Delmar residents prefer CMI out of their backyard

By Lisa K. Kelly

Bethlehem residents told the planning board "not in my neighborhood," at its Jan. 6 meeting, after Steve Insoft, president of CMI, elaborated on the benefits the planned senior housing project will bring to the community.

"I doubt the seniors, when they were raising their children, would have wanted something like this in their neighborhood," said Linda Smith of 18 Stratton Place.

She added that she wants her neighborhood to stay a safe place for children to play.

Her comments mirrored others made by 19 area residents who spoke to the board. Many people said they don't want a senior project in their neighborhood and others said they are against rezoning the residential lot to commercial.

Once the lot is rezoned to commercial, it can be used for anything from a service station to a bar, they noted.

Planning board member Joseph Rooks said he doesn't see this project as any different from other apartment complexes already on Delaware Avenue.

Planning board member Daniel Odell asked Insoft if a deed restriction stating the lot would only be used for senior housing was possible.

Insoft said no, because financial institutions don't want to loan money for projects with deed restrictions.

Board members also asked why a lot already zoned commercial wasn't selected. Insoft replied that commercial property is too expensive.

Insoft said that if CMI can't get the zoning changed for this project, there will be no senior citizen housing.

"I will never be able to make everyone happy," Insoft said.

The benefits, Insoft said, include a $200,000 increase to the tax base of the town and the project won't be a burden

Bethlehem board says no to full-day K

By Peter Hanson

After months of debate, the Bethlehem Central school board voted last week not to expand to full-day kindergarten. The unanimous decision represented the board's opinion that the money needed for the program is better spent elsewhere in the school system.

"The majority of the people who have communicated to me have been supportive of the current program," said board member James Schwab, echoing the sentiments of his colleagues and many of the parents in attendance at Wednesday's meeting.

Scherer

Board member Dennis Stevens voted against "full-day K," but said the recent debate over the issue highlighted the need for longer school days for "least-ready" children, such as the economically disadvantaged and those for whom English is a second language.

Stevens gained assurances from board president Happy Scherer and Superintendent Les Loomis that an optional full-day K program would be considered during the next BC budget review, which begins in February.

Parents at the meeting spoke for and against full-day K.

Peter Shawhan, president of Parents for Excellence, cited a number of "very pressing" needs in the school district, including library staffing and repairs to the high school, which he said were more important than expanded kindergarten hours.

Elizabeth Eaton said one of the reasons she moved from Albany to Delmar a year ago was to enroll her children in school here, "I just don't think 150 minutes (of kindergarten) is going to prepare them (for further education)." The proposed expansion would have changed the kindergarten day from two and a half to five hours.

Erotic non-rated videos spark parent's concern

By Lisa K. Kelly

Bethlehem residents have differing opinions about what kind of videos should be displayed in the common areas of video stores.

"It seems inappropriate to expose children to the graphic titles and pictures that X-rated videos carry," said Ronald Berger in a letter to The Spotlight.

Ben Edic, owner of Leeder Video, said he thinks non-rated videos and their covers are "almost like porn," and displays them with X-rated videos.

Jim Carbone, president of Video World, said he tries to buy the "tamed down," covers of non-rated videos, but sometimes even those are questionable.

Video World in the Delaware Plaza displays its X-rated and Playboy videos in a separate room.

Judge Chase remembered as even-handed, honest

By Peter Hanson

This week, colleagues and friends remembered Donald LeRoy Chase as a fair town justice who brought dignity and order to New Scotland town court.

"He was an upstanding guy," said

New Scotland Town

Justice Kenneth

Connelly. "He didn't bring an agenda with him. He just wanted to do the right thing."

"He was a very capable judge," added

New Scotland Town

Supervisor Herb

Reilly. "He was very firm and even-handed, very honest.

He didn't have any double standards."

Chase, who died at age 66 on Jan. 9, was first sworn in as town justice on New Year's Day 1967 and retired in 1991. From 1967 to 1976, he also served as a member of New Scotland's town board.

Reilly was on the town board with Chase for four years and developed a lasting respect for him.

"He held a very orderly court," Reilly said. "He carried himself in a very noble way."

Chase, who lived in Feura Bush, is survived by two daughters, Lauren Chase of Arnold, Md., and Darlene

Owens plant likely to trim work force

Owens Corning World Headquarters announced Friday, Jan. 9, that it would be reducing its worldwide work force by nine percent or 2,200 people as part of a restructuring plan to reduce costs.

"We will be taking labor reductions in this plant," said Craig Burrows, plant manager of Owens Corning Fiberglas in Selkirk.

Owens Corning said the cuts will affect management as well as general laborers.

Burrows said he doesn't know when or how plans for work force reductions will affect the local facility.

The Selkirk plant currently employs approximately 375 people.

Owens Corning blames the need for restructuring on continued pricing pressures in the insulating system business.

The company has lowered its estimated earnings to about $3 per share for 1997.

Police charge man with larceny attempt

Bethlehem police charged an Albany man with attempted grand larceny in the third degree Wednesday, Dec. 31, at 1:32 p.m. at Key Bank, 168 Delaware Ave., Delmar.

The suspect, Cameron Walsh O'Connor, 26, 66 N. Lake Ave., attempted to make a withdrawal of $9,500 from his day-old savings account, police said.

Police said the account was opened with a $50 deposit and three additional deposits totaling $17,100 had been made during the night at area Key banks.

Police said the checks had been stolen from National Information Services in Albany.

According to police, a Key Bank associate called the police after it was discovered the checks had not cleared because they were just deposited.

Bethlehem police arrested a Delmar woman for driving while intoxicated Saturday, Jan. 10, at 2:51 a.m. on Route 140 near the intersection of McCormack Road in Slingerlands.

Police said Jennifer Ann Donnelly, 26, 802 Baxter Court, was stopped after she was clocked at 55 mph in a 35 mph speed zone.

According to police, there was a strong odor of alcohol on Donnelly's breath, and her eyes were glassy.

Police said Donnelly failed sobriety tests.

She is scheduled to appear in town court at a later date.

V'ville plans to hire architect for project

By Katherine McCarthy

The Voorheesville school board discussed its current space crunch Monday, authorizing Superintendent Alan McCartney to begin looking for architects to come up with a plan to add 43,000 square feet to the district's existing facilities.

A programmatic shift will accompany the building expansion, as sixth-graders will move from the elementary school to join seventh and eighth-graders in a middle level program at the junior/senior high school. The middle level program is currently split between the junior high school and the elementary school.

McCartney stressed that at this point, the district will be looking at architects' credentials, not specific designs.

"We're going to check credentials and price," McCartney said. "We'll have people come and make presentations to the board, and we'll want to check other specifics. We want to make sure that the person who sells us is the one who keeps coming, and not an intern. We also need to check on who the project manager will be."

McCartney said he already has a stack of portfolios from architects who are aware that Voorheesville is considering a major construction project.

The district is working with a rough figure of $6 million. The figure was arrived at based upon the recommendation of consultant Dominick DeSimone, a veteran of the bureau of facilities at the state Education Department.

McCartney explained that $6 million is somewhat higher than what DeSimone arrived at by multiplying the desired 43,000 square feet by $130 per square foot.

Board president John Cole called the $6 million a benchmark, and board member Robert Baron said it was a number that "let us figure out the tax impact."

State aid also played a role in the discussion. If the district waits until after July 1 to float a bond issue, state aid will go up to 71 percent (the district's last bond issue was aided at 61.8 percent).

How the space is built will also affect state aid, with additions likely to get more aid than a new building, an option some in attendance thought made more sense.

