Selkirk residents prefer third bypass option

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

It's back to the drawing board for the State Department of Transportation following an open house at A.W. Becker School on Route 9 in Selkirk that let residents see proposals for a Selkirk bypass.

The objective of the project, which began in the early '90s, is to reduce heavy truck traffic on Route 396 between routes 9 and 144. This stretch of Route 396 is the residential Maple Avenue in the hamlet of Selkirk.

DOT presented two bypass routes, a southern alignment and a middle alignment, which at $7 million and $7.5 million respectively, are close to the $6 million budget of the project. Residents at the open house asked that DOT re-examine a third northern alignment, which at $15 million, it had dismissed as too expensive.

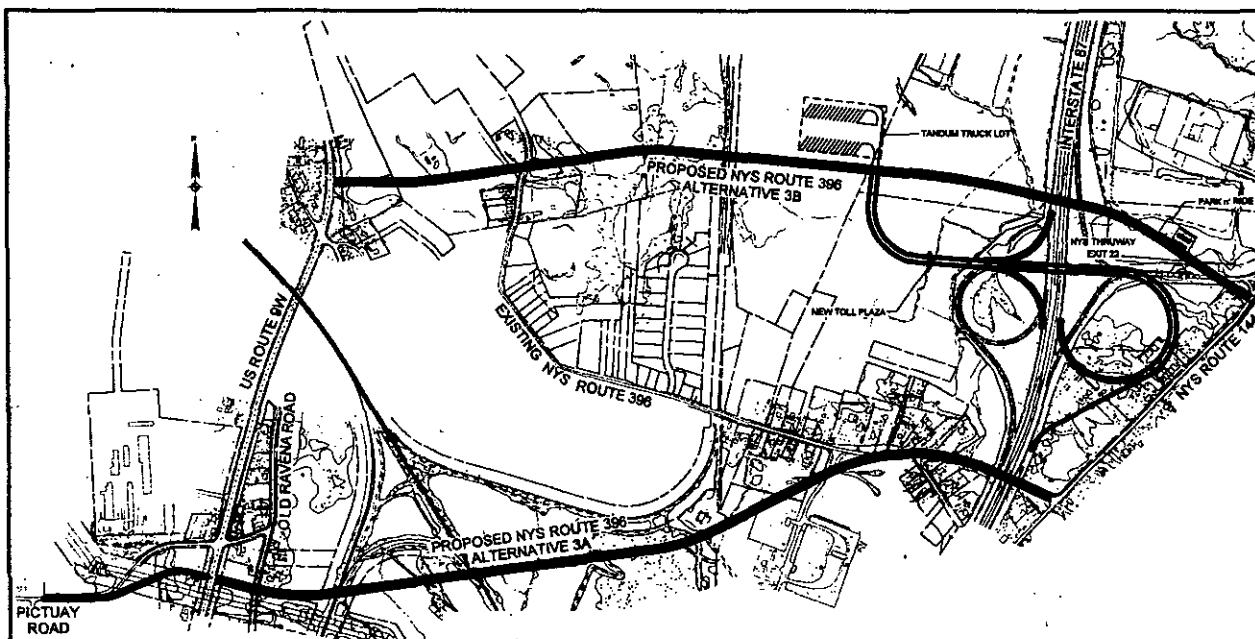

"The middle and southern alignments aren't bypasses, but realignments," Selkirk resident and county Legislator Robin Reed, R-Selkirk, said, summarizing the number of the comments DOT received at the meeting. "The traffic is not diverted from these routes."

The county is not involved in the bypass, and although Reed was instrumental in obtaining state funds for the project, her interest is as a taxpayer and Selkirk resident.

DOT project manager Mark White explained that bypass alternative 3A, the southern alignment, would create a new intersection on Route 9W south of Pictuary Road, proceed easterly to an intersection with Old Ravena Road, build two bridges over the railroad and continue on to return to Route 396 at a new intersection with Pausley Court, keeping intact the existing Route 396 bridge over the Thruway and the intersection with Route 144.

Alternative 3A, the middle alignment, would create a new intersection with Route 9W 500 feet north of Thatcher Street, then move to an intersection with Route 396, and on to a new bridge over the railroad and a new bridge over the Thruway before intersecting with Route 144. This alternative would mean new access to the Thruway from the bypass, or a reconfiguration of Thruway exit 22, and could involve new turn lanes on routes 9W, 396 and 144.

"The northern alignment, or alternative 3C, as planned," White said,

Pesticide Watch want district to sunset use

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

After successfully working with the town of Bethlehem to craft "sunset legislation" which will phase out and ultimately ban pesticide use on town property, Bethlehem Pesticide Watch (BPW) is now focusing its attention on the Bethlehem Central School District.

The group recently presented an information-laden community forum on the use of pesticides in the schools at Bethlehem Public Library.

Allergist and Bethlehem resident Dr. Hilaire Meuwissen; Claire Barnett, director of the Healthy Schools Network; and Michael Surgan, chief scientist in the state attorney general's office, spoke about the effects of pesticides and how to begin working to reduce their use in schools.

"Our work with the schools is a slower process than with the town," said moderator and BPW member David Blumkin. "We were told in July that an Integrated Pest Management (IPM) program is in place, but it's clear that that's not a true IPM plan. IPM works towards the elimination of pesticide use and puts a tremendous emphasis on preventive measures. That's not

Lawson Lake quietly makes public debut

By DONNA J. BELL

In contrast to the years of contentious rhetoric and political maneuvering, Lake Lawson quietly opened to the public on April 1, of this year. So quietly, in fact, that many people are unaware that it is now accessible.

The opening came months after the Albany County Legislature passed a public use plan in December of 1997. That plan opened the area for passive, low level recreation: no motor boats or swimming, but picnicking, hiking, fishing, bird watching or cross-country skiing and canoe access is allowed.

"It has been a four-year battle," said Peter Clouse, county Legislator, R-Coeymans. Clouse had been sparring for years with County Executive Michael Breslin to have the park opened to the public. "It's been one of the hardest projects I've tackled because of all the obstacles, but it has also been one of the most satisfying because of the groundswell of support."

Albany county purchased the 421-acre site, located off of Route 32 in Clarksville, in 1979 for close to $600,000. That amount included $297,000 in federal grant money that was approved based on the understanding that the property would be "open and attractive to the public at a reasonable time of the year and day."

However for the past 18 years, the park was used almost exclusively by Camp Opportunities, a group gives disadvantaged inner-city youngsters a summer camp experience. It is run by Trinity Institution, a nonprofit corporation, that had owned the property before selling it to the county in 1979. The camp, built in the 1930s, includes about 20 cabins and two lodges with cooking and dining facilities.

"Neither me nor my constituents ever thought that Camp Opportunity shouldn't be able to run their camp there," Clouse said. "It's always been about public funds

Police arrest man after bank incident

A team of 10 Bethlehem police officers responded quickly to a potentially dangerous situation at KeyBank in Glenmont's Ames Plaza on Friday, Oct. 2.

"Francis Kobeck, a customer of the bank, had been in for the last five days, apparently dissatisfied with the way his account was being handled," Bethlehem Police Lt. Timothy Beebe said. "On Friday, he came in agitated, and made veiled or overt threats that if this wasn't resolved to his satisfaction, he would start shooting people."

Beebe said a manager brought Kobeck into his office and the police were called. Although Kobeck never displayed a weapon, Beebe said the police take such threats seriously. "We had to try and contain the situation, and set up a perimeter," Beebe said. "Had he had a weapon, we would have had to contain the whole plaza."

The police arrested Kobeck on a disorderly conduct charge.

Police arrested two people on DWI charges recently.

On Saturday, Sept. 26, at 1:31 a.m. Officer Brian Hughes arrested Michael Jay Altieri, 25, of 539 Kenwood Ave. in Delmar. Hughes observed Altieri travelling 29 mph in a 55-mph zone, straddling the white dotted line, and not staying in the designated lane. Police said Altieri refused a breathalyzer test and failed several field sobriety tests. He is scheduled to appear in court Oct. 20.

Officer Jeff Vunck arrested Carolyn J. Becker, 28, of 3314 William St., Valatie, after observing her drive through a solid red signal on Kenwood Avenue and just miss hitting a pickup truck. Police said Becker failed field sobriety and breathalyzer tests.

Saturday story times

Bethlehem Public Library youth continues its series of Saturday morning story times for children of working parents. Sessions are scheduled for Oct. 10 and 24, and Nov. 7 and 28, at 10:30 a.m.

Saturday Storybreak is for children ages 3 to 6 with a parent. To register, call 439-9314.

Cops nab 3 for DWI

Bethlehem police arrested three people on charges of driving while intoxicated on Sunday, Sept. 20.

At 3:42 a.m., Officer Brian Hughes arrested Stephen Anthony Benamati, 27, of Landor Lane in Cohoes. Police said Benamati was driving 57 mph in a 40-mph zone, weaving and crossing the white line on Route 9W in the area of Route 910A. According to police reports, he failed several field sobriety tests. Benamati is scheduled to appear in Bethlehem town court on Oct. 28.

