CMI wins rezoning vote 4-1

Neighbors plan to fight decision in court

By Peter Hanson

More than a year after they first appeared before the Bethlehem town board, representatives from CMI Senior Housing & Healthcare won a major victory last week when the board voted 4-1 to grant CMI's request for rezoning of the Delmar parcel where CMI wants to build a $10 million assistive-living facility.

Barely 12 hours after the vote, though, one of the residents opposed to the project said he and his neighbors anticipate filing an Article 78 lawsuit within the near future to force the town to justify its rezoning decision in court.

CMI's proposal has been mired in controversy and bureaucracy for months because the company wants to build a 69,000 square foot, 94-unit complex next to Bethlehem Public Library. Residents complained that allowing CMI to build would ruin the character of the neighborhood including Borthwick Avenue, and two members of the town's planning board said the proposal called for spot zoning, which they said would set a dangerous precedent of wild development.

Although about 100 people attended the July 8 public hearing during which town board members heard both sides of the CMI debate, only about 25 people were in attendance at the July 22 meeting when the board voted to adopt Local Law 8 of 1998, which changes the zoning at 467 Delaware Ave. from "A" residential to "planned commercial district."

Each of the board members gave brief statements emphasizing how seriously they took this issue and praised the diligence of the planning board.

If this project were for anything other than senior housing, I wouldn't be considering it.

Barber's death touches community

By Peter Hanson

Although he lived in Voorheesville, Ronald Wagner was one of Bethlehem's favorite small business owners. Wagner, who opened Wagner's Barber Shop, located at 337 Delaware Ave. in Delmar, with his twin brother Donald in 1966, died in a traffic accident early Thursday morning.

Wagner was driving to work at about 6 a.m. when a deer sprinted across Route 156 in New Scotland. Wagner's 1993 Honda motor scooter struck the deer, which caused Wagner to veer off the road and hit a guard rail. He was transported to Albany Medical Center Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Ronald Wagner, co-owner of this Delmar shop, died last week.

Peter Hanson

By the time of his funeral service Monday morning, nearly 800 people had signed Wagner's condolence book, and about 100 people — including the supervisors of Bethlehem and New Scotland — packed into Applebee Funeral Home in Delmar for the emotional service.

"I lost my brother, my best friend, my business partner and a lot more," Donald Wagner said in his eulogy. "He was taken by nature, the thing he loved most."

Donald Wagner described his brother as an avid hunter, camper and fisherman, but said most of the things Ronald Wagner bought were for the enjoyment of his whole family. Donald Wagner expressed surprise at the outpouring of grief and support he's witnessed since his brother died.

Stone finds satanic items at Five Rivers

By Peter Hanson

When state wildlife pathologist Ward Stone turned off Game Farm Road in Delmar to drive to his office on the grounds of Five Rivers Environmental Education Center late last Wednesday, the last thing he expected was to discover a box full of "satanic" artifacts near the small bridge leading toward his building, but that's just what happened.

"I was coming back to return equipment after inoculating ducks in the Adirondacks," Stone said, explaining that he stopped driving when he saw a card-found dozens of items wrapped in a white sheet. "I was expecting garbage," he said. "I was going to go through it and find someone's name and then have one of (the center's) conservation officers write a ticket for littering."

But the deeper Stone got into the box, the less comfortable he was with its contents.

"As I looked through the stuff, I saw feathers, grease, what appeared to be dried blood, and knives," he said. "I could see that it had to do with animal sacrifices."

Cops arrest two for DWI

Bethlehem police recently arrested two people for driving while intoxicated (DWI).

Thomas John Spisak, 22, of 333 Alcove Road in Coeymans Hollow, was arrested Monday, July 20, at 2:35 a.m.

Officer Charles Radliff observed Spisak driving south on Route 9W near Casa Mia restaurant in Glenmont. Radliff said Spisak was driving 75 mph in a 55 mph zone. Radliff turned on his emergency lights and followed Spisak through several turns until Spisak stopped near a Patterson Drive house. Radliff said Spisak attempted to run from him but was apprehended, and a marijuana pipe was confiscated during a search of Spisak's car.

Spisak is scheduled to appear in town court Tuesday, Aug. 4, at 4 p.m.

Ruth Alice Giovannette, 39, of 24 Jones Ave. in Feura Bush, was arrested Saturday, July 18 at 4:50 a.m.

Officer Thomas Heffernan observed Giovannette driving north on Elm Avenue, where he said she drove through a red light. Heffernan stopped Giovannette just south of Route 32 and administered several field sobriety tests, which Giovannette failed.

Giovannette is scheduled to appear in town court Tuesday, Aug. 4, at 4 p.m.

Court cases adjudicated

The following dispositions were recorded in Bethlehem town court recently.

Both of the defendants were charged with driving while intoxicated (DWI).

Steven A. Patterson, 22, of 47 Hancock Drive in Glenmont, who was arrested May 17, pleaded guilty to DWI July 7. He was fined $500 plus a $90 surcharge and his license was revoked for six months.

Kirk Jon Skinkle, 24, of 25 Parker Rd. in Selkirk, who was arrested May 17, pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of driving with ability impaired (DWAI) July 7. He was fined $300 plus a $25 surcharge and his license was suspended for 90 days.

Both men will be required to attend a drunk-driving victim impact panel.

Town seeks permission to dredge Hudson again

By Peter Hanson

Within the next month, town officials will learn whether their recent application for permission to dredge a stretch of the Hudson River has been approved by the state Department of Environmental Conservation and the Army Corps of Engineers.

Approximately 1,000 cubic yards of material would be dredged from an area of the river near the intake gallery of the town's water system that is approximately 1,100 feet long.

The dredging would dig 4 inches below the water line and the material extracted would be pumped into a holding pond.

The joint application to both agencies, which was filed June 2, is part of the town's ongoing process of exploring why its groundwater infiltration system only produces about one-third of the 6 million gallons per day (gpd) that it was designed to produce.

The town is currently suing two companies, J. Kenneth Fraser & Associates and Rust Environmental & Infrastructure, for their part in the design of the system.

A third firm, O'Brien & Gere, has been hired to review the system during litigation, and O'Brien & Gere recommended dredging be done this summer to discern whether siltation in the Hudson River is the cause of the water system's shortcomings.

Toward that end, the town applied for permission to dredge in the spring, but the application was denied because it coincided with the fish spawning season, during which the DEC "blacks out" all dredging to avoid interfering with spawning.

When the last application was denied in late March, DEC deputy regional permit administrator Jeffrey Gregg said the application could be submitted again for dredging in August after the spawning season ended.

Town Supervisor Sheila Fuller said the current application is a routine follow-up to Gregg's instructions.

"Absolutely nothing has changed since March," Fuller said. "We were denied (then) because the application was not submitted on an emergency basis, so we had to wait until Aug. 1, which we've done."

The current application seeks permission to dredge between mid-August and mid-September and is currently under review by DEC and the Corps. On July 21, Gregg sent the town a "notice of complete application" which indicates that all the paperwork required for the dredging has been submitted properly.

There is a public comment period that extends until Aug. 14 during which residents can submit written statements for and against dredging to Gregg's office or the Corps.

Members of the citizens' group Clearwater for Bethlehem have been taking full advantage of the public comment period.

Sherwood Davies has expressed concern about the dissemination of information about dredging and Linda Burtis said she's worried the town will use this dredging application to get permission to dredge again in the future.

We were denied in March, so we had to wait until August, which we've done.

Sheila Fuller

"I have no problem with a one-time dredging, but I'm totally uncomfortable with a 10-year dredging plan," she said, adding that one of her primary concerns is PCBs in the Hudson.

Coincidentally, the Environmental Protection Agency released a report this week indicating that dredging may actually be necessary to counteract the presence of PCBs in the Hudson.

All of these issues reflect concerns about the shifting nature of the Hudson River bottom. If sediment isn't stationary, that could, in part account for why PCBs aren't settling beneath the water line and why silt is clogging the infiltration gallery of the town's water system.

Burtis' concerns about a 10-year dredging plan were sparked by language in the Corps' public notice about the town's dredging application, which describes the activity in question as dredging "with 10 years maintenance."

When Davies raised Burtis' concerns to Fuller during the town board's July 22 meeting, Fuller said that the Corps included the phrase about 10-year dredging without prompting from the town, and the text of the town's application verifies Fuller's response.

The town is currently dredging to learn about problems with the water system, Fuller said, so any talk about future plans is premature. Nonetheless, Burtis expressed concern that two different plans appear to be under discussion, one with 10-year maintenance and one without. "The right hand's got to know what the left hand is doing," she said.

DEC and the Corps are expected to render their decisions on the application shortly after the public comment period closes Aug. 14.

