Five Rivers new land to buffer preserve

57 acres will be added to center

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The recent purchase of two privately held parcels of land totaling 57 acres for Five Rivers Environmental Education Center will do more than expand the center's 345-acre preserve by more than 16 percent, according to Director Craig Thompson.

The acquisition by the state Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) will also protect a type of valuable grassland habitat fast disappearing from upstate New York, as well as a critical streambed that feeds the existing preserve.

Moreover, it will provide a buffer between Five Rivers and residential development rapidly encroaching from the north and east, providing "protection both to and against our neighbors," Thompson said.

The expansion will also spur an internal effort to draft a management plan for use of Five Rivers' physical assets in the future.

"What I'm working on now, and hope to have available to the public soon, is a unit management plan, looking at how Five Rivers might look in 20 years," Thompson said.

Visitors will be queried on their views in the coming weeks, and once the management plan is completed, it will be available for public scrutiny and a public hearing, probably by late summer.

"Our master plan has addressed program development but nothing has gone to the management of our assets," Thompson said. "We've never really had a plan for a 15 to 20 year, long-range buildout. I'm looking forward to the process."

The new pending acquisitions include a 51.8-acre parcel at the end of Mason Road in New Scotland, just north of the existing Five Rivers property, owned by Robert and Jean Joel; and an adjacent 6-acre tract to the south and east of the Joel parcel, mostly in Bethlehem, formerly owned by the Foresman family.

The sale agreement is contingent on approval by the New Scotland planning board of an application soon to be submitted by the Joels to subdivide the parcel being sold to Five Rivers from an adjacent 7 acres the family wishes to retain to build a new home.

The Foresman property was donated two years ago to Five Rivers Limited, the nonprofit support group of Five Rivers Environmental Education Center.

"The Foresmans and the Joels have lived next to Five Rivers for years and were great friends of Five Rivers," Thompson said. "This is an expression of the entire community that it wants this kind of thing to continue to be wild."

DEC will purchase the two properties for $809,000, through the state Environmental Protection Fund, using proceeds from the 1996 Clean Water/Clean Air Bond Act.

Board wades through water issues

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The town's water plant on Clapper Road in Selkirk was the subject of two separate controversies before the Bethlehem town board on May 23.

A proposed water district extension for Old School Road was rejected by the board in favor of a more limited alternative — in part, because of the board's continuing reluctance to use water from the plant, which draws from the Schermerhorn Island aquifer, for residential use.

At the meeting, Town Attorney Robert Alessi outlined the agreement approved on May 17 by the board with contractor J. Kenneth Fraser & Associates of Rensselaer and its principal, James K. Fraser Jr.; and Earth Tech Environment & Infrastructure of California, and company that designed the plant's water-infiltration system, Rust Environment & Infrastructure.

It provides for Earth Tech to build a supplemental water system and improvements to the infiltration system in order to guarantee an output of 6 million gallons of water a day — as originally contracted when it began operating in 1996.

"The town will not pay $1 in capital costs for the project," Alessi said, and Earth Tech will drill a test well as soon as possible as a prelude to the supplemental project.

"If the testing doesn't work, if the system doesn't work, the litigation is not terminated, it is merely suspended," Alessi said. "We will go back into court, and we will pursue these defendants as vigorously as we did in the beginning."

The defendants agreed to split a $550,000 settlement to the town — which will more than cover litigation costs.

Bill Kelleher — a retired engineer, former member of Clearwater for Bethlehem and longtime critic of the plant said, "Quite frankly, I didn't think it could be done," he said. "I have to congratulate Mr. Alessi and his law firm."

But he also raised concerns about Earth Tech's proposal to drill "directionally driven wells" for the supplemental system — beneath the Hudson riverbed.

"They will not work, Mr. Alessi," Kelleher said, expressing concern for the makeup of the aquifer and doubts whether the regulatory agencies that must grant permits for the well system will "accept taking water directly from the Hudson, because that's what this is."

