New U.S. citizen delights his Delmar mom and dad

By Katherine McCarthy

Two-and-a-half-year-old Michael Howard bounces to his front door to greet visitors, sits on the dog's head, and loudly demands a drink of juice. His parents, Tom and Andrea Howard of Delmar, couldn't be more thrilled.

Michael Howard

When the Howards adopted Michael 10 months ago from an orphanage in Tula, Russia, he weighed about 15 pounds.

"He wasn't walking, he wasn't talking, and it took him three days to smile," Andrea Howard said. Now, nearing 30 pounds, he's a little dynamo.

The Howards began working with the adoption agency From the Heart in Mechanicville in February 1996, and adopted Michael last September.

"After we decided to adopt, we looked at all the possibilities, domestic, international and independent," Andrea said. "We wanted something more secure than the independent route, and we felt insecure with all the laws involved with domestic adoptions. The birth mothers get a lot of rights."

"We were also worried about fathers stepping up later, and claiming their children," Tom Howard added.

With a Russian adoption, everything was final in six months. "When our application went in, Michael was already born," Tom said.

The Howards saw videos and photos of the children in the orphanage, and received medical information before making the trip to Tula.

"Michael's smile drew me on the video," Andrea explained.

"We went knowing we were going to adopt Michael," Tom added.

Tula was a world away from Delmar, in more ways than just geographical, the Howards found.

"It was rundown and awful," Andrea said. "We stayed with a family that was considered wealthy, and it was very uncomfortable. It was 30 degrees in

Loomis suspends students for 1 year

Boys must face consequences of gun incident

By Dev Tobin

The three eighth-graders accused of possessing or conspiring to possess a handgun at Bethlehem Central Middle School in June will not move with their classmates to Bethlehem Central High School this fall.

All three boys were suspended for one year by Superintendent Leslie Loomis following separate superintendent's hearings in the last two weeks.

"My decisions are consistent with federal legislation and district policy in these cases," Loomis said. "It is clear to me from the superintendent's hearings that each student made very wrong and ill-considered decisions and they face a heavy consequence as a result."

According to Bethlehem police, one of the boys stole two handguns, among other items, in a neighborhood burglary, then sold one of the guns to two of his classmates for $40. Police and school officials confronted the boys and confiscated

Eighth-grade parents shocked by weapon

By Dev Tobin

Parents of eighth-graders must feel more than the usual sense of wariness as their children prepare to enter Bethlehem Central High School in six weeks.

That's because the last week of middle school was marred by a shocking incident — the arrest of three eighth-graders for possessing or conspiring to possess a handgun allegedly stolen by one of them.

According to an informal survey, eighth-grade parents are unsettled by the incident, but generally relieved that the situation was resolved peacefully.

"I'm shocked that this happened in our community," said Sue Bango, adding that the one-year suspension of the three boys involved "seems to be reasonable."

The gun incident "is extremely troubling,"

Woolworth's closing a blow to town

By Michael Hallisey

"I'm devastated," said Bethlehem Supervisor Sheila Fuller on hearing the news F.W. Woolworth is closing its doors in Bethlehem.

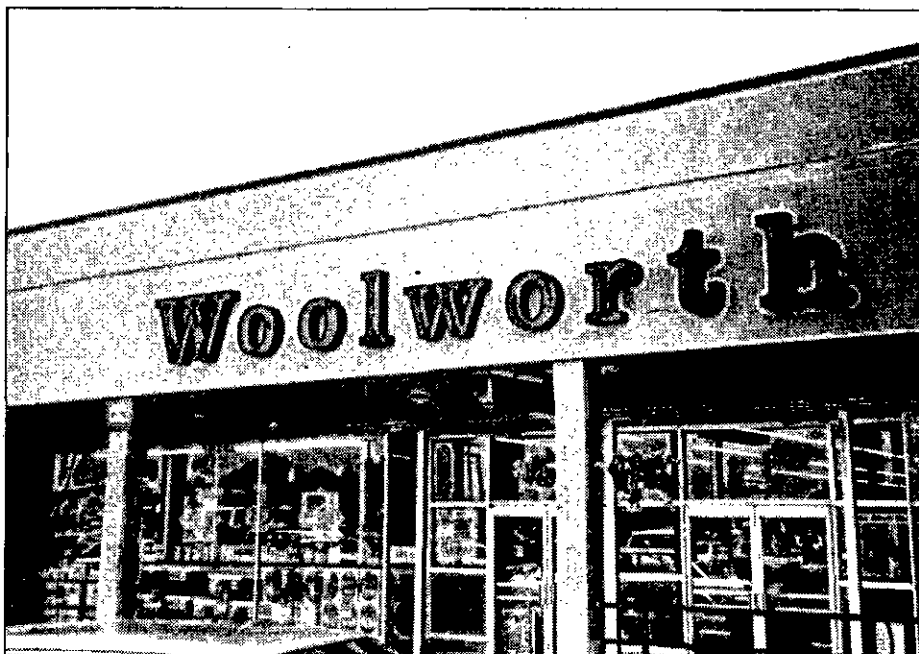

Diane Smith, office manager of the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce, said she received a call from someone asking what the chamber was going to do to prevent the department store from leaving town.

F W Woolworth has been at Delaware Plaza for many years. Howard Nolan, one of the general partners of Delaware Plaza Associates, said the department store was there when his partners bought the plaza in 1973.

When Nolan first heard of the closing through last week's news reports, he said he was not surprised.

"Over the last few years, it (Woolworth's) has been moving backwards as a chain," he said.

the gun in school on June 23. Police recovered the other gun and most of the stolen items at the alleged burglar's home.

Loomis said each of the hearings lasted about two hours.

"Each student was remorseful and recognized very clearly that what he did was wrong," Loomis said. "They will pay a tough penalty, but I hope nobody will judge them based on this one act. It is clear that each has a great deal to contribute."

Loomis added, "None of the boys intended to use the weapons in a way that would cause harm to someone else."

Loomis said the district is obliged, upon request, to provide instruction to the three boys at home.

The two-hours-a-day, one-on-one tutoring would cover all subjects in their regular course schedule, Loomis explained.

"It can't duplicate what's happening in class, but two hours of one-on-one instruction is pretty intense," he said. "It requires a good deal of follow-through on the part of the student to do work outside of the two hours."

Suspended students are not allowed to participate in after-school activities; for example, they cannot attend dances or sporting events, he added.

Police nab six on DWI charges

Bethlehem police arrested six people for driving while intoxicated recently.

Elizabeth F. Hoffman, 41, of 167 Sand Creek Road in Colonie, was stopped after police said they observed her speeding on Route 85 at approximately 1:21 a.m. Sunday, July 13.

She was charged with driving while intoxicated, aggravated unlicensed operation, operating a motor vehicle with suspended registration and a speeding violation.

Hoffman was arraigned by Town Justice Peter Bishko and sent to Albany County jail. She will appear in town court at a later date.

John A. Grady, 41, of 191 Kenwood Ave. in Delmar, was arrested after police reportedly observed him crossing the double yellowline on Delaware Avenue at approximately 3:46 a.m. Friday, July 11.

Grady was charged with driving while intoxicated and released to appear in town court Aug. 5.

Samuel L. McCann, 61, of 38 Rapp Road in Albany, was stopped for speeding then arrested for driving while intoxicated Friday, July 18, at approximately 6:30 p.m., police said.

Police said McCann was driving above the posted speed limit on Krumkill Road. He also allegedly drove over the center line three times.

He will appear in town court Aug. 5.

Robert P. Delgallo, 59, of 1080 Cytler St. in Schenectady, was arrested on Route 85 Sunday, July 20, at approximately 1:09 a.m. for driving while intoxicated after he swerved his vehicle, crossing both the white and yellow pavement markings, police said.

Delgallo was released to appear in town court Aug. 5.