Firefighter confesses to arson

Scott Starker says he torched Clarksville home for a thrill

By Lisa K. Kelly

An Onesquethaw volunteer firefighter admitted to igniting two fires during the investigation of a June 14 fire at an abandoned building on Route 443 in Clarksville.

Capt. Craig Apple of the Albany County Sheriff's Department said that after Scott Starker started the fire with his roommate, Carey Allen, he returned with the fire department to extinguish it.

"This is normal behavior for people like Starker. They like to start fires and then rush back to put them out," said Apple.

During routine questioning, Apple said he found discrepancies in Starker's story and questioned him a second time. "He admitted involvement in both fires," Apple added. "He indicated to me that he gets a great deal of enjoyment out of watching fire."

The second fire Starker admitted setting was at 1020 Cutter St. in Schenectady last August. Apple said Schenectady police suspected Starker when he was found at the site of the fire trying to put it out with a garden hose.

Apple said that during the original Schenectady fire investigation, his office received a call from Schenectady police about Starker. "They knew he lived out here and they wanted to know if we had had any dealings with him," he added.

Starker poured gasoline throughout both buildings to ignite the fires.

Starker, 26, and Allen, 21, both of 2067 Delaware Turnpike in Clarksville, were arraigned by New Scotland Justice Thomas Dolin. They were charged with three felonies: Third-degree arson, third-degree burglary and fourth-degree conspiracy. They were also charged with a misdemeanor reckless endangerment.

They were sent to the Albany County jail without bail, Apple said. "With three felonies against them, they could do several years," he added. "If they're convicted on all charges, they'll face 15 years (each)."

Starker is a emergency medical technician for Mohawk Ambulance Company. He hasn't been charged yet in the Schenectady fire.

Allen, Starker's brother-in-law, is unemployed. "To the best of our knowledge, (the Clarksville fire) was a one-time deal for him," Apple said.

Apple said this is not the first time a volunteer firefighter has committed arson. Right now, there is no way for volunteer fire companies to conduct background checks on applicants. "Basically, whatever they put on the application you have to hope is true," Apple said.

Apple said there is legislation pending which would give fire departments a way to investigate applicants. "But as far as Starker, there would have been no indication from his record," Apple said.

Postal Service buys Brownell Building

Former owner Robert Brownell now runs motel in Saranac Lake

By Lisa K. Kelly

Signs attached to the yellow caution tape wrapped around the former Brownell Insurance and Real Estate building at 355 Delaware Ave. in Delmar read, "U.S. Property. No Trespassing."

Delmar Postmaster Tom Porcaro said the Postal Service purchased the building and has plans for the property. "We plan to demolish the building and use the area for parking," he added. "We're also hoping to get an addition on to the current post office to make it more handicap accessible and to increase the size of the lobby."

There's no official word yet on whether the post office will expand its current 10,000-square-foot space. "But we've had a positive indication from the Albany office that it will be approved" Porcaro added.

The parking lot expansion has already been approved and Porcaro said it should be completed before the first snowfall.

Robert Brownell, former owner of the insurance and real estate business, said he sold the building and merged his insurance business with Bryant Asset Protection in Slingerlands because his sons weren't interested in carrying on the family business.

"I had no one to pass it on to," he added. "I started working there in 1975, and I bought it from my dad in 1981."

Brownell said his father, Raymond, started the business in 1947. The original office was on Adams Street, upstairs from the highway department. "The Delaware Avenue building was purchased in the late '50s," Brownell added.

Brownell purchased Gauthier's Saranac Lake Motor Inn last January.

"I will run the motel from here on in," he added. "I hope my kids are interested in taking over the business some day."

Brownell said he has always had an interest in the motel business. "We probably have the nicest motel on the lake," he said.

Built in the 1930s, the motel on Flower Lake in the village of Saranac Lake, used to consist of cabins. "Now the motel is comprised of three buildings with 31 units," he added. "Most of the rooms are right on the lake."

The Saranac Lake area is known for its canoeing. "My sons and I do a lot of flat canoe racing," he said. "We do a dozen different races during the year."

Brownell said there are about 40 miles of water that can be canoed with all of the little lakes in the area. "I offer free canoes to my guests," he added.

The motel is open year-round, and Brownell said there are many activities in "this hopping little town," with its Olympic sites and two colleges, Paul Smith's and North Country Community College.

Prestige offers state-of-the-art imaging service

By Peter Hanson

The equipment in Prestige Photo & Studio, a new business that recently opened in Delmar, showcases the evolution of photography from the Industrial to the Information Age. By the door, there's a high-tech Nova Touch imaging machine that lets customers tweak old photos by computer, and by the window, there's an archaic, large-format Eastman View Camera that dates back to the mid-1930s.

If the store feels a bit like a museum, it's not by accident — proprietor Paul DeSarbo, 61, also runs the Altamont Fair Camera Museum, which is open during the annual Altamont Fair. DeSarbo, a Schenectady native who has lived in Altamont for about 16 years, owns a collection of nearly 4,000 cameras.

But DeSarbo isn't stuck in the past. Instead, he's got his eye on the future, when he expects photography to convert from conventional film to digital imaging. Many industries, including newspapers and law enforcement agencies, have already made the switch.

To keep up with the fast-changing world of modern photography, DeSarbo designed his new Delmar store with a mix of Space Age technology and old-fashioned hospitality. He converted the former home of Leeder's Video at 340 Delaware Ave. from a dark, cramped shop into a bright, fresh-looking retail space.

"I'd been looking at Bethlehem for a while, and when Speedy Photo closed, I decided this is where I should go," DeSarbo said, adding that he knew Roger Smith, the owner of 340 Delaware Ave. "We worked out a lease agreement, and here I am — hopefully, for many years."

DeSarbo said he started taking pictures when he was 12 and spent his entire professional life in the image-making business, whether he was operating offset lithography machines or working as a salesman for photo-processing companies.

Twelve years ago, DeSarbo started his own business, opening a series of photo-processing shops and photography studios. "The first one was in Catskill, and the services were strictly photo processing and used equipment," he said.

A dozen years and almost as many stores later, DeSarbo now offers a dizzying range of services that includes equipment sales and repair, portrait photography, custom processing, digital imaging, wedding photography and videotaping and even aerial photography.

DeSarbo's partners in the business are his wife, Linda, and their daughter, Heather, who handles functions including the store's ultra-modern photo processing machine. DeSarbo said that when his family decided to open in Delmar, they felt they should fill the store with every amenity they could imagine so it could truly be called full service.

"This is the most modern equipment in the state of New York," DeSarbo said about his store's processing machine. "All you do is put the raw film in one side and get prints on the other side. It uses odorless chemicals and the turnaround is half an hour."

Although DeSarbo is keeping pace with advancements in photo-processing technology, he said there's only so much a photo finisher can do to fix a picture that was framed badly or overexposed. To help amateur shutterbugs take better pictures, DeSarbo said he plans to offer photography courses at the store in the future.

DeSarbo said common mistakes that people make when taking pictures include getting too close with normal lenses, which throws subjects out of focus, and aiming flashes directly at people near the camera, which casts too much light on faces, washing them out.

DeSarbo added that cameras are becoming more and more sophisticated, but even with the best camera available, photographers still need to think about things like composition, lighting and standing still while shooting.

"I don't like to say that I take pictures," DeSarbo said. "I create them." DeSarbo said composing images is his favorite part of the job, then offered an explanation of his technique.

"If I'm shooting a person in a cluttered urban area, I immediately look for greenery and crop out the other stuff," he said. "I try to create the impression that they're in the country so they're not standing next to a garbage can."

"I enjoy shooting nature especially," he said. "People think it's easy, but it's not — trying not to catch the wires and the roads in the background is hard."

Now that he's set up shop in Delmar, DeSarbo hopes he'll be able to help his customers take better pictures by introducing them to the high-tech tools at his disposal, selling them the equipment they need to upgrade their cameras and teaching courses.

"We're basically here to service the public and process film," he said. "We try to keep everything else at a minimum profit to pay the overhead and, hopefully, build a business."

Prestige Photo & Studio (478-7213) buys and sells used equipment and people are welcome to bring cameras and lenses in for estimates. The store's hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays and 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

Mascot probe continues

By Lisa K. Kelly

Using American Indians as school mascots has come under fire recently. The longtime tradition is currently being reviewed by the state Department of Education.

The state decided to review the use of such symbols after a recent civil rights appeal by Orange County resident Robert Eurich, who is not an American Indian.

Eurich claimed the use of American Indians as scholastic sports mascots violated his civil rights, but Education Commissioner Richard Mills denied the appeal.

"He has no business asking these questions," said Ubaldo Desrochers, who performed as Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Senior High School's mascot, the Indian, until the end of the 1997-1998 school year.

"(Using Indian mascots) doesn't hurt anyone," he said.

Furthermore, Desrochers doesn't think the name of the RCS football team, the Indians, is offensive. "It's just a name, like if they had called themselves the RCS brooms," he said.

