Hudson River bottom shows more silt buildup

Bethlehem board expected to hire engineers

By Susan Graves

The town's new water plant and system is facing yet another snag, which town officials are again attributing to the 1996 flood that created a silt build-up on the Hudson River bottom.

Bruce Secor, Bethlehem commissioner of public works, said that although dredg-there was no problem with silt.

"They did sampling of the river bottom, and there was no silt on the river bottom," said Fraser, adding that it's a good idea for the town to hire O'Brien & Gere since they have the capability to do their own geo-technological work.

Fuller said that a review by O'Brien & Gere is the wisest course of action at this time.

"We need to get the quantity of water we were told we would get," she said.

Fuller said the problem with the water, which is used for industrial purposes only, is one of "quantity, not quality. The taxpayers deserve answers as soon as we have answers — and we will have answers."

Fuller said the March dredging, which was paid for with a $79,000 Federal Emergency Management Agency grant, was thought at the time to be a one-time remedy, but "We're losing it again and there is still silt there."

Fuller said she hopes to have definitive answers to the problem by early August.

Industry uses about three million gallons per day, but because the plant is currently supplying only 2.4 million gallons per day, with the difference being drawn from Vly Creek.

Overall, Fuller said she is confident ing completed in March helped to alleviate the flow of water through the infiltration system, "There appears to be a continuing residual effect from the amount of silt that is still present in the river."

At tonight's town board meeting, Secor will recommend that the town retain O'Brien & Gere Engineering of Syracuse to review the infiltration system at the plant in Cedar Hill. Secor said the engineering review should cost about $5,000.

The March dredging had been given the go-ahead by the state Department of Environmental Conservation and the Army Corps of Engineers, but members of Clearwater for Bethlehem criticized town officials for not presenting the matter at a board meeting. The Army Corps of Engineers has yet to schedule a public hearing on the March dredging, even as it appears that another such operation may be necessary.

"Since then (March), we've noticed a decline in the quantity of water," said Supervisor Sheila Fuller.

She said Fraser & Associates, the project's original engineers, were consulted, and they concluded silt was the ongoing cause of the problem.

Fuller said she still has "many questions in my own mind" which need to be answered.

James Fraser, who is the recipient of this year's Engineer of the Year award from The New York State Society of Professional Engineers, said the excessive silt is likely the result of the 1996 flood. During the design process, the former Dunn Geoscience, a geological technology firm, determined through testing that Four local teens enjoy making visual music

They're four guys with musical instruments, and one set of parents who let them practice in the basement.

Jed Rosenkrantz, Scott Tulloch, David Shapiro and Chris Kasarjian, all recent graduates of Bethlehem Central Middle School, are Visual Reason, an up-and-coming new rock group.

"Some of our songs are hard rock," Rosenkrantz said of the band's style. "We consider ourselves a mix between Better Than Ezra, Lugheads and Smashing Pumpkins."

Rosenkrantz and Kasarjian play guitar; Tulloch plays bass guitar, and Shapiro plays drums.

"We're looking for a fifth person, a vocalist," Kasarjian added. "I've been singing, and might still be co-vocalist."

The band has been in existence in different forms for a couple of years, and the four have been friends, in one way or another, for a long time.

It's no secret that when it's hot and humid, people flock to the nearest swimming pool where they can drench themselves in over-chlorinated pool water and cool themselves off.

June was one of those hot and sticky months and attendance at Elm Avenue Town Park was up significantly from last year for that month.

"It's been a very good month at the pool because we've had a lot of hot and humid weather," said Parks and Recreation Commissioner David Austin.

For the pool, 23,049 people showed up in June.

"Those figures are very high considering we were not open the entire month," said Austin.

Austin accounted for the increase not only because of the weather, which is a driving factor, but also as part of a general

Hearing clears up problems with Clearview subdivision

By Alvaro Alarcon

While the Bethlehem planning board has yet to give the go-ahead for the proposed 15-lot Clearview subdivision in Glenmont, board members, area residents and developers who attended the public hearing last week left in a positive mood.

Neighbors who attended the meeting raised three concerns—federal wetlands in the area, construction noise, and traffic to and from the subdivision.

A 34-lot project on 15 acres between Wemple and Brightonwood roads was originally proposed by Four M Construction Corp. in 1994. But because construction on federal wetlands is forbidden, the project was scaled back to 15 lots on seven acres.

The board originally approved the 15-lot proposal. But Four M, working with local land surveyor Paul Hite, made several changes to the original plan, mostly concerning drainage and work on Wemple Road. As a result, Hite presented another map of the plan to the board and neighbors last week.

Also slowing down the process are the federal regulations of the wetlands. Back in 1994, every acre of wetland filled for construction purposes required another acre to be created. Congress subsequently changed the law, so that filling even as little as one-third of an acre required the creation of one-third of an acre of wetland.

The project was proposed before the change in the law, so Four M can abide by the "take an acre, give an acre" provision. The Army Corps of Engineers must still approve the plan.

If they build the project, we want them to do it right.

Wayne Olinzock

Board chairman Douglas Hasbrouck said, "Although the board wants to be concerned, we don't have jurisdiction over federal wetlands."

According to Hite, wetlands will not be damaged in the project. But Wayne Olinzock, who describes himself as a "concerned landowner" still worries about the wetlands being damaged due to drainage.

"I was concerned that (because) the property needed to be raised, creating runoff problems," Olinzock said.

Neighbors are also concerned about preserving green space.

Olinzock said residents are interested in buying land from the 15 acre parcel to save it from development. Its size and price still needs to be negotiated, which Four M is willing to do.

"It would be nice to have green space, forever wild," Olinzock said.

Hite's plan includes replacing three old pipes and installing a 15-inch pipe for Clearview's drainage. Hite believes that drainage will not harm the wetlands.

Hite also addressed the concerns about construction noise and traffic.

