of the zoning law document. Don't take lightly your responsibility of reviewing a document which will have a dramatic impact on the lives of our town's residents. Listen to the people, and decide what you feel is in the best interest of all the residents of our town.

Adult Day Services works. Why cut it?

Editor, The Spotlight:

On behalf of the 195 members of the New York State Adult Day Services Association (NYSADSA), I would like to address the fact that Governor Pataki's proposed budget would essentially eliminate health and social adult day care programs in New York State by eliminating Medicaid reimbursement for adult day health care services and the long-term home health care program, respectively.

For the record, 90-95 percent of funding for adult day health care programs comes from Medicaid, and over 50 percent of funding for social model adult day care results from contracts with a long term home health care program. Knowing these facts, it is reasonable to assume that programs will be unable to exist in the absence of Medicaid funding.

In a political climate of cost containment, cost-effective programs such as adult day care which can be easily integrated into a managed care network should be expanded rather than eliminated.

Planners prefer banks to bologna?

Editor, The Spotlight:

Chalk up another big one for the Bethlehem planning board.

Its recent disapproval of Manning's Menu makes me wonder if it truly has the interest of the Town of Bethlehem in mind.

John Manning, a Bethlehem Central and Culinary Institute of America graduate, proposed to

As well as delaying or preventing more costly institutionalization, adult day care programs provide early intervention care to promptly recognize developing health concerns, thereby minimizing the need for hospitalizations, emergency room treatments, frequent physician office visits, etc.

On a national level, adult day care is seen as the "wave of the future;" it would be unconscionable for New York State to stand alone in making it "a thing of the past."

Teaching with technology: Schools can't be tardy

The writer of this Point of View is the Bethlehem Central School District assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction.

By Judith S. Wooster

The Bethlehem Central Board of Education has approved a significant step toward upgrading technology in the schools through a technology budget proposition much like that used to finance buses. As a result, the voters of the district will consider an $850,000 technology proposition on Wednesday, May 3, the day of the district budget vote.

The proposed Target Technology proposition would place three computers in every elementary classroom for three months of the year. The middle school and high school would receive approximately 50 computers each, accompanied by peripherals tailored to the school's curricular needs.

School-based technology committees, composed of staff and parents, would work with district technology coordinator Richard Gross to develop the specifications for the purchases and coordinate essential staff development on site. Staff development sessions will ensure that teachers have an opportunity to learn and practice the new applications targeted to their curriculum areas.

The technology proposition would not impact the debt service of the district until 1996-97. At that time, the cost to the average taxpayer is projected to be less than $20 per year for five years.

There is no doubt that technology is integral to success in the vast majority of American workplaces today, and indeed is increasingly essential in our daily lives. Though many of us may be able to get along with limited technological skills, not so for our students.

Point of View

Now and in their futures technologic expertise is and will be a necessity. Bethlehem graduates who enter college sit alongside an increasing number of students who bring with them years of experience on computers.

In this increasingly high-tech world, many teachers, parents, students and other community members are concerned that Bethlehem is not catching up and not keeping up with regard to technology.

Acting on that concern, the district Technology Committee sought advice and input from teachers, parents, students. We listened to business and community leaders, and visited exemplary school districts in order to develop the Target Technology initiative.

Specifically, long-term goals of the Target Technology initiative are:

- Target technology for each grade level across the curriculum;
- Put computers in the hands of all teachers and all students;
- Provide staff development for all target technology;
- Upgrade our computer labs;
- Automate school libraries;
- Network schools to one another and the outside world;
- Provide ongoing maintenance and upgrades; and

- Provide ongoing support for staff.

What will we see in our schools as we realize the goals of this Target Technology initiative? In a busy first-grade classroom, students take turns learning to read a "Living Book," Just Grandma and Me. Students with widely divergent abilities read with or without assistance from a narrator, word clues and graphic surprises.

Third-graders in another building are researching countries of the world. Parent volunteers help students and teachers share their information using a simple but impressive graphics program.

Meanwhile, a group of middle school students use spreadsheets to discover the most efficient packaging for cereal. Others use computer-assisted design software to develop containers that will draw a greater market share of shoppers. In a nearby science classroom, students work in research groups of four to solve a mystery about the solar system.

In the school library, students work one-to-one with senior citizens, helping them master on-line telecommunications in order to communicate with out-of-town family. Down the hall, a small group of students led by their teacher uses assistive technology to practice speech sounds. The computer records student pronunciations and allows them to improve by comparing their sound to a correct model.