"The issue is still under review," said state Education Department spokesperson Bill Hirshen, "and until the review is complete, we cannot comment publicly."

Desrochers is part American Indian and belongs to the Abenaki tribe that lives on the Odanak Reservation in Canada.

Desrochers said he started to dress up as the Indian mascot about six years ago when his daughters went to the high school and were cheerleaders.

"I was impressed by the title, 'The Indians,'" he said. "When I dressed like that, I represented the Abenaki tribe."

"I got the costume from a friend in Canada, and the first time I wore it, I came running out of the woods onto the football field. (The team) eventually accepted me as the mascot."

RCS football coach Gary Vanderzee said Desrochers' character wasn't really a mascot, but a "symbol of strength and courage" for the school. "We take a lot of pride in the symbol and Desrochers," he added.

Vanderzee said he didn't feel it was his place to comment on the review being conducted by the Department of Education.

Desrochers, 53, said he stopped performing as the Indian because of his age. He works at Friehofer's Bakery, but said, "I'll probably retire soon."

Desrochers said he may return to the football field this year, depending on the weather. "It gets cold when you're standing out there for two or three hours at a time."

Board mulls cable changeover

By Peter Hanson

During a public hearing at its July 22 meeting, the Bethlehem town board continued examining the proposed changeover of cable service in town from Cablevision to TimeWarner. Based on the recommendation of comptroller Judith Kehoe, the board tabled any decision on the matter until September.

Kehoe said that the cable service, which generates approximately $3.5 million in revenue annually and provides the town with annual franchise fees of about $175,000, cannot be formally transferred until the Public Service Commission (PSC) approves the transaction.

For that reason, Kehoe suggested the board table any decision until the PSC rules on the transaction, through which TimeWarner and Cablevision are swapping service areas. The PSC is scheduled to decide the matter Sept. 9. "There's no hurry for us to do anything," Kehoe said.

PSC representative John Figliozzi said that so far, the transaction appears to be routine and should proceed without complications, but said the time between now and the PSC's ruling will be spent studying the paperwork and regulations germane to transfers of this scale. "There's no problem with the process, but it just takes some time to review the material," he said.

Peter Taubkin, TimeWarner's vice president of government relations, said service would primarily be similar but there might be minor changes reflecting the difference between the two companies' rate structures and channel assignments.

"Any rate changes will be communicated to customers (according) to PSC rules and Federal Communication Commission rules," he said.

Taubkin added that TimeWarner could be in a position to offer Road Runner, its high-speed Internet access service, to Bethlehem customers within a year of the changeover.

Board members Doris Davis and Susan Burns asked several questions about how customers would be affected by the changeover. Taubkin responded by saying, among other things, that service calls and equipment maintenance would be top priorities for TimeWarner.

Taubkin indicated that it's in his company's interest to provide seamless cable service so TimeWarner employees can spend their time expanding the business instead of correcting preventable problems.

In other business, the board voted to let town residents participate in the city of Albany's next hazardous waste collection day, which will take place Saturday, Sept. 19, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the city's Rapp Road collection site. Highway superintendent Gregg Sagendorph said participating in the city's collection day will help town residents who would otherwise have to wait for Bethlehem's next hazardous waste collection day in the spring.

Sagendorph also gave the board an update on the removal of a 1,000-gallon petroleum storage tank from the highway department's Selkirk facility. The tank is being removed to comply with federal and state environmental protection regulations.

Sagendorph said some fuel contamination has been detected beneath the tank's supply line and is being mitigated. The contractor doing the work is removing the contaminated material at a cost of $8 per square yard. Eight hundred square yards have already been excavated.

Sagendorph said that even if the cost of the excavation rises to $20,000, it will still be within the project's $110,000 budget because the contractor's winning bid was $84,000. Sagendorph said the town's getting a break on the cost of excavation. "The next lowest bidder was $15 per square yard and the highest bidder was $50 per yard," he said. "Bidding worked for us here."

Sagendorph said the contamination at the site doesn't appear to be as severe as that at the site of the new Stewart's Shop in Delmar, which became contaminated years ago when a gas station was there.

"We're hoping this isn't as bad, (but) it's too early to tell," Sagendorph said.

Town clerk Kathleen Newkirk also had an item on the meeting's agenda. She won approval for a $4,000 records management department project to install air ventilation equipment in the basement area of town hall where inactive records are stored.

Newkirk said the ventilation is required because since the hardware for the building's phone system was installed in the basement, heat and humidity have increased. Two workers who spent time in the basement complained of lightheadedness and labels are starting to peel off records storage boxes.

"The heat has also shut down the phone system at least once," Newkirk said, adding that installing ventilation would be "a permanent fix" for the problem.

Matters of Opinion

Get on with CMI

CMI's senior citizen assistive living proposal got the green light from Bethlehem town board last week when it voted 4-1 to change zoning of the parcel from A residential to a planned commercial district. We agree with the board's decision and have supported the proposal throughout the year-long process of planning board review and revision to the original plan.

Still, neighbors say they plan to file an Article 78 lawsuit, which will force the town to justify its action in the courts and likely simply delay the project. This is exactly what happened when neighbors of the then proposed Marie Rose Manor in North Bethlehem tried to block that senior housing proposal. In that instance, the court decided against the neighbors, and Marie Rose was eventually constructed. And guess what — none of the neighbors' fears about increased traffic, potential accidents and a number of other concerns came to fruition.

CMI's neighbors have had their say — made their arguments and so has CMI. It's time to put the matter to rest. The planning board looked long and hard at the proposal, which was amended to make it more neighborhood-friendly. Residents too have had their say on petitions prior to the public hearing, and those in favor far outnumber those opposed. Filing an Article 78 does not seem warranted. Bethlehem needs more senior housing, and needs it now. Delaying a project that will provide quality housing for seniors and bring tax dollars, without children in the schools to expend those dollars, doesn't make sense.

If CMI eventually builds, its facility will likely not ruin the neighborhood. The renderings of CMI's facility, in fact, look like the building will blend in with existing homes in a way that should not offend neighbors.

It does happen here

It is frightening to think that some person or persons are involved in satanic rituals right in our own back yard. Just last week, we wrote about the idyllic nature of the 300 plus acres of Five Rivers environmental preserve, and now we discover, someone may be performing some type of animal sacrificial acts at this local wildlife "sanctuary."

Wildlife pathologist Ward Stone found a carton of items believed to be used by people who practice animal sacrifice and other satanic rites at Five Rivers, where we bring our children to see and appreciate the beauty and wonder of nature.

Apart from the distastefulness of these deeds, the perpetrators are defiling public property and defying the very essence of the philosophy of Five Rivers.

If would be a relief if Stone's discovery turned out to be some kind of twisted practical joke, but it is likely not. Nearby shops in Albany sell this "satanic" paraphernalia.

Dredging would help

Dredging the Hudson River should bring the town of Bethlehem one step closer toward a solution to its three-year-old water system's woes.

The system, designed to produce 6 million gallons of water per day, is yielding only a third of that. As a result the town is suing the system's designers.

The sooner the issue is resolved, the better, so if dredging will help answer ongoing questions, the sooner it is done the better.

The Army Corps of Engineers should grant the town's request; it is the logical thing to do under the circumstances.

Dredging and the test well that is being constructed at the site could go a long way toward getting to the bottom of this murky matter.

Traveling with kids can be real trip

By Katherine McCarthy

The writer is a freelance writer for Spotlight Newspapers.

Anyone who says half the fun is getting there has clearly never traveled with children.

Our first big trip with our two boys must have been the result of serious sleep deprivation on my part. Why else would I have proposed to my poor beleaguered husband that we travel to Ireland with a 3-month-old and a 2-year-old?

He, equally sleep-deprived and seduced by the promise of at least a few evenings in the pub, agreed. His family's house stood ready, waiting — and free. September in Ireland it would be.

My husband Chris' mother and sister postponed their usual August trip to join us and have quality time with the smallest members of the family. My heart sang: I, too, would get an evening out with such doting babysitters on board! The anticipation far outweighed the burden of packing.

Generals on military campaigns take less than parents going to the playground, and the stuff we took for a two-week trip was overwhelming.

We checked two suitcases, a port-a-crib and an infant seat. Visions of Christopher running up and down the plane while baby Cormac wailed for five hours made our carry-on luggage outrageous: a diaper bag, overflowing with diapers, extra clothes, rattles and teething rings; a backpack full of toys, books and coloring books; favorite blankets and dolls to induce sleep; and snacks and drinks to prevent the especially ugly melt-downs that accompany a child's hunger.

I had insisted on purchasing seats for the boys after reading an article about a baby who hurtled through a plane to its death in a crash that most of the passengers survived, and so our two car seats

Chris put my eyes over the stuff accumulating in our living room. "Well, at least I'm breastfeeding, so there aren't any bottles," was my only defense.

