New law will spell relief for seniors

By Michael Hallisey

A new tax exemption program passed by the state Legislature this year is expected to provide relief for senior citizens on fixed incomes, but Bethlehem Assessor M. David Leafer said residents who qualify will have to wait until next year when the program begins.

The state School Tax Relief Program (STAR) provides partial exemptions from school taxes for homeowners aged 65 or older who earn no more than $60,000 as a family.

The deadline to apply for STAR is March 2, 1998. Applications are available at the town assessor's office, or on the Internet at <http://www.orps.state.ny.us>.

Gov. George Pataki signed the new law in August. It was not passed in time to take effect for this school year, as originally proposed. It should be reflected in school taxes for the 1998-99 school year.

"The state is especially eager to provide better relief for people 65 and older," said Leafer. "Eventually, everyone will get some kind of relief."

In its first year, only senior citizens will benefit from the exemptions. However, in

Expanded horizons

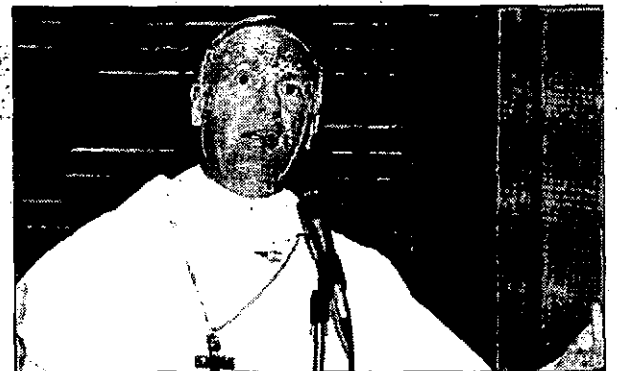

St. Thomas School opens in style

By Michael Hallisey

Something other than the school year is new at St. Thomas School on Adams Place in Delmar.

The school completed a $1.2 million expansion project in mid-August, providing three additional classrooms and a computer room, a new library and kitchen, as well as expanding the size of the gymnasium and school library.

The 40-year-old school building also went through major renovation. Rooms were painted, bathrooms redone, light fixtures upgraded and asbestos was removed from the ceilings.

"Obviously we wanted to upgrade our facilities," the Rev. James Daley, pastor of the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle.

"A ton of volunteer work was involved," said Sister Mary Frederick, St. Thomas School principal. "Parishioners completely emptied the building, carrying desks and chairs."

The desks were stored inside a trailer in the school parking lot as renovations continued, Daley said.

New phone lines were installed within the school in order to have a local area network connecting computers in classrooms, offices and the computer room.

"Everyone is excited about it," said Sister Frederick. "It's so thrilling to see the building process from the ground-breaking in March to the dedication Monday."

Parents want to bring back the Bard

By Dev Tobin

After two Bard-less years, Bethlehem Central High School thespians and their supporters want a chance to put on a Shakespeare play this year.

The Bethlehem Theater Support Group and a dozen or so students came to last week's BC school board meeting to ask for a $1,000 loan to the parents' group for equipment necessary to produce Romeo and Juliet this year.

Support group co-president Wendy Lefkovich said the $1,000 would go for equipment for safe, realistic stage combat and for minor lighting items in Room 46 at the high school, where the play would be performed.

She said that the parents' group had raised about $15,000 in the past three years to support student theatrical work.

"Our organization has been quite successful in raising money, and even in the worst case, could repay this small amount," Lefkovich said.

"Let's get the play going," she said. "We want to do something for the kids and the kids want to do it."

Lefkovich said the play could be produced before Thanksgiving.

Superintendent Les Loomis said he was concerned about the amount of the loan request and that the Shakespeare play could detract from the other two productions at the high school.

"It's clear there is a need and desire for a pilot offering of a Shakespeare play this year," Loomis said. "We should look at the timing, so it won't conflict with the other play" presented in December.

Loomis said the district should also conduct a comprehensive review of its drama programs.

In other business, the board approved hiring a half-time library aide at $7,663 a year to ensure that the libraries at Elsmere

Neighbors oppose unlocking lot

By Michael Hallisey

Ellsworth Place — it's not a new Aaron Spelling drama, but the atmosphere of last week's public hearing of the Bethlehem zoning board of appeals made for an interesting show.

Cathy McEneny asked the board for permission to build a driveway through a neighboring parcel of land, owned by Maurice Benno, to Ellsworth Place in order to build a home and make her property more appealing to sell.

Cathy and Terence McEneny currently own two lots, approximately two-fifths of an acre when added together, between Lincoln and Bedell avenues. They have held on to the property since selling a home on Lincoln Avenue seven years ago. McEneny said last week the home was advertised as having additional land for a separate price. The family who bought the home chose not to buy that land.

Because the property is "land-locked" and cannot be sold as it is now, the McEnenys would like to build and sell a "modest" one-story, one-family home there.

Cathy McEneny said they would first offer the house to the family who purchased their Lincoln home, then to the neighboring property owners, before placing it on the market.

"We have this piece of property we really don't want to own anymore," said McEneny.

In order to gain access to this proposed home, the McEnenys want to build a 16.5-foot wide, 60-foot-long driveway through Benno's land and connect it to Ellsworth Place.

Of the 10 people who appeared at the public hearing, nearly all were against the proposal, including Benno.

"This is not a case of hardship," said Benno. "It's a case of someone asking to change the appearance and character of our neighborhood for the matter of money. I live there because I like the environment. I don't want any change in that neighborhood."

An Ellsworth Place resident agreed.

"We are being asked to change our street here because it was not

Though the proposed driveway imposes on Benno's property, a stipulation in the deeds of McEneny, Benno and Edgar Histed — who owns land north of McEneny's property — mentions a 16.5-foot right-of-way, or private road, reserved for adjoining property owners to use.

The private road mentioned in the deeds, originally drafted in 1929 under former property owner Edward J. Bedell, is now Ellsworth Place. And the right-of-way, continues another 200 feet north from Ellsworth Place to the Histed property.

A question remains as to who owns the right-of-way, which is only visible on tax maps.

This is not a case of hardship. It's a case of someone asking to change the appearance and character of our neighborhood for the matter of money.

Maurice Benno

feasible for the McEnenys to give away an acre of their land," said Neil Brady.

One resident noted that because of the property's close proximity to Delaware Avenue, it would be likely to go at a high price.

Nancy Wiegand of Ellsworth Avenue asked McEneny why she did not place the property for sale before approaching the board with her plan.

A shouting match between Benno and board Chairman Michael Hodom took place after Hodom tried to divert questions about the property's value away from the hearing.

"I'm sorry I'm raising my voice," said Benno, who had an offer to buy the property turned down by McEneny in the middle of the hearing. "But I want to show the board here tonight that this is all about. We are talking about a lot of money."

Though the town paved the road in 1970, and has plowed it for several years, deeds presented to the board suggest it is a private road. According to the Histed deed, he owns the right-of-way and Ellsworth Place.

But Ruth Young of Ellsworth Place remembers former residents signing away rights to the road to the town.

"It wouldn't be the first time," said Histed.

Hodom asked McEneny if she would consider paving the 200 feet of the right-of-way, to the Histed lot. It was never considered, said McEneny, and the length would not make it feasible for her family to build. Even a joint purchase between McEneny and Histed was not discussed until last week.

Histed said the driveway to his property would be useful, but did not see a reason to pay for such a project now.

Beverwyck construction upsets residents

By Michael Hallisey

The dust kicked up from previous construction of the Beverwyck senior housing development in North Bethlehem has nearby residents concerned about the next phase of the project.

Phase III of Beverwyck is under review by the Bethlehem planning board and was the topic of a public hearing last week.

Beverwyck proposes to build a two-story, 41,318-square-foot building as a social day-care facility. Included in the plans are 41 units of assistive living apartments, a licensed home care agency office, a 2,095-square-foot community center and a 2,400-square-foot campus service building.

A nursing home was originally proposed, but Beverwyck could not get approval from the state Department of Health.

Fran Case of Marathon Lane complained about how water pooled as much as four-feet deep in her backyard due to runoff from the Beverwyck.

Case, a resident of 12 years, said her problems with the water only developed four years ago.

The construction of the first two phases began in 1989. In 1993, the doors first opened and the Beverwyck now houses approximately 200 people, in an assisted-living atmosphere, said Doug Miller of Beverwyck.

Case said she believes the water comes from the sloping grade of nearby Beverwyck Lane. She said water has pooled in her backyard and is killing her trees. She said she had presented the problem to an official at the senior housing development in the past, but nothing was done.

Miller did not rule out the possibility of a backed-up drainage system that runs along both sides of Beverwyck Lane.

Case also asked for Beverwyck to better contain the dust that flies from the construction site over the neighboring properties. She claims her indoor carpeting is now ruined from past construction. Beverwyck officials said contractors will be asked to use Beverwyck Lane only, and not a dirt service road which they used during prior construction.