Board member C. James Coffin seemed less concerned about aidability for a new structure.

"The key to aidability," he said, "is program and how you present it."

Roz Robinson, a Voorheesville parent who served on the facilities committee for the past three years, pointed out that what the committee would really like is a new building.

Coffin and Baron warned about being too cautious in the building strategy.

"If we build more than we need, we'll be able to use it," Coffin said. "Cost is important, but I wouldn't want to have to go back to the community in 10 years for more building."

"I agree, let's build 110 percent," Baron said. "It's cheaper than going back in 10 years and doing more. Maybe we could do the new wing and in the plan, show where a future addition could go. I'm also concerned about land. We need to solve the problems of building and land at the same time."

The board also considered continued community growth and changing state mandates.

"I don't see growth slowing in our village," board member Thomas Thorpe said. "If we project 10 years into the future, there's Tall Timbers, and development at the junction of Routes 85 and 85A. In 10 years, somebody will tell us we need more space."

Robinson noted that the elementary school has "physical therapists and speech teachers working out of closets."

Elementary Principal Edward Diegel confirmed that the special education population is growing, as the district seeks to save money by bringing back students from BOCES programs.

"One of our biggest concerns with scheduling is that a lot of students are pulled out from their classrooms for things like speech, physical therapy and remedial reading," he said. "If the sixth-grade weren't there, we might have the time to standardize the pull-out programs."

Board member Erica Sufrin pointed out that the state is looking into mandating all day kindergarten and pre-kindergarten, which would put more students in the elementary building.

Larry Bonham, a board member of the Voorheesville Taxpayers Association, urged the board to be cognizant of the heavy burden of taxes on its citizens.

"We would consider supporting expansion (if justified) when the board holds the line on spending," he said. "Last year, with increased state aid, plus additional local tax money, the board continued to raise taxes. This is not acceptable."

If we build more than we need, we'll be able to use it.

Stewart's will limit tobacco/alcohol signs

By Lisa K. Kelly

Stewart's won't put alcohol or tobacco signs or counter displays in its proposed Delaware and Elm avenue store, only 200 feet from the Bethlehem Central High School campus.

Stewart's representative Tom Lewis told the Bethlehem zoning board of appeals that the store won't have self-serve displays for cigarettes or participate in cigarette logo promotions, and would try to deter the sale of these products to high school students.

"If there is an infraction, they (Stewart's) won't sell beer or tobacco any more," Lewis promised the board.

In town zoning law, alcohol or tobacco products can't be sold within 250 feet of school property, so Stewart's needs a variance.

Lewis agreed to almost every request the board made, and produced evidence that Stewart's takes the laws prohibiting the sale of alcohol and tobacco seriously, and does not sell to minors.

In his testimony, Lewis said that only one Stewart's (in Albany) out of 36 area stores, violated the law once by selling beer to a minor.

Bob Marriott of Delmar said he isn't against a Stewart's store at the proposed location, but said that allowing alcohol and tobacco sales there would be putting temptation in front of students.

John Laforte of Elsmere said he was ambivalent about the issue of tobacco and alcohol sales, but was against the project because the lot is too small for the store and planned parking areas.

Laforte said potential traffic flow and parking would endanger pedestrians in the area.

ZBA member Marjory O'Brien

asked Lewis if the existing pay phone on Delaware Avenue would remain where it is. She noted the phone is heavily used by residents.

Lewis told the board he "would rather not" keep the phone outside because of the potential for loitering.

"This is the only thing I have said no to," Lewis said, "but I will do whatever the board wants."

Chairman Michael Hodom said the board will discuss the issue again at its Feb. 4 meeting.

Cherry Ave. traffic debated

By Lisa K. Kelly

Traffic and zoning changes filled the agenda at the Bethlehem planning board's Jan. 6 meeting.

Town planner Jeff Lipnicky said a traffic study of the McCormack Road/Cherry Avenue intersection indicated a current average delay of 34 seconds and predicts an average 120-second delay during peak afternoon hours once the Cherryvale and Terramere subdivisions are fully developed.

He said the study showed there would be no significant impact on the area. Lipnicky said the methodology used in the study was designed for random, not platoon, traffic patterns.

"I don't have a lot of confidence (in the study)," Lipnicky said. "It's very unlikely that a 120-second delay will be the case."

He said the method used probably overestimated the traffic delay.

Lipnicky said there isn't enough volume at the intersection for a signal. He added that a left turn lane would be too expensive.

Planning board members, talking about their own experiences at the intersection, said there was potential for traffic problems.

They noted that drivers pull onto the McCormack Road median to wait for southbound traffic on Cherry Avenue to clear before turning left. The board expressed concern about drivers who wait too long or stick out beyond the narrow median.

In another matter, the board postponed further action on the CMI senior housing proposal until Jan. 20.

CMI president Steve Insoft told the board the average age of residents at its proposed complex would be 82 to 83. Most of the residents would be women, but approximately 10 to 15 percent of the units would house couples.

He added the average stay is two and a half to five years and the monthly rent, including housekeeping, transportation and meals, ranges from $1,900 to $2,200.

"We try to build a project that 60 to 65 percent of the population can afford," Insoft said.

A sign of spring: Bridal Fantasy show a success

Hundreds flocked to the Bridal Fantasy show at Crossgates Mall last weekend, Jan. 9-11, to glimpse the latest bridal fashions and shop for nearly everything equated with planning for a wedding.

Booths featuring exhibits from hotels, photographers, limousine services, caterers, bakeries, bridal registries, video companies, disc jockeys, banquet facilities, travel agencies and even ice sculptors were on display on the mall's lower level.

Bridal fashions and formal wear were on display Saturday and Sunday during fashion shows, while cake sampling and live entertainment also highlighted the weekend activities.

The show was sponsored by Spotlight Newspapers, Fox 23 and K-100. It was produced by New Directions Promotions, a 12-year-old company run by Latham resident Diane Rutherford.

"I'm not seeking full-day kindergarten as a substitute for child care," she added.

Another parent, Bob Baker, expressed the opposite, and prevailing, view. "I don't see any value in a full day vs. a half-day," he said. "It's taxpayer-funded day care. I think that our money is better expended in the high school."

The board members noted the volume of input they'd received from parents on the full-day K issue, but said they didn't want to put a new bond issue to voters, which they foresaw as a necessary step to fund the expansion.

Although the state recently extended approximately $400,000 in a one-time aid package that could be used toward full-day K, the board said taxpayers would assume the cost after the first year. Board member Lynne Lenhardt also noted an incident in the 1989-90 school year, when the state reneged on a $300,000 aid offer.

"I don't trust (the state)," she said.

Lenhardt added that the new Early Learning Center represents the board's commitment to kindergartners. Helen Salamone, director of the Early Learning Center, was a key figure in the full-day K debate. A report she prepared and submitted to the board last month said that "little evidence substantiates the long-term effects of full-day kindergarten."

Several board members referred to Salamone's report while presenting their decisions, and board member Richard W. Svenson suggested the board share its materials on the issue with other educators. Loomis agreed that "Other people have indicated that our work has been beneficial to them."

Scherer thanked parents for "the civility with which this discussion has taken place," noting that she approached the full-day K debate with "some trepidation" because it was the first "hot issue" of her tenure as board president.

"There are some people in this area who are school board junk-ies," she added. "I hope you'll stay (after tonight), because it is a fascinating process." Despite her invitation, several members of the audience left after the full-day K decision.