1st Columbia looks to add 2 buildings

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The developer that opened the 42,000-square-foot St. Peter's Medical Arts building on New Scotland Road in Slingerlands last year announced its intention last week to seek town approvals to build two more adjacent buildings, completing an office park on the site.

The immediate goal for First Columbia is to begin construction, possibly by fall, of a two-and-a-half story, 30,000-square-foot office building just north of the existing medical facility, which is fully occupied.

Once it's completed, a third

New exhibit to open at museum

New Scotland Historical Association will open its new Feura Bush-Onesquethaw exhibit on Sunday, June 3, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the New Scotland Museum in the Wyman Osterhout Community Center on the Old Road off Route 85 in New Salem.

The Onesquethaw and Feura Bush areas of the town were originally settled by farmers in the early 1700s.

When the railroad came through in the late 1860s, Feura Bush developed into a railroad town.

With the Selkirk rail yards and other industry adjacent to Feura Bush, the railroad stills plays an important role in the Feura Bush community.

While many of the farms are no longer active, Onesquethaw still contains many of the old stone houses and there is much history still alive in the Onesquethaw Historical District.

It is not surprising to see so many stone buildings in this area because stone for the Albany end of the Erie Canal was quarried here.

To support the workers, there were a number of hotels located in Terrytown. Onesquethaw Reformed Church, which was built from stones rejected for canal use, is still an active part of the community.

The museum exhibit shows the growth and development of the area and how the people lived, worked and played. Included are numerous artifacts loaned to us by families in the area.

They have been categorized under household, personal items, occupations and entertainment. There is an old doctor kit complete with the doctor's tools from the Crounse family collection. A small military display shows how Onesquethaw and Feura Bush have figured in the national scene.

In addition, many old photos are displayed, including some of the Woodside School — complete with students.

On June 3, there will be a continuous slide program showing old photos of the Feura Bush-Onesquethaw area.

Refreshments will be served. There is no admission charge.

For information, contact Ann Richards 765 4446 or Marion Parmenter at 765 4652.

The museum has new operating hours. It will be open every Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. throughout the year, and on Thursdays during July and August from 10 a.m. to noon.

Deputies arrest man on weapons charge

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

An Albany man is facing charges of threatening two Voorheesville youths with an ax following his arrest last Thursday, May 24, in the village.

Albany County deputies arrested Edward M. Arpin, 42, of 89 Hawthorne Ave., shortly before 3 a.m., after responding to a call from the youths reporting an intoxicated man in the street on Oxford Court, who they said had threatened them with a double-sided ax.

Police said Arpin was found with the ax at the scene and charged with a felony count of criminal possession of a weapon and two counts of menacing, a misdemeanor.

According to the police report, Arpin, staying with friends nearby, had been drinking earlier and was riding a bicycle home, when he fell off the bicycle in front of the youths, who he said began taunting him.

Police said he verbally threatened to leave and return with a gun, but returned instead brandishing the ax, taken from the friends' home.

The two youths fled indoors and phoned police.

Following his arrest, Arpin was arraigned before Village Justice Kenneth Connolly and sent to Albany County jail without bail.

Police arrest man for DWI

Bethlehem police arrested a Cohoes man on Saturday, May 19, for driving while intoxicated (DWI).

Shortly after midnight, Officer Craig Sleurs observed a vehicle nearly striking several mailboxes along Krumkill Road.

After stopping it, Sleurs administered field sobriety tests and a preliminary screening on Christopher John Webster, 30, of 285 Columbia St., Cohoes, and arrested him for DWI. Webster was ordered to appear in Town Court on June 5.

Whiting Run-a-thon set at middle school

The Bethlehem Central High School class of 2001 will sponsor the annual Sarah Whiting Run-a-thon on Saturday, June 9, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the middle school.

The run-a-thon is held in honor of Whiting, who was killed in a vehicle-pedestrian accident. She would have been a member of the BCHS class of 2000.

Refreshments and T-shirts will be available. Pledge forms can be found at the high school main office and Bethlehem town hall.

All proceeds will be donated to Bethlehem Citizens for Pedestrian Safety.

