BC board freezes district spending

By ETHAN SCHOOLMAN

The Bethlehem Central School District took its budget battle to a new level last Wednesday, announcing a freeze on all unnecessary expenditures for the remainder of the school year.

The spending freeze was the board's strongest salvo yet in its effort to keep fundamental academic programs safe in the face of falling revenues from both state and local sources.

"Obviously this is not something we like doing," said board president Lynne Lenhardt, "but we feel it is necessary in light of this year's unusual budgetary circumstances."

In announcing the freeze, Superintendent Les Loomis called attention once again to the specter of falling tax revenues due to the sale of the Niagara Mohawk steam plant to New Jersey-based utility PSEG.

"It is absolutely clear, as of tonight, that negotiations with PSEG will not be finished by the time the final budget will be voted on," Loomis said. "As a result, we have a responsibility to the taxpayers to show that we are doing everything we can to keep the tax increase this year under four percent."

Obviously this is not something we like doing, but we feel it is necessary in light of this year's unusual budgetary circumstances.

Lynne Lenhardt

According to Assistant Superintendent Steve O'Shea, the annual property tax increase for Bethlehem has averaged about 4 and a half percent for several years.

After announcing the freeze on spending, the board heard comment on proposed staffing changes for next year. Several teachers and administrators rose from the packed room to speak.

Roberta Rice, teacher and president of the Bethlehem Central Teachers Association, said: "To cut any of the positions (referred to in the board's agenda) would be to diminish the standard of education in the district, something that would be intolerable to both the board and the BCTA."

"Funding must be made available to assure equal opportunity for achievement for all students," said Kathy Svenson, vice president of Parents for Excellence.

Much of the debate centered on the proposed addition of a part-time string teacher at the middle school. Music Supervisor Michael Tebbano described drastic overcrowding in the string program at the school, with up to 14 students crammed into a lesson room intended for four or five.

"Without this extra teacher ... we might have to start putting quotas in, and turning people away," Tebbano said.

Amy DiPaolo, co-president of the Bethlehem Music Association, agreed.

Water suit may, may not head to court

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

A milestone in the town of Bethlehem's $14 million lawsuit against the firms that designed the controversial Schermerhorn Island water processing system nears, and a flurry of activity involving the town board may determine whether the four-year-old case proceeds to trial or is settled out of court.

The discovery phase of the legal proceeding against J. Kenneth Fraser & Associates and Rust Environment & Infrastructure, launched in 1999, is drawing to a close. Witnesses, including town public works officials and Supervisor Sheila Fuller, have been deposed in the case over the past year.

Now the town, as plaintiff in the case, faces a March 30 deadline to either settle or file a notice of issue before state Supreme Court Judge

Stage 700 set to go 'Into the Woods'

During a costume parade in the Bethlehem Central High School auditorium just two weeks before opening night, chaos reigned on stage, as well as in front of and behind it. Cast members, directors, parents and assorted crew members were on the move, and a minimum of three conversations were taking place at any one time.

In fact, this is par for the course, and all gathered agreed that Stage 700's upcoming production of Stephen Sondheim's musical, "Into the Woods" will be great.

Bethlehem police to step up alcohol, tobacco stings

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Bethlehem's police will be stepping up their enforcement efforts to halt the sale of alcohol and tobacco products to minors, according to the acting supervisor of the department's youth bureau.

"We want to let people in the business community know it's going to be an ongoing thing," said Officer Michael McMillen, who has overseen the work of the three-man bureau since the retirement of Supervisor Jim Corbett last fall.

"We particularly have a substantial alcohol problem in the community, and the businesses do a good job of not selling to our kids. We just want to keep it that way."

Alcohol and tobacco sale stings, in which an underage subject recruited by the youth bureau attempts to make purchases at area markets, convenience stores and other outlets, are nothing new for the Bethlehem police.

The last one was conducted in concert with the County Stop DWI program last Thanksgiving, but the Bethlehem police in the past have conducted the sting operations independently.

But with the youth bureau still shorthanded, no sting operations have been carried out recently.

With the arrival of spring, the approach of prom and graduation season for area high schools and a rising number of requests for greater enforcement by community groups like Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited and Bethlehem Networks Project, McMillen said the bureau would launch a new sting operation within two to three weeks — and planned to make them more frequent thereafter.

"Our goal is to try to do one maybe once a month; maybe every six weeks," he said. "It's something we will be doing on an ongoing basis, to be proactive."

We want them to be in compliance. We don't begrudge them doing business, we just want them to do it legally.

Officer Michael McMillen

During the upcoming spring break we might even do one during the day. And even if we do one in the next few weeks, we'll probably do another right around prom weekend."

While a large emphasis will be placed on alcohol sales, McMillen said, "We haven't done a cigarette sting in a while, but we're going to try to do them more frequently than in the past."

The state Alcoholic Beverage

Control (ABC) law prohibits such sales to anyone under 21, and violation can lead to a citation against the business, prompting a review by the state Liquor Authority that can lead to revocation of the establishment's sales license.

The sales clerk is also cited under the state penal code for endangering the welfare of a minor. Cigarette sales to minors, while they do not involve any licensing challenge, also result in a minor-endangerment charge for the clerk.

A typical sting can involve two or more of the town's three youth bureau officers at a time. They will recruit and briefly train an underage subject, equipped with a "wire" or sometimes under some form of video surveillance to record the transaction, and send the subject to make a purchase.

"We'll target an area of town, and try to hit as many establishments as possible," McMillen said.

"Sometimes we recruit kids from the high school, kids from other communities that we know," he said. "We try not to get local kids. Everybody knows them and we try not to get them in trouble with their peers" — who may well be behind the counter.

The subjects make no attempt to persuade or coerce the clerk, present false identification or represent themselves as being of legal age; they simply attempt to make a purchase without producing identification. If they are challenged by the clerk, they leave the store. If they successfully make a buy, the officers carrying out the surveillance secure the contraband as evidence and move in for an arrest.

Last November's sting produced only one arrest in the town. "That's pretty typical," McMillen said. "A lot of times, in fact, we'll go out and get nothing, because everyone's in compliance."

And, he said, local merchants not only cooperate with these stings — occasionally they request them to check their own security.

"We want them to be in compliance," McMillen said. "We don't begrudge them doing business, we just want them to do it legally. And we want them to know it's coming. It's like a DWI sweep — you certainly can't say you weren't warned."

Board likely to OK water extensions

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The Bethlehem town board is expected to approve, perhaps as early as next week, extensions to the town's water and sewer districts for the Orchard Estates subdivision, as well as a service extension into New Scotland for Five Rivers Environmental Education Center.

Orchard Street Associates, developer of the 11-plot, 42-acre subdivision, applied for the extensions in January, prompting public hearings on Feb. 28. The developer proposed to install an 8-inch water main along the south side of Orchard Street, connected to an existing main from the adjacent Cedar Ridge development, and proposed extending a low-pressure forced-main sewer from its present terminus on Fisher Boulevard.

Far from being controversial, the new extensions proved popular with most of the residents along Orchard Street who appeared at the hearing.

Only a single dissenter expressed misgivings about being included in the new water district. And one after another rose to plead for the sewer district to be expanded to include their homes, even though most do not intend to seek immediate service.

The proposed water extension boundaries would encompass roughly 133 acres, making service available to several homes on Orchard that would face the new main along the southwestern edge of the development. Though most currently have well service, those homeowners would be obliged to share in the tax burden of the extension if their homes are included in the district.

Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor estimated the cost at about 72 cents a year per thousand of assessed valuation, or roughly $72 per home annually, whether the residence hooks up to the system immediately or not.

But developer Gray Watkins said the new water main would represent an improvement to those homes whether they hook up or not. The homeowners would receive improved fire protection as a result of hydrants to be installed along the new mains. And with the new main effectively in their front yards, they would have access to a relatively cheap connection in the future.

"Just pay to put the lateral in, and you're done, you've got water," Watkins said.

The proposed sewer district boundaries were more narrowly drawn, to encompass only the new development. Many of the existing homes nearby have reliable septic systems — and joining the sewer system would have no immediate benefit, unlike the water main.

Moreover, hooking up would come at a substantially greater cost, $3,000 to $5,000 per home to install grinder pumps needed to use the forced main system, not to mention the cost of shutting down the septic systems.

But many of the subdivision's neighbors along both ends of Orchard Street turned up to ask that the sewer district extension be redrawn to include them — even though they intend to retain their septic systems for now.

"If I were to be in the sewer district, it would preserve my options for the future," Sal Carlomagno said.

Joining the district now, at a cost of about 40 cents per thousand, would be considerably cheaper than the legal costs of seeking a new extension, should residents need one in the future.

With no opposition being voiced to enlarge the sewer district, Secor pledged to have the redrawn district map ready for the town board's consideration soon.

The new water and sewer extensions are economically feasible for Orchard Street Associates because the state Department of Environmental Conservation has agreed to share the cost of their installation, in order to obtain access to water and sewer service for Five Rivers, just over the town line.

Approval by the town board, which now appears likely, would enable the developer to begin installing the new mains and sewers by this summer.

"We would hope and expect to have all of these improvements done" by February 2003, pending permits by the relevant federal, state and county regulatory agencies," Watkins said.

4-Corners suit settled out of court

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

A federal lawsuit against a Delmar eatery, filed by a handicapped-access advocacy group, has been settled out of court — but Four Corners Luncheonette owner David Heffley may yet sue the town over related issues.

In a stipulation of settlement filed before a federal magistrate on March 1, Heffley agreed to build a wheelchair-accessible ramp on an outdoor deck at his restaurant at 2 Grove St. The deck was built three years ago.

Simeon Goldman, an attorney representing Albany-based Disability Associates, who filed a lawsuit against Four Corners in U.S. District Court last Aug. 31, agreed to its dismissal.

The initial complaint, filed in the name of Mark Becker, a wheelchair-bound employee of the Bethlehem Police Department alleged that Heffley, in building the deck, had failed to "make alterations ... that are accessible to and usable by individuals with disabilities," in violation of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and the state Human Rights Law.

It also alleged that Heffley's closing of the deck last Aug. 29, after the advocacy group notified him of its intended legal action, was an act of "retaliation" against Becker "and all potential customers with mobility impairments."

In the settlement, Heffley agreed to complete an outdoor access ramp "in substantial compliance with applicable building codes" no later than June 15, barring any delays due to weather. He also agreed to leave the deck closed until the alterations are completed.

Should the ramp not be completed by Sept. 1, the court retains jurisdiction over the suit and could reactivate it.

"Our concern was that Mark and other people in wheelchairs have the same opportunity to enjoy outside dining as anyone else," Goldman said. "This achieves that. We're very, very pleased with the outcome."