Construction on the project would take about 90 days. Hite noted that construction work isn't quiet, but added that Clearview's small size will limit noise. Also, the traffic impact of 15 lots on Wemple Road should be minor, according to Hite.

Hite said Four M Construction is anxious to begin a project that has been on the books for three years.

"I don't predict any problems. I'm not opposed to development," Olinzock said. Hite is a "reputable and responsible person. If they build the project, we want them to do it right. Development needs to be done in a responsible way."

Helderberg tower faces last hearing

Project may reduce need for other towers

By Dev Tobin

With a commanding position overlooking the Hudson and Mohawk river valleys, the Helderbergs in western New Scotland have been a favorite spot for communications towers for decades.

Yet another tower is nearing a nearly yearlong trip through the town planning process, but this one will be somewhat less visible, since at 199 feet, it will not be topped with a red light required by the Federal Aviation Administration on 200-foot-high towers.

Alfred Cook of Dunbar Hollow Road has already received a height variance for the tower, on which he hopes to lease space to cellular telephone, local two-way radio firms and other communications companies.

Cook has said his tower could reduce the need for cellular telephone companies to build their own towers, which has town planners concerned about a proliferation of unsightly towers.

The New Scotland planning board set a public hearing on Cook's special use permit application, the last town approval he needs for the tower, for Aug. 5.

Cook had originally proposed a 300-foot tower, but revised that in light of neighbors' concerns. The 199-foot tower can also be sited on his property without the guy wires coming within 50 feet of the property line, so he did not need additional setback variances that had been a part of his application for the project.

Cook called the 199-foot tower "a good start," and said he may be back next year with plans for a second tower or a second story on the nearly approved tower.

Board chairman Robert Stapf told Cook that board approval of the 199-foot tower would be completely separate from any consideration of future expansion, which would need separate approvals.

Stapf said Cook should bring a list of "what specifically will be on the tower" to the public hearing.

Cook said he could not be sure what equipment would go on the tower until he had an opportunity to solicit business, which he said he could not do until he received all his town approvals.

Stapf said Cook must "come up with a configuration you hope will work on this tower. You will be limited to putting on the tower whatever you ask for."

V'ville aims to improve planning procedures

By Dev Tobin

Developers will get a clearer picture of what the village of Voorheesville requires, if recommendations in a review of village planning procedures are adopted by village trustees.

Developers' complaints about the village planning commission inspired the review, which found that the complaints result in part from their general lack of a thorough understanding of the planning process, according to a summary of interviews that forms the bulk of the review.

Trustee Harvey Huth, a former chairman of the planning commission who worked on the nearly yearlong review with former trustee Daniel Reh, said adopting the recommendations would improve both the process itself and applicants' perceptions of the essential fairness of the process.

The recommendations include:

- Documenting the entire approval process, including creating a standardized checklist that would inform applicants of submission deadlines, fees, etc.

Clark

• Having the codes enforcement officer review applications, with the authority to keep applications off the planning commission agenda until they are complete.

• Providing commission members with an opportunity to review applications prior to the commission's monthly meeting.

• Having applicants work with the codes enforcement officer, and not directly with the village's consulting engineer.

• Providing more in-house training for commission members, who are all volunteers.

• Expanding the role and authority of the codes enforcement officer to interpret commission policy and handle routine matters.

Mayor Edward Clark said the review "shows the process is a little rough, and we're trying to smooth it out. But applicants will not always be happy."

The review shows the process is a little rough, and we're trying to smooth it out. But applicants will not always be happy.

Edward Clark

Clark said the planning process has "no significant flaws," arriving at decisions that "protect the community, even if sometimes inconvenient to developers."

Clark said the recommendation about giving village Codes Enforcement Officer Gerald Gordinier more responsibility was "already in place."

It's "fairly certain" that the village board will adopt the review's other recommendations, Clark added.

N. Scotland OKs permit for miniature horse

By Dev Tobin

The New Scotland planning board has approved a small stable that had raised a big ruckus.

Inge Wood bought a miniature horse ("smaller than many dogs") for her daughter for Christmas, then discovered she needed a special use permit to keep it.

She arranged for a 1,000-square-foot fenced area with a small stable on an adjacent property at the intersection of Delaware Turnpike and New Scotland South Road in Unionville, but one neighbor objected that the stable was too close to his well.

At last week's public hearing on the matter, Wood produced an professional engineer's report which concluded that the horse posed less of a threat to the well than would a dog.

Wood said the manure would be removed weekly and used in her gardens, which are not near any neighbor's well.

Still sensitive to the neighbor's concern about his well, the board approved Wood's special use permit with the condition that she move the stable and enclosure about 50 feet farther away from the well and put in a drainage swale to direct possible manure-contaminated runoff away from the well.

In other business, the board:

- Approved Paul Miles' application for a special use permit to convert a residential structure in Feura Bush back to a two-family.

- Approved Steven Crookes' application for a new two-family house on Bennett Hill Road.

- Approved a two-lot subdivision and special use permit for a kennel for Ronald Butler on behalf of Carolyn Rickert on Waldenmaier Road.

- Scheduled the following public hearings for Aug 5 — John Mauro's special use permit application for three two-family houses on New Scotland Avenue in Feura Bush and Joseph Kaminski's special use permit application for a kennel at the intersection of Crowridge and New Scotland roads.

- Forwarded the following matters to the zoning board of appeals, which meets July 22 — Thomas Dootz' request for a temporary use permit for a trailer while he builds a home on Cedar Grove Road and a variance request by New Salem Garage for signs attached to its new building on New Scotland Road.

Matters of Opinion

Go to root of problem

Bethlehem town officials will likely hire an outside engineering consulting firm to determine if more silt building is slowing down the inflow of water to the town's new infiltration system on Schermerhorn Island.

Town officials had thought the problem was resolved after the Hudson River was dredged in late March, but have now learned more silt has returned, slowing down the water flow.