Officer Thomas Heffernan arrested Shawn David Calhoun, 21, of Coxsackie at 5:02 a.m. Heffernan stopped Calhoun near the Coeymans border after first observing him driving 70 mph in a 55-mph zone on Route 9W near Old Town Road. Police said Calhoun failed field sobriety tests. He is scheduled to appear in town court on Oct. 6.

At 8:59 p.m., radar detected 49-year-old Patrick William Kinkead of Houston, Texas, speeding near Route 144 and Bohl's Construction, south of Corning Hill in Glenmont. Officer Christopher Hughes arrested Kinkead after he failed field sobriety tests. He is scheduled to appear in town court on Oct. 20.

Players to perform at church

The Harlequin Players will present Mark Dunn's Five Tellers Dancing in the Rain on Oct. 16, 23 and 24 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Oct. 18, at 3 p.m. at Slingerlands United Methodist Church on Route 85.

Play tickets are $7. For tickets call 478-0405 or 346-1147.

A dinner theater performance is set for Saturday, Oct. 17, at 6 p.m. Tickets are $12. For dinner reservations, call 439-1766.

Flower society to meet

Lily breeder and grower Janet Vinyard of St. Johnsville, Montgomery County, will discuss lilies in the home garden at the next meeting of the Capital-Hudson Iris Society on Sunday, Oct. 18, at Bethlehem Public Library on Delaware Avenue in Delmar.

A social time, starting at 1:30 p.m. will precede the program. Area gardeners are welcome to attend. Dessert and coffee will be served.

For information, call Kathryn Mohr at 393-8205 or Linda Montenegro at 377-4987.

Scout outfits casualty unit

By Donna J. Bell

The town of Bethlehem now has a Multiple Casualty Response Unit thanks to the efforts of Delmar Boy Scout Eric Kerr.

Kerr came up with the idea for the unit, which is designed to respond to large disasters with many injuries, when he was looking for an Eagle Scout project.

"It was a huge undertaking,"

Eric Kerr liked having our community donate because it (the unit) is for them.

Eric Kerr

said his mother, Cyndi Kerr, who is also a Bethlehem police officer, "perhaps more than the average Eagle Scout project."

The seeds for Eric Kerr's project were planted in 1996 when his Boy Scout Troop participated in a drill sponsored by the town's emergency management office. The purpose of the drill, which simulated an accident in which a tanker carrying hazardous materials and a school bus collide, was to test the ability of the town's emergency services to handle a crisis.

When the drill was critiqued the town discovered that the amount of equipment and medical supplies carried by ambulances and fire trucks was inadequate to handle a large number of patients.

Two years later, Kerr's participation in the drill inspired him to supply the town with a response unit. Kerr contacted Jack Brennan, Bethlehem's director of emergency management, who responded positively to his plan.

The response unit is basically an enclosed 7- by 14-foot trailer that carries medical supplies — everything from tweezers, gauze, plastic cups, pediatric and adult burn and trauma/resuscitation kits, to a generator and halogen lights. The unit also houses pop-up shelters that can function as a field hospital in inclement weather.

"It has been a win-win situation both for Eric and the town who has profited from the use of a vehicle that can be used in the event of an emergency," Brennan said. "It will save lives."

Eric Kerr shows off the supplies in the casualty van.

Kerr went to the local community for donations and supplies to stock the unit. GE Plastics in Selkirk made the first contribution, a check for $3,400, that was used to purchase the trailer.

Other local business chipped in with everything from paint and lumber, to cash, army cots, medical supplies and labor. Pizza's were even donated to feed people working on the trailer.

In all, more than $4,300 in cash donations and $22,900 in supplies and services were donated, said Kerr, a seventh-grader at Bethlehem Central Middle School.

"I didn't think that he would do it to the extent and quality that he did," Brennan said of Kerr who handed over the keys to the unit to Bethlehem Supervisor Sheila Fuller in a ceremony at town hall on Sept. 29.

"It was a tremendous undertaking, especially for a young fella. He turned the heads of a lot of people, his peers, his parents and the community," said Fuller.

For his part, Kerr feels that the project taught him a lot about emergency medical services. But more importantly, it's taught him life skills.

"I learned how to talk to people without getting nervous and how to ask for things. It's built my confidence," Kerr said, adding that he was happy that the community was so supportive of the project. "I liked having our community donate because it (the unit) is for them."

V'ville voters to decide on capital reserve fund

By Katherine McCarthy

In addition to electing a new school board member today, Oct. 7, Voorheesville school district voters will choose whether to establish a capital reserve fund in the ultimate amount of $525,000.

The district's superintendent for business Anthony Marturano said that the fund can only be used for capital improvements and will have a five-year term.

"The superintendent, the treasurer and I sat down and looked at our financial situation," said Marturano. "We started talking about it at budget time last year, and presented it formally this July. The whole idea of the fund is so that it can keep any tax increases for our upcoming building project down to a bare minimum. It may, and I stress may, prevent any tax increases."

Architects Collins & Scoville are currently working on preliminary plans for new construction, including an addition to the high school and renovations to district schools.

An unanticipated drop in payments to the Teachers' Retirement System, monies received from a rate change settlement with Niagara Mohawk, payment from a lawsuit with Manville Trust and an unanticipated state aid payment of more than $70,000 helped the district end the 1997-98 school year in a good financial position. The district anticipates reaching its capital reserve fund goal of $525,000 by June 30, 1999, without requiring additional taxes from residents.

The fund can only be established with voter approval. If the proposal is defeated, the district will have a fund balance that exceeds the amount prescribed by law, and any excess monies would have to be used to reduce taxes next year.

Marturano said that it made more sense to establish the capital reserve fund rather than take an immediate tax reduction.

"If you apply the money to a one-time tax reduction," he said, "the community will be faced with the loss of revenue in next year's budget. When it was time for a capital project, we'd be starting from scratch. If we put this money away now, it will gain interest, which it couldn't do if it was applied to taxes."

Marturano said that building projects receive state aid; Voorheesville's current state aid ratio is 70 percent, which means that if Voorheesville used the full $525,000 for work on a capital project, it would receive $367,000 from the state the following year.

If the district used borrowed funds for a capital improvement, it would receive the same amount of aid, but over a minimum of 10 years instead of in a lump sum payment.

Marturano explained that the district estimates a project of $5 to 6 million. "We're getting 70 percent from the state," he said. "If this is a $5 million project, then $3.5 million is paid for by the state. If we borrow $1.5 million over 20 years, that's $75,000 per year. If we set aside $525,000 now, that's six years worth of payments."

"We're striving for a scenario where, with our current debt falling off in the future and this money set aside," Marturano said, "we can have a smooth, almost unseen transition to our capital improvements. This is the kind of forward thinking we're trying to apply, so that taxpayers won't feel the negative impacts."

Larry Bonham of the Voorheesville Taxpayers Association, which has long advocated for reduced taxes in Voorheesville, said the group would remain neutral about the capital reserve fund.

"I do know that some of our members plan to vote no," Bonham said. "They feel that if the balance exceeds the amount established by law, it should go back to the taxpayers."

Marturano feels that district residents will support the fund. "We have the kind of community that, when they read the literature and understand what we're doing, will support this," he said. "It makes good fiscal sense."

BCMS to recognize young adolescents

By Donna J. Bell

Bethlehem Central Middle School will celebrate the Month of the Young Adolescent in October.

Sponsored by the National Middle School Association (NMSA), and supported by 35 national education, health and youth-oriented organizations, the Month of the Adolescent promotes the message that young people bring good things to their communities and addresses the challenges that they must face growing up in today's society.

"I thought it was a good way to celebrate all the good things the kids are doing," said Mary Capobianco, assistant principal at BCMS. "We want to tell the kids that adults are proud of them. We always tell them what to do, but never step back and say 'We are proud of you.'"

Capobianco said the school will sponsor activities in October and will work to promote the 1998 theme — Together We Can Make a Difference.

One of those activities will be a T-shirt designing contest. After the winner is chosen, the kids will sell the shirts in the school store and proceeds will go toward purchasing positive incentive awards such as erasers, pencils and candy. These tokens will be used to award good behavior. A parent of a middle-school student is also asking businesses to donate free coupons for products or gifts.

Capobianco said that the middle school students, or rather young adults, as she corrected herself, are often not understood. "We call them the roller coaster years," Capobianco said of the middle school age group. "But to them it's one of the best times in their lives."

She pointed out that the school's service groups work hard volunteering time to better the school environment.

The Leadership Club purchased colorful banners and hung them in the cafeteria and another group is working to paint a mural at the school that will feature young adult literature.

"The sixth-grade kids created a garden (in a school courtyard) last year on their own time," said Capobianco. "We want to recognize all the good things that kids are willing to do on their own."

In honor of the Month of the Young Adolescent The Spotlight will feature a different story about a program, club or student at the middle school each week in October.

Heart specialist advises taking control of health

By Debbie Eberle

Glenmont resident, and newly elected president of the local chapter of the Heart Association, Dr. Joseph Sacco says that everyone can take control of their own health, they just have to want to.

Sacco is chief of the cardiology section and head of the cardiac research unit at Stratton VA Medical Center in Albany and a faculty member at Albany Medical College. He earned his medical doctorate from the University of Connecticut.

