Reilly vows to raise ruckus at caucus

By Dev Tobin

Heat wave or no, it promises to be a hot time in the Voorheesville American Legion hall on Thursday, as town Democrats gather at 7 p.m. to formally nominate their candidates for the fall election.

Supervisor Herb Reilly, the party's standard bearer for the past eight years and a town board member for 10 years before that, said he will "raise a ruckus" at the caucus over being rejected as a candidate for reelection by the town Democratic committee.

The committee itself has made no formal endorsement, but Councilwoman Clare Decker, appointed to the town board in June to replace her late husband Richard, is evidently its candidate for supervisor.

New businesses offset closings

Local leaders buoyed by steady influx

By Mel Hyman

Despite the recent closing of several longtime retail establishments, local business leaders are buoyed by the ongoing influx of fresh commercial blood into Bethlehem.

Many of the new kids on the block may not make it — a total of 45 new businesses have opened recently in the Bethlehem-New Scotland area — but others will, and a number have already shown the ability to adapt to changing times.

As far as the overall business climate, there's no magic pill that will suddenly improve the situation in Bethlehem. Times are tough all over, says Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce vice chairwoman Cathy Griffin, and have been for about five or six years.

But one thing that could help, leaders agree, is a new supermarket.

"When we surveyed our members more than a year ago, they were overwhelming

"If people have to go across the river for a Shop 'n Save or Price Chopper, that's where they'll take care of their dry cleaning and quick printing."

The possibility of a new Price Chopper, now proposed for Slingerlands, seems to appeal to chamber members, DeLaney said. It could definitely help keep shoppers here in town.

Dr. Freed goes to D.C., applauds health reform

Dr. Howard Freed of Slingerlands has a bird's eye view of one of the country's most prominent families — the first family in Washington, D.C.

Freed began his association with the Clintons when then Arkansas Gov. Bill

(the Clintons) the same as us," Freed said of his volunteer campaign work.

"I did a number of jobs," said Freed, who recently returned to the White House to attend a press conference of Vice President Al Gore on a major initiative on health care administration simplification.

"The system of paperwork and billing is really a mess — incomprehensible," said Freed.

Freed, who is also a member of the National Health Policy Council, said the first thing to go under the new initiative will be the "onerous attestation forms" that doctors are currently required to complete when a Medicare patient is discharged.

He estimates that 11 million of these forms are filled out on a yearly basis, taking up about 200,000 hours of physicians' time. Under the initiative, the forms have been abolished.

A second major change Gore announced was an attempt "to bring us closer to one universal health care claim form," Freed said. In the existing system, there are 1,200 insurance companies and 1,200

Albany planners do 360 on Price Chopper plaza

By Mel Hyman

The Albany County Planning Board has reversed itself and gone on record supporting the rezoning of a 30.8-acre parcel in Slingerlands targeted for a Price Chopper supermarket and shopping plaza.

After an initial determination that the Price Chopper proposal would create excessive congestion at the junction of New Scotland Road and Cherry Avenue Extension, the county planning board changed its mind after learning more about the project, said Dan Odell, associate county planner and liaison to the board.

"We received a letter from (Bethlehem town planner) Jeff Lipnicky that said, 'Wait a minute. You guys didn't look at some things,'" Odell said. "And we didn't. His response enabled us to do so and to reconsider our decision."

New McDonald's heats up for opening

By Jared H. Beck

"Two all-beef patties, special sauce, lettuce, cheese, pickles, onions, on a sesame-seed bun."

For most of us it's just a catchy ad jingle, but prospective short-order chefs at the new McDonald's in Glenmont learned that it's also a good way to remember what goes into a Big Mac, as they underwent training in preparation for the restaurant's grand opening on Friday, July 28, at 9 a.m.

At 376 Feura Bush Road in the Ames/Grand Union shopping center, the new franchise is owned by Mark and Pat Magliocca, who also own McDonald's in Catskill and Malden.

While construction workers put the finishing touches on the building on Friday, July 21, trainees listened attentively to Valerie Hardy of Glenmont, a business consultant for McDonald's Corp.

Hardy gave detailed explanations and demonstrations of various kitchen apparatus, including the universal three-tiered toaster which is specially designed to toast Big Mac buns, and sauce guns that exact precise dollops of special sauce and other condiments on every sandwich.

Trainees also became familiar with each menu item's components and practiced making them using wooden "meat" and plastic "cheese."

McDonald's swing manager Jo Ann Cooper shows trainee Joel Steinhoff how to toast Big Mac buns during Friday's training session at the restaurant's new Glenmont location. Jared H. Beck

Along the way, Hardy served up McDonald's terminology—the three parts of a Big Mac bun are called the crown, club, and heel; tips, such as placing pickles side by side instead of stacking them on hamburgers "so that the customer gets a piece of pickle in every bite."

According to Hardy, the only McDonald's in the world that don't use mustard on sandwiches are located on the Thruway and in Long Island, out of deference to downstate taste preferences.

Above all, Hardy stressed that customer satisfaction is a top priority, warning employees to refrain from scoffing at demands for exotic grill orders not found on the regular menu.

"The customer can have a sandwich any way they want it, because they're paying for it," she said.

Emphasis was also placed on making sure the freshest products available go into food preparation.

Employee Joel Steinhoff of Feura Bush, a veteran of three other McDonald's, remarked that the training session "went pretty smoothly," and looked forward to his new job.

Julius Gelani of Schenectady, a first-time McDonald's staffer, concurred.

"I like cooking and working with people, so I'm really excited. Things have gone very well so far," he said.

Drive-through service will start up on Thursday, July 27, giving workers a full day to become acclimated to their daily routine before full counter service opens on the 28th. A three-window drive-through system has been implemented to ensure that orders are filled speedily.

Mark Magliocca was optimistic about the franchise's future, pointing out that the restaurant was already running two weeks ahead of schedule.

"We've had great success with landscaping and construction and have had excellent turnout for employment," Magliocca said.

He went on to praise Glenmont. "This is a great area. It's clean and the people have strong family and work ethics."

Southgate monitors set meeting

Citizens Monitoring Southgate will hold a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday, July 31, in Bethlehem Town Hall to discuss strategies for the upcoming public hearing on the Southgate Commons shopping center.

"We'll be reviewing the Southgate proposal for a 445,000 square foot shopping center across from the Glenmont Elementary School on Route 9W," said group spokeswoman Karen Bonventre.

"We'll be preparing our input for the town board, since this is also the official public comment period for the project."

The public comment period for the $33 million development ends on Saturday, Aug. 19.

All written comments should be submitted by that date to the supervisor's office in town hall.

The public hearing on Southgate is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 9.

"We encourage people to attend the all-important public hearing on Aug. 9," Bonventre said. "We need to let our town officials know our thoughts on this proposal."

"We also invite residents to attend our meeting on July 31, so that we can coordinate our public input to the town."

Silkworth House plans health food venture

By Susan Graves

Silkworth House on Delaware Avenue opened last year on a wing and a prayer. But the program, which houses women recovering from addiction, has gone well and will soon open a store next to Fitness for Her.

The new shop, Silkworth Slendermart, will be a kind of health food convenience store that will provide an employment opportunity for some of the Silkworth residents and also provide income toward running the house. The store will also offer free delivery for senior citizens. The store is scheduled to open by the end of the month.

Silkworth House was named after a doctor who treated Alcoholics Anonymous founder Bill Wilson on his last detoxification bed. "He basically helped Bill get back on his feet," said Bob Attridge, executive director of Silkworth House.

For about the last five years, Attridge has been opening three-quarter-way houses for recovering addicts. But before Silkworth, he said he'd never found a suitable site where women could live with their children during recovery.

And 333 Delaware Ave. turned out to be exactly what Attridge was looking for. Formerly used as office space, the upstairs has been renovated to suit the needs of the women and their children. "It was quite a task," completed mostly by volunteers, Attridge said. "It was tough."

Silkworth House in Delmar is helping Mary J. and Bette D., here with Bette's son Jon, get back on their feet. Susan Graves

Before Silkworth House opened, he said he had received hundreds of calls from people looking for "any place where a mother can bring her kids."

Silkworth House, a not-for-profit organization, has eight bedrooms that can accommodate one mother and child per room. There is also a common living room, dining room and kitchen. The residents set up house routines and take turns with chores.

During the day, most of the women attend after-care programs such as St. Peter's Addiction Recovery Care (SPARC), Al-Care and the Crossroads program. "A lot go into full-time, intensive treatment," he said.

At the house, "The primary rule is — no drugs, no alcohol," Attridge said. And if the rule is violated, the women must move out. "The primary focus is staying sober."

Many of the women move on to their own apartments and jobs after their stay at Silkworth House.

One resident of Silkworth House, Mary J., said she is looking forward to the time when she can get a job helping an elderly person or perhaps find work cleaning houses.

But one of her housemates, Bette D., who is staying at Silkworth with her son, Jon, said it's sometimes difficult for women in recovery to land a job. "A lot of times, employers are hesitant," about hiring someone in her situation, she said.

But overall, both Bette and Mary said the community has been wonderful. Many people donate food, children's toys and furniture for Silkworth. "They're supportive," Mary said.

Attridge agreed the Delmar community has been receptive to the residents at the house. Some people have volunteered to babysit or help tutor the children.

"There are a lot of generous people," including members of the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle and a former BC teacher who tutors at Silkworth House, he said. "St. Thomas has been there for us during the holidays," he added.

Ringler slams Conservatives for Breslin nod

By Mel Hyman

The recent decision by the county Conservative Party to endorse Democratic County Executive Michael Breslin this fall comes as no surprise to Republican challenger Kenneth Ringler.

The Conservative Party executive committee is "controlled by the Democrats," Ringler said. "Everyone knows that. They did not endorse Mike Hoblock when he ran for county executive four years ago. Instead, they backed (Democrat) Bob Lyman.

"It's no secret that many of their leaders work for the county," and could feel repercussions if they opposed the Democrats, he added.

Ringler, who received Conservative Party backing during his successful runs for Bethlehem supervisor in 1989 and 1991, is trying to wrest the $80,000-a-year county executive post away from Breslin, who was appointed to the job in January after Hoblock resigned to enter the state Senate.

County Conservative Party chairman Thomas Keenan responded that his job with Albany County is protected by Civil Service and that he had nothing to fear from bucking a Democratic administration.

"I run the copier division in general services," Keenan said. "My job is not in jeopardy. I came to the county in 1988 with 35 years of printing experience."

