Clearwater circulating petition seeking hearing

By Peter Hanson

As the end of the public comment period during which residents can raise questions about Bethlehem officials' plan to dredge the Hudson River draws near, a citizens' group is readying a petition that may put a snag in the plan.

Clearwater for Bethlehem, which has raised objections to the town's ground-water infiltration system since before the system went online in 1995, has gathered about 200 signatures on its petition, which requests the Army Corps of Engineers hold a public hearing before giving the town a permit to dredge.

I think there needs to be a public hearing so people can ask questions.

Linda Burtis

The town filed a joint application for permission to dredge June 2 with the Army Corps and the state Department of Environmental Conservation. The application was filed based on the advice of O'Brien & Gere, the engineering firm the town hired to review possible remedies for the water system. The water system only pumps about one-third of the six million gallons it is supposed to produce daily.

Because of the system's shortcomings, the town filed suits earlier this year against the two engineering firms that worked on

Riley still operating business despite town order to vacate

By Peter Hanson

Carole Riley, the Harlem entrepreneur whose $15.25 million lawsuit against several Bethlehem officials made headlines last year, is still operating her business out of her Slingerlands home despite the town's orders to vacate the premises.

Also, the U.S. District Court judge who is hearing the case recently cancelled a hearing that was supposed to take place Monday. Judge Thomas J. McAvoy was scheduled to hear oral arguments from lawyers representing the town and Riley, but opted to decide the case based on paperwork both sides have submitted.

Riley and her partner, Kelli Givens, operate nearly 50 Pizza Hut restaurants from Riley's house at 1545 New Scotland Road. Last year, the town informed Riley her business violated the town's zoning code and ordered her to stop conducting business there.

Van Allen plan clears another IDA hurdle

By Peter Hanson

In a public hearing that lasted less than 10 minutes, representatives of American Housing Federation passed the latest bureaucratic hurdle along their path to getting a $6 million bond from Bethlehem's Industrial Development Agency.

AHF is planning to build a 110-unit senior housing facility on 18 acres of vacant land located on Route 9W in Selkirk. The project received a substantial boost last month when the state Division of Housing and Community Renewal approved a $2.5 million grant comprised of $25,000 for each of the 100 Van Allen units that will be made available for low- to middle-income seniors.

AHF's request for a bond from the IDA has been moving through the system for several months, and the Aug. 10 public

Town judge dismisses DWI charge

By Peter Hanson

The case against a Feura Bush man who was arrested for driving while intoxicated June 11 was recently thrown out of court. On Aug. 4, Town Justice Kenneth Munnely dismissed four charges against Mark Irving Mosher, 45, who was accused of DWI, carrying unsecured payload, driving out of class and "appearing to be under the influence of alcohol."

At about 12:40 p.m. June 11, Mosher left Beff's restaurant in Delmar and got into his custom-built GMC flat bed truck. Mosher, who maintains lawns, had a mower in the back of his truck that was tied down, but because his truck had no tailgate, some grass spilled onto the road.

Bethlehem Police Officer Jeffrey Vunck arrested Mosher for DWI, but did not explain that grass spilling from the trunk had prompted the vehicle stop. "He was waiting for me right outside Beff's and he cut off two cars to follow me," said Mosher, who admitted he had a glass of beer with his lunch June 11 "I just kept my mouth shut and stood where he told me to."

Mosher said he knew he should have had a tailgate on his truck, but said his ability to drive wasn't impaired.

Blood alcohol tests determined that Mosher was not drunk. In fact, he showed no detectable alcohol in his bloodstream. Mosher said he participated fully with Breathalyzer tests and said the officers with whom he dealt were professional throughout the process.

During his court appearance, Mosher's lawyer, John Cahill of the Slingerlands firm Cahill & Messina, plea-bargained to a speeding offense. Mosher paid $100 plus a $30 surcharge as well as $350 in attorney's fees.

Mosher said he's not upset about what happened because "everything came to light" in court and added that he approached The Spotlight only to clear his name because an article about his arrest appeared in June.

Mosher said he understands why Vunck arrested him. "I know he's very strict and he goes by the book," Mosher said. "I had one beer with my lunch — if that's considered wrong, then, well, a lot of people are in trouble."

Mosher said that after his brush with the law, he'll be more vigilant about not drinking at all if he's going to drive. He's also gotten a tailgate for his truck. "It's one of those things that needed to be done," he said.

Mosher added that he understands the rules governing drinking offenses for people with commercial driver's licenses like Mosher's class B license are stricter than those for regular drivers.

"My license is too valuable for me to jeopardize," Mosher said. "One beer is too much (according to the law). If you're convicted of DWI with a commercial drivers license, you lose it for one year."

Accidents claim 2 lives

Two traffic accidents last week, one in Selkirk and one in Richmond, Va., claimed the lives of two local residents. On Wednesday, a nine-year-old Selkirk girl was killed in a two-car crash in her hometown, and on Thursday, a 22-year-old Voorheesville man was killed when a traffic sign crushed his car.

According to a police report, Gabrielle Damour of Selkirk was driving South on Route 9W in Selkirk when she made a left turn onto Church Road and collided with a northbound vehicle driven by Joseph J. Dabravalskas of Feura Bush.

Damour's passenger at the time of the accident was Cathy G. Goldner, 9, of Selkirk. According to police, Damour is a friend of Goldner's father. Police said Goldner sustained injuries in the crash and was transported by ambulance to Albany Medical Center Hospital, where she died from her injuries.

The accident is currently being investigated by members of the Bethlehem Police Department's traffic safety unit and detective bureau.

In the Richmond, Va., accident, Mark J. Harrison-Favale, 22, of Voorheesville, was sharing a road trip with his fellow restaurant employee Mary Murray of Troy. The two were touring the country and picking up short-term jobs along the way.

Police said that sometime Thursday morning, a tractor-trailer driving near Harrison-Favale's car lost control and struck the support beams of a large traffic sign. The impact of the crash ejected the truck driver from his seat so forcibly that he crashed through the truck's window and landed in a small body of water near the road. The driver was killed.

Following the truck's crash, the road sign, which weighed a reported 10 tons, fell onto the passenger side of Harrison-Favale's car, totalling the vehicle and killing Harrison-Favale, police said. Murray was uninjured.

VHS pride on display thanks to student labor

By Katherine McCarthy

Voorheesville residents can see tangible evidence of their tax dollars at work when they view the results of a beautification project near the flagpole in front of the high school. The area now boasts a brick retaining wall, an embankment with shrubbery and dusty miller plants that spell the letters "VHS."

Four Voorheesville student interns toiled for two weeks under the watchful eye of Kenneth Carnes, commercial landscape nursery agent for Cornell Cooperative Extension of Albany County.