At the high school level, several students in the library check collections around the country for information about research topics using the World Wide Web. One student communicates by e-mail with a university-based science mentor. In a second language classroom students tele-communicate in the target language with others across the world.

In physics, students use probes to conduct experiments that enhance their understanding of the world around them. Engineering students draft plans electronically for the thermally efficient snow-winter shelters they will build. In the Writing Center some students compose a newspaper while others work on college essays.

of Education and the community have supported modest but steady increases for technology equipment. These funds have brought more powerful computers, graphing calculators, laser disk players, CD-ROM technology, and other applications into more of our classrooms, library media centers and labs. Critical staff development has led to greater teacher expertise but created greater demand for equipment as well.

Our Board of Education and community face this need for technology in a difficult budget year. Can we afford this expenditure? There was a time not all that long ago when one could enter college, get and hold a job, spend a full and productive career, and never need to access information, telecommunicate, analyze

There is no doubt that technology is integral to success in the vast majority of American workplaces today, and indeed is increasingly essential in our daily lives.

But this is a glimpse into the future. Where are we at present? In Bethlehem we currently have the equivalent of one computer per classroom. However, approximately 85 percent of these computers are incapable of running current and emerging software.

Several of our neighboring Suburban Council districts have recently funded from three to five computers per classroom. In the recent past, the Bethlehem Board data or calculate electronically. Today and in the future, such a life is simply not possible.

The implications of technology in the information age are quite clear. Technologic literacy is a requisite for each and every graduate. Even in this challenging economic climate we believe we must move forward with deliberate speed on this important mission.

We must ask, "Can we afford not to?"

Board misrepresents zoning proposal

Editor, The Spotlight:

A new zoning ordinance was recently proposed by the New Scotland town board.

After sitting through two lengthy meetings, listening to residents on both sides of this issue, and listening to members of the town and planning boards that drew up the proposed ordinance, my conclusion is a sad commentary on how our current town board is functioning.

Whether or not I support the new zoning ordinance isn't the central issue. The conduct of certain members of the town board, along with the commissioner of the planning board concerns me more than anything.

I say this because of misrepresentations they made regarding the new proposal, for allowing personal interests to take precedence over public interest, and finally, as a governing body for the town, for tramping all over existing town law in their haste to pass this new ordinance.

Concerning misrepresentation of the facts:

- Members of the board stated

the new zoning ordinance supported the town's master plan, when in fact its major impact would eliminate a key aspect of the master plan, namely a medium to high density residential zone;

• These same board members stated the proposed ordinance would promote controlled development within the town. In fact, and I believe by their intent, this ordinance will inhibit growth and development within the town;

• Board members stated this was a minor "tweak" to the existing zoning law when trying to slip it by town residents, and referred to it as a totally new zoning ordinance when defending themselves against violating town law by the method they were using to enact it into law.

Concerning personal interest over public interest, board member Ramundo lives in an area of the town slated as medium to high density residential development. I believe that board member Ramundo put her own personal interest, and that of a small group of area residents, ahead of the interest of the town overall.

The public interest of the town was outlined in a master plan which took 10 years, $70,000 and input from a diverse group of town residents, bipartisan input from the planning board, and expertise from one of the area's premier engineering firms to develop.

The personal interest of Mrs. Ramundo and the others took five and a half months with input from the Democrats.

As far as I am concerned, election day cannot come soon enough for a couple of the board members. In the meantime, I urge townspeople to get involved and see how this board is conducting our business.

Let your board know how your feel, not just on specific issues, but on how they go about the business of running this town.

Yield for emergency vehicles

Editor, The Spotlight:

Thursday at about 7 p.m. I was driving east on Kenwood Ave. towards Delmar. I had to pull over three times within a few hundred feet to yield to on coming emergency vehicles, including the Delmar Ambulance. The traffic light at the Toll Gate was out. I assumed there was an accident.

The third time I pulled over at Union Avenue and so did the car behind me, but we were not completely off the pavement. To my horror, a newish beige colored sports car abruptly pulled around us, crossing into the opposite lane as emergency vehicles were coming around the curve and were approaching us. Here in the upstate New York communities we depend on volunteers to answer our medical and fire emergencies—that driver's actions were totally irresponsible.

The precious gift of sight

Editor, The Spotlight:

Most people take their eyesight for granted. But to thousands of New Yorkers who are blind or suffer from serious visual defects, sight is a most precious gift.

To assist in alleviating a shortage of eye tissue, hospital personnel have for the past few years approached the families of any patient whose death offers the chance to benefit another with the gift of sight.