Noah Sprissler, 21, of 80 Elm Ave. in Delmar, was stopped on Route 85 Sunday, July 20, at 4:33 a.m. and charged with driving while intoxicated.

He is scheduled to appear in town court Aug. 5.

Police responded to what was initially reported as an automobile and pedestrian accident Sunday, July 20, at 9:06 p.m. on Route 9W in Glenmont after a woman fell out of a moving van.

According to police, Jeffrey A. Hundley, 36, of 105 Morehouse Road in Ravena, was attempting to turn around on Route 9W when his wife Karyn fell out from the passenger side of the vehicle.

Police found the woman on the side of the road semi-conscious and charged Hundley with driving while intoxicated.

Hundley is slated to appear in town court Aug. 19.

NS board considers expanding drug tests

By Dev Tobin

As part of an overall revision of town personnel policies, the New Scotland town board will look at requiring random alcohol and drug testing of all employees, including elected and appointed officials.

Councilman Scott Houghtaling proposed the review in a memo to the board before its July 14 meeting. "I am essentially requesting the town board to consider mandatory testing of all employees in a similar fashion to that of the mandatory testing for holders of CDLs (commercial driver's licenses) in the highway department," he wrote.

In an interview after the meeting, Houghtaling said reading the personnel policy of the bank where he works inspired him to recommend bringing town policies "more up-to-date" as regards a drug-free workplace.

"This is an area that should be addressed" in the town's personnel policy, he said.

While his employer has not required him to take a drug test, Houghtaling said he personally "wouldn't have a problem with testing," especially since he drives a company car.

Houghtaling emphasized that drug use by town employees was "not a problem that I know of."

Houghtaling said he was "not interested in having everyone line up" for an alcohol and/or drug test. He said he would prefer a policy that required testing after an accident or upon reasonable suspicion.

Also, "If someone is found guilty" of an alcohol- or drug-related offense, "I'd like a policy that says they must go for help," said

Houghtaling, adding that the town's health insurance policy provides coverage for outpatient substance abuse counseling.

Houghtaling said he would bring personnel policies of his employer and Albany County to the board's next meeting Aug. 10, when the issue of expanding testing will be discussed.

The town began random testing of CDL holders in January 1996 in compliance with a federal mandate.

Highway Superintendent Darrell Duncan said CDL holders in the department are tested in four circumstances — pre-employment, post-accident, reasonable suspicion and at random.

It's a pain that we have to do it, but it keeps us on the up-and-up.

Darrell Duncan

The testing program is done through a consortium that includes the county highway department and several town and village highway departments.

He said 13 of the 15 CDL holders in the department have been tested randomly, several more than once, in the past 18 months. No town highway worker has tested positive for alcohol or drugs, he said.

"It's a pain that we have to do it, but it keeps us on the up-and-up," Duncan said.

Supervisor Herb Reilly said he was "not enthusiastic" about expanding drug and alcohol testing to the entire town work force.

"Why would you test a secretary when there's no reason to believe there's a problem?" he asked.

Murray Janos, special counsel to the Association of Towns of the State of New York, said he has heard "anecdotally" of similar local laws, but was not aware of any in the Capital District.

Planners set busy agenda

The Bethlehem planning board will review the following projects at its Tuesday, July 29, meeting at 7:30 p.m.

- Barbara and Pat Dorsey — consideration of negative State Environmental Quality Review (SEQR) and site plan approval for a two-family unit and commercial storage building on Creble Road in Selkirk.

- Stone Ends Motel — consideration of negative SEQR and site plan approval for an addition to add 19 units (for a total of 57) and parking, total of 50 spaces, on Frontage Road in Glenmont.

- Terramere — consideration of recommendation to town board for building project approval to construct 48 single-family cluster units and 26 estate homes between New Scotland Road, Cherry Avenue and McCormack Road.

- CMI Senior Housing — consideration of request to rezone a 6.7-acre parcel owned by Henry Klersy on Delaware Avenue from residential "A" district to planned commercial district to accommodate a 107-unit senior housing facility with 82 parking spaces.

- Action on the minutes of the public hearing and regular meeting on July 1.

Disabled individuals who are in need of assistance in order to attend the meeting should contact David Austin at 439-4131. Advance notice is requested.

Clyne forsakes Conservative line

Fuller will have key third-party lines in November

By Michael Hallisey

Bethlehem Democratic supervisor candidate Matt Clyne has failed to submit petitions to appear on the Conservative line in September's primary.

For the third straight election, Clyne is challenging Republican Sheila Fuller for the town's top post. In past contests, the Conservative line has been a key factor.

Clyne said Saturday, the day after the deadline for filing petitions had passed, the Democrats decided not to contest the line for "strategic reasons."

Earlier this year, the Conservative executive committee had decided to place both Fuller and Clyne on the primary ballot, provided they turned in the required number of petition signatures.

"We just thought it was appropriate not to do it," said Clyne. "We're just going to run a good, positive campaign."

"I can't believe it," said town Republican Chairman Brian Murphy. "Three weeks ago, he said he had to have it."

Clyne had actively pursued the Conservative line in his prior campaigns.

In 1993, Clyne won the Conservative line in a write-in campaign in his first race against Fuller, after incumbent Ken Ringler decided not to run for re-election.

In that year, Clyne fell just 54 votes shy of becoming the first Democratic supervisor in Bethlehem this century.

Two years later, after losing to Fuller again by approximately 470 votes, Clyne said there were two reasons for his defeat.

"Low voter turnout combined with the Conservative line," he said.

Clyne also did not actively seek the Independence line, which Fuller will have in November.

The Conservative line accounted for 414 of Fuller's votes in 1995. By itself, it was not a deciding factor, but the additional 318 votes from the Independence line figured in the result, since Clyne had developed a slight lead in the straight Democratic vs. Republican matchup.

Last September, Democratic committeeman Bill Glisson criticized Clyne for his pursuit of the Conservative line after Clyne supported Rep. Michael McNulty in the 21st Congressional District primary against liberal challenger Lee Wasserman. Despite carrying Bethlehem, Wasserman lost the primary.

"Here we have a chairman who's continually talking about getting support from the Conservative Party, and you wind up getting your butt kicked by a liberal in the primary," said Glisson at the time.

Board to vote on limiting cell towers

By Michael Hallisey

The Bethlehem town board will vote tonight on a local law to regulate where new cellular telephone and other communications towers can be built.

The local law will "make sure we're not over-saturated with phone towers," said Supervisor Sheila Fuller. "Visual impact is important in this community."

Fuller said the town cannot outlaw the construction of new towers, but can express a preference for "co-location," asking new phone services to share space on existing tall structures.

The proposed legislation will also attempt to have new towers constructed on town property, such as water towers, which would provide the town with additional revenue.

If an applicant can prove a new tower is needed, the town hopes to limit new towers in the following order of preferences — rural unzoned, industrial, commercial, or residential.

Under the law, those who wish to place communications antennas on pre-existing structures would only need site plan review approval, rather than a special use permit.

Fuller said there are three phone towers in the town. One has been built just east of Delaware Plaza, while two others have been erected on Hannay Lane in Delmar and Jolley Road in Glenmont.

The law also looks to restrict the height of new towers.

New towers which exceed 190 feet in height would also have to receive a variance from the ZBA, as well.

And, if needed, the board could also hire a consultant as it reviews applications.

Area cellular phone service providers have balked at the proposed law, saying if the town makes it harder to build new towers, the quality of service to their customers might suffer.

But Fuller said that the law only lists what the town prefers; it does not prevent the construction of new towers.

"No town can do that, without a lawsuit on their hands," she said.

Town planners revisit development proposals

By Michael Hallisey

The Bethlehem planning board has proposals on its table for two residential developments in the hamlet of Slingerlands.

No action has been taken on either, but discussion on Cherryvale continued last week and Terramere will continue when the board meets again Tuesday, July 29.