The students are working as part of the federal Summer Youth Program. It is administered in Albany, Schenectady and Rensselaer counties by the state Department of Labor.

Voorheesville resident Larry Bonham is the state representative for the program, serving as liaison between the labor department and the counties, who place the students in jobs.

"Student interns have been employed in the last 10 years in summer jobs in a number of places," Bonham said. "There are 894 kids working in the three counties this summer. They're working at jobs in insurance companies, museums, offices and schools. The point is that the kids get to work with skilled professionals."

Frank Crespo, the coordinator for the county's Department of Youth and Recreation, helped shovel dirt at Voorheesville during the July heat. "I visit all the work sites," Crespo said. "This is an excellent program for students. It gives them a few extra dollars."

V'ville sets centennial schedule

The Voorheesville Centennial Committee recently announced a schedule of celebrations to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Village of Voorheesville.

A celebratory fireworks display on May 28, 1999, will highlight the centennial observance. The 30-minute display is sponsored by SuperValu Foods of Voorheesville, which donated $5,000 to pay for the display. "SuperValu wants to help make the centennial a spectacular event," store owner Jim Nichols said.

The centennial ceremonies will commence on May 8, 1999, the date which marks 100 years since

The Voorheesville project came about following a conversation Bonham had with the school district. "There are funds for beautification projects, and I thought Voorheesville would be a good place for one," Bonham said. The county put up $500 toward the cost of materials and the school district matched that.

Bonham and Crespo both expressed their gratitude to Carnes, who donated four hours a day for two weeks to bring the landscape project to fruition. Carnes, after meeting with Bonham and school Superintendent Alan McCartney, sketched plans to beautify the flagpole area.

"This was a one-week project that stretched into two," Carnes said. "We took out the old flower bed near the flagpole and tripled its size, (then) tore out the sod around the shade trees and flagpole. (We) are planting the trees, shrubs and plants that will be part of the permanent landscape. The dusty miller that spells out VHS will also be visible in the winter-time unless the snow gets very deep."

Carnes also oversaw the mulching of all the school's trees. In spite of the heat, he said the interns all worked hard. "They're good kids," he said. One day, seven kids and a supervisor came out from Albany, as part of the federal program School Works, to help with the project. "Those kids moved about 30 yards of mulch," Carnes said.

In spite of the heat, Voorheesville students Blake Livingston and Josh Pistana found the work OK. "It's pretty good," Livingston said. "It's better than working inside," Pistana added.

residents voted to incorporate the village. The Centennial Committee, comprised of volunteers, has plans for activities Friday, Saturday and Sunday of the Memorial Day weekend next year. The fireworks will kick off the weekend festivities.

"The Centennial Committee is putting together a program that has something for everyone to enjoy," Mayor Ed Clark said.

The preliminary schedule of events is as follows.

Saturday, May 8. Centennial recognition and memorial dedication.

Friday, May 28. Community dinner; community block dance; and SuperValu centennial fireworks display.

Saturday, May 29. Voorheesville American Legion Post 1493 Memorial Day parade; "Music in the Park," featuring Dixieland, blues, barbershop and gospel performances; games for kids; games for adults and historical workshops.

Also on Saturday will be craft and cultural exhibits; carriage rides; a community picnic with entertainment by a brass band; and a swing band community dance.

Sunday, May 30. Community breakfast; Ecumenical Church service; ice cream social; and closing ceremonies.

Glenmont nurse wins award for care

By Katherine McCarthy

When you hear Joan Moutray's story, it's no surprise that the New York State Health Facilities Association named her 1998 Long Term Care Nurse of the Year.

Moutray grew up on a farm in Glenmont and had to leave school in eighth grade to help raise six brothers and sisters. She married young, started a family and worked in a nursing home. After the birth of her fourth child, Moutray was told she couldn't have any more children. A scheduled hysterectomy revealed that she was pregnant again, and her daughter Susan was born. Today, Moutray is the mother of nine children.

"Susan was very ill," Moutray said. "She spent the first three years of her life in and out of the hospital. When you have an ill child, you need to know a lot of things, and I asked a lot of questions. I also became comfortable in the hospital environment, and helping the staff. This was when I became very interested in medicine and wanted to learn more."

Another child and single motherhood followed soon after Susan's birth, but Moutray's drive for education was strong. With the help of a sister who lived with her, Moutray took pre-college courses, and attended Albany Occupational School to become a licensed practical nurse.

She worked at Albany Memorial Hospital and adopted another child. Moutray married her husband, Jim, with whom she has two children, and took classes at Maria College to become a registered nurse.

"I worked nights, and Jim worked days," Moutray said. "I had a lot of determination and inner drive. I also had a strong need to know and to learn things. I wanted to be an example to my children, too. We used to do our homework together. At one point, four daughters and I were at Maria College at the same time."

Joan Moutray

Even after becoming a registered nurse, Moutray remains focused on education. This past May she received a gerontology certificate from Maria College, and she is currently working on a bachelor's degree at Empire State College.

"It's very important to keep learning, especially in this field, there are new things to learn every day," she said.

Moutray's position as assistant director of nursing requires mostly administrative work, which is a change for her. She had been a head nurse at Eden Park since 1991, and was just promoted to assistant director of nursing this year. "I'm learning a lot," Moutray said, admitting that all the paperwork can be tedious. "It's a big challenge."

To keep up with hands-on technology and procedures, Moutray works part time in rehabilitation and medical surgery at Stratton Veterans Administration Medical Center.

Dearest to Moutray's heart, though, is the Alzheimer's unit at Eden Park, which she helped design and develop, and where she was head nurse until her promotion.

"People with Alzheimer's are unique," Moutray said, "and you can learn so much from them. They are healthy people with a debilitating disease. They live in the past, and each one has his or her own life's story."

Moutray has done a lot of work with the families of Alzheimer's victims. "It can be very frustrating and scary for a family," she said. This fall, Moutray will speak to students at Bethlehem Central Middle School about Alzheimer's disease. "I'm looking forward to that," she said. "It can be very difficult for all children, when their grandparents don't recognize them. But it's important that they visit them, because deep down inside, the patient knows they're there. They may not recognize them for who they are, but they know they're someone from their past."

Eden Park administrator Patrick Cucinelli said Moutray's inner strength and spiritual fortitude have meant a great deal to the facility, and the patients. "Regardless of the challenges," Cucinelli said, "Joan gives you the feeling that everything will work out in the end. Joan had one priority in managing the Alzheimer's unit, and that was the dignity of her residents and staff. Despite the difficulties involved in providing excellent care for the Alzheimer's patients, she has made it seem easy, if not downright fun."

Eden Park's director of nursing Mary Ellen Dziarcak said that Moutray is a person who truly deserves the award. "Joan treats everyone with dignity and respect," Dziarcak said. "She's a wonderfully devoted employee and excellent leader. Thank you's come easy to Joan, and the staff is aware that she will pitch in and help where needed. Her recent promotion to assistant director of nursing immediately boosted morale on the nursing home staff."