Breslin was given the nod, Keenan said, because of his military record and "because he's more in tune with us on keeping government small. He also leans more toward our feelings about traditional family values."

"I don't buy (Ringler's claim)," Breslin said. "I'm pleased so many Conservatives came out and signed my petitions, and endorsed my record as county executive. I believe they recognize my effort and achievement."

Republicans in suburbs like Colonie and Bethlehem get Conservative Party endorsements because the Conservatives have lost so many opportunity-to-ballot challenges in the past that they stopped bothering to endorse Democrats in the towns, Ringler said.

Ringler said his supporters should not be discouraged.

"I expect to have at least one other line on the November ballot," he said, "and I fully expect the real Conservatives in Albany County will be voting for me in November."

Cost estimate tops $500K for Clarksville water extension

Gasoline pollution of aquifer appears to be spreading

By Dev Tobin

The cost of extending the Clarksville Water District to homes on North and Upper Flat Rock roads with gasoline in their well water continues to grow as the underground pollution spreads.

Residents were given an estimate of $453,200 at a meeting with state and town officials last week, but that number is now $527,119, with the addition of another 1,400 feet of main to bring the district further southeast on Upper Flat Rock Road, according to New Scotland Supervisor Herb Reilly.

The estimate, by consulting engineer C.T. Male & Associates, is conservative and may be on the high side, Reilly said.

The extension will cost somewhat more than normal because about 1,000 cubic yards of rock will have to be removed, and because the plan calls for ductile iron pipe, as opposed to PVC pipe, for the main.

About a dozen households have had their wells contaminated by the underground gasoline spill, whose origin is still officially unknown.

The state Department of Environmental Conservation is providing home filtration systems and bottled water to the households where contamination exceeds state limits for drinking water.

The number of residences included in the extension — those already affected by the spill or likely to be affected — is now 28.

DEC is in the process of analyzing whether treatment and bottled water is more cost-effective than subsidizing, to some extent, the proposed extension. DEC administers the Oil Spill Fund to clean up and remediate petroleum-related spills.

At public meetings, residents have strongly supported extending the water district, and have complained that the filters are inadequate to deal with the pollution.

Town Attorney John Biscone has drawn up a petition for the extension that is currently circulating. But the high cost, absent any substantial government funding, would make approval by the state Comptroller's office impossible.

The Comptroller's office will generally approve districts that cost residents up to $600 a year. Without any outside subsidy, and given the Clarksville district's ad valorem method of assessing for common construction costs, the extension would cost residents at least $1,200 and as much as $3,300 every year.

Councilman Scott Houghtaling said that he and his father, county Legislature Majority Leader Charles Houghtaling, will contact fellow Democrats U.S. Rep. Michael McNulty and Assemblyman John McEnery to see if a federal grant and/or a member item might be available to help defray the extension's cost.

Reilly said that the survey for the extension discovered that the district's water main is 500 feet short of the district's boundary on North Road.

The cost for that 500 feet of main would have to be picked up by residents of the entire district, Reilly noted.

Delaware Plaza renovation begins

Renovation of the sidewalks and parking lots at the Delaware Plaza in Elsmere is finally under way.

Workers last week began repairing and resurfacing sidewalks in front of the plaza's storefronts. Resurfacing and restriping of the parking lot is expected to begin shortly.

Thirty additional parking spaces will be created behind the plaza, and the work should be completed within the next few weeks, according to plaza manager Lisa Diffenback.

The project was timed to take advantage of the slow season at the plaza, Diffenback said.

"We really didn't want it to coincide with the back-to-school sales in August," she said.

There will be a "general spruce-up" of the traffic islands, and new landscaping will be put in where there's room, according to former state Sen. Howard Nolan, a general partner in Delaware Plaza.

"A few months ago, we put in hanging plants like they have in Stuyvesant Plaza," he said.

Built in the late 1950s, Delaware Plaza contains 155,000 square feet of retail space. It is operating at 100 percent of capacity.

La Leche to honor longtime leaders

By Susan Graves

The Delmar La Leche League will celebrate two events on Saturday, July 29. At Five Rivers Environmental Education Center on Game Farm Road in Delmar at 3:30 p.m., the group will participate in the fifth annual La Leche League International World Walk for Breastfeeding.

Following the walk, the local chapter will honor two of its longtime members, Phoebe Kerness of Delmar and Pat Switzer of Glenmont, for 25 years of service as La Leche League leaders.

Kerness said that along with the belief the "breast is best" for babies, the group supports mothers and families in a number of ways.

Phoebe Kerness, left, a La Leche League leader and Jean O'Donnell, also a league leader, will participate in a La Leche League International Walk for Breastfeeding on Saturday at Five Rivers in Delmar. Doug Persons

Babies switched from being nurtured to being fed.

Phoebe Kerness

It is really a group that encourages empowerment for mothers and fosters a relationship with children that deepens over the years, according to Kerness.

"La Leche took something that has been going on since the beginning of time (breastfeeding) and tried to bring it back," said Kerness, who has been involved with La Leche for 30 years.

Breastfeeding fell out of favor in the 19th century when doctors, who were then mostly men, rather than midwives, began attending to pregnant women.

Doctors began directing women to formula and bottle feeding on a schedule, and when that happened, "Babies switched from being nurtured to being fed," Kerness said.

Kerness, who recently returned from the annual La Leche conference in Chicago with 3,000 delegates, said there are a lot of myths about breastfeeding that prevail today. La Leche through its meetings, library, and counseling tries to dispel those myths.

Negative attitudes about women who breast-feed their infants surfaced in December 1993, when Liza Habiby was asked to leave Latham Circle Mall because she was feeding her baby in a booth at the food court. That led to a nurse-in-march, where more than 100 nursing mothers came and fed their children at the mall to protest what had happened.

La Leche does not push its views on others, it rather promotes the health and psychological benefits of breastfeeding.

"We're not here to say what's wrong or right, just to say look at this, this is wonderful," said Jean O'Donnell, La Leche coordinator of the local walk. O'Donnell, who is also a La Leche leader and district adviser, said when she first joined, she got a lot of support from the group.

"We can offer information; we never tell anybody what to do," Kerness said. For mothers, nursing lowers the risk of post-partum complications, ovarian and breast cancer and anemia, she said.

La Leche promotes breastfeeding as the means of providing the perfect food for the optimal development of a growing infant and as protection against childhood illnesses.

Nursing also ensures that a loving secure bond will be established between mother and child. Human milk is also cost-free and a renewable resource that requires no packaging, shipping or disposal.

La Leche is a volunteer organization. Its hotline number is 439-1774. Saturday's walk is one of the group's major fund-raisers.

La Leche was founded in 1956 in Franklin Park, Ill., by seven women — Mary Ann Kerwin, Viola Lennon, Marian Tompson, Edwina Frochlich, Betty Wagner, Mary White and Mary Ann Cahill. Today, La Leche is an international organization, reaching more than 100,000 women in 60 countries every month, O'Donnell said.

Help is on the way for domestic violence victims

By Susan Graves

Women who are victims of domestic violence will be able to get pro bono help from attorneys if Delmar resident and lawyer Rachel Kretser has her way.

Kretser, president of the Women's Bar Association of the State of New York and a past recipient of the group's Marilyn Menge Award for outstanding service to women, began her term by announcing the formation of a domestic violence program that would provide free legal assistance to women.

"Our organization has long been concerned about the prevalence of domestic violence and its devastating impact on women," said Kretser, who is also the head of the consumer frauds section of the state attorney general's office in Albany.

Although strides have been made, including passage of the Omnibus Family Protection and Domestic Violence Act in 1994, there is a long way to go on a number of fronts as far as domestic violence is concerned, according to Kretser.

A committee from the women's bar association is currently working on the pro bono program, which is especially needed now because of budget cuts to existing programs, she said. While the need for services for domestic violence victims is increasing, revenue sources to fund those services are steadily decreasing, said Kretser.

"Legal service programs are threatened with severe cutbacks or outright elimination," Kretser said.

In addition to developing the new program, the pro bono group and the Capital District Women's

Rachel Kretser

Bar Association (the local chapter of the Women's Bar Association) are also working to have budget cuts restored. Despite these efforts, Kretser said there likely will be "significant cutbacks."

The local chapter, led by Gloria Copland, is also spearheading the effort to form the pro bono program, said Kretser, who is a past president of the local women's bar association.

Battering is the major cause of injury to women in the country, surpassing the number of injuries sustained in automobile accidents, muggings and rapes combined, according to "A Handbook of Family Violence" by Evan Stark and Anne Flitcraft.

"It's a problem of immense dimension," Kretser added. According to a 1987 FBI report, one act of domestic violence occurs every 15 seconds in the U.S.

Any person can be a target of violence, but women are six times more likely than men to be victims of violent crime in intimate relationships, as recorded in a 1990 Senate Judiciary Committee hearing.

In 1993, the state Division of Criminal Justice Services received 84,433 reports of family offenses. An adult female was the victim of at least 60 percent of the offenses from 1983 to 1993. And those statistics have only gotten worse, said Olga Dwyer, domestic violence program specialist for the state Office for the Prevention of Domestic Violence.

Domestic violence, which crosses all socioeconomic boundaries, exists in all communities. But Dwyer said that efforts to educate health, legal and law enforcement personnel have made some inroads. "Our office is doing a good job in training," a number of agencies, including police, health and social services to better respond to domestic violence cases.

As part of the training, the office does a number of things to raise awareness about domestic violence, said Executive Director Karla Digirolamo. Domestic violence is defined and its myths explored, and the professionals are advised what they can do when they encounter it. Digirolamo said the trainees are not asked to go beyond the boundaries of their professional careers, just "asked to do your job better."

Attitudes about domestic violence against women are akin to those formerly attached to driving while intoxicated, she said. The courts, police and people in general previously had a more relaxed attitude toward the crime, but today a social consensus condemns DWI and the offender.

Today's attitude toward DWI "didn't come from one source," Digirolamo said, but from all segments of the community. She sees domestic violence going the same route, albeit slowly.

A sense that domestic violence will no longer be tolerated needs to be made clear to everyone in the community, she said. Up to now, "We as a system have not been willing to see or hear," the victims. "The criminal justice system and social services had turned off the lights big time," Digirolamo said.

Battering is the major cause of injury to women in the country, surpassing the number of injuries sustained in automobile accidents, muggings and rapes combined.

tem and social services had turned off the lights big time," Digirolamo said.

