Super Bowl DWI patrol nets one felony arrest

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Police agencies throughout Albany County instituted their very first Stop DWI blanket patrol held on Super Bowl Sunday — dedicating the effort to the memory of a Voorheesville resident killed three years ago by a drunk driver in the aftermath of the big game.

In announcing the blanket patrol at a press conference in Bethlehem Town Court last Friday, county STOP DWI coordinator Denis Foley recalled the death of Charles F. Russo, a 25-year-old postal employee killed in the pre-dawn hours of Jan. 27, 1997, on his way to work.

Russo's car was struck in a head-on collision on Route 85 in Slingerlands involving a drunk driver, a Saratoga man with three prior arrests for DWI on his record.

The press conference was attended by Bethlehem police and county sheriff's personnel as well as Bethlehem Supervisor Sheila Fuller and other town officials.

The Stop DWI patrol, involving sheriff's deputies and local police agencies, was the 29th conducted by the Albany County program, but the first to kickoff on the big game day.

"It's practically become a holiday weekend, with lots of house parties and bar specials and lots of drinking — and people driving home after the game," Foley said.

This weekend's patrol, from 7 p.m. Sunday to 7 a.m. Monday, was cut short by several police agencies, including Albany and Colonie police, due to the heavy snow that began falling shortly after the game. Even so, Foley said Monday that 12 arrests were recorded countywide, as well as two arrests for driving while ability impaired (DWAI) involving drugs.

"I was shocked at the numbers, in view of the bad driving conditions and all the publicity," Foley said. "This just shows you the need for these patrols."

Bethlehem police made 14 traffic stops during the blanket patrol, and netted one felony DWI defendant — a Wynantskill man with three prior DWI arrests on his record.

Jeffrey Lawrence Weidenbacher, 47, of 23 Geiser Road, was arrested Sunday night at about 11:20 p.m. According to the police report, radar clocked Weidenbacher's vehicle operating at excessive speed on an already snow-covered Kenwood Avenue.

Officer Brian Hughes chased Weidenbacher's vehicle, which turned onto Feura Bush Road. Hughes finally pulled over Weidenbacher near Days Inn on Route 9W. With the assistance of Officer James Rexford, Hughes administered field sobriety tests and a pre-screening test and arrested Weidenbacher for DWI and speeding.

BCMS thespians rehearse for 'Alice'

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

Organized chaos reigned at the middle school last Saturday as the 33 cast members of this weekend's musical production of "Alice In Wonderland" ran through the show, tried on costumes, fiddled with the sound system and collapsed on the stage for a well-deserved lunch break just before noon.

"We started at 8:30 this morning," said music teacher Frank Leavitt, who is directing the show. "This is the only day we do such a long rehearsal."

It may be the only day with a long rehearsal, but since the show was cast at the end of October there have been three rehearsals a week.

"We've done a lot of the bigger Broadway shows in recent years, and it's hard to find shows to adapt for this age," Leavitt said. "With 'Alice in Wonderland,' we're going back to the fairy tale-ish element. There are also a limited number of characters, and the kids can do multiple roles. I also like the flexibility of this. It's a series of vignettes, and they're easier to direct. You're not moving the whole human race around at one time."

Leavitt also gave the boot to the myth that "Alice in Wonderland" is a metaphor

Bethlehem police arrest five on DWI charges

By Joseph A. Phillips

Bethlehem police arrested five individuals last week for driving while intoxicated (DWI).

On Friday, Jan. 21, shortly before 2 a.m., Officer Jeffrey Vunck observed a vehicle westbound on New Scotland Road near Price Chopper Plaza, operating with inadequate headlights.

He arrested Laura Christine Szandyba, 22, of 438 Saratoga St., Cohoes. She was ticketed for the traffic infraction and DWI. She was ordered to appear in Bethlehem Town Court on Feb. 15.

Michelle L. Lanahan-Foster, 48, of 1990 New Scotland Road, Slingerlands, was arrested at about 8:20 p.m. on Tuesday, Jan. 25, in an incident in Glenmont. Officer Peter Resnick responded to a call reporting a vehicle off the road on Route 9W near Frontage Road, and found Lanahan-Foster exiting her vehicle.

She was arrested for DWI and ordered to appear in Town Court on Feb. 15.

On Thursday, Jan. 27, at about 12:45 a.m., Officer Brian Hughes observed a vehicle speeding while eastbound near the Hess Express on New Scotland Road.

Hughes stopped the vehicle and administered field sobriety tests to Lawrence Kenneth Brady Jr., 36, of 712 Old Harbor Drive, Clifton Park. He was ticketed for speeding and charged with DWI. Brady was ordered to appear in Bethlehem Town Court on March 7.

Another DWI arrest occurred at about 3:15 a.m. on Saturday, Jan. 29, when Officer James Rexford observed a southbound vehicle on Route 9W nearly striking a snowbank on the western shoulder near Bender Lane, and then swerving back onto the road and over the center line.

He pursued the vehicle, driven by Robert Louis Wainwright, 23, of 514 Feura Bush Road, Glenmont, onto Feura Bush Road, and pulled it over near Henderson Road.

After administering sobriety tests, he arrested Wainwright for DWI, driving with a suspended license and crossing hazard markings. Released on $50 bail, he was ordered to appear in Town Court on Feb. 15.

Just before midnight on Saturday, Rexford responded to a report of a car off Route 9W near Jericho Road and found a vehicle, driven by Daniel William Zeilman, 37, of 20 Bridge St., Selkirk, crashed into a tree.

Rexford administered a pre-screening test on Zeilman, who also consented to have blood drawn by Albany County paramedics at the scene.

Zeilman was arrested for DWI and ordered to appear in Town Court on Feb. 15. He was transported to Albany Medical Center Hospital for treatment of minor injuries and released.

DWI cases adjudicated in Town Court

By Joseph A. Phillips

Four individuals facing charges of driving while intoxicated (DWI) in Bethlehem Town Court offered guilty pleas on Jan. 18 to reduced charges of driving while ability impaired (DWAI).

Raymond James Roohan, 71, of 25 Grantwood Place, Delmar, arrested Oct. 24, pleaded guilty to DWAI.

Several other charges stemming from his arrest were dismissed.

Roohan was fined $300 and a $30 state-mandated surcharge. He also had his license suspended for 90 days.

Wilfred Francis Fitzpatrick, 23, of 2060 Delaware Turnpike, Clarksville, arrested for DWI on Dec. 22, pleaded guilty to DWAI.

He was also fined $300 and a $30 surcharge and had his license suspended for 90 days.

A grand larceny charge against Fitzpatrick stemming from an earlier incident was dismissed.

Also offering a guilty plea to DWAI was Henry Pobee-Mensah, 56, of 159 Morris St., Albany, who was arrested for DWI on Christmas Day.

Pobee-Mensah's license was suspended for 90 days and he was fined $300 with a $30 surcharge.

Earl Henry Karl, 68, of 13-7 Woodlake Road, Albany, pleaded guilty to DWAI in answer to DWI charges lodged on Jan. 1.

He was fined $300 with a $30 surcharge and had his license suspended for 90 days.

All four defendants were ordered to attend a drinking-driver remediation program and a victim impact panel.

Trespassers will be prosecuted

By Joseph A. Phillips

The Jan. 20 snowmobile accident on property belonging to the Albany City Water Department in Selkirk underscored a safety and liability issue faced by larger industrial property owners in the town of Bethlehem, holders of municipal rights of way, and state and local highway officials.

They face a continuous challenge in the form of sporting enthusiasts, from off-roaders to hunters, who take to what remain fairly wide open spaces in the southern reaches of town.

According to Bethlehem police Lt. Louis Corsi, shoulders of public roads in rural areas, especially along Route 32, are also popular haunts for snowmobiles and all terrain vehicles (ATVs), in spite of the hazards they pose for traffic.

More developed areas of town such as Delmar and Elsmere see little of the problem, but Selkirk and South Bethlehem are a popular recreational ground for many, if not always a legal one.