Teen-agers find Habitat labor of love Glenmont Girl Scout receives Gold Award

By Susan Graves

For 15-year-old Kate Persing of Delmar, working on Habitat for Humanity projects is becoming as comfortable as wearing an old shoe.

Many church youth groups work on habitat building and renovation projects during summers or on school vacations, and most of the money to fund the trips both in the U.S. and abroad is raised by the teen-agers themselves.

Persing's first trip to Belize in Central America when she was only 12, was an eye opener. The poverty was devastating. "It tore me apart when I was there," she said.

But this year, Persing, who paid for her trip with babysitting money, said things were more routine. "Habitat was like a vacation from my babysitting," she quipped.

Persing and 20 other teen-agers in the youth group from Bethlehem Community Church went to the mountains of West Virginia to lend a helping hand with renovation projects.

The group was chaperoned by Bethlehem Community Youth pastor Bob Gambelunghe and six other adults, including Steve and Helen Mesick who organized the trip.

"It was cosy," Gambelunghe said of the 11-hour trip, which the group made in three vans.

Persing's work in West Virginia was limited to helping out in a nursing home, since she broke her arm just before the trip.

"I did a lot of community service stuff. I was happy to help out," she said.

Bethlehem Community Church youth pastor Bob Gambelunghe puts the finishing touches on a paint job for Habitat for Humanity.

For Gambelunghe who is new to his job, the trip was a learning experience. "I learned from the kids — from their relationships with each other and the way they communicate with each other."

Gambelunghe was also impressed by the fact that the church group worked alongside volunteers from the town itself. "It was unbelievable. Most of the people were volunteers themselves; most had grown up there and really wanted to help."

The youth pastor said he was surprised at how much his was ministered to by both the teen-agers and the West Virginia residents. "They ministered to me just as much as I did to them," he said.

"We got work done and we had fun — we had a blast."

His feelings were underscored by Persing who said that all the members of the youth group wanted to go back "and do it again."

By Lisa K. Kelly

Glenmont resident and senior Girl Scout Kathleen Moon recently received the Gold Award for her successful 1997 book drive. The Gold Award is the highest award a Girl Scout can receive.

The Scout is required to complete a community service project as part of the award requirements.

Moon, 18, said she decided to conduct a book drive last year when her mother, Gail, suggested that Griffin Elementary School in Albany and the Troy YWCA Day Care Preschool and early kindergarten through first-grade needed books.

With the help of her mother's reading group, the Albany City Area Reading Council, Moon advertised on the Internet and posted signs in local stores. "We told people we needed children's books," she said "And the community response was great."

With more than 3,000 books collected, her sister's Girl Scout troop sorted the books into age appropriate categories, and they delivered the books to Griffin and the YWCA.

"She wanted to make sure the kids had the books before they left for the summer," said Gail Moon, "so the kids could read them during the summer."

There were enough books for Kathleen Moon to donate approximately 100 books each to Girl Scout Camp Ishoda and Little Notch.

Scouting has been a strong learning and self-esteem building experience for Moon.

"I like Girl Scouts because I made a lot of friends, and I learned a lot of skills, like how to start a camp fire, that otherwise I wouldn't have learned," Moon said.

In her last year of Girl Scouts, Moon was without a troop because all the girls in her last troop graduated from high school.

"I didn't mind not having a troop because I could still participate in most activities, like learning to canoe," Moon said. "But I couldn't go on camping trips without a troop."

Moon graduated from Bethlehem Central High School this year and will attend Cornell University to study electrical engineering.

"I decided to study electrical engineering because there's a lot of opportunities in the field," Moon said. "I could easily switch into other engineering fields."

Moon said she became interested in engineering after constructing several stage sets for high school and middle school productions.

Trophies fair game

A parent who was upset because his children did not receive Little League trophies this year triggered quite an opposite reaction from several letter writers this week who disagree with him. We think they make important points in their responses — namely that kids should play to enjoy the game and learn the rules of good sportsmanship.

Kids who play just to receive some sort of trophy at the end of the year are being cheated out of what the most important part of Little League is all about.

Trophies are nice, but should be given for some achievement, not just for showing up. To really mean something, trophies must be earned. Giving trophies just for participation gives kids the wrong message. What motivation would kids have to excel in Little League — or in any undertaking for that matter — if everyone receives an award at the end of the season, semester etc.?

Trophies for all players become essentially meaningless tokens.

We think Tri-Village Little League volunteers were right on the ball this year by not handing out trophies to every single player. Each player, after all, did receive an 18-inch wooden bat to commemorate their participation this year.

In addition, the League saved $3,000 by not purchasing trophies for every player. That money can now be used to help the team in other ways next year.

Teens making a mark

Two groups of local kids deserve recognition for "what they did on their summer vacation."

Twenty one teen-agers from Bethlehem Community Church's youth group spent two weeks in July in West Virginia helping out on a Habitat for Humanity project.

Not only did these kids expend a lot of sweat equity on painting and repair projects, they, for the most part, earned the money to be able to make the trip in the first place. That's an example of true selflessness, and we take our hats off to the kids.

Youth pastor Bob Gambelunghe sums it up best: "I was impressed by all of them." We are too.

In Voorheesville a group of teens was involved in a spruce-up project at Clayton A. Bouton High School. Although the interns received a small stipend, they completed a landscaping project during the sweltering heat last month.

All of these teen-agers defy the stereotypes about young people today so often negatively highlighted in the media. These Bethlehem and Voorheesville teens are responsible, caring, willing to give of themselves and not at all afraid of hard work. There really are many teen-agers in our community who are making a difference in people's lives. Just ask the people in West Virginia.

Camp Pinnacle turns 100

One hundred years ago, Hattie Christie founded one of the very first camps for girls in the country and perhaps even the world. Camp Pinnacle in the Helderbergs in Voorheesville has hosted thousands of children through the years and continues to thrive.

The camp was established with a religious philosophy operated under theegis of Albany Bible Institute's ministry. Camp Pinnacle, which is now coeducational, is dedicated to children.

In its centennial anniversary year, Camp Pinnacle hosted more than 400 campers. When summer is over, the camp will become a retreat center and continue to attract visitors from all over the Northeast.

We congratulate Camp Pinnacle on its success and wish it a happy 100th birthday.

Pruyn House preserves history

By Diane Morgan

The writer is director of Pruyn House, the town of Colonie Cultural Center.

Do you ever think of what you might leave of yourself that will be tangible or remembered in, say, the year 2098? Probably not.

From my office at Pruyn House, I often wonder what Casparus Pruyn or his wife, Anne Hewson, would think of their country home today. Or what would John and Carrie Henkes say who bought this property for $1,500 in 1893?