"We had two meetings where we looked at ways of making the deck accessible at a reasonable cost to Mr. Heffley," Goldman said.

Heffley said a ramp inside the restaurant will be removed, leaving space for a compliant ramp to be installed.

He declined to discuss the cost of the renovations, but characterized it as "astronomical."

"I'm not sure I'm supposed to talk about that since it's still a legal issue," he said. "And although it's not a miniscule amount, it's nothing compared to the aggravation this has caused me."

Heffley said he hoped to have renovations under way "as soon as the frost's out of the ground."

Town Building Inspector Kevin Shea has been "reasonable" in helping to move the project along, he added.

But a legal notice of claim filed against the town by Heffley last Aug. 27, seeking unspecified monetary damages, still stands.

The notice gives Heffley a year to take formal legal action, and Heffley said that he may yet seek to recover the cost of the new ramp.

Heffley's notice of claim alleged that town building inspectors had "negligently, carelessly, recklessly and wrongfully" approved the design of the deck, despite repeated inquiries about whether an outdoor access ramp was necessary.

"They approved the original design, inspected it every inch of the way when it was built, and then issued a CO (certificate of occupancy) for what was done," he said, maintaining that they should have advised him if it was not in compliance with the ADA.

"I asked them personally several times, did this require handicapped access? They said no, specifically, it did not," he said.

Town names Shea as building inspector

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Following a two-month candidate search, the Bethlehem town board has promoted Kevin Shea to succeed John Flanigan, who stepped down as the town's chief building inspector in December.

Shea's appointment was approved Wednesday night by the board following final interviews earlier in the week, and became effective immediately.

Shea was among nearly 100 applicants for the post, necessitating the lengthy review process.

Shea, a certified code enforcement officer, supervisor of the town fire training facility and a fire prevention specialist with the Elsmere Fire Co., has been an assistant building inspector since 1986.

His appointment to head the department leaves a vacancy in the four-man office, but no determination has been made about the future of that position.

"We're going to take a look-see at this point," Shea said.

"It will depend on the workload. My first priority will be to settle in here first."

Flanigan retired last fall after three decades in town service, most of that as head of the building department. He was recently retained by the town board to serve as a part-time consultant in overhauling the town's land use policies and zoning codes.

My first priority will be to settle in here first.

Boat safety course on deck

The Bethlehem Police Department's youth bureau will sponsor an eight-hour boating safety course on Saturdays, March 31 and April 7.

The course is for youngsters age 10 to 18.

It will lead to a license to operate a motorboat or personal watercraft, which is required for minors by the state Department of Parks, Recreation and Historic Preservation's division of marine and recreational vehicles.

Classes will run from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. both Saturdays at the Bethlehem Ambulance Service building on Route 9W in Selkirk.

It is limited to 30 enrollees and preregistration is required.

To register, contact the Bethlehem Senior Services office in town hall at 439-4955.

'Survivor' offers lessons for suburban family life

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Outwit, outplay, outlast — the "Survivor" motto makes it sound like somebody has finally made a TV show accurately depicting motherhood.

Outwit — that's what I did the night I actually cooked a healthy meal, and everybody ate it without complaining.

Outplay — with the good weather coming, maybe the kids will finally be more inclined to go out to play after school, and fall asleep at a decent hour in the evening.

Outlast — that's what I feel like I already have to do to get Cormac to sit down and finish his homework every night.

It's kind of a wonder that all of the contestants on "Survivor" aren't mothers, for we would absolutely rule. Forty-seven days

COMMENTARY:
*Mom's
the

in a remote area would be a dream come true.

The show is always someplace warm, which, in this spring that doesn't want to come, looks really great. At least those icky bugs, snakes and exotic critters aren't carrying West Nile virus.

Those beaches look pretty good from here, too. With that low-calorie regimen the Survivors exist on, you'd lose enough weight that you wouldn't mind being in a bathing suit each day. Just think, no laundry to do, no waking up to, "Mom, do I have clean pants in the dryer?"

The cooking would not be as challenging as most of the contestants find it. There are countless evenings that I produce a meal after first panicking when I look in the pantry and fridge and realize that there's nothing in here everybody likes.

Contestant Jerri's fussy face about sticky rice is nothing compared to the full-scale drama of children insisting they've gotten food poisoning when they discover that the yogurt is slightly outdated (Hey, it's just a week, and the stuff is already spoiled milk anyway).

"Survivor" seems so quiet — no phone calls asking for cookies or juice for the next school event; or to pick up cones off the soccer fields; or to come retrieve a sick child from school in the middle of a work day; or to make you feel guilty about not donating to some telemarketer's description of a worthy cause.

Unless, of course, cell phones work in these remote areas. I can imagine the call now, "Mom, on your way home, could you pick up some poster paper and paints for the project I have due at school tomorrow?"

Alliance building is nothing new to mothers. We've all watched our children move from being mortal enemies to best friends to mortal enemies again — all by lunchtime on Saturday.

In our house, alliances shift fast, and there doesn't seem to be any predictable measure of them. Some mornings the boys start out thick as thieves, only to be spewing venom at each other before they head out the door to school. Their battles often seem tied to ownership of toys, and since the "Survivor" cast doesn't have a full complement of Gundam Wing action figures that can spring into battle at any given moment, their disputes end up being pretty minor compared to those at my house.

The only thing we can say for sure about alliances at our house is that they are too often formed against the parents. One brother might complain bitterly about the other getting preferential treatment, but when we reprimand either one, the other comes to his brother's defense pretty quickly, and soon Chris and I are the common enemy. It's confusing and exhausting, but also somewhat comforting to see that brotherly devotion.

You wonder how a mother might react to the squabbles that take place on "Survivor." Would our tried and true lines spring to the fore before we could check ourselves? How would all those aspiring actresses and Internet managers respond to the age-old maternal advice: "You don't have to be each other's best friends, but you don't have to say bad things about each other, either."

If my 8- and 10-year-old already realize that the world is full of people saying bad things about each other, what would a group of people trying to win $1 million say to my attempts at a "let's get together and feel all right" philosophy of life?

If you had told me two years ago — when Christopher was, by his account, the only third-grader to not see "Air Force One" — that I would allow my children to sit down and watch a bunch of people compete in a remote area for $1 million prize, I would have dismissed the notion of permitting such garbage into my house.

How the mighty have fallen. Perhaps this is where the children have outwitted, outlasted and outplayed me, as the years of their childhood have worn away many of my parenting ideals.

It's a good thing I only have two children — two more, and the fourth child would grow up thinking "The Matrix" was a children's movie and sugar was its own important food group.

I try to justify all four of us watching "Survivor" together. I am giving my kids a leg up on their college reading, I tell myself, by introducing them to the concepts of Machiavelli at such a young age. Some nights, we discuss strategy and the implications of behavior within a group. We can clearly see that it pays to be in shape — you're more likely to be picked for the show if you already look great in a bathing suit, and you won't collapse in a heap when you have to run across a scorching hot beach. We talk about what we could and couldn't do — eat a worm, no problem (we'd imagine it was ice cream); jump off a cliff, probably not.

The boys love the physical and mental challenges of the show best. Cormac is impressed with their complexity — "Who thinks that up?" — and Christopher watches carefully the way they carry out the tasks. It's the group dynamics, though, that fascinate us all and lead to so much talking that we sometimes miss the cast's reflections about surviving in the Outback.

We have our favorites — we love young Elisabeth and old Rodger and we all hate Jerri. We are worried to see that she is heading for a concrete lead, keeping her original teammates with her. We talked some about how loyalty to a team is sometimes more important than your personal feelings, and can sometimes help you get further in life. Then we talk about watching your back around people with knives and motive to use them.

I suspect that my kids, like all kids, already know a bit about group dynamics. They, like us, are sometimes puzzled at who evolves as a leader, the kid who nobody crosses and everybody wants to be around.

They have already faced having to protect themselves, had their loyalties tested and felt tested themselves. Perhaps it is a bit stark to see it all outlined on prime-time TV (and maybe they feel if we'd just buy them the Reebok sneakers from the commercial, life would be better), but maybe it comforts them to know there could be a $1 million prize for just surviving this life.

Maybe our suburban lives are so mundane and sheltered that watching this group of random people compete for $1 million in a remote area is about as exciting as it's going to get.

Whatever the answer, "Survivor" night's a big one at our house. So pardon me while I go find a snack we'll all eat, and the boys start humming the music. "Oh ay, oh ay, oh ay oh."

BC freeze

Drastic times call for drastic measures. And to avert even more drastic times, Bethlehem School Superintendent Les Loomis has frozen expenditures in the current year's school district budget.

In a letter to faculty and staff last week, Loomis said the freeze is to create additional reserve funds to help cushion the blow to taxpayers from the potential effects of an upcoming PILOT (payment in lieu of taxes) agreement between the town Industrial Development Agency and PSEG Power.

PSEG Power purchased the Albany steam plant from Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. at a price far lower than it was assessed at. A PILOT agreement is expected soon, and that's when hard numbers will be determined. What all of this means is that tax bills will go up.

The school district, to its credit, is attempting to offset a potentially hefty increase by the spending freeze, and by keeping next year's budget plan in tow by holding an increase to under 4 percent.

But even with that, taxpayers will most likely get hit with another raise after the PILOT agreement is reached. The question now is how much will school tax bills go up.

Looking ahead, the question of maintaining the level of programming and staffing in BC schools looms. Realistically, it would seem that a time of severe belt-tightening is in the offing. Unfortunately, there are no easy solutions to this dilemma, that will affect taxpayers as well as the students and staff in the district.

Upcoming theater

There's a good deal of first-class entertainment on deck in Bethlehem over the next two weekends.

BCHS director Jim Yeara and company are putting the finishing touches on "Into the Woods," which will be presented next week at the large theater at the high school.

And this weekend in the middle school auditorium, director Sara O'Connell and crew will present J.R.R. Tolkien's "The Hobbit" on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"West Side Story" is coming up in May at Clayton A. Bouton Jr./Sr. High School in Voorheesville.

Dramatic productions in both school districts are of high caliber, reflecting the tremendous teaching/student talent in our schools.

If you've never seen the high school or middle school productions, you're in for a treat.

You also might want to purchase your tickets early. All of these venues typically sell out fast, and there's a reason for that. It's an evening of top-notch entertainment for next to nothing.

Institute helps businesses grow

By J. FELIX STREVELL

The writer is chief executive officer of The Institute for Entrepreneurship.

More than 750 eighth- to 12th-grade entrepreneurs are learning business skills in 15 schools in the Capital District, while entrepreneurs who are already running established businesses, such as a woman operating a chocolate retail company and another expanding her day care center, are also broadening their skills and finding new resources to succeed.