We counted on Nana and Aunt Lanna to help carry things, but when Nana arrived with two suitcases of her own and a wicker picnic basket as a carry-on, we knew we would have to find free hands elsewhere. Lanna, with only one suitcase and an excessively practical backpack as a carry-on, nearly turned tail when she realized she would pay for having packed light.

Somehow, we got to the airport, and onto the plane, where the pre-boarding was far too brief, and made it across the water. The children, obligingly, slept not only on the flight, but during the four-hour drive to the McCarthy house.

They even tolerated the stop at the grocery store, where it took all four jet-lagged adults to figure out what size Pampers to buy. To get kilograms, do you divide or multiply their weight in pounds by 2.2?

The vacation itself was idyllic. In the face of so many doting adults, unstressed by job and daily responsibilities, the children blossomed. Cormac giggled and cooed at everybody who saw him, and Christopher ran up and down wind-blown beaches trailing a small kite behind him.

We hiked heather hills, Cormac in a Snuggli, Christopher on Daddy's shoulders, and stopped in the village for an afternoon sandwich or bowl of seafood chowder. In the late afternoons, we built a peat fire and watched the evening gather over the harbor.

As the pain of childbirth diminishes when you hold the baby in your arms, so the physical agony of getting all that stuff onto the plane faded with the delights of an Irish day. We go back whenever we can, and the trip is ever easier, as we are able to shed diapers, car seats, snacks, and half the toys we brought on that first trip.

Conservancy can help control loss of space

Editor, The Spotlight:

A recent front page article touts the benefits of growth in our town, while the editorial pages ring with the sound of dissent and discomfort from residents.

In the short five years that I have lived in Bethlehem, I have witnessed an unprecedented amount of new residential subdivisions carved out of beloved open spaces. It is the same swift growth that I witnessed back home in Philadelphia in the 1950s and '60s.

When I go back home, I barely recognize the suburban community I grew up in. Roads are clogged with traffic at all times of the day, and every bit of open space is now someone's yard or parking lot. Scenic vistas are gone, along with fields and forests once treasured for walks and play. It is with nostalgia for my vanished homescape that I hold the natural character of Bethlehem so dear.

While growth is perhaps inevitable, it can be done with sensitivity to the natural features of particular parcels and by consolidating commonly held open space areas within subdivisions. I recently attended a statewide meeting of the Land Trust Alliance of New York State where I learned about environmentally sensitive subdivision design from a master landscape architect, Randall Arendt.

The message is simple — a subdivision plan can protect valuable natural features while providing homeowners with access to "forever wild" areas. These protected swaths within subdivisions can provide privacy while not requiring the weekly lawn maintenance that a checkerboard of one-acre lots require.

If you share the concerns about growth and the loss of open space, there is something you can do. The Albany County Land Conservancy is a nonprofit land trust working to protect open space of unique natural character. The conservancy also has a videotape of Arendt's presentation on subdivision design, and we plan to host a community showing in the near future.

Parents should get involved

Editor, The Spotlight:

This is in response to Ms. A. Fellows' letter in the July 8 issue, in which she raises some disturbing issues about our schools.

I am in no position to pass on the merits, or lack thereof, of the many points Ms. Fellows raised, not having had any children in our schools for 20 years now, and not have been involved with our schools for 17 years. However, if there were serious merit to just a few of the issues raised, I am sure we would have heard about them either from some of our friends or letters in The Spotlight or both.

My suggestion to Ms. Fellows is to become involved. In the late 1960s, I (and others) became concerned by what I thought was the board's mishandling of the high school expansion. So, I joined the existing citizens' advisory committee. A few years later, I was elected to the board, serving from 1971 to 1981. Yes, we were busy raising a family, I had a demanding job and was an active Army Reserve member. But I made the time to be an active school board member.

So, if you are concerned become involved. You can make a difference.

Bertold E. Weinberg
Delmar

The plane is a diversion in itself now, with lights and headsets (in case you wondered, that volume can get really LOUD) and friendly women who bring food and drinks. Cormac is irritatingly familiar with the attendant call button, delighted that someone stands ready to meet his every need. The boys watch the whole movie, inappropriate or not.

In six years of travel, only one child has locked himself into the miniscule bathroom, and only one has thrown up, unfortunately not in the miniscule bathroom. On our last trip, when they were 7 and 5, I was able to read the entire in-flight magazine while they played with the sticker books Aer Lingus provided.

Although the true quality time of a vacation comes when we get there, the trip itself has become a prelude to that. Maybe that's something all families know, and why you see mini-vans and station wagons hurtling down the Thruway, packed to overflowing, and lines of families at the airport with their attendant stuff, looking to go somewhere. In the getting there, we're all drawn closer together, making that essential transition from individual work, school and activities, to functioning together as a family.

And if the getting there still isn't half the fun, just think how great it makes the destination look.

Drivers should be more considerate

Editor, The Spotlight:

During the winter, I found drivers had no sympathy toward joggers and walkers. We try to stay as close to the edge of the road as we can, but when the snow is piled up, it is really hard. Some motorists still came very close. It is very scary.

When school is in session, we have to worry about teen-agers driving too fast to get to class. I don't believe they really have any idea what the words speed limit mean.

This morning, I started out at 6 a.m. hoping there wouldn't be too much traffic. I was approaching Elm Avenue Park almost in front of the new traffic light. It was red, and I was jogging in the bike lane. A driver making a right turn on a red light made a very sharp turn coming into the bike lane almost hitting me.

I had to raise my right arm and point to the road where he should have been. I proceeded with caution to cross the street still having the red light when a second car not coming to a complete stop also decided to make a right turn nearly hitting me as I crossed. I had the right of way. The driver never stopped.

It really makes me wonder — are there any traffic rules? I worry especially this summer about the bikers and walkers going to town park. Are they safe? How do we educate drivers? Hopefully, someone will read this letter and perhaps understand that it is a real problem and next time they see a walker or jogger be more considerate.

Little League dad bemoans lack of trophies for players

Editor, The Spotlight:

Try to remember and picture yourself as a 6-year-old child. Over the years, you have seen friends and relatives proudly display a Little League trophy.

You ask your parents, 'When can I have a trophy?' They reply, 'When you play on a Little League team.'

Finally after weeks of playing ball in all kinds of weather, the big day approaches — closing ceremonies. You have spent a week deciding where to put the trophy. Finally that special spot is cleared, ready and waiting.

The big day is here. You are standing in line with your team as your name is called. You can see the table with all the trophies. The excitement mounts to an all-time high. Then you are handed an 18 inch piece of wood which resembles a baseball bat. You look for your parents in the crowd and ask: 'When do I get my trophy?' Your eyes well up with tears as your team is led away from the trophy table. 'What do I do with a bat? It won't stand up on my dresser. ... It's too small to play with.'

As the parent of triplet boys who received those bats from Tri-Village Little League, I am appalled. My wife had to comfort those 6-year-old children on the way home. We now have three trophies on order for them from a trophy store in East Greenbush.

I grew up in Delmar and have kept five trophies from the decade of the '60s. I spent many years playing in the league, my father coached. I umpired at the games and I also did some score keeping and announcing. I was proud to have my sons involved with Tri-Village. Trophies have always been a tradition.

I heard that the association saved $3,000 by not awarding trophies to all the players. I thought Bethlehem was a community dedicated to putting children first. Are a child's tears worth saving $3,000?

Town board should heed water critic's message

Editor, The Spotlight:

I appreciate that Bethlehem town Supervisor Sheila Fuller tries "to do the best job possible" in her role in town government (see her letter, July 15 in The Spotlight), but the level of defensiveness in her response to a communication to your paper by Linda Burtis (The Spotlight, July 8) is a bit disconcerting.

As I read the Burtis letter, I felt that she had made a very important point: that the water supply issue was indeed a complicated one, and the fact that town board members had never exhibited split votes on this issue, nor had exhibited any conflicting opinions, suggest that discussions may gone on behind closed doors.

I don't think that this is an "off the wall" perspective on the part of Ms. Burtis. The only other explanation that I could come up with for such apparent unanimity of opinion among the board members named in the letter, Fuller, Lenhardt, Davis and Johnson, is that they have agreed to "follow the leader."

Since three of these board members have all responded to the Burtis letter at a similar level of defensiveness in published letters in the July 15 issue of The Spotlight, it surely does look like "group think" is the order of the day!

A final observation — It is truly

Little League says thanks

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to thank everyone who helped to make the 45th season of baseball at Tri-Village Little League a success.

To town Supervisor Sheila Fuller for honoring Tri-Village by throwing out the first pitch and presenting us with a proclamation recognizing our efforts.

To Assembly leader John Faso for attend our opening day ceremonies and for supporting our improvement efforts.