Even fences and gates barring access don't sufficiently make the point that much of Bethlehem's more rural quarters is private land.

"We've had occasional problems on our land, with hunters, and also with off-road vehicles, like snowmobiles and ATVs," said Tony Williams, human resources leader at the Delmar Owens-Corning Fiberglass plant. "We have a pond on our grounds, and we've seen snowmobile tracks leading to it and across it. With these last few fairly warm winters, we're concerned when we see that."

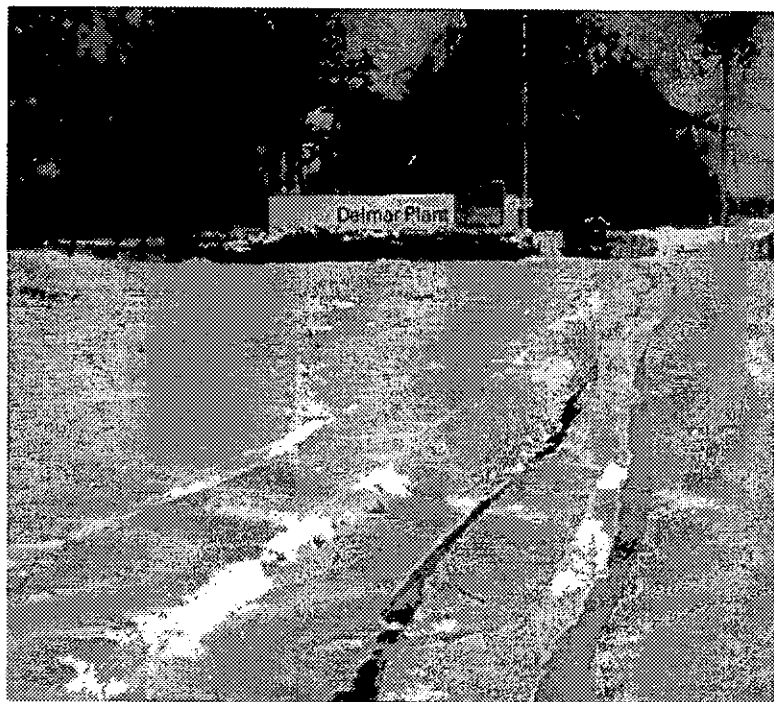

Trespassers, both literally and figuratively, are often on thin ice.

"Our concern is chiefly a liability concern," Williams added. "We're not trying to be unreasonable or mean, but to protect the safety of the public and our own exposure," he said. "Our stance at Owens Corning is that we will prosecute trespassers vigorously."

Most of the larger industrial and municipal property holders post their property as private. But, the increasing popularity of off-road vehicles has provoked more vigorous action.

Officials at Conrail in Selkirk, for instance, were concerned enough about off-roaders on their rail rights-of-way nearly two years ago that they beefed up private security patrols.

"It used to be a real problem for the railroad," said Corsi, who served as commander of the Bethlehem police substation in Selkirk until his recent promotion. "But with their patrols, it's pretty much under control now."

GE, he said, also maintains a private patrol force.

But some of the property in question is too remote to patrol. The Owens-Corning property extends from a frontage on Feura Bush Road across nearly a half-mile of undeveloped land backing onto Waldenmaier Road.

"We don't patrol it all. It's really not feasible for us to do that," Williams said.

"We've solicited the help of Bethlehem and State Police, and they have been responsive to our

DOT reschedules meeting on bypass construction

By Joseph A. Phillips

Last Tuesday's fierce nor'easter played havoc with numerous public events throughout the region — one of which was a public informational meeting scheduled by the state Department of Transportation's Region One Design Group to discuss options for construction of the Slingerlands Bypass on Route 85.

The session has been rescheduled for Thursday, Feb. 10, from 6 to 9 p.m. at Bethlehem town hall auditorium on Delaware Avenue in Delmar.

The informational session will lay out seven different design options being considered for the $15 million project.

DOT proposes to widen Route 85 and build a new extension from Maher Road to Cherry Avenue, needs when we have a situation we're aware of," he added.

But the Bethlehem force, unlike some county sheriff's patrols in the Hilltowns or the neighboring Coeymans police, lacks any back-country pursuit vehicles, Corsi said.

"It's very difficult to access that interior land, especially from a patrol car," he said.

Over a six-week period last October and November, Owens-Corning even placed an advertisement in local newspapers that read: "This is a reminder to all ... We do not allow hunting, fishing, snowmobiling or the use of all terrain vehicles on our property. Trespassers will be prosecuted."

The jury remains out, Williams said, on the effectiveness of that approach.

"Mostly it's just business as usual," said Corsi. "We get a certain amount of calls, but no particular spikes."

"It's like anything else," said Corsi. "You have to be careful what you do for recreation. In any case, it's still trespassing."

wrapping around behind Price Chopper Plaza and bypassing a two-lane portion of New Scotland Road which intersects Route 85.

Design engineers will outline the basics of the proposals and conduct a brief question-and-answer session, after which the meeting will then revert to an open house format, with design drawings and DOT staff on hand to answer questions.

DOT will also accept comments by telephone or in writing from those unable to attend the meeting.

To comment, call 473-7034 during weekday business hours, or write to Robert Cherry, Program Manager, NYSDOT Region One Design Group, 84 Holland Ave., Albany 12208.

BCHS senior becomes finalist in talent search

By Katherine McCarthy

Bethlehem Central High School senior Gordon Schmidt is one of only 40 seniors nationwide to be named a finalist in the Intel Science Talent Search.

In 1998, Intel took over sponsorship of the Westinghouse Science Talent Search, known since 1942 as the nation's most highly regarded pre-college science contest.

Schmidt was first chosen as one of 300 semifinalists for his research paper, "Relationship Between Attachment Style and Distrust of Societal Groups." He has been a student in science teacher George Seymour's research science class for the past three years, during which time he worked on his award-winning paper.

"The whole trust issue is very interesting," Schmidt said. "While I was looking up articles about trust, I didn't find anything about trust towards groups. So I tied together attachment and trust."

"An attachment style is the closeness a person feels, usually towards their parents, or maybe special adults. People are either secure in their attachments, or insecure," Schmidt said.

"People with secure attachments trust themselves and others. There are various levels of insecure attachments. There's dismissive, where people trust themselves but not others; ambivalent, where they trust others, but not themselves; and fearful, where they trust nothing," he added.

"I wondered how this attachment style would affect a person's trust of groups, like government or religion," Schmidt said. "Not all of our relationships are personal, and we're not creating bonds with everyone we come in contact with. I thought a person's attachment style would affect how they feel about groups."

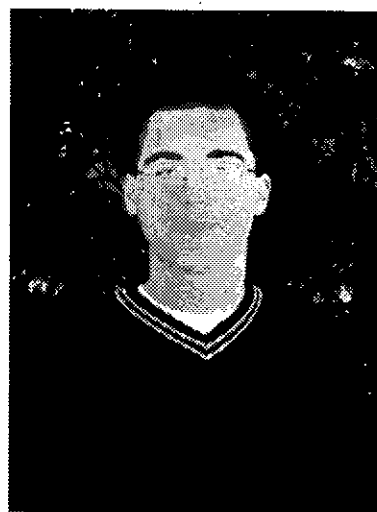

Schmidt administered a survey to 106 of last year's freshman, using the Bartholomew Trust Scale, to measure all four permutations of attachment style. He then made up three measures to gauge people's trust levels. He had students respond to a situation, a statement (i.e., government always tells the truth), and presented a list of groups for students to indicate a trust level. He used the established Rotter Trust Scale to measure general trust levels and to show that the results had a scientific basis.

"I found some interesting things, mainly that people with a dismissive attachment style are the most different from those with any of the other attachment styles," Schmidt said.

Schmidt is the second Bethlehem student to be an Intel finalist; last year, Cullen Blake's "Analysis of Scuti Variable Star V0830 Herculis" put him in the finalist category. This year, Blake is studying astrophysics at Princeton University.