Riley office variance on ZBA agenda

A controversial home and business headquarters in Slingerlands is on the agenda of the next meeting of the Bethlehem zoning board of appeals Wednesday, Sept. 17.

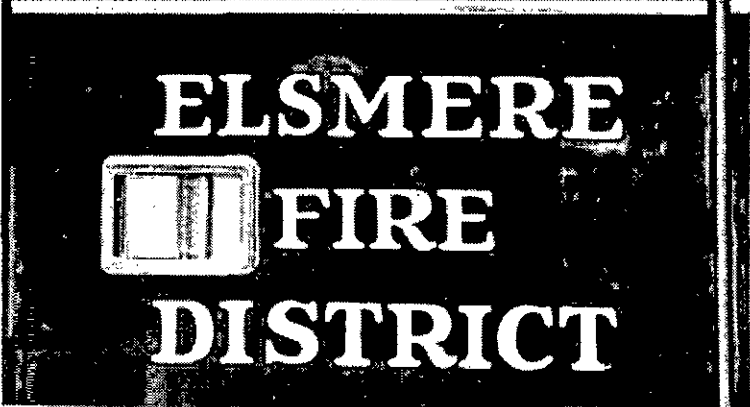

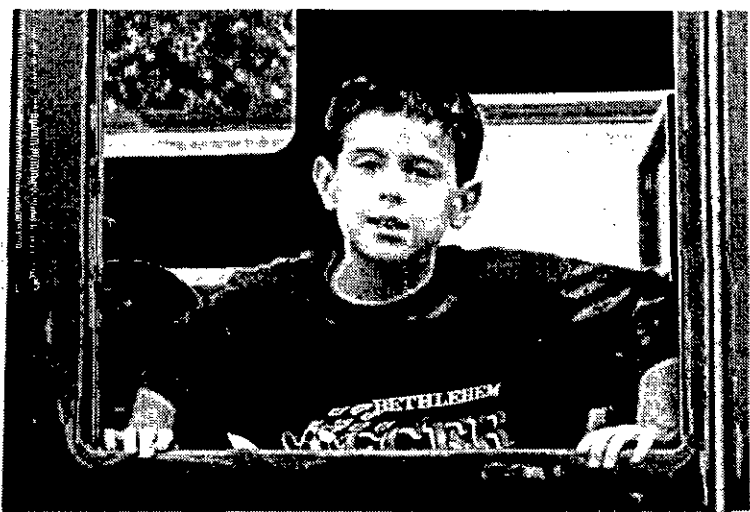

Problems arose after Carole Riley purchased a $460,000 Slingerlands home for her home, as well as company headquarters for the 47 Pizza Hut franchises she owns in the Capital District and western Massachusetts.

Though the 200-year-old home has served as a hotel, a post office, and a tavern in the past, it is currently in a residential zone, where business offices are not allowed.

In April, the board told Riley there was a possibility it might not grant her a use variance.

In order to obtain a use variance, Riley must prove financial hardship, both unique and not self-inflicted.

NS planners put down beagle kennel proposal

By Dey Tobin

Citing overwhelming opposition from neighbors due to incessant barking, the New Scotland planning board unanimously rejected Joseph Kaminski's plan to operate a kennel specializing in beagles on Crow Ridge Road.

Kaminski's kennel had aroused vocal neighborhood opposition at last month's public hearing, including his next-door neighbor playing a tape of barking beagles for the board.

Kaminski had kept as many as 20 beagles on his property for many years without the special use permit required when there are more than three dogs at a residence. After neighbors complained about the noise and smells, Kaminski was told that he had to secure the special use permit.

Board member Annick Belleville said she had an unpleasant personal experience with the beagles while walking on Crow Ridge Road last year.

"I was walking quietly on the road, and I was confronted with this barking," Belleville said. "My hair stood on end and I thought I was going to be attacked."

The beagles were fenced in, but Belleville called the noise they produced an "extremely frightening cacophony — I thought, thank God I don't live here."

Board member John Loucks said Kaminski would need a larger property to insulate neighbors from objectionable noise and smells.

"I can't see more than three dogs on a lot only 75 feet wide," Loucks said. "There's no way you'll keep them from becoming a nuisance. You'd need four or five acres for that kind of dog, and a stockade fence to keep the noise down."

William Childs

Board member William Childs said, "It just does not belong there. To allow it to go on would be an absolute mistake."

Board attorney Margaret Adkins said the board could reject the kennel if the board determined the kennel was "more objectionable" than other uses allowed by special use permit in the Residential/Agricultural zone.

While Kaminski's attorney had argued that case law on the issue of special use permits for kennels did not allow the board to reject a permit based on noise, Adkins said the cases she researched found that a planning board could not reject a permit solely because of hypothetical noise problems.

Board chairman Robert Stapf said he was convinced that noise was a major problem after listening to the reports of neighbors and Belleville and the audiotape.

No board member made a motion to approve the permit, so Stapf asked for a motion to disapprove the permit, which all seven members voted for.

Bob's Produce reports theft

Close to $830 was stolen from Bob's Produce on 65 Delaware Avenue in Elsmere between 6 p.m. Monday, Sept. 1, and 8:45 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 2.

Bethlehem police said an unknown person forced open a door leading to the deli section of the store and swiped a bank bag with $764 in store receipts and $60 in change.

Those responsible in the crime face charges of third degree burglary, a felony, and petty larceny, a misdemeanor.

Cops investigating burglary

Nearly $700 worth of merchandise was allegedly stolen out of the Colonial Golf Inc. office on 27 East Saybrook Drive in Glenmont between 7:20 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 30 and 5:55 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 31, according to police.

Bethlehem police said the thieves were able to enter the store through a rear window. A 13-inch television was wedged into the window in order for the burglars to leave with approximately $698 worth of golf equipment, about $400 in golf balls.

Police notified Ames and Kmart of the burglary, but neither reported any incident.

The K-9 unit was called to investigate.

Cash missing from Kmart

Bethlehem police said confusion over change for a $10 might have led to the theft of $460 from a Kmart cash register tended by a 17-year-old employee.

According to Bethlehem police, a female customer, approximately 40-years-old, medium height and shoulder-length brown hair, complained to the cashier about the change she received.

When the clerk opened the cash drawer, she reached over and grabbed numerous $20 bills to show him what she wanted.

She was described as having a German accent.

The woman seemed to have return the money, but $460 was later found to be missing when receipts were counted.

Resident reports stolen bike

A Catlyn Court resident in Delmar reported a $1,200 specialized road racing bike stolen from outside his home.

Bethlehem police said the bike was reportedly stolen between 9:45 p.m. Friday, Sept. 5, and 4:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 6.

Fender bender

Bethlehem police said J. Scott Merritt, 46, of 130 Elsmere Ave. in Delmar, was driving east on Kenwood Avenue (his car on the left) to take his daughter to St. Thomas School at approximately 8:36 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 4, when Lara Washousky, 23, of 21B Lavery Drive, Delmar, took a left turn in front of his car. Both Washousky and Merritt's 5-year-old daughter were treated at Albany Medical Center Hospital for minor injuries and released.

Square dancers want to share the fun with others

By Linda DeMattia

There is a lot more to square dancing these days than a simple "dosado." In fact, this national folk dance is great for physical and mental health, as well as just plain fun, according to Connie Tilroe and Brenda Winne, who, along with their husbands George and Paul are the co-presidents of the Tri-village Squares. And to help introduce the activity to others, the club is holding Fall Fun Nights this month at First United Methodist Church on Kenwood Ave.

"If you can walk, you can square dance, but you must have lessons to learn the calls," said Brenda Winne of Feura Bush. "The best place to start is at fun nights. People will learn about five or six calls and will learn how to use them in a dance. If they like it, they can continue for 20 weeks of lessons and dancing. Once all the lessons are complete, you've learned the mainstream program (which includes 52 basic calls) and you can square dance all over the world."

Square dancing, specifically "modern Western square dancing," is done worldwide, according to Connie Tilroe of Elsmere. There are conventions and even cruises for square dance enthusiasts.

"Square dancing is called in English all over the world because it originated in the United States and is taught in English," she said.

The square dance, a combination of steps from many different ethnic folk dances, began over 100 years ago, Winne said. Dancers from different immigrant groups enjoyed each other's steps and combined them into this uniquely

Connie and George Tilroe

American art form.

"Memorized folk dances were a part of all cultures, and as people mingled, they taught their steps to one another," Winne said. "Soon a caller was needed."

The caller tells the dancers which steps to perform and in what order, Winne said. Sometimes the calls are spoken, sometimes they are sung to the tune of the music.