Bethlehem board OKs parking, stop sign

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The Bethlehem town board OK'd two proposals last Wednesday — but sent a proposed traffic law revision back to the drawing board.

A local law permitting business owners in older commercial districts to share off-site parking facilities and upgrade buildings without falling subject to newer zoning code requirements passed unanimously, as did a proposal to install a stop sign at the intersection of Hamilton and Hannay lanes in Glenmont.

But a third proposition, restricting parking on Groesbeck Place in Elsmere, ran into a firestorm of opposition.

Police Lt. Tim Beebe said a neighbor's concerns that school buses using Groesbeck Place as an exit from Elsmere Elementary School are sometimes unable to pass due to cars parked along both sides of the road prompted the proposed law, which would ban parking along the west side between Laurel Drive and Delaware Avenue.

But several Groesbeck residents objected to the restrictions.

"I totally disagree with this idea of not having parking on that side of the street," Vicky Jones said. "I should be able to park in front of my own house."

Others said the proposal would not solve the problem that contributes most to the parking glut: the parking needs of patients of Dr. Robert Giombetti.

Giombetti's office, in a residence on Groesbeck Place that has served as a medical practice for more than half a century, lacks on-site parking.

"Once again, we're going to end up restricting business in this town," Peter Zilgbe said.

Several residents advocated narrower restrictions, perhaps tied to peak school traffic.

But without any clear consensus on how to tailor restrictions, and with a modified proposal requiring a future public hearing, the board agreed to withdraw the draft law as proposed. Town Supervisor Sheila Fuller agreed to consult with school Superintendent Les Loomis on peak bus traffic hours.

No one spoke either for or against the Hamilton-Hannay proposal. "If the neighbors want (a stop sign) back there, they are the ones who probably know it better than anybody," board member Doris Davis said.

The shared-parking ordinance, aimed principally at relieving parking problems at the Four Corners, also passed.

Former building inspector John Flanagan outlined the proposed law, which also contained language that redefined "rebuilding" as "to tear down or demolish (a building), including its major structural components, and build it again."

The new definition will allow renovations of some older Four Corners buildings without their owners losing exemptions from zoning restrictions regarding on-site parking and changes of use.

"It's incredibly important to get this passed if the Four Corners is to have the potential to improve," said Steve Bolduc of Keystone Builders.

"I'm really pleased to see this first step in the ongoing project of the Four Corners Merchants Group in terms of trying to make things a little easier for the businesses there," said Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce President Marty DeLaney.

Fun park moves ahead

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

An ambitious private recreational project on Route 9W in Glenmont, delayed for two years by financial considerations and bad weather, may soon be teeing up again, according to developer James Villaseñor.

His proposed 12-acre complex of batting cages, miniature golf, driving range and concessions, known as Shanahan Fun Park, was first presented to the town planning board in July 1996.

Now, two years after securing site plan approval, "We're working along steadily," Villaseñor said.

"Not as fast as I would like, but we're getting there."

Required wetlands mitigation was completed over a year ago, he said, and "We've been down there (recently) looking to reseed our range, and hopefully to get under way in the next few weeks."

With financing tight, Villaseñor initially planned to build the park in stages, to avail himself of projected summer revenues.

But with phase one set for last spring, the unusually rainy April through July that beleaguered Bethlehem last year rained on Shanahan's parade too.

"Last season, we had no construction time at all in the spring, and by the time we had any time, we wouldn't have had any season anyway," he said.

With better weather this year, Villaseñor hopes to open the range and some concessions this summer. Last year's experiences leave him reluctant to set a target date, "But don't worry," he said. "When the time comes, we'll be trumpeting our horn as loudly as we can."

Rhyme and reason

New Scotland to review Tall Timbers

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

It's official: the New Scotland planning board has launched formal review of a proposal to build a 181-acre residential development on the site of the former Tall Timbers golf course on the outskirts of Voorheesville, almost three years after its introduction.