Terramere is a proposal for 48 single family cluster units and 26 estate homes between New Scotland Road, Cherry Avenue and McCormack Road.

Last week, board members listened to a revised presentation on the Cherryvale subdivision.

Cherryvale is a proposed 65-lot development located off McCormack Road, just south of the Terramere property. The homes will be located south of McCormack, and west of Cherry Avenue Extension.

One McCormack Road neighbor was concerned over increased traffic on McCormack and Cherry.

Michael Sattinger asked engineer Dale Conklin if a traffic light was anticipated for that intersection.

Sattinger said those motorists who turn left off McCormack onto Cherry have a difficult time spotting on-coming traffic, and after the development is built, the problem will only increase.

Conklin said no traffic light had been planned, but such a solution would have to be determined by the state Department of Transportation.

A right of way directly connecting the development to Cherry Avenue and Delaware Avenue was added into plans. The board proposed developers to leave such space for the possible highway for emergency response purposes.

The proposed site has been rezoned to residential "AA" twice since October 1991, and the designation will expire this October unless construction starts or the zoning board of appeals rezones the district again.

One McCormack resident wanted the board's assurance her "little paradise" will not be threatened by the two developments and will remain as it has since the recent death of her husband.

Board chairman Douglas Hasbrouck offered to talk afterward with Janet Stasio, whose home will be between the two developments.

Though she said she was not against development, she choked back tears as she asked for protection for herself and the wetlands on her home.

"I just want my whole life back," she said.

Happy teen gets car for five bucks

By Michael Hallisey

For many, the purchase of a first car can be a moment full of anxiety.

Long discussions about insurance, waiting forever for registration, and developing that first ulcer while thinking about the debt from a five-year loan.

That can be the usual scenario, but if you're 16-year-old Kevin Powell of Delmar, and your mother was patient enough to sit in a used car for three hours in the Goldstein Buick show lot, all you would have needed was pocket change.

That's $5.40 to be exact, five bucks, plus forty cents in sales tax.

"It was so funny," recalled Sandra Powell, Kevin's mother. "It was the whole rush of winning. I would have felt the same if I won the Publisher's Clearing House. It was the idea that you did win something."

Sandra said she was out of town when she first heard about Goldstein's contest. Co-workers of hers had told her of it over the phone.

Last Saturday, Sandra and her husband William took Kevin and their 20-year-old son Peter to the Colonie car dealership, hoping to find a car at a good price.

"At least $2,000," said Sandra. The plan was to arrive at the lot by 6 a.m. They were late.

When pulling in at about 7:45 a.m., there were already people sitting in the cars which they hoped to buy with a unusually large discount.

The Powells split up. Peter was looking for a car, and sat inside a Toyota. Sandra, on the other hand, saw a car she liked, but someone had already claimed it. She decided to stand close by, just in case they changed their mind.

By luck, dealers pulled a blue-green (brown if you count the surface rust) 1986 Buick Somerset into the empty space next to Sandra.

"It looked like a $5 car," said Sandra. She stepped inside and waited.

At about 10 a.m. — Kevin had already left to go to work — the five dollar price sticker was slapped on the windshield.

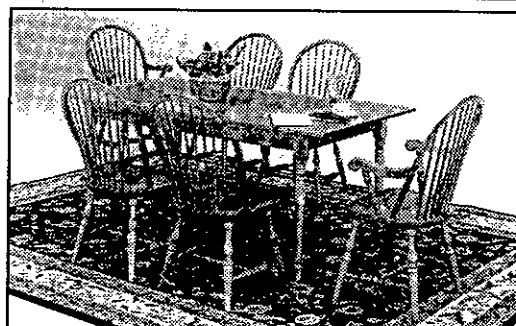

Sandra said the Buick will be a good car for Kevin to learn mechanics and drive around with. It won't be a car he can drive everyday, she said, although it did pass inspection.

Now the Powells will have four cars in the driveway. One, a used Honda they thought they could get a few more thousand miles out of.

That was a few years ago, and it's still running today.

Village Shop plans September move

By Michael Hallisey

A lot of tissue paper and bubble wrap will be needed to move one of the longest running shops in Elsmere out of Delaware Plaza.

The Village Shop, which has been part of the plaza for more than 40 years, is expected to move into the new Price Chopper Plaza in Slingerlands by the middle of September.

The collectibles store, originally owned by the Rasker family, was bought by Bethlehem resident Stephanie Biscone five years ago.

The Village Shop started out as a small department inside the Town & Tweed Shop, which closed in the early 1990s.

"This is a very difficult decision to make," said Biscone, adding that it came after many sleepless nights and "many months of careful thought."

She's aware that the store had become a "tradition" in the Bethlehem shopping center. "I didn't want to move almost exclusively for that reason," she said.

"I think this is an excellent decision for the future of this business," said Biscone. "It gives us a rare opportunity to re-evaluate the business and improve our layout."

The new store will be approximately 200 square feet larger than the old store. In addition to the larger space, Biscone is hoping to draw more patrons from Voorheesville, Albany, Guilderland and Colonie, in addition to the shop's regular clientele.

"Time will tell, but I think the new location will probably bring a variety of customers," said Biscone.

Due to a generally uncertain economy, and more specifically, layoffs in state government, business has "roller coastered" over the past three years, said Biscone.

Moving into a larger space will help Biscone establish new departments within the store, such as a larger section for babies, a Winnie the Pooh section and a men's department. Also in the Village Shop employees Berton Byron, left, Susan Nowlin and Gina Pagnotta are excited about the move to Slingerlands in September.

plans is a permanent Christmas display, including the 56 Village Line depicting a small New England town.

The new Village Shop may also have some sections located in the back of its current store pushed up to the front of the Price Chopper Plaza shop.

To prepare for the move, Biscone said there will be ongoing sales for the next six weeks.

All of the collectibles, ranging from Waterford crystal to Boyd Bears to tabletop items, are on sale for up to 20 percent off the original price. Whether they will be deeper discounts before the Elsmere store's doors close on Aug. 31 is "hard to say," Biscone said.

For Biscone, this is not her first move. She was originally an English teacher in the Niskayuna school district. She later taught at Sage JCA, and ended her educational career as an English instructor for Siena College.

Biscone said she misses teaching, but "loves" the Village Shop.

Mediterraneo owners will keep family style

By Alvaro Alarcon

Mediterraneo Restaurant's new chef and owner John Cullinan hopes there's a market in Delmar for quality southern Italian cuisine.

Cullinan has owned the restaurant since April 1, and opened it for business on May 1. Cullinan made it clear that he won't run his "family style" business like a fast food franchise.

"We're not going to compromise quality," he said.

Cullinan bought the restaurant from its former owners earlier this year with his wife Debbie, who helps with the paperwork involved in the business.

John Cullinan said Mediterraneo's customers can expect wood-fired gourmet pizzas, subs, as well as southern Italian cuisine such as shrimp scampi. Everything is made from scratch under the direction of Cullinan, who has been in the restaurant business ever since his parents put him to work in the Blenheim resort in Lake George.

Before taking over Mediterraneo, he worked at L'Ecole in Guilderland.

He does have repeat customers, and he's hoping that word-of-mouth will help people learn about the restaurant. The Cullinans want families not only to take out food, but also to eat in the restaurant.

"Whatever the community wants is what we'll give," Cullinan said. Summer hours for the new Mediterraneo restaurant are 4 to 10 p.m., Tuesdays through Fridays, and four to 9 p.m. on Saturdays. It's closed on Sundays and Mondays.

The restaurant will probably increase its hours in the fall. Pizza delivery is another possibility, Cullinan said.

The restaurant's phone number is 478-7217.

Matters of Opinion

Apt punishment

When the federal government enacted a law mandating a one-year suspension for students caught bringing guns to school, few would have thought that one of the law's first applications in the Capital District would be at Bethlehem Central Middle School.