But as square dancing developed, steps became regionalized, and people from one area became confused over how to perform the steps when they were called. A group of square dance callers got together to standardize the way steps were to be performed, Winne said. Now "box the gnat," "tea cup chain" or "flutterwheel" are performed the same the world over.

But while the steps are standardized, the dances are not.

Callers use their imaginations to move dancers around the floor to a given song, usually modern, country and western songs or standards like "You are my Sunshine." That is the appeal of modern Western square dancing, Tilroe said.

"A good caller is someone who makes the dance fun and interesting," she said. "If they are a little on the unique side, it keeps it interesting and fun. You shouldn't be able to anticipate what the caller is going to do. A good caller will see you anticipate and will do something different."

"The caller has the challenge of knowing how to get the dancers into position to do the next steps. They are master choreographers. If you break down you just line up in a certain way and wait a few beats. The caller gets everybody else to the same position so you'll be dancing again. You don't have to sit down because you've gotten lost." Modern Western square dance is very different from Eastern square dancing, the kind of square dancing taught in physical education classes in school. In Eastern square dancing, the steps are repeated over and over with each couple, according to Winne.

"Eastern square dancing gets very repetitious and boring after a while," she said.

While Western square dancing sounds complicated, it's fun and a great physical and mental workout according to Winne and Tilroe.

"It's a comfortable beat but you are constantly moving so it's a wonderful cardio-vascular workout. A night of dancing is equivalent to walking five miles," Winne said. "It's a weight-bearing exercise, so it's good for bone density and it's a simple shuffle-walk so people of all ages can do it. We have such great fun, we are always laughing."

The mental workout is great, too, Tilroe said.

"You can't think of anything else while you are dancing because you have to focus on what the caller is saying. You have to be a sharp listener and remember what the caller wants you to do. You can put all your troubles and worries away because you have to concentrate on the steps."

Square dancing also gives people the opportunity to dress up and have an inexpensive night out on the town, Winne said.

"Some people still wear Western shirts with bolo ties and skirts with crinolines. Traditional dress is very pretty but very hot because of all the layers. Mostly we wear prairie dresses and peasant blouses. Some couples wear matching outfits. Singles come to meet up with and dance with other singles. A dance usually costs about $8, there are light refreshments, no smoking and no alcohol. It's a nice fun night out, and we meet the nicest people. Even people who think they have two left feet can square dance."

On a given Friday night, dances are sponsored by many of the 24 square dancing clubs that belong to the Capital District Square and Round Dancing Association.

The Tri-village Squares, which began as a Bethlehem Central continuing education course in 1981 has about two dozen member couples. In 1985 the group incorporated so they could continue to dance all year long. They have callers come from all over the area, including Rhode Island, Connecticut and Massachusetts. They dance at nursing homes and have participated in many town events.

"The caller puts on a record with just a beat and a fiddle and does a "Hash Tip and you just get going," Winne said. "We sing along with the chorus and clap our hands or tap our feet. We're always moving, smiling or laughing — we have so much fun."

Winne and Tilroe said those who would like to learn square dancing or those who just want to watch can "rollaway with a half sashay," do a "California twirl" or "slip the clutch" at First United Methodist Church, 428 Kenwood Ave., Delmar, on Sept. 15 and 23 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. for the free Tri-village Squares Fun Nights.

Matters of Opinion

Don't brush off Bard

It's a shame the Bethlehem Central school board has decided to brush off its Shakespeare by denying a $1,000 loan to the theater support group that would have enabled them to produce Romeo and Juliet this fall.

In the last two years, there have been no Shakespeare productions at the high school, which is a sad comment indeed.

For years, Shakespeare plays were a mainstay of the drama department, giving students an opportunity to truly get to know the Bard. Those productions guided by veteran teacher and director Jim Yeara were district treasures. For two years in a row, two students of his captured first place in the regional Shakespeare contest, where there is stiff competition from students from the best schools in the area.

But losing prizes isn't the issue here; losing Shakespeare is. And the loss is truly significant as far as the students are concerned. Many youngsters get their first glimpse of the Bard in high school, and at BC many students used to have an opportunity to make that glimpse an unforgettable stare when they actually performed in one of his plays.

Shakespeare's language is still some of the finest ever penned, and when it is brought to life on stage, it has the power to both delight and horrify, and particularly to enlighten an audience about human nature.

A lot of talk is bandied about these days about raising standards in the schools. With the BC board action, standards here have just dropped a notch.

We commend the board for attempting to upgrade the district's high tech capabilities, but by ignoring the masters, the board is shooting itself in the foot. High tech can not spark the imagination nor inspire a love of language. Shakespeare can.

We hope the theater support group can get the money somehow. They certainly are on track as far as standards are concerned, and $1,000 seems a small price to pay for them.

Two sides to this coin

There are pros and cons as far as giving the Bethlehem town board some say about potential polluters who would like to locate here, even though building inspector John Flanigan is probably right when he says the town already has a "bad rep" as far as its attitude toward new business goes.

Had the town had this kind of leverage, the recent fiasco surrounding Spurlock Adhesives proposal could likely have been avoided. Certainly the attention this proposal got made the town seem anything but business friendly.

On the other hand, with state and federal regulations already in place, what could a town board do to supersede these guidelines? And what makes town board members qualified to determine just who would pollute and who wouldn't?

If the regulations are valid, perhaps the town board should leave matters as they are.

The fact remains that Bethlehem must attract new business. Residential taxpayers will be the losers in the long run if the town fails to be aggressive in drawing new industry here.

Tall Ships inspire vivid memories

By Ruth M. McDowell

The writer is a longtime resident of Delmar and contributor to Spotlight Newspapers.

This summer, after 160 years of being a museum piece, Old Ironsides came alive—with its sails joyfully filling with ocean air and its hull once again caressing the moving sea.

The sight of the Constitution under sail reminded me of the unique celebration of our nation's 200th anniversary.

In the eerie mist, appearing like flying angels on the horizon as we watched from the rooftop of our New York City hotel, the Tall Ships of the world began a breathtaking parade on the Hudson River from the Verrazano Bridge into Manhattan.

Point of View

The fire boats shot red and white water into the air at 20,000 gallons a minute making a processional path like flower girls scattering petals for a bride.

On adjacent rooftops, an impromptu chorus arose with all the watchers singing "Happy Birthday America" as the Coast Guard's Eagle, with Old Glory flying high, led the magnificent fleet.

Though fog gripped that memorable July 4 morning, the event began promptly at 11 a.m., luckily with a good wind to power each craft in full sail.

The beauty of the Tall Ships was overwhelming. One New York writer called the crowd reverential in its attitude.

Such was the awe when the Esmeralda from Chile passed in review, carrying a complement of 407 sailors and 210 cadets. Its mast of 194 feet kept it from following its sister ships beneath the Brooklyn Bridge.

England's Winston Churchill had an all-women crew, while France had only three men, a captain, navigator and seaman, in its low-hulled masted vessel.

McDowell gazes out at the tall ships from her hotel room.

Denmark's Gloria was truly glorious and renowned for a crew that "took to the yards" and sang national songs in unison.

The replica of the Mayflower, tiny in comparison to the other ships, made one wonder how the original could have survived the rigors of the voyage it made so long ago.

At 2 p.m., all bells on boats, ships, church towers and public buildings through New York City, rang in honor of the celebration. When the parade ended, we returned to our room on the 11th floor overlooking the harbor and marveled when we saw many of the ships were being maneuvered into berths by enormous tugboats.

The winged birds were roosting right outside our window, and provided a spectacular sight. (Incidentally, we had reserved this room nearly a year in advance). Luckily, we were allowed to go on the roof for lunch and viewing.

Japan's Nippon Maru had dozens of sailors tying down sails that appeared higher than we were.

It was difficult to sleep that night. We kept peeking out the window at the scene of enchantment enhanced by sailors singing until dawn. The next morning, the ships held an open house. All the vessels but two offered hospitality.

Norway's beautiful Christian Rarich was the setting for its commander's wedding. He and his bride could be seen walking through an arch of crossed oars held by the well-dressed crew. It was all like a fairy tale.

Later, as the rockets red glare framed Lady Liberty with fireworks, I was in awe. From the little outboards to the Navy's gigantic battleships, all shared the lime-light with the pristine stars of the day.

Presidents and princes, ministers and movie stars, senators and sailors were all there, but I can still conjure up that unforgettable weekend and remember that once upon a time, I was amid what appeared to be a fantasy.

First day of school and tranquility

Editor, The Spotlight:

Reading last week's point of view by Kathy McCarthy brought tears to my eyes. She was lamenting the first day of school for her younger son. I too have strong feelings about my older daughter entering second-grade.

Our family was out shopping this morning, and Madelyn was complaining about one thing or another, and suddenly in the canned fruit aisle, I broke out in song:

(Sung to the tune of "Tomorrow" from Annie)

The bus will pull up tomorrow
9 a.m. she'll get on it tomorrow
I can't wait!