Currently, Kretser's committee is working on recruiting volunteer lawyers, who will then need to be trained on domestic violence procedures. In addition, the pro bono attorneys will also be able to make referrals to victims for appropriate needs, including medical, housing, social services and counseling, Kretser said.

The pro bono program is expected to begin serving victims by the beginning of 1996. Kristian Miccio, who is on the pro bono committee and is also the director of the Family Violence Litigation Clinic at Albany Law School, said the group is currently trying to "figure out the best way to provide volunteer service" to the community. Miccio, who was instrumental in developing a domestic violence clinic in New York City, said experienced lawyers must be trained along with new lawyers.

"We need to teach the old dogs new tricks," she said. And there really must be a consortium of services available to abused women and children, she added.

Miccio said domestic violence against women has been "going on since time immemorial. ... We need to think over our legal system."

Further, to truly address domestic violence, "We've got to start in everyone's heart," she said.

Digirolamo said women who are being abused should contact one of the local agencies. Unity House in Troy (274-2607), Equinox in Albany (434-6135) and the Schenectady YWCA (374-3394) all counsel abuse victims, she said.

Editorials

Glenville residents have formed a group, Save Our Residential Environment, whose acronym, SORE, reflects their feelings. They have threatened to sue over the location of the new General Motors Corp. plant.

A lawsuit will effectively keep GM out of Glenville because the company has a deadline for manufacturing and delivering railroad engines to the Long Island Railroad and any delays will force them to look elsewhere.

But one location's loss will be another's gain, and we in Colonie and Bethlehem are looking forward with glee to the legal system's long delays that will force GM out of Glenville. We'll be able to put in a bid to have GM locate in our towns.

But our joyful anticipation points to a serious problem.

There's obviously something fundamentally wrong with legal procedures that foster the litigious climate that prevails today. People opposed to any new development rush to the courts to delay or stop action.

- Do residents have a right to go to court to make sure no laws are broken? Sure they do.
- Should there be a decision reached quickly? Sure there should.
- Does this happen? It sure doesn't.

It doesn't take a genius to realize that delaying tactics cause problems in attracting and keeping business in New York state. There has to be a better way of obtaining quick decisions of these disputes.

Our legal system needs fixing.

Support local shops

While times have been tough for businesses during the past few years, the picture isn't as bleak as some naysayers would have us believe.

During economic uncertainty, residents are understandably cautious about spending money. In our area, the state government's inability to put a budget in place in a timely manner has affected the economy, as has the threat of having to move for many state workers.

The number of large chain stores that have recently opened in the area creates direct competition with small businesses.

Some local businesses have been unable to make a go of it for a variety of reasons. But at the same time, other businesses continue to move into our town.

The entrepreneurs who believe that there is a good chance for success continue to invest their time, money and talent.

We urge all to shop locally and support the businesses that pay taxes, provide employment and support local sports and community activities.

The business future of our town is undergoing change. Let's stick with it.

Save the pension fund for retirees

The writer of this Point of View is New York state comptroller.

By H. Carl McCall

Raiding the New York State and Local Retirement Systems Pension Fund is not the answer to the state's fiscal problems. It's been tried unsuccessfully once, and now the governor and Legislature are trying it again. I did all I could to stop then-Gov. Cuomo, and was successful, and I'll do all I can to stop Gov. Pataki from doing it again.

On July 5, 1995, four retirees and I filed a lawsuit against Gov. Pataki, seeking to ensure that retirees of the State and Local Retirement Systems receive their pension supplement, as scheduled, on Sept. 1 and to stop the governor's raid of the Supplemental Reserve Fund.

The Supplemental Reserve Fund was set up for the sole purpose of providing public employee retirees with pension supplements. The last time retirees received a pension supplement was in 1988.

As we all know, the cost of living and health care since that time has soared, but these retirees are still living on the same amount of money.

I have been in support of supplementation and have recommended that the Supplemental Reserve Fund be used to fund a supplement. The fund was set up more than 20 years ago to pay for supplementation. That is the purpose of the reserve fund.

The lesson from the last illegal raid has apparently been forgotten. It is my fiduciary responsibility to make sure that another raid does not take place and to ensure the integrity of the pension fund.

The governor and Legislature have been trying to get their hands on this money for months. But it is not their money, it is the retirees' money. It belongs to the retirees, and my commitment is to make sure that the money remains available for their supplementation.

The lawsuit seeks two specific actions. First, we are asking the court for a preliminary injunction against a section of the new law that punishes retirees if this unconstitutional raid is challenged in court.

The governor and Legislature included language in the legislation that would deny for one year a pension increase for retirees if such a lawsuit was filed and was successful. The governor is trying to hold the retirees hostage. That is blatant intimidation, and that's why I am seeking the preliminary injunction to ensure that the retirees are not penalized for the lawsuit.

I'm also seeking to overthrow the raid of the Supplemental Reserve Fund. The governor and the Legislature had planned to use these funds to balance the budget. I'm quite surprised, because the governor is well aware of the illegal raid on the pension fund in 1990 to balance the budget, which the state's highest court ruled unconstitutional.

The governor was, in fact, critical of my plan to return the pension systems gradually to the sound actuarial funding method.

He said it was not quick enough. But now that the governor and Legislature are trying to use pension fund money again to balance a budget, they don't seem to care that the money is not immediately paid back.

I met with Gov. Pataki shortly after he was elected and several times since then. We spoke about the Supplemental Reserve and the governor asked if that money could be used for budget purposes. I said "no." On several occasions I made it very clear that Supplemental Reserve Fund money could not be used for plugging a budget hole, and that I would do all I can to prevent them from using that

Thanks to all Support is appreciated

Editor, The Spotlight:

As co-chairs of the 1995 graduation celebration, we would like to add a final tribute and say thank you to everyone who contributed toward making that evening a happy, safe and sober one.

The feedback from students, parents and townspeople has been wonderful; the community support has been overwhelming, such good feelings are indeed contagious.

The Town of Bethlehem and its citizens should be proud of the strong support given to this project.

Sixty-five students came to the middle school an hour before school began twice a week to work out, play basketball, soccer, swim and enjoy a healthy breakfast under the supervision of middle school staff members Robert Salamone, Jeremy Klugman, Karleen Koval and myself.

The students improved in areas of physical fitness and the program allowed them to feel good about their accomplishments. Mike Mashuta opened his training center and provided extra staff to work with our students. He also had T-shirts made up for us which enhanced the students' sense of belonging.

Misleading letter requires an answer

Editor, The Spotlight:

The latest letter from Sherwood Davies in the July 19 issue of The Spotlight is both incorrect and misleading and requires that I respond. Mr. Davies tries to create a version of the facts to prove an incorrect position.

- The truth is that new industrial development has added new jobs in Bethlehem and is paying taxes at 100 percent of its assessed value, helping your taxes go down. Taxes paid by new industry in 1995 include $156,000 town taxes, $524,000 highway taxes, $79,000 water taxes, and $88,000 to the Selkirk Fire Department and Bethlehem Volunteer Ambulance. They also paid $1,020,000 in school district taxes to the Ravena-Coeymans School District since the plant is located in that district.

- The truth is that the new water purification plant and distribution system improvements are being constructed at no increased cost to the residential water customer; in fact, residential costs went down because taxes went down.

- The truth is that taxes went down this year and will go down again next year.

Mr. Davies would have you believe that new industry is a drain on residential resources. The facts are just the opposite. New industry and expansion of existing industries have created new jobs, added to the tax base and helped keep your taxes down. In addition, the new water distribution improvements, paid for by industry, will provide better hydraulic balance and improve the strength of the water system.

Lawn watering restrictions have been in effect in Bethlehem since 1978. These restrictions are necessary because our system was designed to serve as a municipal water system, not as a lawn irrigation system. There is nothing wrong with our water system—it simply has to be used in a reasonable manner.

I hope we will see an end to the personal attacks and twisting of facts to try to prove that down is up and that there is something wrong with our water system. The truth is that taxes are going down not up and the water system is benefiting from improvements at no increased costs to the residential user.

money for anything other than future supplementation for retirees.

If I am successful in stopping this raid, and I am confident that I will be, then retirees' supplementation will be paid out of the Supplemental Reserve Fund for the next 10 years for the Employees Retirement System. On the other hand, under the governor's plans the cost of supplementation would only be paid out of the fund for less than two years. Because of that, the cost of future supplementation payments will fall to taxpayers.

The governor has committed to supplementation. Rather than pushing off these obligations into the future, why not pay for them with the Supplemental Reserve Fund? After all, that's why the fund was established in the first place.

The governor has committed to supplementation. Rather than pushing off these obligations into the future, why not pay for them with the Supplemental Reserve Fund? After all, that's why the fund was established in the first place.

Taxpayers shouldn't have to pay for something that was already paid for 20 years ago.

Job well done

Editor, The Spotlight:

A "thank you for a job well done" is owed to town Highway Superintendent Gregg Sagendorph and his employees for the splendid job they did in clearing the debris from last week's storm. This is consistent with the good work the town's highway department performs on a year-round basis, whether it's plowing snow in the winter, collecting grass clippings in the summer or clearing leaves in the fall.

This is another instance of the good government that we residents of the Town of Bethlehem are fortunate to enjoy, that we won't take for granted and that we will remember this coming Election Day.

Won't do business there again

Editor, The Spotlight:

I agree we should support our local businesses, so I went to Curtis Lumber in Delmar and purchased a box of ceiling tiles. I asked if just one of the tiles could be cut to a certain size. I got a very curt "No, ma'am, we can't do that."

Today, just to compare, I call

HQ in Latham. The price was not only less, but yes, they would cut one tile for me. He was so polite and accommodating.

It's too late to cancel my order from Curtis Lumber; however, I will never do business there again.

Southgate mall isn't needed

Editor, The Spotlight:

We do not need the Southgate shopping mall:

- We do not need Route 9W to look like Central Avenue.

- We do not need the tremendous amount of extra traffic that will be generated in front of Glenmont Elementary School.

- We do not need an increase in our tax base that will be immediately obliterated by having to provide greater services associated with large shopping centers, such as crime, traffic, emergency services, water, sewage, etc.

- We do not need national retail merchants that will drive out our already existing retailers, many of whom are locally based.

- We do need to follow LUMAC master plan recommendations, which the town board professes to support. LUMAC calls for smaller scale development for this site (1/2 the size currently being proposed), development that will serve local rather than regional consumers.