"I feel like we've had lightning hit it twice," Seymour said of Schmidt's win. "These are talented kids."

Seymour pointed out that Schmidt is the only New York finalist who doesn't live in New

Gordon Schmidt

York City or its suburbs.

With both Schmidt and Blake, Seymour said, the originality of their projects probably impressed the Intel judges. "Intel recognizes students who have done unique work, and come up with their own ideas. It also shows that they have the capability to go into research."

Seymour was modest about the role his science research class played, saying it allows students to work on their papers. He said that both Blake and Schmidt worked with outside mentors on their projects. Jim Jaccard of the University at Albany's psychology department worked with Schmidt on the statistical analysis portion of his project, and provided feedback on the paper itself.

The Intel Science Talent Search carries hefty rewards. For being a semifinalist, Schmidt received $1,000, as did Bethlehem Central High School. He will spend the better part of a week in Washington, D.C., with other Intel finalists who will present their papers and go through a series of interviews.

The trip will culminate in a black-tie dinner on March 13 where the top 10 winners will be announced.

Schmidt will receive a minimum prize of $5,000, along with an Intel Pentium III processor-based mobile computer. The top 10 winners will receive scholarships ranging from $20,000 to $100,000.

Schmidt is the son of Eugene and Priscilla Schmidt of Selkirk, and has a 14-year-old sister Brenda. He attended Glenmont Elementary School and Bethlehem Central Middle School.

A well-rounded student, Schmidt is president of the Model United Nations, editor of The Thinking Reed, founder of the Bethlehem Central Official Fake Book of the Year Club, and the Official Fake Yearbook.

He also plays in the Symphonic Select Band, contributes to The Eagle Eye, is a member of the student council and student senate, and is the president of this year's Junior Achievement company.

Schmidt plans to study psychology and business, and his first choice for college is the University of Pennsylvania. New York University has offered him a full scholarship plus a $5,000 stipend, which he is considering.

Information on Schmidt and the Intel Science Talent Search is available online at www.sciserv.org.

BCHS student named HOBY rep

Ellen Bandel, a sophomore at Bethlehem Central High School, has been selected as the school's student representative to Hugh O'Brian Youth (HOBY) Leadership.

The nonprofit organization strives to recognize and encourage the potential for leadership among high school students nationwide.

Bandel will attend a HOBY leadership seminar this spring.

RCS sets orientation

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk school district will hold a ninth-grade orientation program today, Feb. 2, at 7 p.m. for students who will be attending RCS Senior High School in September.

Parents will meet with guidance counselors, coordinators and teachers to learn about educational programs, extracurricular activities and supportive learning environment.

Students will tour the building and meet with students to discuss programs, activities and high school life.

Starfish swim club to offer lessons

The Albany-Voorheesville Starfish Swim Club offers swimming lessons for children age 4 to 14.

Lessons will be held Thursday and Friday evenings, starting Feb. 10, at Clayton A. Bouton Jr./Sr. High School in Voorheesville. There are 10 lessons in each series, but schedules vary based on holidays and other limits on pool availability.

Classes are 45-minutes long, and individual classes are kept small to maximize instruction.

For information, call 765-4267.

BCHS student wins photography contest

A photograph taken by Bethlehem Central High School student Rebecca Maskin was chosen by "Parade Magazine" as one of its 100 best photos of 1999.

The annual contest receives more than 200,000 entries from across the nation.

Maskin, a senior, is considering pursuing a career in photography.

Harborside music session highlights off-season Irish sojourn

By Katherine McCarthy

We revel in the familiarity of Crookhaven, an Irish village in southwest Cork, so different from our own home; the place whence my husband's grandfather emigrated and to which we return as often as we can.

hills weren't quite as green as in the summer, and though the heather didn't bloom, narcissus does at this far northern latitude, and a few flowers ignored the January date to promise spring.

We did the things we usually do in the summer, taking care only to seize the day before darkness arrived, a good four hours earlier than in August.

We went first to our beloved Three Castle Head, where the ruined 13th century fortress of the O'Mahoney clan still guards the glen that overlooks the Atlantic Ocean. We walked the beaches on a day so brilliant that in a sheltered cove, the boys took off their boots and pants and splashed in frigid waters.

We walked to the Brow Head, past the farm Timothy McCarthy left for America, to the Marconi Tower, where we imagined transatlantic messages being sent. On our way back down, we noticed movement in Galley Cove, and watched scores of sea trout leap and twist out of the water.

We couldn't convince Lanna's golden retriever to go catch one for us, and when we returned with our fishing rods, the trout were impervious to the only bait we could find — raw breakfast sausage. No matter; we were content just to watch them, and happy to poke at the shell of a long-departed sea turtle further up the beach.

Crookhaven's true magic, though, is what it does to our family; it slows us down. We sleep late, read books, and enjoy dinners unpressured by late workdays or the need to do homework.

Our most pressing priority in an Irish day is deciding what time to go to O'Sullivan's Pub for a bowl of seafood chowder.

Seven-year-old Cormac, in fact, proclaimed O'Sullivan's his only goal when we were discussing what we wanted to do during our brief vacation.

"I only want to go to the pub every day," he said, "have seafood chowder and play pool."

"Well, we can do that," I told him, "but that's not really an activity."

"No," 9-year-old Christopher said, "but it's culture."

Culture at its finest, I thought, as we pulled up stools at one of the low tables, and looked out the big picture windows to the harbor. Two dogs lay in front of a stone fireplace, the peat fire steaming dampness from their fur.

Rose brought us our chowder, and Dermot stopped to ask 'How are you, boys and girls?' Before we left, we'd chatted and laughed and joked with everybody there.

In the summer, there are songs in the pub, but on this trip, we'd saved the music for Chris' birthday party on Friday night. He was touched and delighted by the guests who'd traveled from Cork, Cashel, Dublin, Belfast and London to celebrate the milestone. There was turkey and ham and whiskey and beer, and Kevin shot off fireworks.

Finally, around midnight, Jimmy Burke took out his accordion and we all settled in for the truest of Irish delights—a mighty session. Everyone called for "the Three Tenors" and Chris, Joe and Willy cradled their pints of beer and sang "Danny Boy."

Willy sang "The Glens," Joe sang "Sweet Sixteen," Ina sang a heartbreaker about lost love, and her daughter Rachel made us laugh with "Patricia the Stripper." Denis sang, then brought tears of laughter to our eyes with his story about knickers. And we took courage from Stan Rogers' song "The Mary Ellen Carter," roaring that no matter what we'd lost, we'd all rise again. One song faded into another, and conversation mingled with the warmth of the room till we were sated with life and the delight of the moment.

When it was time to leave Crookhaven, none of us wanted to go. I stood alone in the driveway and wept at the sunset, remembering the last time we were there and my brother-in-law Tim was still alive.

I wept at the winter light slanting across the harbor, and the quiet that soothes your bones. Cormac cried at leaving Aunt Lanna and her dog, and Christopher put forth his plan to live with his aunt, and work in the grocery until he could work in the pub.

We pulled away into the gathering dark, not quite believing we'd been there, and knowing that nothing could keep us from coming back.

COMMENTARY:

Mom's the Word

A trip for Chris' 40th birthday was our latest reason to go, a chance to enjoy the off-season quiet.

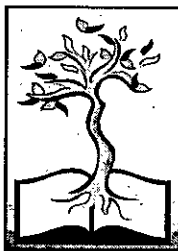

We know Crookhaven in August, when holiday-makers increase the village's population of 35 to more than 3000. What, we thought, would it be like in January, when kids are in school, and the few adults around are caught up in the workaday world? How would the weather—a source of uncertainty even in August—be?

In a worst-case scenario, we would just take out the books and board games and sit in Aunt Lanna's living room, looking out at the beautiful harbor.

But Crookhaven is magic, and the temperatures soared into the low '50s and the sun made the sea and the sky a seamless blue. The

Matters of Opinion

Obey posted signs

The letter from Normanside Country Club manager Robert Conti last week about the inappropriateness of residents using private property for personal recreation raises some legitimate legal and safety concerns.