Despite the fact that death rates from heart disease have dropped significantly in the last 30 years, Sacco said it's still the number one killer of men and women alike. "Heart disease kills more people than the next four causes of death added together. Four out of every 10 people will die as a result of it."

He added, "Heart disease currently costs the U.S. economy $175 billion per year in terms of the impact on health care, hospital costs, medical costs, lost productivity of people... that's a big chunk of our gross national product. Besides making people feel better and live longer we could also save money if we could prevent heart disease."

The Heart Association is described as "kind of a grass roots organization" by Sacco who says that one of the reasons he likes it so much is that at least 90 cents out of every dollar raised goes directly back into providing services. "I was always impressed with the association for that reason."

It's also "very across the board" in recruiting volunteers from all walks of life and income levels, said Sacco. "I get to be the figurehead, but the real work gets done by the staff and the volunteers who are very hard working."

A local core group of 30 to 40 volunteers recently got help from almost 3,000 participants in the Heart Walk at Siena College in Loudonville. Area businesses, hospitals and insurance carriers all worked with the Heart Association to help raise about $240,000.

The Heart Association has also designed education programs for teachers to use in the classroom. Most schools in the Capital District have the grade-appropriate training kits which teach kids about living a healthy lifestyle by eating right, exercising and avoiding behaviors like cigarette smoking. Programs are geared for different levels from preschool through high school. "One of my favorite things to do is go into a kindergarten or first-grade class and teach the kids a little about living a healthy lifestyle," Sacco said.

He encourages parents to "watch out for information that may come home with your school-aged children." Hoops For Heart and Jump Rope For Heart are some events that parents can participate in with their kids.

As well as fund-raising and teaching at local schools, Sacco is also directly involved in professional education. He teaches physicians, nurses and primary care providers the latest findings on heart disease. Sacco said that a group of drugs including Zocor and Pravachol, commonly referred to as the Statins, have recently been found to reduce the risk of stroke and heart disease. For people who are at high risk for heart disease, "These medicines really do prevent people from dying of a heart attack," said Sacco. While these medicines save lives, "There's no magic bullet that says I can take this and then sit in front of the tube and order McDonald's," he added.

Sacco stressed the importance of taking control of your health with good choices in diet and exercise. "You can't change what your family history is, so it makes good sense to try and change the things you can."

The Heart Association emphasizes prevention. Its goal is to make people with risk factors or abnormalities aware of them so they can prevent a heart attack.

Included in this list are — excessive weight, cigarette smoking, high blood pressure, diabetes, high cholesterol and genetic makeup.

He encourages people to call the Heart Association for information at 869-1961.

The group's online address is (www.americanheart.org).

Massage therapist expands business in Delmar

By Katherine McCarthy

When Gail Wells became a massage therapist 16 years ago, she was one of a very few in the area. Today, there are a number of massage therapists right in Delmar and two massage schools in Albany.

Wells' practice has expanded so much that she recently moved from her Orchard Street home and opened the Delmar Center for Therapeutic Massage at 414 Kenwood Ave.

In the first floor of a charming old house, the center has soothing music and Oriental carpets that make the living room feel more homey than clinical. Two massage rooms are set up to accommodate Wells and two other massage therapists who work for her. Another room is set up for an esthetician, a licensed professional who does facials, body waxing and makeup, and Wells is looking to hire a manicurist for the fourth treatment room.

Wells said that before she began practicing massage, she was doing office work. "I felt that massage was a calling, really," she said. "I needed to find my niche in life."

That meant a lot of phone calls, as she looked into the relatively new field. "I found the Board of Massage in Albany," she said. "Massage therapy has been a licensed profession in New York State since the 1960s. In the early '80s, I talked to a woman who worked at the Saratoga baths, who had learned massage through a BOCES program. Now there are accredited schools of massage. I needed 500 hours of training to become a licensed massage therapist. Now, it's up to 600 hours, and it will be 1000 by the first of the year. There's talk of creating an associate's degree in massage therapy, and I know there's one college on Long Island that offers that degree."

Wells learned massage at the Sarasota School of Natural Healing in Florida and attended the Connecticut Center for Massage in Newington. She stays updated in her field and will be attending a workshop on the muscle disease fibromyalgia soon.

"When I first started," Wells said, "it wasn't too busy. In about my fifth year, things took off and I drew people from everywhere. There was a greater awareness of massage and people wanted to try something more holistic. I think my practice will get even busier as massage becomes more commonplace."

Wells said there is a perception that massage is a luxury. "I say you can't afford not to have a massage," she said, enthusiastic about its many benefits. "Massage increases the blood and lymph flow," she said. "It improves circulation, and brings fresh oxygen and nutrients to your body while it flushes out toxic waste. This improves muscle and skin tone, and the joints' range of motion and flexibility. It also soothes backaches, headaches, bursitis, arthritis, fibromyalgia and other muscle diseases, PMS and certain types of edema."

Massage is also good for that chronic end-of-the-century symptom: stress. "If you have stress, you have all of the symptoms I've named and more," Wells said.

"Your body can begin to break down from too much stress."

Wells said massage, which relaxes muscles and relieves tension, is physically relaxing and is mentally, spiritually and emotionally soothing. "The human touch is a powerful thing," Wells said, "and massage communicates caring."

Wells said the most common type of massage she gives is Swedish massage, although she incorporates some Shiatsu — which uses finger pressure to release a body's energy — and reflexology, which concentrates on the hands and feet. Depending on what a client needs, Wells might incorporate more vigorous sports massage into her treatment.

Wells said her typical patients are in their 30s or 40s, because they have the money to spend and are educated about massage. "I've also had a number of younger clients and a 79-year-old woman who received a massage as a gift and said it was 'absolutely fabulous,'" Wells added.

Wells said she has a number of repeat customers who give her positive feedback. "They'll say their back is better, or they're not feeling as much pain as they had been," she said.

Wells said the interest in massage is growing and is enough to sustain the businesses in town. For her part, Wells enjoys having her own business and raising her two sons, ages 2 and 8. She is scheduled to speak to the Bethlehem Business Women on Oct. 7 at Normanside Country Club.

The Delmar Center for Therapeutic Massage is open Monday through Saturday by appointment, and offers evening hours as well as daytime ones. A full one-hour massage costs $55; a half-hour massage is $35 and gift certificates are available.

"If you haven't experienced a massage," Wells said, "try it."

The center's phone number is 475-9456.

Help stamp out SIDS

Remember Baby Moses, who was found dead in Washington Park? The Sudden Infant Death Syndrome Alliance people do. The city of Albany gave the leftover money donated to pay for Baby Moses' funeral to the alliance to pay for SIDS education programs that help save lives.

Leslie Cheu, a SIDS mother and director of the alliance, said that money and a contribution from Delmar Presbyterian Church's outreach fund have made it possible to launch a new program to promote awareness about SIDS and SIDS prevention methods. The 'Back to Sleep' program encourages parents to place babies on their backs, which is recommended for most newborns. Three local hospitals will promote the program with tiny T-shirts sporting the Back to Sleep message.

The work of the alliance should help reduce the 15 to 20 deaths that occur each year in the Capital District. As Cheu says, even one SIDS death is one too many.

Get rid of pesticides

Bethlehem Pesticide Watch is yet another grass-roots group that gets things done. Last year the group set things in motion for the town to sunset the ban on pesticides. The town is expected to enact a sunset law this month, which means the town will no longer use toxic pesticides. This year, the pesticide group will try to achieve the same results with the school district.

The district should take Albany County and the town of Bethlehem's lead and sunset its use of pesticides and develop an Integrated Pest Management plan.

The Spotlight supports Bethlehem Pesticide Watch's efforts to stop using chemical pesticides on public property. Pesticides are dangerous substances that can wreak havoc for years. We also support the group's call for implementing nontoxic alternatives to control insects and weeds. This would certainly make for a safer, more user-friendly environment.

Finders keepers?

Bethlehem Police Det. John Cox is a cop with a heart. He informed us this week that time is almost up for the owner of a diamond engagement ring and wedding ring that were found almost a year ago.

The rings were found in Delmar and turned into police by a Good Samaritan who legally is entitled to them after a year, Cox said. It's likely the Good Samaritan would prefer the owner claim the rings. "I'm sure it's meaningful" to someone said Cox.

He said he thinks the owner may have been a jogger who had the rings attached to some type of clip while she was running. But that was a year ago and unless the rings are identified and claimed by Nov. 1, the owner loses out. If you lost or know someone who lost the rings, give Cox a call at 439-9973.

Eat your heart out Andy Sipowicz; we've got the best and the brightest right here in Bethlehem.

Kudos to Scout

Eric Kerr did a great job and a performed a community service with his Eagle Scout project. This young boy raised enough money to equip an emergency van to be used in the event of a wide-scale medical emergency.

We congratulate him for his innovative project and hard work. The Multiple Casualty Response Unit is a wonderful addition to the town.

Project will help raise awareness

By Leslie Cheu

The writer is director of the Hudson-Mohawk Affiliate of the SIDS Alliance. She is a resident of Glenmont.

There are few thoughts more frightening to a new or expectant parent than that of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS). The discovery of a seemingly healthy baby laid to sleep and then found dead hours later is almost incomprehensible to most parents.

SIDS happens to almost 3,000 babies a year (15 to 20 in the Capital District), making it one of the leading causes of infant death in the United States. It is a known medical disorder for which there is no known cause.