A six-hour break is coming.

No more chattering, pestering or humming

This is great!

Tomorrow, tomorrow, I love you
tomorrow,

You're only a day away.

I can't talk on the phone or sleep or daydream!

She'll interpret or plead or scream!

Tomorrow, tomorrow, it's nearly
tomorrow

You're only a day away!

You see, we all view the first day of school differently. Seventy-one days with a 6-year-old girl who sings the score from Grease 11 hours a day (and who is completely tone-deaf) can make even the most refined woman turn into a blithering wreck.

Seriously, I love my daughters to pieces and cherish this time together. I know how quickly time passes. Yet, the confidence she shows going off to school or to play is a result of all the hard work and self-learning I have done to help instill in Madelyn the qualities that shine so brightly. She and her 4-year-old sister Lorraine are my life's work.

Granted, I don't get a coffee break from this job. Hey, I don't even get a day off. But when we are in a restaurant and a stranger approaches to kindly tell me how well behaved my little girls are, I beam with pride. When the girls play together and resolve any differences without bloodshed, I applaud them. And as Madelyn gets on the bus tomorrow, eager and ready to begin second-grade, I bask in the glory of knowing that I don't have to listen to that bad singing for another six hours.

School parent discovers others have complaints

Editor, The Spotlight:

I must correct myself. In my letter last week, I mentioned that the special education students at Bethlehem Central had an easier time resolving problems with administrators. I stand corrected.

Parents of special education students have told me that they have had similar problems. They have dealt with the "control" issue of "We're the authorities," who want you to go away, not resolve the problem. One mother said she had to send her son away because the administrators were so intransigent.

Valuable time and money are being spent fighting parents instead of working with them. This appears to be a broad problem. Where is the solution?

Senior takes issue with letter writer

Editor, The Spotlight:

As a senior citizen who has lived in this community 31 years, and one who does not intend to live in the proposed development for seniors on Delaware Avenue, I found Anne Young's letter very offensive.

Some years ago when I lived on Dawson Road, I said that was a perfect place for such a residence, and I still believe that is so. Why should older people be stuck out of sight in the country?

As for potential noise and traffic, most people our age don't drive much after dark, don't have wild parties or play loud music, and we go to bed early.

Letters

My 48-year-old son lives in a large apartment complex where many of the tenants are seniors. He says they are quiet, polite and the best neighbors he has ever had.

Think about this when you get old and no one wants you next door!

Slingerlands resident answers 'shopaholic'

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am responding to the Chopper "shopaholic" who waxed so effusively about the new Price Chopper in Slingerlands and expressed a desire to hear from a person who had opposed the project.

First, there is considerably more traffic on New Scotland Road as we predicted. Second, the wait at the intersection of Cherry Avenue and New Scotland Road is much longer. Third, the traffic lineup, eastbound on New Scotland is longer in both distance and time.

Now, to be fair, it is a nice market, has a polite staff that is growing more efficient, and the grounds are neat and well-groomed.

I have some suggestions for the letter writer. While you are waiting for the light to finally turn green so that you can cross to the store, you can plan your shopping better so you don't have to go four times a week! This would save fuel, wear and tear expenses on your vehicle and provide a small boost for air quality.

If this market is "the best thing that ever happened in Bethlehem," you should expand your horizons. This town is much more than that.

You wanted to hear from one who opposed this project. Well, you did.

Engineers should review Chopper patterns

Editor, The Spotlight:

I agree for the most part with Marianne McCormick's letter last week regarding the traffic patterns associated with the new Price Chopper. However, I feel that the engineers neglected two left turn signals at the corner of Route 85 and Cherry Avenue Extension. They are potential trouble spots that could be remedied by slight modifications to the existing signal pattern.

One is the left turn from Route 85 east into Price Chopper, a turn considered important enough to warrant a special lane. At times, a driver using this lane is delayed in making the turn because his view of oncoming traffic is hidden by the two lanes that turn left from Route 85 west to Cherry Avenue Extension. The other left turn is from Cherry Avenue Extension to Route 85 west.

Again, a left turn lane is provided in which a driver has to wait when he is blocked by traffic exiting Price Chopper straight to Cherry Avenue.

Before an accident occurs, the problem should be considered by the state.

Seniors' pres says thank you

Editor, The Spotlight:

Once again, two local organizations have made Bethlehem senior citizens' lives more enjoyable. Our sincere thanks to the officers of the Bethlehem Veterans of Foreign Wars Post and its auxiliary for a delicious chicken barbecue at the Slingerlands Fire Co. pavilion. The food and courtesies shown to us were commendable.

We also thank the officers and members of Bethlehem Lions Club who organized and served hamburgers, hot dogs and all the trimmings to Bethlehem seniors recently. Even though it was a stormy day, a most enjoyable afternoon was had by all.

Thanks again for making these events so special for us.

Scout appreciates help on Gold Award project

Editor, The Spotlight:

Thanks to all the people in the community who contributed to my book drive. I was able to collect more than 3,300 books and distribute them to organizations in the Bethlehem, Troy and Albany areas.

I am especially grateful to all the elementary students who donated hundreds of used books and to the schools that collected the books.

I would also like to thank the local businesses who helped with the drive: McDonald's, Stewart's, The Bookworm, Grand Union, Video World, Leeder Video, CVS, I Love Books, Ames and The Spotlight. I received many calls and donations from people who had seen signs posted in these places.

I would like to extend my heartfelt thanks to all who helped with the drive. I was surprised by the very positive response from the community, and the agencies that received the books were also surprised and pleased. Your generous support helped to make this Girl Scout Gold Award project possible.

Library Day combines new with tried & true

Plan to spend a little time with us Sunday, Sept. 14, at our 13th annual Library Day. We're mixing the new with tried and true to provide entertainment for all ages and tastes.

Displays and demonstrations by local craft and civic groups, face-painting, bookmark making and live TV coverage are only part of the festivities.

At 1:30 p.m., the library's own Puppetry Delights performs a triplet of fractured fairy tales where Red Riding Hood rides a bike, a boy gives cooking lessons to a dimwitted wolf and the three little pigs learn something about bravery from their sister, Pig Four.

The performance will be accompanied by fingerplays and puppet-to-people interaction.

At 3 p.m., Bill and Andy Spence invite the audience to join the Kazoo Band. The first 100 guests will receive a free kazoo. The Spences are founders of Old Songs, a nonprofit educational forum for folk and traditional music and dance.

Rensselaer muralist Jackie Brickman will preside over a participatory mural activity called Art on the Spot. Brickman, who is the organizer and artist for the Riverfront park mural project, will provide the base design, and guests will paint in the details.

To complement Art on the Spot, the circulation department will offer Card on the Spot, a location set aside for re-registration and receipt of new library cards.

If you haven't registered yet, come to career resources center on Library Day with a valid driver's license or other picture ID and proof of current residency, and we'll card you.

While you're inside the library, don't miss the exhibit cases. Eight-year-old Adam Nye's butterfly collection is on display in the youth services case this month.

Edward Phillips of Catskill shares his military miniatures in the Birchenough case. In addition, Allison Bennett's ceramic houses from around the world are also on display.

As always, the afternoon will include all kinds of delectable goodies, including a cake to celebrate our 25th year in the building. The event runs from 1 to 4 p.m., rain or shine.

The Smart Way To Get Things Done.

V'ville school opening smooth as silk

By Katherine McCarthy

The beginning of the school year in the Voorheesville school district has been so smooth that the school board adjourned its September meeting on Monday night after only 30 minutes.

Anthony Marturano, assistant superintendent for business, reported that the foundation for the portable unit behind the high school began on Monday.

"Because of opening week festivities, like the PTA barbecue, we're a little behind. We're shooting for use by Oct. 1," he said.

At that point, Marturano hopes to store paper and other supplies in the additional space, freeing up more room in the high school itself.

Otherwise, Marturano said, "The opening of school has been good from our perspective. We've had very few problems."

The board followed up on last month's discussion of possibly charging tuition to foreign students pursuant to recent changes in immigration law.

Superintendent Alan McCartney recommended that, for now, the board not change district policy.

"We've only one or two glitches," McCartney said. "We'll keep working through and with the federal government."

Most of the foreign students at Voorheesville come through independent programs lasting only a couple of weeks, he noted.

Closer to home, board member Erica Sufrin asked high school Principal Terence Barlow to address three concerns about the new nine-period day at the high school.

Specifically, she asked about the 42-minute lunch period; the three minutes allotted between classes; and the fact that some gym classes include students ranging from ninth- to 12th-graders.

Barlow said that students are "using the extra lunch time creatively. It's only day four, but during one of the recent lunch periods, leaders from student government used the last 12 minutes to hold an impromptu town meeting."