In other business, the BC high school guidance department, led by guidance coordinator Patricia Pinchback, presented an overview of guidance services, ranging from personal counseling to college advisement.

The presentation, which took about 45 minutes, began with Joanne Honeywell and Scott Carlton, who discussed their responsibilities as ninth and tenth-grade counselors, respectively.

Richard Villa, eleventh-grade counselor, focused on preparing students for college and the job market. He said that 90 percent of (BC students) go on to post-secondary education, adding that the guidance department provides job listings, military information and other options for students who end their education with high school.

Twelfth-grade counselor Mary Ann Mitchell offered statistics that illustrated the counselors' workload. She said the department has prepared and sent 900 mid-term report cards in tandem with college applications, up from 833 last year; these reports are in addition to recommendation letters and academic review forms.

Mitchell provided a view of BC graduates' college choices. Of last year's graduating class, she said 77 percent chose four-year universities, 11 percent selected two-year schools, 6 percent picked trade schools and 6 percent were undecided at graduation.

Mitchell also described the ratio of students to counselors, which is approximately 284 to one.

The final item on the agenda was the presentation of a report by the Ad Hoc Library Media Staffing Committee. The committee was formed to explore staffing issues created when work hours were transferred from the Elsmere and Clarksville elementary schools to the Early Learning Center.

The committee recommended that each school in the district be staffed with one full-time library media specialist and acknowledged that the Early Learning Center has staffing needs that remain unfulfilled.

An abstract of the report presented by Scherer indicated that:

- "At any given time during the day, between one and three work areas (in the Early Learning Center) are left unsupervised."
- "We see the need for additional staffing at the middle school."
- "We see the need for additional support staff time at BCHS."

Nancy Heinzen, spokesperson for the library committee of the Elsmere PTA, read a prepared statement endorsing the findings of the ad hoc committee.

"Several of us from Elsmere were able to read the ad hoc committee report," she said. "We have found it a thorough and concise analysis of staffing needs."

"Our presence here tonight is to remind the board that library staffing remains a concern for us at the smaller elementary schools," she continued. "We hope that the board will carefully consider the role of the library media specialist."

Library staffing will be discussed again during the February budget process.

The next meeting of the BC board will be held at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 21, in the high school Library Media Center.

Matters of Opinion

King's legacy

This year marks the 30th anniversary of the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr.

While race relations in today's America are far from perfect, we need only look back at 1968, when devastating riots ripped through several major cities after King's murder, to see that some progress has been made on one of the country's essential social problems.

Of course, more needs to be done, especially in the area of education. Many urban minority students receive the short end of the public school stick, then have to compete with better-educated whites in an economy in which insidious discrimination exists, despite civil rights laws. Mostly white suburban towns need to reach out to urban areas particularly in the schools to help bridge some of the educational gaps many blacks suffer.

In other areas, like buying a house in some neighborhoods, hailing a cab at night and dealing with the criminal justice system, blacks argue persuasively that King's dream of a color-blind society has yet to be realized.

As we celebrate the holiday honoring Martin Luther King this week, let us do our utmost to take his advice on how to judge people — "by the content of their character, not the color of their skin."

No full-day K for now

The Bethlehem school board has put the issue of expanding its kindergarten program to a full day to rest — at least for the time being.

The board agreed that the cost of converting to full-day K was prohibitive and that studies did not support claims that full-day K gives kids a leg up later on in their academic careers.

We think the board acted prudently, given the projected cost, roughly $400,000 a year, and the apparently negligible results of lengthening the school day for kindergarteners.

Furthermore, parents who spoke against full-day K both at the meeting and on our letters pages, make some valid points for keeping the program half-day.

Putting taxpayer money where there is a demonstrated need makes a lot more sense than charting untried waters. Those children who are deemed "least ready" for kindergarten deserve the district's immediate attention, as do repairs at the high school and full librarian staffing for the library's seven schools.

For adults only

A letter writer this week criticized a local video store for displaying "X-rated" videos alongside regular movies. Although the letter is not entirely correct, we agree with the sentiment. Magazines like Playboy are kept under wraps at newsstands, but erotic videos are out in the open at video stores.

Bethlehem and New Scotland are largely suburban communities, and retail locations like the Delaware Plaza are popular hangouts for young people. For that reason, the retailers that residents support the most are the ones who run family operations. Where the letter is incorrect is in its assertion that the video store keeps X-rated videos in public view. The store keeps X-rated videos in a separate room to which children aren't admitted.

The problem is, the line between regular movies and adult movies has changed. Today, NC-17 rated movies like Crash, which features graphic sexuality, are displayed alongside PG and G-rated films in video stores. Even "unrated" erotic movies, like the ones that offended the letter writer, feature sexuality that would have earned an X rating 10 years ago.

Erotic videos shouldn't be kept where children can see them for the same reasons newsstands keep Playboy and Penthouse out of view. They're for adults only.

Mentoring should be a must

By Jesse Braverman

The writer is a teacher and a soccer, basketball and baseball coach at Bethlehem Central Middle School. He is also a member of the Bethlehem Community Partnership's task force on mentoring.

The Community Partnership is dedicated to improving the quality of life for youth in our town in a safe, drug-free environment. The task force on mentoring, One on One, was formed at the group's annual fall meeting. Other members of the committee are Leslie Loomis, Bethlehem Central superintendent, Cheryl MacCulloch, BC pupil personnel services director, Susan DiMuria, school social worker, Happy Scherer, school board president, and Jill Rifkin and Judy Thomsen, parents.

In a recent message to staff, Stephen Lobban, middle school principal, quoted James Comer on the social and emotional aspects of learning from educational leadership. "What children need more than anything is the chance to attach to adults who are meaningful and important to them." Lobban is currently soliciting staff members to mentor individual students.

In his article, "The Resilient Child," Kevin Bushweller, associate editor of The American School Board Journal, reviews the latest research to explain why some young people thrive amid a welter of troubles that overwhelm most kids.

The most compelling studies to date have been done by Emmy Werner, professor of human development at the University of California at Davis.

In her book, Vulnerable But Invincible, Werner found several environmental factors that foster resilience in kids. Among the most significant factors was the presence of a multigenerational network of friends, teachers and relatives during adolescence.

Point of View

It is also important to note that research shows that kids who overcome adversity better than others tend not to seek out formal professional help. Instead, they turn to people they trust and see regularly.

To help youth in Bethlehem, the partnership has formed a task force to expand current mentoring initiatives with One on One. We need to establish working relationships among local companies, community groups and schools.

We need to encourage college students and adults to be mentors at schools. Perhaps employers could give their employees some time off to act as mentors. Senior citizens in the community, with their vast well of life experience and accumulated wisdom, would make excellent mentors for youth.

Schools can also take steps to facilitate mentoring relationships between students and staff. We should do all we can to preserve art, music, theater and athletic programs. Research shows that resilient kids make school a refuge by excelling in such areas.

Other suggestions include maintaining or decreasing class size, creating schedules which permit students to remain with the same teacher for more than one year and creating peer counseling programs.

The Bethlehem Central School District and the Bethlehem Community Partnership already have several mentoring initiatives under way. Patrick Gunner, a member of the district's ad hoc at-risk committee, is organizing an advocate/mentoring program at the high school. Thirteen members of the high school staff have volunteered to work with students in this program.

The middle school has three different mentoring programs. Last year, in conjunction with the Community Partnership, a business partnership mentoring arrangement known as Alone Busters was started. An academic mentoring program involving six volunteer teachers and administrators is in its second year under Lobban's direction.

