BC board hunkers down for tough budget year

By ETHAN SCHOOLMAN

If the Bethlehem Central School District could have earned money every time one of its board members spoke last week of the upcoming budget season as one that would require serious sacrifice, a good many of the financial challenges facing the district this year would probably go away.

Unfortunately, it isn't possible to earn money that way, so the school district, according to Superintendent Les Loomis, finds itself "caught in a vise," between costly state mandates on the one hand and a declining revenue stream on the other.

"These are very difficult times for the school district," Loomis told the board's Feb. 7 audience, ironically made up almost entirely of Participation in Government 12th-graders.

The problem this year is that several different issues are confronting the district all at once. First, the state's initiative to require all graduating students to earn a Regents diploma is just a few years from kicking in. The class of 2003 will be the first to have to pass Regents exams in all subjects, spread out over two years, in order to graduate.

In the past, students who did not want to earn a Regents diploma had the option of pursuing a less demanding local or technical diploma instead, which prepared them for going to work directly out of high school.

Now, in order to bring all students up to Regents standards, school districts across the state must spend funds on extra staffing, teacher development and supplies, that might in previous years have been allotted for different purposes.

"Some parents are concerned that very able students, with the increased state standards, are not going to be able to graduate, and so we have to add more instructors to (Academic Intervention Services), for instance," Loomis said.

Where district money is going is one issue. The other, perhaps more dire concern, is how much is coming in.

Public schools in New York get more than half of their funding from local property taxes. This year the district's largest taxpayer, the Niagara Mohawk power plant at the Port of Albany, was sold and the new owner, PSEG Power, is expected to pay a lot less in taxes.

The New Jersey-based utility PSEG, is currently in negotiations with the state and the school district over how much its taxes will be reduced in return for building a newer, more efficient plant alongside the old one.

"A new power plant is something that we need," Loomis said. "It will provide jobs and cleaner energy ... unfortunately, it will probably also mean less tax revenue for the school district."

How much less? Board member Warren Stoker called it "the great unknown."

"We don't know how things will end up (with PSEG)," Stoker said, "hopefully (negotiations) will end before we get through the budget season, so we will know where we stand."

Next to property taxes, the majority of the rest of the district's funding comes from the state — and that, too, is getting shakier.

Specifically, the recently decided case, Campaign for Fiscal Equity v. State of New York, raises the possibility that the state will have to direct more of its funds towards poorer urban districts and away

PSEG Power draws crowd to info session

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Against the backdrop of concern about the future tax valuation of its Glenmont property, officials of PSEG Power held a public information meeting on Feb. 6 at Bethlehem Central Middle School.

The meeting was part of the Article 10 process PSEG hopes will lead to regulatory approval of its proposed redevelopment of the Bethlehem Energy Center.

Roughly 80 residents listened and asked questions during a two-hour-plus presentation of the company's plans to convert the former Niagara Mohawk Albany Steam Station on River Road to a new, $400 million state-of-the-art steam generating facility.

Company officials, including vice president for governmental relations Neil Brown and project manager Russ Arlotta, discussed everything from the proposed plant's likely air quality impact to the traffic implications of the projected two years of construction.

But plainly on the minds of many present — including Supervisor Sheila Fuller, several town board members, officials of the Bethlehem Central School District, including Superintendent Les Loomis and members of the school board — was the status of ongoing negotiations over assessment of the property, which could have a serious impact on future tax revenues for the town and school district.

The plant is currently assessed at approximately $260 million, and PSEG officials have repeatedly insisted on a lower assessment before the redevelopment plan can proceed. They have also requested a 20-year payment-in-lieu of taxes (PILOT) agreement through the Bethlehem Industrial Development Agency to gradually phase in the full tax impact of the new assessment.

Technically, those negotiations have no direct impact on the Article 10 application before the state Public Service Commission. Asked at the meeting about the PILOT negotiations, Arlotta declined to discuss them.

"I cannot really comment on that with any specifics," he said. "As you know, we are currently working, and I believe we are working very well and productively, with the Bethlehem IDA, and members negotiating on behalf of the school board, currently working to get to that point (of an agreement). But you know, it's going to have to be a win-win solution here."

Town Court cases adjudicated

Six Bethlehem residents, all facing charges of driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs, offered guilty pleas to a variety of charges in town courts in Bethlehem and New Scotland last week.

Donald J. Albright, 22, of Spawn Hollow Road, South Bethlehem, facing charges in Bethlehem Town Court including driving while intoxicated (DWI), endangering the welfare of a child, reckless driving, unlicensed operation of a vehicle and various traffic violations, all stemming from a July 29 incident, pleaded guilty on Feb. 6 to second-degree reckless endangerment and to a reduced count of driving while ability impaired (DWAI), in satisfaction of all charges.

Town Justice Kenneth Munnely sentenced Albright to a year in Albany County jail on the reckless endangerment charge and fined him $300 and a $35 state-mandated surcharge on the DWAI count. He also had his license suspended for 90 days.

Also in Town Court on the same day, Ryan Patrick Conley, 19, of 29A Patterson Drive, Glenmont, arrested on Oct. 15, pleaded guilty to DWI and was fined $500 and a $95 surcharge. He also had his license revoked for a year.

David Leon Smith, 57, of 3 Mallard Road, Glenmont, also pleaded guilty to DWI stemming from a Jan. 20 arrest. He was fined $750 and a $95 surcharge, and had his license revoked for a year.

Two individuals — Dennis Roger Clarke, 19, of 92 Elsmere Ave., Delmar, arrested for driving under the influence of drugs on Dec. 20, and Marvin L. Graham, 48, of 647 Old Quarry Road, Selkirk, arrested for DWI on Dec. 23 — each pleaded guilty to DWAI. Both were fined $300, assessed a $35 surcharge and had their license suspended for 90 days.

In New Scotland Town Court on Feb. 1, Sally J. Livingston, 58, of 55 Salisbury Lane, Delmar, pleaded guilty to a reduced count of DWAI, stemming from a Dec. 26 arrest.

Town Justice Kenneth Connolly sentenced Livingston to a 90-day license suspension, and ordered her to pay a $300 fine and $35 state-mandated surcharge.

All six defendants were ordered by the respective courts to undergo a drinking-driver remediation program and face a victim impact panel.

Board to consider naming new officer

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Bethlehem Police Chief Richard LaChappelle announced last week the appointment of the second new officer to the force in as many months, pending approval Wednesday by the Bethlehem town board.

Adam N. Hornick, 24, a Glenmont resident, was named to the $34,273-a-year post.

Prior to his appointment, Hornick was an Albany County sheriff's deputy assigned to the Voorheesville substation. Before that, he was a civilian telecommunicator for the Bethlehem force for three years.

Selected from among numerous applicants for the position, Hornick's previous experience with the department proved pivotal in his selection, LaChappelle said.

"We knew him, we got to see his work as a telecommunicator," he said. "He knows the town, he knows the operation of the police department, he was outstanding as a telecommunicator and we're delighted to get him back."

Hornick's appointment, effective Saturday, Feb. 17, if the town board approves, will bring the uniformed force to 41, filling the second of two positions added to the department's budget by the town board last fall. Officer David Caputo joined the department last month.