Sadly, I speak from experience. I am the mother of a baby who died from SIDS. My son Simon was a big, beautiful 3-month-old baby when he died without warning in April 1992 at day care. Like many babies that die from SIDS, Simon had a very slight cold before he died. Otherwise, I had no indication that there was anything "wrong" with him that would have caused him to succumb to SIDS. He, like many other babies that die from SIDS, just never woke up from his morning nap. His death changed my and my husband's lives forever.

Because SIDS is so difficult to understand, many people are suspicious of families that lose a child to SIDS. This suspicion compounds the tragedy for a family that is already grieving the loss of their precious child. Outsiders may wonder, 'How could a perfectly healthy baby die without warning?' The answer, clearly is that babies who die from SIDS are not perfectly healthy. They suffer from an underlying defect or abnormality that is not apparent to parents or physicians caring for the child.

Researchers now believe that

Clayton Maul, 4, joins his 2-day old sister Caroline and father Tom Maul at St. Peter's Hospital. Caroline is wearing a T-shirt, which asks parents to place babies on their backs when they sleep.

Elaine McLain

this abnormality is centered in a part of the brain called the ventral medulla. This part of the brain controls a baby's breathing and heart rate. Babies that have this defect are at a greater risk of dying from SIDS. We now know, however, that we can reduce the risk of death by decreasing their exposure to risk factors that may trigger SIDS.

No one, not even a doctor, can currently predict which babies will die from SIDS. However, the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) now recommends the following infant care practices to significantly reduce a SIDS risk:

- If your baby is healthy, place him on his back to sleep. Since the AAP began recommending the back sleep position for infants in 1993, SIDS deaths in the United States have declined by 38 percent. While many parents worry that this sleep position may result in the baby choking should he spit up after a feeding, research has proven that healthy babies can turn their heads at a very young age and clear up any spit up from their mouths. However, if a baby born with a birth defect has severe reflux or has a breathing, heart or lung problem, parents should talk with their doctor about which position is best.

- Don't allow anyone to smoke around the baby. Although researchers don't know why exposure to second-hand smoke increases the risk of SIDS so much, they believe that nicotine may disrupt the arousal (waking up) mechanism in babies.

- Place your baby on a firm surface to sleep. Any type of bedding that can bunch up around a baby's face can block the flow of air and put the baby in danger. Don't let your baby rest on a futon, sheepskin, waterbed, beanbag chair, pillow or sofa cushions.

- Avoid loose bedding. Quilts and blankets can block air circulation if they slip over a baby's head. Limit bedding to a fitted bottom sheet and firm bumpers. To keep your baby warm without covers, dress him in layers under a blanket sleeper in cold weather and in lightweight pajamas in warmer weather.

- Don't let your baby sleep with stuffed toys. If pulled in to her face, stuffed toys can block the flow of air.

- Don't let your baby get too warm. Keep the temperature in your baby's room so that it feels comfortable to you, and no higher than 70 degrees. This is especially important when a baby is sick.

- Teach baby sitters, day care workers, friends and grandparents about reducing SIDS risk.

A federally funded public education campaign titled the "Back to Sleep" program has reached many new parents with this vital infant care information, but more work is yet to be done.

The SIDS Alliance is a nonprofit organization that provides education about the risk factors of SIDS and funds research into its causes. To ensure that all new parents know about the Back to Sleep program, the SIDS Alliance and several local hospitals and county health departments have joined together in an innovative program to teach parents how to reduce SIDS risk for their babies.

St. Peter's Hospital, Albany Medical Center and Samaritan Hospital will be giving infant size T-shirts to newborns in their hospital nurseries that read "Please put me on my back to sleep." We hope this will become a fashion statement for babies everywhere in the Capital District.

Although only one baby out of every 1,000 born will die from SIDS, even one SIDS death is one too many. For information about SIDS, call the local chapter of the SIDS Alliance at 475-1879. A free SIDS information card is available from the SIDS Alliance for parents and health care professionals, who have additional questions.

Information about SIDS is also available from the New York State Center for Sudden Infant Death at 1-800-336-SIDS.

Cheaper bypass plans could be more costly over the long haul

Editor, The Spotlight:

The overwhelming mood of those who attended the open house for the proposed Route 396 Selkirk Bypass was dismay with what is being proposed. The more detail one saw, the worse the picture appeared.

For those who have not had access to the map showing proposed routes for the bypass, there are three alternatives, although information provided at the open house indicated that the most northerly route (Alternate 3C) is no longer being considered because its cost would be approximately double that of either the southern or middle route. While doubling the cost of anything is not to be taken lightly, choosing a cheaper route without considering its drawbacks seems penny wise and pound foolish.

Our understanding is that the whole purpose of the proposed bypass is to relieve the problems caused by truck traffic on Route 396 to improve the quality of life in Selkirk. Whatever route is chosen, Selkirk will no longer be the small rural village it once was.

It seems logical that the best route for the bypass is the one which succeeds in resolving traffic problems and at the same time has the least negative impact on the village. While alternatives 3A and 3B are estimated at half the cost of 3C, when one considers the potential for negative impact, it becomes questionable whether spending money on either of them would improve the life of Selkirk residents. Both of these routes, as they proceed eastward from 9W, would be very close to many homes.

Alternate 3A especially follows a path paralleling and crossing the oldest and most heavily settled part of Selkirk. Residents might be relieved of truck traffic on the immediate street where they live, but would probably have at least the same degree of traffic noise and truck fumes from the relocated 396 as they have now. If building the alternate route results in heavier truck traffic in the future, Selkirk residents might ultimately have greater problems than they do now.

In addition, using the existing Route 396 over the Thruway to connect to Route 144 would almost surely increase traffic on 144 between 396 and the Thruway entrance. This is already a dangerous stretch of highway, due partly to a tendency of many drivers to see this as a straight of way in which they can pass, ignoring a dip in the road, which limits visibility. We live in this area, and we have had to replace sections of our fence three times in as many years because of accidents caused by drivers who started to pass and had to pull in quickly. Alternate 3B, while it has its faults, would at least provide for safer traffic patterns on Route 144 and a safer entrance to the Thruway from both east and west.

Even though alternate 3C costs twice as much as either 3A or 3B, it certainly appears less destructive to the village of Selkirk, as it goes through primarily open land. In addition, it might have the effect of opening that land to development. If the intent of this whole project is the relieve problems in Selkirk, it would be shortsighted, simply to save money, to choose an option that would so negatively impact large areas of Selkirk.

Bruce and Mary Ann Shubert

No wonder rates on rise

Editor, The Spotlight:

It is mysterious as it is vexing that the post office persists in grossly inefficient operations even as it schedules another rate increase.

Example: Mail was recently sent to us at 609 Murray Ave. instead of the correct number.

A postal worker with knowledge of the area should have immediately recognized that the address was an error. Even without that knowledge, it would take less than 30 seconds to check a computerized street directory and correct the error.

Obviously, customer service and efficiency are contrary to post office policy. They deprived us of our mail and went to substantially greater expense to return the item to the sender.

No wonder postal rates are going up.

Editor, The Spotlight:

Absolute kudos, to Katherine McCarthy for her excellent, well written article on Clinton in the Sept. 23 issue of The Spotlight.

As a mother of two toddler boys with twins on the way, I am horrified at the apathy of the people of this nation and the direction we are headed. It was a breath of fresh air to read that article. I am copying it and sending it to my family and friends across the country.

Thanks again for conveying what most mom's and women feel.

One of Frances Mehm's pastels, which will be on display throughout the month.

Pastels, pen and ink work on display

Pastels by Frances Mehm and pen and ink drawings by Diane McClumpha Wellstood offer a delightful study in contrast in the library galleries during the month of October.

Mehm has taken her pastels to Europe, the Middle East, the Caribbean and the American Southwest. She paints in what she calls a "representational-impressionistic style," completing most pieces on location. She is currently studying with Chinese master artist Zhang Hong Nian.

Mehm has exhibited in the National Arts Club with the Pastel Society of America, Schenectady Museum, and Saratoga Arts Council. She has also shared her gifts at large, participating as a judge for the New York State Imagination Celebration and, most recently, developing and coordinating a program for artistically talented children called "Summertime Art 98," sponsored by the Colonie Art League and Albany-Schenectady League of Arts.

Wellstood's crisp pen and ink drawings of Shaker scenes reflect her interest in antiques and historic places, encouraged by summer visits to Shaker sites in Massachusetts as a child.

The drawings represent only a part of Wellstood's eclectic production, which also includes watercolor, embroidery, needlepoint and quiltmaking. In 1987 she designed an album cover for the last recording made by her husband, the late jazz pianist Richard McQueen Wellstood.

Wellstood worked for design studios in New York City and Albany before venturing out on her own in 1976.

Continuing the Americana theme, the Capitolers exhibit varied examples of decorative painting in the Birchenough case this month.

The Capitolers is the local chapter of the National Society of Tole and Decorative Painters, whose work is included in the Smithsonian Museum's permanent collection. The exhibit previews a demonstration of decorative painting in a library program on Monday, Oct. 26, at 7 p.m.