Barlow also called the three-minute pause between classes "adequate."

"Classes that students want to get to on time, they'll get to on time," he said, adding that faculty have verified that the time allotted is sufficient.

The public will have the chance to comment on new athletic program guidelines at a special meeting on Sept. 22 at 7:30 p.m. at the high school. Copies of the proposed guidelines are available in the district office.

New Scotland signs life support contract

By Dev Tobin

After three years of on-and-off negotiations, the town of New Scotland has officially signed a contract for Advanced Life Support (paramedic) services.

The 24-hour paramedic service, provided by the county sheriff's department from bases in Bethlehem and the Hilltowns, will cost the town $37,500 for the remainder of 1997. A contract for 1998 will be negotiated later this in Bethlehem and one in the Hilltowns will be able to cover New Scotland adequately, with the help of mutual aid when needed, according to sheriff's Inspector Thomas Fargione, coordinator of ALS in southern Albany County.

Fargione said County Executive Michael Breslin will sign the contract this week.

"We've made all the arrangements we need to make in-house" to begin serving New Scotland, Fargione said.

The impact on town property taxpayers of the new service (assuming a full year at $75,000) will be about 15 cents per thousand of assessed value, according to an analysis by Councilman Scott Houghtaling.

In other business, the board received another request for municipal water, this time from about a dozen residents of Route 308 just outside the Feura Bush Water District.

Cynthia Elliott said everyone in the proposed extension favors it, and that she will do the mapping for the extension at no cost to the town.

The board authorized spending up to the $500 to determine whether the Feura Bush system can support the extension.

In another water matter, the board authorized Reilly to correspond with Guilderland Supervisor William Aylward regarding a proposed extension of Guilderland water to 16 lots in the Weatherfield subdivision that are in New Scotland.

Reilly will write to Aylward that the extension must be a formal water district, not a user agreement, and that if Guilderland has enough water to supply the Weatherfield homes, it should also provide water to residences on Wormer and Normanskill roads.

"We should not give newcomers who have been petitioning for water for 10 years," said Councilwoman Victoria Ramundo.

The board also approved a public gathering permit for a Junior League holiday open house at the home of Dr. Ray Elliott Jr. on New Scotland Road.

It's been a long drawn-out process, but we're in business now.

Herb Reilly

"It's been a long drawn-out process, but we're in business now," said Supervisor Herb Reilly after signing the agreement.

Reilly called Councilman Mark Dempf for his work on ALS.

"We're very fortunate that Mark took the leadership on this," Reilly said.

N.Scotland planners OK duplexes

By Dev Tobin

After almost two years, John Mauro finally won a special use permit to build three two-family houses on New Scotland Avenue in Feura Bush.

At last month's public hearing, the New Scotland planning board asked Mauro to provide formal confirmation that the houses could be serviced by the Feura Bush Water District and another map showing that the houses' driveways would be aligned away from existing driveways on the other side of the street, as requested by neighbors.

In addition to providing what the board wanted, Mauro agreed to plant about 20 pine trees for screening between the northernmost house and the former Feura Bush School, now an apartment building.

He also agreed with the board's stipulation that no tenant parking be allowed in front of the houses or on the street.

"I don't want that place looking like a used car lot," said board member John Loucks, a Feura Bush resident. "I want that to be a showplace."

In other business, the board referred to the zoning board of appeals an administrative appeal of Building Inspector Paul Cantlin's finding that a zoning law violation exists at Michael Tuzzolo's property at 92 Martin Road.

Michael Rhodes-Devey, attorney for Tuzzolo, said the alleged violation, involving excavation, general contracting and trucking equipment in a residential zone, "has been going on since 1969" when Tuzzolo moved to the property.

Even though neighbors have complained, Tuzzolo's home-based business is a "legal, grandfathered non-conforming use," Rhodes-Devey argued.

He added that the board found there were no zoning violations on the property in 1985, when Tuzzolo received a special use permit for an apartment project.

Board member Annick Belleville said the ZBA "should look very carefully at that property — there are four or five tractor-trailers, a horse trailer, a boat, pickup trucks — give me a break here."

Board chairman Robert Stafp said the ZBA has jurisdiction over the appeal, but added that the planning board would like to see a site plan review of Tuzzolo's property.

Artists resume club meetings

Tonight, Sept. 10, is the first fall meeting of Art Expressions, the library's adult sketch club. Bring materials and meet with other aspiring artists from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. for an evening of drawing, paint-will be much appreciated.

Your generosity last year supplied us with wonderful homemade refreshments for special events, and we are hoping to provide the same this year. Be sure to give us your name when you make your contribution, so we can thank you.

Another valuable contribution has been made to the library by a group of local artists who have donated paintings for the Sunday, Oct. 5, art auction benefit.

One of the artists has lived quietly in Voorheesville, while his artistic reputation has spread around the globe. Thom O'Connor's award-winning work is represented in the collections of more than 40 colleges and universities and museum collections from California to Moscow.

His work is in the Smithsonian and the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C., the Whitney Museum and the Museum of Modern Art, the British Museum and the Hermitage Museum in Leningrad.

Thom and his wife, Linda, who has also made her mark in the art world as a quilter, have raised their family here and are familiar faces at the library.

On Friday, Sept. 19, you can preview the O'Connor piece and others that will be auctioned. In addition to O'Connor, works by Ed Cowley, Pauline Boissert, Jean Eaton, Joan Molloy, Bev Carhardt, Joan Lord, Ray Decker and Charles Schade will be unveiled at the reception for yours truly. The public is invited to stop in from 6 to 8 p.m.

Vendors are wanted for the Harvest Craft Fair scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 12, at SuperValu. Proceeds from the space rentals will be donated to the library. Applications are available at the market and the library.

Teapots and pottery from the collection of Phyllis Rosenblum are in the showcase this month. The pieces are displayed among a lovely selection of old crocheted handiwork.

The Every Other Thursday Night Poets meet Sept. 11 at 7 p.m. ing and conversation. Refreshments will be served.

At the Oct. 1 meeting, there will be a presentation on watercolor painting by the Scotia-Glenville Museum's Traveling Program for Adults.

The library's many programs mean that cookies are in big demand. We keep donations of baked goods in the library freezer to bring out for special events, so if you can bake a batch of goodies for us, it

Last minute field goal spoils BC's season opener

By Andrew Hartman

Deja vu.

Last year, Bethlehem Central opened their season at an away game against Shenendehowa.

They lost 27-12 after leading 12-7 at the end of the first half.

On Friday, despite a valiant effort, the Eagles lost 17-14, by a 31-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

The Eagles walked off the field at the end of the first half, last week, with a 14-7 lead.

"It was definitely winnable," said BC tight end and defensive lineman, Erik Hjeltnes. "The offense didn't get some breaks in the second half."

Shenendehowa drew first blood as running back Fakree Munir scampered into the end zone for a five-yard touchdown.

Later in the first quarter, the Eagles got right back into the game when BC quarterback Justin Riccio threw an eight-yard pass to Hjeltnes to tie the game.

Riccio lit up the score board again, finding wide receiver Scott Kind for a 46-yard touchdown pass to give BC a 14-7 at the half.

After a scoreless third, Shenendehowa was able to find the end zone again, on a two-yard run from Munir.

"The defense carried us in the second half," said Riccio, whose offense was unable to score after the half.

With 3:44 left in the game, and both teams locked at 14-14, Shenendehowa place kicker Jonathan Piraino nailed a 31-yard field goal for the win.

"The second half brought our morale down, when they came out and scored," said Riccio. "Everybody played well and we have to keep our heads up for Burnt Hills."

BC running back Pat Hughes receives the handoff as Darrin Huggins (No. 75) tries to hold off a Shen defender.

The Eagles hit the road to play Burnt Hills Friday night at 7:30.

Update your job hunting skills for best results

By Daniel Moran

As summer ends and we enter the third quarter of the year, recruiting by companies goes into high gear. Recent statistics indicate a strong second half for new jobs.

So how do you, the seasoned executive, victim of downsizing, recent college graduate or individual seeking a new job or career, seize the opportunity?

Most job seekers I have talked to are just plain scared and confused over the right methods in finding their ideal job. Looking for a job in today's market requires planning, an understanding of the job market, a look at your specific skills and an organized, simple and common-sense search approach. Unfortunately, that's where most fail.

This job hunting system boils down to the misconceptions, the unknowns, and present 10 common sense, workable and easy-to-do steps one can use not only to find a job, but the right job," Moran said.

The 10 steps to success are focused on preparing the search, making contacts, following up and evaluating an opportunity to be certain it's the right position for you.

Step one: Understand the Job Market — This is critical. Most folks just don't understand where jobs are in today's market. It isn't the big companies hiring, but, as studies show, the growth is in the small business segment—80 percent of all jobs are with companies of fewer than 250 employees. This may be surprising, especially if you read some media reports indicating the contrary. The good news is jobs do exist, the bad news is that traditional sources of job hunting are ineffective in today's new market.