Hornick, who is completing his bachelor's degree in criminal justice and public administration at the University at Albany, will initially be assigned to six to eight weeks of transitional training before being permanently assigned to the patrol division, LaChappelle said.

His appointment will bring the strength of the division to 30.

"Once he has been assigned to a schedule of his own, we'll be able to review other positions within the department in need of attention," LaChappelle said, referring to planned internal transfers to bring the detectives' office and youth bureau up to full strength.

But the rising demand in the community for basic patrol services, coupled with the continued absence from active duty of five full-time officers currently on long-term job-related disability leaves and seeking disability retirements, has prevented internal promotions and transfers out of the patrol unit.

"The detectives' office is a critical part of the department in need of manpower," he said.

The youth bureau will also face a critical test in the spring, as the resumption of DARE programs will demand more of the three-man unit's time.

In addition, LaChappelle said, "The fifth-grade in the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk school district goes back to the middle school this summer, and the police chief (in Ravena) has asked us to take over DARE in the Becker Elementary School," further adding to the youth bureau's workload.

Of the retirement petitions, all still pending, LaChappelle said, "I remain optimistic that they'll be resolved soon, but there's nothing new that I'm aware of."

Pofit will not seek 2nd term as supervisor

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

New Scotland Supervisor Martha Pofit, in a surprise decision revealed last week, has signaled her intention not to seek a second term in November.

"I think leadership is best when it is shared," Pofit said. "I came into this with the hope that I could do some good. I've taken it to a certain point, where I feel I can now hand it off to someone else who can take it to the next level."

Pofit said she privately informed her Democratic colleagues on the town board of her decision as far back as December, and notified the town's Democratic committee last month in a letter to chairman Michael Mackey.

"It's early in the process for a formal announcement, but that was part of my intention," she said. "I think it's important to be fair to the committee, to give everyone a chance to think about what the best package of candidates would be for town hall in the next election."

Pofit said that her lame-duck status would not hinder her agenda for the coming year, which includes completion of a five-year plan for the town by the fall.

"All of the agenda we've put forward will move ahead on its own momentum," she said. "We've set up the building blocks for this to continue."

Mackey confirmed that, as yet, no one has approached the committee about running for the supervisor post in the fall.

"The committee will be meeting in the next couple of weeks to discuss the upcoming events of the year," he said. "We'll be setting up a search committee and starting to come up with names."

He also confirmed that his party's other incumbents — board member Scott Houghtaling, Highway Superintendent Darrell Duncan, Town Clerk Diane Deschenes, and Town Justice Thomas Dolin — have indicated their intention to seek re-election.

A town board seat currently held by Andrea Gleason, the board's sole Republican, will also be up for grabs in November.

Barn fire destroys animals

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Two apartment dwellers were left homeless and numerous farm animals killed, as dozens of firefighters tackled a wind-driven blaze Saturday that destroyed a barn and an attached apartment on Oakwood Road in Elsmere.

More than 50 volunteers from the Elsmere and Delmar fire departments responded shortly after 1:40 p.m. to a fire at 29 Oakwood Road.

"There were a number of obstacles we don't normally face in fighting a fire, especially in suburbia," said Elsmere Fire Chief Ned Costigan.

Firefighters confronted locked access gates to the property that slowed their response, and with no paved road, fire equipment could not cross the muddy, icy dirt road.

"We had to leave the apparatus at the gate and drag in all sorts of lines to fight the fire," he said.

The structure was "well involved" before firefighters were able to engage the blaze, according to police.

Hampering firefighters' efforts, farm animals roamed loose on the property, "hot" electrical service lines to outlying structures broke loose throughout the blaze and winds gusted to more than 40 mph.

"It probably took about three to four hours to bring it under control, and we probably spent a couple more spreading it all out," Costigan said — a task further complicated by the large amount of fuel-filled equipment and vehicles, propane tanks and other hazards stored in the barn.

Animal control officer Richard Watt was called to round up animals that escaped from the barn and an adjacent pen during the fire.

Dominic Cubello, part owner of the property, reported a dog and two puppies, eight goats and kids, a calf, 40 domesticated pigeons and an unknown number of feral cats killed in the blaze.

Slingerlands and Selkirk fire companies provided backup throughout the blaze. Neither apartment dweller was home, but a pet dog escaped the apartment unharmed.

The fire's cause remains under investigation by Bethlehem police and the state Office of Fire Prevention and Control.

"There hasn't been a definite cause determined yet," Costigan said on Monday.

Costigan said he did not consider the fire to be suspicious, but "The building department has spent a lot of time down there over the years, and over the years we've had a lot of miscellaneous calls there for various smoke and fire conditions. Mr. Cubello always seems to have something cooking down there."

Cubello has faced past arson charges in the city of Albany, but has also lodged complaints of criminal mischief at the farm, as well as allegations of dog attacks upon farm animals, as recently as last fall, according to police.

RCS takes part in civic jury debate

By ETHAN SCHOOLMAN

On the heels of his victory in state Supreme Court, Michael Rebell, the attorney for the plaintiff in a major school funding case came to Ravena late last month for a public debate.

The event was a mock trial involving a civic jury, sponsored by the Campaign for Fiscal Equity (CFE), the Schuyler Center for Analysis & Advocacy and the Business Council of New York State.

The case in question was Campaign for Fiscal Equity v. the State of New York, in which the plaintiffs asked the court to require the state to completely rework the way it decides how much money should go to each public school.

More than one observer remarked on the timing of the event, held at Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Middle School and hosted by the RCS school board.

In a landmark decision that the state plans to appeal, state Supreme Court Judge Leland DeGrasse recently decided in favor of the plaintiffs and agreed that the state has failed to give all public schools the resources they need to provide a "sound basic education" to all students, and in so doing has violated its own constitution.

DeGrasse gave the state until September to make significant changes in the way it funds schools, particularly those in the poorest districts.

It was a decision that CFE, a coalition of parent organizations, school boards and advocacy groups, had been fighting for for nearly a decade.

Recently, the campaign has been soliciting public comment through civic juries, in which citizens are given a chance to hear both sides of the argument over school funding and then divide up into mock juries to offer their own views on the issues.

The RCS civic jury was intended to spotlight the perspective of a largely rural district.

"This is really unique ... none of us have ever done this before," RCS Superintendent Robert Drake said in his opening remarks.

The first part of the evening featured a debate between CFE's Rebell, who served as co-counsel in the case against the state, and David Shaffer of the Public Policy Institute of the Business Council, who presented the opposing viewpoint.

"Past cases of this kind have focused on equity and they have had mixed success," Rebell said in his opening statement.

"In our suit, we focused on adequacy," he said. "We argued that the state's schools were not providing a basic education to all students, and particularly the poorest."

Rebell's solution to the problem was twofold. First: "The state must ... allocate enough funding to provide all students with the opportunity to meet state standards," he said.

"Without adequate resources, it is unrealistic, unfair and ineffective to hold schools and students accountable for improving achievement," Rebell said.

The second part of Rebell's argument focused on an issue that got a lot of play in last year's election cycle, and has already become a centerpiece of President George W. Bush's legislative agenda: public school accountability.

"To ensure that additional resources are used effectively requires a comprehensive accountability system that includes reform, political pressure, legal leverage and community involvement," Rebell said.

Shaffer agreed with Rebell on some points, but disagreed on others.