Tall Timbers LLC, now solely owned by William Purdy, formally applied to the board in February to subdivide the parcel, which straddles Hilton Road, north of Route 85A and just east of the village, into 176 single-family building lots.

The project would be the largest such development in the vicinity since Salem Hills was built in the early 1960s.

It has been the subject of preliminary review before the planning board since late 1998, "to get a sense of what the town would like to see in the subdivision plan," said Donald Zee, the attorney representing Tall Timbers.

At its May meeting, following discussion of the project as outlined by Zee and designers Ingalls Small Associates, the planning board made an initial declaration of its intent to claim lead-agency status for the project review and notified other public agencies of that intent.

Barring any objections, the board is expected to formally name itself lead agency at its June 5 meeting.

As lead agency, the board would have authority to launch the State Environmental Quality Review (SEQR) process. To that end, at the June meeting the board will also consider a resolution on a "positive declaration" — a statement that the project is expected to have a significant enough impact to require a full environmental review under the conditions of the SEQR law.

"Because of the magnitude of the project, the town felt a full environmental review of the project was necessary, and after our dialogue, we agreed that a full

the development.

Water lines to link up with the Northeast Water District, and two water storage tanks to increase that district's capacity, are also included in the developer's costs.

Zee said the project would probably be built in five or six separate phases by builder Mazzullo Brothers, at a rate of 25-30 homes a year.

"Given the home market now, that is very doable," Zee said. "But who knows what it may be like in five years?"

The first phase would likely involve as many as 50 building lots in the eastern half of the project.

The project is not expected to require wetlands mitigation, he said.

"The only area of disturbance is less than a tenth of an acre, which is incredible for a project of 181 acres," Zee said.

Instead, existing pond and stream areas will be incorporated into the project design.

At the request of the planning board, the developer has also outlined plans for active recreational areas, including basketball and tennis courts and a ball field, to be managed and maintained by a future homeowners' association.

Should the board adopt the positive declaration next week, a public meeting to discuss the scope of the draft environmental impact statement would then be scheduled, probably for some time this summer.

Following that session, the DEIS would be prepared and presented by the developer and subject to a public hearing at a future date.

Because of the magnitude of the project, the town felt a full environmental review of the project was necessary, and after our dialogue, we agreed that a full Environmental Impact Statement should be prepared.

Donald Zee

Environmental Impact Statement should be prepared," Zee said.

The developer has also agreed that it will assume responsibility for legal and engineering fees incurred by the town in connection with the SEQR review.

The town's engineering consultants, Vollmer Associates, will represent the municipality in reviewing the Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS).

Though no projection has been made public of the overall cost of the project, Zee said the developer has estimated he will spend more than $11 million on infrastructure costs alone.

Those costs will include 6,000 feet of residential streets and boulevard entrances connecting the development to Hilton Road, and sewer lines and a sewage treatment plant on a 3-acre site in

Raindrops inspire journey down memory lane

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

There is nothing so lovely as the sound of rain on the roof, especially on a weekend morning when there's no special time we have to be anywhere.

Those slick women's magazines advise mothers to get up before their family, to get things done in peace, meditate, run, do yoga, or any of a million useful things. I like to wake up before my family, but I am in no hurry to bring on the frenzied pace that will come soon enough.

After years of trying to eat better, exercise more, make time for me, make time for Chris and me as a couple, learn something new, clean out the closets, buy in bulk, save for college, establish family meetings, get the kids to do their chores, and finish The Great American Novel, I know that the best thing to do is simply lie there for a few minutes and think about the one goal I've come up with for my life — I want to wake each morning looking forward to the coming day.

It's easy to feel a sense of

COMMENTARY:

*Mom's

contentment when the rain drums a wake-up call on the skylights. There's nothing as wonderful as the feel of a down comforter, settling weightless and warm around us as wakefulness steals away last night's dreams.

Last week's one dry day gave everyone time to mow their lawns before the holiday weekend, and the scent of wet, fresh grass wafts through our open windows. That scent made the kids pause as they ran through the yard last week, brandishing massive squirt guns and the garden hose to create a West Nile-trapping creek in the dirt patches scattered hopefully with grass seed.