Step two: Know What Employers Are Looking for in Applicants — It just isn't education or experience, anymore, but more important, an individual's positive attitude, dependability, responsibility, ethics and other personal attributes. In a recent survey, 91 percent of all employers consider mental attitude the most important, whereas only 45 percent said education, and experience was cited by 37 percent.

That's not to say these factors aren't important, but it indicates that employers are looking past traditional criteria. As a job hunter, you must exhibit your dependability and willingness to do the job.

Step three: Evaluating Career Options — Like many life situations, your career is subject to change as well. If you are feeling bored and disenchanted, move forward, consider a new career. Seek help in career counseling to help you understand what types of jobs or careers are right for you.

Step four: Understand Your Skills, Strengths, Qualifications, and Weaknesses — A 15-minute self-evaluation to identify these critical factors will do wonders for your job search and will provide all the answers you need to sell yourself and interview as a winner. Document your skills, strengths and weaknesses to be presented in an interview. A weakness is not a liability, but instead should show you how you should improve yourself.

Step five: Communicate for Results — Is your resume or cover letter a winner or a killer? Do both effectively sell your skills and abilities in a manner that shows you can contribute?

A resume can be the key to getting an interview, so make sure the document sings. Use an objective — hiring executives have indicated that a resume without an objective is viewed as coming from an unfocused individual.

Step six: How to implement an effective search — Searching the want ads, networking with friends or relying on an agency to find you a job are all miserably ineffective approaches. Studies show that better than 76 percent of jobs are never advertised, or placed in a recruiter's hands. So be aggressive, seek out companies who may or may not be hiring by sending your resume to a senior executive and always following up.

Step seven: Market Yourself for Results — Effective marketing is critical and it's the tips and protocol that make the difference. If you see a gem of a want ad, wait four to five days to send your resume, after the mailbags of others show up. Use other resources for job hunting as well, such as the Internet and college career centers

Step eight: Conduct a Winning Interview — Be prepared, know your strengths and weaknesses. Don't be anyone but who you are, talk as you normally do. The first five minutes are the most important. Let your personality shine and be positive.

Step nine: Follow Up, Follow Up, Follow Up — Follow Up on every resume you send, every interview, and every phone contact. After an interview, send a short handwritten thank-you note.

Step ten: Evaluating an Opportunity — You'll be at this point, when you are presented with a job offer. Evaluate the opportunity not simply on money, but also on these questions:

Will this new position allow me to enjoy the quality of life important to me?

Will I grow and learn new skills?

Am I excited about this new job or career?

There is one "step" that supersedes all the others, finding the power of enthusiasm. It's up to you to take control, move forward and achieve the success you want.

Networking through a job expo

For some, job expos such as the Capital District Job Expo '97 represent the height of opportunity in search of a new position or career.

For many, though, job expos unfortunately represent the height of terror — meeting with hundreds of people, one after another, all judging whether you will be the next hire. Sounds pretty dismal? Well, it shouldn't.

Below are some simple, yet very effective ways to change your thinking about job expos.

First of all, job expos are numbers games. The Capital District Job Expo '97 will bring an opportunity to meet with representatives of more than 45 companies, all of whom are currently hiring.

Are every one of these companies looking for what you have to offer?

No! Are there a few, or maybe more than a few, who are looking for exactly what you can bring to their organization? Absolutely!

Effective job expo attendees use the numbers game to their advantage by making their way around the expo floor speaking to representatives of every company along the way.

Do not make assumptions as to what a company is looking for, just ask the representative. Even if that particular company is looking for another candidate, many of the company representatives know one another. Do not be afraid to ask for a lead to another company.

Secondly, break away from the pack — the pack that accompanied you to the show, that is.

There are few ways to

There are few ways to hamper your success more than meandering the floor with a group of friends. Expo networking is an individual task.

hamper your success more than meandering the floor with a group of friends. Clinging to your friends can do you absolutely no good and will provide you with limitless opportunities not to speak to company representatives. (There is one exception to this rule, if your friends are introducing you to a contact of theirs. In that case, have them make the introduction and then take off.) Expo networking is an individual task.

Third, professional follow-up is essential. This much-neglected aspect of expo networking can really make a difference. Here are a few tips. • Make a mental note of specific aspects of your conversation with any representative with whom you speak.

• Get a business card and any company information available when your conversation with the representative is completed and send a brief thank-you note the day after the show thanking the representative for his/her time at the show and mentioning that you would enjoy the opportunity of speaking with him/her again. You may also want to add that you will call to arrange this meeting. Remember to go for the interview, not the job, with this follow-up method.

Follow these tips and force yourself to speak to the first few exhibitors. After that, your tensions will ease and you probably will have some fun. Don't forget that these companies have paid a great deal of money to meet you. Many need what you have to offer. You just have to make the contact.

Tips for tapping into today's hidden job market

Job seekers must know where, how to look for unadvertised employment openings

Where are the real great jobs in today's market and how do you find them? That's the question often asked of a career professional who help people plan and implement a job search.

Unfortunately, most job seekers have been conditioned to look for jobs in the most common place — the want-ads. However, statistics show that want ads represent less than one-quarter of the available jobs in a market like the Capital District.

Federal Department of Labor studies indicate that 76 percent of jobs are never advertised. This so-called "hidden" job market presents an excellent opportunity to a job seeker.

But how do you tap this "hidden" (really, a better

gram, comprised of the following elements.

- First off, before you attempt any contacts with skills, experience, etc. can fit in. This is important, although your target employer may not be hiring, since things change rapidly in companies.

If you need assistance with the preparation of these documents, visit a professional

- Identify, through your own personal research resources or through a professional firm, the employers where your cover letter with resume to each company.

- Gather key contact information including contact name, type of business, number of employees, sales, etc. and then, once you have gathered this information (it's not uncommon that the list will include several hundred potential employers), direct a personalized cover letter with resume to each company.

- This step is probably the most important, and often neglected — follow-up every contact with a focus on securing an interview, even if the company is not hiring right now.

- Utilize other resources to identify leads, including the Internet, contacts gathered through networking, contacts made at job expos and from local business publications.

description is unadvertised) job market? While there is no magic link, you can improve your job search results dramatically, and find great jobs you never knew existed, by implementing a well-planned job search program, comprised of the following elements.

How to enjoy your job and still have a life

One of the major contributors to stress in families and individuals is trying to balance job and family.

Many feel guilty because they may be neglecting their family or job, because it is difficult to manage both.

"If you are on this treadmill, stop," said Vikki Moran, a seasoned manager of people who has often witnessed the pitfalls

Companies globally recognize that a stressed-out employee is unproductive and likely to negatively affect business results.

Vikki Moran

of career and family balancing.

"In years past, many felt that this was accepted, probably because employment options that provide flexibility with responsibility were very limited," Moran said.

"That is not the case today; companies globally recognize that a stressed-out employee is unproductive and likely to negatively affect business results.

Many innovative companies are designing flexibility employment situations that recognize that being at the Little League field, soccer game or PTA meeting is very important for many employees."

Moran, a regional sales director for Getting to Know You, recommended that an individual or family feeling the pressures of this often-impossible balancing act meet with their present employer to determine if an adjusted schedule, work-at-home or other accommodation can be arranged.

If not, it is probably time to look for a new position or career choice, one that offers the flexibility one needs, the compensation required, and responsibility

"Getting to Know You offers that opportunity to produce an excellent income, be responsible and at the same time, attend to pressing family, social and community needs," Moran said.

Studies show that the top reason people make career or job choices is to improve their quality of life.

Americans are changing jobs once every five years on average and changing careers two to three times during their working life.

This trend is expected to continue.

Staffing services provide more than secretaries

More than 50 years ago, traditional temporary help services offered clerical and office services. Today, companies like Kelly Services have diversified and provide the full range of traditional services, plus employee leasing and home-care services.

For a number of years now, staffing services companies have been partnering with customers to develop staffing arrangements, on- or off-site, that fit a customer's specific business objective.

Competitive and economic pressures have forced businesses to rethink how they manage their work force. Rather than trying to be specialists in non-core activities, like the mailroom, companies increasingly want to focus on their core business and leave the rest to someone else. As a result, they are turning to staffing services companies for human resources solutions.

Competitive and economic pressures have forced businesses to rethink how they manage their work force. Rather than trying to be specialists in non-core activities like the mailroom... they are turning to staffing services companies for human resources solutions.

There are several reasons for the move to outside suppliers. The first has been the influence of Total Quality Management initiatives. Many quality programs promote partnerships where businesses enter into sole supplier relationships designed to meet mutual business objectives. In such cases, businesses look for a partner who shares their mission of total quality management. Staffing services are called upon to provide a company's flexible staffing component, and in some cases, the management of their flexible labor pool.