The small case displays items from the library's local history collection, assembled by genealogy and local history librarian Babs Carlson in honor of National Archives Week, Oct. 11 to 17.

"would go from Route 9W at Creble Road, parallel the Vroman Kill, and go northeast towards Weisheit and Clapper Roads and the interchange with the Thruway, eventually tying in with Gibson Road at Route 144."

White said that building the northern alignment would also require relocating Thruway exit 22 next to the water plant at the corner of Clapper and Weisheit. This could add another $4 million to the project. He also pointed out that this could affect the area being considered for the computer chip fabrication plant.

Residents at the open house suggested that costs be cut by only building the northern alignment as far as the Thruway, and omitting the extension to Route 144.

"Since the meeting," White said, "we've been asking, 'How can we do this?' The project only has approval for $6 million."

Reed said that while the northern alignment bears looking at, she is concerned with certain aspects of it.

"I think that topography might be difficult to build on," Reed said. "Also, Becker School would be close to it, and as an educator, I would have concerns about the noise, distraction and safety. As a taxpayer, I'm concerned about the $15 million cost, which is twice the other routes. This route might also have an effect on the residents of Beaver Dam Road."

Reed urged residents to send their comments to DOT.

used to buy public property and therefore it demands that the public be able to access it."

Close was so frustrated by the lack of response from the county executive that he contacted the National Park Service and asked them to investigate whether Albany County had misused funds to purchase the park. "They sent a man from Philadelphia and he saw the chain across the opening," said Clouse.

Jennifer Centore, a policy analyst in the county executive's office, confirmed the park's opening and added that organizations such as the Girl Scouts and different schools have always used the site for sleepovers and educational hikes. Centore said that groups must make reservation with the Albany County Planning Department, and need to provide their own insurance.

"It's great for kids to just run around out there," Centore said. "That is why the county executive is so happy to have a relationship with Camp Opportunities. They are diligent stewards of the land and give the kids the chance to have a place like that to go to."

County Legislator Alexander Gordon, D-Berne, chairman of the Conservation and Improvement Committee, worked to facilitate an agreement between Camp Opportunities and the county. "This has been a long process and a process that has been supported by both parties for the good of the residents and the park," Gordon said. "Peter (Clouse) and I are not of the same political party, but Peter has been very active and listened to the voice of his constituents. It's taken the last couple of years but Mike Richardson, myself and other members (of the Legislature) have made sure this has gotten done."

Gordon praised community groups like the Alcove Preservation Association (APA) for its work on the issue. "They have been adamant about getting (Lake Lawson) open and they surely performed a good service," said Gordon.

Since the park opened in April there have been ongoing improvements to the property, said Mike Franchini, Albany County's deputy commissioner of public works. His department is responsible for maintaining the site, and has built a parking lot, developed some of the trails and installed signs and posted park regulations. "We think it's gone well for the first year, we haven't received any complaints and we've gotten some ideas of areas we want to improve,"

Franchini said.

There are still a few problems, said Clouse. There is only a small parking lot, with limited handicapped parking, and trails are still unfinished.

Chris Cleary, president of the APA, a group that lobbied to have the park opened, agrees with Clouse. "Elderly people and children can't walk a half a mile each way," Cleary feels that the park was opened reluctantly and it shows in the lack of publicity.

"The implementation of the public use plan has been slow, Clouse said, I proposed legislation that authorized us to go after state Bond Act money to make the improvements."

VIEWS ON DENTAL HEALTH

Thomas H. Abele, D.M.D.

Geoffrey B. Edmunds, D.D.S.

Biting your cheek at night

If you've noticed that you sometimes bite your cheek at night while you're sleeping, this may indicate a combination of problems such as tension, irregularities in teeth surfaces, or improperly aligned teeth. Some people express tension by clenching or grinding their teeth, either while awake or unconsciously when they're asleep. When the lower teeth are rubbed against the upper teeth this is called bruxism. If you grind your teeth from side to side this may result in a bite or damage to your cheek or lips.

You may be able to relieve the emotional aspects of the problem by trying to eliminate whatever is causing the tension. The dental aspects can be helped by your dentist. For instance, he can check the relationship of your bite to see if there are any irregularities in your teeth that are causing problems. He may suggest that you wear a Hawley-type appliance or a night guard to help break the Bruxing habit. This will also give him another way of checking your bite to find out what dental problems should be corrected.

TOPS helps shed unwanted weight

By Debbie Eberle

Chapter leader Kathy Johnson found losing weight on her own to be too big a challenge, so in April 1997 she started a TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) group with seven other people.

The group meets Tuesdays at 6 p.m. at Glenmont Community Church on Weiser Street, next to the firehouse. Johnson says she founded the chapter "to build a support structure for myself as well as others who want to positively influence their life as well as lose weight."

TOPS Club, an international nonprofit weight-loss support group, was founded in 1948 in Milwaukee, Wis., by homemaker Esther Manz. It is the oldest major weight-control group around, with almost 300,000 members in the United States, Canada and other countries.

"TOPS insists your doctor be involved. Your desired weight is established with your physician, put on his letterhead and filed with the weight recorder. From that moment on the members of your group vow to 'support and guide you to your goal,'" said Johnson. Group member Marion Kuritz of Delmar added, "There is a camaraderie that exists, we're there for you."

The underlying philosophy of TOPS is "You're nothing to your family if you aren't important to yourself," said Kuritz. She added that the group is concerned with helping members feel good about who they are and encouraging them to take care of themselves so that they'll be better equipped to take care of the people they love. "It's not just what you're eating ... it's what is eating you," she said.

There is a $20 charge to join TOPS and a $5 monthly fee. Members receive the group's monthly newsletter, TOPS NEWS, which is filled with tips, stories, encouragement and healthy recipes. The group sponsors guest speakers on health and fitness, online "weight mate's" and has published several books. "You can even transfer your membership for the winter months if you're a snow bird," said Johnson.

A typical Tuesday night at a TOPS meeting starts with private weigh-in sessions from 6 to 6:25 p.m. Roll call is at 6:30 p.m. and members announce their progress for the week. They receive applause for doing well and encouragement if they've had a bad week.

TOPS members also participate in healthy competition, with each week's biggest weight-loser receiving a pot of small prizes. The rest of the meeting consists of discussion and education to help members achieve their goals.

For information on the local TOPS chapter, call 449-2210.

The Trane XL 80 gas furnace with multi-speed heating is a cure for the cold. Unlike most furnaces that either run at full speed or shut completely off, the XL 80 runs at a higher speed when you need more heat and at a lower speed when you need less to help maintain a constant temperature in your home. A comfortable difference you can feel. The Trane XL 80 also yields greater efficiency. Its two-stage burner and hot surface ignitor lower fuel consumption. You'll enjoy the utmost in efficiency and reliability with the Trane XL 80.

happening."

Blumkin expressed particular concern about a July application of Round-Up on the perimeter of the playing field at Elsmere Elementary School. "Eighty-two gallons of Round-Up were applied at Elsmere," Blumkin said, explaining that the active ingredient in Round-Up is glyphosate, which the Environmental Protection Agency classifies as Class C, a possible carcinogen.

"There is conflicting data about glyphosate," Blumkin said. "One study that I read showed an increase in kidney tumors in mice exposed to glyphosate. Another showed no danger. At best, the effects are unclear."

Blumkin also said that an inert ingredient in Round-Up, POEA, was shown to be more toxic than glyphosate. He was also concerned about Round-Up's persistence in the soil. "It takes 29 to 140 days for half a glyphosate application to dissipate," Blumkin said, "and in sandy soil, it can be even more persistent."

BPW member Carol Nemore said that she had read information revealing that glyphosate can persist for as long as three years, and Sorgan said that the breakdown of glyphosate did not mean it had disappeared, but that "it could be something else that may or may not be toxic."

The school district's health and safety coordinator Lawrence Gill said that when a grounds crew went to clear out the undergrowth along a fence at Elsmere School, they discovered a great deal of poison ivy. "The grounds crew didn't want to go in, and we can't put our workers at risk," Gill said. An outside applicator was called to apply Round-Up, which Gill said was actually 85.8 gallons of water to 2.2 gallons of Round-Up product. The dead brush was subsequently removed from the fence line.

"I'm confident that the area is safe," Gill said following the meeting. "As one speaker commented, there are conflicting statements and statistics. Round-Up is used by so many, so often, that if it was as deadly as people say, there would be more instances of problems."

Gill said that one positive result of this incident is that in the future any pesticide application will have to be cleared through his office. The district contracts with Cat's Eye for pesticide applications.

Gill said that he has "completed New York state courses and tests to become a certified pesticide applicator. To get an unconditional license, you have to serve a two-year apprenticeship. I have the education, and will serve the apprenticeship, although I don't intend to become an applicator," added Gill. "The apprenticeship will serve as an educational background for me, so that when I deal with our contractors, I know how to converse with them."

Gill also said that he has since spoken with the head of the crew that returned to the pesticide-affected area, and nobody has suffered any ill effects, either from the pesticide or any lingering poison ivy oils.

Dr. Meuwissen spoke about the specific types of pesticides used in schools, and said that the health effects of the pests themselves need to be considered. "What are the health effects of termites?" Meuwissen asked. "Minimal until the building falls. Some of the other pests we deal with in schools are pigeons, bees, dandelions, clover, fleas, flies, silverfish, mice and rats."