Yvonne Doberman, student assistance counselor, is directing a work-mentoring program, which provides 15 to 25 students with role models and meaningful work experiences. This initiative is sponsored by the school district, Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce and the town.

I started a new mentoring program in my own middle school resource room this year. Former students, who lead successful productive lives, help out current students and act as mentors. Three graduates are currently involved in the program. The former students offer unique insights and a valuable perspective to current students.

Elsmere Elementary School has its own student mentoring plan called The Buddy Program. Developed by Peter Hogan, physical education teacher, Shirley McAllister, school nurse, Maryalice Svare, counselor, and Dorothy Whitney, principal, the Buddy Program matches students with volunteer members of the school staff for a year. The program provides an adult mentor who takes a personal interest in a child's academic and social life at school.

Anyone who would like to be a mentor should contact Mona Prenoveau at Bethlehem Networks at 439-7740.

The statement, "It takes a whole village to raise a child," has been used to inspire our community. If the One on One mentoring program is implemented, members of our community will have the unique opportunity to help raise our village's children, one child at a time.

Resident sees shortage of water in summertime

Editor, The Spotlight:

Bethlehem Water District taxpayers should be more than a little irritated with the administration of the water department and our licensed professional engineers.

The consulting engineers recommended the installation of a $650,000 ozone unit in our new water plant. The ozone unit was installed. The contractor and equipment manufacturer were paid.

The state has not yet given approval to the completed works because the town has failed to operate the ozone unit and provide test data.

Mr. Bruce Secor advised the Albany County Health Department that he doesn't want to spend the money for the needed electricity to test the unit. Who is looking out for the taxpayer's interests?

Our well yield continues to decline producing less than 1.8 million gallons per day compared to the design rate of 6.0 MGD.

Water shortages of 0.3 to 1.1 MGD can be anticipated this summer unless the well yield can be increased, which is highly unlikely, or the contract with the City of Albany can be renegotiated to increase the maximum water purchase from 4.2 million gallons per week to 10 million gallons per week or more.

Letters

I urge our elected officials to determine who is responsible for paying $650,000 for an ozone unit not yet approved by the state.

Does the town have an emergency plan to deal with a water shortage in 1998? If not, why not?

Dad says thank you to community

Editor, The Spotlight:

I wanted to let the many people in the community who have either followed our campaign to raise money for our son's service dog in The Spotlight and/or contributed, to know that Katrina has joined the family.

She is a 45 pound black Labrador retriever/Italian greyhound mix who graduated from NEADS, the training center for service dogs located in Massachusetts, two months ago.

Katrina is assuming the expected role of companion to a child who is otherwise without many friends in his own community.

This was our main goal in getting the dog. It's a void that has been very important for us to fill, and it is one all too often shared by severely disabled children, among others.

You may see Katrina and Kevin about town from time to time. You should typically ask permission of the master before you pet or touch a "working dog." And that is what we want for Kevin, an opportunity to talk to people.

The dog should be in the sit-stay position and you should not interrupt Katrina from performing any tasks such as retrieving an object for Kevin.

She has been to Beffs, the barber and Ames among other places, and people around town have been wonderful.

We find that Katrina is providing opportunities for people to learn how service dogs can help the disabled.

Katrina debuted at the middle school this week, where she will help Kevin achieve some of his therapy goals.

We want to thank our neighbors for their help.

CMI site critic hopes for proper solution for seniors

Editor, The Spotlight:

After attending the Jan. 6 Bethlehem planning board meeting and hearing comments made by residents both for and against siting the CMI senior assisted living facility next to the town library, I find those on both sides of the issues have more in common than originally thought. Mr. Floyd Brewer and others who visited the CMI facility in Massachusetts have done all Bethlehem residents a service by taking the time to inspect a similar facility. Their report has convinced me that we could do worse when inviting a health care company into our town.

Most of those residents that spoke in favor of the CMI proposal were senior citizens. Most of the residents speaking against the proposal were younger. This seems to represent a split down age lines. Several of the CMI supporters prefaced their remarks with some sort of admonition to the younger citizens that the latter could not somehow appreciate the importance of having this facility built. However, on closer analysis, age and life experiences have little to do with the situation.

I am not so young that I do not remember what the quality of senior health care was 30 or even 20 years ago. My wife and I both have lost family elders in facilities that were considerably lower in quality than what CMI seems to be offering. We are investigating assisted-care possibilities for one of our parents. We were around when the scandals hit this industry in New York, which resulted in legislation that ensures a minimum level of quality.

There are several elderly property owners who live near the site who are against the CMI facility. Is it because they are less concerned about their own future health care than those in favor of CMI? The obvious answer is no.

Most residents who spoke against the CMI proposal support assisting seniors to maintain their quality of life in Bethlehem. However, we must do this in a way that is best for every citizen of the town. Is a 100-unit facility, which would become one of the largest buildings in the town, which by CMI's own admission will not house fewer than 70 percent of its residents from Bethlehem, the answer? Is subverting the town's zoning code to force this business on a residential neighborhood the answer? A current trend in municipalities is to assist seniors while still in their own home; some programs have added years to seniors independent living. Has Bethlehem investigated this? The Jan. 6 meeting revealed that our town has done very little planning in this area. At this point, we are relying on CMI's own market analysis and anecdotal homilies by a few older citizens.

Let us follow the examples of our elders and do not rush into a project that may be too large and would be sited on the wrong spot. I was pleased to see many concerned and vital seniors, who are planning for their future by attending the planning board meeting. The public comment period allowed was a fine example of open, democratic government at its best. However, those few of our residents that would be entering this type of facility will not be as vital.

Mr. Insoft of CMI stated that the typical resident in their late 80s will not be able to walk to the Four Corners or anywhere else. Transportation would be provided for every trip outside the facility. A bank, dining, hair-dressing and other services are to be inside the facility. Therefore, the siting of the facility becomes irrelevant; any site in town would be as good as another. This facility is not for seniors who would rather take a walk and do some shopping than continue mowing their lawns. It is for people who need much assistance in living. This is why it costs $2,000 per month to live there. It is not just another apartment house. For those prices one could live in mid-town Manhattan. Typical residents will have to sell their homes in order to afford to live there, instead of passing it on to their heirs, who, based on what I heard at the meeting, live in the town and want to be near. Who then will buy these homes? Younger families with school-age children. So much for the reduced burden on our schools.

I propose that the facility be placed on a site that would improve the quality of the town, while not detracting from the quality of life of its seniors. Instead of cutting down seven acres of trees, why not put it on an empty commercial property, where it would do all of us the most good? How about some of those ugly, empty bunkers down by the Dormitory Authority on Delaware Avenue? The CMI building, which would be a debatable fit where currently proposed would be an improvement over the asphalt eyesores on lower Delaware Avenue. Also, we could see trees and green space added, not subtracted. It would even be closer to the hospitals and other services affiliated with the project. The town could offer an incentive of a reduced assessment or even share the cost of demolition of any existing structures. I would rather see my tax dollars go for a project like this than watching many businesses, get their assessments reduced as has recently happened. I think if we take a few minutes to consider what is best for all us, and build on the efforts of Mr. Brewer and others, we will find common ground and arrive at the proper solution.

Patron wants offensive videos placed elsewhere

Editor, The Spotlight:

For the past two or three months, I have asked the employees of Video World in Delaware Plaza to move X-rated videos to a separate section or room. It seems inappropriate to expose children to the graphic titles and pictures that X-rated videos carry.

My efforts have not produced results. I would be grateful if the town board would consider passing a brief ordinance stipulating that adult materials in video rental outlets must be placed in a separate room or enclosure.