Community theater great

Editor, The Spotlight:

I have a special appreciation for your article, "Age no factor for seniors in theater group." Although I am not yet approaching my own retirement, I do look forward to having the time to become reinvolved with community theater.

I began working in community theater with the Slingerlands Players when I was 15, and the experience I gained was invaluable. Dick Feldman, Tom Watthews and many other adults treated the teenagers with respect and humor and included them fully in the activity, something that doesn't often happen in other settings.

I hope to work in theater again. Community theater is an incredibly worthwhile experience for children, seniors and everyone in between.

Son can't play baseball

Editor, The Spotlight:

The following is a brief description of an unfortunate incident which occurred recently involving the Bethlehem Babe Ruth.

First, let me say that overall I believe that this is a great organization and the parents that volunteer their time are to be commended.

However, I cannot stand by and overlook my first experience with the local Babe Ruth.

Sometime early this winter, I signed my son up for Babe Ruth. He is 16 and I was told that he would be in the senior league. I very willingly paid the fee.

In April, I received a letter letting us know that the season was about to begin, and we would be contacted by our coach. I heard nothing, so I called Tom Yovine, whose name appeared on my letter.

He informed me that since my son was in the senior league, his season would start when high school ball ended. He also stated they were having trouble finding coaches, but he was sure it would work out.

Having heard nothing by the first of July, I contacted Mr. Yovine again and was told that no coaches had been found, and there would be no senior Babe Ruth. My fee which was paid would be refunded the following week.

As of July 18, I had received no communication from Mr. Yovine or anyone in the organization. I called Mr. Yovine again, only to be told he had not gotten around to doing the refunds yet but I should "watch my mailbox."

I pressed him for a better idea as to the date that I could expect my check, and his response was in the form of an inquiry. He wanted to know how long I had lived in the community. What relevance does that have to the fact that I paid a fee for a program which was not going to be provided?

Are families that have moved into Delmar recently of less value to the community than families that have been lifelong residents? Does Mr. Yovine think he is a better person than new residents?

Mr. Yovine should realize that new residents stimulate the local economy. If families did not move into Delmar, the community would eventually shrink! Families would be moving out but never in, and that certainly is not good for the community.

At this point, I am upset not only at the fact that I have no idea when my funds will be returned, but I am disappointed in the lack of communication on the part of the league.

If the families had been informed of the lack of coaches, which I fully understand, I would have sought an alternative league for my son to play in. Instead, he will not play baseball this summer.

We'll miss retirees

Editor, The Spotlight:

As noted in recent stories in The Spotlight, Dom DeCecco and Phil Gibbons will be retiring from the Bethlehem Central School District in a few days. This is, therefore, an appropriate opportunity to express appreciation and gratitude to them on behalf of Bethlehem students through the years.

Although they will soon be retiring from their K-12 subject-area supervisor positions with the district, Mr. DeCecco and Dr. Gibbons have put in place programs that serve as models for other school districts to emulate. Their dedication, knowledge and experience will be sorely missed.

Under their leadership the social studies and math departments have constructed curriculums with a wide range of courses designed to meet the varying educational needs of the students. They have provided the guidance and leadership that is needed to maintain outstanding programs that reach across the district, spanning the elementary, middle and high school levels.

They should know as they are retiring that their efforts were, and will continue to be, supported and appreciated by the community. Both of these teachers have done an outstanding job for Bethlehem's students and have certainly earned everyone's thanks.

Let's all work together

Editor, The Spotlight:

Please understand my position in these matters: I am not pro- or anti- either the Coeymans town board or the police union.

But I am very much concerned with safety and the need for the town board and the Police Department to work together. Both need to be fair and honest in their dealings with each other.

Letters

At the June 1994, town board meeting in the Coeymans Hollow fire house, I heard a member of the board say one thing and follow it up with a totally different response. What has changed?

At the recent town board meeting on June 26, concerned citizens spoke up about the lack of patrols from 11 p.m to 7 a.m. It was difficult to sit and listen to town board members praise themselves as being concerned with the safety of town residents and then state that they agree with the captain that the patrols should be cancelled because there were not enough calls to justify them. However, because of taxpayer response, the midnight patrols have resumed.

Let's look at residency requirements in the state's town law and the local law:

In the state's town law, there is a section concerning residency requirements for police officers.

Let's look at what has happened this year. A non-resident was hired as a captain, not from an approved list of candidates for the job but as the sole candidate. Next we see additional non-residents hired, some from the Troy and Schenectady areas and some from Hunter.

The captain has been living outside of Buffalo and commuting back and forth on weekends. In a few weeks, he is supposed to be moving back to this area. Will he live in the town? No, he will be living in Cairo.

Please think about this: The town board has placed the position of chief on the back burner. This means that the ranking officer will be the captain, who is a non-resident, and his response time to an emergency will be about 45 minutes. Do you feel comfortable about this? I don't.

The town isn't even consistent with its own policies. The Police Department, or the town board who has the final say, allows the hiring of nonresidents. The remainder of the town employees' residency requirements are at the discretion of the department heads. Isn't this strange?

For over a year, the police department has been understaffed and the town board has not tried to advertise for town residents who are qualified for the position of police officer. The town just appoints non-residents.

Why does the town board continue to play these childish games? If this position could only be directed toward building up the town, bringing in business, and so forth. Shouldn't we get on with doing things as they should be done? Is there something wrong with being honest with one another? Where is this town headed?

Aristotle wrote: "Choices flow from our character. One choice, one act, one piece of knowledge, does not define our character. It is a cumulative product."

Even more important is whether we have the strength of character to do what the situation calls for or follow our immediate desires and impulses.

At some time in a person's life, he or she has to stand up for their beliefs.

For the last 18 years, I have been the voice of New Scotland Democrats in town hall.

As a result, we have a record that we can be proud of:

- A town tax rate as good as any in the county, and one achieved without the benefit of a business tax base.
- New water districts.
- No town debt.
- Recycling.
- Several hundred junk cars removed.
- Summer recreation.
- Fought the reval company and won.

NS may be sued over gas spill

By Dev Tobin

As New Scotland works to extend the Clarksville Water District up North and Upper Flat Rock roads to residences affected by an underground gasoline spill, residents of three households there have filed a notice of claim that they intend to sue the town for damages related to the spill.

William and Kathryn O'Rourke, John and Cynthia Kimmey and Patrick and Veronica Sturn have retained attorney Debra Willsey of Guilderland to represent them.

Willsey served the town with the formal notice of claim following a special water committee meeting last Wednesday that dealt exclusively with the pollution problem.

The notice, which had to be served within 90 days of the late May discovery of the well contamination, spells out a variety of possible claims against the town, mostly focusing on the possibility that the town's former landfill might be the source of the gasoline spill.

"It's too early in the investigation to know whether (the contamination) comes from the landfill, but if it does, then my clients are protected," Willsey said.

Supervisor Herb Reilly said that the former town landfill on Upper Flat Rock Road was closed in accordance with state Department of Environmental Conservation regulations in the early 1980s.

If the claim becomes a successful lawsuit against the town, Reilly noted that it might "get the (EnCon-administered) Oil Spill Fund off the hook" of paying to remediate the contamination.

EnCon has been paying for filtration systems and bottled water for about a dozen affected households, and is conducting a cost-benefit analysis of whether to continue treatment or to subsidize an extension of the Clarksville Water District.

The estimated cost of the mile-and-a-half extension has ballooned to more than $500,000, and therefore the extension would not be feasible without substantial funding from government at the federal, state and/or town level. (See related story on Page 3.)

"My clients are innocent victims, and it's the responsibility of the town to take steps to assist them in this health emergency," Willsey said. "We're willing to meet with town officials to explore every option" for funding the extension.

"This is an extraordinary situation that requires extraordinary solutions," she added. "For my clients, the American dream of owning your own home has turned into an absolute nightmare."

Even if the extension is completed, Willsey said that her clients would suffer damages related to whatever portion of the extension's cost they may have to pay, and to the fact that their property would be "stigmatized" and lose value because of the aquifer contamination.

Willsey said that she has also served notices of claim on Kleen Resources on North Road, and its predecessor on that site, Domermuth Environmental Services, which may be the source of the spill.

He was kind and gentle

Editor, The Spotlight:

I read The Spotlight regularly. I've wanted to write a letter to the editor a number of times recently about things going on in the town. The idea of putting a highway through town and more and bigger roads, further isolating families and our children from each other and creating a huge surge in development, has made me want to write. The idea of putting a hike and bike path through town, giving new and safe passage for our children and between our families, bringing health and wealth for all in and around our community, has made me want to write. Many other things have made me want to write.

One thing has made me want to write so strongly that I did. It was the obituary of Bob Ruckterstuhl. It was set on a page with others, occupying the same space as any other. He would have wanted it this way.

He was buried in a simple pine box, as he had requested. At Bob's request, his immediate family attended and grown men and women who he and his family had taken into his safe home as children in need.

The Sunday following his burial, all those who Bob had befriended, those who cared for him and loved him, attended his memorial service. The church was overflowing. In fact, it was said that there were more people in that church than at any other time, ever.

Bob was a quiet and polite gentleman. You really had to pin him down to get his opinion. He rarely spoke unless asked a question. Yet, hundreds of people considered him to be a close friend, and many, a best friend. Most people who are so very quiet never gather nearly as many friends. I think that it was his peaceful, thoughtful grace that made others feel compelled to engage him so that they could join in his peace with him.

"No man is an Island, entire of itself." Seeing a place so perfect, many made the journey to meet Bob on his island, and all are richer for the trip.

Children and the Dentist

Did you know that children should have their first dental check-up before the age of 3 years?

It is very important to give young children a good feeling about going to the dentist. They will be much more comfortable when visiting the dentist as they get older and need more care.

One question commonly asked by parents is whether they should stay in the treatment room while their child is receiving dental care. This is a difficult question to answer. It is best for the parent and dentist to discuss their options as each child's personality is different.

When you are at the dentist with your child be sure to ask about fluoride, orthodontics (braces), sealants, tooth brushes and flossing for your child.

Ex-Israeli officer at Subway helm Delmar man to lead Harry Truman library

By Mel Hyman

Haim Ben-Eliezer, owner of the new Subway shop in the Delaware Plaza, hasn't always been behind the counter of a fast food operation.

For 25 years he served with the Israeli Army, retiring several years ago as a lieutenant colonel. He went through four wars.