Pruyn House, the town of Colonie's Cultural Center, is a source of pride for Colonie residents. No doubt when Casparus Pruyn, a sixth generation Dutchman in this country, saw the completion of this home in 1830, he was also proud. Some say this structure was a kind of statement, one proffering that after a period of four wars and some very hard times, "We colonists have survived and we're here to stay!"

For most of this century until 1980 when owner and widower Henry S. "Sic" Bailey died, (his wife was Catherine Henkes), members of the Henkes family resided here maintaining a truck garden as well as raising horses and prize cattle. There were extensive greenhouses used to propagate plants for the farm as well as for the Governor's Mansion where Bailey was employed as superintendent.

For two years after Bailey's death, the house, listed for sale, stood empty and in deteriorating condition. A small group of far-sighted citizens concerned for this landmark property met to determine what could be done to save this historic home. They approached then town Supervisor

Stephen Garabedian, 8, sketches the thyme garden and sundial on the Pruyn House grounds.

Bill Fonda

Fred Field Jr. with their ideas and, in 1982, the town of Colonie purchased the house and five-and-one-half acres financed by a bond issue of $110,000. It was a leap of faith as Field, town board members, and residents looked up at the loose brick and crumbling foundation and examined the water soaked walls with paper peeling and plaster falling. Restoration began and three years later the House was anew when it was opened for a four-week Vanguard Showhouse which attracted hundreds of visitors.

Moreover, this successful partnership of the town and the board of the Friends of Pruyn House continues today and has seen many achievements.

In 1986, the house was officially accepted on the national and state registers of historic places. With the guidance of a Collections Committee, the House was completely furnished through donations and loans. During 1986 and 1987, the Blue Creek and Fort Orange Garden clubs created herb and perennial gardens where greenhouses once stood, and in 1991 the potting shed was renovated. The Buhrmaster Barn was acquired in 1987, brought to this property and reconstructed, adding a new dimension and building for use. Last year the woodshed/privy was moved and rebuilt and will soon be opened as a museum for old farm tools. Most recently, the rear porch structure of the house was completely rebuilt, the old backtop paving removed, and brick pavers laid for a new walkway.

Another significant achievement has been the saving of the Verdoy Schoolhouse and its relocation to this site. We've read in the papers recently of a new program called "Save America's Treasures" instituted by the White House Millennium Council. Its emphasis is the importance of remembering where we came from and, in so doing, creating a better future. In Colonie, the schoolhouse is an excellent example of citizens preserving and truly valuing the past. How fitting that the Centennial Committee chose this restoration project as a living me-monial to mark the town's centennial year of 1995. Listed on the national and state registers, Verdoy Schoolhouse and its presence here further enhances this historical site.

What have been some memorable moments for visitors here? Perhaps it was the blast of a cannon as they watched troops march in the rain on Civil War Day. Or it may be strolling by the crafters on Old Fashioned Sunday while passing friends and tasting home baked cookies. Perhaps it was a certain concert in the Barn on a balmy summer evening or a visit to the schoolhouse by a former student. Or it could be the scent of pine and warm glow of the house uniquely decorated for the December Open House Sunday.

So many elements have brought this cultural center to where it is today. In the beginning, it was the small group of residents who felt strongly about honoring and preserving this piece of the past. Since then it has been so many board members of the Friends of Pruyn House who have given generously of their time and talents planning for the development of the center.

No doubt the greatest strength in the operation of this center has been the generosity of people in the community through volunteering time and financial support. Hundreds of volunteer hours have been given by garden clubs, school and civic groups and individuals. Through memberships in the Friends of Pruyn House, now numbering 600 individuals, the center maintains a solid financial base for its operation. One recent example of support was the overwhelming response we received to our "Buy-a-Brick" campaign as hundreds of individuals, families, and businesses sent in contributions. In our 15th year of operation, we look with confidence to the future and projects such as restoration of the carriage house. The same pride and vision Casparus Pruyn displayed 170 ago is alive and well in our community today.

League deserves praise for getting rid of trophies

Editor, The Spotlight:

Trophy: Something symbolizing victory or success; as a statuette awarded for athletic achievement.

I applaud Tri-Village Little League's decision to give out small bats as participation awards for the players and trophies for those who achieved a little more success.

The league has not always given out trophies to all the children, and the idea that all players deserve a trophy — just because they played — simply does not make sense. My sons have played several sports and they have "participation" trophies which fill bookshelves but give them nothing to talk about.

Their awards for Sportsman of the Year, or coming in second or third in an event or having the high game in their bowling league — now those are trophies that recognize success and give the boys great pride.

Children do not, on their own, expect to receive a trophy. If a child is disappointed about not receiving one, it is the result of someone in his life placing too much emphasis on the trophy and not enough emphasis on playing the game.

I hope the league continues the current practice.

Parents say trophies give wrong message

Editor, The Spotlight:

My husband and I are writing in response to the letter written by Scott Anthony bemoaning the fact that his triplets didn't receive trophies for playing in Little League this year.

Maybe we're mistaken, but we thought the purpose of playing was to learn to play baseball, to be a good sport, to be part of a team — but mostly to have fun.

Our son, age 6, played this year and was thrilled to receive that 18-inch baseball bat. He would have been happy just to have his name called.

We don't do our children any favors if we bring them up to expect a trophy for everything they do. Trophies should be special and given to outstanding teams and for exemplary sportsmanship.

If, in fact, Tri-Village Little League did save $3,000 by giving out bats instead of trophies, they should be congratulated, not criticized. Who has room for all those trophies anyway? To save even more money and space in our children's bedrooms, why not give out buttons instead, indicating the year and level of participation? These could be affixed to a player's hat and saved from year to year.

In any case, Tri-Village Little League and all the hard working volunteers and coaches should be congratulated for a job well done.

Kids should learn rewards earned

Editor, The Spotlight:

Cheers for Tri-Village Little League.

I commend the Tri-Village Little League staff members who awarded this year's player participants with a "commemorative" 18-inch baseball bat rather than a trophy. Giving the commemorative went beyond the call of duty. Players, if they wish can keep the commemorative for the rest of their lives and use it as a reminder of their time spent growing up as a player and as a person at the local Little League park as millions of kids have done over the years.

I'm sure all of us have reminisced about the good times at the ball park, the broken bat base hit to score a run, the home run to left center that must have traveled 500 feet ... the 18 inch bat can be that reminder to these Bethlehem area kids forever.

Awarding a trophy to a child for merely showing up to participate in a sport is not a lesson that I would want to instill in any youngster. The definition of a trophy is a "memorial of an accomplishment." Trophies should be given to those who have achieved something special, not for merely participating.

Does the hunter who travels to Africa on a safari to hunt big game animals get a trophy when he successfully makes the kill?