Noting that mice and rats produce anxiety in parents, Meuwissen said he looked up mice in a pediatric textbook, and was unable to find them in the index. "Mice can and do transmit disease, but it's unlikely," he said. "Cockroaches pose a problem to asthmatics, but are really only a problem in the inner cities." Meuwissen said that studies are lacking about the effects of pesticides on humans. Although there is circumstantial evidence of cancer, nerve toxicity and endocrine disruptions, "we need something like the Framingham study, which lasted 50 years," Meuwissen said, "and doesn't rely on constructed memories."

Meuwissen pointed out that pesticides are potentially more dangerous to children, who are more sensitive and lower to the ground, than adults. "Kids are developing faster than adults," he said. "Their brain cells are still actively dividing and can be poisoned more easily. Developing children are always learning."

He was particularly concerned about the link between river pollution and sex defects in fish. "In eight British rivers, fish were examined before and after sewage plants. One hundred percent of the fish down river from the plants were feminized (contained only female sex organs), and they had been exposed to dioxins, plastics, detergent and pesticides."

"We're all under attack, and kids will suffer more," Meuwissen said, praising the efforts of BPW. "We're all under the gun, unless we turn things around."

Sorgan has authored or co-authored several reports for the attorney general's office concerning pesticides and pest management, and had particular criticism for Dursban, which was used to fight termites in Bethlehem Central High School's auditorium in 1996.

"The active ingredient in Dursban is chlorpyrifos," Sorgan said. "It's an organophosphate insecticide. It's used in more than 900 products; we use between 11 and 17 million pounds of it per year. Chlorpyrifos is an acute neuro-

Girl Scout savors taste of Far East culture

By Donna J. Bell

It's a long way from Slingerlands to Saitama, Japan. But, this past summer Bethlehem Central High School senior Caitlin Isbister spent two weeks exploring the culture, food, sights and sounds of the Far East while attending Saitama International Girl Scout Camp outside of Tokyo.

"I've wanted to go to Japan since the second-grade," said Isbister, who has been a Girl Scout in the Hudson Valley Council for 10 years. That was the year she met an exchange student from Japan who was staying with her father's cousin. Isbister was fascinated by the stories the girl told about her culture.

The Girl Scout excursion to Japan was organized by trip leader Ro Koch, a volunteer with the Adirondack Council. Koch had previously attended a world camp in Switzerland called Our Chalet. While there, the Japanese contingent invited her to its own international camp.

"I decided it was feasible to bring along some girls," said Koch. Eight girls and two adults attended the camp. The girls were selected based on their level of maturity, commitment to Girl Scouting, interpersonal and communication skills, and knowledge of current events and world affairs.

Raising money for the trip involved hard work. "We earned money by selling Girl Scout cookies, having refreshment stands on the highway, selling glow-necklaces on July 4, and Girl Scout bears that we had made for us," Koch said.

Additional funds came from part-time jobs and savings. Community groups, such as the Lions Club and Pizza Hut, also donated funds.

For a year before the trip, the girls met monthly to learn some of the language, sample the food and study the songs, games, dances and culture of Japan.

"We learned the Japanese names for various objects and words like good morning, good night and I'm full," Isbister said the phrases that came in handiest were 'arigato' (thank you) and 'sumimasen' (excuse me).

She found that communicating with campers from such diverse places as Pakistan, Hong Kong, England, Korea and Taiwan was difficult.

One week was spent at the Girl Scout camp and the other with a Japanese host family. "The only things really different were sleeping on futons on the floor and the toilets," Isbister said of her host family's home.

The electronic Japanese toilets were a source of amusement. "I was definitely culture-shocked," she said. "I couldn't pinpoint one thing, but I got homesick being so far away."

Isbister was surprised to find Denny's, McDonald's and Kentucky Fried Chicken outlets in the cities. She did spot some slight variations on the menu such as teriyaki hamburgers at McDonald's and a menu item at one eatery called lasagna that wasn't even close to our version.

Her favorite Japanese food was rice. "I loved it," she said. "We had rice with every meal."

The girls also enjoyed visiting ancient temples and shrines. Isbister especially enjoyed seeing Mount Fuji.

Her favorite part of the experience, though, was meeting other girls. "I now know people in seven different countries."

Eagles suffer tough overtime loss to Silver Warriors

By Len Tarricone

On a night when they did a lot of good things offensively, it was the plays they did not make on the other side of the ball that left the Bethlehem Central High School football team on the short end of a 30-27 overtime thriller Oct. 2 against Niskayuna High School.

Tailback Dan Heenan's one-yard touchdown, followed by quarterback Pat Hughes' two-point conversion run, put Bethlehem up 27-20 with 2:30 left in the fourth quarter and in position to pull out a nice come-from-behind road win.

But the Silver Warriors took the ensuing kickoff and, operating without any timeouts, drove to the Eagle one-yard line on the strength of key third- and fourth-down passes by quarterback John Diehl.

"If we had only been able to stop one or two of those plays, the clock may have run out on them," said Eagles coach John Sodergren. Instead, tailback John Carlino punched it in with 24 seconds left, and Zach Glaser's extra point set up the overtime.

In the extra session, Bethlehem had the first crack at scoring from the ten-yard line, and started by running Heenan and fullback Vinny Livreri on the first two plays to get to the five.

On third down, Hughes tried a sprint-out pass which was broken up at the goal line. Kicker James Cooney misfired on a 22-yard field goal attempt, and then it was Niskayuna's turn.

They tried three straight running plays to gain five yards before Glaser came through on fourth down with the winning kick from 22 yards out.

The loss put a damper on a solid performance by the Eagles' ground game, which amassed 281 yards on 54 carries. Hughes gained 105 yards, including a 45-yard scamper in the second quarter, which stacked his team to a two-touchdown lead at the time.

Heenan, running hard and inside for tough yards, picked up 99 yards on 25 carries.

"His runs kept the chains moving for us," said Sodergren.

First downs were plentiful for the Eagles in a first half, which they dominated in building a 19-6 lead.

After fumbling a punt at midfield and losing possession, Bethlehem got the ball back at its own 11-yard line and proceeded to march 89 yards for the game's opening touchdown, a one-yard run by Heenan. Hughes later padded the lead with his long run, but the Silver Warriors' Chris Nappi broke free for a 60-yard touchdown to narrow the advantage to 13-6.

The Eagles mounted yet another drive, and came right back with a Hughes seven-yard scoring run to establish the halftime margin.

"We pretty much had our own way in the first half," said Sodergren, stating that "it was the best we have moved the ball all year."

It was not quite the same story after intermission, when Niskayuna began to control things, especially in the third quarter when they cut into the deficit via a 5-yard Carlino scoring run to make it 19-13.

It stood that way until midway through the fourth quarter, when Sodergren said the key sequence of the game occurred.

The Silver Warriors had a third-and-17 in Eagles' territory and threw a long pass near the goal line. Hughes came up with an interception and the Eagles took over inside their own one-yard line.

On the next play, though, they mishandled the exchange and lost a fumble, giving Niskayuna possession. Diehl snuck it in on the next play.

"We went from leading to all of a sudden being down 20-19 late in the game," said Sodergren.

Although the Eagles showed a lot of grit in coming back, in the end it was not enough.

"The opportunities were there, we just let it get away from us," Sodergren said. "They made some big plays at the right time and that was the difference."

The Bethlehem defense yielded 155 yards through the air on only five completions. They were much stronger against the run, allowing Niskayuna only 127 rushing yards for the game.

"We did some good things in this game, and we're going to build on that," Sodergren said. "We're trying to get better each week, and that's all I can ask."

The Eagles, 1-3 league, 2-3 overall, have a tough assignment coming up in their Homecoming game Oct. 9 against Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake High School.

The Spartans, 3-1 league, 3-2 overall, feature a strong rushing attack led by tailback Jon George, who Sodergren calls "one of the better backs we will face all year."

Game time will be at 7:30 p.m.

The Eagles' modified team will precede the varsity with a 4 p.m. game against Catholic Central High School.

Travel team seeks players

The Bethlehem Young Skaters Program is looking to round out rosters for its travel teams at the PeeWee and Bantam levels. Mike Mullen, president of the Bethlehem Hockey Boosters, said that the teams are looking to carry 17 players each and are short a few spots at each level.

Children must have been born between July 1, 1985 and June 30, 1987 to be eligible for PeeWee and between July 1, 1983 and June 30, 1985 to be eligible for Bantam.

The teams have been practicing since early September, and will play a 35- to 40-game schedule that will begin in late October and run until mid-March, primarily on weekends.

They will play against squads within a 100-mile radius of the Capital District, including some from Massachusetts and Vermont. Practices and home games will be held at the Albany County Hockey Facility in Colonie and at the rink at Albany Academy.

For information, call Mullen at 768-2909 or Jon Bartow at 439-5287.

Blackbirds wake up in second half

By Len Tarricone

Following a week of attention and hype surrounding one of the biggest wins in school history, the Clayton A. Bouton High School football team made the two-hour bus trip down to Taconic Hills Central High School Oct. 3 to meet the Titans and, almost predictably, came out flat.