The forces that shape and direct work life in America today are more complex and more dynamic than at any other time in our history. Temporary employees now offer the same level of expertise as full-time employees in a multitude of specialized industries. Looking toward the future, temporary staffing services firms will continue to play an essential role in helping employers maintain a competitive advantage.

The staffing services industry has experienced phenomenal growth because of its ability to provide skilled labor to help businesses adapt to changing economic environments.

Is your resume a winner or a killer?

By Terry Tyson

If you understand that in today's competitive marketplace your resume will get no more than a 15-second scan during an initial screening, then you can see how critical it is that your resume is up to the challenge.

So how do you ensure that your resume makes the first cut and gets you an interview? There are several strategies to help you in prepare a winning resume. Start with an objective. You can be specific or general, but employers want to see some degree of focus in your first contacts. An general example would be to state intrests in continuing professional growth with a progressive organization that will value your education and experience.

Once the objective has been established, create a section entitled "Qualifications" or "Skills Review" where you can give a nutshell description of your strengths, skills and qualifications. An example might be, "Sixteen years of progressive experience in sales with a proven track record for consistently exceeding sales goals."

To decide on the best approach for the body of the resume, think in terms of what will be most relevant to your reader. Categories such as education and experience should always be listed before professional affiliations, volunteer activities and interests.

Under the education category, include professional development, honor societies and certifications. When you begin to draft your experience section, remember to describe your responsibilities using action verbs and highlighting specific accomplishments. Never get creative with your job title or your college degree. Employers will do background checks.

Following education and experience, list professional memberships and any board positions held. Employers like to see demonstrations of leadership.

Next comes community involvement. Don't invent or embellish here, but if you volunteer for any activity, or organizations, list them. These might include coaching Little League, volunteering at the local food pantry or teaching religious education. Employers like well-rounded individuals who participate in the world around them. But avoid listing involvement in political parties, which may be a red flag for some employers.

RCS football starts new chapter with a victory

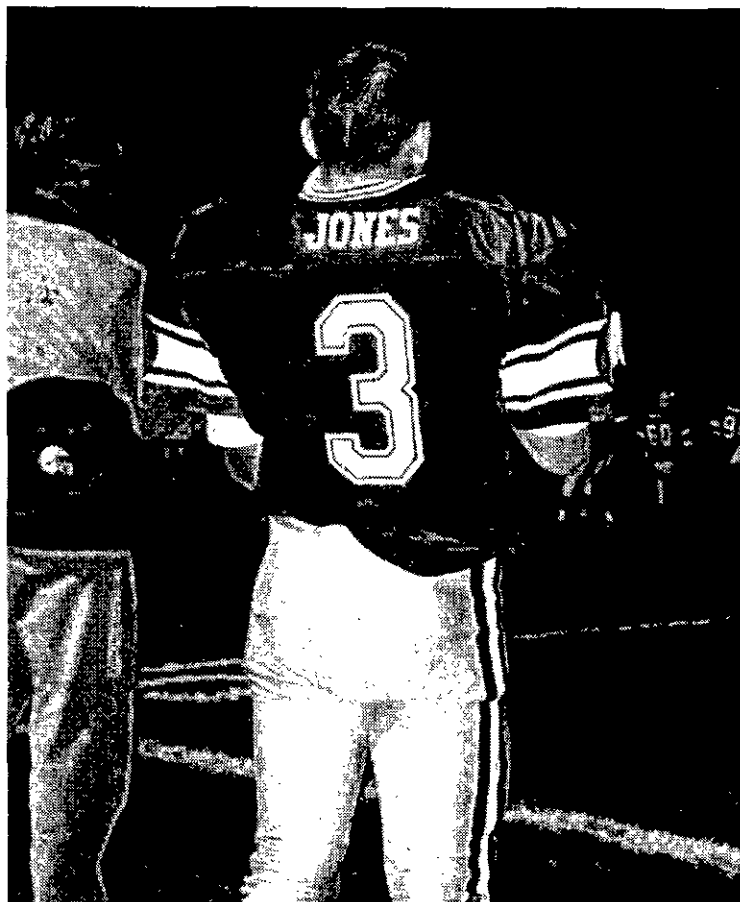

By Michael Hallisey

The RCS football team acted as poor hosts to Hudson Friday night, never entertaining their guests with the possibility of a win.

RCS won 45-14 in a game which a 36-yard touchdown run from running back Gary Jones, with 1:21 left in the first quarter, turned out

A lot of our community still thinks of last year's team and we just came out and showed them that we're going to make our own story this year.

Gary Jones

to be the game winning score.

"It feels great," said Jones on the opening day win. "Because a lot of our community still thinks of last year's team (12-1 and runner-ups in the Class B state championships) and we just came out and showed them that we're going to make our own story this year."

Jones continued the onslaught on the ground, carrying the ball 13 times for 246 yards. He scored three times on runs of 20, 36 and 74 yards.

"Ah, that felt good," said Jones on his 74-yard run. "I thought I was going to go down there (pointing to mid-field) but the kid grabbed my jersey and I broke free."

"My line made me look good today," said Jones.

RCS's front line paved the way for their running attack, allowing Indian runners to average nearly seven yards a carry on their way to amassing 381 yards.

"I think our offensive line was really the dominant factor," said Ravena coach Gary VanDerzee. "Obviously our running backs ran well, (Ryan) Merritt and Jones, but the offensive line gave them gapping holes."

Merritt ran the ball 11 times for 56 yards.

Last week, VanDerzee said he expected a close game with Hudson. The Bluehawks finished their season in sectionals last year in Class C and are known to have a good football program.

Hudson moved up to Class B this year for the first time in three years.

Despite the size of Hudson's offensive line, with an average weight of 240 pounds, RCS was able to get through to stymie the Bluehawk running game.

Hudson did not reach RCS territory until 9:44 left in the second, on a 34-yard run from quarterback Jason Barrett, as the Indian defense set the tone early in the game.

"We've got a pretty tough defensive line," said VanDerzee. "Besides being big, we've got some pretty good quickness there. I think our quickness was the dominant factor on the defensive side of the ball."

RCS's Jim Glastetter notched the first of eight Indian sacks. He finished with two for the night while Tony Lintner collected three.

On the first four possessions for both teams, Hudson failed to move the ball past their own 35-yard line, while at the same time RCS went to score three touchdowns — one of which a cleanly executed reverse on a 38-yard punt returned by Steve Ross.

Hudson ran 35 times for 86 yards.

Initial attempts from the Bluehawks to run to the outside were stopped by a wall of green jerseys. Hudson would later resort to the pass and pounding runs up the middle by 255-pound back Mike Maresco.

Barrett completed 10 of 22 passes for 158 yards with one interception and two touchdowns.

the following year, homeowners of all ages and income will receive at least a $10,000 full-value assessment exemption from school taxes. In the three years that follow, the program will be phased in to allow a $30,000 of full value to homeowners of all ages, $50,000 to senior citizens.

Senior citizens who already receive tax exemptions under the current program automatically qualify for STAR and will receive additional aid.

When it is fully operational, STAR will save property owners throughout the state an estimated $1.7 billion in annual school taxes.

Public schools will be reimbursed by the state for the loss of local tax revenue.

But, for those who own more than one property, only the primary address will be eligible for the STAR exemption.

The state also plans to draft a property taxpayer's bill of rights. A redesigned tax bill by the state Office of Real Property Services will also be easier to read.

Attributes of the new bill will state the property's estimated full market value, total tax levies of the municipality, school property tax savings as a result of the STAR program, the value of the exemption and its taxing purpose, the full names of each party levying tax on the property, as well as a glossary explaining terms used in the bill.

Welcome to the 1997-98 School Year!

The Bethlehem Central Middle School Parent Teacher Association (BCMS PTA) will again, courtesy of Price Chopper, provide this monthly notice, to communicate events and issues at BCMS to the BCMS community. Questions and comments may be directed to:

Jeff Zogg, PTA President at 439-6498.

Join the PTA and Volunteer: Studies have shown that students do better academically if their parents are involved in their school life in some way. We are convinced good parenting and good teaching will make the difference in our children's education. We hope parents and teachers will join us this year in translating that ideal into a reality by participating in the PTA and other Middle School activities. Last year the PTA worked to develop a stronger partnership between teachers and parents. We began to look for ways to better communicate, and we tried to produce interesting and meaningful monthly programs. We hope to continue to strive toward that goal. We need your participation and support.

September 15th PTA Meeting: (7:30 p.m.- Cafeteria) The first PTA meeting will be designed to inform parents of BCMS extra-curricular programs and activities, to organize the PTA for the 1997-98 school year, and to answer any questions and concerns that parents and teachers may have. We have recruited a series of parents, teachers and administrators to help answer questions on specific subjects, and to be available for parent's questions.