The Empire State Lions Clubs have played a major rôle in the success of the eye bank programs. It is through the untiring efforts that many who are unable to see are now able to have their sight restored.

Clearwater member critiques water system

Editor, The Spotlight:

Members of Clearwater for Bethlehem have made studies of the problems associated with the Town's new water system. Attorney Joseph A. Glazer has presented the results of the studies in a petition to Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) asking that the permit be modified, suspended or revoked. I would like to explain one of the reasons for the petition — the withholding of a crucial design and hydrogeological report from DEC, Department Of Health (DOH) and town residents.

The design engineer, J. Kenneth Fraser, used Dunn Corporation, a Geoscience firm, to study Schermerhorn Island as a possible source of ground water. Dunn Corporation submitted a report dated Dec. 6, 1991. The report contained a design of a 1500-foot long trench with two barriers. The objective was to take water from the upper part of the aquifer only and "hopefully" to exclude water from the lower aquifer because it was of unacceptable quality. This is the only Dunn Corporation report used by DOH to approve the project and the only Dunn report in the town library.

In April, 1992, Mr. Kenneth Fraser submitted a two-barrier plan to DEC and DOH but the trench was only 1,000 feet long. The reduction in length was to save money but it meant that a yield of six million gallons per day (MGD) was highly improbable. The Cogen contract was approved in April. This meant that the $10.7 million well project and a commitment by the town were based on a highly speculative design.

Sometime in May or June of 1992 test pits were dug next to the sea wall and the sea wall was found to be almost impermeable. This meant that the two barrier conceptual design was impossible. The good quality shallow-aquifer water would have to flow down into the deeper part of the aquifer, mix with poor quality water, and the mixture would then flow underneath the sea wall up into the trench. The yield would be far below six MGD. Did the consultants notify DEC or DOH of this very important finding? No. Instead they decided to use the entire depth of the aquifer which was the only way to obtain a yield of 6 MGD.

Additional testing was done to confirm that a yield of 4.3 MGD could be obtained for a 1,000-foot long infiltration gallery. Tests also confirmed the Dec., 1991, report, the water in the deeper part of the aquifer had poor quality. A second report on Schermerhorn Island was prepared for J. Kenneth Fraser dated Sept. 15, 1992. This report was never sent to DEC, DOH nor to the town library.

The second report only recommended one barrier. A million dollar clay wall barrier is being built to exclude iron-laden water that was incorrectly assumed as coming from the soil on the west or land side. However, if standard good engineering practice had been followed and a flow-net analysis been made the expensive clay wall barrier would have been found to be completely useless.

If a proper sanitary survey had been made, the consultants would have found that iron, manganese, ammonia, organic compounds and carbon dioxide all are coming from sludge deposits on the bottom of the Hudson River. The clay wall barrier actually maximizes the concentrations of these pollutants. It is absurd to waste one million dollars and at the same time double the cost of chemicals and ozone needed for treating the water.

The consultants' complete lack of concern for keeping iron in solution i.e. keeping oxygen out of the water, is very disturbing. The infiltration gallery eventually will clog up with iron hydrate and/or iron bacteria. The town should have an experienced designer make an appraisal of well failure.

The organic analyses done on the water samples during the two-month test pumping are not representative of the water that will eventually be taken from the gallery because during the pump test a contractor was de-watering an adjacent section of trench. Actually better quality shallow aquifer water stored on land and underneath the river was being drawn into the test well by the de-watering operation.

There is also good evidence that organic material may have been removed in taking and processing the samples before final analyses in the laboratory. However, the laboratory consultant refuses to talk to me, probably because a Clearwater member requested an investigation by DOH of the strange findings in the so-called pilot plant study.

I challenge Mr. Fraser to present one credible authority who thinks laboratory results take precedence over a proper sanitary survey and does not use ammonia as an indicator of human pollution—and to present any public water supply in North America or Europe, where the ammonia in the raw water routinely ranges from 1.0 to 2.7 parts per million.

In need of a home

Working from home suits Delmar attorney to a T

By Susan Graves

You might not agree, but one of the advantages of working out of your home is being able to work even when you're sick.

For Delmar attorney Sherry Chase, who recently moved her law practice to her home on Harrison Avenue, just about everything related to the arrangement is a plus.

I'm not the sort of person who would be tempted to clean the house.

Sherry Chase

"I never would have made it to work last week if I had to drive," said Chase, who was able, however, to make it to her office at home when she was suffering from a severe sinus infection.

Chase, 40, who mainly does appellate court work, said working from home makes it much easier to manage her time.