It is true that many public schools aren't doing their job and that something has to be done, Shaffer said. But according to the Business Council, money isn't the cause of the problem and money won't fix it.

Since 1975, Shaffer said, "School spending per pupil has grown at double the rate of inflation in New York City and across the state ... and the schools are still a mess, despite all that extra money."

"But CFE is still insisting that money is the problem," Shaffer said.

He cited numerous examples where he said state money was being wasted by profligate school boards and teachers unions. One of the nation's shortest contractual work days, he said, and many of the city's school buildings are below capacity.

In closing, Shaffer offered his version of what real accountability would be like: getting letters of resignation from major education officials, dated five years in advance, to be accepted if public schools continue to fail despite increased funding.

Shaffer also suggested "lifting all job protections for every teacher and principal in any school that fails to meet the agreed-upon performance targets."

"Nobody in the education community will like anything on my list," Shaffer said. "But remember, this is just holding them to their word ... they say more money will fix the problem and if it does, they will have nothing to worry about."

After Rebell and Shaffer had both finished their arguments, about 40 parents and community members in the audience split up into three citizen juries and went to different rooms to deliberate.

When they returned nearly two hours later, it was clear that no easy decisions had been reached. Overall, the jurors seemed to agree that while increased funding might make a difference, money alone wouldn't do it.

"Accountability needs to go in all directions," one group concluded. "Community and parents need to be involved and be held accountable for student performance, not just schools."

After the program, Drake offered his views on the matter.

"I work at the behest of the school board," he said. "If I don't produce, I'm out, and I've always felt personally that working under a contract is powerful motivation."

"This was a great way of getting interest and debate on an important issue, and it will be interesting to watch what the state Legislature does now," Drake said.

The trip to Valentine's Day is quite a journey

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

A co-worker posed this question as we headed into the overly marketed season of hearts, flowers and chocolates, when love demands its due: "Would you marry your husband all over again?"

"Sure," I answered enthusiastically, after what was hopefully an imperceptible pause, and during which my life flashed before my eyes.

Most of it was good, leading to

COMMENTARY:

Mom's the Word

the affirmative answer, but even the part that wasn't, looked OK when an unexpected question demanded an immediate answer.

It'll be 15 years this St. Patrick's Day that Chris pulled out all the stops at a French restaurant in New York City, ordering champagne, saying the most flattering words I'd ever heard and offering me the most beautiful diamond ring I've ever seen.

When we sat on my grandmother's porch to plan the wedding we'd celebrate in her back yard, a rainbow seemed to promise us a life of great joy. In the intervening years, that sense of romance has given way to something that is both more substantial and flimsier.

Sometimes our closeness is palpable, and it doesn't seem to matter that there will always be a pile of dirty laundry on the bedroom floor (my pet peeve) or that the CDs will never all be in their proper cases at the same time (his bugaboo).

And sometimes, those little things make us remember our friend's story. After years of persistently being refused by the woman he wanted to marry, he broke up with her, to her surprise and consternation. What, she asked, would you do if we'd gotten married? Well, he'd responded, I'd have just toughed it out for the next 40 years.

The ability to say to each other, "I'm just toughing it out right now," gets us through to the days when we can't imagine ever living without each other.

Sometimes we tough it out because we know we've been projecting unreal expectations onto each other. Although we'd been a couple for two years before we married, I still thought Chris was going to be Prince Charming and carry me off to his beautiful castle, where he would pay all the bills, share the household chores equally and talk out anything that might cause us to go to bed angry.

Well, sometimes Prince Charming has to work late. He's good with ATM withdrawals, but not at producing the receipts. The first time he did the laundry, he shrank my beloved purple silk shirt, and to tell the truth, neither of us is really big on talking things out.

In turn, he probably thought he would always have a wife confident of her appearance, who took an interest in the stock market and continued to cook the good meals that had helped win his heart.

If I wanted Prince Charming, he wanted June Cleaver. So if I pay the bills and no longer make fancy meals, and if we both go to bed fuming over something, but feel better after a good night's sleep, then it works out fairly for both of us.

Sometimes the best gift we can give each other isn't a box of chocolates, but a little bit of space to be individuals, not always half of a bigger, all-consuming whole.

Mostly, it's important to let the other's goodness shine through. In Chris' case, that's a humor and intelligence that nobody else can equal. It's hard not to love a man who can name all of the presidents in chronological order, and gets the children to brush their teeth by creating computerized pictures of Lenin exhorting them to smash the common class enemy of tooth decay.

Ah, our children. What do shrunken shirts matter when I hear our children drinking in Chris' lectures about the Constitutional Convention or laughing at his particular readings of The Boxcar Children?

The stories of four orphans whose grandfather finds them living in a boxcar become modern-day Grimm fairy tales. "She stuck her head in the door," Chris will read, as the boys giggle in anticipation of his next line, "They shrieked to see a disembodied head float into the room."

The children, of course, are as much of a romance killer as they are the link that will hold us forever together, and they require 150 percent of our attention at any given moment.

Two pictures hang on our refrigerator and I jokingly call them "Why you shouldn't have children."

One was taken at a friend's wedding, after we were married but before our children were born. Chris is in a tuxedo and I am wearing a beautiful dress. We are standing, thin and elegant; Chris' arched eyebrows catch the camera, and my smile is a practiced one.

An aunt took the second photo at a small family gathering last fall, where it is clear that we have given up any pretense of ever again looking either thin or elegant. We are sitting though, a blessed and rare occurrence, and our smiles are not practiced, but seem to come from a deep sense of comfort with each other.

At first, I had the two pictures up to remind us to get in shape, but I have come to love the ease that the second picture shows.

There are many things about our lives together that we can change: we can lose weight, buy better clothes, go to a communication workshop and improve our cooking skills.

What's forever unchangeable though, are the years we've spent together. The good, the bad, the indifferent — these years have made us who we are, given us our children and brought us to this place together.

Of course, I'd do it all over again.

Delmar native opens agency on Delaware Ave.

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Schrade Insurance recently opened at 636 Delaware Ave., but the business is a long-standing one, and its proprietor, Rick Schrade, grew up in Delmar and lives in Slingerlands.

Schrade Insurance represents Allstate, and will sell variable life insurance through Jefferson Pilot. The agency will also offer investment tools.

"Allstate is teaming up with other financial companies to offer mutual funds from companies like Oppenheimer and Fidelity," Schrade said.

He first opened an office in Guiderland in 1996.

Of his move to Delmar, "I had the opportunity to build, and used Keystone Builders," Schrade said.

Although the agency had been on Western Avenue, he said a higher profile, plus the current growth in Bethlehem, was what drew him back to Delmar.

"Bethlehem is more of a community than a commuter path," Schrade said. "I have a higher profile here, it's easier to park, and with all of the growth in the town, there's a lot of opportunity."

Schrade, who graduated from Albany Academy and earned a bachelor's degree in finance from Ithaca College, was an account manager with Xerox for 15 years before striking out on his own.

"I always wanted my own business," he said.

Schrade has a state insurance broker's license and a state life insurance license. He is also licensed by the Securities and Exchange Commission to sell mutual funds, variable annuities and variable life insurance.

Schrade chose Allstate because of the company's longevity.

"They have financial stability, and they've been in business since 1932," Schrade said.