All that rain, plus the suddenly lush green of the yard, transported them to summer vacations past.

"It smells like Ireland," they said, breathing deeply.

In the early morning, with rain stilling the power tools conscientious homeowners might otherwise put to work, there's time to reminisce about other rainy mornings. For a while when I was growing up, there was a metal roof over our back steps, and heavy rains made an insistent noise calling us out of bed.

As children, we spent our summer vacations on Lake Champlain, in rented cabins surrounded by fields of Indian paintbrush, wild daisies and old haystacks full of garter snakes for boys to catch in boxes and scare the girls.

There were only three cabins on nearly 100 acres, each with heavy, solid furniture and decorated with moose heads, antlers and stuffed trout. The bedroom walls didn't go all the way to the ceiling, so when we woke on rainy mornings, we would listen for each other's breathing.

An isolated rainy day during a vacation is a special gift. Rain at a lake means a chilly day, necessitating an all-day fire, a rare and exotic thing.

We had stacks of library books, there were old copies of "National Geographic," and Mom let us work on her jigsaw puzzle on indoor days. By afternoon, too restless to stay in, we'd put on our bathing suits to go swim anyway.

"Take your umbrellas so you don't get wet," my father would call, and we'd laugh hysterically.

Through some great miracle, I got to go to a beautiful college and even managed a semester abroad. The best part of which was getting to travel around with friends when the semester was over.

We ended up in a gorgeous hostel, with rooms instead of bunk beds, in Switzerland. A covered deck off our room kept me dry from the rain but didn't obscure the dramatic hills around us. Only the sound of cowbells interrupted the gentle patter of rain, and I wondered what I had done to have such great fortune literally rain down upon me.

There are, of course, times when rain can provoke anxiety, and I was glad this Memorial Day weekend not to be camping, wondering if the rain fly above and the ground cover below would keep the rain just a gentle background noise, and not an unwelcome guest.

In the comfort of my own bed, rain is a soothing sound, one that invites timelessness. Soon enough, the worries of the day will come.

Will the rain make the grass seed sprout in the yard? Will the basement leak? Is the humidity creeping into the rugs and wood, giving everything a musty smell?

I resolve to be patient with my children, and not get too exasperated when their Dad asks for something that's right in front of him. Perhaps I'll pay some bills, unclutter the top of the microwave and finally put up the curtains in the playroom.

For a few minutes, though, that can wait. The rain sounds so nice, it seems like a shame to waste it fretting about things that will always be there.

I can hear my sleeping sons in their room, and Chris breathes evenly next to me. I turn over and the dog, hearing it as an invitation, comes to curl up with us.

For just a minute, we are all in one place, safe and cozy, and I have reached my goal: I am happy about the day to come.

The Delmar Fire Department

Celebrates 90 years of service to the residents of Delmar providing fire protection and emergency medical services

On May 5th, 1911 a few of the residents of Delmar met at the Adams House to discuss the possibility of organizing a Fire Company. Committees were formed to plan for a permanent body. Seventy names were read having been designated by the Town Board to act as firemen. The name Delmar Fire Company #1 was adopted and Alton C. Rowe elected Captain. The new company purchased a horse drawn hose cart and a two wheeled hose jumper which was pulled by hand to fires. After seven years the Company purchased a motorized fire apparatus which was a Model "T" Ford with soda/acid tanks for extinguishment of fires. In 1920 the Fire Company bought the Adams House as a permanent home. 1925 saw the first mechanically driven pumper, a Larabie.

A reorganization took place in 1934 when the name was changed to the Delmar Fire Department and a brand new Mack pumper was delivered. Incidentally, the Mack is now owned by the membership and still runs, pumps and looks like new. In early 1937 the Ladies Auxiliary of the Delmar Fire Department was formed and Mrs. Agnes Ryan was elected charter President. In 1939 the Rescue Squad was organized and began training. Peter Applebee I donated a Packard Ambulance in May of 1940 and the Rescue Squad was up and running.