Leading by only 12-0 at the half, the Blackbirds got down to business and scored four times after intermission to post a 40-6 victory over Taconic Hills.

"This was a strange week," said Vooheersville head coach Joe Sapienza. "With everything going on, we didn't prepare, players or coaches, as well as we have for other games."

By trouncing traditional powerhouse Watervliet, the state's second-ranked Class C team and state champions two years ago, the Blackbirds placed themselves firmly at the top of the Capital Conference's Buckley Division and found themselves in a little bit of a media spotlight.

Dealing with the distraction took a toll, and Sapienza described the team's early play against the Titans as "sluggish."

Taconic Hills moved the ball twice to the Blackbirds' 20-yard line in the first half before being stopped, and successfully kept the ball away from the Vooheersville offense.

The Blackbirds did manage short first-half touchdown runs by reserve fullback John Mosley and tailback Pat St. Denis, but it was not the usual dominance the team had displayed in outgunning opponents by 179-19 coming in.

Sapienza said "an offensive adjustment he made at the half, using tight ends Matt Newport and James Case to double-team the linebackers, opened up the attack somewhat.

It worked, as St. Denis and fellow running back Tim Beadnell broke touchdown runs of 31 and 41 yards respectively.

The pair each scored again later, St. Denis on a short run and Beadnell on a 38-yard pass from quarterback Andy Corcione.

Corcione completed three of seven passes for 96 yards and Beadnell had three rushes for 51 yards, but the offensive star, as always, was St. Denis.

The senior tailback gained 217 yards in the game, boosting his season total to 771 yards.

He has scored 13 touchdowns through the Blackbirds' first five games and will try to add that total against Chatham, who will be the Blackbirds' Homecoming opponent Oct. 10.

The Panthers come in with Brad Paul, the division's second-leading rusher behind St. Denis, and are winners of two straight.

"They have a lot of seniors, and they're getting better," said Sapienza, hopeful that the Blackbirds will be better-prepared for them than they were for Taconic Hills.

Game time is 2 p.m.

BCHS volleyball looks for consistency

By Christine Potter

The Bethlehem Central High School girls volleyball team has been up-and-down lately, splitting wins and losses since Sept. 23.

"They are a better team than the record shows," said coach Deb Elmendorf. "They need to all play their best game at the same time."

After defeating Saratoga 11-15, 15-9, 15-2 and 15-10, Sept. 23, they suffered a 15-3, 15-11 and 15-11 sweep at the hands of Shenendehowa Sept. 25.

The Sept. 28 match against Columbia resulted in a 15-11, 15-11, 15-2 win, but the Eagles fell to Burnt Hills 15-5, 15-3, 15-13 Oct. 2.

"As our team chemistry improves, it seems as though we are getting closer to reaching our goal of getting to Sectionals," said team captain Jen Siniski.

The team next plays Niskayuna Oct. 8.

Indians roll in second half

By Len Tarricone

Maybe they were waiting for Gary Jones to don helmet and pads and come off the sideline for one of his patented touchdown runs.

Something seemed to be preoccupying the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk High School Indians during a lackluster first half, before they turned it on and powered by visiting Lansingburgh High School 35-7 Oct. 2.

They did receive the terrific news earlier in the week that their injured tailback, who has been out since week three with a knee injury, sustained a sprain and not a tear of the medial collateral ligament, and can likely rejoin them before the playoffs begin in three weeks.

While Jones, who scored 34 touchdowns last year, is excited to get back and continue his senior season, he was not going to be of any help today other than in the role of cheerleader, and the Indians needed all the inspiration they could find early.

"I think we came in expecting to throw our helmets on and walk out with a win," said Ravena head coach Gary VanDerzee. "We were not emotionally ready to play the game."

That showed as Lansingburgh took the lead five minutes into the game on a Bill Freer eight-yard touchdown pass, and carried the lead through the half. By then the Indians had narrowed it to 7-6 on a second-quarter touchdown run of one yard by tailback Brad Palmer, but this team is not accustomed to being behind. In fact, it was the first time they had trailed all year.

"Our guys have to realize that we're not always going to be up by four touchdowns," said VanDerzee. "Champion teams have to respond, and I think we did a better job in the second half."

It would be hard to match the job they did defensively after the break, when the Indians' interior line, featuring Jim Glasstetter, Kevin Reinisch, Lee Kittle and Keith Albano neutralized Lansingburgh's attack, limiting it to minus-seven yards of offense.

Offensively, where VanDerzee said the Indians "shot themselves in the foot with penalties" in the first half, they finished off drives in the second, as Palmer and Albano each scored twice.

RCS girls soccer banking on youth

By Len Tarricone

Megan McClave is in her first season as coach of the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk High School girls soccer team, and her squad could not have given her a better welcoming gift.

As invitees to the Shaker High School season-opening tournament, they knocked off Averill Park High School and then rudely upset their hosts from the Suburban Council to walk away with the tournament trophy.

For a team as young as this one, which only has two seniors on its roster (one of whom is injured and unavailable to play), a start like that served as a confidence-builder for the Colonial Council schedule.

The Indians are 5-5-1 overall, with a 3-5-1 mark in the league. One of the losses was at the hands of two-time defending league champions Academy of the Holy Names and another was to undefeated Mechanicville, 2-1, on a late goal.

Early-season defections forced McClave to call players up from the junior varsity ranks in an effort to fill slots and maintain continuity and the team is dressing five ninth-graders and a sophomore this year. Eighth-grader Kelly Rysedorph starts at fullback.

The youth of this team bodes well for the future but creates a lack of experience for the present.

"We have made a lot of adjustments so far this season, and we are still jelling as a team," said McClave.

The goalkeeper, Stephanie Przybylowicz, is a freshman who McClave said shows a lot of potential and is part of a strong defense that also features co-captains Jessica McCumber and Leia Weidman.

Weidman is a versatile performer who can play offense, as well as sweeper, and when she moves up front, McClave said Katie Wilsey can fill in on defense.

Midfielder Allysa Sebert is the main offensive threat and Carrie Siy netted two goals in a recent 4-3 win over Cohoes.

McClave, who moved up to the varsity from coaching the modified team last year, would like to duplicate the successes of the Betty Faxon-coached Ravena teams of a decade ago.

She said that qualifying for the sectionals this year is a realistic goal, and if her young players progress as the season rolls on, they just might present her with a late-season surprise to match the one of the opening week.

Bethlehem Pop Warner Eagles lose a close one

A failed two-point conversion attempt in the final quarter proved to be the difference as Saratoga defeated the Bethlehem Pop Warner Senior Midget Eagles, 16-14, in Saratoga Oct. 4.

Quarterback Ryan Williams' late touchdown pass to Alfonso Hill brought the Eagles back into it after the hosts had scored twice to take a 16-8 lead.

But when Bethlehem was unable to push across the tying conversion, Saratoga maintained the advantage and held on the rest of the way.

The Eagles' Tah-Quan Jackson had put his team in front with the game's first score.

Darnell Douglass' conversion gave Bethlehem an 8-0 lead.

The Eagles, now 3-1, got strong offensive contributions from Anthony Livreri, Steven Brunner, Brian Danchetz and John Davis, while standouts on the other side of the ball included Terence Polk, John Flagg, Patrick Traynor, Shane Cassidy, Terence Stanfield and Jorge Luis Reyes.

Elsewhere in Bethlehem Pop Warner, the junior PeeWee Condors fell to the Troy Patriots, 33-12. The Condors, 1-2, got touchdown runs from David Sterrett and Patrick Gerasia, but it was not enough to overcome three defensive scores and a punt return for a touchdown by the Patriots.

Bethlehem girls tennis consistently ranks among the best

By Len Tarricone

Grace Franze originally signed on as coach of the Bethlehem Central High School girls tennis team for a two-year stint while her daughter was active with the team.

Nineteen years later she is still at it, guiding her program to exemplary success with a stress-free approach to tennis and life.

"I think it's important that, first and foremost, we have fun out there and remember that this is just a game," she said. "We try to keep a relaxed atmosphere here, have a good time, and do things to maintain a positive frame of mind."

This is not to say that her players do not work hard. The achievements of this program do not come about by sweeping off the courts, stretching out the nets, and showing up with a tightly-strung racket.

During Franze's tenure, the girls tennis team has finished first or second in their league 17 times and third the other two years.

The Eagles have captured six Section II titles during those years, including four straight in the late '70s and into the early '80s.

In the last two years, the only matches her team has lost have been to Shaker High School, the two-time defending Sectional champs. This year's team finished the regular season 8-2, including its loss to Shaker Oct. 1 in the Suburban Council tournament.

Franze pushes aside most of the credit for the team's excellence.

"In the early years, we had a lot of good players and the other schools didn't put a lot of emphasis on tennis," she said modestly.

As for the more recent success, she said that her players are "playing more during the summer than they ever have. They are competing in outside tournaments all year, many have private coaches, and they are ready to go when our season comes around."

That may be so, but just maybe Franze's personality and philosophy have something to do with the interest and enjoyment her kids demonstrate for the game. Her style is to keep the stress level to a bare minimum, and her credo stipulates to never lose sight of the things that are really important. In this era of the "win at all costs" mentality, the Eagles follow the "it doesn't matter whether you win or lose but how you play" adage.