"I had to earn my own shop. I was hired as an employee and spent 18 months in sales and training," he added.

About two years ago, Schrade purchased Stan Smith's Allstate agency, which gave him a base of Bethlehem clients.

"We've grown from there," said Schrade, who works with another broker and is looking to hire one more.

"I actually could use two more people to help grow the business," he said.

Schrade said name recognition is an important factor in choosing an insurance agent, and he believes the Allstate name and his knowledge of the area are good reasons for people to choose his agency.

"We're selling auto, home and life insurance, and financial investment will be a significant part of our business," Schrade said.

"We also offer access to a national organization, and when you call us, you get real Allstate people answering the phone, 24 hours a day, seven days a week."

In addition to regular business hours, Schrade Insurance is open Saturday mornings from 9 a.m. until noon and late on Thursdays.

Schrade's new building has two tenants, Nancy Ray, who runs NKR Associates, a court monitoring business; and the law office of Tom Marcelle.

In this Internet era, Schrade believes that the personal touch will still be called for in the insurance business.

"The Internet is still foggy to a lot of people," he said. "People like to see people."

Taxing dilemma

Some 80-plus Bethlehem residents braved cold, snowy weather to attend PSEG's informational meeting last week. What many residents wanted to hear, however, was not on the power company's agenda that night.

School Superintendent Les Loomis, to his credit, once again raised the issue of higher taxes, which will likely happen once PSEG's assessment is determined.

That's because PSEG purchased the steam plant at the Port of Albany for about one-fifth of what it was then assessed at, and that could mean millions in lost revenue for the school district and the town.

Both Loomis and Supervisor Sheila Fuller have publicly expressed their concerns about a substantial tax increase since PSEG acquired the plant from Niagara Mohawk Power Corp.

But as with many issues that don't carry an immediate impact, their concerns fell pretty much on deaf ears. Unfortunately, many residents will not realize the impact until they receive significantly higher tax bills.

Perhaps the new plant PSEG plans to build at the site will defuse the tax concerns for the town when it is assessed. In the meantime, the company is trying to explain its plans for the site.

One thing's for certain: the tax concern can't be overlooked. Too much is at stake for the town and its residents.

At last week's school board meeting, concern over the plant's reassessment and its ramifications for next year's budget was evident.

We hope PSEG is as forthright in discussing the tax issue as it is on its plans for the site. Any significant tax increase will have an enormous effect on the town and its residents.

Update 2001

This week's first Update issue for 2001 confirms that the economy may seem a little rocky at this time, but according to many of our advertisers, things simply aren't all that bad. The sky isn't likely to fall and the bottom is just as unlikely to drop out from under.

This year may not be as strong as last, but it should be profitable nonetheless.

Take a look at what the experts have to say about business trends and where those trends will likely take us this year.

Next week's Update will feature similar views from experts in education, health and the community.

We hope you enjoy what was designed to be a comprehensive overlook of community business and financial matters.

Sweetheart sweetens Valentine's Day

By BILL FONDA

The writer is editor of the Guilford Spotlight.

I must confess, for most of my life I have had a love-hate relationship with Valentine's Day.

If I wanted to be completely truthful, I would say the relationship has tilted mostly toward the "hate" end of things.

It didn't start off badly. When I was in elementary school, Valentine's Day was actually pretty cool. I even vaguely remember one year — I think it was second grade — when I was selected valentine king by my classmates, earning the privilege of wearing a goofy looking crown until I got tired of it.

My third-grade teacher was also the varsity cheerleading coach, and the cheerleaders visited the class every day. Believe me, that was not a bad thing, even for a third-grader. One of them liked to tickle me, much to everybody's amusement.

Just before Valentine's Day, she asked me if I was going to give her a card, because she had one for me. Being bratty, I blew it off. When she showed up on Valentine's Day, one of my friends lent me a spare card to give her.

What I got in return was a card that she had made especially for me, glitter and all. It was really pretty.

Of course, I was so impressed, I jammed it in my bomb shelter of a desk until my mother ordered me to bring it home.

But even without the crown and card, Valentine's Day was a lot of fun then. None of us really understood the romantic aspects of the holiday, so it was pretty much a really good excuse to take time out of class for cookies and candy and filling each other's mailboxes with the little paper cards that come in boxes.

Then, however, things changed. The boys and girls realized the opposite sex didn't have cooties, and Valentine's Day took on a whole new meaning.

I think it started with carnations. Each year, the high school cheerleaders sold carnations for Valentine's Day as a fund-raiser. During homeroom and the first few periods of the day, the girls would come around, interrupt class, pull the lucky recipients into the hallway and give them their carnations.

The cool kids, of course, got called on all the time and got lots of carnations. The less-than-cool kids, of which I was a card-carrying member, got to watch. I think the most carnations I ever got was two, and I'll admit, I was more than a little jealous.

The fact that I never seemed to be dating anyone on the most lovey-dovey day of the year didn't help either, and while I was in college, I decided to make a statement.

I dubbed Valentine's Day "the day when those who are in relationships rub it in the noses of those who aren't" (or words to that effect) and started wearing black in protest.

One year, I went all out, wearing a black dress shirt, slacks, socks, shoes, jacket and tie. The result, sad to say, wasn't quite what I had hoped.

"Bill, what are you doing?"

"Bill, who died?"

"Bill, what fraternity are you joining?"

But I kept at it in succeeding years, and whenever somebody asked, I explained that I was protesting Valentine's Day because it taunted the dateless wonders among us.

I'm used to people looking at me like I'm strange, but I'm convinced that my explanation for dressing in black had people ready to commit me to the local mental hospital.

And if my Valentine's Day attire didn't already have people thinking I was a little off my rocker, they would have been convinced if they had seen me while I was working at Price Chopper.

Because I was one of the better cashiers, I worked the express lanes a lot. I didn't like them to begin with, and they were worse on Valentine's Day.

Nothing did wonders for my mood than a succession of men — and make no mistake, 95 percent of them were men — buying those last minutes flowers, cards or candy for their significant others. At one point, my grumbling became so annoying that one of my co-workers turned to me and said, "Bill, you are SO bitter."

I laughed; what else could I do? He was right.

It was also around that time that the Great Rationalization began. Probably because they were tired of my constant kvetching, my friends started telling me not to worry, since Valentine's Day is just a creation of greeting card companies, anyhow.

If they weren't telling me that, they were saying Valentine's Day isn't just about romance, it's just as much about loving yourself and friendship. Yeah, right!

But now, my feelings about

Valentine's Day have changed. I'm not bitter or angry, and didn't plan ways to make this Feb. 14 miserable for everyone else.

The reason for my change in attitude: I have a girlfriend now.

Of course, my luck being what it is, Suzi and I were not able to actually celebrate Valentine's Day on Feb. 14, since I live in Albany and she lives in Connecticut.

However, I was just as happy to celebrate the weekend before, when she came to visit. We've had this arrangement, she coming to Albany or me going to Connecticut every other week, for the five months we've been dating. Those weekends make everything that happens between them pale in comparison.

From the moment we go our separate ways after a weekend together — never a pleasant experience, by the way — we start counting the days until we'll see each other again. Come the Wednesday or Thursday before our get-togethers, the count gets reduced to hours.