In 1948 the Adams House was purchased by the Town to be the new Town Hall and a new firehouse was built on the adjacent property. From our beginning answering a handful of fire calls in 1911 to 270 this year and 26 Ambulance calls in 1940 to 1500 this year, one thing has remained constant. The continuous support of the residents of Delmar has been the driving force in keeping the Delmar Fire Department, "Bethlehem's First and Finest."

TV broadcasters propose 499-foot transmission tower

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

A consortium of television broadcasters hopes to construct the tallest transmission tower on the Helderberg Escarpment and is seeking approval from New Scotland's planning and zoning boards.

Capital Region Broadcasters — a joint undertaking involving all five of the area's commercial network-affiliate television stations, and public television station WMHT — plans to build a 499-foot broadcast tower, as well as a second, 100-foot tower for relaying microwave transmissions from the stations' broadcast centers, and a 10,000-square-foot warehouse-style building to support both installations.

The projected site is on a private road, Tower No. 3 Lane, off Pinnacle Road, south of Thacher Park — near 15 other existing radio and television transmission towers.

The high tower would enable consortium members to comply with Federal Communications Commission regulations requiring that they install digital transmission equipment for their over-the-air signals by May of next year. The FCC has mandated new nationwide digital broadcast standards, developed cooperatively with broadcasters, in an effort to gradually replace older analog broadcast technology.

According to Frederick Lass, chief engineer of WRGB and spokesman for the consortium, the proposal has been under discussion for more than two years.

"For the broadcasters, the advantage (of a shared tower) is we can build one tower and share its cost," not to mention reducing the clutter of individual new towers, Lass said. Its height is necessary to accommodate transmitters ranging from 15 to 60 feet in height at sufficient altitude for all six broadcasters.

Nevertheless, Lass said, the new tower, set farther back on the escarpment in the midst of rugged, wooded terrain, "will be less visible down in the town of New Scotland proper" than its neighbors. And it will be supported by guy wires rather than relying on its own superstructure for support, so it will be narrower than older towers.

Lower portions of the tower have been reserved for future use by radio stations and other potential tenants, although none have signed on so far. But with 15 towers owned by various broadcasters already in the vicinity, Lass said, "It was the right thing to do to build a tower that could carry every FM or TV station in the Helderbergs."

Many of the older towers are licensed as co-locations by carriers like cell-phone providers Voicestream and Cingular, who will continue to require such facilities, so completely dismantling them is unlikely. But once analog broadcasting is phased out, some of the television broadcasters could dismantle 50 to 60 feet of their current Helderberg towers.

"There are so far no requirements and no promises that we will do so, but we want to be good neighbors," said Lass. "In my mind, you dismantle what you aren't using."

The consortium appeared before the planning board on May 1 to begin site plan review. But after a lengthy presentation by Lass, the board referred the matter first to the zoning board of appeals to consider required code variances regarding maximum height, setbacks and road frontage requirements.

The zoning board took up the issue on May 22, and approved the requested variances after discussing the project's visual impact, access for emergency vehicles along the private road, and the ability of the tower to withstand potential high winds — particularly in light of the failure in March of the nearby tower belonging to local Fox affiliate WXXA, where approximately 80 feet of the top of their broadcast mast collapsed in severe weather.

Lass said the structural strength of the tower more than tripled required standards to withstand anticipated peak winds of 120 miles per hour.

Zoning board member Mike Cavanaugh expressed concern about the prospect of "a forest of rusting sticks up there" if unused towers are not removed, but board members agreed they lacked authority to require dismantling of unused tower capacity once the shift to digital broadcast is complete or a moratorium on new users as conditions of approval.

But the planning board may consider such conditions when it resumes site plan review at its June 5 meeting.

The consortium has secured a purchase agreement on the property and, if its plans are approved, Lass said, construction by Canadian contractor LeBlanc, projected to cost as much as $800,000, could begin by mid-summer.