The fact that these people are working toward success in their own businesses is hardly surprising, since the Small Business Administration reports there were nearly half a million small businesses in New York state alone, in 1998 and more every day. Microsoft, IBM, General Electric and many other American success stories began as small businesses.

However, it is surprising that some entrepreneurs are still in high school, and even more so that they and many older entrepreneurs are all striving toward success under the auspices of the same resource —

Point of View

The Institute for Entrepreneurship.

These hopeful, risk-taking entrepreneurs are also united by their desire to build something of their own, and by their potential to contribute to the economy of our state and nation.

To develop that potential in entrepreneurs of all ages — to help them learn, grow and succeed — the institute provides educational services, financial support and other resources to those interested in launching and operating their own businesses. Headquartered in Albany and working with support from New York state and many university partners and corporate sponsors, the institute strives to make many services easy to access and to use.

For example, those high school students mentioned above are among the 13,000 high-school-age future entrepreneurs learning business skills online, at their own pace through the institute's pioneering EntreSkills program.

Their teacher, who was also my business teacher, said: "This is great because it gives them an opportunity for real-life training in areas where many have thought about working. It excites them and gets them thinking in concrete terms about how to put in place that dream of owning their own business."

Students can learn online, studying how to develop an actual business plan, how to seek financing, and an array of human resources topics including staffing and personnel management.

The institute takes its direction from the ambitions of our members, working to nurture a global community of aspiring entrepreneurs of all ages.

In addition to the EntreSkills online program for young entrepreneurs, the institute also offers many online educational programs, including online master's degrees in business administration through the University of Buffalo, Marist

College and other schools. These individual and corporate training opportunities include both technical skills, such as business software, and management and planning skills.

Since starting and maintaining a new business offers many financial challenges, the institute has also developed an array of financial resources for entrepreneurs, as well as educational opportunities. The Jump Start Fund for Entrepreneurs offers annual scholarships and grants to entrepreneurs in three categories — Future Entrepreneurs Scholarship, open to junior and senior high school students who may use funding to further their studies; the Angel Grant, open to applicants who have an interest in starting their own business; and the Golden Opportunities Grant, targeted for applicants over the age of 55.

The institute has also developed partnerships with state and federal organizations, such as the Small Business Administration, that can assist aspiring entrepreneurs in resolving questions concerning licenses and applying for financial assistance, and with corporate sponsors providing in-kind donations of materials and services.

Recognizing that the Institute for Entrepreneurship is dedicated to developing opportunities and fulfilling the limitless potential of entrepreneurs, it enjoys growing support from all business sectors as well as government. We invite business people, educators, government leaders, and, of course, aspiring entrepreneurs, to learn more about the institute through our Web site at www.nyie.org.

You never know, one of our current, or future, EntreSkills program students may build the next Microsoft.

The Institute for Entrepreneurship is a nonprofit organization which provides education, innovation and access to capital to entrepreneurs of all ages.

Headquartered in Albany, the institute strives to nurture and inspire entrepreneurs to learn, grow and succeed. For information about programs, visit <http://www.nyie.org>.

Cave logistics chief takes issue with article

Editor, The Spotlight:

I was appalled, but not surprised by your coverage of the recent fatality at Clarksville Cave. From the first question Mr. Phillips asked me, it was clear that he was not objective, but had an agenda. He tried several times to get me to say that the problem at Clarksville Cave was caused by the lack of control. I would not say that, because it is not true.

Nevertheless, Mr. Phillips wrote a slanted, prejudicial article that all but places the blame for what happened with the owners for not controlling access. The reporter failed to mention why I think there is a problem at Clarksville, even though I told him.

Instead, there is this desire expressed to close the cave. However, it is apparent to me that Mr. Phillips knows nothing about cave management, yet he has these ideas he thinks will resolve the problem. The local cavers manage six properties containing 10 caves, including the longest cave in the Northeast. I have written management plans for six cave properties and am considered knowledgeable in the field of wild cave management. I guess a few visits by Mr. Phillips to Clarksville Cave many years ago, makes him more of an expert than I am.

There is also a claim of two to three rescues a year. I don't know the source of this information. Our numbers show 12 incidents in the last 10 years. And most of these involved escorting an individual without a working light from the cave. One can hardly equate this with this most unusual 46-hour body recovery.

As an aside, the article states,

"Three entrances are on separate owners' land and Engel and Davis said they have traditionally offered unfettered access." I am not sure whether this is poor writing or bad facts, but the sentence should state: "Three entrances are on separate owners' land, and Engel and Davis said the owners have traditionally offered unfettered access." Though that is not quite right, I would not say "unfettered" with respect to all the land overlying the cave.

As for calls to close the cave — these are ill-considered and without any factual basis. The last true in-cave fatality in New York was in 1968, 33 years ago. How many outdoor sports can claim that safety record? The overwhelming majority of incidents at Clarksville Cave have been caused by people doing dumb things. Unfortunately, this fatality is no exception. Why punish the thousands of visitors to the cave who go in there properly prepared and visit it without incident?

Because caving is a sport that does not appeal to the masses, it is identified as being unnecessary, but what sport is really necessary?

If we closed things each time there was a fatality, we'd close roads where there were fatal accidents. We'd close lakes where someone drowned. We'd close Thacher Park. Pretty soon we'd all be sitting home twiddling our thumbs and dying of heart disease from lack of exercise.

Pottery shop a dream come true

Editor, The Spotlight:

After parking my car near the large unsightly brown planter, I attempted to cross the street to view the newest addition to Bethlehem's retail smorgasbord on the day of its opening. A school bus, two Volvos and a garbage truck almost ran me down, but I am resilient and somehow managed to crawl to the already magical entrance of the new little shop, Picket Pottery.

The trip was well worth it.

Finally! Here is a store that people will not only want to patronize, but one I think will draw folks from other towns. First, I browsed through the merchandise which was all designed and made by the owner, Lisa David of New Baltimore. What great stuff.

She displays her unique mix of things in a creative and most pleasing manner. Pottery, old time tin signs, candles, fudge, clever decorative signs and the 'yummier' coasters (which I simply had to have) are only a few of the items.

You get the feeling of being back in time about 100 years, and unless you look out the window, you almost believe life in Delmar can be beautiful. Lisa and I chatted for a while and found we shared a common dream. 'Wouldn't it be something if those unsightly brown planters were gone?' Yes, I know I've said this before, but someone please tell me who in the heck thought those monstrosities were a good idea?

In a perfect world, people would actually let other people cross the street (like in Massachusetts), free to amble the cobblestone sidewalk in front of Picket Pottery and able to see at night with the aid of old-fashioned street lights?

What if the Chinese restaurant actually was forced by the town to replace its broken window and chewed-up 'open' sign, and what if the building next to it were actually painted?

We sighed and saw what could be. But for now, get yourselves over there (you can park in the back of the building and avoid the thrill of crossing the street) and shop, shop, shop!

Easter, Mother's Day, everyday (husband — this includes you, your wife will love you for it) are all good reasons to allow Picket Pottery to become a mainstay in Bethlehem. Don't pass it by, it's open Tuesday through Saturday.

Former student praises coach

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am writing about Jesse Braverman. I can't believe that injustice that has been put upon him.

I was once a student of his, and let me tell you that man is full of goodness and guidance. I remember being a Mr. Know-it-all, who wanted to do everything my way.

Things changed for me when I met Mr. Braverman. He was my tutor and did everything under the sun to get through to me. Of course, I didn't listen because I knew everything. After a few good tussles, I came to respect Mr. B., as we called him in class.

When we tried hard, Mr. B. would go out of his way to take us fishing or go roller-skating. He made sure that we knew that if we did well and strove for the top, we would reap our rewards.

Mr. B. is and was a definite role model and true leader. He showed us that hard work and dedication is the backbone of our country. Eventually, my relationship stopped with Mr. B. and our lives went our separate ways. Needless to say, things got drastically worse for me and I ended up with a 25-to-life sentence.

My little brother also knows Mr. B. and through him I was able to contact Mr. B. again. Since then, Mr. B. has been to see me many times on visits. Every once in a while, he will bring a student with him who is much like I was when I was that age.

I do my best to convey what I went through at that age, but I never really know if it sinks in.

I can truly only say from my perspective guys like Mr. B. are too few and far between. He truly is a godsend. Mr. B., if you are reading this, you are a true friend and I love you like a brother.

Don't miss BOU auction

Editor, The Spotlight:

"Who's who" and your friends and neighbors will be there — at the BOU auction this Friday, March 23, at Bethlehem Central High School at 7 p.m.

There are many items that money cannot buy — a ride on a fire engine, lunch with a local politician, being principal for a day.

There are delicious home-made desserts to sample, and two fine auctioneers to honor — Dave Murphy and Joe Schaeffer, both former principals at our schools.

Sharing the podium with Joe and Dave for the first time will be Elsmere teacher Carol Smith and Clarksville Principal Dave Ksan-znak. Admission is free.

February break proved eye-opener for student

Editor, The Spotlight:

February break for students in Bethlehem is often a time to rest, relax and take off for some warmer vacation spot. I, too, left for somewhere warmer; however, my trip was no vacation.

As a member of the human rights organization Free the Children, I traveled with a delegation of students to witness for myself the effects of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) on the workers in factories in the border region in Mexico.

Since its implementation in 1994, more than 1.3 million Mexicans have been employed in factories along the U.S. border and many American companies have moved their operations to Mexico, bypassing American labor, environmental, and health laws in order to maximize profits.

This past week, I witnessed for myself the impact of NAFTA on the people of Mexico. In a poor country where good jobs are hard to find, especially for those without a high school education, many people in the border areas must work at low-paying jobs in border factories known as maquiladoras.

I met teen-agers as young as 13 years old who work in these factories. Forced to meet high quotas, these children work long hours in unsafe conditions, and are paid, at most, $40 a week. On $40 a week, it is impossible to provide an adequate living for a family.

We visited huge communities where people live on small plots of land in shacks made of cardboard and other scrap materials. Roads are paved with the toxic byproducts of a nearby

DuPont factory, which manufactures Freon.

I saw for myself people who lived in a garbage dump, staying there to make a little extra money by picking through the trash and reselling it.

As a resident of Delmar with a comfortable life, I was horrified by the extremity of the poverty in an area so close to our own border. I won't ever forget the faces of the children who ran around barefoot in their home on the garbage dump. And I hope that by reading this, our community will realize that not everyone has the privileges that we enjoy here.

I learned that with so many people in this world who barely survive, it is important to step back and understand the role our own economic short-sightedness plays in furthering injustice. These problems are complicated, but they are not insurmountable.