Bethlehem's Sue Harrison returns a shot against Shaker. Len Tarricone

This year's team is one Franze said she is very proud of. With only three seniors on the squad and only one playing singles, the team dominated everyone in the league except, of course, Shaker. By beating Amsterdam and then trouncing Shenendehowa 8-1, they earned the right to face the Shaker in the league tournament finals.

Heading the roster is first singles player Sue Harrison, a junior with an 8-2 match record this season. Her only defeats came to Shaker's Nicole Mayer.

Ditto for number two, Hillary Cooley — 8-2 with two losses to the Bisons' Nancy Zeronda — and for the fourth singles player, Elka Wagle, another junior who goes into the Sectionals with an 8-2 match record, having lost only to Shaker's Tarley Stevenson.

The singles sextet is rounded out by number three, sophomore Beth Danziger, number five, eighth-grader Masha Senic, and junior Grace Tsan playing sixth.

The doubles teams consist of juniors Betsy Brookings and Katie Coulon in the top slot, seniors Natalie Govanlu and Stephanie Katz in the second position and the third duo of sophomore Ashley Ackerman and senior Heather Axford. Ackerman has combined with either Axford or Coulon in the third doubles slot to win all ten of her matches this season, including two over Shaker.

Considering that the Blue Bison have gone 87-3 so far this season in combined matches, hanging two losses on them is something to speak of.

It is just another example of Franze getting the most out of her players. Two years ago, the Eagles came into the season having lost nine of its twelve players from 1995, but the girls rose to the occasion, beat defending champ Saratoga, and finished second only to Shaker.

"You never know what kind of team you're going to have," says Franze. "This year I knew we'd be pretty good, and we've shown to be pretty tough."

Her teams always work very hard on the court and off. Bethlehem awards an academic scholarship team, whereby the combined scholastic averages of everyone on a team must be at least 90 percent. The tennis teams have qualified every single year.

As the second-strongest team coming into Sectionals this year, they will be decided underdogs against Shaker. But there's little doubt that, win or lose, this Eagles team will enjoy themselves and keep everything in perspective.

A BETHLEHEM NETWORKS PROJECT

Better safe ... than sorry!

Fall is a good time to initiate conversations with your child about safety issues. Talk about safety in a relaxed and comfortable manner so you do not frighten your son or daughter.

Does your child know what to do in case of an emergency? Does your child know how to phone 911? What would your son or daughter do if he or she got separated from you in a store or mall?

Practice emergency situations with your child. Ask him or her to role play answering the phone when you are not home. Have your child act out what to do if approached by a stranger at the playground. Practice calling 911 and remind children to stay on the line until the operator says to hang up.

Make certain your child knows his or her full name, address and phone number with area code. Have your child practice making a phone call from a public phone.

Take a walk around the neighborhood. Alert your child to places which could be dangerous such as vacant buildings and alleys. Point out places where he or she could go for help. Talk about stranger safety rules and remind your child to follow his or her instincts; if a situation seems dangerous, get away.

If your child is to be home alone make sure to leave a phone number where you can be reached, along with a neighbor's number. Discuss what your son or daughter should do if the phone rings or someone comes to the door. Help your child plan safe activities for times he or she is home alone.

Ask your child if he or she has any safety concerns. Discuss safety issues often and use teachable moments to help your child.

SPOTLIGHT ON CALENDARS ♦ ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

By Dev Tobin

Christopher Columbus' discovery of America inspires often passionate academic disputes — Was he really the first European to discover the Western Hemisphere? Was he the vanguard of evil colonial exploitation? Did he know where he was going, even after he got there?

But outside the ivory towers, one thing is beyond doubt. This pioneering Genoese seafarer — Admiral of the Ocean Sea — is a traditional symbol of pride for Italian-Americans, who celebrate their heritage every year during the early fall Columbus Day holiday weekend.

For the seventh year, local Italian-Americans will march in a Columbus Day parade and put on a street festival in Albany's Washington Park. The parade begins at South Main and Western avenues at 1 p.m. Sunday, winds down Western to Washington Park, and ends near the lakehouse, where, after a few speeches, the festival begins.

The grand marshal this year is state Supreme Court Judge Anthony V. Cardona of Westerlo, presiding justice of the Appellate Division's Third Department.

The parade's music will be highlighted by the 199th Army Band, also known as the Governor's Band, which is the premier musical group of the New York National Guard.

"We're delighted to have the Governor's Band join us this year," said Steven Longo, president of the Columbus Parade and Italian Festival.

Local bands marching in the parade include the Albany Police Pipe Band, the Christian Brothers Academy marching band, the Yankee Doodle Band, the Dixieland Ambassadors Jazz Band and high school bands from Lansingburgh, Mohonasen and Johnstown.

Also marching will be hundreds of proud members of the sponsoring organizations — the Italian-American Community Center, the West Albany Italian Benevolent Society and the Sons of Italy Lodge. The city of Albany also sponsors the events.

Whatever some professors may think of Columbus, "He's our symbol just like St. Patrick is for the Irish," said Sal D'Amore of the West Albany Italian Benevolent Society.

The parade and festival are "a time for Italian-Americans to celebrate their heritage, to get together with family and friends for a festive day in the park with tremendous food," D'Amore said.

The Albany festival, like the famous San Gennaro festival in Manhattan's Little Italy, will feature authentic Italian foods, music by the Velvet Touch and others for listening and dancing, a beer and wine garden and games and rides for the children.

For example, West Albany IBS members will be cooking up sausage and peppers, pasta fagioli, pizza and pastries, D'Amore said.

Parade/festival celebrates Italian-American heritage

The Italian-American Community Center food booth will feature eggplant parmigiana, sausage and peppers, pizza, pasta fagioli, pizza frita, mozzarella sticks, fried calamari, greens and beans and Italian submarine sandwiches, according to Tony Mirabile, who is co-chairman of the center's parade/festival committee.

"This is our seventh year, and we keep growing every year," Mirabile said.

The festival runs until 6 p.m.

Pesticides

toxin, and nonspecific symptoms include sweating, headache, nausea, dizziness, cramps, muscle twitching and weakness." Surgan pointed out that parents might not link these symptoms in their children to pesticide use.

Surgan cited a number of tests and legislative measures that increasingly take children into consideration, reminding the audience that per body weight, children breathe more air and drink more water.

In 1996, the Food Quality Protection Act required the assessment of risk to infants and children when registering a pesticide, and in 1997 the EPA withdrew some products and changed labeling on products containing chlorpyrifos.

A 1998 EPA notice gave preference to quickly moving products to the market that contain alternatives to organophosphates.

Recommendations from Surgan's office regarding pesticide use include schools' adoption of least toxic management policies and procedures to reduce or eliminate pesticide use; written pest management policies available to the public; providing advance notice to the entire school community when applying pesticides and choosing products with the lowest toxicity and exposure potential.

Claire Barnett founded Healthy Schools Network after her child suffered pesticide poisoning, and she provided practical information about how to reduce pesticide use in schools.

Barnett described Healthy

Schools Network as a statewide coalition that shares the common agenda of protecting the environmental quality of schools. The Board of Regents has adopted the group's statement that every child and school employee has the right to an environmentally safe and healthy school which is in good repair.

"Think about the friends and groups in your school building," Barnett advised. "The first person to be your friend is the custodian, since they are the practicing environmentalists in the building. Through school organizations," Barnett suggested, "you could work towards a school district policy."

"You also need to look at your school," she said. "Who's making decisions? Who's committed to getting pesticides out? How can you influence these people? Pay attention to the local structure."

Barnett said that changing policy takes thought and time, and provided sources, such as the New York Coalition Against Pesticides, the state Education Department, Cornell Cooperative Extension and Healthy Schools Network, that can help.

Barnett said that BPW needs to decide how to proceed. "You have to get into constructive action. Take the information and figure out how you can use it to advance your goals."

Blumkin encouraged those present to take an active role in convincing the district to create a plan to manage its pesticide applications. "Our schools are not a good place to have pesticide applications," he said.

Extension meeting

Cornell Cooperative Extension of Albany County will hold its annual meeting Wednesday, Oct. 28, at 5:30 p.m. at the William F. Rice Extension Center at 24 Martin Road in Voorheesville.

There will be educational displays and a light supper. Albany County Executive Michael Breslin and Cornell Cooperative Extension Director Merrill Ewert will speak.

A business meeting will conclude the evening by 8 p.m. Albany County residents 18 years of age or older are eligible to vote for members of the board of directors and various program committees. Ballots will be available the night of the meeting.

Flea market set

The Doane Stuart School Parents' Association will hold a flea market and bake sale on Saturday, Oct. 17, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the school auditorium on Route 9W.

A wide variety of items will be for sale, including books, clothes, collectibles, baked goods and pumpkins.

Proceeds benefit Parents' Association activities at the school.

Church dinner planned

Unionville Reformed Church at 1134 Delaware Turnpike will serve a family-style baked ham dinner on Saturday, Oct. 17, with servings at 4:40, 5:30 and 6:30 p.m.

The menu includes baked ham, tomato juice, raisin sauce, mashed potatoes, butternut squash, French beans, cole slaw, rolls, beverages and gingerbread with whipped cream.