Editorials

Three eighth-graders — one who allegedly stole two guns in a neighborhood burglary and two who bought one of the guns at school — will not be attending ninth-grade at Bethlehem Central High School with their classmates, following hearings before BC Superintendent Leslie Loomis and formal imposition of the one-year suspension.

Many school officials bemoan mandates imposed by state and federal governments, especially when money to comply with the mandate is not provided by the mandating level of government.

Most times we agree, but in this case, the mandate makes sense, drawing a gun-free-zone line in the sand around all the nation's schools — urban, suburban and rural; north, south, east and west — and saying that crossing the line will bring severe punishment.

Learning and teaching are difficult enough, even in "good" schools. Students and staff should not have to worry about pistol-packing juvenile delinquents.

The silver lining in this shocking incident is that swift and effective police work solved the burglary and gun sale cases before anyone got hurt.

Plaza plight

We like to think Delaware Plaza co-owner and former state Sen. Howard Nolan's optimism about business in the area's oldest shopping mall is well-founded.

But with Woolworth's departure and the Village Shop moving to Slingerlands, it makes business there seem a little shaky. Longtime anchor stores like Town & Tweed selling out followed by Circles departure to Stuyvesant Plaza took away some of the variety needed in a mall to attract shoppers and repeat customers.

Delaware Plaza's dilemma seems to reflect part of what has happened to many businesses, as mentioned in a letter to the editor this week from Bruce and Dana Hess, and we agree that more has to be done to make Bethlehem more business-friendly.

The chamber of commerce and the town must begin to seriously address the perception that the business climate here is chilly at best. New businesses should be welcomed in Bethlehem and given all the help they can get to launch their ventures. Unless this happens, even more empty storefronts will dot the town landscape, and that indeed would be a sad state of affairs.

Farewell

Alfred Le Vie of Voorheesville and Wilfred Frasier of Delmar passed away on Saturday, but both men will be fondly remembered in their communities.

Mr. Le Vie, featured just last month in The Spotlight, was a fixture in Voorheesville for 45 years. He and his wife Shirley ran the farm stand that defined summer for many local residents. So many were shocked when the Le Vies closed the stand, marking the end of an era.

We extend our deepest sympathy to his family and friends.

We remember "Bill" Frasier well. His was an ever-sunny spirit at the paper when he worked part-time here. He loved swapping yarns at the coffee pot and took delight in his wife of 66 years, and his children and grandchildren. He couldn't have been prouder when his son acted as best man when Bill renewed his wedding vows after 60 years of marriage.

Bill always remembered us, and never neglected to send a postcard on his trips to Disney World, and his $5 Dollar Bill signature always brought a chuckle. We'll all miss you Bill.

Couples can create harmony

By Elizabeth Reid

The author, a resident of Slingerlands, is a marriage and family therapist.

The art of coupling is a creative process. Couples create themselves together. Like artists they dance, sing, write and picture their own relationships.

Do you like the way you and your partner are dancing? Are you singing a harmonious duet? Do you use your own and your partner's feelings to enrich your joint story? Can you picture and are you feeding each other's souls?

Those intimate interactions of couples that are patterned and circular are like dances. One part of the dance leads to the next part. The dance can become the bad habits of interacting or the playful banter of comfortable exchanges. When they are flexible patterns, they are part of the art, humor and fun of a relationship. These are the things we tease each other about — "You always leave that tooth paste cap off" or "You always have to have everything in its place." When they are inflexible patterns, the dance constricts the relationship. Something has to change.

Most of us assume that if we are not feeling powerful, our partner is. We think our partner is getting more, while we are getting less. Usually what happens in relationships is a constricted dance that makes both partners feel terrible.

Often when couples first come to see me, their first glimmer of hope for success in their marriage is that they begin to see that neither of them is feeling effective.

Couples can learn to enjoy the patterns in their relationships if they become more aware of them. With the help of a trained marriage therapist, couples can change their part in the dance.

Power struggles often develop in relationships. One hallmark of a power struggle is intense verbal exchange without much listening. Power struggles can be fights, but they can also be ongoing calm exchanges. How couples use language contributes to misunderstandings and blocks resolutions.

Point of View

Couples can learn to share power as if they are singing a duet. How they decide to divide the sound affects the harmoniousness of the song.

Sharing power in intimacy takes skills such as empathy, a sense of self and one's own power, the ability to argue without taking it personally, respect for oneself and others, equal sense of power, and a plan to assuage anger.

Happy couples are aware when they behave like squabbling children. They are able to say when they feel the need for power without having to just grab it. Or they may just be playfully grabby. They each know that they need to feel in charge of themselves while simultaneously wanting to own or be owned by their partner. They understand everyone wants to feel like they are someone else's first priority.

The language of feelings is particularly individual. Each of us has learned the words in our own families and developed our own meaning for them. We each have a unique story we bring with us and as a couple we write a new story together. The feelings are the ups and downs of the story. Each person has his/her own style and way of telling. In some families, anger is the main way to show that you care. In other families, the slightest show of irritation is disrespectful and uncaring. Feelings are a part of what happy couples share with each other without using the feelings as weapons or manipulations.

There is a difference between feelings inside an individual and the feeling that develops between two people. Making this distinction in language seems to help create a new story.

For example, if one person is jealous, there may develop feelings of insecurity and distrust. Sharing this as something developing between them — not either person's fault — can help diffuse the intensity of the feelings.

Just as we each have responses to our own feelings, couples also respond to feelings. If your partner is depressed, the level of anxiety between the two of you may rise. If you are anxious, the level of frustration will likely increase and your ability to tolerate frustration will decrease. A couple's response to an individual feeling may be on the continuum of harshness to nurturing or indulgence.

Styles of how to handle feelings develop in time. One partner may come to rely on another's calmness in an emergency. A different partner could see that same calm as not taking action to handle it.

To picture the soul of a relationship is difficult. When we first meet, the soul of the relationship is the initial chemistry we feel for the other person; the sense we have of knowing what the person is about without even exchanging words. Over time, the soul images are what holds the relationship together even if things become nearly impossible.

A couple I worked with recently turned a rancorous relationship around. When I asked, "What made this possible?" The woman listed new skills they had learned about communicating, but she said, it was really possible because we are right for each other.

"We have a deeper connection that gets us to do the hard work of learning how to live and be with each other," she said. "I don't know what to call it."

I call this the soul of their connection. The soul level is often complicated and absurd. Once I asked the woman of a couple whose husband was a massive collector of Christmas ornaments, "Why does he collect these?"

"They are soul food," she said with tolerance.

The soul is the sacred picture, the aspect of relationship that allows us to accommodate and/or transcend our own insanities. One way to see the soul of your relationship is to try to picture or imagine your partner's spirit and spiritual connection. Then do the same for yourself and put them close to each other.

Couple bemoans state of business

Editor, The Spotlight:

It's time for a change. The town of Bethlehem, a once prosperous business community, has deteriorated significantly over the past several years. A quick drive through the town will tell the story of lost hopes and broken dreams.

It's not too late to turn our business community around, but we need to stop just talking about it. The zoning board makes it increasingly difficult for business to survive. Recent examples of its hard-nosed approach include initially denying Verstandig's expansion proposal and Mr. Subb's request for a few tables and turning down a plan for decks at Main Square.

Club says thank you

Editor, The Spotlight:

The New Scotland Kiwanis Club had another very successful baseball season this year. In the club's 42nd season, more than 300 kids and 90 parent/coaches participated in T-ball, minor and major leagues. Girls softball was also brought back after 10 years.

We would like to thank all the participants, parents, teen-age umpires and club members who worked so hard during the season. Special thanks to Jon McClelland and John Mellon and their staff at Smitty's Pizza and John Diedrich and his staff at Voorheesville Stewart's for their generous help in providing pizza, soda and coffee for the Kiwanis Snack Shack.