Youngsters need to know very early on in life that you do not get "something for nothing."

Little Leaguers that win batting titles, home run titles, pitching titles or team members who win pennant races are the deserving recipients of trophies. They have accomplished a feat either personally or together and get rewarded for it. If every Little Leaguer gets a trophy for showing up for practices and games, what do the first place finishers receive — a $500 gift certificate to a local sporting goods store? I don't think so.

If all Little Leaguers were to get trophies merely for signing up and participating, how will those same youngsters react and feel about getting just another trophy for leading the league in batting for the year. Now, that is an accomplishment. Things are no different now than they always have been. You get what you earn, nothing more. Hard work always pays off. It is the parents job to prepare their kids for life's heartaches and disappointments as well as share in the thrill of victory.

Tri-Village Little League did the right thing — $3,000 is hard to generate these days through fund-raising. Now the Little League can use the $3,000 saved on trophies to buy better equipment and improve field conditions.

CMI visitors came home happy about project

Editor, The Spotlight:

On Thursday, July 30, we had the pleasure of attending an open house at Melbourne Place, CMI Senior Housing and Healthcare's new assistive living facility in Pittsfield, Mass. We came away feeling very fortunate to have this company in charge of our project in Delmar.

The Pittsfield facility was built in a residential area with a nicely-landscaped entrance in a manner that takes full advantage of the beautiful surroundings which can be viewed from all of the apartments or from the comfortable furniture on a spacious outer deck. No trash receptacles were visible and there was no huge expanse of blacktop for parking.

It seemed to us that everything possible was done inside the building to make life pleasant for the residents: homelike common areas, a community kitchen where residents can cook for group activities, tastefully decorated lounges with comfortable furniture, a choice of apartments from studios to two-bedrooms, large bathrooms with extra conveniences for the elderly, adequate closet space, attractive rugs and wall colors and a modest kitchenette in each apartment with a refrigerator and microwave oven.

Amid all the pressure of an open house, the staff was friendly and helpful, and the hors d'oeuvres were outstanding, prepared by an executive chef who was trained at the Culinary Institute of America.

Frankly, we found very little to criticize and much to be hopeful for our own project. We have clearly made the right choice in approving CMI's plan for building and managing our assistive living facility.

TV-31 studio abuzz with activity, new shows

Ray Blanchard's recent interviews with former Albany Mayor Thomas Whalen and Sen. Neil Breslin will be rebroadcast on TV-31's Conversations Regarding Health Care. The Whalen interview will be shown Friday, Aug. 14, at 7 p.m. and the show with Breslin on Monday, Aug. 17, at 7:30 p.m.

TV-31 is Bethlehem's public access cable studio at the library. Under the capable leadership of studio manager Chris Graf, the station has taken on the new season with aplomb.

Some old friends will be added in the coming weeks to the schedule's "new regulars" ("Take Care," "The Media Project," "TV-31 Select and Drum-i-Stix") which made their debuts this summer.

Larry Rappant's long-running "Expressways" is back after a five-month hiatus. Rappant's expanded offerings will be shown Mondays at 4:30 p.m.

Don Gaylord's Music Shop, now scheduled twice a week, has developed new shows featuring Kim Buckley, Corley Roberts, Valerie DeLaCruz and Gaylord himself.

Also returning are "The Jewish View" and "The Poetry Motel." Dan Wilcox, "Motel's" new concierge, has a season of new shows in the works, including a special with poet Ann Waldman and the program's original host, Charlie Rossiter.

"Between the Lines," an in-house production premiering on Library Day, Sept. 13, is a potpourri of offerings, including reference how-to's, video tours and interviews with guest artists and writers featured in library programs and displays.

Twice-monthly town board meetings, taped live and cablecast the following Wednesday at 7 p.m.,

are now available for circulation in the media center two weeks after cablecast.

Graf is busy, and glad of it.

The impetus for this hub of activity is his own enthusiasm. "We've reached a critical mass,"

Graf said. "I want the station to run at full capacity all the time."

As always, he welcomes new ideas for any show, which can range from a one-timer to a series. No technical knowledge is required, and the studio provides comprehensive technical assistance.

Because the station is a public forum, it is a neutral ground for expression and neither supports nor advocates views expressed on its programs. An opposing view is a perfect springboard for a program, as is a skill or talent or abiding interest, either amateur or professional.

Call the library at 439-9314 and ask for TV-31/Bethlehem.

Tomboy accomplishes rare feat

Kaitlyn Shumelda ended her season in the Bethlehem Tomboys girls softball league by recording an unassisted triple play. Shumelda, 8, was playing shortstop for the Blue Team when she snagged a line drive with runners on first and second base.

The runners took off on contact, which allowed Shumelda to complete the triple play by stepping on second and tagging the runner from first.

Bethlehem pitchers lead Indians to victory

Bethlehem Mickey Mantle pitchers Avi Rasowsky and Lucas Parks powered the Schenectady Indians to the championship of the RBI Northeast Regionals in Trenton, N.J.

Parks threw a one-hitter in the opening victory over Newark, while Rasowsky pitched a two-hitter in an 11-1 victory over New York City in game three.

The Indians defeated a strong team from Pawtucket, R.I. in the final, held at Mercer County Waterfront Park — home of the Eastern League's Trenton Thunder.

Parks threw three scoreless innings in the final, and Rasowsky closed out the game in the seventh with two strikeouts and a groundout to secure a 6-4 victory.

The Indians, who had previously won the state RBI tournament, will travel to Orlando, Fla., to compete in the RBI World Series.

The RBI program is sponsored by Major League Baseball.

Rasowsky and Parks are sophomores at Bethlehem Central High School and Christian Brothers Academy, respectively.

Breeders seek permission to keep chickens

By Katherine McCarthy

Poultry was the main topic of discussion at the Aug. 4 meeting of the New Scotland planning board as Felix and Rosemary Michalski of 6 Orchard St. in Feura Bush made a special use application to raise chickens on their one-acre lot.

The Michalskis currently have about 33 chickens and six roosters on their property. They began keeping them as pets, and now intend to raise them for eggs and to exhibit in poultry shows and local fairs.

In answer to the board's numerous queries, the Michalskis said the chickens are housed in coops with runs; the laying nests are elevated within the coops; and the birds' droppings are limed and dug into the ground.

Planning board chairman Robert Stapf also queried the Michalskis at length about other structures and automobiles on their property.

Stapf recommended that the board schedule a public hearing at the September meeting, in order to notify the public and the Michalski's neighbors of their intent to keep chickens.

He also advised the Michalskis that any existing code violations on the property would have to be removed before the special use permit could be issued. "That may mean temporarily housing the chickens elsewhere," Stapf said.

James and Elaine Loder, whose transmission towers were more than 50 percent damaged by May's storm, sought a special use application and a variance application to rebuild the two towers on their property at 54 Dunbar Hollow Road.