To Dave Austin and Nan Lanahan for their help in providing another quality field.

To our sponsors and advertisers whose donations make our program a reality and to our community whose support is second to none.

To our board of directors for countless hours of hard work and to our managers and coaches who show what Little League is all about.

shocking that when a citizen-critic comes forward with views that differ from those of elected officials, they choose to discount her by calling her "irresponsible," "haphazard," "politically motivated," guilty of "dirty politics," showing a "lack of civility" and guilty of a "virulent" and "vicious" attack.

From the outcome of the water supply issue, I would say that we need more critics like Ms. Burtis, more attention paid to the issues raised, and a full and open discussion by members of the town board.

Clear response needed on water system issue

Editor, The Spotlight:

Some important concerns about open government as it relates to the town water issue have been raised in The Spotlight recently.

It was unfortunate that Linda Burtis's recent ad hominem attacks on members of the town board aroused their defensiveness to such a degree, that those concerns were not at all addressed in their rebuttal letters. Yes — her original remarks were less than diplomatic; however, since she has been dealing with the town water issue for about six years — and to my knowledge has not previously waged personal attacks on board members — I believe we can safely assume that she has a very high frustration threshold.

One of the concerns raised in Ms. Burtis's letter last week is the issue of access to public documents. Clearwater for Bethlehem has repeatedly asked for the water levels in the new wells. I, for one, would like a clear and forthright response from the town board. Such a response would go a long way to heal this rift between the community and the town board.

Lumber, two $100 gift certificates to SuperValu, a $100 gift certificate to Indian Ladder Farms, a $50 gift certificate to Our Family's Harvest and a $25 cash prize from Helderledge Farms.

Tickets are $1 each. You don't have to be present to win.

Proceeds from last year's fair went toward a new generator and outbuilding, so the department can generate enough electricity to mobilize and maintain a shelter in case of an emergency.

Nancy Hannmann is director of the 56th annual Punkintown Fair. Parking and admission are free.

For information, call 765-2231.

Library to host Irish music and stories

The public library on School Road will host A Musical Journey through the Stories of Ireland with Bairbre McCarthy and Frank Orsini tonight, July 29, at 7 p.m.

The program, part of the Together at Twilight series, intermingles Irish ballads and dance music with a touch of the Celtic harp and cultural history of Ireland.

Together at Twilight programs are held outdoors, if possible.

Bring a lawn chair or blanket and bug spray. For information, call 765-2791.

Workshop to present program on bats

Everyone is invited to take a bat walk at Heldeberg Workshop on Thursday, Aug. 6, at 7 p.m.

Bat enthusiast Al Hicks will introduce participants to the mysteries of bats and dispel the myths that surround these helpful little mammals. Be sure to wear sturdy shoes.

The fee for evening programs is $5 per family. For information and to register, call 765-2777.

Open house for the Heldeberg Workshop's second session is on Thursday, July 30, from 6 to 8 p.m. Everyone in the community is invited to attend.

The third session runs from Aug. 3 to 14. Open house is Aug. 13, from 6 to 8 p.m.

Village to sponsor soccer camp at high school

The village of Voorheesville is sponsoring a week-long soccer camp Aug. 10 to 14, at the high school for students in fifth- to ninth-grade.

Camp runs from 5:30 to 8 p.m. each day. Matt Fields will direct the program. Applications are available at the village office on Voorheesville Avenue. There is a $5 fee for nonresidents.

Village park program slates activities

The theme is Animals Galore this week at the village park arts and crafts program.

Children will make animal place mats, gum drop bugs, animal frames, dog doorknob hangers and pompom critters. There will be a K-9 demonstration by Albany County Sheriff's Department and an appearance by Ken Barnett's Live Reptile Show.

The group will have animal crackers and fun fruit animals for snack.

The program is offered Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to noon in the village park behind village hall on Voorheesville Avenue. Children must be 7 to attend.

Younger children can participate if accompanied by an adult.

On Tuesdays and Wednesdays there are theme-related games, crafts and snacks.

Thursdays are open craft days, where children can choose what they want to make. Next week is beach week at the village park.

Voorheesville Public Library's youth services librarian Joyce Laoisa conducts a special story time for the park program on Thursdays at 11 a.m.

School board to meet Aug. 3

The next regular meeting of the school board is on Monday, Aug. 3, at 7:30 p.m. in the large group instruction room at the high school.

At the board's recent organizational meeting, John Cole was re-elected president and Robert Baron vice president. Thomas McKenna took the oath of office as trustee.

Hihn earns Eagle Scout honor

Congratulations to Daniel Hihn of Boy Scout Troop 73 who recently became an Eagle Scout at an outdoor ceremony at the Troop's summer meeting site on Hilton Road.

Hihn built benches for Five Rivers Environmental Education Center in Delmar for his Eagle project.

He is the son of Richard and Joanne Hihn of Urbandale Road.

Delmar library plans bedtime story hours

Children ages 3 to 6 and their teddy bears can drop in for bedtime story hour on Mondays, Aug. 3 and 10, at 7 p.m. at Bethlehem Public Library in Delmar.

Selkirk pocket park receives donation

A new pocket park in Selkirk received a $5,000 donation from Texas Eastern Products Pipeline. The money will be used to build a playground.

The park will also include a softball field and picnic area. Equipment will be purchased this summer and construction should begin soon.

Spanish students to visit high school

RCS Senior High School will host 12 students from Cadiz, a region of southern Spain.

The students arrive in Ravena on Sept. 10 and stay until Oct. 1. They will be accompanied by a teacher, and stay with local families.

Host families are still needed for two students and their teacher. The students speak English and have their own spending money and insurance.

They will attend high school during the week and participate in field trips on the weekend.

The program is coordinated through the International Education Forum. Susan Kambrich is the local coordinator. For information or to help out, call her at 439-7110.

Congratulations to Ravena swim team

Tonight's concert on green features Hair of the Dog

Hair of the Dog is back! Rick Bedrosian, Mike DeAngelis and John Haggerty are joined this year by fiddler Larry Packer.

Established in 1993, the group lawn chair. The concert will be held indoors in case of rain.

This week's youth services lineup is as follows:

- Friday, July 3, 9:30 a.m. — children's writing workshop
- 7 p.m. — A Little Ar-Cain Magic (for families)
- Monday, Aug. 3, 7 p.m. — bedtime story hour
- Tuesday, Aug. 4, 4 p.m. — craft club
- Wednesday, Aug. 5, 7 p.m. — Bookchat (Madeleine L'Engle's A Wrinkle In Time).

Call youth services at 439-9314 for information and to register.

Reference librarians Karen Lausa and Meryl Norek have two suggestions for summer reading. The first, On The Occasion of My

John Haggerty, Rick Bedrosian and Mike DeAngelis of Hair of the Dog.

Last Afternoon by Kaye Gibbons, is a meticulously researched Civil War tale that follows the last day of Emma Garnett Lowell's life and tells all — from birth through marriage, childbirth, the war, widowhood and old age. Emma is an eloquent narrator as she struggles to transcend the moral and spiritual failings of her family.

The second book is The Lunch-Box Chronicles by Marion Winik. The author, a commentator for National Public Radio and single mother of two young sons, has written an honest and humorous collection of essays about her childrearing experiences. Such topics as blended families, holidays from hell and children's bedtime rituals are presented with refreshing candor and insight.

VIEWS ON DENTAL HEALTH

Geoffrey B. Edmunds, D.D.S.

Your child's first dental visit

Patients often ask what the best age is to start bringing their child to the dental office. Approximately three years of age is the ideal time to start. We also suggest that if the parent is a patient of the practice, they may bring their child with them during a routine hygiene visit. Children can then observe and familiarize themselves with the dental environment before their first dental visit.

Normally, a child going to the dentist for the first time is full of anxiety. This gentle approach can transform a frightened child into a cooperative patient who is not afraid — a child who will leave the office smiling.

The first thing we try to do is convince the child of our honesty.

Kids are smart and not easily fooled. When we promise something, we make sure it is done. When we prove we can be trusted to do what we say, the child will relax. Usually we begin with something easy such as counting their teeth.

A child sometimes cries before anything is done. The crying will generally disappear after the first experience. When we have established our reliability and proved that we are trustworthy, we should have no further problems.

Tri-Village wins District 13 title

For the second consecutive year, the Bethlehem Tri-Village Little League 11-year-old all-stars captured the District 13 Championship.

The 1998 version of this powerhouse started the tournament against a good West Albany Little League team. Shane Connors pitched an excellent four inning game that ended early due to the 10-run mercy rule. The final score was 14-4 with Tri-Village all-stars Sean Manning, Dan Felitte and Logan Crusan delivering key RBI. In the second game, Tri-Village ran into a strong Pine Bush American team.

The Pine Bush pitcher baffled the team throughout the game but Crusan's speed and Paul Parker's timely hit produce the only run of the game.