And a great big thank you to Jim and Elaine Nichols at SuperValu for their donation of hot dogs and more for our season-ending picnic and throughout the year for use of the market for our fund-raising efforts.

Dick Ramsey

New Scotland Kiwanis Club treasurer

Letters

More than once, the board has made reckless decisions, which drive business out of Bethlehem. It's time to propose drastic changes to the current zoning board or we need to appoint a new board more helpful to businesses.

The Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce is supposed to help local business people, but its silence hurts business. We need a stronger organization that can actively represent current and prospective business owners by creating an environment where business can succeed. Bethlehem should be a thriving business community, but currently most residents feel they must shop outside the area.

Large discount chains continue to invade Albany. We believe as consumers, we have a responsibility to our town as well as simply being price-conscious. We have lost so many businesses over the past few years that if the trend continues, the only thing left in Delmar will be empty storefronts, and then who will want to live here?

We remember the stores we have lost including: Baskin-Robbins, Ben & Jerry's, Brockley's, Circles, Delmar Carpet, Delmare, Ehrlich's, Frocks, Green's Appliances, Haggerty's, Haverly Motor'n'Sport, Johnson's Stationery, Laura Taylor, Linens by Gail, Pride Tailor, Rose Gallery, Speedy Photo, Sports Emporium, TCBY, Tri-Village Drugs, Tri-Village Hardware, Town & Tweed, Video Court, Village Furniture Co., Wacky Wings and many more.

Best wishes to all the families of the businesses we've lost, and thanks for all that you have given to the community.

Bruce and Dana Hess

Selkirk

Delmar woman grateful for fine town services

Editor, The Spotlight:

Several weeks ago, while listening to one of our local radio talk show hosts rant about the lack of water and other municipal services in Clifton Park, I realized that we seldom see or hear anything in the media about "our little town of Bethlehem."

As a 40-year resident, I would like to acknowledge all the work and dedication of our public officials who provide us with a first-class police force and highway department and a senior services department that is second to none.

Add to that five excellent fire departments and a paramedic service, which are always there when you need them, and you have a corps of emergency service people which would be the pride of any community.

Of course, our school district has always been a magnet for the town, and it remains one of the superior school systems in the entire Capital District.

Our town park system is a work of art and a work in progress, as it is currently being expanded to accommodate our growing population and interest in various sports programs.

Perhaps underlying all of the above is a sense of community which the town enjoys. Yes, there are improvements that could be made, true of any municipality, but by and large, you would have to look far and wide to find a better place to live, work and raise a family.

Matters of Opinion

Committeeman says town water plant critics all wet

Editor, The Spotlight:

During the last election, the candidates for supervisor and town board raised and discussed many issues for voter consideration.

One issue stood out, and so it seems has subsequently assumed a "life of its own," namely the Bethlehem water plant.

If the shouted emotional comments made at the July 9 town board meeting are any indication, then it would appear that the water plant is fair game, and we can expect a few zealots to again seed our community with statements, which can only create fear and distrust of town government.

I attended that meeting and wish to express my growing concern that a course of conduct that highlights invective, incivility and half-truths can only threaten our town's excellent quality of life.

During the last election in a letter to The Spotlight, I commented that we ought to be leery of those who project themselves as "experts." We need to seek the truth, look at the facts, review the studies, note the credentials of the engineers and state agencies professionally involved.

Bethlehem's voters did their homework as shown by the election results.

It is also disturbing that the integrity of our town's elected officers has been challenged. Does anyone honestly believe that our supervisor and board members would engage in promoting a water plant operation that would adversely affect the community where they live and raise their families?

As they say, home is where the heart is. I believe Sheila Fuller and our board members' hearts are in the right places. They have demonstrated they are reasonable people, receptive to new ideas and always willing to work with people for the good of our community. With respect to the water plant, I believe the steps they have taken are proper and in the best interest of our great community. Let's work with them, so that we're all served in the end.

My hope is that as we enter another election season, each of us be alert to the issues that affect our community, be informed and discern the personal and perhaps "hidden" political agendas. Only then can we make our vote one of informed reason and not of emotional distortion.

Many made run-a-thon a wonderful tribute

Editor, The Spotlight:

Generosity comes in many different forms. On June 9, the Sarah Whiting Run-a-thon provided an opportunity for people to be generous with their hearts and their feet. People of all ages came on that hot day to run, walk jog or amble in a show of support for Sarah's memory and the Whiting family. It was also a day when we remembered other losses, Andy Jukins and Lindsey Baron.

At the run-a-thon, Julia Cardamone, age 7, who had known

Letters

Sarah, determinedly walked around the track 21 times. And there was the multiple marathon runner, who ran the track at a steady, oiled pace.

There were many, many more who understood the importance of the event and cared with their heart and soul. Sarah's friends were there to run in her memory feeling sorrow and happiness at the same time as they watched so many people participate.

The event was created and successfully executed by a group of impressively mature, caring high school students: Dan Rosenthal, Megan McBride, Mike Cardamone, Jess Mayo Pike, Katie Noonan, Kim Link and Kelly Youngs. They conceived the idea of the run-a-thon in Sarah's memory, guided by their memories of her as a good friend, caring person and fellow student.

All the money generated was donated to Bethlehem Citizens for Pedestrian Safety to be used toward the prevention of further tragedy in our town. So far, we have received $5,240 — a very impressive total.

Thank you, Dan, and thank you to all the people who participated and showed they were touched by Sarah's life and were given a chance to show this at the run-a-thon.

'Recycling' armories for museum is great idea

Editor, The Spotlight:

In Dan Button's Point of View in the July 9 Spotlight, he suggests the recycling of state armories made redundant by military downsizing. This is an excellent idea and one that will appeal to every taxpayer.

But to a person interested in architecture as I am, I want to be sure that these buildings, in good condition, are maintained as part of the historical and visual heritage of our communities. In many small towns, the armory is one of the most important buildings — Ticonderoga comes to mind.

In cities, the size and exotic nature of these structures lends an impressive interest to the neighborhood. New York City's 71st Regiment Armory, for example, had a tower which is a copy of La Giralda in Malaga, Spain. How many American cities can offer a view of La Giralda? I believe this armory was sold for re-development and is now torn down.

On a happier note, Dan Button suggests a National Guard museum. A small group of local people have been working for this for the past decade. The New York State Military Heritage Institute was formed for exactly that purpose. After considerable "consciousness raising" and public programming, the current governor's administration appears to have taken note. Currently the Division of Military and Naval Affairs is not hostile to the idea.

If the administration and the division move quickly, such a museum can be established.

As one familiar with the collections of the state's military holdings, I can promise that it will offer a host of interesting and historic treasures — a source of pride, not embarrassment. If Arizona, established in 1912, can have a military museum for its two million inhabitants, can't New York, established in 1777, have one for its 20 million?

It's marvelous that this administration has found the money to hire a team of experts to visit each armory, to inventory and photograph all objects of historic worth, to recommend better maintenance techniques and give needed supplies to local caretakers, and if necessary bring the objects to Albany for storage.

To those who think they would not be interested in a museum full of old guns and swords, let me say that this team has located Persian rugs, Frederick Remington bronzes, Tiffany stained glass windows, Stickley furniture, non-military paintings and even entire libraries as well as the expected rarities of a military nature.

One exhibit I organized for the heritage institute consisted simply of 30 silver trophies from the late 19th and 20th centuries. Some were pretty ugly or funny, but some were replicas of Greek models made by Louis Tiffany.

I cannot do better than to quote Mr. Button directly, "Unless a site is dedicated to such use in the very near future, the opportunity would pass, and as more and more armories are vacated, their colorful records would be sacrificed forever."

Woman seeks items to help those in need

Editor, The Spotlight:

Most of us who read The Spotlight have comfortable lives, and we don't think twice about buying anything.

Yet there are many people who still have nothing. If they are lucky enough to have some place to live, it is often an empty shell, much like a hotel room. It is dismal and dreary, and these people have no way of improving it without help.