My intent is not to censor such materials, but rather to place them in an appropriate environment where they do not create an atmosphere that is offensive or inappropriate for children.

CMI meeting revealed new site info

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Jan. 6 planning board meeting provided some very interesting, new (to us) information about the proposed CMI Senior Housing Project. Thanks to the chairman of the board, attendees were permitted to ask questions and make statements, in addition to those of the board members, that elicited the new information.

Perhaps most interesting to me, was the existence of potential alternate sites for the housing. It appears that there are other, properly zoned sites within the town that CMI considered for their project.

Until Tuesday's meeting, we were led to believe that the Delaware Avenue site was chosen because of its proximity to the center of town, the library and the town hall. However, Mr. Insoft of CMI, when questioned about his choice of a residentially zoned site instead of the commercially zoned sites available admitted that the current site was chosen because the others were "too expensive." It appears that a central location has nothing to do with CMI's choice of sites.

Once again, we have a multi-million dollar company doing it cheaply not correctly. I was appalled that Mr. Insoft would expect the residents of the town to allow zoning to be changed so that CMI could save some money.

It was obvious from Mr. Insoft's comment that the decision to locate on Delaware Avenue was an economic one and had nothing to do with what was best for his residents. It causes me to think that the justification for site choice in CMI's proposal to the planning board, which states that the residence will fit nicely into the surrounding neighborhood, is a stratagem designed to hide the truth that it actually is the least expensive choice for CMI.

I strongly urge the board and fellow residents not to allow this sort of thing to happen in Bethlehem. Zoning must be kept intact. If senior housing is a necessity in this town, it needs to be built on a properly zoned property.

Delmar man still unsure why plane was seized

By Michael Hallisey

It's been nearly a year since Millard Harmon streaked through the sky in his single-engine plane, setting air-speed records while flying around the world on humanitarian missions.

The last time the 71-year-old Delmar man was in the cockpit of Ten Romeo, his 1969 Beech 36 airplane, was on April 7, when he touched down in Albany after a flight from Havana, Cuba.

Two drug interdiction planes escorted Harmon's plane from the Florida coast to Albany airport.

He was welcomed home by vehicles blocking airport runways and representatives from the U.S. Customs Service, Federal Aviation Administration and U.S. Department of the Treasury. Harmon prepared to have his plane confiscated.

Nearly a year later, he has yet to resolve his differences with the U.S. government. "A man is innocent until proven otherwise," said Harmon two weeks ago. "The U.S. government has gotten too damn complicated and departmentalized."

Officials at the Customs Service refused comment. Efforts to reach assistant U.S. Attorney Bill Perich, who represents the Customs Service, were unsuccessful.

"Many people are very, very upset over what has happened to Ten Romeo," said Harmon, who calls Ten Romeo his "life." He initially bought the plane to visit his children and grandchildren, who live in the Midwest.

Harmon is no stranger to the limelight, nor is he unfamiliar with the protocol of flying from one country to another.

He took a plane trip to the former Soviet Union in 1958, before the end of the Cold War. At the time, he was completing a doctorate at Boston University. Harmon returned to the Soviet Union in 1983 to update his degree.

Millard Harmon took another trip to the Soviet Union in 1984 to investigate problems European aviators were having with Soviet fuel. The fuel in commercial planes coming out of the Soviet Union was "predetonating."

Teledyne-Continental, using a sample collected by Harmon, discovered the fuel was for cars, not planes. Harmon had a special interest in the problem, because he anticipated that the skies over the Soviet Union would open up for small, private airplanes. He feared private pilots would encounter the fuel problems.

His interest in aviation fuel prompted Harmon to plan a trip to Havana, Cuba.

He submitted a request to fly to Havana, Cuba to check the quality of the country's 100 octane fuel a year before his last flight in Ten Romeo. With Cuba's approval, the U.S. Department of the Treasury issued Harmon licences to fly in.

However, Harmon also needed approval from the U.S. Department of Commerce to fly into Havana. His first application was denied. Two more were reportedly lost. A fourth application was finally filed.

Harmon, who was initially told he would receive approval, planned the trip for Easter. The plan was for Ten Romeo to fly from Havana to Washington, D.C., after refueling and dropping off medicine.

But before leaving, Harmon was denied entrance into Cuba. He altered his flight plan to fly over Havana after leaving the medicine in Grand Cayman. The punishment for landing in Havana would have been a substantial fine and possible prison sentence of up to 10 years.

Harmon took to the skies at 5:55 a.m. on March 30, 1997.

Harmon's trip to Grand Cayman Island was delayed when he experienced engine trouble approaching Cuba. Oil sprayed onto his windshield and the engine was acting "rough," he said. He radioed a distress signal to Havana.

Harmon knew he was in trouble.

In the next few days mechanics in Havana, Grand Cayman and Freeport worked on the plane's engine. While in Grand Cayman, Harmon received word that the U.S. Department of the Treasury was planning to fine him $55,000 for the improper flight.

Planes leaving Cuba for the United States are normally cleared through Miami. To expedite his departure, Harmon requested clearance from his home airport in Albany.

The decision not to clear his flight through Miami led to the seizure of Harmon's plane, and since then, Ten Romeo has sat idle in a hangar at Albany County Airport, while Harmon fights the Customs Service in U.S. District Court to get it back.

Mother, daughter program on agenda

Youth services librarian Polly Hartman believes it's important for mothers with preteen and teenage daughters to share some common interests.

She recently started taking pitant director of the Center for African American History and Culture at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

Dodson describes her venture in The Mother-Daughter Book Club, subtitled "How ten busy mothers and daughters came together to talk, laugh and learn through their love of reading."

The book is a collection of essays by ten pairs of mothers and daughters with discussion guides, reading lists and suggestions for starting a similar club.

Hartman's one-time library program took its inspiration from Dodson's book. It's a small start, but she hopes the idea will take hold and grow.

Hartman's choice for discussion is The Midwife's Apprentice, the Newbery Award winning book by Karen Cushman, about an orphaned girl in medieval Europe who is taken in by a gruff village midwife.

In the course of the story the girl attains a sense of self and purpose — not without some failures along the way.

There isn't any direct mention of mothers and daughters in the book. Hartman feels that "It can be uncomfortable for mothers and daughters to talk about their relationship. It's much easier to have a common ground for conversation that is non-threatening. That opens the way for more."

Copies of the book are available at the youth services desk. It's a slim volume, so a month should be ample reading time.

The program gives mothers and daughters an opportunity for some time together, when schedules aren't too hectic and cold weather invites a cozy afternoon with a book.

For information and to register, call the youth services desk at 439-9314.

Tax program should ease April IRS trepidation

One thing we can count on during the first week of January is the appearance in our mailboxes of income tax forms.

Voorheesville Public Library

Just in time, the library has planned a special tax update program with Nancy Parella of Luczak Financial Services in Voorheesville on Tuesday, Jan. 20, at 7 p.m.

Parella will discuss the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, which has been heralded as one of the most significant tax law reforms in recent history.

You can learn about new opportunities to save for retirement with the reduction of capital gains tax, options for college savings and reduction of estate taxes, and have your questions answered.

Don't file this year's taxes without learning about these important changes.

Registration is requested, but not required.

We are pleased to announce the eagerly anticipated return performance of watercolorist Kristin Woodward thanks to a grant from the Community Arts Connection (formerly New York State Arts Decentralization).

CAC provides funds to encourage and promote the development and strengthening of local arts and cultural programs. It is administered by the Albany/Schenectady League of Arts.