Our community can participate in many ways to help the situation in Mexico. Supporting organizations like Free the Children is a good way to start. Also, we, as consumers, must begin to demand fair conditions for the workers that make the clothing, cars, and other products that we buy.

Write a letter to your favorite clothing store and ask them about the conditions of the workers who made their products. Or get involved in the fair labor movement, by contacting the local chapter of Free the Children by e-mail at ftcalbany@collegeclub.com, or visit our Web site at www.freethechildren.org.

A TON OF PCBs RESUSPENDED AFTER DREDGING.

IS THAT A SOLUTION?

The EPA claims that, after dredging, only 100 lbs. of PCBs will be resuspended in the Hudson. But a study released last December by the U.S. Geological Survey of the Fox River, where the most advanced dredging technology was used, shows that 22 times that amount could be resuspended.

This means when the EPA is finished dredging the riverbed, over a ton of PCBs could end up back in the Hudson. Is that what they call a solution to the PCB problem?

You have until April 17th to tell the EPA you oppose dredging.

Historical association slates essay contest

The annual E. Dayton Joslin Essay contest sponsored by the New Scotland Historical Association is open to every seventh-grader living in the town of New Scotland.

This year, the association is making every effort to invite students from all over town to enter. Essays can be written as school projects or students can write them on their own.

The essay must be on a topic relating to any aspect of town history including, but not limited to, people, politics, business, buildings, recreation, farms, parks, education and religion.

Resources can be published books and articles, as well as published written accounts of town life that are found in old letters, journals and other documents.

Contestants are also encouraged to interview older town citizens (including relatives) and record their memories of the way things used to be. These oral histories can be written down in essay form—information that will otherwise be lost forever.

Other possibilities are visiting one of the town cemeteries and doing research on some of the names on tombstones or writing about the history of a cemetery.

The essay should be approximately 500 words, with a bibliography attached. The bibliography should not be included in the word count. The essay and bibliography can be typed or handwritten in pen on lined paper.

The first prize is $100, second prize is $50, and the third prize is a copy of New Scotland Township.

Contestants submitting essays that are part of a class project will receive their assignment the third week in March. Essays must be submitted by April 30.

Individual entries must be postmarked by May 1, and should be sent to the New Scotland Historical Association, PO Box 541, Voorheesville 12186.

For information, contact Bob Parmenter at 765-4652 or Marie Hornick at 768-2933.

PTA plans Funfest March 24

The PTA sponsored Funfest will be held Saturday, March 24, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The event will include games, face-painting, food, a bake sale, refreshments, door prizes, a Chinese raffle, book walk and more.

Mischief the Clown will entertain with a walk-around show of jokes and balloon sculpture from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and a magic show at noon.

Friends of Music to host concert

The Crosbys, a 12-member all-male a cappella group from Binghamton University will perform on Friday, March 23, at 7:30 p.m. at Clayton A. Bouton Jr./Sr. High School.

The Crosbys are currently in a national a cappella competition. The group has won the mid-Atlantic semi-finals and will compete for the championship at Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts in New York City in April.

One of the vocalists, Josh McMahon, is a 2000 graduate of the high school.

The concert is sponsored by Friends of Music and is free to the public.

Kiwanis to fire up barbecue

The New Scotland Kiwanis Club will sponsor a Brooks chicken barbecue on Saturday, March 24, from 3 to 7 p.m. at SuperValu Foods on Maple Avenue.

The takeout menu will include chicken, baked potato, coleslaw, a roll and butter.

Proceeds support youth activities and community services.

A class on growing mushrooms at home will be held Tuesday, April 3, at 7 p.m.

The course fee is $5 per class per person.

For information or to register, call Billie-Jo Ryan at 765-3500.

Petitions for V'ville school board

The Voorheesville Central School District has petitions available for two school board seats.

One seat has a three-year term ending June 30, 2004, and will fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Holly Desmond Debes.

The other is for five years, ending June 30, 2006. The seat is currently held by Joseph Pofit, whose term will expire in June.

The candidate receiving the largest number of votes will serve the five-year term.

School board candidates must be at least 18 years old and qualified voters.

They cannot be employed by the board on which they serve or live in the same household with someone who is also a member of the school board.

Petitions are available in the district office at the high school on Route 85A Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Petition should be signed by a minimum of 25 qualified district voters and returned to the district office by 4:30 p.m. on Monday, April 16.

Get on waiting list for art workshop Media center offers many new acquisitions

The Saturday drawing workshop for March 24 with naturalist artist Stanley Maltzman is full.

Thanks go to Cindy Graham, whose generous gift to our arts programming this year has made possible a number of popular workshops and demonstrations.

We are keeping a waiting list of anyone who missed out on this program with the hope that we can schedule another in the near future.

Call the reference desk at 765-2791 and leave your name, address and phone number.

Sign-ups are still being taken for the Princeton Review SAT

Voorheesville Public Library

review on Tuesday, March 27, at 6:30 p.m. Call now and attend this session for valuable tips on performing well on these exams.

Home Across the Road by Nancy Peacock is the selection now available to those who register for the April book discussion.

The Every Other Thursday Night Poets meet on March 22 at 7 p.m. Newcomers are always welcome.

Don't miss the wonderful pastels and watercolors by Maureen Saul in the hall gallery.

In our display case this month are horse statues from the collection of Alex Parker.

If you have a collection you would be to willing display for the enjoyment of your neighbors, please call the library and volunteer.

Pesticide watch sets program at library

Bethlehem Pesticide Watch will sponsor a program entitled "Green Lawns/Natural Lawns" on Monday, March 26, from 6:45 to 8:45 p.m. at Bethlehem Public Library.

David Chinery, Cornell Cooperative Extension agent, and Sandra Walck, owner of Garden Designs in Delmar, will provide information about maintaining attractive lawns without the use of pesticides and using alternative plantings to cut down on lawn size and maintenance.

For information, call 439-5359.

Last year, the media center was recognized by local newspapers for having the best film and CD collections in the Capital District.

A list of newly acquired films and music CDs can be found on the media center's Web page, along with news and views concerning the ever expanding world of audio-visual media.

Check It Out Bethlehem Public Library

Go to the library's homepage at www.uhls.org/bethlehem and click on Library Services for Adults, then on "Sharps and Flats."

If you haven't visited us lately, stop by soon and check out the media center's new look. Better shelving and signage have contributed to a streamlined, accessible, patron-friendly location, thanks to media head Michael Farley and his tireless staff.

MUSCLING IN

Because its benefits are so overwhelming, strength training is now recommended by the American College of Sports Medicine for virtually everyone over age 50. Muscle mass declines dramatically after middle age, by about 15% per decade beginning at 60 (even more after age 80). This loss of strength, combined with age-related deficits in balance and coordination, are largely responsible for the falls suffered each year by one third of American adults over 65. Strength training can substantially slow (even reverse) these declines, thereby dramatically lowering the risk of falls and fractures, rebuilding atrophied muscles, and making joints stronger and more flexible. In one case involving 90-year old nursing home residents, strength training increased their muscle mass by an average of 10% after two months.

Taking care of yourself through regular exercise increases your overall health as well as improving your well-being. At Good Samaritan Lutheran Health Care Center, 125 Rockefeller Road, we encourage our residents to exercise and do all we can to support a healthy lifestyle to foster their optimum health and well-being. Call 439-8116 for more information. We offer beautifully landscaped grounds for the pleasure of our residents.

Town to accept plates for recycling at 3 sites

The state Department of Motor Vehicles is in the process of issuing new license plates for all registered vehicles in the state.

As a vehicle is reregistered, the owner will receive newly designed license plates to replace the outdated ones.

To help residents properly dispose of old license plates, the town Highway Department has designated three drop-off sites where old plates can be brought for recycling.

They are: the town highway garage at 74 Elm Ave. East in Selkirk, Monday to Friday, 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; the Rupert Road Transfer Station in South Bethlehem, Monday to Saturday, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and the town clerk's office in Bethlehem town hall at 445 Delaware Ave. in Delmar, Monday to Friday 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Residents are asked to mark the face of the old plate with an indelible permanent marker.

Cocoza, the play's choreographer. "It's frenetic, and it looks like there are a lot of loose ends, but it will all come together."

English and drama teacher Jim Yeara is once again at the helm, battling termites and broken flies (ropes that hold lights) as cast and crew enter the final days of rehearsal of a play that was cast in January.

"We did this play eight years ago, and I wasn't sure I wanted to revisit it," Yeara said. "We have a huge number of kids who perform in this district though, and this is a very even musical with about a dozen leads."

Yeara said that Sondheim's music can be quite difficult.

"There's a lot of repetition, and there are many overlays," Yeara said. "The kids have to be on top of their talent."

"Into the Woods" is the retelling of some of Grimm's fairy tales, and Yeara said they are true to the original versions.

"They're humorous, and sometimes bloody," he said. "They're not Disneyfied at all. The theme, though, is that we're all in this together."

Kathy Curran, an officer of the Bethlehem Theater Support Group (BTSG), and parent of a cast member, described "Into the Woods" as "fairy tales with a mature twist."

"The baker and his wife want a child," Curran said. "They're thwarted by the witch, who puts a spell on them. The characters go through a series of events together, all wishing for things, but not sure if they should get their wishes."

Yeara attributed the play's success to the many people who have helped out, especially the BTSG and the Bethlehem Music Association.

"It's a wonderful group of kids and parents," Yeara said.

Support from within the school has been key, Yeara said, acknowledging Principal Jon Hunter and members of the art department who've worked on the set, particularly George Dirolf and retired teacher Bill Morrison.

The 10 foot by 24 foot set illustrates storybook pages, which will be turned by traditional fairy tale characters Captain Hook and Peter Pan, and the most modern day fictional hero, Harry Potter, and his nemesis, Draco Malfoy.

"You've got to have a villain," Yeara said with a grin.

Gail Balluff, whose son Matt is cast as Jack in the Beanstalk, was this year's costume chairwoman, and borrowed professional-quality costumes from Park Playhouse, Skidmore College, the New York State Theater Institute and even some tuxedos from Futia's.

The cast members are ready to go.

"It's a hard show," said Betsy Stambach, who plays Jack's mother and is president of Stage 700. "It's been a good experience, and I've enjoyed it."

Dan Israel, who is Cinderella's Prince and the Big Bad Wolf, appeared in Theater Without a Net's winter production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

"This is different, because we're not in Studio 46, which is a small, intimate room," he said. "This is an 800-seat theater, with a big set and a big stage. We'll have to focus, use a lot of energy and project more."

Cocoza, who has worked on many of the district's performances at both the middle school and high school levels, said "Into the Woods" has given her a chance to look at movement in a different way.

Rather than just work on dance steps, she said, it's given her a chance to look at movement throughout the play, and plug things in, in different places.