They haven't come out and said so yet, but I'm sure my co-workers are well aware that I'm at my most useless the Friday before and the Monday morning after we see each other. The former because I'm so excited about seeing Suzi again and the latter because I already miss her.

So who is this woman who has melted my black, cold heart? She's a woman who, when we first started dating, wanted to see me so badly she drove four hours from Connecticut to join me at my college's alumni weekend in scenic... Utica.

Mind you, I love Utica, and think it gets a bad rap, but it just doesn't scream romance. We must have been convincing; when I introduced Suzi to one of my former professors, she said, "Oh yes, I saw you with your lovely wife last night."

We aren't married, but Cecilia sure was right about the "lovely" part.

After my college friend Brian met Suzi for the first time, he made a point of telling me, "Don't (mess) this up." I informed him that I would try hard not to.

We have so many of the same thoughts that we joke about sharing one brain. I get it Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesday mornings, the days we put the newspapers together, and she gets it the rest of the week. When we're together and can both use it, we do a pretty good job of saving the world's problems.

Because of her, I've developed more than a passing interest in women's college basketball, specifically the University of Connecticut women's team.

She knows I'll never root for the men, because of my interest in Syracuse, but I think even she is shocked by my support of the women's squad. They've lost two games this year, and I think I took it harder than she did.

Most of all, she's the woman who makes me happy. She makes me laugh. She makes me think. She makes me realize there's a lot more to life than my job.

I only hope I make her as happy as she makes me.

Runner dedicates effort to Haskins Thanks to CVS pharmacists

Editor, The Spotlight:

I received the phone call at noon on Saturday, Dec. 16. Twenty-year-old Emily Haskins had died the day before after suffering a stroke. I knew Emily when she was a student at Bethlehem Central High School, where I teach.

She wasn't merely a student though. She was a loving daughter and sister, a loyal friend, an avid soccer player and gymnast, a compassionate Peer Helper and a friendly face in the hallway.

Two hours after I received the sad news, I picked up my mail. In it was a brochure from the American Stroke Association, encouraging people to run in Kona Marathon in Keauhou-Kona, Hawaii on June 24. I learned that stroke is the third leading cause of death in the United States, claiming 160,000 lives each year. Every 53 seconds, someone in America has a stroke, and every 3.3 minutes someone dies of a stroke.

As harrowing as these statistics are, there is hope. In fact, there are 4,400,000 stroke survivors alive today. Through research and education, more can be done to prevent this killer from claiming more victims. Raising $4,500 for the American Stroke Association will serve as my entry into the marathon and as my part in helping to make a difference.

As some of you know, this will be my second marathon. In 1997, I ran the Marine Corps Marathon for the Leukemia Society, and I am happy to report that Nick, the patient for whom I ran, is now in remission. He is currently enjoying his life as a happy and healthy 9-year-old at Glenmont Elementary School. I wish there were more I could do for Emily. However, all I can do is try to prevent other innocent victims from succumbing to this disease. I will be running in memory of and in honor of Emily. Won't you please help me help others by keeping Emily's spirit alive.

Perhaps you too know a stroke survivor, or maybe you tragically have lost a loved one to this disease. Please send any donation you can as soon as possible. Although the marathon isn't until June, my first fund-raising deadline is March 5.

Considering the amount I have to raise, it is imperative that I get started now. Your tax-deductible donation can be made out to the American Stroke Association and sent to me at 91F Kennsington Court, Gunderland 12084. Don't forget that many corporations will match any donation you make, so you can help out twice as much by inquiring about this at your place of employment.

Please send me your company's matching gift along with your donation, and the American Stroke Association will take care of the rest. I know there are many different charities out there vying for donations, and I appreciate any support you can give this cause.

As I run each step, I will be thinking of you and your generosity, the stroke heroes who have survived and continue to fight, and most important, a beautiful, talented, compassionate young woman named Emily. Please help me keep Emily's memory alive while helping others fight to survive.

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to thank all the pharmacists at the Delmar CVS.

As I'm sure many parents know, it can be very confusing when it comes to giving more than one medication to a child with multiple symptoms. So far, this cold season has taken its toll on my children.

This weekend, my son had a high fever, a congested cough and an ear infection. After getting a prescription for his ear, I also knew I had to treat the fever, but didn't know whether I could give him a nighttime cough medicine as well. I don't like to assume that it's OK to give more than one medication at the same time.

On many occasions, I have called the pharmacy and asked the experts, and they have always been very helpful. It eases my mind to know that I can call a professional and find out what's best for my family.

I would like to personally thank all the pharmacists who have taken the time to answer my important questions. I am very grateful.

TV ad is demeaning to volunteer firefighters

Editor, The Spotlight:

Lately, on local TV there has been an advertisement for a credit card company that depicts a cat rescue by fire personnel. Maybe you have seen it.

To me, the advertisement is typical of the negative stereotype of a fireman that we all know.

"Don't know what they're doing — all those hoses and they don't know what to do with them — they can't even rescue a cat from the tree without someone telling them how to do it."

I think the icing on the cake is when it shows a chimney being knocked down by an aerial ladder.

With all the problems fire services have today in recruiting new members, providing the public with the best service possible and convincing the public that we do know what we are doing, an advertisement like this is insulting and demeaning to every person who puts on a firefighter's gear to go out and protect their community.

Fire personnel who put their lives on the line any time they answer a call should not be slammed by an advertisement such as this.

If you see this advertisement and agree it is demeaning and insulting to every firefighter, please take the time to write a letter of complaint.

The address is: CitiCard Customer Service, PO Box 6500, Sioux Falls, S.D. 57117.

If you know of anyone anywhere who is a firefighter, tell them about this ad and ask them to write a letter of complaint.

With a little luck, we may be able to remove this degrading advertisement from the airwaves.

Furdon will not receive tenure. The board also received a petition with 300 signatures in support of Furdon.

Senior Annie Marinaro spoke through tears, as she recalled crying in the hallway on her first day at the junior/senior high school, and being comforted by Furdon, who was not yet principal.

"I don't want to leave crying," Marinaro said, crediting Furdon with letting her achieve all she had during her years at Voorheesville.

Parent Sandy Lindner was among those who made a direct appeal to Superintendent Alan McCartney.

"We've lost some good teachers in Voorheesville," Lindner said. "We can't afford to lose a good administrator. I'm asking Dr. McCartney to reconsider this, and to consider the needs, belief and trust we have in you. I want to remind you of your obligation as Mr. Furdon's immediate supervisor, and as our superintendent, that the proper course is taken."

Repeatedly, community members described Furdon as evincing all the qualities needed in a principal, in particular his ability to be firm with students, while still being positive, supportive, communicative and, most important, always present at school events.

"Mr. Furdon is very effective as a principal," said parent Paula Finkle. "He's highly visible, and has an open door policy. He's a great role model, and he gets much accomplished. He sets a positive atmosphere, and makes Clayton Bouton Junior/Senior High School a positive educational experience. Let him continue. He loves his job, and we love him."

Athletic director Dick Leach spoke from a staff member's point of view.

"A lot of staff have asked 'What can I do?'" Leach said. "Mr. Furdon said that we should not do anything to disrupt the kids. Don't interpret the lack of staff here tonight as a lack of caring. I've been around for a while, and Mr. Furdon's the best I've ever worked with."