I have spent the last nine years working with people to help them get on their feet and will spend the rest of my life trying to help people live comfortably. I ask you not to discard anything. There is a definite need. I currently work with three organizations who directly help people get on their feet.

My dream is to see everyone live a normal life. That is why I urge social workers, nurses or any other group to contact me directly to let me know about clients' needs.

It really upsets me to see items on the street that I am unable to pick up. I urge you to clean out those kitchen cabinets, attics, cellars and garages. Medical supplies are also urgently needed. I also ask businesses to not discard any items. I can arrange pickup. Food is a No. 1 priority, and if necessary, I can arrange pickup.

My telephone number is 478-0407, and my fax number is the same if you would like to send me a wish list.

Chaise lounge reading

Blackwater by Kerstin Ekman is a tautly written novel that evokes images of other-worldly Scandinavian light — the long, bright nights of summer and the eerie,

Hair of the Dog will perform at the library tonight at 7:30 p.m.

dusky days of winter.

Spanning two decades, Ekman delves into the conflicts between men and nature, counter-culture and small town, past and present and imagination and reality. Each character is portrayed with a vividness that contrasts with the ethereal world of the north.

Another northern locale — an island in Puget Sound — is the setting for David Guterson's Snow

Falling on Cedars, a spellbinding book about perceptions and prejudices. The backdrop is Pearl Harbor and U.S. internment camps.

A Japanese-American fisherman is on trial for murder. The perceived motives are pride and property, but the truth goes deeper.

Guterson writes his first novel with exquisite lyricism, well-honed sense of place and meticulous attention to detail.

Bethlehem Tomboys take New York state championship

The Bethlehem Tomboys 16 & Under Travel and Tournament Team (18-2 overall record) became the New York State ASA Champions over Independence Day weekend after placing first in the state tournament.

In the championship game, Bethlehem triumphed over the Penn Yan Lakers.

In the sixth inning, down by one, the Tomboys pulled out four runs. Carrie Getz had a bunt single and advanced to third on sacrifices. With two outs, Getz became the tying run on a single by Leah Hennessy. Three more runs were earned from a single by Kim Comtois, and doubles by Josey Germain and Allison Kuta. The Bethlehem Tomboys became the state champions, winning the game 4-1.

Bethlehem began the weekend with three straight victories to place the Tomboys as the third seed in a single elimination tournament.

First, Bethlehem knocked out the Hawkins Hurricanes with a score of 8-0. Alexis Grant pitched the shutout, and was backed by the excellent defense of the Tomboys' outfielders, Carrie Clement, Kristin Green, Beth Clement, and Robyn Smith.

Next, Bethlehem faced a tough Syracuse Speed, beating them narrowly in extra innings. Down by one run in the bottom of the seventh, Kim Brown scored for the Tomboys to tie the game. In the eighth, the Speed scored one, but Comtois' frozen rope to left field drove in Kuta and put Comtois on third. Germain's fly to right sent Comtois home. Winning with a score of 4-3, the Tomboys prevailed.

In Bethlehem's third game against West Albany, the Tomboys racked up seven hits to end the game at 6-0. Bethlehem pitcher Jenna Grant put ten strikeouts in the book. Lisa Ricciardelli played great defense at second base, helping out the Tomboys.

The Bethlehem Tomboys 16 & Under team earned this year's New York State ASA Champions over the Fourth of July weekend. The team collected an 18-2 overall record and were undefeated in the Hudson Mohawk League.

Mantle takes division title

By Andrew Hartman

For the second time in as many years, and the fourth time since 1987, the Bethlehem Mickey Mantle team has won their division and is headed to the North Atlantic Regionals.

For Bethlehem to win the division the team needed Colonie and Rotterdam to each have a bad week as all three teams were tied at three in the loss column. Rotterdam finished the season at 17-4, and Colonie took third with a 16-5 record.

The only action this week was a scrimmage against the Schenectady Braves of the American Legion. The Eagles pulled out with a 5-4 victory, as Matt Elfeldt got the start and Pat Hughes was credited with the save.

Pete Bulger sealed the game with a game-winning RBI double, after Elfeldt smacked a bases loaded triple and Calvin Brown drew a bases-loaded walk.

For post season play, a coach is given the chance to select players from teams who are not participating in the tournament. Coach Jesse Braverman was given the first pick in the draft, and citing a need for left handed pitching, took Kevin Jette from Amsterdam. Braverman said Jette had pitched well against Bethlehem and is considered one of the strongest pitchers in the league.

Babe Ruth 14-year-olds fall short of states

Evidently, Bethlehem's 14-year-old Babe Ruth All-Star team likes to do things the hard way.

The team competed last week in the District 5 Babe Ruth All-Star Tournament for the right to move on to the State Tournament held in Rotterdam later this month.

However, in the championship game, the string finally ran out for Bethlehem. Despite hits by Avi Rasowsky, Alan Lewis and Brian Rowan, Gunderland rode the outstanding pitching of curve-ball pitcher Seth Knupp in a 5-2 win to place them in the state tournament.

Bethlehem lost to Central (Albany) in the opening game, 3-2, despite outstanding pitching by Rasowsky, a clutch RBI double by Tim Rice and key hits by Josh Burnett and Jon Albert. The loss forced the team to compete in the loser's bracket, where they faced the prospect of having to win three consecutive games to battle their way back to the championship game and they did just that.

Bethlehem defeated Colonie 12-8 behind strong pitching from Morgan Gmelch. Rice, Albert, John Nowak, Lewis, and Burnett all helped spearhead the attack.

Bethlehem defeated Central 11-1 in a rematch. Long home runs from Lewis and Gmelch and solid hitting from Rasowsky, Nowak and Nate Turner helped starting pitcher Burnett with the winning cause.

Owners say Slingerlands Strip enjoying prosperity

By Hugh Hewitt

Recently, I drove from the Blue Cross-Blue Shield building at the intersection of New Scotland Road and the Slingerlands Bypass, to the railroad underpass beyond New Scotland Town Hall, interviewing business owners along the way.

I was surprised to hear them refer to that section of the New Scotland Road as the Slingerlands Strip. This was to me, a 30-year resident of Slingerlands, a brand new expression.

In the more than 30 businesses located on and just off New Scotland Road, the response to "How's business?" is a resounding "Great!"

There are three well-defined business sections along this four-mile Slingerlands Strip. One is at the intersection of New Scotland

Road and Cherry Avenue Extension. It has become a major Slingerlands business section with the recent opening of a shopping plaza. The second, the oldest business section in Slingerlands, is at the intersection of Kenwood Avenue and New Scotland Road. And beyond, still part of the Slingerlands Strip but in the town of new Scotland a business section continues to develop centered on the intersection of Routes 85 and 85A.

The mood of the people I talked with was definitely up-beat. All of my informants are in agreement that it is a rapidly developing business area. And they feel that what sets it apart from other shopping areas in the Capital District is the quality of goods and the friendly, helpful service.

Ben Boomer, owner of the Mug

Joe Robilotto of Falvo's cuts a mean, lean steak.

Hugh Hewitt

& Brush Barbershop in Slingerlands, commenced barbering in the 1950s. After working in several locations in the Tri-Village area, he moved his barber shop to Slingerlands a year and a half ago. Many of his costumers from the preceding decades still come to him for their haircuts. He reports that among his many new costumers are people from Slingerlands, New Scotland and Voorheesville. Boomer attributes his success to the friendly, homey, unhurried atmosphere he is able to maintain and his ability to provide the kinds of haircuts his costumers want.

The Falvo Prime Butcher Shop, owned by Joseph Robilotto, is on route 85A, just a stone's throw from New Scotland Road. I didn't have to ask Robilotto how business is because the number of cars and vans in the parking lot and of customers inside indicated that even at noon in the middle of the week, business was good.