Middle school teacher and music director Frank Leavitt has worked with the cast on vocals for the play, and high school teacher David Beck has worked with the 20-member pit band.

"This has gone wonderfully," Leavitt said. "The kids have a great deal of experience, knowledge and maturity. They can really take responsibility for their work."

"It's fun to work with these creative people like Frank and Jim," Cocoza said. "The technical support from the art department is great, too. We're using all of our talents from the school. We've got a lot of artistic kids working on this."

Twenty students worked on the tech crew, and 25 kids are in the cast.

Kelley Curran is the witch, Jeff Barnet is the baker and Helena Kopchick plays his wife. Israel is the Big Bad Wolf and Cinderella's Prince, and Chelsea Adewunmi is Cinderella. Emily Axford is Little Red Riding Hood.

There will be special performances of "Into the Woods" for the district's elementary students.

Regular performances are scheduled for Thursday, Friday and Saturday, March 29, 30 and 31, at 7 p.m. and Sunday, April 1, at 2 p.m. at Bethlehem Central High School.

Tickets are $8 for adults and $5 for seniors and students.

They are available at The Paper Mill in Delaware Plaza, during lunch time in the high school cafeteria, and at the door.

THE OXYGEN SENSOR

Modern vehicles are equipped with oxygen sensors in their exhaust systems that measure the oxygen content of the vehicle's exhaust gases. This information aids the engine-control computer to regulate the mixture of air and fuel burned in the engine, providing an optimal balance of power, economy, and clean exhaust. Oxygen sensors are relatively easy and inexpensive to replace. Some vehicle owners ignore the recommended replacement intervals in their owner's manuals because there is not a noticeable difference in the way the vehicle drives when the sensor stops functioning normally. This is a false economy. The engine may use too much fuel as a result, as well as pollute the air needlessly. This hurts both the wallet and the environment.

You can keep your vehicle in peak condition, avoid costly auto repair bills, and help prevent environmental damage. BETHLEHEM AUTO SERVICE encourages readers to implement a consistent routine maintenance check every 3,000 miles. Our A.S.E. Certified Technicians use the latest computerized equipment to detect any problems with the exhaust system, fuel injectors, battery, brakes, and shocks. For customers' convenience, we are pleased to offer shuttle service. Call us at 426-8414, or visit us at 62 Hannay Lane in Glenmont off Rt 9W behind Stone Ends for auto service with a personal touch. Business hours are Mon. - Fri., 7-6.

P.S. Because oxygen-sensor replacement is important, manufacturers may put a glowing red light on the instrument panel as a reminder for when it becomes time to replace the sensor.

colors and scents that are right for you, it will allow you to create the reality you want.

History

Tony&Tina started as a conceptual art project which began with the intention of expanding the use and understanding of vibrational remedies; the way color, aroma, sound and thought affect the human energy system.

Art

Each product is an extension of the conceptual art piece that helped form the company, seven nail polish bottles with colors corresponding to the human Chakra system.

The ancient knowledge of color energy balancing human energy has been captured in a contemporary pop package.

Colortherapy

What is color?

Color is light, an electromagnetic energy that comes in different wavelengths. When these wavelengths bounce off objects they create light.

Different speeds, intensities, absorbent and reflective qualities determine the colors we see. Our bodies are made up of this same energy.

Within our system we have different energy centers that vibrate at different frequencies. The seven main energy centers are called Chakras.

Aromatherapy is connected to the idea of holism, meaning one must care for the whole person.

Each chakra is directly associated with and affected by a specific color due to a unique frequency. Our charkas are responsible for much of our physical, mental, emotional and spiritual health.

When these centers become weak or out of line, color is one of the most effective ways to restore balance and strength to our system.

Aromatherapy

The olfactory sense is registered in one of the earliest developed parts of the brain, and has one of the most dramatic emotional effects on us.

Only essential oils, as opposed to impure oils, have real therapeutic value. They are absorbed in two ways. First, inhaling the scent carries it through your nose to your lungs, where it is then absorbed into the bloodstream.

Second, by applying the oil to your skin, it is absorbed through the cellular membrane.

Twenty-first century life gives rise to many genuine sources of anxiety.

Essential oils are helpful in easing a number of psychological problems such as anxiety, grief, mental fatigue, depression, poor appetite, lethargy, memory loss and much more.

Aromatherapy is connected to the idea of holism, meaning one must care for the whole person.

Each Tony & Tina product also serves as a constant reminder to turn attentions inward and get to know yourself before you choose color and scent.

Kids clothes for spring

By JENNIFER ARSENAULT

With spring just around the corner, it's just about time to pack up your kid's snowsuit and replace it with some short-sleeved shirts.

Local stores have the latest fashion trends to keep the smaller members of your family in the season's most fashion-forward styles. Children's clothing boutique Lollipops, in Latham and Glenville, carries both dressy and everyday clothing for babies and toddlers. Denim with lots of embellishments like studs and hanging beading are a popular look for girls clothing this spring, said store owner Chris Coletta. Bright colors like orange and lime green are trendy, as is the classic red, white and blue look. Boys T-shirts are decorated with "bugs, fish and anything that has to do with nature," Coletta said. Polo shirts, paired with khakis or jeans, are also expected to be popular.

For Easter and other formal spring events, Coletta recommended floral dresses with hats, dresses with embroidery for or a nautical-themed outfit for girls, knits outfits for younger boys, and coordinating shirt and pant outfits for toddler boys.

Girls' fashions are styled down from the junior industry," said Priceless Kids President Cathy Cohn. One of these trends is capri pants, which come in solid colors and plaid prints, and can be paired with a madras-style woven blouse. Distinctive fashion in vibrant colors, not humdrum fashion is the look of the season, she said. For boys, oversized shorts in cargo or five pocket denim style are expected to be hot sellers. "The boys market is very strong with takeoffs of survival pants," Cohn said. Knit and woven shirts and fashion focus tie-dye T-shirts are the trend for boy's tops this spring, she said. Their sizes run from newborn up to a children's 16. Priceless Kids stores are in Latham and Delmar.

Find clothing bargains in an unfamiliar hunting ground

By DONNA J. BELL

Designer clothing at department store prices is just around the corner in the Capital District. If you are a bargain hunter who likes the feel and look of quality clothing — a consignment shop may be calling your name.

"The reason shoppers come to a consignment shop is for brand name clothes at a fraction of the cost, usually it is 50 to 75 percent off what it would new," said Karen Frisch from Something Olde Something New located in New Scotland at the intersection of routes 85 and 85A.

The store, run by Frisch and co-owner Julie Hilland, specializes in contemporary designer name clothing, collectibles and furniture.

"We also carry nice fashion accessories like handbags and shoes," Frisch said. In business for the past three and a half years, Something Olde Something New's selection has been ever changing with clothes ranging from petites to plus and from casual wear to cocktail and evening dresses. The clothing is accepted by appointment only, and the owners generally keep outfits for 60 days. After that, they will return them to the consignor or donate them to local charities — depending on what the consignor wishes.

"More and more people are looking for a different shopping experience, you have more variety from more places than the local shops. Also shoppers are able to get several items that are excellent quality instead of one item bought brand new," Frische said. Something Olde Something New is open Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Thursdays 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Their phone number is 475-0663.

Eleanor Haluska, owner of the Yankee Peddler in Loudonville, firmly believes in the concept of consignment shopping.

"I only take the very best in this store," Haluska said. "I go over every piece. We've had suits that originally sold for $400, and I sell them for $35 to $50." Haluska said there are many reasons that shoppers choose to shop consignment stores — from wanting a larger wardrobe to customers who enjoy the look and quality of designer clothing. Yankee Peddler sells a eclectic mix of clothing sizes (from infant to plus women) and styles to accessories like shoes and hats. Haluska insists that all items be in style and like new.

Many times consignors may have purchased a "fancy" dress they may only have the opportunity to wear for one special occasion. Mother-of-the-bride, prom or cruise dresses that someone paid hundreds of dollars for may only have hours of wear on them. For the shopper it is a treat to get a "like-new" dress for pennies on the dollar.

"This is top of the line," Haluska said.

Yankee Peddler is located at 265 Osborne Road and is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The store phone number is 459-9353.

Expectant wear with unexpected fashion and flair

Women expecting to add maternity wear to their wardrobe may find it easier to also add style and flair with some advice from the experts.

Here are a few maternity fashion questions answered by Rebecca Matthias, President of Motherhood Maternity the largest maternity retailer nationwide available in many stores in the Capital District.

Q: I'm on a tight budget but I still want to look fashionable during my pregnancy—what are five essential items I will need to get me through the next few months?

A: Stick to the basics, such as a fabulous white button down shirt, and black pants that can go from casual to dressy in a flash. Also invest in a simple black dress to wear to the office or to a party and comfortable fitting jeans.

Q: My body is changing so

Maternity clothes can be flattering.

much these days that I no longer feel sexy around my husband.

What can I get to boost both of our moods?

A: Lingerie. It worked before and it can work again. One sexy look is silk shorts and a tank which can add heat to any relationship.

Q: I know that all the celebrities are showing off their pregnant bodies, but I'm just not that daring. What can I get that will show off my figure but not so much skin?

A: A pair of black faux leather pants may be just what you're looking for. Form-fitting and sexy, these pants can help a woman bring some glamour into her life.

Pair them with a fitted tank top and you're set.

Q: I have an important business event that I need to attend. I feel really big now and would love something that is fashionable, classic and not so bulky.

A: For business functions I would stick with a classic black suit. A black crepe suit with a jacket fitted at the waist can make you look slimmer and it is so light it will not add extra weight.

If you want to be a little sexy, wear a skirt instead of pants, with a pair of support hosiery that look and feel great.

High-tech gadgets become fashion accessories

By LEIGH G. KIRTLEY

There's a fine line between being fashion-conscious and fashion-fanatical. You have crossed that line when you're concerned about electronic gadgetry clashing with your business suit.

I recently traded in my old, trusty Franklin Planner for a speedy, Hotsync, personal digital assistant, or PDA. Not only does it satisfy my need for organization at my fingertips, but it looks pretty cool, too.

Like buying a car, I had the make and model selected well in advance. In this case, a Handspring Visor Deluxe with 8MB RAM memory and an expansion slot that can turn it into an MP3 player or a cell phone. And also like a car, I agonized over the color.

This particular model comes in five eye-catching hues: white, blue, green, orange and basic black.

Of course, black is classic, matches everything and comes across as very professional. But almost every other PDA out there is black, and I like to display my personal sense of style.

What does the color say about me? And what image do I want to project? The conservative professional, a sense of individuality or a walk on the wild side?