"For one thing, there's no travel time; you can start working as soon as the kids get on the bus," she explained.

And, "With appellate work, I can do everything I need to do right from here," she said.

Chase feels she can also give her clients better attention.

"I can answer my own phone, and the whole thing saves on my overhead as a result," she said.

Among other things, Chase said she saves on secretarial and transportation costs.

"My sense is people don't need to go to an elaborate wood-paneled office with a secretarial staff to feel they're in competent hands," said Chase, adding that people realize that they pay for the "extras" in an attorney's work setting.

Chase began her law career after graduation from Northeastern University Law School with the district attorney's office in Brooklyn.

She then went on to work for the attorney general's office in Albany. After that she served as general counsel for the Dental Society of New York for two years before deciding to go into private practice.

Chase's appellate work primarily deals with criminal or family court appeals where people who child and one where the court agreed child support payments had been appropriately increased.

She also recently won a case where an HMO panel decided to restore medical benefits for a young woman who needed surgery.

"We prevailed there; it was very gratifying," Chase said.

Working at home is also a big asset as far as her children are concerned, said Chase.

It's important for Chase to be available for her two daughters while still being able to maintain a professional life.

"It also gives me the flexibility of coming back into the office after they go to sleep," she said.

Her office is fully equipped with traditional business gear, including a computer, which she said will eventually become her at-home law library with the help of CD-ROM.

The tranquility of the home environment also lends itself to Chase's appellate court work. And she quipped, "I'm not the sort of person who would be tempted to clean the house."

For information about Chase's new at-home practice, call 475-1020.

Dr. Geoffrey B. Edmunds, D.D.S.

Computers in Dentistry

Computers have been programmed to help us serve our patients more effectively and efficiently. We are truly amazed at how helpful they are. With computers, even the most overwhelming tasks can be done in a relatively small amount of time.

In fact, a computer with word processing software has helped write this article, and is capable of storing it in the memory bank for future reference. The computer stores our patients' names, addresses, account information and other important financial or personal data. Some computer programs allow us to schedule appointments in the computer. Possibly the most important capability is the computers insurance submission and tracking. This allows us to submit claims for the insurance and follow up on them if the insurance company has not responded within a certain amount of time.

While computers do help us save time and effort, we are aware that sometimes patients find the computer printouts difficult to understand. However, we are always willing to help if a patient is having difficulty. The new technological advances which computers have provided us with allow us to concentrate on the most important part of our practice — the patients and their dental treatment.

Cold shooting dooms further V'ville hopes

By Joshua White

The Voorheesville girls basketball team's historic run to reach the state competition ended with a 37-31 loss to league rival Cohoes last week in the Section II Class C-CC final at Adirondack Community College.

The two teams had met earlier in the season with the Lady Birds winning at Cohoes, 57-44, and Cohoes winning at Voorheesville by 10 points.

The Lady Birds were plagued by shooting woes throughout the game. Converting on only 12 of 43 field goal attempts, the team shot 28 percent from the floor.

"We had a lot of good offensive opportunities, but we didn't cash them in," said head coach Jack Adams. "Maybe if we had a better start, there might have been a different outcome. Also, we missed many uncontested layups."

Cohoes came out with strong emotion in the first quarter and jumped to a 14-10 lead. Both teams only managed eight points in the second quarter.

The Lady Tigers had a narrow 22-18 advantage at the intermission. The key stretch of the game fell between the two-minute mark of the third quarter and the midpoint of the fourth period.

Cohoes took advantage of their trips to the foul line and outscored Voorheesville 11-2 during this stretch to expand what had been a two-point lead to an 11-point advantage.

Despite trailing by 11 points, the Lady Birds refused to give in. With four minutes remaining, V'ville answered with two baskets to cut the lead to six points.

"At that point, I realistically thought we could have pulled the game out," said Adams.

Down by six at the 2:50 mark, the Lady Birds had three put-back chances to cut into the lead even more. Unfortunately, the girls couldn't convert their opportunities and were forced to foul the rest of the game.

"Give Cohoes the credit they deserve," said Adams. "They hit their free throws when they needed to." In addition, Adams said that Cohoes' experience may have made the difference.

"Cohoes was the defending champion and lost the C-CC title game last year. They are a veteran team and had already played in a game of this magnitude. Their goal was to erase their memories of the C-CC game of last year."

Sophomore Becky Dawson scored 12 points to lead the Lady Birds. Sophomore Kristin Person chipped in with seven. The loss left the Lady Birds with a record of 17-7 and the Section II Class C title.