TO BETHLEHEM COMMUNITY RESIDENTS FROM BETHLEHEM COMMUNITY PARTNERSHIP TASK FORCE

Bethlehem residents enjoy the woodsy, country look of our community, but those little pockets can often be dangerous places for our teens.

As a Community Partnership task force, we feel the responsibility to raise the awareness of the community to these local "hot spots." These areas are the places where some of our teens hang out, sometimes engaging in dangerous and destructive behavior, like underage drinking, drug use or acts of vandalism. The purpose of this task force is to help keep our teens safe, prevent property damage and help prevent any unnecessary tragedies in our community. Members of the community can help by anonymously calling 439-1503 if they see large gatherings of teens or suspect that teens might be drinking.

The places that seem to attract the teens include any of the wooded areas surrounding all of the schools, the NiMo and water line areas, behind Delaware Plaza, the local cemeteries and any neighborhood where there might be a house party.

We want to keep our teens safe. The areas where they tend to gather are often isolated and may be hard to access should an emergency arise. If the teens are drinking in these isolated areas, they tend to drink large amounts of alcohol in a short amount of time. This leads to high blood alcohol levels that can result in injury or even death.

This task force is asking for your help in reporting any suspicious activity to 439-1503. Remember this is an anonymous call. Keeping our teens and our community safe is our top priority.

Open spaces

Bethlehem town board's decision to allow small businesses the option to share off-street parking is in theory, a good one.

The question now is whether or not the merchants will comply with it.

In the past, merchants were more than likely to grouse if patrons were going to businesses other than theirs. In order for the new law to work, merchants must cooperate with each other.

Having designated parking spots for one business seems ludicrous in lots that are hardly ever full. Patrons are put off by this kind of thing, and will likely go elsewhere, in a lot that says you can only park in two spots for a certain business, even though the rest of the lot is empty.

More often than not, parking is not a problem in Bethlehem. There are municipal lots, frequently empty, that are underutilized because patrons refuse to walk even a half a block.

Many post office patrons think nothing of illegally parking on the pedestrian crosswalk markings. Walk a half a block? Unthinkable. Yet at Crossgates and other local malls, patrons walk what seems like miles in huge parking lots.

So now it's up to both merchants and patrons in Bethlehem to change this scenario. The ball's in our court, folks. Let's at least give it a shot.

Score 1 for nature

The recent land acquisitions by the state Department of Environmental Conservation to preserve open space at Five Rivers Environmental Education Center is welcome news indeed.

The nearly 60-acre acquisition should help protect the preserve from encroaching development, so obviously out of place in a natural setting.

We commend Robert and Jean Joel and the Foresman family for not selling to developers, who were eager to purchase the land.

Five Rivers, used by thousands of residents throughout the year, is too precious a commodity to be compromised by residential development.

It is a natural "schoolhouse" where children learn about and learn to appreciate animal and bird habitats. Five Rivers for local residents is a sanctuary used to simply appreciate nature by hiking the various trails or just soaking in the peaceful atmosphere.

The new buffer will go a long way to protect one of the region's most valuable resources.

Sports get too much emphasis

By DONALD AULENBACH

The writer, a resident of Clifton Park, is an emeritus professor of environmental engineering at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute and state coordinator for Mathematics.

If we look at American society today, it doesn't take long to realize that the most important thing in life is entertainment. We want to be entertained by movies or television, by video games, by music and most of all by sports.

Sports are a major part of movies, television, the printed media and, most important of all, schools.

Newspapers are particularly obsessed with sports coverage. This is justified by the fact that many people buy the paper only to read the sports news.

Whereas local and national/international news are combined into one section of a newspaper, sports usually has an entire section to itself. This is frequently the first section read.

Furthermore, important sports events are moved to the front page, if not to a banner above the paper's name. So as not to miss any scholastic sports events, many media outlets provide a code so schools can call in and confirm the results of interscholastic tiddlywinks competitions. It is nice to see one's school's name or the players' names in print.

Television is cognizant of viewers' interest in sports. The sports news is always kept until last in order to retain the viewers' interest, causing them to see more commercials while anticipating the sports results. We also have entire networks devoted exclusively to sports.