Meanwhile, Cameron Brown pitched a complete game shutout for a critical 1-0 victory.

Manager Jim Morrill said he was impressed with the efforts of the team. "Brown was terrific today," he added. "He had 13 strike outs, including striking out the side twice."

The team next faced Colonie in a close game. Connors turned in another quality pitching performance going five strong innings and allowing only three runs.

He was aided by outstanding outfield play from Geoff Wilcox and Andrew Hasselbach. The team scored three home runs in the game.

Parker started the scoring with a solo shot in the second inning, followed by a two run blast from Chris Morrill in the fifth. The key blow of the game came in the bottom of the sixth. The team was up against the wall when Bryan Ira smacked a two run round tripper to tie the score. Following a successful top of the seventh, Brown scored the winning run on a Colonie error.

"This was a great victory in a super game," said coach Ken Hasselbach. Each team had only one error, both teams showed great character and courage."

"We were thrilled to come out on top," said coach Paul Parker.

Hessberg wins silver

Slingerlands resident Anne Hessberg a ninth-grade student at Academy of Holy Names won the silver medal for the scholastic womens 800-meter run at the Empire State Games held in Rochester Saturday, July 25.

Hessberg also holds the fastest time run by an eighth-grade girl in the country. She placed fifth in the New York State Championships held in Kingston. Hessberg's parents are Albert and Cynthia Hessberg.

Dolfin swim tryouts set

investment UPDATE

Growth Potential & Safety of Principal

We are currently offering an investment which accomplishes two goals: Growth Potential & Safety of Principal.

The S&P 500* Market Linked Deposit** is a unique investment that gives you the opportunity to achieve stock-market-like returns without risking your principal.

This CD is issued by Chase Manhattan Bank NY and offers you:

- FDIC Insured Principal — up to $100,000.
- 100% of the upside of the stock market (as measured by the S&P 500 Price Index) if held to maturity.
- Safety of principal — at minimum, Chase Manhattan pays your principal at maturity. Principal may be at risk if sold prior to maturity. Before investing you should read the prospectus for maturity date information.

If you would like to achieve the returns of the stock market, but are afraid of the risk of investing in the market, the Market Linked Deposit may be the investment for you.

If you are interested in learning more about Market Linked Deposit, please call me at 447-8459. I would be happy to discuss how this valuable program could benefit you.

*The S&P 500 is a registered trademark of McGraw-Hill Companies, Inc. which neither participates or endorses this product. **This product is subject to market value fluctuation and a charge if redeemed prior to maturity such that proceeds from redemption could be more or less than your original investment. In addition, a penalty applies to redemptions if allowed on dates other than the quarterly redemption date. A free product brochure, description and offering schedule (containing additional information including charges and expenses) is available and should be read before you invest. # Womens lacrosse team wins gold

Three Capital Empire Region womens lacrosse teams recently competed in the fourth annual New York State Empire girls lacrosse tournament held at Baldwinsville, Onondaga County.

The Capital District squads form one of seven teams in each division from across the state that contended in this round robin format tournament.

The Capital District Futures Team, coached by Dick Auclair (Albany Academy for Girls) and Liz Batchelder (Niskayuna High School), won the gold medal, posting a 4-1-1 record. Lower Hudson won the silver and Suffolk County, Long Island, the bronze. In individual honors, Stephanie Downs, Albany Academy for Girls, was voted the Future's team MVP. She was joined on the tournament all-star team by Saratoga Springs High School students Nicole Rifenburg and Jessica Golden, Bethlehem Central High School student

This tournament is the premier lacrosse event for women in the state and continues to lead the way in its levels of competition.

Emily Riegel and Colonie Central High School student Lauren Serge.

Other team members include, from Colonie High School, Jill Hans, Lauren Serge and Tracy

Waterson.

Players from other schools included: Susan Breaznell, Colleen Crowley, Sheila Faith, Jessica Golden, Kirsten McCormick, Nicole Rifenburg and Courtney Sisk from Saratoga Springs High School, and from the junior high, Sarah Berhelde.

From Albany Academy for Girls, Stephanie Downs, Arlane, Ghovanloo, Ashely Smith Jennifer Schwendeman, and Liz Wiest.

From Columbia Junior High School, Lindsay Pieper; from Niskayuna High School, Joan Paul; from Scotia Junior High School Kristine Rajczak.

This tournament is the premier lacrosse event for women in the state and continues to lead the way in its levels of competition. Since womens lacrosse is not included in the Empire State Games, sponsored by New York State Parks and Recreation, this tournament gives many high school players an opportunity to demonstrate their abilities in front of large contingent of coaches from all divisional levels of collegiate lacrosse.

There are three divisions of play in the tournament, junior for seventh-through ninth-graders, scholastic for high school seniors, and open for amateurs.

Marsh sets Tri-Village Little League records

Evan Marsh, 12, had an excellent baseball season this year. As a player in the Majors Division in Tri-Village Little League he set some records during the season.

Marsh hit 15 home runs, beating the previous record of 13. He had the highest batting average of the Majors Division with a .690 batting average. Marsh also had 40 on base hits and 64 RBI. His on base percentage was .827 and his slugging percentage was 1.689. In all, Marsh had 98 total bases.

"Marsh is a tremendous hitter," said coach, Rich Rodgers. "He had an amazing year. Not only did he set a modern home run record for Tri-Village Little League with 15 home runs, but even more remarkable, he did not strike out during the season."

Tomboys short stop ends season with triple play

During the last minutes of the last game of the season, Kaitlyn Shumelda, just 8-year-old, playing short stop for the Bethlehem Tomboys Blue Team, sponsored by Family Danz, made a once in a lifetime, unassisted triple play. According to coach Rosemary Halvorsen, an unassisted triple play is very rare.

Coach James Helvorsen said that he'd seen it happen only once before, during professional baseball game.

Kaitlyn started the play by catching high line drive between second and third base.

The runners had advanced, not expecting the ball to be caught. Kaitlyn stepped on second and tagged the runner from first to second before the runner could get back to first. The side was retired, and Kaitlyn was all smiles as her teammates congratulated her.

Warriors on Wheels to host barbecue

Albany Warriors on Wheels, a wheel chair racing team, will celebrate their 10th anniversary with a catered tent barbecue at the New York Giants Training Camp at the University at Albany at 3 p.m. Friday, July 31. There will be a special photo/autograph opportunity with the team.

At 5:30 p.m. there will be a catered tent barbecue where several Giants players and coaches will join everyone.

Also scheduled during the barbecue will be special awards and activities.

The barbecue is open to the public. Tickets are $25 per person and can be obtained by stopping by the Warriors training room at the Fitness Factory, 111 Wolf Road, or by contacting Ned Norton at 453-9205. All proceeds will benefit Warriors on Wheels.

CMI

"This decision I have before me is the most troubling I've faced in my time in town government," board member George Lenhardt said. "I feel this is an example of our zoning code failing to keep up with societal changes."

The aspect of the zoning code to which Lenhardt referred is the town's senior housing classification, which has an insufficient maximum lot density to allow for the type of facility that CMI wants to build. Assistive-living facilities have small housing units and abundant common space so they are closer in character to dormitories than traditional senior apartment complexes.

Lenhardt said the reason he's for CMI's proposal is its benefit for local seniors. "If this project were for anything other than senior housing, I wouldn't be considering it," he said.

Lenhardt said he was satisfied with the deed restrictions put in place by the planning board that will prevent future owners of the parcel at 467 Delaware Ave. from using it for anything but assistive-living housing, and he asked CMI's representatives to put special care into tree screening around their facility.

Board member Bob Johnson concurred with Lenhardt on several points. "I believe our planning board has made excellent progress in improving the project," he said, referring to CMI's reduction from its original plan of 110 units to its current goal of 94 units.

"One of my goals when I was elected was to support new businesses," Johnson added. "CMI will pay taxes but not put a burden on our town."

Johnson explained he doesn't take reconfiguring the neighborhood in question lightly, adding that he was born in the Delaware Avenue house currently occupied by Bob Marriott, an opponent of CMI's plan.

Susan Burns, the board's only Democrat, voted against rezoning. "This would represent an impermissible instance of spot zoning," she said, adding that she couldn't justify changing the zoning code to accommodate a project that will, by the admission of CMI's founder, only be accessible to 20 percent of the elderly because of high rental rates.

Board member Doris Davis said she has spoken with numerous residents, mostly seniors, during the year the town has been considering CMI's proposal, and that the public response convinced her CMI's facility is the right project at the right time.

"Our town's land use management advisory committee recommends a non-residential use of this land," Davis said. "This proposal seems consistent with that."

Davis said she formed her decision conscious of neighbors' concerns about spot zoning. "I've consulted numerous attorneys and have been assured by all of them that rezoning for this project would not be spot zoning," she said.