The Loders were not present at the meeting, and the board moved to forward the variance application to the Zoning Board of Appeals with no recommendation. If the variance is granted, the planning board will then schedule a public hearing for the special use application.

The board held a public hearing and approved a special use permit for James and Diane Carroll to construct a pond on their property on Rowe Road.

David Languish appeared on behalf of his step-brother Joseph F. Buehler, who is seeking a variance to reconstruct Buehler's front porch at 1241 Delaware Ave. in Unionville. The board approved Stapf's motion to forward the application to the ZBA with a favorable recommendation.

Exchange program seeks host families

The SHARE! Program still needs volunteer host families in the Delmar area to provide a bed, meals and a loving home to high school students arriving this month from more than 28 countries including Germany, Japan, Brazil, China and Poland.

The students, all between the ages of 15 and 18, are participating in the cross-cultural exchange to learn about America and share their own customs and culture.

They will stay in America for five to 10 months.

The students are screened both in their home country and by the SHARE! program for academic excellence and English proficiency. They are fully insured and responsible for their own spending money.

For information, contact the SHARE! national office at 1-800-321-3738.

Youth Network

A BETHLEHEM NETWORKS PROJECT

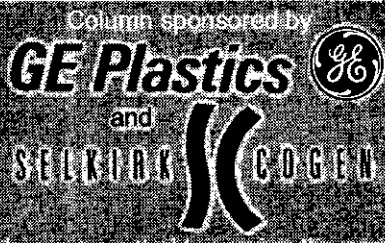

Make the most of free time

The last few weeks of summer are here. Some children may be feeling bored and your child may need your help and guidance to decide how to spend his or her free time. You can use this time to teach your children how to spend leisure time. Free time can be a wonderful gift. We can help our children grow and develop by using their time to pursue healthy and enjoyable activities.

During the spring, the Bethlehem Community Partnership and Bethlehem Central School's PTA sponsored a "Break Away From TV" week. One of the goals of the week was to promote healthy activities. Children were encouraged to give up television and to find interesting and fulfilling ways to use their time. During the week many positive activities such as roller skating, book fairs, Origami and swimming were offered.

You might capitalize on the end of summer by talking to your child about how to use the gift of free time. Help your child decide which activities are meaningful and will help him or her grow. Remind your child that time is a gift and ask him or her what he or she had planned to do when the summer began that has not yet been done. Work together to make a list of positive ways to spend leisure time and post it in your child's room. Encourage your child to write a journal that will help keep track of these activities.

Sometimes it is helpful to remember that your child is developing important life patterns. You can provide guidance to help your child begin to make positive, healthy decisions about how to spend leisure time.

Dredging

the design of the system. The town's attorney in this matter, Robert J. Alessi, has urged the town to pursue possible remedies for two reasons: First, to get the water the town was promised, and second, to prove in court the town is serious about repairing the system.

For these reasons, the town complied with O'Brien & Gere's recommendation to seek permission to dredge about 1,100 feet of the Hudson near the intake gallery of the water system.

Silt on the river's bottom may be one cause for shortages in the system, and a previous dredging last year provided a small boost in the water output.

Despite the possible advantages of dredging, opponents of the plan say PCBs that are known to exist in the Hudson are a danger because dredging could dislodge PCBs from the river bottom and send them into the intake gallery.

Clearwater's Linda Burtis said she has no problem with the town dredging once for research purposes, but is worried about the potential environmental impact of repeated dredgings.

Burtis' concern arose when the Army Corps sent the town a document confirming receipt of its application. In the document, the Army Corps describes the requested action as dredging "with 10 years maintenance."

Town Supervisor Sheila Fuller said the 10-year dredging plan was offered by the Army Corps and was not part of the town's request.

Whatever the origin of the 10-year dredging proposal, Burtis said committing to a long-term dredging plan is a serious step that should be preceded by a public hearing.

Burtis said that last time the town applied for permission to dredge, it did so on an emergency basis, which made scheduling a public hearing impractical. "Then, it looked like they were never going to dredge again," Burtis said, "so they never held the hearing."

But when the latest application surfaced, Burtis decided it was time to pursue the public hearing that wasn't held last time. "Ten-year dredging involves using routine dredging to salvage drying-up wells," Burtis said. "If we're going down that road, there should at least be dialogue."

Burtis said she's upset the town board doesn't appear to have spent any time discussing the possible repercussions of a long-term dredging plan. Fuller has said it's too early to determine whether long-term dredging will actually be necessary.

Burtis also said the mere fact that long-term dredging is on the table is reason enough to revisit the question at the heart of the whole water debate, that being the question of what to do with a water system that doesn't appear to work.

"Why didn't the town board, when (public works commissioner) Bruce Secor said, 'We need to dredge,' ask what it means?" Burtis asked. "It means the water system is failing."

Fuller, Secor and Alessi have repeatedly said it's premature to declare the water system a failure because O'Brien & Gere's research is not complete and the lawsuits have yet to be resolved.

Gavin Burt, an 18-year-old Glenmont resident who said he's been involved with Clearwater since about 1994, is organizing the petition drive. He said the petition will be submitted to the Army Corps Aug. 14, the last day of the public comment period.

Burt said the people who have signed the petition are mostly homeowners and professionals who agree that a step such as dredging should be preceded by public discussions.

"I think there needs to be a public hearing so people can ask questions," Burt said. "I felt the petition would reach out to people in the town who didn't otherwise know about the dredging."

Summer lunch slated at Methodist church

The South Bethlehem United Methodist Church will have its last summer lunch Friday, Aug. 14, from 4 to 7 p.m.

The menu will include juice, relishes, chicken and biscuits, mashed potatoes and gravy, vegetables, cranberry sauce, beverages and a homemade desert.

The church, under Rev's Country Kitchen, has put on a supper the second Friday of each summer month. They also have weekly Tuesday lunches from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

and drawings and refreshments. All events will be centered around the safety tents at Elm Avenue Park.

Participants will be invited to use a Safety Passport for exploring exhibits. Those completing the passport become eligible for prizes including fire extinguishers, bicycle safety helmets and first-aid guides.

A Bethlehem school bus will be available for rides throughout the day. Two buses will travel through local neighborhoods to familiarize kindergartners or first-time students with their upcoming September experience.

Bethlehem Police Officer Wayne LaChappelle will introduce residents to Aaron, the department's K-9 officer who will demonstrate his skills.

Operation Life-Saver, an exhibit from Conrail, is a real set of railroad crossing gates that will be used to demonstrate rules for safe railroad crossings.

Albany Medical Center's rescue helicopter will also be in action in a mock medical evacuation from air-lift to arrival at a hospital. On Saturday, the helicopter will fly out a victim of a mock-up automobile accident to demonstrate life-saving rescue procedures.