Woodward, who taught a popular Saturday painting workshop at the library last May, will present an evening demonstration and lead a series of classes this spring. Watching this space for details.

The January-February Bookworm, the VPL newsletter, should have arrived at your home by now. If you did not receive one or live outside the district and would like to be added to our mailing list, call 765-2791 and leave your name and address.

Remember food will be accepted for fines all this month!

Late goals help Bethlehem earn tie with Spartans

By Andrew Hartman

The Bethlehem Hockey team tied the Spartans of Burnt Hills with a pair of third period goals Thursday, Jan. 7 at the Albany County Training Facility.

In their last meeting at Union College, the Eagles broke a 2-2, second-period tie to score two goals in the third-period to win. This time, BC overcame a 3-1 deficit in the third to tie the game at three.

Hockey

Burnt Hills scored the first goal of the game.

Bethlehem hoped to break .500 for the second time in the team's history. They countered with a Jim Corrigan goal assisted by Jeff Smith. The Spartans had the last say in the second period with a goal. After two periods, Burnt Hills held a 2-1 lead.

The third period opened with a Burnt Hills goal that appeared to lock the game up. Mike Coker and Ricky Long assisted freshman Steve Guglielmo for a goal. Still down by one, Greg Cooper scored a game-tying goal with 6:08 left in the game, knotting the score at three.

"We felt good about it because we came back late in the game," said Billy Noonan, BC sophomore. "We were looking forward to being .500. Bethlehem had five wins in its best season. Coach was happy because we played well after the second period."

Coach John Battaglini said he still sees need for improvement.

"We still are having problems getting quality shots on goal," said Battaglini. "We started off (the game) fancy, but we finally woke up and began to play old-time hockey at the end of the second period."

"The team started getting good shots on net, and we followed our checks, which created better scoring chances. We need to do that right off the bat. That all comes with game experience."

"Unfortunately, our schedule has not helped us with that. It is nice to see different players starting to contribute," he said.

Bethlehem next takes to the ice on Saturday, Jan. 17, at 7:45 p.m. against Troy at the Pepsi Arena.

Wrestling team lays down on the job

By Gregg Ciprioni

The Bethlehem Boys Wrestling team suffered a tough defeat at the hands of Suburban Council rival Burnt Hills Wednesday, Jan. 7, at BCHS.

The team stuck with Burnt Hills through the early matches, winning three of the first five, but could not hold on as Burnt Hills rallied for a 52-27 victory. The loss was only the Eagles' second in duel meets this season.

Dave Woodworth, a sophomore, said of the meet, "It was a disappointing loss." Woodworth, wrestling at 96 pounds, sparked the Eagles by pinning his opponent in the first match.

Freshman Chris Reddy, with a forfeit victory, and senior Dave Fogelman, with a technically sound 7-1 defeat of his opponent at 125, assisted Bethlehem with an early lead.

However, Burnt Hills' strength in the middle weight classes proved to be too much for the Eagles. The Spartans won four matches in a row, three by pin, to help them to victory.

Bethlehem fared much better at a tournament on Saturday, Jan. 10, at Saratoga High School. The Eagles finished third overall in the meet, which included strong opponents Saratoga, Ballston Spa, and Hoosick Falls.

The Eagles were led by strong efforts from seniors Tim Leonard, 116, and Matt Brookshire, 130, finishing first in their respective weight classes. ## Boys top Shen, move to 2-0

By Tim Kavanagh

The Bethlehem boys swimming and diving team forced a first-place tie in the Suburban Council by defeating rival Shenendehowa at home Friday, Jan. 9. The meet gave the team a 2-0 record for the week as it also defeated Niskayuna on Wednesday, Jan. 7.

The team led much of the way in the Shenendehowa meet, taking many key fourth and fifth places in addition to victories. Bethlehem won the 50-yard free style with Scott Strickler taking first, Ilya Furman taking fourth and Andrew Zox taking fifth.

In Diving, Brendan Jordan took second place, Mark Bassotti third place and Mike Smith fourth, disallowing Shenendehowa's expected sweep of the event.

Sophomore Tim Corson took fifth place in the 100-yard butterfly. The 100-yard free style trio of Zox, second place, Jacob Erlich, fourth place, and Pat Davis, fifth place, scored much-needed points.

Tim Carroll took third place in the 100-yard backstroke. Although Shenendehowa looked to be winning the meet from the 200-yard freestyle relay, taking 1-2, it was not enough, as the 400-yard freestyle relay team of Strickler, Steve Corson, Chris Shaffer and Andrew Golden slammed the door, winning by almost a pool-length.

Coach Ken Neffis is still "cautiously optimistic" going into sectionals.

"This win makes it a three-way race for the sectional title, and we're in third right now. This was a nice boost because it showed a lot of swimmers what they can do, and showed what they have to do to get there.

"We will be dependent on our younger guys to come through at sectionals, and this meet showed them that they could perform at a higher level," he said.

"Everyone was really excited afterwards," said Strickler. "This meet shows that we have more of a chance at sectionals, but it also shows the younger guys what they have to do for us to win."

Eight members of the team trekked to Providence Saturday, Jan. 10, for the Brown Invitational and placed sixth out of a 17-team field.

Corson won the 500-yard freestyle, and placed fourth in the 200-yard free style. Shaffer took eighth in the 200-yard individual medley and third in the 100-yard butterfly.

Bob Pasquini finished 14th in the 100-yard breaststroke, as Carroll took 18th in the 100-yard backstroke. Strickler took a pair of thirds, one in the 50-yard free style and one in the 100-yard backstroke. Furman finished 17th in the 50-yard freestyle, and John Porco finished 22nd in the 100-yard breaststroke in personal record time.

The 400-yard free style relay of Corson, Shaffer, Rob Storey and Strickler finished third while the team of Shaffer, Furman, Strickler and Pasquini took fifth in the 200-yard medley relay.

The team faces a tough opponent tonight, Wednesday, Jan. 14, in Glens Falls before beginning its final preparations for sectionals in early February.

Boys track team defends record

By Catherine Hartman

The undefeated boys varsity track team competed in the Dartmouth Invitational Saturday, Jan. 10.

The team competed against schools from various states such as Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New Jersey, and schools from New York City.

Some of Bethlehem's top runners in the 55-meter dash were Dave Raab, a B.C. senior with a time of 6.81, and Girls Varsity runner and senior Diana Woodworth, with a time of 8.06.

"This year, the sprinters and jumpers have stepped it up. Because of their improvements, we should be able to continue doing very well throughout the indoor and outdoor track seasons," said Scott Rhodes, B.C. senior.

There were also two personal victories at the meet. Junior, Khalid Umar broke the school record, as well as his own, in the triple jump with 45 feet 10 inches. Another record breaker, senior Tim Mosher, got 44 feet 2 inches in shot put.

"It was a very strong performance. We took about a quarter of the team down to Dartmouth, which is a lot of athletes to bring. Everybody gave a great effort and I hope we can give the same effort down the road from now," said Coach Jason Wood.

The team's next meet is Monday, Jan. 19, at Hudson Valley, from 8:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. It is its last league meet.

BC girls basketball wins big

By Christine Potter

The Bethlehem girls varsity basketball team defeated Burnt Hills 61-40 Saturday, Jan. 10.

Nicole Conway led the team with 14 points, 10 rebounds, and five assists. Bridget Murray also played strong with 14 points, including two three-point baskets. Katie Smith was the team's top point scorer with 15 points, including one three-point basket.