So if he looks a little out of place with an apron on, give him some time. He's only been in this country for four years, and he's the first to acknowledge that it's not an easy job becoming acclimated.

"In the beginning it was kind of hard," he said, "but I knew that when I was ready I could finally get into my own business."

The most important part of going into business was finding the right location.

Haim Ben-Eliezer

For his first couple of years in the U.S., Ben-Eliezer managed a dry cleaning plant, but when that got a bit starved he started looking around for a business opportunity.

Not just any business opportunity, mind you, but the right opportunity. That was the way he approached it. He settled on the idea of acquiring a fast food franchise because food is not something that's going out of style tomorrow, plus the Subway corporation provided extensive training and promised solid support during the start-up phase.

Ben-Eliezer said he's also received support from the local community. "The people here have been so patient and understanding. In other places if you mess up or make a mistake they run out the door and you never see them again."

The most important part of Haim Ben-Eliezer is planning the grand opening for the new Subway shop on Friday and Saturday, July 28 and 29.

Doug Persons

going into business, Ben-Eliezer said, was finding the right location. "I could have opened months ago, but I didn't want to compromise on the location."

A resident of Glenmont, Ben-Eliezer said he noticed that Delaware Plaza was a high traffic area, so when he learned that Wacky Wings had flown its last flight, he jumped at the opportunity to fill the space.

A grand opening celebration for The Subway shop in Delaware Plaza is slated for this Friday and Saturday, July 28 and 29. There will be two-for-one specials — on fresh baked bread and rolls as is always the case — plus other surprises you'll have to stop by to enjoy.

Anative Israeli who spent nearly all of his life there, Ben-Eliezer said although he misses his homeland greatly and still has deep feelings for it, he doesn't regret the decision to leave.

"Even after you've spent 25 years in the army, you're still expected to serve in the Reserves until age 55. It just got to the point where I grew tired of it. Enough is enough."

Asked whether they have Subway shops in Israel, Ben-Eliezer was quick to point out that there are exactly 11, and from the most recent report from his wife who just returned from a trip there, several of fast food places are now touting themselves as kosher.

"I don't how they do that?" he quipped. "Kosher pepperoni?"

By Dev Tobin

Larry Hackman of Delmar is going home, to the job he's always wanted.

After 14 years, Hackman will leave his position as state archivist to become director of the Harry S. Truman Presidential Library in Independence, Mo., the main repository of Truman's personal, political and White House files.

"It's the only position on Earth that I have been watching for several years" for an opening, Hackman said.

Hackman has presidential archives experience, having served in several senior positions at the John F. Kennedy Library in Boston for nine years before accepting New York state's top archival post.

Hackman's leaving is unrelated to the change of administrations in Albany, he said. "I had applied for the job well before the election."

Hackman was attracted to the Truman Library for several reasons, he said.

"My wife and I are both from Missouri, so we will be closer to parents. Also, the library is the right scale and is badly in need of reinventing," he said.

The term "library" is a misnomer — the site is really a combination archives and museum, and the director's job is very different from his position in New York, Hackman explained.

"At a presidential library, you run a museum, promote scholarly research and do educational programs with broad public appeal," he said.

For the next seven years, the Truman Library will be "in the spotlight" as it will be producing educational programs to coincide with the 50th anniversary of Truman's presidency, Hackman noted.

Truman's stature among historians and the public has grown steadily in the last 30 years, and Hackman shares their enthusiasm.

"I was interested in the job in part because Truman is incredibly highly regarded for his character and for the difficult and important decisions he made" at the end of World War II and in the immediate postwar era, Hackman said.

The Truman Library is also in the first stage of a major $10 million capital campaign to provide funds to completely redo its museum exhibits and renovate its public areas.

Hackman said that his Albany job involved more than archives preservation and indexing (in itself, a major task with 350 years of colonial and state records).

For example, the State Archives changed its name during Hackman's tenure to the State Archives and Records Administration (SARA), reflecting the fact that it had become a major resource for local governments.

Many town clerks in the region have taken advantage of grants and hands-on assistance available through SARA to update and improve local records management, he noted.

Another innovation Hackman fostered is the Archives Partnership Trust, which he called, "a public-private partnership to help deal with the challenge of cutbacks in government funding" of archives work.

Hackman and his wife Sandra (who has resigned as director of operations for the New York State Museum) will live in Kansas City, Mo. They have two grown children, Kate and Alex.

NS GOP nod survives challenge

By Dev Tobin

Intraparty feuding must be infectious in New Scotland, as the petitions for two Republican town board candidates were challenged last week from inside the party.

Town committee Chairwoman Judith Von Ronne said that two Krumkill Road residents, Susan Dionne and Frances Griffin, had filed a general objection to the petitions designating Mark Dempf and Michael Fields at the GOP candidates for town board in the November election.

"I'm not sure why they were upset with the petitions," she said. Dionne or Griffin "never spoke to me" about their concerns.

Von Ronne said that Griffin is the daughter of Robert Griffin, a vocal proponent of larger minimum lot sizes.

Town Republicans have generally opposed larger lot sizes during the year-long debate over amending the town's zoning law.

No objection was filed against the GOP's supervisor candidate, Richard Langford, Von Ronne said.

"All our paperwork is in order," said Von Ronne, adding that the committee had collected more than twice the 99 signatures needed to designate a candidate for town office.

In her experience, most petition objections concern third party or independent lines, Von Ronne noted. "We've never been objected to on our own line before."

Von Ronne said Monday that since specific objections were not filed against Dempf and Fields, the challenge is moot.

The town Democrats have their own internecine feud going on between Supervisor Herb Reilly and town committee Chairman Mike Burns. (See story on Page 1.)

While Burns has not returned phone calls on the matter, county Conservative Co-chairman Tom Keenan said Councilwoman Clare Decker was designated as the Conservative supervisor candidate "on the recommendation of the town Democratic committee."

Parsons to pound out the jazz Summer fare includes new non-fiction books

Skip Parsons' Clarinet Marmalade jazz ensemble will play at the library's "Evenings on the Green" outdoor summer concert series on Wednesday, Aug. 2, at 7:30 p.m.

The band plays Dixieland jazz, and features Rennie Crain on keyboards, Ernie Belanger on tuba and bass, Tom D'Andrea on drums, Skip Parsons on clarinet and saxophone, and special guest Ed Hubble on trombone and horn.

Skip Parsons has performed with a host of jazz greats, including Doc Cheatham, Bobby Hackett, Bobby Pratt and Cutty Cutshall, and is himself one of the Capital District's best-known jazz musicians. He has played clubs, festivals and other venues throughout upstate New York since the 1950s, including 15 consecutive appearances at the Bix Beiderbecke Memorial Festival in Syracuse.

"We'll be playing what we're known for—the traditional sounds of early jazz, the music of Jelly Roll Morton and Louis Armstrong," Parsons said.

The Electric City Chorus is tonight's (July 26) Evenings on the Green attraction. The show begins at 7:30 p.m. The series continues on Wednesdays through Aug. 16.

All concerts are free and open to the public. In the event of rain, performances are held in the community room.

On Thursday, Aug. 3, at 7 p.m., children and their families are invited to join songwriter and musician Tom Sieling for an "Around-the-World Song Tour."

Accompanying himself with acoustic guitar, banjo and harmonica, Sieling has been delighting audiences in upstate New York for more than a decade with concerts and songwriting workshops.

Sieling's performance will take listeners on a sing-along multicultural tour around the world, featuring songs that are time-tested favorites with family audiences. This free concert celebrates the library's "Read the World Over" Summer Reading Club.

For reservations, call 439-9314.

The summer edition of the library newsletter, The Bookworm, which should have hit your mailbox by now, highlights some of the most unusual and intriguing titles the library has acquired recently.

There are great local vacation idea books that contain information on day trips, art walks and quaint places for overnights. In addition, several hot sellers concerning e-mail and the Internet are available for those of you who are spending your vacation in front of your computer.

The subjects of home businesses, coping with loss, aging parents and gambling have also inspired a crop of out-of-the-ordinary reads. New videocassettes, including Schindler's List, are mentioned, as well as staff "favorite reads," thrillers on audiocassette and new CD-ROMs.

Look for the book display under the sign that appropriately says "Unusual Offerings." Additional copies of The Bookworm, are also available.

If you are a school district resident who does not regularly receive the newsletter, or if you need to make a name or address correction, notify the circulation desk.

"Cool Kids' Cinema" this Thursday, July 27, features My Side of the Mountain, a film created from the award-winning book by Jean

SHOPPING New Scotland Road

Businesses, new and old, prosper along Route 85

By Joshua Kagan

Local businesses seem to be thriving on the stretch of Route 85 from Slingerlands through New Scotland, where older businesses remain strong and new stores are opening and expanding in a healthy economic environment.

Lynn Warrell has owned and operated Craft and Fabrics Beyond the Tollgate for six years and recently began expansion of her store.

Six weeks ago, she installed more shelves to hold a vast array of fabrics, and she said she plans to put in even more.

"The fabrics business is dynamite," Warrell said. "We have unusual fabrics that are not in the big stores and they're quality."

Warrell said she is planning to move to a larger location, although details of that move, including the date, remain undecided.

Warrell has shared with the community. This spring, she donated fabrics to help make costumes for Bethlehem Central High School's production of "The Wizard of Oz."

"The philosophy is to support the community that supports me," she said. "I've worked with other schools, too. I think it's important to give back."

A short distance down New Scotland Road lies Olsen's Nursery. Although only in business for four years, owner Jim Olsen bought the property adjacent to the nursery and is remodeling it to hold a country store, which is set to open Sept. 1.

"It'll have a country theme with maybe a garden twist," Olsen said. "It'll offer antiques, gifts, crafts, art work and specialty candy."

Olsen has not selected a name for the new store and is running a contest to pick one. Anyone can enter by suggesting a name, and the name Olsen chooses will become the name of the country store. The person who comes up with the winning name will receive a $150 gift certificate.

On Route 85A, two businesses, Falvo's and LeVie's Farm Stand, have become local landmarks. Falvo's has been owned for the past five years by Joe Robilotto, who bought the meat market after working there since the market opened in 1980.

Robilotto said that dedication to high quality and service has kept the business successful for many years.

"We handle the top of the line in everything," he said. "Our customers are looking for something better than the supermarkets offer. We also try to offer lots of service. We get to know a lot of customers as people, not just customers. A lot of businesses fail because they don't do that."