It is wise for the town to verify that silt is the problem, if it is. If there are other problems, the town should determine what they are and take care of them.

It makes sense that silt could be building up once again given the magnitude of the flooding that occurred in 1996, but it's important to find this out for sure and then remedy the situation.

The plant is a money saver for the town, so it should meet its design specifications for supplying water to industry in Bethlehem.

Update old codes

Bethlehem town planners have taken shots in the past for allegedly going too slow on various proposals that come before the board. Planners now, however, are facing another problem: the antiquated codes on home-based businesses.

Planning board Chairman Douglas Hasbrouck is right when he says these codes "have been around for a while." When in recent memory have you come across anyone who operates a millinery business out of a home?

The fact is home-based businesses are becoming more and more prevalent, and people in Bethlehem should have some idea of what the rules are for establishing them. We hope the planners tackle this question in a timely manner and develop reasonable guidelines for those who might be contemplating a business venture at home.

Develop a revised code plan, get input from the public on it and adopt a proposal more in keeping with the times.

Observe water rules

With the dearth of rain so far this summer, it's more important than ever to observe the town water restrictions on lawn sprinkling.

Bethlehem residents can only water before 10 a.m. and after 8 p.m.

Let's face it. Although everyone's lawn is less than lush right now, with most looking browner than green, when we do get rain most of the lawns will come back. Mother Nature has a way of righting things in the end.

Be patient. Conserve water. Just think, at least you don't have to mow while the grass is in this condition.

Museum makes sense

We heartily agree with Dan Button's suggestion in this issue's point of view.

Many of the National Guard armories he writes about have trained fighting units that helped our nation fight regional and world wars valiantly. Now that many of these armories may be downsized and abandoned, efforts should be made to find good, sound uses for them.

Without these state guard units, our country's fighting forces would have been sadly undermanned. The men and women who have trained and honed their skills in drills at these armories should be remembered by future generations.

Button's suggestion that an Albany armory, preferably the New Scotland Armory, be converted to a National Guard museum would center this effort in the state's capital and would encourage even more tourists to visit Albany.

Armory could preserve history

By Daniel E. Button

The writer, a former editorial page editor of the Spotlight Newspapers, was U.S. Representative in Congress.

The continuing downsizing of U.S. armed forces creates numerous unexpected and significant side issues, including some of interest and potential benefit to our area.

With the federal government scheduling a 90,000 reduction of Army personnel and the elimination of 65,000 reservists, together with closing of more sites, it is inevitable that, for several good reasons, reduction in National Guard strength predictably would soon follow.

Prominent among those good reasons for cutback in the Guard is a huge economy for New York state's budgeting. Reliable estimates place the potential saving to the state of $100 million a year.

Unofficial suggestions for deactivating up to 50 percent of existing National Guard units have been received by various top officials. This would free up the armories which now house those units. An informed estimate is that in New York state some 30 armory buildings would be vacated.

To a considerable extent, these are badly in need of repair. Disposing of them would eliminate the substantial cost of maintaining them in usable condition. Further, it would no longer be necessary to service and repair obsolete weapons and equipment — the buggy-whips of future weaponry.

Most such buildings then could be put up for sale to entrepreneurs who would find potential opportunities to convert them to other, constructive uses. Thus, the buildings would go on local tax rolls, while the state could benefit greatly from proceeds of the sales.

Any building which doesn't readily sell can be converted for public use. Schools, libraries, or centers for health or child care, are obvious examples.

This movement already is under way: In Albany, the Washington Avenue Armory, which the state Education Department uses for warehousing, is the subject of on-going negotiations for its sale, and the New Scotland Avenue Armory is likely to be converted for public use, such as a convention and conference center in connection with the University Heights project.

As examples, in New York City, the 94th Street Armory has been converted to a school, while the 14th Street Armory is for sale.

New York state now contains approximately 60 armories. Closing half of them after their units are deactivated probably will be given consideration. Sooner or later, this action is inevitable, and sooner would be better.

The trend is for downsizing, and there seems to be very scant justification for insisting on perpetuation of an outmoded force. The potential economies virtually mandate the feasible steps that currently are being suggested and discussed.

Of course, the condition of the local economy and strategic location would have to be weighed in each case of a proposed closing.

Then we come to an interesting question: With the closing of armories, what will be the fate of the sentimentally priceless artifacts — the flags, banners, awards — that each has cherished for so many decades?

The public's interest and posterity would be ill-served if these significant mementos of the state's and nation's history were simply dispersed.

And here's where our area's interests enter the picture.

Establishment of an official National Guard Museum in Albany has been proposed so these invaluable trophies of a people's patriotic dedication would be displayed under one roof.

As became clear in the recently announced plan for creative use of the CBA campus and other University Heights properties, where the New Scotland Avenue Armory is a close neighbor, availability of such land and buildings is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

An armory would be an ideal site for preserving historic artifacts, and also displaying them for their educational and sentimental values.

I understand that the Washington Avenue Armory could be available for this purpose. Unless a site is dedicated to such use in the very near future, the opportunity would pass and, as more and more armories were vacated, their colorful records would be sacrificed and lost forever.

From a strictly local-area interest, a National Guard Museum could be an attraction not only for Capital District residents but also for visitors from throughout the state.

Some objections are certain to be heard from a variety of unpersuaded citizens, units, and other organizations.

But I believe that the twin trends of downsizing of the armed forces and more governmental economies should prevail and that our governments should act responsibly to realize these goals.

Tour du Parc was great success

Editor, The Spotlight:

On behalf of the Bethlehem Central Cross Country, Track and Field Boosters Club and the Bethlehem Youth Track and Field Club, we want to express our sincere thanks to all the people who helped to make the third annual Tour du Parc a great success.

Letters

Race co-directors Bill McCartan and Quin Davey deserve special thanks, as do their committee chairs and members. It is important to note that these people spent nine months preparing for the tour, and their efforts paid off. A special thanks to Sharon and Chet Boehlke, who not only served as our unpaid consultants for nine months but also organized and ran the finish line.