Magan Sellnow contributed with 10 points and Karly Decker had four points. Kate Strait and Kerry Staniels came in to contribute to the win with two points each.

"It was a good team effort," said coach Kim Wise. "There was balanced scoring with four people in double figures, which is very good. We moved the ball well and worked as a team."

In another game, Bethlehem crushed Niskayuna 63-33 Wednesday, Jan. 7.

"We came out slow," said Wise. "But we really picked up in the third quarter."

Conway scored 15 points, including one three-point basket and Sellnow scored 14 points. Wise said Conway was excellent in the third quarter and Sellnow played a good game.

Smith scored 12 points and Murray scored nine points. Both girls had two three-point baskets each. Decker contributed with four points.

Strait came off the bench to score a three-point basket, along with Lauren Murray, Kate Bresnahan and Katherine Luber, who contributed with two points each.

"The good thing about this game was that everyone got to play," said Wise. "We are getting better with playing with each other and the girls are getting better reads on each other."

The next home game is today, Wednesday, Jan. 14, at 8 p.m. against Gunderland. On Friday, Jan. 16 the girls will compete at Shaker.

DENTURE SLIPPING?

When your dentures begin to slip a little, that's the time get some help from your dentist. The slippage may be caused by a number of things. One is bone loss. On the average, most people who wear dentures lose about two millimeters of jawbone every year. That may not sound like much, but this can cause problems such as slippage. It can be irritating as well as embarrassing if your biting into a thick, juicy, tender steak and your dentures slip.

The loss of supporting bone is a natural result of wearing dentures. But it can be minimized. Your dentist can show you how to keep your gums healthy. He can check your dentures and adjust them so they fit better and don't put uneven pressure on the jawbone. He may have to reline them to help minimize bone loss and give you a comfortable fit.

Good Dentures not only improve your appearance, they will also help to satisfy your appetite if they're properly fitted and checked regularly.

Ladybirds tear Mechanicville apart

By Chris Bonham

The Voorheesville Ladybirds varsity basketball team remains undefeated as they romped Mechanicville 53-19, Friday, Jan. 9. The Ladybirds, with a record of 12-0, now lead the Colonial Conference.

"They have a couple of young players, and we're going to take advantage of the situation," said coach Jack Adams.

Adams said the team had no strategies and the team was going to do the same thing they've been doing, "press, and focus on the good players."

Ripping down rebounds, and connecting with their shots, Voorheesville jumped all over Mechanicville leading 17-3 at the end of the first quarter. The Ladybirds cooled down in the second quarter, scoring only nine, while allowing Mechanicville only three.

Voorheesville bounced back in the third quarter, scoring 17, as it held Mechanicville to only six points. In the fourth, Mechanicville held its own again, scoring seven points against Voorheesville's 10.

The win over Mechanicville was Voorheesville's 12th straight victory.

Jane Meade led the Birds, connecting with seven buckets and five free throws, giving her a total of 19 points. Behind Meade, was Regan Burns with seven, and Julie Baron with six points.

"It (the team) turned out a good effort," said Adams.

"As I said before, Mechanicville has a young and inexperienced team. The Birds defense and press worked out really well."

Can You Spread Periodontal Disease?

If you are being treated for periodontal disease, which is caused by a bacterial infection, be sure to keep your tooth brush away from other family members.

Periodontal (gum) disease is not infectious like chicken pox. However, the bacteria that causes gum disease can be spread and increase the chances of a loved one getting gum disease.

There are certain conditions that must be met to contract periodontal disease. These include: genetics, the contents of the individuals saliva, the general health of the individual, smoking, medications and plaque (bacteria). Also, periodontal disease seldom affects children.

So, if someone in your household has periodontal disease or is in treatment for it, other adult members of the family should visit the dentist to be checked for periodontal disease.

Judge

"They displayed a sign that said 'Chase The Painter,' with the clear implication that you were supposed to chase this guy down. He had a delightful sense of humor."

In addition to his service on the New Scotland bench, Chase's career included four years in the Army (1948-1952) and 10 years of work for the New York State Thruway Authority.

When Chase took office, justices weren't required to have law degrees. "That changed in the middle of his tenure," Connelly said. "Things were done in a much more informal manner (in the late '60s). Fortunately or unfortunately, depending on your viewpoint, the law has become much more complex."

"He brought a lot of practical knowledge to the job," Connelly added. "He did work very hard to learn the law and keep current on it."

"Over the years, I've gotten comments from lawyers who appeared before him," Connelly continued. "They've said that for a non-lawyer judge, he did a good job."

Breeze said that Chase often intimidated young lawyers with his knowledge of the law.

"He would offer discussions of obscure sections of the Vehicle and Traffic law," Breeze said, "then shove a copy of the (law text) across the bench and ask the lawyer, 'Would you like to read what it means, son?' He let these young guys struggle a bit."

Connelly said the informal nature of Chase's court didn't affect its integrity. "Although the rules may not have been followed to the letter, things got resolved in the right way."

"Nobody ever got special consideration," Reilly added. "He took the job very seriously."

Breeze said Chase made it clear to those who appeared before him that legal offenses were serious matters, but he balanced tough rhetoric with lenient sentencing.

"(Defendants) would find their sentences weren't nearly so onerous as they could have been elsewhere," Breeze said.

After he retired, Chase suffered what Breeze called "a series of debilitations" stemming from diabetes. For the last year and a half, Chase lived at the Our Lady of Mercy Life Center, a nursing home in Guilderland.

"I visited him during his illness," former New Scotland Republican Committee Chairperson Judi Von Ronne said, "and he was still interested in everything that was going on in the town, even though he couldn't be involved."

The picture that Chase's friends and colleagues painted this week was of a justice who ruled with common sense and in the best interests of the community.

Connelly noted that town courts have changed substantially since the era when Chase first took the bench, but said "I think the judge still has to be a part of the community. That sense of intimacy will always remain in the town and village courts. It's something I try to retain, and I know Don did."

Reilly said that when Robert Johnson assumed Chase's judgeship in 1991, he had "a big pair of shoes to fill — and Bob Johnson was a very capable attorney."

"He was one of the most common-sense judges around," Von Ronne said. "That was very much appreciated. That's why he kept being reelected."

"He took the job so he could help people," Connelly added, "and he did a good job doing that."

"There was a tremendous amount of respect for Don," Von Ronne concluded, "and he will be really missed."

Contributions in Judge Chase's memory may be made to the Jerusalem Reformed Church, Rt. 32, Feura Bush, 12067.

to the adult back room," said Heather Austin, store manager of Video World in Delmar. "It's been that way since October."

The concern is over how non-rated videos with sexually suggestive covers such as Twisted Passion, Stolen Hearts, Scorned, Sexual Roulette, Poison Ivy 2 and others, are displayed.

Video World displays these videos in the new release section and on drama, comedy and mystery racks throughout the store.

Carbone said he is sympathetic to the customers' concerns and tries to accommodate them.

"There are pictures (on the covers) I wouldn't want my children to see," Carbone said.

Video World puts yellow stickers on non-rated videos, stating that the theme is mature and customers must be 18-years-old to rent them. Stickers are usually strategically placed on video covers.

Austin said she also uses pink paper to cover suggestive pictures on video jackets.

Carbone said cashiers try to card anyone who looks under 18, but they can't get everyone. "We try our best," he said.

Most of the non-rated videos at Video World are categorized by the film distributors on the video jacket as erotic or erotic thriller.

"(Videos marked) erotic or erotic thriller should be in the separate room with adult content videos," Berger said.