Supervisor Sheila Fuller echoed the comments of her colleagues when said this issue has been troublesome, but added that she's seen the neighborhood in which she raised her children change and accepts such changes as necessary for the growth of the town.

She concurred with Lenhardt that the function of CMI's proposal is what informed her decision the most. "I have said from day one that our senior citizens are the people who built this town," she said. "I can't think of a better project for this site than the one CMI has proposed."

Fuller was visibly emotional when she explained why senior housing strikes her as important. "I am not fortunate enough to have parents alive, but I know a lot of people who I don't want to leave town because we say we don't want them here," she said.

Fuller's comment reflected something many CMI supporters said, which is that CMI's proposed location in the center of town will allow longtime residents to continue living in Bethlehem once they give up their homes.

"The outcome was not unexpected," said David Moore, a Borthwick Avenue resident. "My feeling was that the people on the board who voted for the zoning change missed the point ... Nobody (explained) why that particular parcel is the one that has to have a senior facility on it."

Moore and his wife, Anne, along with Marriott and other residents who live near the library, have already held discussions about filing an Article 78 action. Moore said he didn't know exactly when the action would be filed, but said, "The town board should be expecting it soon."

Satanic

Stone then took the box, which he guessed weighed about 20 pounds, into his office. Once he got it inside, he found a bizarre range of items including three toy cars, tiny handcuffs, beaded necklaces and a one-third full bottle of Bacardi rum.

The items that alarmed Stone the most were several knives and what he described as a 6-inch high idol made filled with black clay, nails and leaves. Stone said the figure had seashells for eyes and a Mohawk-style haircut.

"I would say the face had kind of a menacing expression," Stone said. "It's like a warrior kind of a look. If it was a real person, it would put you ill at ease."

Stone said he thinks the items in the box were used to slaughter animals because the box contained trowels, knives and skinning tools. Stone said he thinks the nails were used to pin animals down to surfaces.

The morning after Stone found the items, Sue McDonough, an investigator with the state police, visited Five Rivers to examine the artifacts. She told Stone they appeared to have been discarded after use in a ritual and said his concerns about animals being hurt might be justified.

"She said that after a ceremony, (satanists) leave an offering to the gods," Stone said.

Stone said trespassing and vandalism aren't usually problems at Five Rivers, but because it is a public area, there's always a possibility unwelcome visitors could enter the site after dusk, when it closes.

"(Vandalism) has been light over the years," he said. "We've had some littering and some things broken — chains, fences and such."

Stone said he knows his center is an easy target for vandals, so Five Rivers administrators will increase the frequency of patrols to curtail further incidents.

"It's a place where there's a lot of birds including baby geese and baby ducks, a number of whom seem to mysteriously disappear," Stone said. "Also, the geese this year seem to be wild, as if someone's been chasing them."

"There is concern for the safety of the birds," he added, "especially the young, gullible birds who will walk up to anyone."

Bookchat to meet at Delmar library

"Bookchat," a book discussion group for children entering grade five and up and accompanying adults, will meet Wednesday, Aug. 5, at 7 p.m. at Bethlehem Public Library on Delaware Avenue in Delmar.

The group will discuss A Wrinkle in Time by Madeleine L'Engle. Discussion will be guided by take-home questions. Copies of the book and questions will be available for registered participants at the youth services desk. There is one copy per family.

Books must be checked out at the circulation desk. To register, call 439-9314. Refreshments will be served.

Put on a happy face

Have you heard the one about ... ?

We all enjoy a good joke. We all love to laugh. Humor is healthy. Humor helps us to feel well. It's important to make humor a part of your life.

How can we make sure that humor is part of our lives? Here are some tips to help you find things that make you smile or laugh:

- hang out with people who are joyful and make you laugh
- watch funny movies, (see the humor section at the video store)
- when you get your newspaper, read the funnies first
- take advantage of the many humor books in the library — Dave Barry is a favorite
- enjoy comedians on television and radio
- watch cartoons — you're never too old
- go to a circus and watch the clowns
- share funny stories with others — you can find hysterical stories on the Web
- find humor in everyday occurrences — "There were 20,000 fans at the game, and the bird found my shoulder!"
- spend time with children — it's a fact that they laugh much more often than adults
- put on a happy face, and wear it all over the place.

Born and educated in Cooperstown, he was a longtime resident of Albany before moving to Voorheesville.

Mr. King worked for Albany Hardware & Iron Co. for 35 years. He then worked for R.B. Wing & Son, retiring in 1996.

When he lived in Albany, he was a communicant of St. James Church, serving as an usher and was an active member of the Holy Name Society. He was a communicant of St. Matthew's Church in Voorheesville.

He was the husband of the late Anne Martin King.

Survivors include a son, Edward B. King of Clifton Park; a daughter, Mary Ann Caimano of Voorheesville; and four grandchildren.

Services were from the Daniel Keenan Funeral Home and St. James Church, both in Albany.

Burial was in Calvary Cemetery in Glenmont.

Contributions may be made to St. James Church Memorial Fund, 391 Delaware Ave., 12209 or Community Hospice of Albany County, 315 S. Manning Blvd., Albany 12208.

Mary Owens

Mary Owens, 79, of Selkirk died Sunday, July 19, at Albany Memorial Hospice.

Born in Martin, S.C., she was educated there.

She worked at Jacobson's Ball Factory.

She was a member of Mount Olive Baptist Church and sang in the senior choir.

Survivors include her husband, Ben Owens; a sister, Ruby VanHoesen of Detroit, Mich.; two brothers, Ben Willingham of East Greenbush and Adam Willingham of Albany.

Services were from Mount Olive Baptist Church in Albany.

Arrangements were by the Harold L. Hood Funeral Home in Albany.

Burial was in Graceland Cemetery in Albany.

Delmar library seeks amateur artists

Bethlehem Public Library is looking for amateur decorative artists and artisans, ages 18 and up, to exhibit at the 14th annual Library Day on Sunday, Sept. 13, from 1 to 4 p.m.

Outdoor spaces are available on a first-come, first-served basis. In the event of rain, the event will be moved indoors and the number of exhibit spaces will be reduced to the first 25 registrants.

Exhibitors must supply their own setup. Individuals and groups may exhibit. No sales are permitted on-site. Registration forms are available at the library on Delaware Avenue in Delmar.

Program to feature Lab School students

A radio program featuring students from Bethlehem Lab School in Delmar will be broadcast Friday, July 31, at 3 p.m. on public radio station WAMC.

During this installment of the series "The Best of Our Knowledge," cohost and producer Glenn Busby discovers these students do not have regular course schedules or take traditional exams. Instead, they submit two 10-page research papers and give two oral presentations.

"The Best of Our Knowledge" is a nationally syndicated program.

The next time you walk through downtown Albany, take a look at the little boy petting a dog on Eagle Street near the state capital or the man sweeping the sidewalk on State Street near Broadway. At first glance, they seem like ordinary sights in the city, but upon closer inspection, you'll discover they're actually bronze statues that are part of a summer-long exhibit entitled "Sculpture in the Streets."

Presented by the downtown Albany Business Improvement District (BID), the exhibit features 18 works sculpted by J. Seward Johnson Jr., a former painter whose remarkably lifelike sculptures are on permanent display at such places as Rockefeller Center and the World Trade Center. His exhibits have toured the world, so while 18 of his pieces are in Albany, others are being seen in Italy, Brazil and Switzerland.

The Albany exhibit is spread across several blocks of downtown, with the first piece, "Ambassador of the Streets," which depicts a businesswoman walking her dog while a child pets it, located on Eagle Street. The last piece, "Aftermath," which portrays a street sweeper, is on State Street.

In between, there's a cross-section of everyday vignettes. "Time's Up," featuring a uniformed police officer writing a parking ticket, is located, appropriately enough, next to City Hall; "Harmony vs. Discord," a piece showing a man strumming a tune on his guitar," is situated in the heart of Albany's arts district on North Pearl Street, right by Capital Repertory and a few streets from the Palace Theatre.

Although the lure of these minutely detailed sculptures is the impressive way they stand up to close scrutiny, the BID has scheduled several events so people can do more than just admire one sculpture at a time as they stroll through Albany.

On Thursday, July 30, children from Park Playhouse II will perform excerpts from "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" at Tricentennial Plaza on Broadway from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Naturally, the nearest sculpture, "Waiting to Cross," features a happy little girl. She's depicted swinging around a stop sign.

Next, dancer Lorraine Binta Warda will give an exhibition of Middle Eastern dance at the Big House Brewing Co. on the corner of North Pearl and Sheridan, near the location of "Harmony vs. Discord." Warda's performance is Thursday, Aug. 6, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

On the following Thursday, Aug. 13, jazz and classical guitarist John Charles Cook will perform at Ten Eyck Plaza on North Pearl Street, and the final performance on Thursday, Aug. 20, will feature the Sweet Adelines Capitaland Chorus. Both shows take place from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Also on Thursday, Aug. 13, the BID will offer a 90-minute afternoon trolley tour that will take patrons past all 18 sculptures beginning at 1 p.m.