The numerous volunteers who helped while the temperatures hovered in the low 90s also deserve a special thanks. The wonderful cooperation we received from Dave Austin and the Bethlehem Parks & Recreation Department was greatly appreciated. And without the support of our sponsors, we could not have had a successful race.

We want to thank the runners who came and completed a very difficult 5K race. In addition to helping to raise funds for both clubs, you were excellent role models for the potential Olympians we had in both races. Thank you so much for your support, and we hope to see you next year.

Matters of Opinion

Thanks for help with celebration

Editor, The Spotlight:

As co-chairs of the Bethlehem Central High School Graduation Celebration, we would like to thank our business and community leaders who continue to generously support the event, the Bethlehem Police Department, senior and junior parents for financial, physical and moral support, underclass parents who realized the importance of this event and who generously contributed even though their children were not directly affected and our fabulous committee chairs and their committees for all their time and effort. They truly worked as a team and made our job easy.

Our goal was to provide a safe, drug and alcohol-free celebration that would include all graduates.

In order to include as many students as possible, we chose not to charge admission. Most of you realize this is an important event for our graduates. At the end of an emotionally charged day, it gives them the opportunity, perhaps for the last time, to relax and have fun with their friends and classmates.

For parents and the community, it's knowing that those who for yet another day. This year, 86.4 percent of our graduating seniors attended the celebration. This is one of the highest attendance rates since 1990. We strongly encourage the community to continue to actively support this event in years to come.

Many have concerns with fun park proposal

Editor, The Spotlight:

Jim Villasenor's suggestion that The Crossroads neighbors have been the only ones to raise concerns about his proposed Shanahan Family Fun Park no doubt came as a big surprise to everyone else who has weighed in with questions.

For example, at an early April planning board meeting, at least half the members, including Chairman Douglas Hasbrouck, raised a host of serious issues to be addressed before considering the project further.

Questions about industry standards for the proposed park, pedestrian and safety issues, the incompatibility of the proposal with the Route 9W corridor study and the master plan, concerns about the impact of noise and lighting on homes in several neighborhoods and the jurisdiction of the state and/or federal governments over wetlands on the property were raised.

Since then, even the town's top police official has submitted a preliminary analysis of traffic and safety issues which deserve serious consideration by the planning board. A recent hearing before the zoning board of appeals on the park's proposed parking plan disclosed that it did not include adequate space for either patrons or employees based on Villasenor's own engineer's analysis of how such spaces were to be calculated.

Crossroads Neighborhood Association has not yet taken a position on the proposal. John Privitera, our spokesperson at several town meetings, has stated that we plan to monitor this application to ensure that all key issues and concerns are addressed.

Despite the fact that the park is aiming toward summer business, despite the fact that there is miniature golf in addition to the driving range and despite the fact that the plans market the batting cages to Little League players, Mr. Villasenor has stated that he never considered the possibility of pedestrian and bike or rollerblade traffic — just cars. However, last month, the chief of police reminded the planning board that pedestrians and bicycle traffic must be expected for a project of this nature, and the implications evaluated before moving ahead.

We appreciate the fact that Mr. Villasenor, as a businessman, wants to develop a project he can profit by. We hope that he can appreciate our position that his profit should not come at the expense of other values which homeowners and residents of the town consider equally important, such as the safety of children, pedestrians and bike riders. We invite others to make their views known to the planning board.

Wouldn't it be nice if Bethlehem were nothing but a bedroom community — with cozy homes, a few retail businesses that serve only local residents, and maybe a scattering of farms to keep it picturesque?

That seems to be the vision that a lot of people have for Bethlehem. On an emotional level, I find it tempting, myself. But on a rational level, I know it won't work.

To support the lifestyle that we are accustomed to — and to provide good prospects for our children — Bethlehem must be more than just a place people return to after work. Bethlehem needs our manufacturers and other businesses that provide new jobs and bring in money. In fact, we need more of them. Somehow, we have to find a way to ensure that this community is open to, and indeed will welcome, new businesses coming in.

I'll put it bluntly: Bethlehem has to be business-friendly.

To begin the dialogue on how we can make that happen, the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a series of messages in The Spotlight. They asked me to write a few. I know and love Bethlehem; I've lived here for more than 25 years. But I've also spent years studying what makes communities and economies succeed — and what makes them fail. I've learned some things that I think apply to my home town.

To my mind, there are two principal reasons Bethlehem must become business-friendly. They both have to do with our children — my four, and yours, too.

First, I want my kids to be well prepared for the future, by a good school system. We have that in Bethlehem today. But to keep it, we need a growing tax base. And that means we need business.

Second, when my kids grow up I want them to have a chance to find a job in the Capital District, if they'd like to — in other words, I'd like them to stay near me and their mother! But that can't happen, unless we grow our job base. And that means we need business. I'll write in more detail about each of these issues, in upcoming issues of The Spotlight.

David F. Shaffer of Delmar is president of The Public Policy Institute of New York State, the research affiliate of The Business Council of New York State, Inc.

A Letter to Our Customers

It is with mixed emotions that we announce the relocation of The Village Shop to the new Price Chopper Plaza in Slingerlands.

We have made many friends while at Delaware Plaza, and we will miss the comfortable, friendly surroundings and wonderful people with whom we work everyday. Sometimes business decisions, like many others, are tough to make, and this has been especially difficult because of our deep affection for an area that has been our home for many years.

Although it will be hard to close the door to the Delaware Plaza shop for the last time, we look forward to continuing to serve our customers in the new shop just three miles down the road. We will continue to carry all of your favorite lines and have added many more. It is a pleasure to announce that Helen Warner will be managing the new Slingerlands store.

We hope that you will take advantage of our summer Moving Sale and we look forward to seeing you at the new shop in September. Until then, we thank you for all of your past patronage.