In the same edition, we ran an article on two snowmobilers who were recently arrested for trespassing.

Editorials

Most private lands, including Normanside, are posted areas that essentially mean — keep out. Apparently there is widespread violation of posted areas in the town of Bethlehem.

In the Selkirk area of town, for example, not far from where the snowmobilers were arrested, there have been a number of complaints from residents about noise from snowmobiles and all terrain vehicles. Industries in that area, which is also posted, have also expressed concern, mainly because of liability questions in the event of an accident.

These concerns are legitimate and need to be addressed. Bethlehem police have reported a number of complaints regarding noise and trespassing, but it is difficult for them to pursue the alleged violators, who head for the hills, where police vehicles are unable to navigate.

Recreational vehicle users need to respect the law and stay away from posted areas. It is not only a violation of the law, but potentially hazardous for snowmobile operators as evidenced by the recent incident near Elm Estates.

Grant to aid 5 Rivers

New York state's Environmental Protection Fund will provide Five Rivers Environmental Education Center with a much-needed $700,000 shot in the arm for infrastructure additions and renovations.

The money will be dedicated to two major projects — water and sewer line connections and a new restroom facility.

With the number of people visiting the center growing every year, projects like these to upgrade the facility are essential. Five Rivers draws many thousands of visitors from throughout the region and provides thousands of school children with an opportunity to experience nature's bounty firsthand.

Anyone who has walked its trails, watched its birds or studied various animal habitats in the center's woods and ponds knows what a treasure Five Rivers is.

Five Rivers Ltd., the center's nonprofit support group, deserves much credit for its work to enhance the center, and now with these renovations, the center will move into the new millennium in style.

Were good old days really sweeter?

By Bill Fonda

The writer is editor of the Clifton Park Spotlight.

The other day, my brother Dan and I were eating lunch with our father at our parents' house when our dad brought up a recent bomb threat at Schoharie High School, where all three of us went to school and Dan now works as a seventh-grade social studies teacher.

Dan wasn't sure if the severity of the incident warranted the response to it. He said someone wrote on the bathroom wall that the school would blow up on Friday, and it caused a lot of hullabaloo.

Police were called in; the school held lockdown drills, and teachers who had free periods were called on to escort students to the bathroom.

He added — with no offense intended to his newspaper editor brother sitting across the table — that the local newspaper got hold of it and made a big deal out of the situation, as he said newspapers are wont to do.

Our mother, listening in the living room, had a different view. She said that schools have to take everything seriously, because how can you know what's a hoax and what isn't?

I didn't say anything because there was nothing I could add to her argument, but I agreed with her. Much to my surprise, the words "especially after Columbine" never entered the conversation. Maybe I've just interviewed too many school officials.

I mentioned that a Shenendehowa High School student was caught bringing a gun to school this year, but fortunately, no one was hurt.

Then my dad chimed in that when he went to school, students wanting to fix their guns during shop class just brought them into school, and there was never a problem.

I must confess, I was surprised when my father said that. Needless to say, you would be arrested very quickly for such a thing now, regardless of the reason. It wasn't like he went to school just after the Revolutionary War, either; he's not even 50 yet.

Point of View

The whole conversation got me to thinking that life was so much simpler when I was in high school. The bathroom graffiti fell into one of two categories — the virtue (or lack thereof) of the girls in the school and unprintable rhymes relating to the reason we were in the bathroom in the first place.

When students couldn't get along, they fought. Given that Schoharie hasn't produced any boxing champions yet, most of the fights were more bluff and bluster than real fisticuffs, and everybody knew which students to avoid, and whose girlfriends not to breathe near. Since I wasn't a big kid, I especially knew.

I remember going to a show at the school several years back, and a friend and I were chatting in the hallway when we saw a sign for the peer mediation program, which I see all the time now in schools but was new to Schoharie back then.

I brought up a student that I had problems with in school, and said, "Can you imagine if they got the two of us together? I'd say, 'I hate his guts,' and he'd say, 'I hate his guts.'" We both laughed at the silliness of it all.

But was it really that simple even just over a decade ago? (I graduated in 1990).

I vaguely remember some kind of bomb threat when I was in elementary school, although nothing ever came of it. Were there kids who brought knives to school, and no one ever knew it? Guns, even?

Perhaps Dan was right. Heck, 40 years ago students used to prepare for atomic bombs, although I never have figured out how anyone thought a desk was going to protect against immediate vaporization.

When Columbine happened — I can't help but mention it — and everyone was trying to figure out why these two kids shot up the school and tried to blow it up, I said their parents did a poor job. How could they not know that their sons were stockpiling weapons and building bombs? Were they not paying attention?

While I still happen to think that Eric Harris' and Dylan Klebold's parents lived at least partially with their heads someplace heads were never meant to go, I'd forgotten over time just how resourceful children are when they don't want their parents to know something.

If I was in a roomful of people and asked everyone who never hid something from their parents to stand up, I doubt I'd have to tell anyone to sit down.

Of course, being perfect little angels, Dan and I never hid anything. That's as much as I can say because our mother is a subscriber, and might actually read this.

The more I think about it, all this talk about bombs and guns and hiding stuff made me realize that the person who first said, "The older I get, the better I was" was really onto something. Who doesn't harken back to the "the good old days?"

I was recently talking to "Mom's the Word" columnist Kathy McCarthy, and I had an answer to a question raised in her column from the week before about when people stopped walking to and from school.

My reply was, "When their kids go to school."

I think that when I have children, I'll have to drive them back and forth to school so I can tell them about my days of actually having to ride the school bus until I got my driver's license when I was a senior in high school.

If that doesn't work, I'll tell them how tough it was actually having to play video games with the pictures on the television screen instead of the virtual reality chambers that may be in vogue then.

A few years ago, during my student-advancing days at the University at Albany, my officemates and I used to constantly gripe about how lazy students were, how no one must have ever given them "no" for an answer, how they wanted everything to be handed to them.

I once had a student threaten to sic her lawyer on me if she didn't get the classes she wanted because I wouldn't let her sign up after missing a required meeting, even though she admitted not reading the letter sent to students saying that the meeting was mandatory.

She didn't get all of the classes; no subpoenas have been served, and I'm not losing sleep thinking I'll get one.

At some point during one of these conversations, the words "kids these days" actually crossed my lips, a ludicrous statement for reasons other than the fact that I was all of 22 or 23 years old at the time.

It's a cinch that in the hunting-and-gathering days, a parent was ticked off because one of the children wanted some meat without participating in any of the hunting.

I can hear it now, "When I was your age, we had to walk uphill both ways in the desert for 100 miles just to catch dinner! We didn't even have caves! We had to sleep under bushes and hope we didn't get eaten!"

So the way I see it, one of two things could be true.

First, Billy Joel could have been right on the button when he sang, "The good old days weren't always good, and tomorrow ain't as bad as it seems."

Or, second, I could just be getting old before my time.

Bethlehem needs to expand business tax base

Editor, The Spotlight:

In the past few weeks, The Spotlight published an article by Dr. Les Loomis, superintendent of the Bethlehem School District, concerning the impact rapid residential development is having on the school district budget and that it will require a significant increase in school taxes. There was also an editorial critical of the NIMBY (not in my back yard) attitude of some residents concerning retail, commercial and industrial development in close proximity to their homes.

Both Dr. Loomis and The Spotlight make valid points. We need reasonable residential growth, and we need to expand our non-residential tax base.

Rapid residential growth has brought large numbers of students into our school district, which has increased the need for additional tax revenues and at the same time has reduced the value of older homes, which in turn reduces tax revenue from these properties.

Although the term NIMBY has come to identify those who do not want any type of commercial or industrial development located in their area of town, who among us would want a truck stop or gas station built in close proximity to their home?

Over the past few years, we have heard concerns of the significant tax increases we face as residents of the school district and a call for more commercial development and less residential development, yet no one has addressed the problem.