I asked myself those same questions when I bought my power suit. As if selecting the color wasn't difficult enough, I needed a case. If you can image a color, you can find a case in that color. There are even cases (for any PDA) with faux fur in zebra stripes.

Oh, and don't forget the little stylus that you use to tap or write directly onto the screen. They, too, come in a rainbow assortment.

Pagers and cell phones have been tempting fashion-conscious consumers with all kinds of wild colors and accessories.

Nokia cell phones offer a wide array of faceplates for their phones. What's your pleasure? Mini Mouse? Neon yellow? How about snowflakes for winter? I think you can judge a person's mood by the faceplate on their cell phone.

Fashion aside, all these gadgets perform just as well with or without interchangeable face plates, custom-designed cases or styli that can morph into pens.

So why do we, as consumers, thrive on fashionable gadgetry for our electronic gadgets?

Perhaps we're envious of our children and their purple or yellow Gameboy with neat add-ons like cameras and lights. Now that I think about it, my PDA looks like a Gameboy, and I can play lots of games on it. And I can get a camera for it. And a global positioning satellite module. And what do those things have to do with organization?

Nothing.

But when I whip out my little blue PDA in the black and white leather case, I'll be fashionable.

Men must be careful about casual dress

By LEIGH G. KIRTLEY

You've just been hired for a new job and the person in human resources informs you that casual dress is appropriate clothing for the office. Whether this is your first job and your closet is filled with jeans and logo T-shirts or your former position required suits and ties, the term casual can be confusing.

The confusion comes from the fact that casual is subjective. To some, casual may mean a sport coat and tie, to another a cargo pants and untied sneakers.

In trying to define casual, it is easier to list the don'ts rather than the dos.

Leave the jeans and logo T-shirts in the closet along with the sneakers. Even your best golfing shorts won't work in this environment regardless of the outside temperature.

You don't need a sport coat or tie, but you also would not be overdressed if you added either of these to your wardrobe.

"If you're starting out, I always recommend that you don't want to be the least dressed," said Dan Parsons, a professional tailor and owner of Robert Daniels, a specialty men's clothing shop in Delmar.

Parsons also recommended that men invest in a few good basics that will last.

First, select trousers in fabrics that are easy to care for and keep their like-new appearance. Wool, wool-blend and the new micro-fiber trousers may seem expensive up front, but they will continue to look great long after cotton pants fade away.

In the next several weeks, Robert Daniels will be carrying a new line of men's trousers made from a new fabric that blends cotton and tencel.

"They feel like silk but have more weight to them," Parsons said.

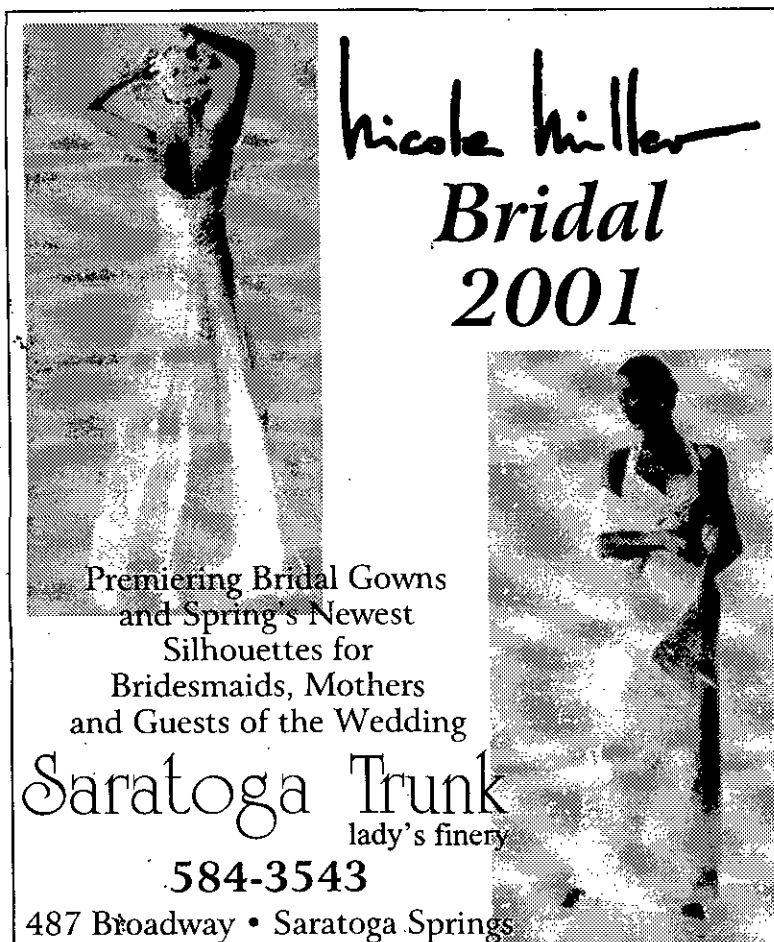

If a sport coat and tie are not your style, you can satisfy the dress casual requirement by wearing polo shirts, short-sleeved dress shirts or a silk crew neck T-shirt (no logos).

Although men's fashions are not as aggressive when it comes to colors as women's fashions, there are plenty of colors and patterns to choose from to coordinate with black, tan or navy trousers. Classic style does not have to be boring.

One last thing to remember when putting together that casual outfit:

A proper fit is essential to looking professional, not shabby.

"Men's trousers are easily tailored. There's always room for adjustment," Parsons said. "And it's always best to have the person doing the alterations also do the measuring."

Joseph Teresi — signaling its intent to proceed to trial.

The lawsuit stems from the highly technical question of whether the water plant, and the infiltration gallery in the riverfront aquifer that supplies it, has performed up to contractual expectations. Projected by Rust and Fraser to produce at least 6 million gallons of water a day, those yields have instead hovered between 1.4 and 1.6 million since the plant was completed.

Recently appointed Town Attorney Robert Alessi, who has represented the town in the water plant lawsuit from the outset, briefed the town board on the status of the case in a closed-door executive session at the end of last Wednesday's board meeting. A special meeting of the board was announced for 8 a.m. yesterday — March 20 — to further discuss the case in executive session.

"In any case, as you get toward the notice of issue, there is always a lot of activity, and there has been that activity here. That will be the subject of the Tuesday meeting," Alessi said last Friday, while declining to discuss specifics. "As with any case, there have been efforts to find a way to resolve this short of letting a jury decide the outcome."

He did not expect the board to take any formal action regarding the case at the meeting.

Bethlehem Public Library is sponsoring a Summer Camp Fair for parents on Wednesday, April 4, at 7 p.m. Representatives from area camps will be on hand to talk about their summer programs.

To register, call 439-9314.

Host families needed for foreign students

Host families are needed for 30 American Field Service (AFS) foreign exchange students who will be coming to the Capital District for the 2001-02 school year.

Families who apply early this spring will have the best opportunity to view applications from students with special interests which match theirs, such as athletics or music.

Local AFS volunteers provide family orientation and student support, as well as social and educational events for students, host families and host siblings.

For information, call Cathie Currin at 581-9199 or Happy Scherer at 439-0016.

Student scholarships

Bethlehem Business Woman's Club offers scholarships to any town of Bethlehem high school graduating senior, high academic standing is not necessary.

The application deadline is April 16. See your school's guidance office for details or call 439-4955, ext. 183.

"We're all aware of the 'Mozart effect' — the idea that participation in the arts improves a student's overall performance," DiPaolo said.

"We owe all our students the best music education that we can provide ... and we must not let our nationally recognized excellence in music decline," she added.

Each board member expressed a desire to fulfill Tebbano's request for an additional teacher, but said that ultimately, it would not be possible.

"We've got to cut somewhere," board member Warren Stoker said.

At Loomis' prompting, Tebbano agreed it would probably be possible to borrow teachers from the high school and elementary schools for the time being.

"But we need this extra funding as soon as possible," Tebbano said.

The board also decided, in response to state and federal mandates, to devote nearly $150,000 to hiring additional staff for academic intervention and ESL (English as a Second Language) instruction.

On the other side of the ledger, the board eliminated a middle school hall monitor and struck down proposals for additional textbooks and software.

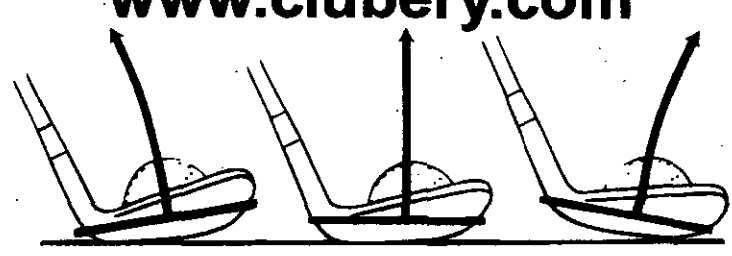

Next week the board will consider proposed cuts in the Regents-for-All program, as well as middle school AIS (Academic Intervention Services) staffing and funding for several maintenance projects.

Tennis tourney to benefit school

A round-robin tennis tournament, to benefit the Capital Region Christian High School Foundation will be held on Saturday, March 24, from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m. at the Capital Tennis and Fitness Club off 9W.

There will be a buffet, music and giveaways. For information, call Todd Thornton at 355-7830.

 A hamstring strain involves excessive stretching or tearing of muscle fibers at the back of the upper leg. An acute strain can occur during an isolated athletic activity as a result of a chronic condition that has rendered the muscle weak and vulnerable. For example, a softball player may endure a hamstring sprain while sprinting to first base. A chronic strain is often associated with persistent repetitive stress. Runners are especially susceptible to chronic hamstring strains. After initially treating the injury with rest, ice, compression, and elevation (RICE), the physical therapist will introduce a program of gentle stretching and muscle strengthening. This may involve resistance training with elastic tubing attached to the ankle and bending the knee while sitting.
 If you find yourself experiencing the same pain or injury again and again, it's time to ask your doctor for a referral to an experienced physical therapist. At our center, our staff of licensed physical therapists treat a wide range of condition, and provide sports medicine, the latest physical therapy methods, ultrasound, and massage. ## Lansing grounds Blackbirds in state Class C hoop finals

By ROB JONAS

The Voorheesville girls basketball team entered the New York State Public High School Athletic Association tournament with one of the best defenses in the Class C ranks.

Unfortunately for the Blackbirds, they ran into a better one in last Saturday's semifinal at Hudson Valley Community College. Unbeaten Lansing (Section IV) used its full-court press and aggressive defense in the low post to near perfection in beating Voorheesville 50-33.

"We found it hard to adjust to their pressing," senior guard Katelyn Berger said of Lansing. "They played very well."

"That's been the key all year," Lansing coach Stuart Dean said. "We're a defensive team, and our team recognizes the significance of playing good team defense."