Shirley and Alfred LeVie have run their farm stand for 44 years. Alfred grows all of store's produce on the family farm and Shirley runs the store. She said service available at the stand has made it last through the years.

"It's the service that counts. The customers don't know the hardships, the lack of water, the irrigation pipes breaking at 2 a.m.," she said. "Every customer is like a guest in my living room. That's the magic formula."

While Shirley runs in the store, open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. seven days a week, Alfred grows the fruits and vegetables and makes sure they are fresh.

"We've had other produce places, but we've never had competition," Shirley LeVie said. "You've got to grow it fresh to do it right. But competition is good. It keeps you on your toes."

The LeVies have had some competition lately from Our Family's Harvest at 2045 New Scotland Road, which has been open two years. Sisters Karen Moreau and Colleen Stanton operate the seasonal farm stand. Their farm is one of only two in the state that grow mushrooms.

Moreau and Stanton are renovating the next door house to house a country store that they hope will be open by Christmas. The store will have a bakery and sell the family's mushrooms, which are a year-round crop, and gift items, such as homemade dried flowers.

Moreau and Stanton's father and five of their seven siblings work with the store or on the family's farm. "Everyone works together to make the whole thing work," Moreau said.

Tom Bruno, manager of Tastee Treat, has added several special events that make his business more than just ice cream. Every Saturday night, there is a live music performance, and on the second and fourth Saturdays of each month, there is a car show.

"Business is going very, very well," Bruno said. "On a Saturday night, by 7 p.m. there's usually no parking spaces left. You have to park across the street."

Next to Tastee Treat is Windswept Enterprises and the new location of Meyers' Bicycle and Lawnmower. William Boettcher, Windsweptowner, recently moved his trailers and farm equipment business to this location.

"We've operated the business out of our home," Boettcher said. "The exposure here on the road obviously helps. I think we'll do well."

Windswept Enterprises has been in its new location since July 1 and is remodeling its interior. In time, it will handle a full line of trailers and accessories. Trailer sales account for about half of Boettcher's business.

George Meyers owns the store

he has operated since 1971. He sells new bicycles, repairs bikes and lawn mowers and works on cross-country skis in the winter. Meyers said the secret to his success is fairly simple.

"Just good quality service. That's what has held it together," he said. "It's hard to do business in New York. That's why I rely on the service."

Ed Gendron, owner of New Scotland Auto, moved into Meyers' old location across from Stonewell Plaza one year ago. New Scotland Auto sells new and used cars and repairs cars.

Gendron said the location and the people near his store have added to his success.

"I can't complain. I like this community," he said. "I think most people don't like to go to the city if they don't have to. If they can get their service here at a fair price, they'll come here. That's what I hear from my customers."

Three relatively new businesses, Pizza by Dominick, Windowbox Cafe and Video Quest, take up a large portion of Stonewell Plaza at the junction of routes 85 and 85A. Pizza by Dominick, owned by Dominick DeLeo and Cosimo Crupi, which has been open about one and one-half years, has had a good deal of success in selling its tomato sauce.

The store began marketing its sauce about six months ago and has sold it to a number of local stores, including Delmar Convenient Express and SuperValu, and one store in the New York City area.

"Our goal was to get one store per week for a year, Crupi said. "We have 28 stores so we're right on track. We can tell by our orders weekly schedule. People have adjusted to me and made me feel part of the neighborhood."

Christina DiPasquale, owner of Video Quest, which opened April 1, said her store offers something video superstores can't.

"People like the one-on-one atmosphere that they don't get in a larger place," she said. "When they come in, they get very personal service."

DiPasquale said business is better lately as more people have become familiar with the store.

Mangia, the Italian restaurant at the corner of New Scotland Road and Kenwood Avenue open since December 1991, has become a very well-known local eatery. But Manager Janine Stowell said a new promotion has made business even better.

Beginning in June, Mangia offered a VIP card. For $19.99, customers are entitled to buy one, get one free deals for 10 dinners, 10 lunches and 10 Sunday brunches. "The very first week we sold it we knew it was wonderful for business," Stowell said.

The restaurant's overall success has led its management to start thinking about expanding, perhaps building a cappuccino bar, Stowell said.

Most businesses agreed that a good deal of the success of this stretch of Route 85 is due to the atmosphere at the stores.

"The amount of service does it," Warrell said. "All the businesses out here have the same philosophy about service, service, service and quality products."

Tri-Village 12-year-olds edged out by Burnt Hills

The 1995 baseball season was unexpectedly extended for an additional five games for a team of 12-year-old Bethlehem all-stars, many of whom had recently competed in the recent district Little League tournament.

The Bethlehem squad was asked to compete in the annual Burnt Hills/Ballston Lake Junior Babe Ruth Invitational All-Star Tournament. Bethlehem was matched against all-star teams from throughout the Capital District July 14-19 in a double elimination tournament.

Most members of the Bethlehem squad will begin playing Babe Ruth ball in the upcoming fall season.

Bethlehem reached the tournament championship game by soundly defeating teams from Nassau and Ballston Spa by scores of 16-1 and 16-3.

They also beat the Niskayuna team that had just won the state championship and is headed to Maryland to compete in the national tournament by a score of 14-6.

Little League

The team received strong pitching from Mark Melcher, Avi Rasowsky, Josh Burnett, Nate Turner and Brian Rowan.

Burnett hit two home runs and Rowan and Matt Primomo hit one each. Rowan, who also played first base, led the team with 12 hits for the tournament.

Bethlehem also received clutch hitting from outfielder Tim Rice and catcher Jon Nowak, who several times provided key, two-out hits to drive in the tying or go-ahead runs.

Matt Cardamone and Mike Cardamone, Adam Rodriguez and Matt Perazzelli used their bunting abilities and speed on the basepaths as a valuable weapon for Bethlehem.

Defensive gems were turned in by Rice and Rodriguez, who each made run-saving catches in the outfield. Third baseman Perazzelli was also stellar in the field.

In the championship round, Bethlehem battled a Burnt Hills team into the ninth inning before losing by a run. The two teams squared off again the following night, with Burnt Hills taking the rematch as well.

Bethlehem emerged with the runner-up trophy. Burnt Hills had been runner-up in the state tournament to Niskayuna.

The Bethlehem team was managed by Marty Rowan, filling in for Bernie Rasowsky, who had managed the Tri-Village 12-year-old Little League all-stars.

That team was eliminated in a heart-breaker from the district tournament the previous week by National of Albany, losing on a two-out home run in the last of the sixth inning.

Bill Primomo served as assistant coach in both tournaments.

Bethlehem finishes 2nd

The Bethlehem Mickey Mantle team completed its season last weekend with a 16-5 record. The Blue Eagles were eliminated from the state tournament in Syracuse, losing to Lansingburgh, 6-3, and South Troy, 9-5.

Their regular season record of 15-3 placed them in a three way tie for second place in the Eastern New York Mickey Mantle League.

In Syracuse, Bethlehem banged out 22 hits, but also left 22 runners on base. Graig Garver, Jeff McQuide and Cory Czajka each had four hits in the tournament. The team received strong pitching from Chris Brown, Matt Tulloch and drafted pitcher Ron Wood.

For the season, the team batting average was an impressive .334. This was the highest team batting average in the history of the Bethlehem Mickey Mantle program. The team's leading hitters were Czajka (.473), McQuide (.397), Geoff Hunter (.391), Rich Petri (.386), Garver (.353), Chris Dimuria (.344), Jesse Brozowski (.315) and Dan Conway (.297).

The Blue Eagles' pitching staff featured a strong, four-man rotation of John McCormick, Mike DelGiacco, Brown and Tulloch. McCormick led the team with five victories and 50 strikeouts in 36.2 innings.

Brown had a 2.28 ERA with 40 strikeouts and only 13 walks in 30.2 innings.

DelGiacco and Tulloch each finished 2-1, and averaged more than a strikeout per inning.

The team's fielding average was .901 and defensive standouts included Joe Lengfellner (CF), Brozowski (2B), McQuide (SS), Conway (C) and Czajka (OF,C).

Tomboys team 17-0

The Bethlehem Tomboys 10-and-under DARE softball team recently completed an undefeated season, winning all 14 regular season games and sweeping through three games in the season-ending tournament.

The team received outstanding efforts from every member. The pitching was handled by Lauren Rarick and Christine Capobianco.

Leading hitters were Jessica Urschel and Liz Buckley and key defensive players were Caitlyn Deitz and Michelle Fido.

Manager Joe Urschel and assistant coaches John DeFlumer and Mike Galachi focused on a positive attitude and solid fundamentals. Both came in handy as the team came from behind in late innings to win their last five games.

Tri-Village tops Colonie to capture District 13 title

By James A. Williams

The Tri-Village Little League All-Stars captured the 1995 District 13 championship last Monday (July 17), defeating Colonie 6-5 in a nail-biter that wasn't decided until the bottom of the sixth.

Ryan Williams was credited with the win, going five-plus innings before he was relieved by Matt Treadgold. Williams gave up eight hits and two walks, and struck out six Colonie batters.

Colonie scored first, but Tri-Village answered back immediately. Treadgold, the tournament's hitting star, was intentionally walked.

Aaron Griffin tapped a slow roller back to the pitcher and was safe on a fielder's choice. Brandon Cary also reached on a fielder's choice, with Griffin advancing to second on an error.

Both runners advanced when a pitch got away from Colonie's catcher. Jimmy Morrill drove a sacrifice fly deep to left field, scoring Griffin from third and tying the score at 1-1 in the bottom of the second inning.

The villagers scored three more runs in their half of the third when John Andrews singled, Mark Bulger doubled, and Cary again tapped into a fielder's choice play that brought Andrews in from third. Meanwhile, Bulger, following Andrews, overran third and became trapped in a rundown between third and home. He eluded the tag and was called safe at home, which brought angry coaches out of the Colonie dugout.

While the coaches were heatedly engaging the ump, and because a timeout had not been called, Treadgold, who had advanced to third on the play, quickly scored without notice, making the score at the bottom of the third inning, 4-1.

Another run was added in the fifth on a single by Griffin, two fielder's choice plays by Dan Kidera and Ian Grovenger that loaded the bases and a sacrifice fly by Parker Brown that scored Griffin from third.

But trouble developed in the top of the sixth for the boys in orange. Williams tired and three runs scored on three hits and two passed balls. Treadgold relieved and one more run scored, which left the score tied, 5-5.