The use of every inch of land in our town is controlled by the town zoning code and zoning map. These were, primarily, developed 20 years ago, are antiquated and no longer address the land use issues we face today and are not consistent with good land use management principles.

The LUMAC land use management plan, which was completed five years ago recommended that our zoning code and map be revised. Last July, the town planning board wrote to the town board recommending that the code and map be revised using LUMAC as a guide, yet nothing happened, and we continue to complain about the effect these inadequate codes have on land use.

A revised zoning code and zoning map could create positive effects.

- Moderate residential growth.
- Provide areas that could be commercially and industrially developed without conflicting with other land uses.
- Provide for conservation of open space.
- Provide for the development of infrastructure, particularly roads, sidewalks and bike paths for safe pedestrian and vehicular traffic.

• Provide standards for the design of retail and commercial areas including such things as lights, signs and landscaping.

We can continue to develop it as we have in the past and complain about the negative impact it has on us, or we can, as individuals and groups press for and support the rezoning of our town. Obviously, I support the latter.

OLDER AND HAPPIER

If you think old age fosters a grumpy disposition and a lingering desire to live in the past, shed those stereotypical images. When researchers at Fordham University analyzed surveys of 2,727 people between ages 25 and 74, they found that people over the age of 57 were slightly more likely to report feeling happy. Similarly, a professor at Stanford University has found that older people are more likely to live in the present than younger people. Older individuals were found to focus on the here and now and to direct their energies towards those activities that would nourish them emotionally. They spent more time with family and friends in an effort to increase the quality of their existing relationships. Focusing on what you love and those whom you love always supports the heart and having ease of well-being can do wonders for the body as well. At GOOD SAMARITAN LUTHERAN HEALTH CARE CENTER, 125 Rockefeller Road, we urge you to come talk to us about our residential living options. We offer nursing supervision and professional care for residents needing a variety of medical services. Call 439-8116 for more information.

P.S. The emerging research about the positive aspects of aging should give us all a sense of optimism about getting old.

Matters of Opinion

Make room for commercial growth

Editor, The Spotlight:

I want to thank Dr. Les Loomis for his article in The Spotlight detailing how much it costs the Bethlehem school district taxpayers for each new child in our schools and how it's paid for.

His emphasis on the severe need for more business and commercial development couldn't be more timely with the new proposal for a large retail development on Route 9W across from the petrol station. This project's approval is crucial to help offset our huge loss of Niagara Mohawk's $257 million assessment. The new owners of the property would pay only $46 million, which will likely be their assessment if the sale is finalized, leaving our district with a $211 million tax base to make up.

The subdivisions going up all over town are overcrowding our schools. They need to be stopped at least until more commercial property can be approved. I don't mean medical facilities or senior citizen housing, which generally receive an exemption from school taxes and part of their property taxes.

Some members of the town board have said recently that they agree with the need for more business and commercial property and less residential property. The new mall proposed for Route 9W is a great place to start.

Please don't allow a handful of naysayers to scare off something the town desperately needs to keep a lid on school taxes as the NIMBYs did for years blocking Price Chopper.

Full-time mom upset by lack of reciprocity

Editor, The Spotlight:

Raising two children is what I do. It is a job that I take more seriously than any deadline I encountered while working at law offices and corporate headquarters.

The values we teach our children by example are what they will carry with them for the rest of their lives. I noticed a great consistency in the social lives of my children.

We invite other children to sleep over, eat over, stay over, to the movies, day trips, vacations and restaurants. They come willingly and have a wonderful time. Yet there is little, if any, reciprocity.

It seems that other parents will happily accept an invitation without ever intending to return it. I can't help it. I am a nice person, I truly have always found children magical. How can I keep explaining to my daughters that other parents just "don't think" to invite my kids to do things with them.

Is it intentional? Is it ignorance of manners? Is it that they are just "too busy?"

I am becoming more than just a tad annoyed. Everyone is busy, unless you are in a coma. Attention parents: if you want your children to grow up with common decency and manners, than show them that you have the same.

Don't accept an invitation on behalf of your children unless you intend to reciprocate. It teaches narcissism, greed, apathy and the worst sin of all — bad manners!

BCHS grad seeks help with Habitat project

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am currently a sophomore at College of the Holy Cross and have recently been accepted to participate in the school's Habitat for Humanity program the week of March 5.

After a competitive application process, I have been chosen to travel to Almost Heaven, W.Va., to participate in the Collegiate Challenge.

This program involves high school and college students throughout the nation from February through May in practicing the mission of Habitat for Humanity.

As you may know, Habitat for Humanity is a nonprofit housing ministry that works to eliminate substandard housing on an international level. In West Virginia, I will be working with the future homeowners of a new house.

Habitat for Humanity empowers families by making them a part of the entire housing process, therefore providing not simply a handout, but a hand-up. This volunteer opportunity will afford me the chance to have a truly hands-on spring break, making a difference in the lives of a family as well as my own.

Given the fact that this is a nonprofit organization, as a participant I will be fund-raising $250 to cover the cost of a donation to the host affiliate, construction materials, food and housing expenses for the week.

Any support you could offer in helping me to achieve this goal would be greatly appreciated. I would appreciate any support you could give me. Donations are tax deductible.

Thank you for your kindness, and I will be sure to update you on how the trip goes. Contributions can be sent to Matthew Reuter, 99 Winne Road, Delmar 12054

Editor, The Spotlight:

On Jan. 21, I witnessed one of the finest team efforts ever displayed on a basketball court. The Lady Eagles basketball team has just won a pivotal game against the Lady Spartans of Burnt Hills.

Five players scored in double figures, which alone indicated unselfish play and team work.

Throughout the game, at any given moment, a different player would step up her game and make a significant contribution.

There was balance in scoring, rebounding and assists.

A man-to-man defense in the second half proved to be one that the Spartans had difficulty penetrating.

With full team support and a highly vocal girls junior varsity team shouting encouragement, the Lady Eagles soared to victory.

Whether I see another point scored, another assist, another rebound or another steal, it may not matter, because I have seen the way basketball was meant to be played.

Congratulations to Coach Wise, Coach Hooper and the Lady Eagles.

Visit Bethlehem's treasures via special exhibit

Did you know that Bethlehem was Henry Hudson's first stop on his exploration of the Hudson River? The town's long history was tied with that of Watervliet until 1793, when Bethlehem set of Elmwood Cemetery, pages from an 1869 Declaration of Intention of citizenship, and some interesting photographs.

The exhibit sets the stage for a Bethlehem Treasures program next month that centers on the history of Normansville and efforts to preserve the old turnpike's yellow bricks.

The Hall of Records has other early maps and records of the town, including census, naturalization and assessment rolls. Located on South Pearl Street in Albany, it is open to the public on weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. For information, call 447-4500.

The Bethlehem Treasures theme continues with Marie Carlson's exhibit "Family Treasures and Family History." Along-time Delmar resident, Carlson is the library's genealogy and local history specialist. You can find out how to research the history of Bethlehem and its inhabitants by visiting the genealogy/local history page on our Web site at <http://www.uhls.org/bethlehem>.

"Bright Moments," digital images by Joseph Schuyler, are displayed in the library's southwest gallery this month. Using the computer as a darkroom, Schuyler "extends the controls available to the traditional photographic process."

Subjects include portraits, performances, architecture, nature, and macrophotography. According to Schuyler, the photos of flowers are especially interesting because they take advantage of the digital camera's ability to capture natural subjects from previously unattainable viewpoints.

Schuyler is the owner of Schuyler Photography in Albany. His photographs have appeared in many periodicals, including The New York Times, Newsday, The Christian Science Monitor, American Theater, and New York Magazine. Recent exhibit sites include the Rice Gallery, the Albany Center Gallery and the Rensselaerville Institute.

Paintings by John L. Moore are displayed in the northwest gallery. Working from his own photographs, Moore believes that artists who choose to depict the world realistically seek to share their delight in intimate, everyday life.