Reaching the Class C-CC finals was the greatest milestone a girls basketball team at Voorheesville had ever achieved. The Class C title was the Lady Birds' first in school history.

"It was the best year ever for this program," said Adams. "The kids worked hard during practices and games all season. More importantly, everyone had fun and committed to improving themselves."

The Lady Birds will miss the presence of four graduating seniors next season: Kristin Dougherty, Jennifer Person, Kelly Griffin and Cristie Arena.

However, Voorheesville will return the majority of this year's squad. Key returnees will include sophomore's Dawson and Person, freshman Jane Meade and junior Jyll Klefbeck. Also, more talent is waiting in the wings from their 19-0 junior varsity team.

"We're a young team which has gained a valuable experience," concluded Adams. "If we continue to work at it, we have a lot more good things to look forward to."

BBC playoff action heats up

The Bethlehem Basketball Club's version of the "Final Four" was held Sunday at the Middle School gym.

In two high scoring tussles, the Sonics and the Nuggets advanced to the final game in the NBA division. The Sonics, behind Adam Zaranko's strong rebounding and defense and Matt Wereb's sterling floor play, trimmed the Suns 64-50. Caleb Bacon and Jon Burroughs combined for 28 for the Suns.

The Nuggets were never threatened in a 50-25 victory over the Warriors. Four Nuggets scored in double figures in the win, with Reid O'Brien's 13 leading the charge. Travis Davey had 13 in defeat.

In ACC semi-final action, great playmaking by Rob Shaye and the strong rebounding of Bobby Pasquini helped Virginia upend Wake Forest 45-24. Kevin Collen netted eight for the losers.

Also, making it to the final game was North Carolina, which beat Maryland 46-31. Mitch Lane threw in 28 for the victors; Mike Pascone and Greg Thomson combined for 20 in the loss.

Consolation games were also held in the NBA and ACC. In the NBA, Matt Hough's seven points and numerous rebounds were not enough as the Knicks beat back the Spurs 50-20. Mike Conway's nine inspired the Knicks. Finally, the Bulls edged the Hornets 49-43. Pat Hughes had 16 for the Bulls, Adam Fryar pitched in with 13 for the Hornets.

In the ACC, Georgia Tech eased past Duke 39-27. Brendan Hoole and Mike Kotlow's all around defensive play was too much for the Blue Devils; Zach Capobianco had seven for the losers. A scrappy Clemson squad just missed against Florida State 27-22. Alex Gerou and Chris Leckerling led the losers which Ryan Sweeney's 15 highlighted the Florida State victory.

The regular season continued at the Big East level. Boston College thumped Syracuse 46-37. Jim Foster had 15 for the victors, Andy Bratrud the same for Syracuse.

In a squeaker Miami beat St. John's 46-44. Anthony Berghela and Mark Melcher combined for 26 in the victory, Clarke Doody had 13 in defeat.

Georgetown just got by Pitt 32-21, as Dan Israel and Steve Troiano each had 10 for the winners and Brad Bierman six for the losers.

In the day's final game Providence, with Nathan Crouse's seven leading the way, beat Villanova 32-25; Jim Roembke's four points and hustling defense topped the Villanova effort.

Wild hook shot ruins V'ville boys

By Kelly Griffin

The Voorheesville boys basketball team was felled by Colonial Council foe Mechanicville, 48-47, in the Section II, Class C-CC title game.

The loss came soon after the 'Birds clinched the Section II Class C title with a win over Middleburgh.

Voorheesville and Mechanicville stayed neck and neck all night on Tuesday, March 7, at the Glens Falls Civic Center. With just a few minutes left to play, it was still anyone's game.

"It was a great game all around," said coach Skip Carrk. "We knew what we had to do, and we developed our game plan accordingly. I couldn't have asked for anything more from the kids.

"They executed the plays to perfection. Both teams should be proud of the way they played that night. It was a terrific fight. Either team would have deserved the win. As it was, someone had to be the loser."

With 28 seconds left on the clock, a Mechanicville player hit an off-balance, running hook shot to put the Red Raiders up by one, 48-47.

Voorheesville had two opportunities to answer as the seconds ticked away, but were unsuccessful. The boys finished 18-7.

"I'm so proud of the kids that I really can't even put it into words," Carrk said. "All year has been like a highlight reel, with players like (Adam) Keller and (Mike) Beanel making all-star teams and David (Burch) being named MVP a couple of times. What a superb season!"

Junior Andy Bayus came up big for Voorheesville, scoring 11 points on five three-pointers. Burch had a great night on the defensive end as he grabbed 10 rebounds and blocked 12 shots. Also managed 13 points.