From the start, Lansing made it difficult for Voorheesville (19-7) to get into a flow. Quick steals led to two fast-break opportunities for the Ladycats that, while neither resulted in a basket, forced the Blackbirds to foul. Billie Boles hit two of four free throws to give Lansing a 2-0 lead.

"We weren't relaxed when we came out," said coach Jon McClement. "We were tight, and that allowed for some turnovers."

Voorheesville's full-court press was also affected by the Blackbirds' nerves.

Alyson Heslop got behind the defense for an easy layup off Lansing's press break to make the score 4-0. Berger came back with a press-break layup of her own to cut the deficit to 4-2, but that was as close as Voorheesville would get. Lansing scored 11 of the next 14 points to build a 15-5 lead at the end of the first quarter.

The injured player whose number 15 her teammates wore on their arms -- junior Christina Michael -- will get another chance next year, but Blackbird seniors Jillian DeGregorio, Katelyn Berger and Brittany Burnham bid a tearful goodbye to their high school hoops careers as the clock wound down Saturday. Jim Franco

Dolphins have strong showing at regional meet

More than 50 Delmar Dolphins competed in the 2001 Adirondack Developmental Championship Meet held March 3 and 4 at RPI. This two-day meet showcased 652 athletes from 28 Adirondack District swim clubs.

The Dolphins were a very strong presence, garnering a number of top-eight finishes in many events. Head coach Doug Gross and assistant coaches Dave Burns and Connie Schmitt praised the entire team and noted that most Dolphins recorded personal best times in all events.

The 8-and-under Dolphins were represented by Greta Healy, Sarah Wooster, Tara O'Donnell, Erika Howland, Zachary Kundel and Matthew Weber.

Healy placed first in the 50-yard freestyle and 100 freestyle and took second in the 25 freestyle. She also finished fourth in the 50 butterfly, 25 breaststroke and 100 individual medley, placed fifth in the 50 breaststroke and took seventh in the 50 backstroke.

Wooster placed first in the 25 breaststroke and 25 back; second in the 50 breast, 100 free and 100

IM; third in the 25 free and 25 fly and fifth in the 50 fly. Kundel nailed a first place finish in the 50 back and 25 free and a second place finish in the 100 free and 25 fly. He also placed third in the 25 back and fourth in the 50 breast, 100 IM and 50 fly. Weber took home a seventh-place ribbon in the 25 backstroke.

The 10-and-under Dolphins were very strong contenders. They were led by Emily Smith, Eleanor Grady, Allie Radliff, Mariah Kennedy, Alex Scialdone, Elizabeth Sciaolino, Natasha Hamm, Lauren Vale, Molly Howland, Lauren Fealey, Justine Trusso and Ariel Ricard for the girls and Gopu Kiron, Nate Foley and Alex Walsh for the boys.

Kiron finished first in both the 50 breaststroke and the 100 breaststroke, achieving strong times in both events. He placed third in the 100 free, 50 back, 100 IM and 100 back, and he finished sixth in the 50 free. Foley earned a sixth-place ribbon in the 100 free.

Smith had three first place finishes — the 50 fly, the 50 breast and the 100 IM. She also picked up a second-place ribbon in the 50 free, finished third in the 100 back and 100 fly, and was fourth in the 50 back and 200 IM.

Radliff was first in both the 100 back and 100 free, and she placed third in the 200 IM. Howland swam fast times to take first place in both the 200 IM and 50 free, and picked up a second-place ribbon for the 50 backstroke. Scialdone placed third in the 100 free and eighth in the 100 back, while Grady finished eighth in the 100 breaststroke.

The 11-12 age group team was a strong contingent and swam with distinction. Team members included Ava Byer, Becca Stern, Emma Walsh, Katie DeMichele, Kyla Walsh, Emily Keneston, Anna Kaufman, Rachel Garbo, Molly Moriarity, Elise Walsh, Paula O'Donnell, Alyssa Finke, Deborah Umina, Stacey Toseland, Molly Reider, Daria Whalen, Sean Kennedy, Tyler Dudas, Justin Murphy, Tim DeGroff, T.J. Jednak and Larry Gloeckler.

Byer swam strong times to capture first place in the 200 IM and 200 free. She also placed second in the 50 fly and third in the 100 fly. Stern nailed first place in the 100 free and finished second in the 50 free, third in the 100 IM, and eighth in the 100 fly.

Elise Walsh swam to first place finishes in the 50 breast and 100 IM and placed fourth in the 100 back and 50 back, seventh in the 100 breast and eighth in the 100 free. Emma Walsh finished fourth in the 50 breast and seventh in the 100 back. Toseland took home the fifth-place ribbon for the 100 IM,

Soccer club meeting scheduled for April 2

The Bethlehem Soccer Club will hold its annual meeting and board of directors election at 7 p.m. April 2 at Bethlehem Town Hall.

while Umina finished third in the 50 breast.

For the 11-12 boys, Gloeckler finished first in the 50 fly, 100 fly, 100 breast and 50 breast. DeGroff took first in the 50 and 100 back and went on to finish third in the 100 IM and 100 fly, fourth in the 50 free, fifth in the 50 breast and eighth in the 100 free and 100 fly.

Kennedy was fourth in the 100 back and 50 back, sixth in the 100 and 200 free and eighth in the 50 free. Dudas finished sixth in the 100 fly, and Murphy took home a seventh-place ribbon for the 200 free.

Ann Delucco, Ashley Finke, Clare Jednak, Lauren Grady, Melissa Taub, Alyssa Strohecker and Jessica Pisciotta swam for the 13-14 team. Delucco placed third in the 200 fly, fifth in the 200 back and sixth in the 100 back.

Matt Pasquini and Anna Cross represented the 15-16 age group Dolphins. Cross took second in the 200 free and 100 back, third in the 200 IM, fourth in the 100 fly, fifth in the 200 back, seventh in the 200 breast, and eighth in the 100 breast. Pasquini finished first in the 100 fly, and he placed second in the 200 free and third in the 50 free.

A number of Dolphins went on to compete at the Junior Olympics, which were held March 16-18 at RPI.

After a short hiatus, the Dolphins will resume swimming for the "Long Course" season, which runs April 23 to Aug. 3. Registration is now open so any swimmers should contact either Eileen Pasquini at 439-4659 or Dave Shaffer at 439-7261. Information is also available on the Dolphins Web site: www.delmar-dolphins.com.

In addition, the Dolphins are sponsoring a clinic for non-members age 6 and older to learn competitive strokes. It will be held April 2-12 from 6-7 pm and 7-8 pm Monday through Thursday.

Swimmers should contact Gross at 664-0801 or via e-mail at dolphinscoach.juno.com.

Helpful Tips for Developing Healthy Habits for Your Child

It is important to establish good oral health habits early. When your child is twelve months old, you can begin using a toothbrush with a pea sized amount of toothpaste pressed into the bristles. By using a small amount, you can eliminate excess fluoride entering a child's body. Your child should learn early that toothpaste is not for eating.

As a parent, it is important to teach your child appropriate oral health practices by showing them your healthy habits. Teaching by example is a very important tool and a foundation for your child to build upon.

Another factor that contributes to your child's healthy mouth is nutrition. Make sure your child consumes a balanced diet. Recent studies confirm that insufficient levels of calcium and vitamin C may make children more susceptible to periodontal disease.

As your child matures, continue to focus on education and responding to their changing environment. Discuss with your children the health risks of using tobacco products. Smoking is the #1 preventable risk factor for periodontal disease.

Remember to stay informed and contact your dentist with any questions or for helpful hints and educational aids.

Children's author to sign latest work at I Love Books

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Jan Brett's passion for children's books is apparent, as she exuberantly discusses book plots, how she came to be an illustrator, and the animals she keeps in her yard.

Brett has written and illustrated 11 books — among them The Hat and Armadillo Rodeo — retold and illustrated five, and illustrated 18 classics.

She will be signing copies of her newest book, Hedgie's Surprise, at I Love Books in Delmar and The Book House in Stuyvesant Plaza on Sunday, March 25.

In Hedgie's Surprise, a hen and a hedgehog team up to protect the hen's eggs from a Tomten, a mischievous Danish elf-like figure.

Brett draws on her own memories of being a child and her sensitivity to the vulnerability of animals, when she writes her books.

"You often have an adversarial character, something that changes the course of the situation," Brett said.

"Often it's a troll, or like in Hedgie's Surprise, the Tomten. The adversary might make the kind of mistakes you made as a kid. I remember, as a child, my parents gave us a lot of freedom to dress however we wanted, and one day I decided everything would be red, to match the new red shoes I'd gotten," she said.

Brett laughed, remembering

that the hues in her clothing ran the gamut from pink to orange.

"The others kids laughed that I was all in red, and I took a lot of teasing," she said. "That's what kids deal with every day — what's acceptable in the world, versus what they think is neat."

It's important that there be a hero, Brett added. In Hedgie's Surprise, it's the title character that saves the eggs the Tomten keeps stealing.

"When I was a child, it came as a huge relief to me to have a best friend, and to realize that I can do one thing and a friend can do another," Brett said.

When she finishes writing and illustrating a story, Brett sometimes sees parallels in her own life.

"When I was reading Hedgie's Surprise, I realized that my husband Joe (Hearne) is the hedgehog and I'm the hen," she said.

Brett and Hearne, who plays double bass with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, live in Norwell, Mass., but summer in the Berkshires to be near Tanglewood.

Brett often surrounds herself with live versions of characters from her books. When she knew she would be writing about a chicken, she got the real thing instead of just looking at illustrations.

"We got these chicks, they were just these fluff balls, and I would hold them on my lap. ... Now I have these big hens," she said, adding that they scratch happily away when she gardens.

"Last summer, I was doing sit-ups to get in shape for my daughter's wedding, and I was groaning away. I looked up and I was surrounded by the hens, who were all craning their necks and making similar noises," she said.

Hedgehogs have long been popular family pets.

"They're wild animals, but they're easily made into pets," Brett said. "When they sense danger, they just curl up, and their sharp prickles stand up. They also make a funny 'poof, poof,' sound. In our family, when we see somebody coming that we might not want to see, we say 'poof, poof' to each other."

Hedgie makes a cameo appearance in most of her books.

Brett said she primarily considers herself an illustrator, something she has wanted to be since kindergarten.

"My mother was a nursery school teacher, and we always had tons of art supplies and materials," Brett said.

She went to Colby-Sawyer College in Maine, then the Boston Museum School. Somewhere along the way, Brett realized she wanted to illustrate children's books.

"My drawings didn't look realistic, they looked like they were from children's books," she said. "People always told me I should illustrate children's books."

Brett went through a few lean years, but always relied on drawing — and a sense of optimism — to support herself.