Class Open Houses: Mark your calendars now. Each Open House starts at 7:30 p.m. in the BCMS Auditorium.

6th Grade Open House: Tuesday, September 30th.
7th Grade Open House: Thursday, October 9th
8th Grade Open House: Thursday, October 16th.

Planning For Retirement

When planning for retirement, especially as that time gets near, we need to consider what our expenses will be. A difficult expense to plan for is medical/health.

In fact, we find that many people do not realize that they may have substantial dental expenses in the future. Usually, dental insurance stops at retirement.

As we mature, our susceptibility to decay and periodontal disease can increase. So even if you have had no dental problems in years, you still can develop dental problems with the aging process.

If possible, discuss your potential dental expenses with your dentist one to two years before you retire.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health from the office of:

Bethlehem Central Middle School welcomes sixth-graders

It was raining outside. Inside the atmosphere was sunny and bright.

The sixth-grade picnic at Bethlehem Central Middle School was a friendly and warm event which helped families to get better acquainted with each other and with the school.

It was a wonderful opportunity to visit with old friends and make new ones.

Kids and parents enjoyed yummy ice cream from Stewart's. Thanks to McDonalds for providing their orange bowl and cups, and to the special family who brought apples to share.

Many kind and dedicated people helped to make the picnic a success. Among those were Marie Zogg, Vic Carcich, Gay Petrie, Steve Lobban, Jeff Zogg, David Palmer, Janet Shaye and Mona Prenoveau.

Their support made the picnic possible.

Festival to celebrate old-fashioned Sunday

Old fashioned Sunday at the Pruyn House in Colonie is sure to have plenty of entertainment for the family, such as carriage rides, a tour of the 19th Century home, and music from one of five bands.

By Andrew Hartman

Pruyn House has been apart of Colonie since it was built around 1830, but on Sunday, Sept. 14, the house will host its ninth annual Old Fashioned Sunday.

"Once a year we have a fun festival day for the community with nine different craftspeople in the barn. We will have fudge vendors, clowns and Stewart's ice cream. We will also be having Brook's barbecue. We almost have 300 reservations already. Engel's Farm will be selling mums, and pumpkins. The Friends of Pruyn House have our own harvest table where dishes come from members who all bring a dish," said Pruyn House director Diane Morgan.

Music will be provided by the Colonie town bands, Tri County Banjo Band and Lost Faculties. Children can enjoy games, facepainting, Mr. Bouncety Bounce and a clown.

Morgan said the Casparus F. Pruyn house was built between 1825 and 1830. Pruyn was a land agent and a right-hand man to Stephen Van Rensselaer.

"We don't like to call him (Pruyn) the tax collector, but now everyone in the world can enjoy the tax collector's house," Morgan said.

Pruyn only lived in the house for 16 years. A family named Henkers occupied the house from 1894-1980.

In 1983, the town of Colonie bought the home. It was restored primarily with town funds, as well as funds from the Friends of Pruyn House. The town pays for utilities and maintenance, and the salaries of the two and half person staff. There are currently 500 members of Friends of Pruyn House.

The facility is used primarily for weddings, family gatherings, community events, office meetings and parties.

The festival will be at the Pruyn House Cultural Center on 207, Old Niskayuna Road in Newtonville from noon to 5 p.m.

Parking and admission are free. Brooks Chicken Barbecue dinners are $7 and must be ordered in advance. The dinners will be served from 1 to 4 p.m. and can be eaten in or taken out. Dinners will consist of chicken, baked potato, coleslaw, roll, dessert and beverage.

For reservations or information, call 783-1435.

Proctor's and Palace theater officials talking about cooperative ventures

Preliminary talks have been had between representatives of Proctor's Theater in Schenectady and the Palace Theater in Albany to determine the degree of cooperation that can be made to curtail competition between them.

While this may seem to be anti-trade and bad business ethics, actually in the arts, cooperation has more impact for the community's good than competition.

Proctor's Theater has established itself as the premiere regional venue for presentation of touring Broadway shows, opera and ballet companies as well as smaller concert presentations.

At the Palace Theater, there has been a greater concentration of rock performances, community events such as graduations and dance studio concerts as well as the occasional touring Broadway show.

What has happened so far is quite preliminary, but it is known that the Palace Theater stage is larger than Proctor's and could possibly bring in shows that could not fit into the Schenectady theater.

For example, the touring Phantom of the Opera could not be put into Proctor's because the stage area, particularly backstage, is too small. While the Palace might fit Phantom, it might also need renovations which would accommodate that show's scenic effects.

Over the years, renovation and reconstruction has been made at Proctor's so that productions coming into the theater can blend their own effects.

The Palace Theater which is run by the Palace Theater Performing Arts Center Corporation, is actually owned by the city of Albany. Mayor Jerry Jennings has been the spearhead for this potential cooperation.

He sees one layer of administration over the two theaters.

By Martin P. Kelly

Currently, Robert Goepfert is the manager of the Palace and Gloria Lemere is the general manager of Proctor's. Both have been effective, based on the directives they have received from their boards.

Proctor's is a producing unit, booking shows from various sources. In turn, the Palace has generally been a "four-waller," which means they rent the theater for the evenings a producer wants to use it.

The only time, the Palace management has taken a fling on producing has been during the last five years when it cooperated with out-of-town producers in the A Christmas Carol production during the holidays.

There's a price of $2.4 million floating around as the cost of renovations for the Palace which would deepen the stage and provide more dressing rooms. At least $500,000 of this amount was in the recently-passed state budget but it is contingent on Albany's getting the rest from private sources.

No date has been set for any further meetings. Jennings has been tied up in a mayoral primary race.

SPAC experiences 10 percent drop in 1997 attendance overall

Although the New York City Ballet drew more people this summer than in 1996 at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center, the Philadelphia Orchestra and the New York City Opera Company saw a drop in numbers of people seeing their performances.

A statistic which helped SPAC financially was the increase by an average of 1,000 persons in the attendance at the special events, notably the rock concerts.

Actually, SPAC cut back some of the special events this year, primarily for financial reasons.

SPAC drew 187,000 people to 20 special-event rock concerts during June, July and August.

By cutting the number of events, SPAC President and Executive Director Herb Chesbrough said the venue made more money. Many of the special events done in the past seasons were not profitable. The cost of the events often outweighed the amount of revenue brought in.

Mozart in the Wind presented Friday at Troy Music Hall

The orchestra will also present Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 and a new work, a world premiere overture by Daniel Worley entitled Beat ... (Primal Invention).

Reservations are available at 273-0038.

PREPARE EARLY ON THE VOLLEY

If you are running to the net, it is important to be prepared as early as possible for the volley. Slow down and get your body under control, ready to react to the shot.

For instance, as soon as you can tell it's a backhand volley, get your racket back in the proper position. Turn your shoulders and use your off hand to keep the racket from going too far back.

Play Better Golf with JACK NICKLAUS

ALL THROUGH MY CAREER, IF I'VE PLAYED TOO MUCH GOLF I'VE BECOME STALE AT THE GAME.

WHEN YOU'VE BEEN PLAYING A LOT AND SUDDENLY LOSE FORM, CONSIDER IF THAT COULD BE HAPPENING TO YOU.

LAYING-OFF FOR A WHILE CAN REKINDLE YOUR ENTHUSIASM WHICH IN TURN CAN BOOST BOTH YOUR SHOT-MAKING AND YOUR COMPETITIVE DRIVE.

IF YOU'RE WORRIED ABOUT LOSING YOUR SWING, HIT A FEW BALLS OCCASIONALLY INSTEAD OF PLAYING FULL ROUNDS.

Bishop Howard J. Hubbard signs a copy of the history of the Albany Diocese for Father James Daley. Doug Persons

Mass and led the blessing of the school.

The word from parents and teachers is "only positive," Daley said.

One attribute of the new sections of the school was how well the contractors were able to blend the addition with the old structure, he added.

The gymnasium, with its west wall knocked down to for a hallway and new cafeteria, now has room for spectators attending basketball league games.

The new cafeteria, complete with air conditioning, can also be separated into two different classrooms, and the "inadequate" old kitchen has been replaced by a new spacious one.

From the outside of the school, it is impossible to distinguish the difference between old and new sections of the building.

"We are very happy with the work," said Daley, complimenting the Barry, Bette & LedDuke contracting firm.

Sister Frederick said construction ended two days ahead of schedule, and did not interrupt instruction time.

The school construction is just one part of a two-part expansion project for St. Thomas.

Next year, Daley hopes to follow the same work schedule when a new parish office, gathering space and chapel are built.

The parish, which is celebrating its 90th anniversary, uses the school as the center.

St. Thomas was able to raise $2.6 million in gifts and pledges from parishioners to fund both phases of the project.