Keller was also integral in the team's performance. "Adam did a great job getting the ball to the right people at the right times," said Carrk. "It was great distribution on his part."

The team will lose Burck Keller, Jacob Van Ryn, Josh White, Jason Delhi and Robert Baron.

Hockey outlook bright

By Zack Beck

Coach Tom Gladd and the Bethlehem hockey team found their first year of play on the varsity level a challenge.

"We had to get this year out of the way," Gladd said. "The kids played their hearts out and we got a good taste of the competition."

The team finished with a 1-22 record and will undoubtedly improve next season with many underclassmen returning after a year of experience.

Despite several lopsided losses, Bethlehem had some proud moments on the ice. "The kids never quit and they played hard," Gladd said. "We will see significant improvement next year."

The team, which started with 32 players and lost only one injury, had four players named to the Capital District honor roll mention squad: Captain Brian Mattox, assistant captain Craig Moseman, junior John Czajka and sophomore Ethan Drake.

"We are just getting started and it will be several years until we are well established," Gladd said.

Pop Warner signups

The Bethlehem Pop Warner League will hold registration Saturday, March 25, at the Bethlehem Town Hall, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Registration fees are $40 for cheerleaders, $75 for Jr. Pee Wee football, and $100 for Pee Wee, Midget and Sr. Midget football.

Cites parental interference

Skip Carrk resigns

by Kelly Griffin

After seven years as the varsity boys basketball coach at Voorheesville high school, Skip Carrk has decided to move on, citing an inability to deal with criticism leveled at him by parents, community members and school administration.

Carrk has had the longest tenure in that position of any coach since the late 1960s.

"I'm very proud of my record as coach at Voorheesville, and of my accomplishments there," said Carrk. "This past season especially has been a great experience," he said, referring to this season's Class C title and 18-7 overall record.

"We've had the best record, none the farthest, and played the longest than any other year that I've coached."

If everything seems to be going so well on the court, why resign?

"I've been worn down by off-the-court problems," said Carrk.

"Parents of players have been on my case for the last two or three years, and I just can't take it anymore."

Carrk said these difficulties were not completely unexpected.

"When I decided to take the job way back when, I was warned. I had people tell me that parents around here would create friction.

"But I believed in my abilities and tried my best," he continued. "In the past seven years, a lot of positive things have happened. I love coaching and I love these kids, but enough is enough. I can't deal with it more."

These reasons for leaving are similar to those cited by several other successful coaches at Vville who have complained about overly aggressive parents and fans who try and interfere.

"I coach in a way that I feel is effective," said Carrk. "Just like any other coach."

BC swimmers gain experience

Six members of the Bethlehem Central boys varsity swimming and diving team represented Section II at the New York State Public High School Athletic Association Intersectional Championship meet held at Erie County Community College in Buffalo on March 9 and 10.

Section II finished in seventh place in overall points, with 110.

The highest place finisher from the Section was Guilderville's

Brian McKenna, who was second in the backstroke.

Bethlehem swimmers who finished in the top 16 of their events, and therefore qualified to swim in finals competition and earn points were junior Adriaan Denkers, who was 15th in the backstroke, and freshman Steve Corson, who was 15th in the 500 yard freestyle.

Sophomore Brian Strickler was 18th in the 100 yard breaststroke and twenty-first in the 200 yard individual medley. Senior diver Matt St. Lucia finished in 20th place. Sophomore Reid Putnam was 20th in the 200 yard freestyle and senior Pat Gallagher was 21st in the 100 yard butterfly.

Bethlehem coach Ken Neff, who accompanied his athletes to Buffalo, commented favorably on the overall quality of the team and expressed hopes for next year. "You just can't beat experience."

Deli

6-1 margin.

The Rural Place Homeowners Association filed its own Article 78 action and on April 4, 1994, state Supreme Court Justice George Ceresia upheld their suit and voided the planning board's site plan approval.

"We're commencing an action similar to what the Rural Place homeowners did," Biscone said. "Mr. Manning would like to, and plans to, put a deli and catering service in that location."

The appeal will basically rest on two grounds, Biscone said.

First, he said, the planning board did not render its decision in a timely fashion. "The decision was tardy pursuant to the rules governing this type of proceeding," he said. "The decision came on the 63rd day after a (Dec. 6, 1994) public hearing was held and the law stipulates that a decision must be made in 62 days or else the project is deemed approved."

There is also the safety question, which nearly all of the board members voting "no" cited in explaining their votes, Biscone said.