According to Moore, art distinguishes itself from mere record-keeping in that "The artistry comes in selecting, distilling, emphasizing ... with grace and style."

After a career doing graphics work for the government — specifically the Army, the aerospace industry and for the late Gov. Nelson Rockefeller — Moore opened his own graphic design office in Delmar. Now retired, he devotes his talents to painting.

In keeping with the "Heritage and Horizons" theme for this year, the library staff honors Black History Month with February's bulletin board display.

Emma Loy-Santelli's dinosaurs (miniatures, of course — youth services area isn't big enough for the real ones) round out this month's exhibits.

Bethlehem library buys property

Bethlehem Public Library Director Nancy Pieri recently announced that the library has purchased the property at 51 Borthwick Ave. in Delmar.

According to Pieri, all available space at the library is dedicated to patron use. The site at 51 Borthwick will be used for off-site storage, office space and custodial supplies.

"Because we are meeting the needs of nearly 350,000 patrons a year, we're simply bursting at the seams. Thanks to the purchase of this property, we have more of the space we desperately need," Pieri said.

The property closing was held on Jan. 26.

Five Rivers slates program on crows

Five Rivers Environmental Education Center will present a program on the life of the crow on Saturday, Feb. 12, at 2 p.m. on Game Farm Road in Delmar.

Crows are social birds that "speak" to each other through actions as well as calls.

A center naturalist will lead the walk. The program is free, and participants should dress for the outdoors.

For information, call Five Rivers at 475-0291.

Elks host bingo

Bethlehem Elks Lodge 2233 at 1016 River Road in Selkirk hosts bingo every Tuesday at 7 p.m. Doors open at 5 p.m., and food is available.

up shop as a separate township, quickly becoming a leader in agriculture and cloth production.

The Albany County Hall of Records has graciously tailored a special library exhibit that highlights some of the town's history. "Bethlehem: Historic Township, Picturesque Drive" displays an 1804 map of the Albany/Bethlehem Turnpike, an 1860 map

Gem Talk

A PASSION FOR PURPLE

Those born during month of February had best have a passion for purple, because no other gemstone can match the rich deep purple of a well-colored amethyst, the birthstone for February. Until a large South American deposit of amethyst was discovered in 1760 or thereabouts, this purple variety of crystalline quartz ranked among the most precious gemstones. "A-methystos" means "not tipsy" in Greek, and the name was given to the gemstone in the belief that it could be worn to ward off drunkenness. Whatever its supposed mystical properties, amethyst is a remarkably beautiful gemstone that is sure to garner attention. Its purple color is, at once, both evocatively romantic and cutting-edge contemporary.

Throughout civilization, gems have held a fascination for man. Their mystery and romance go back as far as we can trace - to primitive days when stones were coveted as charms or amulets to ward off evil. Today, beautiful gemstones have a power all their own, the power to express feelings and emotions. Do you have something to say? Say it with this month's birthstone, amethyst, or any of our other stunning gemstones at JOYELLES JEWELERS. We're located at 318 Delaware Avenue, in the Main Square Shoppes.

Phone • 439-9993

P.S. Amethyst is dichroic, showing a bluish or reddish purple tinge when viewed from different angles.

Friends look to spring

The Friends of the Library are busy planning spring activities. The group provides funding for many of the extras library patrons enjoy so much.

Money raised through the annual book sale and drawing goes towards our summer concerts, other adult programs and the purchase of library equipment and books.

Library lovers who would like to know more about this organization are invited to attend meetings the second Monday of the month at 7:30 p.m.

If you are already a member, call Friends' president Karla Flegel and volunteer.

Thanks to Margaret Adkins for organizing program refreshments. Terri Berger, Rosemary McGraw, Polly Joyce and Linda Pasquale all contributed homemade cookies for last week's Duke Ellington program, which was a big success. Thanks again.

In case of emergency or bad weather, closings will be recorded on the library answering machine, so if you are in doubt — call ahead to make sure that we are open. The library does not close in conjunction with school closings — we try to remain open if it is reasonable to do so.

You can still sign up for the February book discussion which meets on the 16th at 7 p.m. to discuss The Patron Saint of Liars.

No sign-up is necessary for Lifestories memory writing workshop which meets at 10 a.m. or the watercolor painting group at 2 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 5. Newcomers are welcome.

Indian wrestlers pin down tournament victory

By Noah Feit

After a slow start to the 1999-2000 season, the varsity wrestling team from Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central High School has caught fire. With a win over Lansingburgh and an impressive three match sweep in last weekend's Quadrangular tournament, the young Indians have evened their season record at 5-5-1.

"With two seniors and three juniors we are a very young team," head coach John Vishneowski said. "We knew that there would be growing pains but we're progressing at a nice pace. With tremendous effort, we will be successful, and I expect to finish in the upper half of the council."

Thus far, the Indians have been led by light weights C.J. Haslam, Sam Lambert, Eric Pregent and the undefeated Jared Lackie. All four turned in impressive performances in the RCS grapplers recent thumping of rival Lansingburgh. The final results of that match are:

- RCS (R) 60, Lansingburgh (L) 24
- 103 - Haslam (R) by forfeit.
- 112 - Adam Willetts (L) pinned Lambert, 2:41.
- 119 - Pregent (R) by forfeit.
- 125 - Chris Alberts (R) by forfeit.
- 130 - Mike Carter (L) pinned Sam Correll, :45.
- 135 - Landon Kier (R) pinned Tom Kelly, 3:35.
- 140 - John Dibble (R) pinned Matt Valyou, 5:53.
- 145 - Justin Schipano (R) pinned Doug Jensen, 2:36.
- 152 - Matt Deer (R) pinned Adam Toftgaard, :51.
- 160 - Seth Houle (R) pinned Stephane Pinchet, :47.
- 171 - Lackie (R) pinned Rick Rehonis, 1:47.
- 189 - Austin Martin (R) pinned

- Rob Perreault, 1:58.
- 215 - Ryan Sloan (L) pinned John Aaron Covey, 1:38.
- 275 - Jeremy Parent (L) pinned Chad Meliak, 1:22.

At the Quadrangular Tournament, the Indians were impressive in three consecutive triumphs over Johnstown, Maple Hill and Fonda. The final results of those three matches are:

- RCS 54, Johnstown (J) 24
- 103 - Lambert (R) by forfeit.
- 112 - Pregent (R) pinned Rory Blackwood, 1:01.
- 119 - Alberts (R) pinned James Ellis, :33.
- 125 - Kevin Anderson (J) by forfeit.
- 130 - Correll (R) pinned Andy Curtain, 1:05.
- 135 - Zach Byron (J) pinned Kier, 1:08.
- 140 - Dibble (R) pinned Matt Subik, 3:11.

Eagles runner sets new record

At the recent Yale Invitational in New Haven, Conn., Bethlehem Central High School senior Lee Ansaldo turned in a record breaking performance.

With blinding speed, the indoor track star broke the Section II record in the 55-meter dash. His 6.37 time not only topped the previous Section II best; it is the second fastest time recorded in the nation this season.

Ansaldo, who will attend Colgate after graduation, captured first place in the 45-meter dash with a 5.5 time at the Engineer Games at RPI on Jan. 29.

Physically Speaking

BPT
 by Nick Valenze, P.T.

THE ROAD BACK

If your exercise routine has been interrupted by a sprain or strain, you should avoid the temptation to get back into the full swing of things right away. Your brain may be ready to go, but your body requires adequate recovery time to get back into pre-injury shape. With this in mind, definitely wait until all pain and swelling are gone before attempting to exercise again. And, once you do begin, start back slowly. If you have been on the sidelines for three weeks or longer, conduct your comeback at a third to half the time and effort that you were working at before the injury. Then, build gradually, increasing the amount by no more than 10% each week.