Board president John Cole assured audience members that their comments would be taken seriously, but expressed concern the superintendent and principal, Furdon's probationary period would extend another year.

Cole also told the audience that by law, personnel matters cannot be discussed publicly. Before Cole stopped him from going into specifics, McCartney said that he and Furdon have spoken monthly about issues surrounding Furdon's tenure.

Furdon seemed pleased by the support he received.

"They're great people," he said, adding that he hopes to stay in Voorheesville. "All of their comments are overwhelming. This is what I've worked towards, and what I think is happening, but you don't really know till you find out here."

Furdon said that if he stays, "a working relationship would have to be set up," following this year's events.

Asked if he thought he would be recommended for tenure, Furdon answered, "I don't know." As to a rumor that the tenure brouhaha is something personal between him

It's unfortunate that the rumor mill has gone so crazy, the stuff I've heard is unbelievable.

John Cole

at all that he has heard in the past months.

"It's unfortunate that the rumor mill has gone so crazy," Cole said. "The stuff I've heard is unbelievable."

Cole outlined the four scenarios that could play out this April or May, the time when Furdon's tenure appointment will or will not be made.

At that time, the superintendent could recommend tenure, for the board to accept or deny. The superintendent could also not bring a recommendation to the board, which Cole said would likely be a negative recommendation. A third possibility is that "Everyone forgets what they're supposed to do and tenure takes place," Cole said.

The fourth possibility is that, by mutual agreement between and McCartney, Furdon said, "I sure hope not."

Board member Joseph Poffit said the large amount of community support for Furdon influences his thinking on the matter, and that he will be involved in the decision-making process.

"I've been getting a lot of phone calls and letters and I intend to look at this in great detail," Poffit said. "I'd hate to have Furdon disappear. Administrators in every school have their ups and downs. I want to be involved in this decision."

Chuck Adalian posed a question that drew the evening's only round of applause.

"If it took this many people to open your eyes," he asked the board, "how many will it take to make this decision a no-brainer?"

FACT:

GE has spent $200,000,000 to clean the Hudson. And we'll spend whatever it takes to solve the problem.

FACT:

GE's source control program has reduced PCBs going into the Hudson from 5 lbs per day to 3 oz. And our new technology can get it down to zero.

FACT:

With GE's program, PCB levels in fish in the Upper Hudson are projected to reach FDA safety levels years before the EPA dredging would realistically be completed.

Some people are saying GE doesn't want to do anything about PCBs in the Hudson. The fact is, GE has been doing something. And it's the right thing. Dredging is the wrong thing.

A message from GE.

You Only Have Until April 17th To Let The EPA Know You Oppose Dredging. Find Out How.

New Internet resources PTSA sponsoring skating program offer online options

Three new Internet reference sources debut at the library this week, expanding and greatly facilitating online research options.

Gale's Literature Resource Center (LRC) is a literature student's dream. Designed to meet the needs of undergraduates and high school students, it includes the complete text of Contemporary Authors and Dictionary of Literary Biography, selected criticisms from Contemporary Literary Criticism and Merriam-Webster's Encyclopedia of Online resources are unmatched for breadth, timeliness, ease of use, and space-saving advantages. Bethlehem patrons have exhibited an increasing interest in and comfort with online research tools, as evidenced by public Internet station use and attendance at our various how-to workshops.

Online research tools have become indispensable to students of all ages, for whom the computer is as comfortable as a pencil. However, electronic reference materials are as varied in quality as their hard-copy counterparts. The selective eye of a librarian can determine which resources are the most respected, comprehensive and efficacious. Our sites are selected following a professional review process and subscription trials.

Literature Research Center, Grolier's Online, Facts on File and other electronic research tools are available to patrons via the library's public Internet stations. They are also available to Bethlehem Public Library cardholders who can access the Internet from home. The requirement for home access is the 14-digit library card number. Our Web page has been slightly modified to ease your search.

Library presentations introducing these new resources are scheduled for March and April. Watch for dates and descriptions in the next "footnotes" newsletter.

Check It Out Bethlehem Public Library

Literature, more than 3,000 plot summaries, and 58,000 full-text articles from 34 — count 'em — 34 literary journals.

The site is searchable by author, title, genre, theme and literary movement/time period. Furthermore, the "author" category will search by nationality, ethnicity, year and place of birth and death, and even occupation — for instance, which playwrights or poets teach at a particular university.

Gale's site also includes "Ready Reference Shelf," which integrates 14 of Gale's most popular reference directories, and "Student Resource Center, Jr.," formatted for easy use by younger students. Part of the beauty of the site is that everything is now accessible from one location, eliminating the need to sift through separate indexes — whether electronic or hard-copy.

The library has also purchased a subscription to Grolier Online, which is a treasure house for adult and young adult researchers. Encyclopedia Americana, The New Book of Popular Science, Grolier Multimedia Encyclopedia, Lands and Peoples and The New Book of Knowledge are all included here.

Last but not least, the popular Facts on File is now online. This site includes "Science Experiments Online," a compendium of experiments past and present, organized by discipline and sorted by student grade range. Forms on File is your online source for all kinds of forms, organized by subject.

Good Samaritan Senior Living

by Lee Bormann
President / C.E.O.

IMPROVING WITH AGE

According to an analysis of three longitudinal studies that followed people from infancy and childhood through maturity, the psychological health of both men and women tends to increase steadily from age 32 through age 62. It was found that, as individuals matured, they tended to be more productive, genuine, dependable, warm, and giving to others. They also became less negative, self-defeating, and likely to feel cheated or victimized by life. The psychological health of the average study participant increased moderately, though some showed dramatic increases, while others showed little or no change. On average, though, most people kept getting healthier. This analysis seems to bolster that notion, held by many older individuals, that experience brings wisdom.

Staying connected to those who love us, whether grandchildren or friends who have become like family, allows us to keep our hearts open as well as to have a place to share the little wisdoms we've gleaned from our life experiences. At Good Samaritan Lutheran Health Care Center, 125 Rockefeller Road, we encourage all our residents to adopt a healthy lifestyle, one that includes regular exercise, even if it only involves taking a walk on our beautiful grounds. Give us a call at 439-8116.

TORN OR PULLED QUADRICEPS

The large quadriceps muscle at the front of the upper leg is prone to pulling or tearing during bursts of activity. This injury may be complicated when blood in the quadriceps causes calcium deposits to form (myositis ossificans). Unless this condition is treated vigorously, the calcium will not allow the fibers in the muscle to extend fully, thereby interfering with the ability to bend the knee fully. A pull or tear of the quadriceps is less common than a hamstring pull or tear, but the treatment is much the same - Rest, Ice, Compression, Elevation (RICE). As for prevention, warm up sufficiently and stretch the quadriceps by pulling the foot up behind you until it reaches the buttocks.

VIEWS ON DENTAL HEALTH

Dr. Geoffrey B. Edmunds, D.D.S.

DENTAL TREATMENT PLANS

It's truth time. Your teeth have been examined and x-rayed. Now your dentist will explain in detail what, if any problems exist and what different options of treatment are available to you. A treatment plan will be prepared, and will hopefully allow you to grasp exactly what the dentist feels is the correct treatment, and any other necessary information, including costs involved.