Sincerely,

Chorus to light up songs of yesteryear

If you remember "Heart of My Heart," "My Wild Irish Rose" and "The Whiffenpoof Song," you're in for a treat on Wednesday, July 16, when the library kicks off its Together at Twilight summer concert series with the Electric City Chorus.

The 40-member group, founded in 1944, is the Schenectady chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America.

The singing fraternity of men are drawn together by their love of four-part, a capella and close harmony style of music. Their goal is to "keep the whole world singing." A variety of songs, from the 1890s to gospel, inspirational, patriotic and contemporary will have you tapping your toes and humming along.

Bring lawn chairs or a blanket and enjoy an evening of music.

The BFG on Thursday, July 10, is the first Cool Kids Cinema presentation of the summer. Based on James and the Giant Peach by Roald Dahl, it is the tale of friendship between a young orphan and a 25-foot tall friendly giant. Free films, free popcorn and fun will keep your hot Thursdays cool.

Bring a juice box to the 2 p.m. showing.

The Every Other Thursday Night Poets meets Thursday, July 10, at 7 p.m. Lifestories also continues to meet during the summer on Saturdays at 10 a.m.

Parsons to heat up green series

The library's 31st annual Evenings on the Green concert series begin tonight with New Orleans-style jazz with Skip Parsons.

Long-time musician Parsons has played with such greats as Cutty Cutshall, Jimmy McPartland and Woody Herman.

Parsons' fourth decade in the business finds him making music at concerts, festivals and jazz venues throughout the Northeast.

An Albany native, Parsons is owner of Skippy's Music on Delaware Avenue in Elsmere.

Tonight's showtime is 7:30 p.m. Bring a blanket or a lawn chair. Performances are held indoors in the event of rain. Admission is free. Because amplification, lights and recording equipment pose safety concerns, we ask parents to supervise children during the performances.

Friedman describes the strength needed to face both self-imposed and unexpected challenges. Her prose avoids sentimentality, and her slow acceptance of a life unlike the one she always imagined is a stirring tribute to survival.

Boy's Life by Robert McCammon is a coming of age story about 12-year-old Cory Makenson, whose idyllic, small-town life in the 1960s American South is shattered by violence and racial hatred.

McCammon's magical storytelling makes this a poignant and memorable book.

Chaise lounge reading

Swimming the Channel by Sally Friedman is a beautifully written journal that weaves the joys of long-distance swimming with the tragedy of the loss of the author's young husband in a car accident.

Golden Gloves champ stepping away 'on own terms'

By Alvaro E. Alarcon

At 28, Golden Gloves champion boxer Kevin Donovan just stopped sparring in the ring and is moving into the board rooms of America. Donovan's two year amateur boxing career may be over and was at times painful, but his memories of the sport sure aren't.

The New York State Golden Gloves Championships took place last April in Syracuse. Donovan, an Albany resident who has family in Delmar and is a Bethlehem Central High School graduate, is champion in the 178 sub-novice division.

"I left on my own terms...a nice way to end," Donovan said. Considering that the 185 pound light heavyweight fighter has sustained a broken cheekbone and nose and still gone on to fight shows that he really kept with it until the end.

"A good boxer should know when to leave," Donovan said, noting that he'd rather keep his head to finish up his master's degree in business at Sage College than sustain any more punches.

Donovan started training two years ago in trainer Andy Schott's garage. Today, Donovan feels indebted to Schott, who has worked with trainer Jarric Jones to produce five Golden Gloves champions.

Donovan said Schott puts himself completely behind his boxers and his boxing couldn't have happened without Schott.

"My goal was to win a fight for him [Schott]," said Donovan. He did. And though Schott's gym wasn't pro-focused the way most gyms are, Donovan, "a big George Forman fan," came in with a passion that grew from giving and receiving from punches.

"For every 10 guys that come in, one will stick with the sport. The guys that persevere will do it," Donovan said. Perseverance is key for those who train as he did.

I left on my own terms ... a nice way to end. A good boxer should know when to leave.

Kevin Donovan

Working in the Colonie Athletic Club, where Schott later moved his gym, Donovan worked 20 to 25 hours a week. Working six days a week, he sparred for three days, did a heavy workout for two, and did one light workout. His highest weight has been 190 pounds. While muscle is important in boxing, Donovan stressed the importance of sparring.

"The key is to have different sparring partners," he said. "You can practice with guys way above your means." Locally, Donovan describes the boxing scene just as he describes many of the good boxers he sees: Quiet and strong.

Fortitude is what's required to make it in this sport, according to the boxer, who added the street fighter-turned-boxer doesn't perform well because of his lack of discipline. "Some guys just go in their and swing. They lose. I'm trying to set him [the opponent] up...its like a chess match."

"Its mental focus...when you get there [to a fight] it gets real nerve-racking. I get real nervous two days before the fight," Donovan said.

And why not? When he fights, Donovan must concentrate on his opponent while the eyes of the spectators, two of which are his parents, concentrate on him. His parents support him, however, and eventually became comfortable with their son's boxing.

Now he's working at a software company and earning a master's degree. As for athletics, Donovan is considering becoming a triathlete. Boxing will still stay with him, he said, and he believes he has a shot at working with the state commission on boxing, which oversees fights in the state.

When asked about Mike Tyson biting Evander Holyfield's ear, Donovan said Tyson suffered from a common problem and dealt with it in an uncommon way. "A factor caused him to lose control...its common [with boxers] but on a different level. If a guy can't control himself, he has no business being there. Tyson didn't have the discipline."

Tri-Village All-Stars edge American

On Saturday, July 5, Tri-Village Little League's 12-year-old all-stars played their first game at Pine Bush Little League, against American Little League, and prevailed by a final of 4-3.

Tri-Village jumped out to a 2-0 lead on a clutch, two-out single by Nate Panucci. David Medusky drove home Evan Siegel with the third run of the game.