Of course, an injury doesn't mean sitting on the bench for the duration of the healing process. This is a great time to work other areas, and to strengthen the muscles surrounding the injury to prevent a reoccurrence. We offer a wide range of physical therapy techniques, including ultra sound and massage. Ask your physician for a referral, or call the number listed below to learn more about rehabilitation services. For your convenience, we provide evening treatment hours, free parking, and wheelchair access.

Recreation and Historic Preservation or by the Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC).

They range from a $2.2 million restoration project at Jones Beach on Long Island to a $15,000 award for three archaeological inventory and stabilization projects.

Five Rivers was the sole recipient of two separate awards, which total $700,000. A $450,000 allocation will enable Five Rivers to connect its visitors center on Game Farm Road to town of Bethlehem water and sewer lines. Another $250,000 award will be used for construction of a new restroom building to be open round the clock. The new bathroom facilities would also supplant the septic system now in use.

Five Rivers Director Craig Thompson said the current system "is sanitary but unpleasant to maintain. We'd much prefer to have an above-ground system attached to a sewer."

Both projects are part of an ongoing upgrading of the 27-year-old center.

"Doing this will help us accommodate future growth that's anticipated at Five Rivers," DEC spokesman Brian O'Connor said. "Public visits have increased and are expected to continue to increase in the future."

"We've been growing at about a 5 percent rate every year, and there are six or seven major capital upgrades that we have been in need of," Thompson said. "We just finally buried our electrical lines last summer. So I'm pleased to hear that the governor has put this in his budget."

"This stewardship initiative is excellent," he added. "DEC has always been accused of buying more parcels and acquiring more land and not taking care of what it already has. Care of our existing facilities is very important, and these awards will go a long way in that direction."

Five Rivers has historically relied on a pair of on-site wells for its water supply, but those wells have produced iron-heavy drinking water that damaged the plumbing, Thompson said.

Last summer, in the wake of the E. coli outbreak at Washington County Fairgrounds, the Albany County Department of Health ordered the well system at Five Rivers shut down as a precaution against a similar outbreak.

"Right now, we have no way to quench visitors' thirst," Thompson said.

"I'm hoping the timing of the governor's announcement will mean that the bid package for the projects will be drawn up this quarter, and we'll get the work done in this upcoming season," he added.

But, O'Connor said: "The when of this project is still undetermined."

He said DEC's design department is still drafting plans for the two projects, and "Nothing is finalized as yet. My understanding is that the water and sewer lines will be coming from the east of the facility, from town lines off Fisher Boulevard."

Details of the new water and sewer access are still being resolved by project designers.

Also needed before the project can get under way is some form of intermunicipal agreement between the towns of Bethlehem and New Scotland, since Five Rivers straddles the town line.

"We knew this was coming," said Bruce Secor, Bethlehem commissioner of public works. He added that such agreements are fairly routine, particularly when they involve state-owned property.

New Scotland Supervisor Martha Pofit has expressed interest in potentially tying some of those homes into the new water main. New Scotland is currently undertaking a thorough review of its water supply.

"To me, this opens the door for collaborative discussions with DEC, Five Rivers, the town of Bethlehem and other participants, to maximize this contribution," said Pofit. "We'll definitely be an interested party."

Tipping Tips For Your Cruise

Taking a cruise usually means round-the-clock, excellent service from all the ship's employees. The variety of services offered from food service personnel, cabin stewards, and the cruise staff can make tipping a challenge, even for experienced travelers. Expect to see a 15% gratuity on your tab for every item purchased. In addition, your cabin steward, waiter, busboy, and wine steward are tipped individually, often by way of envelopes provided by the cruise line. Always tip what you feel is deserved based on the service received. Ask about a cruise line's tipping policy before you book, and tip in U.S. dollars. Never tip cruise staff, such as the cruise director. Tipping for room service is appreciated but not necessary or expected.

To tip or not to tip - that is just one of the many questions we can help with at TRAVELHOST TRAVEL AGENCY. In fact, we can help with virtually all of your traveling needs whether you are, cruising, visiting far away places, or are just off for a weekend getaway. A little professional planning before hand can mean the difference between a great trip and an OK one. Let us show you how much fun travel planning can be - stop in and see us the next time you get the urge to get up and go.

Mr. Fitzmaurice drove a van for Albany Senior Citizens for more than 20 years before he retired. He had also worked as a taxi cab driver for Pine Hills Taxi.

Survivors include a daughter, Josephine Tompkins Delaney of Troy; five grandchildren; and a great-grandson.

Services were from the Parker Bros. Memorial in Watervliet.

Burial was in St. Agnes Cemetery in Menands.

Anna Ringelmann

Anna R. Ringelmann, 94, of Delmar and formerly of Albany died Monday, Jan. 24, at Good Samaritan Acute Home in Delmar.

Born in Albany, she was a longtime resident of the city before moving to Delmar.

She was an office clerk for the state before she retired.

She was a communicant of Our Lady of Angels Church in Albany.

Survivors include many great, great-great and great-great-great nieces and nephews.

Burial was in Our Lady of Angels Cemetery in Colonie.

Arrangements were by the Zwack & Sons Funeral Home in Albany.

Contributions may be made to Our Lady of Angels Church, 183 Central Ave., Albany 12206.

Enhanced STAR deadline set

Bethlehem Town Assessor David Leafer reminds residents enrolled in the Enhanced STAR tax relief program that in order to remain eligible, proof of income for either 1998 or 1999 must be filed with the town assessor's office by March 1.

The exemption is limited to homeowners 65 years and older who earn no more than $60,000 a year as a family. It requires annual renewal.

Enrollees in the Basic STAR program — which is open to homeowners of all ages and incomes — are eligible for a school tax exemption and are not subject to an annual renewal.

People who are not in the STAR program and/or people who have purchased homes within the past year are urged to enroll as soon as possible by contacting the assessor's office at 439-4955.

Death Notices

The Spotlight will print paid Death Notices for relatives and friends who do not or have not lived in the Towns of Bethlehem and New Scotland. The charge for a paid death notice is $25.

We will continue to print Obituaries of residents and former residents of the Towns of Bethlehem and New Scotland at no charge.

In Memoriam, and Cards of Thanks will also be printed for $25.

Writers Institute offers movie potpourri

By JOHN BRENT

There may be a touch of irony in that one of the most interesting film series offered in the Capital District year after year is put on by The New York State Writers Institute.

There used to be a prejudice among writers and book lovers that film was somehow an inferior art form, too heavily compromised by commercial considerations to be taken seriously as "art."

Fortunately, such prejudice has fallen by the wayside as most people have come to realize that film may very well be the preeminent art form of the 20th century.

It is to the credit of the Writers Institute, then, that while focusing much of its activity on the written word, it is able to put together a film series every year that offers a tremendous variety of movies from various periods, countries and styles.

The screenings are on Fridays at 7:30 p.m. (unless otherwise noted) at Page Hall on 135 Western Ave., part of the University at Albany Downtown Campus.

The screenings begin Feb. 4 and continue through May 5.

First up is the sophisticated comedy-drama from 1950, "All About Eve." Bette Davis plays aging actress Margo Channing whose career and personal life are both undergoing a crisis. Ironically, the film represented something of a comeback for Davis whose own career had fallen into a slump by the late 1940s. A younger, scheming actress, the Eve of the title, played by Anne Baxter, plots to advance her own career at Channing's expense. Written and directed by Joseph L. Mankiewicz, the film was nominated for 14 Academy Awards a record held until the recent "Titanic" tied the 14 nominations. Watch for Marilyn Monroe in a supporting role.

The stunning feature film debut from director Marc Levin, "Slam," will be shown at a special Thursday screening on Feb. 10. Inspired by the documentary, "Slamnation," the film tells the story of a prisoner whose life is transformed by poetry. "Slam" won the Grand Jury Prize at the Sundance Film Festival, a high-water mark for independent filmmakers. Saul Williams, the poet whose story the film tells, will read from his work on Friday, Feb. 11, at 7 p.m. in Page Hall.