Trouble was also brewing for Colonie. Lead-off batter Steve Maltzman reached first on a bobbled play when he smashed the ball back to the mound. Andrews struck out, but the Colonie pitcher, Mike Hedrick, walked the next three batters, forcing in the winning run.

Tri-Village went undefeated in the tournament. It was the first victory over a Colonie team since 1992.

Steve Pascone also played well and Kenny Porter, who was injured with a jammed thumb, had a good tournament.

The tournament produced some excellent individual performances. Treadgold, who pitched the opening game of the tournament against West Albany, struck out 15 batters. He had five hits, including two home runs.

Bulger had five hits, including a home run and two doubles, and was the winning pitcher in the first game with Colonie. Williams pitched two winning games against Pine Bush National and Colonie and hit two doubles and three singles for the tournament.

Griffin hit four singles and a double during the tournament.

There is no sanctioned statewide or regional Little League tournament, so Monday's victory brought Tri-Village's post-season play to an end.

according to the chamber of commerce — have done so for a variety of reasons, not the least of which is the inability to compete with the large chain stores offering huge discounts.

New businesses that have survived, however, like the Ocean Deck fish market on Kenwood Avenue in Delmar, realize the need to offer more than just low prices.

Bruce Hess, owner of the Ocean Deck, has found that even though business has been good during his first year of operation, it's taken a lot of work to get up and running.

To compete with supermarkets and their burgeoning fresh fish departments, Hess said he has had to emphasize speed and service.

"Speed is definitely a big part of it. People seem to prefer getting in and out quickly rather than standing in line at the supermarket. A lot of people just don't have the time they used to."

Personal service and getting to know the customer are two keys to success in the 90s, according to Nick Valenze, owner of Bethlehem Physical Therapy in the Glenmont Center Square shopping plaza.

"I've been open five months now, and I'm overwhelmed by the amount of growth. I'm already six months ahead of my business plan."

Another key ingredient, Valenze has found, is having the right location. "Glenmont Center Square is great. We're right on the main north-south drag (Route 9W) on this side of the river."

As a businessperson operating locally, it helps to familiarize yourself with the community and your customers, said Greg Turner, vice president of the chamber of commerce.

"We're dealing with a much more transient consumer base now. My mother shopped at the (former) Town & Tweed (in the Delaware Plaza) and the Village Shop, and that was it. Those were the places she knew and trusted. Now you have people moving in from Toledo, Ohio, and they don't know the owners of these stores, so they end up going elsewhere."

Two years ago, Melissa Steen, owner of I Love Books on Delaware Avenue, moved her store from Central Avenue in Colonie to the heart of Delmar.

For her, location has made all the difference in the world. "This town has been extremely supportive of us. There's much more of a community atmosphere than in Colonie."

"People want to shop here in town," Steen said. "We really believe that. We may not have something in stock, but they will wait until it comes in."

In return, Steen said she offers as friendly and inviting an atmosphere as she can. And she pays close attention to customer desires and suggestions.

"We specialize in children's books, because that's what our customers tell us they want. They want to be able to pop in and get present for the next birthday party. If it was medieval history they asked for, we would carry medieval history.

"They can always depend on us for having new merchandise," she added. "We're always changing. That may be one reason why a lot of these businesses went under. They get into a rut and fail to offer new items or new ideas."

For local businesses to compete against stores like Wal-Mart or B J's Wholesale Club, they have to get their message out, which is where the chamber of commerce and local media come into play.

"There's a whole group of people out there who never know what it was like to shop downtown," Turner said. "Malls are the only thing they've ever known."

DeLaney said she's continuing to busy trying to drum up promotions where local merchants would like to keep consumers dollars circulating locally.

One thing that Bethlehem is going for is its attractiveness as a place to live, she said. Many desirable storefronts do not stay vacant for long.

The former Haggerty's Restaurant at 155 Delaware Ave., which closed for good only two months ago, may soon open again.

Former state Sen. Howard Nolan, a partner in the Delaware Plaza and the owner of 155 Delaware Ave., said that he is close to sealing an agreement to sell the building to another restaurateur, although he declined to say exactly who until a contract is signed.

Still, there is no secret ingredient, Turner said, and the most that merchants can do is to try to adapt to the changing marketplace.

Haim Ben-Eliezer, owner of the recently opened Subway shop at the Delaware Plaza, said he is bending over backward to accommodate customer concerns.

"One guy came in here a week and asked if we made veggie burgers," he said. "I hadn't heard of anyone else doing that. But I told him I'd look into it. If we get a hold of them, we'll definitely be offering it."

Revisit Revolutionary times at historic park

By Jared H. Beck

In July 1777, British Maj. Gen. "Gentleman Johnny" Burgoyne led his pack of 7,700 Redcoats down from Canada, easily captured Fort Ticonderoga, and continued southward to Albany.

He never got that far.

About 25 miles north of Albany, in what today is the town of Stillwater, Burgoyne's forces met a roadblock made up of some 6,000 American troops under the command of Gen. Philip Schuyler of Albany.

In September and October, the armies clashed, in not one but two battles, which became known as the Battles of Freeman's Farm or the Battles of Saratoga. Burgoyne's assault was repelled, and he was subsequently captured while attempting to retreat north to Fort Ticonderoga.

"The victory at Saratoga was crucial, because we used it as a bargaining chip to get the French as allies," said Joe Craig, a spokesperson for the Saratoga National Historic Park, which marks the battle site today. French support was instrumental in securing victory for the American rebels.

On Route 32 in Stillwater, the former state park went national in 1938. Today, it consists of the Saratoga battlefields as well as the Schuyler House in Schuylerville, where Burgoyne officially surrendered, and the Neilson House, which served as American headquarters during the skirmish.

Visitors will have an opportunity get a taste of Revolutionary days during a full slate of special events lined up next month.

Will Rogers Follies bright, breezy MacHaydn reproduction of B'way hit

The challenge of recreating a Broadway success has been met squarely at the MacHaydn Theater in Chatham with its production of Will Rogers Follies.

This musical-memory of Will Rogers' life has been recreated in a bright and breezy production at the MacHaydn Theater in Chatham. Veteran director Dennis Edenfield's staging and choreography reduces the size of the Broadway original to fit the smaller venue without losing any of the verve and vitality of the show.

The young, attractive cast gains the spirit of the Follies with its accent on dancing and beauty. The young women wear an assortment of elaborate costumes suggesting the spectacle of the Ziegfeld era without trying to equal it.

Most of all, the role of Rogers is ably handled by Al Bundonis, a young actor with the right touch of folksy humility grounded with an underpinning of singing and acting talent. He captures the essence of this famed star who dominated the theater, film and radio scene for 20 years while providing the right comic touch to the character.

When he was hired by Ziegfeld, Rogers became a national celebrity, sought after by presidents and common people alike. All this was ended with a fateful flight with Wiley Post that ended with a fatal crash in Alaska in 1935.

Bundonis is aided by Lisa Hookailo as Betty, his wife, a woman who loved him even as she shared him with the world.

Krista Pope offers a sexy approach to comedy with her stint as Ziegfeld's favorite showgirl elevated to be a sort of "stage

Mystery writer sets playful mood with Whodunnit at Theater Barn

For the first act, Anthony Shaffer's Whodunnit seems a wordy piece with wooden and constricted characters. The actors at the Theater Barn in New Lebanon where the show runs through Sunday (July 20) seemed stilted in their roles.

But, when the second act opens, the audience is let in on Shaffer's playful conceit as he mocks the very image of a mystery play for which he is known as a leading craftsman, including his successful Sluth.

Phil Rice, a Shaker High school teacher who acts professionally in the summers, steps on in the second act as the inspector solving a murder which has taken place at a dinner party. With bluster and bombast, he sets a whirlwind pace sparring with his police sergeant, played with comic aplomb by Tom Zumchak. They discuss all the potential plots of well-known mystery writers in trying to find a hook for this murder.

Shaffer has set up the audience wonderfully and then leads it through a frantic second act that has more twists than 10 miles of bad mountain road. The British playwright teases the audience, plays with it and then sets it up for the clever finish.

The 10 cast members work well together, especially in the first act which appears wooden, except we find that it is by design. What a temptation it must be for the actors to want to telegraph what's to come in the second act. Cast and audience are rewarded for their patience when the comedy of the second act kicks in.

Whodunnit plays tonight through Sunday with matinees Saturday and Sunday. Reservations at 794-8989.

Colonie Youth Theater opens two show season with mystery, Death by Chocolate

The casts of both shows feature young performers from the town of Colonie directed by Jason Bockis. He will also appear in Death By Chocolate.

Date: June 14, 1995
This notice is issued pursuant to Part 617 of the implementing regulations pertaining to Article 8 (State Environmental Quality Review Act) of the Environmental Conservation Law.
A Draft Environmental Impact Statement has been completed and accepted for the proposed action described below. Comments on the Draft EIS are requested and will be accepted by the contact person until August 19, 1995. A public hearing on the Draft EIS will be held on August 9, 1995 at Bethlehem Town Hall at 7:30 p.m.,

LEGAL NOTICE

445 Delaware Avenue, Delmar, NY 12054.
Name of Action: Southgate Commons Shopping Center
Description of Action: Proposed construction of a 424,000 +/- square foot shopping plaza with two anchor stores, a commercial strip, and four outparcels. Parking for 2,606 cars is proposed on the 75.7 +/- acre site in the Town's Planned Commercial Zoning District (PCD). As part of the proposed shopping center development, highway improvements are recommended for State Route 9W, Route 9W and Bender Lane, Route 9W and Feura Bush Road, Route 9W and State Route 32, Route 9W and Corning Hill Road, Route 9W and Hoffman Avenue/I-787 Ramps, and Bender Lane.
 All parties in interest and citizens will have an opportunity to be heard at the said hearing.
The Town of Bethlehem provides reasonable accommodations for the disabled. Disabled individuals who need assistance in order to participate should contact David Austin at 439-4131. Advanced notice

LEGAL NOTICE

Location: State Route 9W and Bender Lane, just south of the intersection of Route 9W and State Route 32, Town of Bethlehem, Albany County, New York.
Potential Environmental Impacts:
1. Site clearing and grading operations will create short term impacts including soil erosion and sedimentation, dust, and noise.
2. Several ravines on-site are proposed for filling which will result in substantial alteration of the site's topography.
3. Two oxbow segments of Tributary #1 to the Normans Kill will be removed on the site, thereby channelizing a portion of the stream.
4. Increase in stormwater runoff from the site.
5. Approximately 53 acres of vegetation will be removed from the site. The vegetation removed consists primarily of successional field grasses, brush, and saplings. This will create a consequent decrease in wildlife habitat.
6. Approximately 5.59 acres of non-contiguous federal jurisdictional wetlands will be filled.
7. Demands for community services, such as police, fire, and emergency medical services will increase.
8. Traffic will increase on Route 9W and the interconnecting arterial and collector highway network.
9. Construction will potentially impact two pre-historic archaeological sites.
10. Demolition of an on-site structure deemed to be eligible for the National Register of Historic Places.
11. Introduction of almost 10 acres of buildings and 37 acres of pavement for parking will alter the visual environment of the site from its current undeveloped (former farmland) state.
12. The proposal is consistent with the Town's Zoning Law but is not consistent with the Town's draft Master Plan which recommends smaller community scale commercial development on the site.
13. Change in the community

LEGAL NOTICE

character in this area of Town from rural to suburban.
14. A net increase in tax revenues to the Town of Bethlehem and the Bethlehem Central School District.
15. Creation of approximately 525 jobs during construction and about 740 full-time equivalent jobs after construction is complete.
16. A long term increase in noise levels as a result of the increase in traffic in the area.