American came back with three runs in the third inning. The game was won in the bottom of the seventh inning, when Matt Drislane delivered a two-out, game-winning double to score David Medusky.

Tri-Village was led by pitcher Ryan Flansburg's three-hitter with 15 strikeouts.

The next day, Tri-Village played National Little League, which jumped to an early 2-0 lead in the second inning.

Tri-Village came back to tie the game in the top of the third on a single by David Medusky and a home run by Matt Drislane, which cleared the outfield scoreboard. National got an unearned run in the fifth inning, which helped despite two late rallies by Tri-Village.

Sal Signorelli had a triple to go along with some outstanding field play by third baseman Sean McManus and second baseman David Medusky.

Conor McMahon allowed just four hits in the loss.

Eagles sweep three, move to 13-3 on year

By Andrew Hartman

Last week was a fine one for the Bethlehem Mickey Mantle team, as it swept through its competition.

The three victories gave the Eagles a 13-3 record entering the final week of regular season play.

The week kicked off with a game at Amsterdam Wednesday. Pat Hughes put on his best pitching performance to date, tossing a two-hitter with 12 strikeouts and just two walks.

Mickey Mantle

Calvin Brown pounded a double and drove in one run. Matt Elfeldt had a run-scoring single. Ricky Long drove in a run on a bases-loaded walk. Brian Hahn brought one in on a fielder's choice. The Eagles prevailed, 5-2.

Bethlehem took on Sorensco on Saturday and won in dramatic fashion. Down by three runs in the fourth, the Eagles managed to score one in each of the final four frames to win, 4-3.

Elfeldt threw a five-hitter with seven strikeouts and two walks. Hughes smacked two singles and drove in a run. Pete Burger contributed two singles and an RBI. Tim Hill belted two singles. Ryan Sweeney drove in the winning run.

The Eagles had a much easier time with Chatham on Sunday, winning 12-2. Sweeney pitched the first five innings and tossed a one-hitter with two strikeouts. Offensively, Matt Boynton had two singles and two RBI and scored three runs. Evan McQuide stroked a single and double and drove in three runs.

Coach Jesse Braverman is optimistic as the Eagles head into their final regular season week, playing Halfmoon on Monday, Watertown on Wednesday, Twin Town Friday and Scotia Sunday.

Playoff action heats up for Bethlehem Tomboys

Willow Eyres went 4-for-5 and NewsCenter 6 became the first team to advance to the semifinal round of the Bethlehem Tomboys 14-and-under division playoffs with a 22-14 victory over The Spotlight last week.

Softball

Courtney McMahon doubled and tripled for the winners, while Rachel Sonne homered and Jen Macri scored four runs.

NewsCenter 6 is now 9-6 on the season.

Eyres and McMahon combined with pitchers Liz Alesse and Jackie O'Brien to hold The Spotlight to two hits.

In defeat, Christine Potter went 2-for-2 and also scored three runs.

Four 12-and-under division teams took to the diamond last week for their playoff games.

General Electric defeated The Bookworm, 17-2, with Keri Walsh's home run leading GE's offense.

Erin Elfeldt and Colleen Plummer added to the offensive effort while Katie Parafinczuk and Christine Capobianco were strong on the mound.

In the second playoff game, All-American Industries upset Dean Witter by a score of 19-9.

Pitchers Cortnie Anderson and Shannon Powers combined for the win.

In the 10-and-under division, eight teams were matched up in playoff action.

In and Out the Window topped Dog Guard Fencing, 9-6; Allen and Taub beat Frangella Associates, 18-14; J&S Reconditioning stopped LG&E Westmoreland, 16-9; and All-American Industries was a 20-5 winner over Adams Station.

Silt

about the plant.

"Would I go through this again? Absolutely," she said. "This is a plant that is saving this community a million dollars a year. This is a plant that will be made right."

Fuller's optimism is not shared by at least one long-time critic of the plant.

Sherwood Davies of Clearwater for Bethlehem said there is no reason to hire a consultant. He believes the Fraser firm should be held accountable since the system and plant were that firm's design.

"The well was designed by Fraser to produce six million gallons (a day), and it's supposed to yield that," Davies said.

Davies, a retired engineer, said he believes there are reasons other than silt why the yield might be declining. Pumping at higher rates rather than at a steady rate from day to day, for example, would tend to create silt build-up.

"That's why you should pump at a constant rate," Davies said.

The high concentrations of iron and manganese in the water could also contribute to build-up, he added. And he said Fraser and the plant operator "do not understand details."

Fraser rejected Davies' "spectacular failure theory."

"It (a system failure) has not happened, and it won't happen," Fraser said.

trend within the last five years where the town itself has seen substantial growth.

Comparing last year to this year, though, weather was definitely the overriding factor, according to Austin.

Besides the park's three pools, other attractions that have drawn people to the facility have been the addition of five new playing fields, two of which are in current use and the other three will be able to be played on in the near future.

"The other three fields aren't quite ready yet," said Austin. "The grass didn't come up the way we would have liked it to, so they're not quite ready yet. We are going to continue working on them this summer."

The two fields that are in operation are being used for softball.

Within the last three years, the park has seen a number of improvements, including the reconstruction of four tennis courts, the resurfacing of the pools, which was done last year, and new fencing.

"A lot of the facilities are 24-years-old now," said Austin. "We're having to replace and repair things, like a house that's 24-years-old, you have to start replacing things and repairing things."

Music

"Someone's known someone since we were kids," Shapiro said.

Rosenkrantz sparked their group's musical fire when he was 12.

"I was going to take spelunking at the Heldeberg Workshop," he explained, "but I broke my wrist and couldn't, so I took acoustic guitar instead." He stepped up to the electric guitar he now plays when he received one as a bar mitzvah gift.

Kasarjian and Tulloch got guitars shortly after Rosenkrantz, and Shapiro's cousin handed his drum set down to him.