The Italian caper/comedy film, "The Big Deal on Madonna Street" plays on Feb. 18. Directed by Mario Monicelli, the 1956 film stars Vittorio Gassman, Marcello Mastroianni and Claudia Cardinale. In Italian with English subtitles.

February concludes with a Japanese film from 1959, "The Floating Weeds." A traveling troupe of actors visits a small seaside town and one of the actors is introduced to his illegitimate son and the mother of the child with whom the actor had an affair 12 years before. This was actually a remake of a film director Yasujiro Ozu had made in 1934.

On Wednesday, March 1, "The English Patient" will be screened at 7 p.m. Michael Ondaatje, writer of the novel from which the film is adapted, will provide commentary for the film and answer questions following the screening. Ondaatje and Linda Spalding will present a joint reading from their work on Thursday, March 2 at 8 p.m.

Director Alan Parker's film of "The Commitments," a 1991 film about a rock band from the poorest area of North Dublin, will be shown on March 17. In the rollicking comedy, the band decides to play soul music. Based on a novel by Roddy Doyle, the story captures the sights and sounds of working class Ireland.

The beautifully photographed "Jerusalem," plays on March 24. Based on the novel by Selma Lagerlöf and directed by Bille August, the film deals with issues of faith and spirituality contrasted with themes of lust and longing.

Fritz Lang's silent German film, "Dr. Mabuse: The Gambler," will be presented on March 31. Known for films like "Metropolis" and "M" with Peter Lorre, Lang was one of the leading German directors of the 1920s and 30s. "Dr. Mabuse is a prototype for the criminal mastermind genre. The film depicts the efforts of evil Dr. Mabuse, who uses psychology and hypnosis to manipulate his rich and influential clients. A piano accompaniment will be provided by Mike Schiffer.

Prolific writer Elmore Leonard, author of more than 30 novels as well as short stories and screenplays will be featured early in April. On Tuesday, April 4, "The Tall T," a 1957 film based on Leonard's novel, "The Captive," will be screened at 7:30. Starring Randolph Scott, Richard Boone and Maureen O'Sullivan, the movie depicts what happens when a newlywed couple and a ranch foreman are held captive by a group of ruthless bandits.

As part of a double feature, "The Tall T" will be followed by "Get Shorty," the popular 1995 film with John Travolta and Gene Hackman. The hilarious Hollywood satire is based on the Leonard book of the same name.

"Out of Sight," a 1998 film with George Clooney and Jennifer Lopez, also based on a novel by Leonard, will be screened on Wednesday, April 5.

On Thursday, April 6, Leonard will discuss screenwriting and his Hollywood experiences at 4 p.m. and will read from his work at 8 p.m.

On April 7, the 1934 film, "Manhattan Melodrama" will be shown. Starring Clark Gable and William Powell as friends on opposite sides of the law, the slick MGM production was directed by reliable studio veteran W.S. Van Dyke. Known as "one take Van Dyke" because of his ability to bring in successful films within budget and on schedule, his shooting style is reflected in the fast pace, tight narrative of many of his movies of the 1930s. Myrna Loy is also in the cast. Later that same year, she and Powell would be teamed again for the first entry in the very popular Thin Man series of movies as Nick and Nora Charles.

"The King of Masks," is a 1996 drama from China. An old Chinese street performer is childless. With no son to pass on the traditions of his craft to, the old man buys a young child from a poor family so that what he has learned might be given to a new generation. In Mandarin with English subtitles, the film will be screened on April 14.

On April 28, a French/Italian production, "The Earrings of Madame De ..." will be screened. Based on a classic de Maupassant tale, the film tells the story of how the wife of a wealthy general sells a pair of expensive earrings thus setting off a chain of lies and deceit. Directed by Max Ophüls, the movie stars Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux. In French with English subtitles.

The last film of the series will be screened on May 5. Director King Vidor's silent comedy "Show People" tells the story of a young girl and her father coming to Hollywood in the hope of making her a movie star. Made in 1928, a year after "The Jazz Singer" signaled the beginning of the end of the silent film, the movie is made with all the skill and polish of the late silent era. Starring long time William Randolph Hearst mistress, Marion Davies, the film is of interest to those who find silent movies intriguing, not only because it is a fine example of silent filmmaking, but because it shows daily life around the studio and in Hollywood circa 1928. Several big silent stars pop up in cameos during the film.

Films for almost every taste and interest seems to be the mission behind the selection of titles by the Writers Institute. With cable-TV and home video making so many films so accessible, it's still wonderful to see a great movie on a large screen with a receptive audience. That's a treat that home viewing still hasn't quite managed to duplicate.

For information on the film series or other activities of the New York State Writers Institute, call 442-5620 or visit its Web site at www.albany.edu/writers-inst/.

Ralph Fiennes and Juliette Binoche star in "The English Patient." The film will be screened on Wednesday, March 1 with Michael Ondaatje, author of the novel on which the film is based, on hand for a discussion following the movie.

Beautiful Danielle Darrieux, French film actress, stars in Max Ophüls' "The Earrings of Madame De ..."

Anne Baxter, Bette Davis, Marilyn Monroe and George Saunders in a scene from "All About Eve."

for the drug culture.

"That was a societal reaction that came out in the 1960s," Leavitt said. "People were looking at this through the filter of the times. There have always been absurd interpretations of the characters, ever since this play was written."

Leavitt had high praise for the student actors, about half of whom have been in past performances.

"They've been a great, great cast," he said. "They've been very focused and attentive."

Leavitt said the show is not pre-cast, but students need to belong to one of the middle school choirs to participate. Students who had been in past performances served as mentors to the current actors, showing them the ropes.

"Alice in Wonderland" is the eighth musical Leavitt has directed at the middle school, although he has taught music part time in the district for 10 years.

He is also musical director of the high school's upcoming Stage 700 production of "The Secret Garden," and will direct a night of one-act plays there in May.

Next year, he will direct The Village Stage's production of "The Fantasticks," and he plans to audition for a role in Park Playhouse's summer production of "The Music Man."

Leavitt's heart remains in education, though. "I knew I wanted to go into education when I was a sophomore or junior in high school," he said. "It turns out that the middle school age level is one I can relate to. I really enjoy this grade level."

Leavitt also had high praise for parents who have helped with the production. "I absolutely couldn't do this without the parents," he said.

Choreographers Muriel Welch and Fran Coccozza worked with Leavitt on the production, and parents Mary Ellen Hennessey and Linda Wheeler also helped out, even though their children are no longer at the middle school. Because of such strong parental involvement, Leavitt said he winds up producing more than directing.

When Leavitt started directing middle school musicals, one of his goals was "to beef up the pit," which means that there will be a great deal of musical accompaniment to this year's show. David Beck will play the bass, Rosemary Edwards the piano, Bill Reuswigg the drums and Barbara Musial the synthesizer.

There are two main leads in the play — Alice and the White Rabbit. Samantha Hooper-Hammersley is Alice, and Amy Van Deusen is the White Rabbit.

The first show is Thursday, Feb. 3, at 7 p.m. Leavitt described the date as "a dress rehearsal that you wouldn't know was a dress rehearsal." There will be open seating, with tickets available at the door. Thursday's show is free to senior citizens.

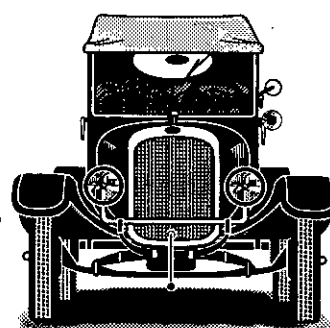

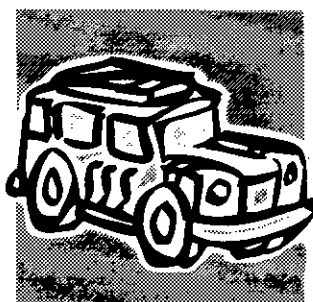

Shows on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 4 and 5, at 7 p.m. have reserved seating. Tickets are $4 and will be sold Feb. 1 to 4 from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the middle school, 332 Kenwood Ave., Delmar.