The Bonds will mature (without option of prior redemption) on August 15 in each year in the principal amounts shown below:

Year	Principal Amount
1996	$125,000
1997	$125,000
1998	$125,000
1999	$125,000
2000	$125,000
2001	$150,000
2002	$150,000
2003	$175,000
2004	$180,000

The Bonds will be issued to provide money to pay amortized amounts owing to retirement funds by the School District pursuant to the Education Law of New York.

Principal and interest will be payable in lawful money of the United States of America. Bonds will be fully registered, may not be converted into coupon bonds or registered to bearer and will be valid and legally binding general obligations of the School District, all the taxable real property within which will be subject to the levy of ad valorem taxes to pay the Bonds and interest thereon, without limitation as to rate or amounts.

The Bonds will be issued in book-entry form only with no distribution of bond certificates made to the public. The Bonds, when issued, will be registered in the name of Cede & Co., as nominee of the Depository Trust Company ("DTC") and immobilized in its custody. A book-entry system is expected to be employed showing ownership of the Bonds in the principal amount of $5,000 or any integral multiple thereof, with transfers of beneficial ownership effected on the records of DTC (and its participants) pursuant to rules and procedures established by DTC. The winning bidder, as a condition to delivery of the Bonds, will be required to deposit the bond certificates with DTC, registered in the name of Cede & Co.

The State Constitution requires the School District to pledge its faith and credit for the payment of the principal of the Bonds and the interest thereon and to make annual appropriations for the amounts required for the payment of such interest and the principal of such Bonds. The State Constitution also provides that if at any time the appropriating authorities fail to make the required appropriations for the annual debt service on the Bonds and certain other obligations of the School District, a sufficient sum shall be set apart from the first revenues thereafter received and shall be applied for such purposes; also that the fiscal officer of the School District may be required to set apart and apply such revenues as aforesaid at the suit of any holder of such obligations.

In the event of a default in the payment of the principal of and/or interest on the bonds, the State Comptroller is required to withhold, under certain conditions prescribed by Section 99-b of the State Finance Law, state aid and assistance to the School District and to apply the amount thereof so withheld to the payment of such defaulted principal and/or interest, which requirement constitutes a covenant by the State of New York with the holders from time to time of the Bonds.

Each bid must be for all of the Bonds and may state a different rate of interest for Bonds maturing in different calendar years. Unless all bids are rejected, the award will be made to the bidder complying with the terms of sale and offering to purchase the Bonds at the rate of interest that will produce the lowest interest cost over the life of the Bonds after accounting for the interest cost over the life of the Bonds after accounting for the premium offered, if any, computed in accordance with the net interest cost method of calculation, stated in a multiple of one-eighth or one-hundredth of one per centum per annum. Interest rates bid must be in ascending order and the difference between the highest and lowest rate of interest bid may not exceed two percent (2%) per annum. The right is reserved to reject any or all bids, any bid not complying with this Notice of Sale will be rejected. Each bid must be enclosed in a sealed envelope addressed to the undersigned President, Board of Education and should be marked on the outside "Proposal for Bonds-Taxable" and should be accompanied with a certified or cashier's check drawn upon an incorporated bank or trust company to the order of the School District, for $25,600 as a good faith deposit to secure the School District against any loss resulting from the failure of the bidder to comply with the terms of his bid. No interest will be allowed on the amount of the good faith deposit.

The Bonds will be issued pursuant to the Constitution and statutes of the State of New York, including, among others, the Local Finance Law.

If the bonds qualify for issuance of any policy of municipal bond insurance or commitment therefor at the option of a bidder, the purchase of any such insurance policy or the issuance of any such commitment therefor shall be at the sole option and expense of such bidder and any increased costs of issuance of the Bonds resulting by reason of the same, unless otherwise paid, shall be paid by such bidder. Any failure of the Bonds to be so insured or of any such policy of insurance to be issued, shall not constitute cause for a failure or refusal by the purchaser of the Bonds to accept delivery of and pay for the Bonds in accordance with the terms of the purchase contract.

In the event that prior to the delivery of the Bonds, the income received by holders from bonds of the same type and character shall be taxable under the terms of any Federal income tax law the successful bidder may, at his election, be relieved of his obligations under the contract to purchase the Bonds, and in such case, the deposit accompanying his bid will be returned.

The Bonds are expected to be delivered in New York, New York through the facilities of DTC on August 15, 1995, against payment in Federal funds, in an amount equal to the par amount of such Bonds, plus the premium, if any, plus accrued interest from the date of the Bonds until said day of delivery, if any, less the amount of the good faith deposit submitted with the bid.

The deposit of the Bonds with DTC under a book-entry system requires the assignment of CUSIP numbers prior to delivery. It shall be the responsibility of the purchaser of the Bonds to obtain CUSIP numbers for the Bonds prior to delivery and the School District will not be responsible for any delay occasioned by the inability to deposit the Bonds with DTC due to the failure of the purchaser to obtain such numbers and supply them to the School District in a timely manner. All expenses in relation to the printing of CUSIP numbers on the Bonds shall be paid for by the School District, provided, however, that the CUSIP Service Bureau charge for the assignment of said numbers shall be the responsibility of and shall be paid for by the purchaser of the Bonds.

The School District will prepare a supplement (the "Supplement") to the Official Statement prepared by the School District in connection with the offering of the Bonds (the Official Statement and the Supplement) within the meaning of Rule 15c 1-12 (the "Rule") of the Securities and Exchange Commission) within seven business days following the award of the Bonds to the winning bidder provided that within two business days of the award of the Bonds the winning bidder advises the School District of the initial public offering prices of the Bonds and the estimated selling compensation of the winning

Decker recently won the designation of the county Conservative committee, whose co-chairman said he was acting on the recommendation of the town Democratic committee.

The nomination will be officially decided by a majority vote of qualified attendees at the caucus, which is open to all enrolled Democrats in town.

Reilly said he has been "on the outs" with town Democratic Chairman Mike Burns because of Reilly's position on the town's recently enacted zoning law.

During the year-long debate on the zoning law, Reilly generally opposed increasing lot size minimums throughout the town, and particularly in the Northeast Quadrant, where many residents wanted larger minimums mandated to exclude the possibility of the 170-lot Tall Timbers subdivision on Hilton Road.

Burns and a majority on the board, including Clare Decker, Victoria Ramundo and Edward Donohue, generally supported larger lot sizes, especially in the area of Hilton and Krunkill roads.

Donohue, who won the Conservative nod for re-election this year and is a town committeeman, said that Burns was also concerned that Reilly did not consult with him on filling jobs and part-time positions on town boards such as the planning board and zoning board.

Regardless of what happens at the caucus, Reilly said he will run for re-election as an independent.

Reilly said he has been told that he will get the nomination of the Independence Party, founded by businessman and 1994 gubernatorial candidate Thomas Golisano.

Reilly said he will also contest the Conservative line in an opportunity to ballot, where his name will have to be written in.

If the county planning board had stuck to its original stance against the zoning change, then at least a 4-1 approval vote (a majority plus one) would have been required from the Bethlehem Town Board.

"We are required to issue opinions on any development within 500 feet of a state or county road," Odell said.

Within the next month, the town planning board is expected to issue a recommendation to the town board on the zoning question. Located at the corner of New Scotland and LaGrange roads, the parcel is currently zoned "A" and "AA" residential. Price Chopper wants it rezoned to commercial.

At stake is a 99,000-square-foot shopping plaza that would include a 63,000-square-foot supermarket, a 7,000-square-foot office building, a 4,000-square-foot bank and 25,000 square feet of retail space.

The county planning board reserves the right to change its opinion if it discovers major problems in the future or if the town fails to keep the Albany County Department of Public Works apprised of future revisions to the project transportation plan.

"We can still conceivably" render a negative decision on the site plan, Odell said. But he added that another change of heart isn't likely because all the involved parties are trying to work things out.

"Conceptually, we see a lack of that kind of retail in that part of town," he said. "In fact, we don't see much of it in the entire town." There seems to be a need for an additional supermarket in town, he said, and if there is a plan to deal with possible traffic buildups on New Scotland Road, then "That's not a bad trade-off."

Price Chopper officials attending last week's town planning board meeting provided some additional information on traffic.

prior to the expected completion of the Slingerlands Bypass Extension in 2001.

But Price Chopper is not totally out of the woods, cautioned town planning board member James Blendell. "Traffic and transportation will be major issues," he said, should Price Chopper return to the board later this year for site plan approval.

sets of rules," as to how the forms are filled out, he said.

Freed said the complexity of paperwork was brought home for him several years ago. "When my dad was dying, my brother (who is also a physician) and I couldn't figure out his bill."

Freed said one of the first things to be changed to remedy the confusion will be to make all federal employee insurance forms uniform.

"I think it's a big step in the right direction," Freed said. "It really is a ridiculous amount of paperwork."

Despite the enormity of the task, Freed said first lady Hilary Rodham Clinton said when she had explored health care and its shortcomings, she discovered that, "When eating an elephant, the best way to proceed is one bite at a time."

Freed said there now is a "battle brewin'" between the Clinton administration and the GOP on ways to streamline Medicare. "The president has said we need to streamline the paperwork on Medicare and assure the system to be financially solid," without cutting services.