Albany County Sheriff's rescue boat unit will also be on hand. They are responsible for dives and rescue patrols of local waterways.

Other vehicles in this safety squad round-up include Air Products' ambulance, Albany County paramedics' Fly Car, Bethlehem Police Department's DARE car, GE Plastics' aerial truck, as well as town of Bethlehem emergency services vehicles. Adults and children alike will be welcome to "sit in the driver's seat" to check-out the controls and other features.

The compost facility on Route 32 will be the focus of Bethlehem's recycling department display.

Safety Awareness Day will offer hot dogs, soda, popcorn and Popsicle's (instantly frozen by Air Products right in front of you) throughout the day.

Admission is free and there will be plenty of prizes each half-hour. It's rain or shine and everyone is invited.

For information, call Michelle Oshinsky, GE Plastics at 475-5112 or Lorraine Smith at Selkirk Cogen, 475-5773, ext. 118.

After grieving the matter before the town's zoning board of appeals, which upheld the town's rulings, Riley filed a lawsuit last November accusing town officials including Supervisor Sheila Fuller and building inspector John Flanagan of persecuting Riley because she is black.

Town officials have vehemently denied all charges.

Since Riley filed her suit, a complex game of legal volleyball has taken place in which the town has pursued dismissal and Riley filed a supplemental suit against the real estate agent who allegedly told her running a business in her home would be OK.

These issues almost came to a head in May, when McAvoy was first scheduled to hear oral arguments, but McAvoy cancelled that date, too, because he determined neither side had filed their paperwork correctly.

In the time between McAvoy's two scheduled court dates, the deadline by which Riley was supposed to vacate her premises came and went without Riley's compliance. Riley is still running her company, which is operating under Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection, out of her Slingerlands home.

Tom Daley of Maynard, O'Connor & Smith, one of two firms representing the defendants in the case, said he urged town officials not to pursue forcible evacuation because there are so many issues pending in court.

"The motion we originally made was for dismissal, and Carole Riley made a cross-motion for an injunction preventing the town from removing her," Daley said.

"Pending resolution of all the motions, the town, at my urging, delayed any removal proceedings until after Judge McAvoy's decision," he added.

By not forcibly evacuating Riley, the town avoids further aggravating the tension between Riley and the defendants. Also, because Riley's lawyer, Peter Pryor, has filed dozens of suits, motions and cross-motions in the last 10 months, lying low helps prevent the waters from being muddied with more legal issues.

Daley said the best reason for letting Riley continue operating her business is because the town is already seeking a decisive measure to resolve the conflict.

"We have a motion pending that could potentially be dispositive of all of this," he said.

Altamont Fair in Altamont

Capital District's biggest annual event begins next week

By Peter Hanson

Because most Capital District residents don't plant seeds and tend crops for a living, the Altamont Fair's roots as a harvest celebration have become a part of a long-standing tradition. The fair, which celebrates its 106th year this month, has become the area's most popular end-of-summer blowout.

This year's six-day celebration will be no exception, with a cornucopia of rides, attractions, games, food vendors and shows that offer something for just about everyone. For animal lovers, there are livestock shows and auctions along with novelties like pig races; for car fans, there will be a demolition derby, an auto show and a thrill-packed stunt show; and for music fans there will be performances by Beatlemania and local favorites including the Burners, among others.

And at the heart of the fair is the midway, which features roller coasters, Ferris Wheels and other rides along with sideshow attractions and a circus.

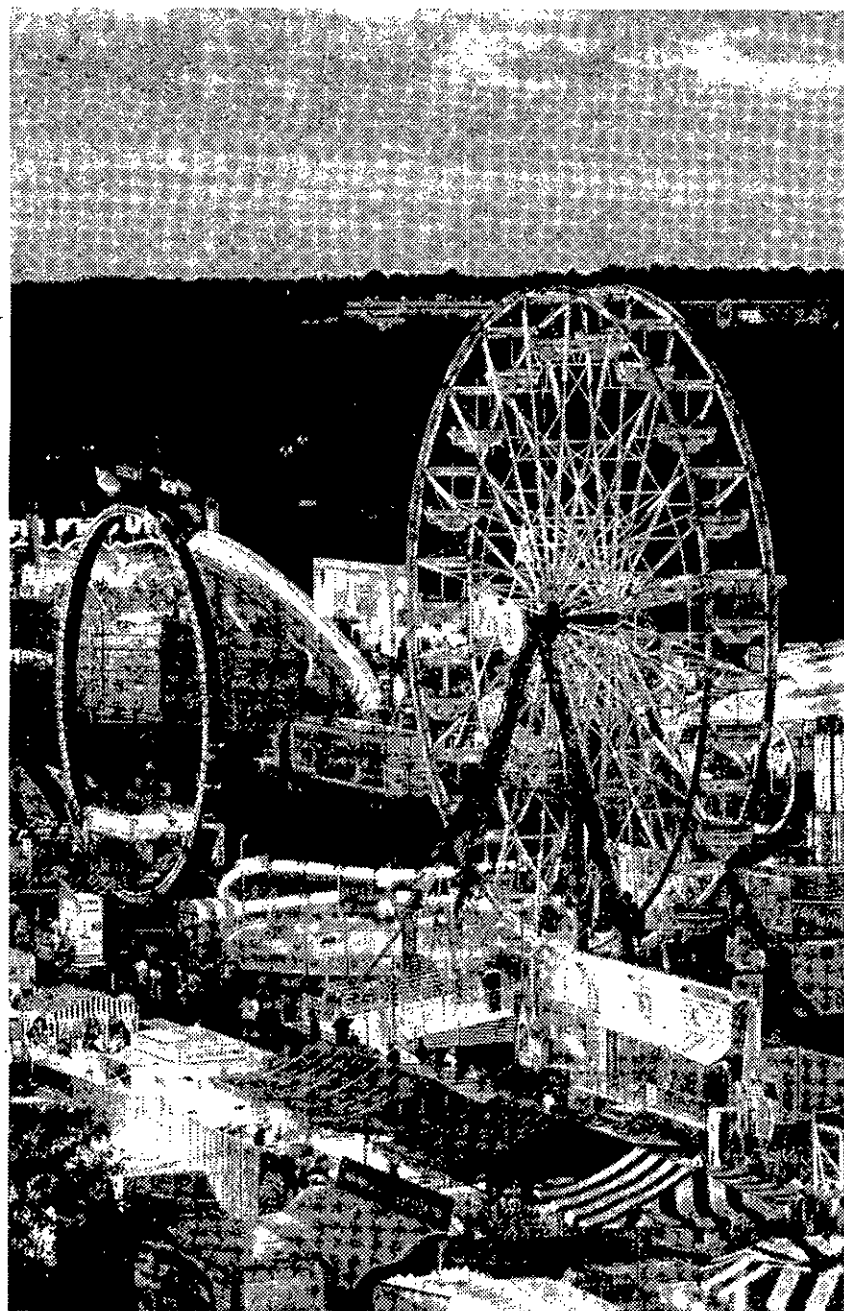

All of these attractions combine with the ever-present education and entertainment, with 15 museums, tours and informational sessions available through the week.