I appreciated the mini-course Joe gave me on the different qualities of meat—prime (top quality), choice and select. The Falvo meat market specializes in prime quality. Robilotto stressed that if it's properly trimmed and cooked and eaten in moderation, meat fulfills a necessary dietary requirement. He feels that his success is due to the high quality of meat he sells and the courteous and helpful service customers receive.

Lynn Warrell, owner of Crafts & Fabrics Beyond the Tollgate, who has been in business on New Scotland Road for eight years, was decidedly up beat.

In answer to the question "How's Business?" she said "Just look around here! There's the Tee Time Golf driving range, Olsens Nursery and Greenhouses, Robin's Nest gift shop, the Saab dealership and garage, and a half dozen established and new businesses at the intersection with Route 85A. Business has to be good, and she said that people in this area respond favorably to a shopping experience in which quality goods are available and the service is helpful and courteous.

Karen Moreau and her sister Colleen Stanton run Our Family's Harvest, a produce and garden shop located next to New Scotland Town Hall. They have been in business for four and a half years. They stressed the importance of quality and service. Business at Our Family's Harvest is good as the newly enlarged and remodeled produce stand attests. It's a greatly appreciated source of fruits and vegetables.

Richard Long, Jr. and his brother Robert own Long Lumber & Supply Corp, which was founded by their father 52 years ago. They feel that the market for their company's quality fencing and outdoor furniture has increased during the past few years. It's a given, they said quality and service are not only necessary for maintaining but for building a business. They believe that a reason for improved business is that the economy is up and people, at least in this area, have more disposable income.

Yes, It's quite apparent that business is good on the Slingerlands Strip.

Shocked

said Jeffrey Zogg, president of the school's PTA and an eighth-grade parent. "I hope the board of education and the administration take some decisive action, once they learn all the facts."

Zogg credited Bethlehem police and school administrators for their "rapid solution" of the case.

"I'm a little surprised, but school officials handled it well," said Joanne Parnes Shawhan.

While "The world is a much more dangerous place than before," Shawhan noted that the middle school "does an awful lot to help at-risk students."

One mother who wished to remain anonymous said she was "surprised" by the incident, but believed it was "isolated."

"It's not a common problem at the school, and it was dealt with quickly and efficiently," she added.

Another parent who wished to remain anonymous said that a few cliques in the eighth grade had hardened almost into gangs, increasing the threat and the actuality of violence at school.

BC Superintendent Leslie Loomis, himself an eighth-grade parent, said, "The most important thing is to provide a safe environment for learning. These students made a very bad choice, and there will be consequences."

Loomis denied that the eighth grade is more prone to trouble than other grades.

"The staff characterizes this eighth grade as very good, one of the most positive," he said.

Loomis added that his investigation of the incident found that none of the boys intended to use the weapons to harm others.

Museum concludes famine lecture series

The Irish American Heritage Museum's lecture series to commemorate the 150th anniversary of Black '47, the darkest year of the Irish potato famine, concludes with "The Famine and Women" by Anne Sullivan, who teaches English and Irish literature at the University at Albany.

Sullivan will speak on July 26 at 4 p.m. at the museum exhibit center in East Durham and on Aug. 5 at noon at the Albany Public Library, 161 Washington Ave.

Museum officials request that those interested in attending these free lectures call to reserve seating. For information, call 634-7497.

Catholic schools plan joint reunion

The 1952 classes of Christian Brothers Academy, The Academy of the Holy Names and Vincentian Institute will hold a joint 45th high school reunion on Saturday, Sept. 6.

The "senior picnic" clam bake will take place at the Clifton Park Elks Lodge.

Major Kelly is off to Washington, D.C.

By Michael Hallisey

He's not Jimmy Stewart, but Glenmont resident Army Maj. Terrence K. Kelly is going to Washington.

The 37-year-old professor at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point is going to Washington D.C. on a national education fellowship geared to teach applicants more about the federal government.

Kelly said the fellowship takes people in mid-career to Washington D.C. to learn about the uses of the departments within the federal government.

Some applicants can become special assistants to the president, vice president, or cabinet members.

Last week Kelly traveled to the Capital for a number of interviews to place him in the programs of his choice. Those he hopes to get into are subjects involving the Department of Commerce, Department of State, the Office of Management and Budget, U.S. trade and the Department of Treasury.

Why?

Kelly said, "Once I get out of the Army, I'm interested in politics."

Kelly has taught at West Point for a year, the same school he graduated from in 1982.

Kelly and his wife Gloria have lived in Bethlehem with their three daughters Diane, Caroline and Theresa for the past couple of years. The Kellys are members of Parents for Excellence, an advocacy group in Bethlehem.

He is a 1978 graduate of Niskayuna High School, and returned to the Capital District when the Army sent him to Rennselaer Polytechnic Institute to earn his second doctorate.

their apartment at night, with no heat."

"We paid $650 for five days of room and board," Tom explained, "which was more than our hostess, who is the assistant director of the hospital in Tula, earns in a month."

The orphanage was also very bleak, with one staff member per 30 toddlers, and kids remaining in their cribs for most of the day.

"Michael just rocked back and forth," Andrea said. "They told us that children who don't get a lot of attention do this to soothe themselves. We got down on the floor and I put out all the toys I had brought, and Michael didn't do anything. The translator told us nobody had ever done that with him before."

Michael had been brought to the orphanage at birth, and it took him a few days to make contact with the Howards, preferring to cling tightly to the women who spoke his native language.

While establishing their first bonds with Michael, the Howards also had to complete the necessary paperwork to bring him home, much of which they had begun in the states.

"We had the agency application, which questioned us about our beliefs and philosophies," Andrea explained.

"They checked with our bank, got a credit report, and even fingerprinted us. Then there was a fee to stay in Russia, and all our documents had to be notarized here. We had to get a county seal to verify the notary, and a state seal to verify the county seal."

The Howards also had a visit from a social worker, something they "got all worked up about," Andrea said. "We sat home and practiced questions."

The final step in Russia was a visit to the U.S. Embassy for Michael's visa application.

"It was mobbed," full of people adopting children, Andrea said.

"We got there around 7 a.m., and were there till 1 p.m.," Tom said. "The procedure itself was quick, it was just that the line was long."

After arriving home, the Howards were thrilled with Michael's rapid development.

"He ate more than I thought he would," Andrea said. "He gained five pounds in the first month, and there were dramatic changes every day. He started walking, running and laughing."

The Howards said experts feel that with enough love, attention and food, young children can overcome the negative effects of neglect at a young age.

The Howards have settled into life as a family, and credit both their families with providing them with a lot of support.

Tom joined his father's company, Delmar Service Contractors, about four years ago.

Andrea is a guidance counselor with Rensselaer-Columbia-Greene BOCES, working two and a half days a week.

"Michael's two grandmothers help watch him," she said, "which is great. I can still work and be at home."

Like any parents, the Howards say they notice more laundry and less time. "I do a lot of late-night grocery shopping," Tom said.

Both are very happy, and strongly encourage others interested in adoption to go for it.

"We haven't met anyone who's unhappy that they adopted a Russian baby," Andrea said.

"We adopted one, and saw all the kids we left behind," Tom said.

The Howards stay in touch with other families they've met through From The Heart, attending reunions and picnics. In April, there was a citizenship ceremony, where Michael and a dozen other kids officially joined their adopted country.

Michael has worked out so well, "We're thinking about number two," Tom said.

"Definitely," Andrea added, smiling at Michael, perched atop his golden retriever.

Woolworth's

As recent as March, Woolworth said it planned to close its most unproductive stores following continued losses.

Fuller was first concerned about the Bethlehem store when Woolworth Corp. closed nine stores in the Capital District from 1993 to 1995.

Despite the news of Woolworth closing, the new Price Chopper Plaza in Slingerlands bringing competition to Grand Union and the possibility of Revco closing when the pharmacy store finally merges with CVS, Nolan said business in Delaware Plaza is doing fine.