Berger has been trying for the past two or three months to get the staff at Video World in Delaware Plaza to move questionable videos to the adult room but hasn't received a response from store management or corporate headquarters.

Austin said she does not recall anyone asking her about non-rated videos, but added that doesn't mean Berger didn't ask her staff about moving videos. "I would take a request like that very seriously," Austin said.

Carbone said he hasn't received any specific complaints about non-rated videos at the Delaware Plaza store.

on the school system.

He added that the project's location would be good for senior citizens. If approved, it would be the first senior housing in Delmar.

Residents of the proposed complex would be able to walk to the library and town hall, which host activities for seniors.

"I would rather see this type of organization than any other organization use that site," said Robert van Court of 459 Delaware Ave. in Delmar.

He went on to say that the site was perfect for the project because it would allow for a positive cross-generational experience.

A teacher at Schenectady Central Park Middle School, van Court said his school sponsors field trips to local senior centers and some students volunteer at centers.

He agreed with Insoft that the project wouldn't be a burden on the school district.

"A lot of seniors I've shown the picture (of the proposed facility) to think it is beautiful," said Floyd Brewer of 18 Willow Drive in Delmar. "Many of them can't wait to sign up."

Brewer said that seniors he has talked to want stay in town to be close to their families and activities. He added that some seniors need this kind of housing to stay active and social.

Brewer and other senior citizens agreed that the people against the project will change their tune when they get older.

A little help with the job of parenting

Most parents readily agree that parenting is a difficult job, one that, at some time, all parents need help with. Recognizing this need, four local parents, Alison Jacob, Carolyn Durfee, Barbara Hoffman and Maureen Crucetti, spent two days training in the EPIC (Every Person Influences Children) program. They learned how to facilitate parent groups and how to lead discussions about parenting techniques.

During the fall, these volunteers led a series of EPIC Workshops for parents of children in kindergarten through grade three and another for parents of fourth- and fifth-grade children. The parents who attended these EPIC sessions were very positive about the experience. We are very grateful to our EPIC volunteers who gave many hours to help other parents. Our EPIC workshops were held at Bethlehem Community Church and we thank them for sharing their excellent facility to support parent education.

Another series of EPIC workshops, for parents of students in kindergarten through grade three, will begin Feb. 3 from 1 pm to 3 p.m. The group will run for four weeks, meeting once a week. This is a wonderful opportunity to meet with other parents in a warm and comfortable environment and to discuss parenting issues. There is no fee for the workshops. Please call Mona Prenoveau at 439-7740 for more information or to register.

St. Stephen's plans service fit for a 'King'

By Katherine McCarthy

A special Martin Luther King Jr. Day service will take place at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Elsmere on Monday, Jan. 19, at 7 p.m.

The service is the brainchild of Susan Meyer, who is a member of the vestry at St. Stephen's.

"I wanted to have the service primarily because I was concerned about the fallout after the O.J. Simpson verdict," Meyer said. "It seems necessary to reacquire ourselves with the messages that Martin Luther King Jr. gave us so many years ago. Mostly, that we've come a long way, but we have a long way to go. We need to work together to assure that all people are equal."

Meyer said she also felt it was important to do this as a church. "Dr. King began his life as a clergyman, and he had a tremendous amount of faith and theological education. The holiday shouldn't just be celebrated by the state of New York, or in a secular way. It's important to remind people that he was a member of the clergy."

The celebration, marking the 30th anniversary of his death, will be presided over by Rev. Darius Mojallali, rector at St. Stephen's. A quartet from the choir, as well as a soloist, will sing spirituals, and there will be music the congregation can sing.

Members of the children's choir will also perform, a fitting reminder of Dr.

King's stirring speech on The Washington Mall in Washington, D.C., in which he dreamed of a society where all children would walk hand in hand, learn with one another, and live side by side, regardless of color or creed.

Four other people helped Meyer organize this year's service. Father Mojallali has been involved in the planning, along with Melissa Allyn, director of the children's choir; Doug Lutz, who coordinated the music for the service; Barb Collins, church organist; and Gail Richardson, a member of the choir.

Barb Via and Pat Lutz have organized a reception following the service, with punch, cookies and finger foods.

Meyer said attendance at last year's service was good, with people attending from not just St. Stephen's, but from the whole community.

"I hope our attendance will be the same this year," Meyer said. "I don't know how many local families go to Albany for services remembering Dr. King, and it's important to get his message out."

At Siena College in Loudonville, on Wednesday, Jan. 22, at 7:30 p.m., Cornell West, Harvard professor and author, will discuss race in America as part of Siena's King Lecture series. The lecture will be in the Alumni Recreation Center. The lecture is free and open to the public. For information, call 783-2431.

Chinese lyric soprano performs Jan. 31 in Troy

Several years ago, a young Chinese lyric soprano came into the spotlight when she emerged from among 200 aspirants for the role of the ill-fated geisha in the Madame Butterfly film directed by Frederic Mitterrand. Since that 1995 debut, Ying Huang, a Shanghai-born singer, has been busy on the road throughout Europe and the United States.

Saturday, Jan. 31, Huang will appear in a program of arias and songs at the Troy Savings Bank Music Hall in Troy. The 8 p.m. concert with works by Rossini, Verdi, Puccini, Mozart and Strauss as well as traditional Chinese songs, is part of a schedule by Troy Chromatic Concerts which for the past 100 years has brought leading singers and musicians to the Capital Region.

Huang who since her film debut, has sung with Placido Domingo and Michael Bolton in a Christmas in Vienna concert in 1996, most recently signed a SONY recording contract.

Following her graduation from the Shanghai Conservatory of Music in 1992, she toured China and then appeared later that same year in Paris.

She will be accompanied by Thomas Muraco in the Troy concert. Tickets are on sale for $20 and reservations are available at 273-0038.

The many rooms contain displays, costumes, and artifacts from early Albany to the present day, giving viewers a better understanding of the area as an early Dutch trading outpost, an inland seaport, a rail center, and eventually a leading seat of government.

The building was once the home of the Quackenbush family, whose family members defended New York State from the British.

Andrew Lloyd Webber cuts party while nursing Sunset wounds

The British composer of so many musical hits for the last 20 years is pinching pennies, at least in New York.

Andrew Lloyd Webber refused to spend money to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the Broadway version of Phantom of the Opera later this month even though he's worth half a billion dollars. He's nursing wounds from the failure of Sunset Boulevard to become a big money-maker. He's also walking lightly with the opening of Whistle Down the Wind which is due to open in London in June.

Phantom of the Opera is reported to have grossed $2.5 billion in the dozen years it's been playing throughout the world, and is not tiring at the moment. Two weeks ago, it grossed almost $900,000 in one week on Broadway, outstripping the very popular The Lion King whose success has been phenomenal since its opening several months ago.

Lion King has been the top grossing musical each week, except the week Phantom crept ahead by a few thousand dollars.

Always...Patsy Cline returns for another run at Capital Rep

The successful production of Always...Patsy Cline returns to Capital Rep this Friday, Jan. 16 for a month's reprise. First presented in Albany last August, the overwhelming response by audiences stunned the Capital Rep producers.

When it was found that the performers who appeared last August were again available as well as the director, Capital Rep moved the show into the January slot. The production will run for a month.

Reservations are available at 462-4531.

DOUBLES: DIFFERENT RETURNS

Where you aim the return depends on if the server is coming to the net. If he is aggressive, aim the ball just inside the service line, so it will land at his feet.

If the server stays back after the serve, you should hit the return so it lands just inside the baseline, jamming him back, while your team takes the net.