Manning complied with the zoning regulations that called for a minimum of eight parking spaces for the business based on the square footage of the building. "We actually exceeded that by providing for 10 spaces — 25 percent more than the law requires. To rule that a safety problem existed without the benefit of a traffic study or survey is arbitrary and unfair."

The board brought up the issue of safety of school children waiting for the bus in the morning near the corner of Delaware Avenue and Rural Place, Biscone said. "We told them that we had made contact with the school district and that they were willing to discuss our idea of having the school bus pull into the (delicatessen) parking lot in the morning to pick up the kids. That would have actually improved the safety situation."

The planning board now faces its second lawsuit within 12 months over the question of whether Manning should be allowed to proceed. Manning also intends to convert the second floor of the building into a two-bedroom apartment.

Rural Place residents, who raised more than $10,000 for an appeal through a series of fundraisers and by dipping into their own pockets, are sticking by their guns.

There are only 14 homes on their dead-end street, one of the oldest in the town, and residents appear as determined as ever to protect what they see as their vital self-interests.

"It was clear at the last town board meeting that no one is opposed to his establishing a business in the town," said Diane Everhart of 18 Rural Place. "But if you live in this community and you pass by this street, you know the situation.

"I leave at 6:30 or a quarter to seven (in the morning) for work and, I'm not joking, there are times I have to wait a long time to make a left onto Delaware. There is really no time of day where there is a low volume of traffic. Delaware Avenue is the main thoroughfare for people going into Albany, not just for people living locally, but for the Hilltowns as well."

Everhart added that a group of Rural Place neighbors volunteered their own time to stand out on Delaware Avenue and count the cars going by. "We made that information available to the board," she said.

"I'm surprised he's following this course of action," said Mark Peckham of 9 Rural Place, "especially in light of the great lengths the planning board went to in trying to obtain all the factual information about the nature of this development."

The traffic problem cannot be underestimated, he said. "This is a narrow, dead-end street" and any extra traffic emanating from a business on the corner could make it impossible for emergency vehicles to get through.

Even if the courts "remanded the project back to the planning board because of a technical violation," based on the mass of information collected through public input and board deliberations, "I would be very surprised if the planning board changed its mind," Peckham said.

Moratorium

approves a new zoning law, he added.

If approved following a public hearing on March 29, this would be the second 90-day extension of the original six-month moratorium. The first extension was due to expire on April 13.

"I wish I had better foresight to see that it would take longer," Houghtaling said.

This extension will apply to subdivisions of more than 10 lots, but will not include commercial and industrial projects, which were restricted under the previous moratoria, he said.

Although he voted to schedule the public hearing, Councilman Edward Donohue reiterated his opposition to the moratorium, which he said "sends the message that we want to stop everything and not even attempt to have progress."

Supervisor Herb Reilly also voted to set the public hearing, but said he would also oppose the extension.

"What's the harm of letting the moratorium lapse?" he asked "I don't see any avalanche of developers waiting to come in."

The additional time will give the planning board about two weeks beyond April 13 to finish its report, which will be appreciated by planning board chairman Robert Stapf, according to Councilman Richard Decker.

The planning board had scheduled workshops for March 6, 13 and 20 in an attempt to produce a report by the end of the month.

While many of the changes are relatively minor and/or reflective of the town's master plan update, the most controversial change for many residents remains the proposed doubling of the density requirement (to one lot per two acres) in the RA zone, which includes most of the town below the Helderberg escarpment and outside the hamlets of New Salem, Clarksville, Unionville and Feura Bush.

Former Republican town board candidate Robert Vollaro pointed out that the changes "do not track the master plan," and urged the board to retain a consultant to review the changes.

"If you're going to do it, you should do it right," he said.

MUMM'S THE WORD... Mummenschanz, that is!

By Mel Hyman

One of the advertising blurbs tells it all. "For children who think they are adults and for adults who still believe they are children at heart" — The New York Times.

What the critic is describing is the ever-popular Mummenschanz mime show. Of course, it's possible you've never heard of this famous masked-mime troupe that has won rave reviews from audiences around the world.

Then again, if you have heard of them and have never seen them — like yours truly — then don't say you didn't have the chance. Because the troupe will be returning to the Empire Center at The Egg on Friday, March 24, for a 7:30 p.m. show.

The title of this year's program is "Parade." You can bet there will be the usual assortment of fantastic masks, costumes and foam rubber monsters all mixed into a fascinating combination of acting, mime, dance, puppetry and magic.