"Stores that have been busy are still busy," said Nolan. "It's a typical retail center. We've been very lucky with few changes. I'm sure we'll find a tenant."

Woolworth's lease with Delaware Plaza is still good for another five years, said Nolan. But, he said he sees Woolworth's wanting to break the lease in the near future.

There is still the possibility of another Woolworth Corp.-owned store moving into Delaware Plaza.

Woolworth corporate headquarters said approximately 100 of the 400 stores to be closed will be converted into Champs, Northern Group or Foot Locker specialty stores.

Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce President Marty DeLaney said she will contact Woolworth Corp. to lobby for one of those stores for Delaware Plaza.

By Michael Hallisey

Cooperstown is a natural place for story telling. Long before the cornerstone of the Baseball Hall of Fame was placed, the small lake side town was home to James Fenimore Cooper, author of The Last of the Mohicans. So, it is only fitting for those who visit the area to be overcome with regional folklore.

For a lot of sports fans, baseball in the summertime is as natural as a light breeze. Cooperstown has it all. About 90 miles southwest of Albany, and 20 miles north off of Route 88, Cooperstown is a burst of energy in the middle of mostly rural Otsego County. The ride itself is beautiful enough for adults to enjoy, and the hour-and-a-half trip is short enough for children to endure. One suggestion is to make a weekend out of it.

A few weeks ago, a traveling companion and I made the trip. After easily finding the town — there are road signs to help out — we quickly found out you need to plan ahead to spend the night in a bed and breakfast. Otherwise, you might find yourself spending the night in Oneonta or Cobleskill (both are about a half hour away).

For more than half a century, Cooperstown has been the "Mecca" for baseball players and fans alike. It is still a matter of controversy as to whether or not it was the actual birthplace of the sport. Nonetheless, it now has the largest collection of baseball artifacts collected under one roof. Many items, in fact, are in storage because there is not enough display space. But what can be seen is worth hours of entertainment, and a means for children to learn about the players who paved the way for today's superstars: Barry Bonds, Frank Thomas and Ken Griffey, Jr.

Once you go through the Hall's front gates, the feeling inside is almost like walking into grandma's house. Old pictures, stories shared by everyone, and a sense of belonging set the stage for what's ahead.

Baseball stories are passed down through generations much like folk lore.

Around each corner, young fathers answer countless questions from their children. And even if there are no questions, people will see something that will bring out a story to tell.

Most know about the plaques of those players considered worthy of the "Hall of Fame," but there are many other people celebrated inside.

All leagues — American, Canadian, overseas — from children, women and African-American have their own sections. It's not impossible to find 72-home runs and 200-season batted in is where it comes to accomplish, a 12-year-old boy once played a game in the minors, and the Hall of Fame acknowledges the feat accomplished by a man in the Negro Leagues.

For years it has been said no player has hit a home run which cleared Yankee Stadium. However, a few decades before Mickey Mantle, stories of a catcher by the name of Josh Gibson stated he had done just that. He is known as the black Babe Ruth, and is thought to have hit more homers than the Babe, but statistics were not well kept to support this. The Hall of Fame, in a special tribute to players in the Negro Leagues, plainly states Gibson hit one out of Yankee Stadium. Unfortunately, Gibson died at the age of 35, shortly before Jackie Robinson broke the color barrier in 1947.

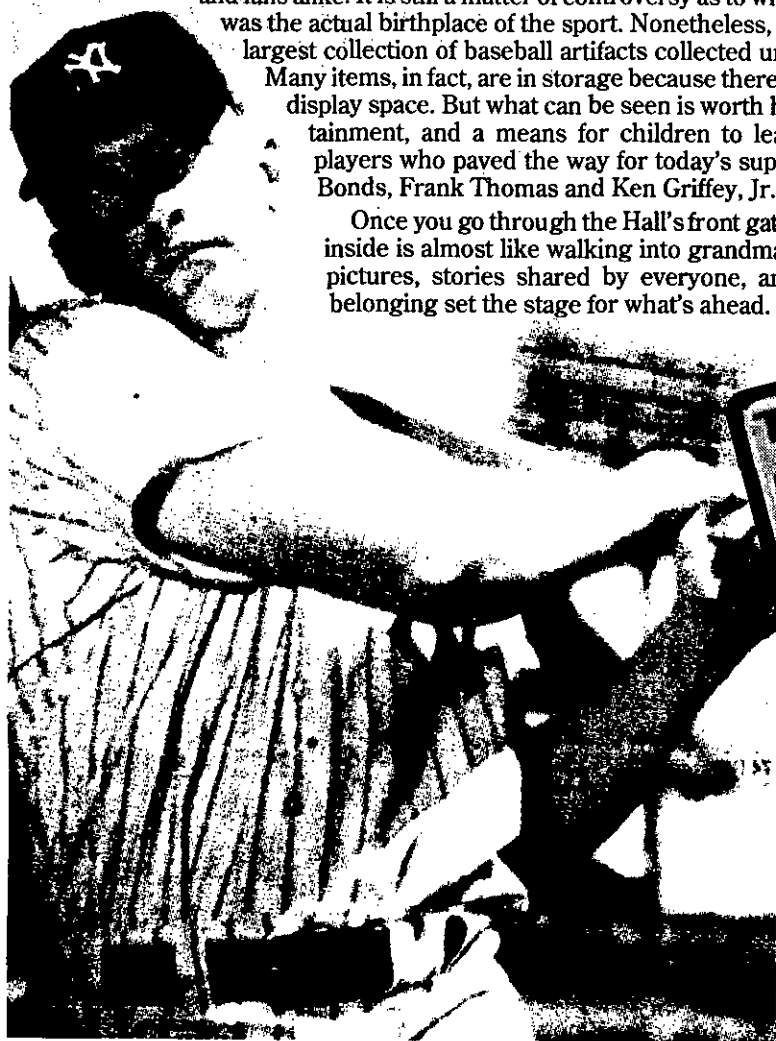

There are some stories you will hear which are not explained by the artifacts alone. I caught myself, as well as others, telling such tales while inside. Around one corner, one father tells how Babe Ruth worked in a tavern where the left field bleacher of Camden Yards now stands. Another tells how Tiger second baseman Lou Whitaker lost his baseball uniform on transit to in all-star game.

Baby boomers boast of seeing Mickey in his prime, or how Willie Mays could bust the ball park bleachers with his line drive home runs. As the years go by, more players become a part of legend. As I have grown older, my favorite ball players have retired, or are soon exiting. Nolan Ryan, Don Mattingly, Dave Winfield — they no longer play, but they still have a place in baseball legend and lore.

If the family is tucked out from baseball. It is only a short walk to beautiful Otsego Lake. Within Cooperstown is the Fenimore House, a farmers' museum, a museum for Corvettes and plenty of craft shops.

For more information, call the Cooperstown Chamber of Commerce (607) 547-9983. Admission to the Baseball Hall of Fame is $8 for adults and $5 for children.

Sitting in the park along the lake, it's easy to see how Cooper began to write his stories. And with baseball, the story telling continues with the thousands of tourists who stroll through the town each year.

Guys and Dolls entering mid-point week in Albany's Washington Park run

Despite some really hot weather, the Guys and Dolls company has racked up two solid weeks of performances with one rain out. With a company of local actors supporting two Equity performers, Sandra Bargman and Steve Fletcher, the production features an eight-piece orchestra to play the brassy score of Frank Loesser.

Fletcher who is playing the role of Sky Masterson, originated by Robert Alda, the late father of Alan Alda, is also the executive director of the Park Playhouse. He is a faculty member too at the New York State Theater Institute. A veteran of 25 years of teaching theater and performing in Chicago and Los Angeles, the former television soap opera villain moved to the Albany area six years ago and has been kept busy in theater throughout the year.