"I want children to have a message of hope. That's what has kept me going when I've had a challenge or difficulty. I have this romantic view that things will be OK," she said.

It was an editor at Houghton-Mifflin who provided Brett with the inspiration to write her own books, instead of just illustrating others.

Today, she's happy with the way she's combined her illustrations with the use of animal stories.

"That's pretty traditional with children's books," Brett said. "It puts the action a step away. Kids and parents can accept the story without feeling it's too close for comfort. In some ways, children, like animals, are not at the point where they have a lot of control over their lives."

"Also," Brett added, "I can draw animals better than people."

Brett has a Web site at www.janbrett.com.

"That's a big way we communicate with teachers, and a lot of the requests they and their students have. Teachers love books and are so creative, and they'll have different approaches to teaching kids about books, and writing books."

Brett said she thinks kids appreciate complex books.

"Children love layering and love to hold two ideas at one time," she said. "You could have Hedgie doing one thing and saying another, and kids pick up on that."

"As a child, I felt I had all this intelligence and verve, but didn't have the tools and words to express it. The books I loved had complex emotions, which I loved to read about. ... Kids really deserve their own literature," she added.

Brett said she finds that children trust her, and in her books, she's often not telling them anything, but having a conversation with them.

"In Goldilocks, I drew a jack-in-the-pulpit with a mouse in it. A child at a signing pointed to it, and said, 'we have a flower like that.' He smiled and added, 'but there's no mouse in ours.' It's very subtle, but he knew that a mouse wouldn't go into a flower. That's what I mean when I say we're having a conversation," Brett said.

Children will have a chance to converse with Brett on Sunday, when she will be at The Book House in Stuyvesant Plaza from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., and at I Love Books at the Four Corners in Delmar from 3 to 5 p.m.

Youth Network

A BETHLEHEM NETWORKS PROJECT

Teen Drivers ... Safe Drivers

Motor vehicle injury is the greatest threat to the lives of adolescents in America.

The most critical factor in turning new drivers into safe drivers is parents. Because learning to drive and securing a driver's license is such an important event for young people, it should be a family matter.

You and your teen are invited to take part in a new program, "Teen Drivers ... Safe Drivers," which is designed to promote safe driving. On Tuesday, April 10, from 7 to 9 p.m. at First United Methodist Church in Delmar, Bethlehem Police Officer Jeff Vunck will discuss safety issues and guidance counselor Barbara Hoffman will work with families to promote responsible decision-making and improve communication.

Students must be 16 by May to attend the workshop and at least one parent or guardian must also attend.

To register for the program, call Bethlehem Networks Project at 439-7740. Registration is on a first-come, first-served basis.

Family Expo brings regional focus to mall

Guilderland Chamber hosts over 50 exhibitors

This weekend, visitors to Crossgates Mall can sample a variety of businesses and services from the Capital District and beyond during the Guilderland Chamber of Commerce Regional Family Expo. The event, which runs Saturday and Sunday will present more than 50 exhibitors with tables set up throughout the mall to describe the goods and services they have to offer.

"We are really hoping to expand people's horizons," said chamber Executive Director Jane Schramm. With presenters covering a wide range of subjects, there is sure to be something to appeal to almost everyone.

Schramm said the focus this year was on interactive exhibits. She said businesses and organizations are bringing more than just pamphlets and brochures.

"We want visitors to participate," she said. This year's strategy was to use a more interactive approach with things for people to do as they stopped by the various exhibits.

A number of attractions and museums from central New York will give people ideas for warm weather day trips and family activities that are fun and educational. Schramm said the idea is to show families what is available in this area and around New York state.

The Farmers Museum, The Fenimore Art Museum and The National Baseball Hall of Fame from Cooperstown will be on hand as well as representatives from Howe Caverns in Cobleskill, the Lake George Steamboat Co., Rensselaer Junior Museum and the Adirondack Museum. Visitors will be given an opportunity to learn more about these attractions, all within easy reach from the Capital District.

As warm weather approaches many people will be thinking about spending more time outdoors and what could be more fun than a camping trip with family or friends? American Camp Grounds and Resort and the Lake George Escape Camping Resort will be available to describe their facilities.

Albany Jewish Community Center will feature its summer camps for children — Camp Taf, Camp Shalom and Camp Olam.

If tenting isn't your style, check out the Albany RV display to see if camping in a more homelike environment on wheels is to your liking.

Also, warm weather means thoughts of getting back into shape for many so you might want to stop by the displays of the Guilderland YMCA and Progressive Health and Fitness from Voorheesville.

Concerned about other health issues? Bellevue Woman's Hospital, Better Health Naturally, Center for the Disabled, chiropractor Dr. Jennifer Noonan and Guilderland Family Chiropractic will be suggesting ways to improve your health and describing the services they offer.

For those looking to the warm weather and spring cleaning as a time to consider home improvements and upgrades you might want to visit the exhibits for ADT Security Systems, Best Fire, California Closets, Protection One Alarm Monitoring and Shed World.

Tony Ferraioli's Guilderland Pump Sales and Water Well Contractor Dick

Ferraioli are experts in the installation and servicing of wells and water systems.

If you're bringing the kids, the displays offered by Game Emporium and Guilderland police department are musts. McGruff the crime dog will be prowling around as part of the Guilderland police safety booth. Children will also have the opportunity to be fingerprinted. The fingerprinting is done for personal identification and safety purposes.

Kids can learn for both children and adults. For younger children there are games that teach color recognition, counting and other skills. For older kids, there are games that encourage learning history and geography.

"Your kid isn't going to really learn to the booth get to vote on the cutest baby," she said.

If you've been thinking about your financial situation, you'll want to check out the presentations offered by AXA Advisors, Excelsior Credit Union, Financial Resource Center LLC, Mohawk Community Bank, Morgan Stanley Dean Witter and Waddell & Reed Financial Services. Representatives from these groups will show you ways to optimize your money and resources.

Schramm said since it was a family theme expo she felt it was important that people could shop for financial information as well.

"It is a nice opportunity to have an array of choices — presented without any pressure in more of a learning environment," she said.

Other exhibitors presenting their goods and services will be The College of Saint Rose, Albany International Airport, Albany Pine Bush Reserve, Childtime Children's Centers, Cyberhaus-Computer Learning Center, Expressions of Gratitude, IKON Office Solutions, Mary Kay Cosmetics, New York Power Authority, New York Army National Guard, New York Family Benefits Committee, Office of the Attorney General of New York State, Outdoor Escapes, Parmelee's Enter-prises, the Henn Workshops and VAL-PAK of N.E.N.Y.

The organizer of the event, the Guilderland Chamber of Commerce will be represented at their own table.

The Regional Family Expo, an event that started eight years with a small group of presenters in a middle school, has grown into a two-day attraction in the area's largest mall. The expo is free and open to the public.

Representatives from the Farmers Museum in Cooperstown, above, and Howe Caverns in Cobleskill, left, will be at the Regional Family Expo at Crossgates Mall this weekend. These regional attractions will be two out of the more than 50 exhibitors describing their goods and services at the Guilderland Chamber of Commerce sponsored two-day event.

anything from playing Candyland over and over," said Trombley.

The monthly publication Capital District Parent Pages will have a table to acquaint readers with the helpful periodical.

Take the clutter out of your home or office with The Simplifier, a business that provides products and services for organizing your life and surroundings.

Photo restoration is a service offered by Quaker Street Studio for those fading and damaged pictures from days gone by and Picture Perfect Studio in Guilderland, can provide portrait photography for today.

Picture Perfect Studio owner-manager Lauri Crisafulli said this year at the expo, their booth will be hosting a crowd favorite, the cute baby contest.

"We will have a large board that displays pictures of babies and visitors about a number of unusual board and card games at The Game Emporium booth. Bernard C. Trombley said his store located on Central Avenue in Albany has become a haven for young people.

"Teens and kids are in here everyday playing games," he said. At the expo, Trombley and a group of volunteers will have tables set up and stacks of games

Green thumbs gather for garden and flower show

It's finally getting to be the time of year when we can think spring! What better way to inaugurate the warm weather season than by stopping by the Capital District Garden and Flower Show this weekend, Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the McDonough Sports Complex at Hudson Valley Community College in Troy.

This will be the 14th annual show produced by Wildwood Programs, a Capital District organization that empowers and enables children and adults with learning disabilities, autism and other neurologically-based developmental disorders to lead independent, productive and fulfilling lives.

This year's show theme is "Magical Gardens," and will feature more than 60,000 square feet of gardens, educational exhibits, floral design competition and a garden marketplace with 130 retail and craft booths.

Whether you're a beginning gardener, a more seasoned veteran or just the type of person who just likes to stop and smell the flowers, the show will offer something for everyone.

Beginning Friday morning and continuing throughout the weekend, a number of workshop, lectures and demonstrations are scheduled covering various aspects of gardening and landscaping.

The show will be open to the public on Friday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and on Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Admission at the door is $7 for adults, $6 for seniors with children under 10 admitted free. There is a same day re-entry policy and two-day passes are available. Proceeds benefit the Wildwood Programs.

For information call 356-6410 ext. 419 or visit the Web site at www.wildwood.edu.

And the Answer Is...

Automotive topics pop up from time to time on TV quiz shows. Now Car Care Council helps prepare you for the "hot seat" in case one of the following comes your way. True or False:

- 1) Using a heavier grade of oil in cold weather affords greater engine protection. [ ] T [ ] F
- 2) Because of fuel additives and removal of lead from gas, spark plugs no longer need to be replaced. [ ] T [ ] F
- 3) When you turn the key and you just hear a click, you know the battery needs recharging or replacing. [ ] T [ ] F
- 4) During 50,000 miles of driving at 55 mph, over a million gallons of antifreeze-coolant circulates through your car's engine. [ ] T [ ] F
- 5) Tire pressure decreases one pound for every 10 degree drop in temperature. [ ] T [ ] F

Answers

1. False. A lower viscosity (thinner) grade of oil is recommended for cold weather driving.
2. False. Spark plugs do last longer but they require periodic replacement for quick starts and maximum fuel economy.
3. False. The problem may be corrosion on the battery terminals.
4. True. For maximum protection the cooling system should be flushed at least every other year and the antifreeze-coolant replaced.
5. True. Check tire pressure monthly. Underinflation, by as little as 6 p.s.i., can cut gas mileage by 3%. Among other factors affecting fuel economy are dirty air filter, cold engine due to inoperative thermostat and misfiring spark plugs. For your free copy of the illustrated pamphlet, "How To Find Your Way Under The Hood And Around The Car", send a stamped, self addressed envelope to Car Care Council, Department WE1-UH, 42 Park Drive, Port Clinton, OH 43452.