Among the educational attractions are the Times Union high technology building, Hudson Valley Community College's electric car and computer learning program presented by the area's Boys and Girls Clubs.

In addition to these attractions, contests, giveaways and live radio broadcasts will be conducted, so the game booths aren't the only places where fair goers can win prizes.

But because the event is a local fair, the most popular attractions are sure to be thrill rides like the tilt-a-whirl and musical performances like WGNA-scents of popcorn, sawdust and familiar fairground treats like fried dough and cotton candy to create a party atmosphere that brings Capital District residents back to the Altamont Fair year after year.

Nicknamed the "Sunflower Fair" because of the flowers grown by fourth-graders from St. Madeleine Sophie's School in Guilford that will be displayed on the fairgrounds, the Altamont Fair offers a mix of at 8 p.m.

- On Saturday, Aug. 22, The Nashville Network will hold a talent search for country musicians at 2:15 p.m., and an auto show will be presented at 8:15 p.m.

- The grandstand will host three events during the last day of the fair, including an antique tractor pull at 10 a.m., an organ concert featuring Choy Lozada of Lowrey Organs at 4 p.m., and everyone's favorite celebration of

This year's Altamont Fair will feature, in addition to the shows, displays and other forms of entertainment, a Reithoffer Shows' midway featuring games and rides. Above, fairgoers thrill to a bird's eye view on the Pharaoh's Fury ride.

FM's "Road to Nashville" talent contest, in which local country musicians will compete for a chance to perform in the country music capital.

The biggest attractions will be presented at the grandstand. Admission to these events is free with a general admission ticket to the fair.

- The Burners, a local pop-rock group, will perform Tuesday, Aug. 18, at 8 p.m.

- The Big Rigs Pulling Series, an exhibition of truckers competing to see who can haul the biggest load, will happen Wednesday, Aug. 19, at 7:30 p.m.

- Beatlemania, the Lennon-McCartney tribute group that's been performing across the world since the early 80s, will play Thursday, Aug. 20, at 2:15 p.m. and 8 p.m.

- Joie Chitwood's Auto Thrill Show, an exhibition of exhilarating car stunts, will take place Friday, Aug. 21, reckless mechanical carnage, a demolition derby at 7 p.m.

Other events this year include the "Greatest Grandparents of the Capital District" contest, awards for which will be presented Friday, Aug. 21, at 2:15 p.m. by Elyssa Streeter and Steve Caporizzo of WTEN-TV, and WGNA's "Road to Nashville" contest, which begins at 2:15 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 18. Both events will take place on the grandstand.

There are a wealth of other attractions, including displays and competitions involving area 4-H clubs; Sparky the Fire Dog, who will be on hand for photo opportunities; and new rides such as the Flip-N-Out ride, a computerized attraction that spins riders in unpredictable directions.

And for those who like their entertainment old-fashioned and simple, there will be dozens of musicians, livestock exhibitions and walk-in museums that harken back to the days when the Altamont Fair was young.

So, whether your taste runs from the explosive thrills of roller coasters and demolition derbies or the quiet charms of quilting exhibits and petting zoos, the Altamont Fair has something for you this year.

General admission at the gate is $8 for adults (ages 13 and older), $2 for kids ages 6-12 and free for kids under 6. Advance adult tickets can be purchased at participating stores for $5.

Parking is $3, and all-day ride bracelets cost $11.99.

On Tuesday, Aug. 18, and Friday, Aug. 21, kids under 15 get in free, and on Sunday, Aug. 23, veterans and current military personnel get in free with proof of service.

hearing was a requirement before the IDA can issue the bond.

No members of the public spoke at the hearing, which was held at 8 a.m. in Bethlehem Town Hall.

Duncan Barrett of Taconic Corp. in Troy, who is acting as AHF's consultant on the project, opened the short hearing with a summation of his client's goals for the project.

"(The facility) is intended to serve low and middle income seniors in the town of Bethlehem," Barrett said. "There is not currently other affordable senior housing in this community."

Barrett said the project would create 90 short-term construction jobs and approximately five permanent jobs.

"This facility will provide a focus point where state, federal and private providers can offer service to tenants," Barrett added, referring to the expected medical, financial and other needs of the facility's seniors.

Barrett complimented the IDA on the efficiency with which he said they have moved his client's proposal through various stages of consideration. "We're appreciative of your expeditious review," he said.

IDA chair F. Michael Tucker adjourned the meeting in the absence of public comment or further queries from agency members, but he returned the conversation to Van Allen later in the agency's regular meeting.

Barrett offered an update on the project, saying, "We are preparing the actual construction documents, and requests for final site plan and (state environmental quality review) approval are before the town planning board."

Barrett said he anticipates the planning board's decisions — as well as a plan for outside bonding that will complete the project's financing — to be completed within about 60 days.

"We hope it will all work out so we can hit the ground running this fall," Tucker said, referring to the project's anticipated groundbreaking in October.

In other business, the IDA continued its discussion of the statewide "chip-fab" initiative through which 13 sites in New York, including one in Selkirk, are being prepared for prospective computer chip fabrication factories. The facilities, which cost about $1 billion, could provide substantial growth to employment and tax bases in the towns where they are built.

The initiative, which is being organized by a limited liability corporation called Albany County Partnership, is creating guidelines through which undeveloped land can be made "shovel-ready," thereby making the sites attractive to chip-fab firms.

Tucker discussed the Partnership's request for $20,000 from the IDA, which could either be used toward the purchase of the land on the Selkirk site or as seed money.

"You can't take a project from ground zero to shovel-ready without funds," Tucker said.

When board agency member Joseph Richardson noted that the Partnership hasn't yet determined what its budget will be, it's premature to give money to the group. Richardson recommended waiting until after the Partnership's next meeting, and the agency agreed unanimously to do so.

"We're looking (at giving) a show of support by giving $20,000 and not knowing, ultimately, what's going to be done with it," agency member Frank Venezia commented.

Both Venezia and Richardson said they would have to abstain when the actual vote to give $20,000 to the Partnership arose, because both of their employers are in business with the Partnership.

Finally, the agency reviewed the brochure it has been preparing for several weeks that will eventually be distributed to stimulate businesses' interest in Bethlehem.

The brochure plays up the presence of large industrial facilities like Selkirk Cogen and GE Plastics and features the tag line, "Looking for a home for your business? Welcome home to Bethlehem."