The two founders of Mummenschanz staged their first production in 1969. The earliest venues were tiny student theaters in which most of the audience had to stand up in order to see the action.

The original productions were a mixture of mime and spoken scenes, but to bridge the problems of language the two Swiss performers, Bernie Schurch and Andres Bossard, decided to eliminate the spoken words and rely just on masks and mime.

Soon their audiences grew and their fame spread across Europe and into South America, the U.S., Japan, Israel and the former Soviet Union.

The artistry of the troupe, which has expanded into threesomes, foursomes and more can in no way be described as gross or overstated. In fact, the subtlety of their movements and expressions might often not be apparent until after you leave the theater.

Once again, Clive Barnes from the New York Times: "When you leave the theater, you may find that the finer points of Mummenschanz's performance have only begun to register. Little Japanese paper flowers of suggestion have been tossed into the water and they open long after the curtain has fallen."

Tickets are $18 for adults and $12 for children 12-and-under. It's definitely a one-of-a-kind thing and since their last performance at the Egg was in 1990, it could be the next century before you have the chance to view this evolving experiment in theater once again.

Classic mime techniques combined with bizarre costumes and props enable the Swiss troupe Mummenschanz to create theatrical illusions for audiences of all ages. The group appears at the Egg on Friday, March 24, at 7:30 p.m.

Cinderella meets her fella ...

The timeless rags-to-riches fairy tale, Cinderella, is presented in an American Family Theatre musical production at the Egg on Sunday, March 26, at 3 p.m. Tickets are $12 for adults and $10 for children 12 and under. For info and reservations, call the Egg Box Office at 473-1845.

Theater magic made by clever revival of old Gershwin show

Sitting in the New York theater waiting for a preview performance of Crazy for You almost three years ago, I was not prepared for the knockout revival of a 1920s Gershwin show, Girl Crazy. It was a performance where the overture got a standing ovation as it contained hit after hit written by Gershwin.

The producers of the revival received permission to add some of the late composer's best work from other shows into this early show.

The device worked like a charm and the performances were a match as was the direction. Fast-paced and highly comic, it also featured Harry Groener, up until then best known for playing a whiny divorced man on the TV comedy, Dear John.

Martin P. Kelly

In Crazy for You, Groener plays a song and dance man in the great tradition. He can handle a love scene with aplomb, shoot a comic line to the balcony and sing and dance with charm and grace. He's still in the New York show and after playing the role so many times, his performance is even more brilliant.

Kirby Ward is playing the role of the rich young man in the touring company of Crazy for You which arrives at Proctor's Theater in Schenectady Tuesday, March 21.

Ward's credits are considerable, having originated this role in London and Berlin productions.

A veteran performer in musical theater, Ward has been captivating audiences throughout the country in touring productions. He toured in Showboat with Donald O'Connor and as George M. Cohan in George M.

But Crazy for You is more than a one-man production. It requires great ensemble playing and marvelous chorus dancing and singing. From all reports, this touring production has matched New York's in this regard.

Performances at Proctor's are Tuesday, March 21, through Saturday, March 24 at 8 p.m. and Thursday, Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m.

Information and tickets available at 346-6204.

Nonsense just won't slow down as Schenectady holds over show

When Dan Goggins wrote his spoof of church fundraising in the form of Nonsense where a group of nuns put on a musical revue to raise funds to bury dead comrades, little did he realize the success he'd enjoy.

At one time he had 28 professional productions going on throughout the country. Now, with the rights open to community groups, there are even more presentations.

One such production struck a gold mine when it opened two weeks ago and sold out quickly at the Schenectady Light Opera House.

Two additional performances of Nonsense have been scheduled by director Orlando Pigiavento for this Saturday and Sunday, March 18 and 19, to accommodate the large response to the show.

For tickets (if available) call 355-1699.

New musical revue gets life after Delmar dinner theater

When the new production, Romance on Wry, a revue using familiar songs with comic observations on love and marriage, opened last weekend at the First United Methodist Church of Delmar, there were hopes for an after-life.

Almost immediately after the first downbeat, several bookings were received for this summer on the road and in June, 1996 in Cobleskill.

The Kenwood Avenue church will host the Riverview Entertainment Productions' presentation in a dinner theater setting again this Sunday, March 19.

The dinner theater presentation is the fourth to be done at the church with a prime rib dinner served at 5 p.m.

Grace DiBattista Hepburn, Larry Maranville, Bill Hickman and Melissa Putterman Hoffmann form the quartet of performers in this revue with Trudy Ferguson as accompanist.

$19 for dinner and show. Reservations at 463-3811.