There are usually several ways to reach the desired results, therefore many dentists will prepare two or more treatment options. Dental needs and financial resources vary from patient to patient. This is taken into consideration, and patients are given a variety of options to choose from, and informed of all aspects of such treatment. Then the patient may decide which plan will best suit their needs.

For example, a few missing teeth can be replaced with either a fixed bridge or a removable partial denture. The fixed bridge, due to the time involved and laboratory expense will cost more, however it does have the advantage of being fixed into place. Many patients can not afford a fixed bridge so they may opt for the less expensive alternative plan of a removable partial.

Within reason, the patient should be told exactly what is going to be done, how long it will take, the cost, the alternatives and the chances of further treatment in the future. If you are in need of dental treatment, having a treatment plan drawn up is a good idea.

BC boys forced to regroup after loss to Columbia

By ROB JONAS

The Bethlehem boys basketball team picked the wrong time of year to go into a shooting slump.

The Eagles struggled to hit their shots in a 67-43 loss to Columbia last Friday in the quarterfinals of the Suburban Council Tournament at Colonie Central High School. The loss followed a 50-38 defeat against Guilderland last Tuesday in which Bethlehem made less than 30 percent of its field goals.

"We're not shooting the ball well at all right now," Bethlehem coach Chuck Abba said.

Against Columbia, the Eagles (4-14) could not recapture the magic they possessed one week earlier when they had a halftime lead on the Blue Devils. This time, Columbia (16-2) jumped out to a 34-13 lead after the first half and never looked back.

"Columbia played very well, and we had a hard time attacking the basket," Abba said. "Craig Forth played outstanding on the inside, and they put pressure on the perimeter."

The Eagles suffered a late scare when forward Ben Barrowman left the game in the fourth quarter with an ankle injury.

"We're hopeful he'll be OK for this week," Abba said.

Forth led all scorers with 21 points for Columbia. Bethlehem was guided by a 13-point effort from Josh Burnett.

The Eagles had equal trouble getting their offense going in their final regular season game against Guilderland last Tuesday. They scored just seven points in each of the first two quarters and averaged 12 points in the final two periods against a stubborn Dutchmen defense.

"We shot the ball under 30 percent, and that's a pattern we've experienced before," Abba said. "We play well defensively, but we just don't put the ball in the basket enough."

Burnett and Tyler Ursprung each had 12 points to lead Bethlehem. Tyson McCabe scored 13 points, and Devon Bruce added 12 points for Guilderland.

The Eagles will get another shot at Guilderland when they meet tomorrow night in the final consolation bracket game of the Suburban Council Tournament at Niskayuna High School. Prior to the rematch, Bethlehem played Mohonasen last night at Niskayuna in another consolation bracket contest.

"We beat them earlier in the year, but it will be on a neutral court and they'll be primed to meet us," Abba said of Mohonasen.

Bethlehem guard Paul Stewart is watched by two Columbia defenders as he goes in for the shot during last Friday's quarterfinal game of the Suburban Council Tournament at Colonie Central High School. Stewart was limited to four points in the 67-43 loss.

RCS wrestlers take third at tourney

By ROB JONAS

Last Saturday's Colonial Council wrestling tournament at Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk High School followed true to the form of the league standings.

Regular season champion Schalmont won the team competition with 211 points. RCS finished third with 145.5 points, while Voorheesville placed eighth with 37 points.

"We were hoping to squeeze a little bit more out of it, but the kids came back and wrestled back hard," RCS coach John Vishneowski said.

"I only brought seven guys — less than half our lineup," Voorheesville coach John Jenkins said. "We had a good team effort from the guys we brought."

Jared Lackie was the lone local wrestler to win a title at the tournament. The RCS senior breezed through the first two rounds before defeating Schalmont's Rich Holoday 14-5 in the finals of the 189-pound weight class.

Joe Blondell and Justin Schipano also reached the finals in their weight classes for the host Indians. Blondell lost to Schalmont's Derman Lewis 12-3 at 171, while Schipano was shut out by the Sabres' Heath McCloud 9-0 at 145.

"We moved (Lackie) up to try to move the Blondell boy up to 171 because we thought he could make the finals," Vishneowski said. "It wound up working for us."

John Dibble (130), Landon Keir (135) and Steve Correll

(140) finished third in their weight classes for RCS, which placed 11 out of its 14 wrestlers in the top four.

Voorheesville had three place finishers at the tournament. Josh Welton took second place at 96 after being pinned by Schalmont's Paul Florio in the finals, while Zak Fluster (103) and Jesse Sommer (135) finished fourth.

RCS and Voorheesville now shift their focus toward the Section II playoffs. The Indians travel to Ballston Spa this weekend for the Class B tournament, while the Blackbids head to Warrensburg for the Class D tournament.

"The Class B's are a virtual battleground," Vishneowski said. "It's unbelievable how many good kids there will be there. I think it may be the toughest division this year."

The top four wrestlers from the Class A, B, C and D tournaments will advance to the state qualifier tournament Feb. 24 at the Glens Falls Civic Center. The winners at the tournament go on to the state championships in Syracuse.

AN ADDED BOOST

It is a good idea to carry high-quality booster cables in your vehicle in the event of a dead battery. Not only do inferior-quality cables pose the risk of melted insulation and fire, but their high resistance can damage the starter motor when subjected to long periods of cranking. Look for booster cables with features such as: built-in warning lights that signal incorrect connection, flexible cable guards at the clamp handle to prevent wear at stress points, pure copper wire in the cables, adequate length and gauge of cable (12 to 16 feet, 4 gauge), clamps covered with bonded vinyl insulation, and insulated clamp jaw with no exposed metal parts which could arc when contacting vehicle frame or other parts.

No one expects to have his or her vehicle break down. However, there are simple steps that you can take, such as carrying booster cables, to prepare for such an event. BETHLEHEM AUTO SERVICE reminds readers that a well-maintained vehicle reduces the risk of break downs and accidents. When you bring your vehicle to us, an A.S.E. Certified Technician will inspect your vehicle's brakes, battery, and tires. Call us at 426-8414, or visit us at 62 Hannay Lane in Glenmont off Rt 9W behind Stone Ends for quality auto service with a personal touch. Business hours are Mon.-Fri., 7-6.

HINT: The clamps on booster cables should fit both top or side terminal batteries.

Turnovers hurt Lady Eagles in loss to Shaker

By ROB JONAS

Any hopes the Bethlehem girls basketball team had of upsetting Shaker faded before the start of the fourth quarter.

The Blue Bison outscored the Lady Eagles 36-12 over the course of the second and third quarters on their way to defeating Bethlehem 64-41 in last Friday's Suburban Council Tournament quarterfinal game in Latham.

"It's getting toward the end of the year, and the girls have to realize that they have to start stepping up," Bethlehem coach Kim Wise said.

The Lady Eagles (10-8) trailed 16-13 after one quarter, but the Blue Bison (13-5) turned a series of Bethlehem turnovers into a quick burst of points in the second quarter to break the game open.

"We had some turnovers in a row that were unforced turnovers, and you can't do that against a team like that," Wise said. "They started getting two-on-one and three-on-one breaks."

Shaker continued the on-

Bethlehem's Megan Fish (40) looks to make an outlet pass around Guilderland's Tara Pezze during last Wednesday's Suburban Council basketball game.