Because it's hard to move the drums, the group practices once a week at the Shapiro home in Glenmont.

"My parents have to put up with the noise," Shapiro said, "and often ask us to turn it down."

The group, who also cite the Dave Matthews Band and 311 as some of their biggest influences, had their debut at Sara Salamone and Betsy Stambach's joint 14th birthday party, which also served as a fund-raiser for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

"We messed up at first, and really got down on ourselves," Rosenkrantz said. "By the second set, we got better, and by the third, things got crazy. I was on a chair, and Chris was out in the crowd."

"The band is maturing," Tulloch added. "We're getting better."

They have since performed at the Night of the Vocals and the Battle of the Bands, both at the middle school, taking second and third place, respectively. More important, they felt they got a good response from the crowd both times.

"We didn't play any covers," Shapiro said. "It was all our own music."

The group works together to write their material. Kasarjian writes most of the lyrics, and Tulloch has also written some. Although they each write their own parts, they often think of parts for each other.

"You can't write a good song until you've written about 30," Kasarjian said of the process, explaining that he and Rosenkrantz have written about 25 songs together, and kept about eight of them. Six of them are on the tape they recorded at Hyland Recording Studio in Albany.

The band maintains a bank account, and purchased the recording time through the recent Channel 17 auction.

Shapiro is the salesman of the group, and was instrumental in selling the first 50 tapes at school. Others are still available at Last Vestige in Albany and Drome Sound in Albany and Schenectady.

They were pleased with their first professional recording, which they found a big difference from the tape recordings they make themselves to improve the group.

"It was cool to listen to the recording with the earphones at the studio," Rosenkrantz said.

The young rockers now want to make the band more visible.

"I'd like to tour," Kasarjian said.

"We've played four times, pretty much in front of the same people," Tulloch said. "I'd like to spread our music around."

As for the long-term future, they'd like to keep playing music, although their other interests get some play time too.

"Jed and I would like to try music first," Kasarjian explained, "and separately, we both decided we want to go to the University of Michigan and study law."

Tulloch, who tries to bring a variety of influences to Visual Reason, said he'd one day like to start a jazz, funk and ska band. Another possibility is getting a job on a cruise ship, playing his bass guitar.

Shapiro plans to stick with Visual Reason for now, and maybe join Tulloch's band later. His other love is skateboarding, and he thinks about becoming a professional at that.

For now, they plan to stick with their weekly practices, and keep improving the band.

"People at school are making us better," Tulloch said.

"Yeah, we take all negative criticism," Shapiro added.

Once a month, they all sit down to talk about what bothers them. While they sometimes argue heatedly, they feel it helps in the long run.

The band is also saving up for a PA system and a mixer, and are looking to book more gigs. Right now, there are two scheduled for the fall — one at Mother Earth's Cafe in Albany on Sept. 20, and another at a private party in Yorktown.

The Spotlight remembers

This week in 1987, these stories were making headlines in The Spotlight.

- While Bethlehem had been identified as "the new development hot spot," approved subdivisions were not always being fully built out, according to an investigative article by Kevin Mullen.

- Frederick Ringler, a Bethlehem Highway Department employee, was honored by the town for his "honesty and integrity" in turning in a wallet containing more than $9,000 in cash. "There are a lot of honest people out there," Ringler commented.

- The Voorheesville Fire Department received a new custom-built Hahn pumper, which cost $143,000.

- Concerned with speeders on Jefferson Road in Bicentennial Woods off Feura Bush Road, one homeowner painted a large sign on the side of his house — "Slow down, don't hit a kid."

- Mark Verstandig of Delmar, a catcher, signed a free agent contract with the San Diego Padres following his graduation from St. Lawrence University. He was assigned to club's Class A team in Bend, Ore.

VanDeLoo, Premo to marry

Joanne Frances VanDeLoo, daughter of Joseph and Frances VanDeLoo of Delmar, and Scott Allan Premo, son of Robert and Patricia Scott of Wynantskill, are engaged to be married.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Bethlehem Central High School, Hudson Valley Community College and the University at Albany. She is employed as a proofspecialist by Albank in Albany.

Local host families needed

Any family that signs up in July to host a high school student from abroad through the Academic Year in America program will have a donation made in their name to Save the Children.

Parents and students benefit from the exchange experience. The host family learns about another culture, makes a new friend and earns a scholarship toward designated international travel-study programs.

Living with an American family and attending high school gives foreign students an opportunity to participate in the American way of life.

These benefits can be extended to a needy child in an underdeveloped country thanks to the American Institute for Foreign Study Foundation's special arrangement with Save the Children.

For information, call 800-322-4678 ext. 5418.

Orchestra offers music to float your boat

By Alvaro Alarcon

High culture without the high price is what the American Wind Symphony Orchestra promises to give during its outdoor concerts in the upcoming week. Along with playing folksy, patriotic, and classical music, workshops on the arts will be offered. All this will take place on an 195-foot Point Counterpoint II barge with a 75-foot-wide stage and acoustical shell that rises on hydraulic lifts.

The barge will dock on Albany's riverfront Corning Preserve for the first time on Sunday, July 13, for a 7:30 p.m. performance. A Troy performance will take place at the municipal dock at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, July 15. In the event of rain, the orchestra will perform a day later at the same place and time.

AMERICAN WIND SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

The orchestra will also perform at the Cathedral of All Saints in Albany during its 10 a.m. service on Sunday, July 13. The orchestra will play the prelude anthem, communion and postlude.

What makes the American Wind Symphony Orchestra's performance different from any other experience? Jennifer Meicht, co-chair of state Sen. Joseph Bruno's Volunteer Committee, which helped bring the orchestra to Albany, said: "The music that they play is slightly different, with many works written specifically for this orchestra. The big draw is that it's on the water and outside. It's a spectacular setting; it's very casual; it's something everybody can enjoy."

The American Waterways Wind Orchestra of Pittsburgh performs at sunset from the stage of Point Counterpoint II, a one-of-a-kind floating arts center.