But if you don't feel like heading downtown at a set time to enjoy the sculptures, the BID has prepared a brochure featuring a map indicating the locations of all the sculptures so you can explore the exhibit at your own pace.

The exhibit closes Aug. 31, so there are only a few weeks left in which to enjoy the meticulous detail and ironic simplicity of Johnson's street scenes. It may be the last chance you get to go people-watching without people looking back at you.

Admission to all "Sculpture in the Streets" attractions is free except for the trolley tour. Tickets are $5 in advance, which includes refreshments, and they may be purchased at the BID's office at 50 State St. For information, call 434-0405.

Proctor's sets fund racer at Saratoga track Feb. 6

The fifth annual "Day at the Races" will be held by Proctor's Theatre in Schenectady as a fund-raiser for the 1998-99 season.

The $100 ticket includes clubhouse admission, a racing program, gourmet buffet luncheon and reserved trackside seating.

Vicki Gold is chairperson of the event which includes a benefit drawing with prizes of three sets of reserved seats for the Fasig-Tipton Yearling Sale Aug. 11-13; five reserved box seats including club house admission at the Saratoga track for any day during the closing week; and eight seats to see any of four shows in Proctor's season.

Information and reservations for this "Day at the Races" may be obtained at 382-3884.

Former governor joins Olympic skater as guests for Teresian House benefit

Former New York State Governor Hugh Carey who could have earned a living as a raconteur will be joined by Tara Lapinski, the Olympic gold medal winner in figure skating, at the Teresian House Foundation Award reception at The Reading Room on the Saratoga race tracks Reading Room, Aug. 6.

Carey has regaled attendees previously at the festivities by passing on the latest humorous stories he's picked as a Wall Street lawyer or at Long Island social engagements.

He's a hard act to follow but he may be matched this year by the Rev. Peter G. Young who will receive a distinguished service award from the Teresian House board of directors for his work with recovering substance abuse patients, including the purchase and operation of the the Schuyler Inn in Menands. There these former addicts are being trained in hotel and restaurant and hotel management.

Lapinski is also being given a distinguished award for her accomplishments at the Olympics.

Other special guests at the reception which runs from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. are award-winning novelist Mary Higgins Clark and Mary Lou Whitney, the unofficial hostess in Saratoga during the race track season.

Funds raised will go towards support of the Albany nursing home which is currently building a special Alzheimer's wing.

MacHaydn alumni return for special theater benefit

Monica Wemitt and Philip Peterson returned this past weekend to their MacHaydn Theater roots in Chatham to participate in the annual benefit, this year known as "thirtysomething Anniversary Birthday."

Wemitt who grew up with the theater with her parents helping producers Lynn Haydn and Linda MacNish build and operate the facility, is currently rehearsing for Easter Parade which is due to open on Broadway this season. She has toured internationally with Carol Channing as her understudy for several years in Hello Dolly and is the only understudy in 40 years to have gone on for Channing who took ill less than an hour before curtain while on tour.

The special show this past Sunday celebrated also the success of Peterson who has been touring nationally as the lead in such shows as Carousel and Showboat.

Among the former MacHaydn performers who were invited to the Sunday benefit was Nathan Lane who as Joe Lane established himself 20 years ago in Chatham as a performer destined for larger fields. The Tony Award winner for Guys and Dolls on Broadway is currently shooting a new NBC series in Hollywood in which he plays a retired opera singer.

The audiences at Sunday's show also enjoyed a barbecue afterwards.

Camelot production in full swing at Albany's Park Playhouse

Audiences and critics alike are hailing the reprise of Lerner and Loewe's Camelot which will run through Aug. 16 at the Park Playhouse in Albany's Washington Park. This musical which began the present series of summer musicals 10 years ago, has Steven Earl-Edwards returning to the role of King Arthur.

The downstate Equity performer was one of the first recruited to begin the program of Broadway musicals which began the current Park Playhouse operation. It began in 1988 with the late Barty Scott as administrator along with his wife, Mimi, who served as artistic director. Venustiano Borromeo who 10 years ago was scenic and technical director, took over the reins as producing artistic director, following Scott's death.

Prior to the Park Playhouse, the boathouse area served as a Shakespearean summer festival for three seasons, directed by John Velie and after that, Siena College staged musicals there for two seasons.

The leads in this production of Camelot, Earl-Edwards, Thomas Alpers as Lancelot and Valerie Hill as Queen Guenevere, are being well received and equally important the supporting performers and chorus members are also gaining special praise for their work.

Admission to the hillside seating is free. There are $10 reserved seats available at 434-2035.

You should be active at the net and not just stand in one spot. You should move with the ball, shuffling a few feet toward the side the ball lands on.

By moving at the net with the ball, you cut down on the area the ball can slip past you down the line. It's a tougher shot to hit the passing shot crosscourt.

DATED: July 21, 1998
 APPLICANT: Town of Bethlehem
 ADDRESS: 445 Delaware Ave.,
 Delmar, NY 12054

Permits applied for and application numbers:
 Water Quality Certification and Protection of Waters DEC No. 4-0122-00016/00005

Project description and location: Town of Bethlehem, County of Albany.

Vacuum dredge a portion of the Hudson River in the vicinity of the Town's existing ground water infiltration system in order to improve recharge to the system and to study silt movement and resiltation of the area. Approximately 1,000 cubic yards of material would be dredged from an area 125 feet by 1100 feet and to a depth of 4 inches. The material will be pumped to an existing holding pond and fill area on adjacent Schermerhorn Island, with no return flow to the river. Soil analysis has been submitted to the department and determined to be suitable for disposal.

STATE ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY REVIEW (SEQR) DETERMINATION:

SEQR-3: Project is an unlisted action and will not have a significant effect on the environment. A negative Declaration is on file. No coordinated review performed.

Barber

"Who would have ever thought that a barber with a 12th-grade education could have made such an impression?" he asked.

News of Wagner's accident spread quickly through town, an echo of the way town gossip and information was spread through conversations at Wagner's Barber Shop. The late barber's friends and acquaintances described the shop as a place where people gathered to chat, share stories and keep up on current events in town.

"It was a great place to be," recalled Bethlehem police officer Jeff Vunck, who met the Wagners in 1982. "The brothers knew you by name, they knew where you worked. It was a place where you could go to be comfortable and have conversations."

Vunck said the Wagners always made customers feel at home in their shop. "They'd greet you at the door and keep the conversation going on topics ranging from politics to their famous jokes," he said.

Vunck said the Wagners used humor to keep the atmosphere light in their shop but added that jokes were never mean-spirited. "No one, nor any topic, was safe from them," he said. "But they never belittled anyone."

Another resident who said she'll miss Ron Wagner is Bethlehem Supervisor Sheila Fuller. "His death is a tragic loss not only for his family but for the community," she said.

Wagner, who graduated from Voorheesville High School, joined the Army with his brother Donald and served from 1964-1966. After they left the service, the brothers attended the Royal Barber School and opened their shop in Delmar.

Fuller said the Wagners have been her family's barbers for about 30 years and said she appreciated the way the Wagners made children and adults feel welcome in their shop.

"The gumball machine was always an attraction for my sons," she said. "I couldn't leave the shop without Ron or Don handing the boys each a penny to get some gum."

Fuller said she also appreciated the wide-ranging conversations that took place in the Wagners' store because they gave her a chance to hear what people in town thought about issues.

Fuller said that early in her political career, she would listen in on exchanges in the store while her sons were getting haircuts. "Before they realized I was a member of the school board, they would complain about school taxes," she said. "I'd listen to hear what they were thinking, then I'd jump in to discuss the issues."

Like Vunck, Fuller said the word that best describes the atmosphere in the barber shop is "fun."

Vunck and Fuller both commented on the close camaraderie that was always evident between Ronald and Donald Wagner. In addition to his twin brother, Ronald Wagner is survived by his sister, Joan, and two more brothers, Clinton and Robert.

Vunck said he was "shocked" when he heard about Wagner's accident and said Wagner's motor scooter used to be the butt of playful humor. "Everyone used to make jokes about Ron and his scooter, how he had to recharge it so often," Vunck said. "No one expected something like this to happen."

Vunck said getting his hair cut at Wagner's was always an opportunity to socialize with friends and neighbors. "It was a central place in Delmar," he said. "The number of people they have reached is enormous. There were people who didn't even need haircuts but just liked to come in and listen to the conversations."

During his eulogy, Donald Wagner said that an era ended last week. "I'm going to try to go back to work someday," he said, "but I think it's going to be just work. The fun is probably over."