Rob Jonas

slaught in the third quarter by outscoring Bethlehem 20-6 to grab a 27-point advantage. The Lady Eagles finished strong with a 16-point fourth quarter, but it was too late to catch the Blue Bison.

"Shaker is a good team," Wise said. "They're a very quick team, and they're very balanced between inside and outside."

Meg Morrissey had her way against Bethlehem's defense. The senior guard scored a career-high 34 points to lead Shaker. Megan Fish was the high scorer for the Lady Eagles with 15 points.

The loss drops Bethlehem into the consolation bracket of the Suburban Council Tournament. The Lady Eagles play their final two games of the tournament tonight and tomorrow before heading into the Section II Class A playoffs.

Bethlehem concluded its regular season last Wednesday with a 53-36 loss at Guilderland.

The Lady Eagles stayed within 10 points of the Lady Dutch throughout much of the game before Guilderland pulled away in the fourth quarter.

"I think we played hard," Wise said. "Their bench is deeper than ours. So, I think we got a little tired out there."

Kaitlin Foley had nine points, while Sarah Homer and Sue Kelly each contributed eight points for Bethlehem. Erin Pinchbeck scored 17 points to earn high-game honors for Guilderland.

Voorheesville girls stay in title hunt

The Voorheesville girls basketball team remained in the thick of the Colonial Council title hunt with a 57-33 victory against Cobleskill-Richmondville last Friday.

The Blackbirds (11-3 league, 12-6 overall) built a 20-6 lead in the first quarter and never looked back as they stayed one-game back of league-leading Schalmont in the win column.

Katelyn Berger scored 17 points, Brittany Burnham contributed 11 points and Andrea Burch added 10 points for Voorheesville. Brianne Hahn finished with 11 points for Cobleskill-Richmondville.

The Blackbirds dropped out of first place with a 49-46 loss to Schalmont last Tuesday in Rotterdam.

The Blackbirds battled back from a six-point deficit to tie the game at 26-26 at halftime, but the Sabres grabbed a three-point lead after the third quarter and held on for the win.

Burnham had 13 points, and Berger chipped in 11 points for Voorheesville. Danielle Bonitibus led all scorers with 17 points for Schalmont (12-3, 14-5).

The Blackbirds traveled to Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk last night for a Colonial Council battle. The Indians were coming off a 57-49 victory against Watervliet last Friday.

Rachel Matousek led RCS (7-11) with 25 points in the victory.

SPOTLIGHT ON CALENDARS ♦ ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Mummenschanz dazzles the senses with unique performance art

By TOM MURNANE

This Friday night, for one night only, The Egg at the Empire State Plaza is hosting a theatrical group that promises to offer its audience something quite different from the venue's usual performances.

For one thing, it will be quiet.

Welcome to the world of Mummenschanz (pronounced Moo-manschants), a four-person Swiss mime troupe that brings dazzling geometrical creations to life, using everyday materials such as cardboard boxes, according to The Egg's marketing and event manager Kim Engel.

The group, which has visited the Albany area twice before over an 11-year period, recently embarked on a 10-city "Next" tour, adding Albany at the last minute for a one-night performance.

The group, formed in 1972, takes its name from a term used to describe medieval Swiss soldiers who wore masks to conceal their reactions, Engel said.

But instead of masks, the troupe's members are garbed in black and carry the elaborate geometrical shapes that also hide their faces.

The goal of the group was to create a non-verbal theatrical language that would transcend the traditional barriers of nationality and culture, Engel said.

This way, she noted, the performers (currently two Italians, one Swiss and one Dane) can take their show to any country and people will understand what they are saying.

"What they want the audience to see is the expressiveness of the materials rather than the expressions on their faces," Engel said. "It is such an unbelievable, fun thing to watch."

Ironically, the group held a "farewell tour" two years ago, but at some point

What they want the audience to see is the expressiveness of the materials rather than the expressions on their faces. It is such an unbelievable, fun thing to watch.

Kim Engel

decided to hit the road again. The only differences between then and now are that the group has added a fourth member and has come up with an entirely new show, Engel said.

"When they had another venue drop out and contacted us to see if we could fit them in, our director (Peter Lesser) didn't hesitate. He said, 'Yes, let's do this!'" Engel said. "We got very lucky."

Everyone who goes to the Egg Friday (Feb. 16) for the 7:30 p.m. show will be lucky as well, she said.

Tickets are $22 for adults, $20 for seniors and $10 for children.

For information, call The Egg's box office at 473-1845.

PSEG

But Loomis, noting that "the district is in the middle of a budget crisis," rose to warn that "I think we're going to lose some tax revenue over this, certainly in the short run. I don't want anyone surprised. We are certainly doing our best to represent the community's interests, and to get the maximum tax revenue out of this plant, but it's likely that it will be somewhat less."

IDA chairman Michael Tucker explained that deregulation of the utilities industry has had an impact on the property valuation process.

"This is something we have to deal with, whether or not this plant is built," he said. "But part of that is to work out a win-win here that will allow this plant to go forward in a way that puts us back close to where we would have been from the decrease in taxes due to deregulation."

He said that a "full-blown public hearing" would precede any granting of a PILOT agreement by the IDA.

Fuller added, "The plant is the future for the town of Bethlehem. It is needed, it's business for the town. But we're not going to give away the store."

She leads the negotiating team on behalf of the town that also includes Tucker, Loomis and representatives and counsel of the school district and IDA.

On the plant's environmental impact, Arlotta and other officials said the new plant would produce significantly reduced nitrous oxide, carbon monoxide and sulfur dioxide emissions, and that vapor plumes from the plant's stacks would have a minimal impact as well.

Roughly 500 construction workers traveling to and from the site during construction would likely impact traffic at the intersection of routes 9W and 32 on weekday mornings, and at the intersection of routes 144 and 32 during evening rush hours.

PSEG officials also pledged to reduce truck deliveries of oil for firing the plant in the future, intending instead to rely on deliveries by way of river-borne barges.

As for permanent traffic or noise impacts, Arlotta said, "the fortunate thing about the location is that it is in an area zoned for heavy industrial use," with the nearest residences "far enough away that they should not be impacted."

PSEG officials also addressed the benefits of the project for consumers and the health of the deregulated power industry.

They projected that air and water quality permits will be issued by the state Department of Environmental Conservation during the first quarter of this year, with the Article 10 review to be completed later in the year, and the new facility in service by the end of 2003 — pending completion of reassessment and a PILOT agreement.

"Folks are concerned about the environmental impact," Brown said after the meeting. "But they are clearly concerned about the economic impact, and they're concerned about the revenue impact for the town. We know its a concern and perhaps a source of frustration that there isn't much information available on that right now."

from the suburbs.

"Even if the case is won on appeal, the political landscape is already changing ... we received less of an increase in state aid this year than last," Loomis said.

Following Loomis' lead, the board seemed resigned to the fact that this was going to be the kind of budget year the district hasn't seen for more than a decade.

"There is no magic solution — the only options we have are bad, worse and terrible," board member Dennis Stevens said. "We need everyone's input, and everyone has to come together."

"If there is a silver lining in all of this, it's that the current situation will invite more community participation and discussion on what the budget should look like," board member Robert Wing said.

"I hope that people who come to speak will stay positive," Wing added.