Conductor Robert Austin Boudreau has commissioned more than 400 works from composers throughout the world. The programs in Albany and Troy will feature the "Water Music" of George Frederic Handel as well as the "Adagio for Wind Orchestra" composed by Joaquin Rodrigo. During their tour of the Capital District, the American Wind Symphony Orchestra will also perform a world premiere work by composer Hale Smith.

"Music is upbeat and patriotic," according to Meicht, and is played by college and post-college musicians. The wind symphony is composed of all the instruments except for the string family.

Also playing are five teen-age musicians from the orchestra's hometown of Pittsburgh. The inclusion of the young musicians, along with the workshops on art, music and poetry for high school students, is part of the orchestra's mission of providing entertainment and encouraging the growth of the arts in America.

"The Winds on the Mon" scholarship program allows inner-city musicians to get a free college education on whatever subject they chose. Meicht said that the orchestra wants "to target inner-city youth and to show them a way out through music."

Boudreau, who also is captain of the barge, began the orchestra 40 years ago and will continue conducting it until it finishes its last season at the end of the summer. The orchestra has traveled thousands of miles on the waterways of America, Canada, the Caribbean and Scandinavia.

Host families are needed to provide room and board for the musicians. Meicht said that car pooling will be organized. Hosting a musician in your home is an excellent way to introduce school-age musicians to older role models.

For information concerning the orchestra and its concerts and workshops, call 434-5132, ext. 213.

Meicht said that since the orchestra is in its last season, the boat is for sale. Price is negotiable.

Dorset Theatre Festival opens Moon Over Buffalo comedy

With most theaters looking for good comedies, Moon Over Buffalo is getting a big play this summer.

The Dorset Theatre Festival opens the Ken Ludwig farce Thursday, July 10, for a three week run at the summer playhouse six miles from Manchester, Vt.

Set in 1953, the comedy finds a husband and wife acting team, a poor man's Lunt and Fontanne, who are being scouted by Hollywood talent scouts.

The day the scout arrives is also the day a family crisis ensues so that the duo have a very hot family squabble while trying to perform Private Lives and Cyrano de Bergerac in repertory.

Carol Burnett and Philip Bosco played the roles on Broadway and both got Tony Award nominations. Ludwig saw his play last a year on Broadway and now almost every regional theater in the country is looking at the show for next season's schedule.

In fact, Richard Roat, a veteran of TV, film and stage, is playing the role of the husband in the acting team and then will travel to California where he'll repeat the role at the Pasadena Playhouse opposite Joanne Worley of Laugh-In fame.

Roat has appeared on all the major situation comedies on NBC and ABC and had a recurring role on Dynasty.

At Dorset, Virginia Roncetti will portray the wife in the acting couple. Most recently she finished the Toronto run of a new Serbian play.

Moon Over Buffalo plays from July 10 through July 26 with performances Tuesday through Sunday with Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Information and reservations are available at 802/867-5777.

Ballet Gala scheduled July 19 at Saratoga

With the New York City Ballet now in residency at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center, preparations are being made for the annual Ballet Gala which will be held Saturday, July 19. This annual event features a reservation-only pre-performance dinner and cocktails and post-performance dessert and champagne. The cost is $125 for Gala patrons and $75 for Junior Sponsors. All proceeds go to benefit SPAC.

Tickets for the Gala performance, which includes post-performance dancing and a midnight fireworks display, range from $40 to $75; $30 for lawn tickets.

At the Gala performances, the company will reprise two ballets not performed at SPAC in more than a decade—Ballo della Regina and Pavane. Two other works will be premiered that same evening—La Stravaganza and Brandenburg.

The La Stravaganza has been written for 12 dancers using recorded and electronic music by five composers, including Antonio Vivaldi. The dance centers on the tensions arising between two people with different approaches to life.

Information and reservations are available at 587-3330.

American Wind Symphony Orchestra to dock at Albany, Troy waterfronts

The barge carrying the 45-piece symphony orchestra of the American Wind Symphony will dock at Albany's Corning Preserve Sunday, July 13, for a performance at 7:30 p.m.

Then the barge will be towed to Troy where it will be tied to the Troy municipal dock for a second performance Tuesday, July 15 at 8 p.m.

This will be final year that the barge will tour, something the orchestra has done for the past 40 years. In the four decades, conductor Robert Austin Boudreau has used more than 1,000 musicians as the orchestra travelled on the waterways of America, Canada, the Caribbean, Europe and Scandinavia. They have travelled in buses and vans while boarding with host families in the various towns and cities on the tour schedule.

Albany professor presents two shows in the Berkshires

Albany University English professor Sarah Blacher Cohen is having two of her musical plays presented during the next six weeks by the Jewish Theater Group of the Berkshires at Lenox Town Hall in Lenox, Mass.

Molly Picon's Return Engagement is currently playing through Sunday, July 13, while Soul Sisters on which Cohen collaborated with Joanne Koch opens July 15 and runs through August 17.

The current show depicts a time in the life of Molly Picon, the leading performer of Yiddish Theater in New York during the 1930s and 40s. It stars Renee Mathews as Picon and Jerry Preskill as Picon's husband and fellow performer. Preskill also serves as accompanist for the production.

In Soul Sisters, the two performers, Vikki True and Jacque Washington, combine Jewish and African-American music in a plot that finds Sandra (True) making a name for herself in the 60s as a singer of African music when she befriends a young black singer. Despite conflicts that pull them apart, they reunite for a public concert that cements their relationship.

Information and reservations are available at 413/637-3341.

MOVING ON THE RETURN

Sometimes you can cause errors if you make your opponent nervous. Try moving forward five feet in front of the baseline; sometimes the server feels cramped and hits the ball into the net.

If you move back several feet, the server might lose his perspective on the court and hit his serve long. Moving around on the return can throw a server off and break his concentration.