When we brag about our schools, the first thing we think about is sports — who has the best football, basketball, soccer, hockey, etc. team.

This is accepted as school spirit, and continues after graduation. Alumni contributions are directly related to their college's won/lost record in a major sport. Older fans and alumni congregate at a local pub to watch and cheer for their favorite teams, as though drinking beer is a means of support.

Then, whether their team wins or loses, they have an excuse to go out and riot, breaking windows and overturning cars. What can be more exciting!

We can see what is most important at some universities by looking at salaries. Sports coaches get paid much more than professors, and frequently more than administrators. The coach must have a winning team. If not, he or she is dumped, but if too successful, there is an even higher-salaried position awaiting elsewhere.

What is the justification for keeping sports in the schools? Why not form teams that are associated with localities, such as the city's or town's name, or a commercial firm.

Naming a team after a city usually avoids objections from ethnic groups, unless the city is named in honor of an ethnic person or group that can misconstrue that honor as being offensive.

Except for baseball, which supports farm teams, all other sports merely use schools, especially colleges, to train future professional players.

Most colleges offer significant scholarships to capable athletes. Usually, in addition to good grades, participation in a sport is reviewed in a college entrance application.

Why shouldn't professional teams not pay for this training? If we could separate sports from our schools and let the professional teams pay for the training, our school costs could be reduced significantly. In most other phases of our market economy, the beneficiary assumes the cost.

Removing sports from schools would leave the few remaining people who do not need to be entertained and/or who may not be athletically inclined to engage in an academic program. These people would also find room in the curriculum for arts, music, manual training and programs in social responsibility.

It would also allow increased emphasis on mathematics, science, engineering, and technology. These are courses that will educate our future doctors, lawyers, scientists, engineers and Nobel Prize winners.

We need to provide an educational program for these people, but there are many fewer Nobel Prize winners than multi-million-dollar athletes.

Therefore, removing competitive sports from schools would result in a need for a much smaller educational program. This would save considerable tax money, provide for education for those who really want it and lead to better athletes because the training would be paid for by the beneficiaries.

Sports in schools originally evolved from recreational activities, which are a needed break from mental activities and provide exercise the body requires to function well.

However, teams can be made up at the beginning of physical education classes, which gives everyone a chance to participate without the potential disadvantages of rivalries.

Physical activity is an essential part of education, but it should not be the dominant part.

The popularity of home-schooling shows we can have an academic program without the intense emphasis on sports.

Home-schoolers usually participate in sports activities with other groups. They are not devoid of sports, but put sports in their proper place.

We still need some physical recreational activities associated with schools, but we should eliminate competitive sports from our schools and put them where they belong.

If commercial sports supported school sports as an adjunct to the academic program, we could have a better school system at much lower cost.

Let's establish a balance of academics and sports and cheer for our academic achievements without rioting.

We need to direct school spirit toward the most important reason for schools — to teach things that will sustain us throughout the rest of our lives.

Resident opposes shopping center

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am writing to say that I join the many who have already expressed their negative views on the proposed shopping center to be located on Bender Lane and Route 9W.

According to Town Planner Jeff Lipnicky, in 1990 a study was conducted in town to determine whether residents would "encourage, allow or discourage each of the following types of non-residential development or mall."

The results of the vote were: 17 percent voted to allow a large shopping center and 67.7 percent voted to discourage the same. It included the area now being considered on Route 9W and Bender Lane.

Results of studies such as these should be strongly considered and used as a guide during the planning of a town's commercial growth. Eleven years later, a scaled-down version of the same idea is being considered by the town board. What has changed? Why is this idea being resurrected when residents clearly were opposed to it in the first place.

People in Bethlehem approve school budgets every year, aware that their passage will raise their taxes. They accept this burden because they want to support the schools. In the same way, the burden of limiting development such as the proposed shopping center, could be considered one taxpayers want to shoulder to maintain their quality of life. There is no need for more big box stores; it will kill local business. The negative impact on the town from this mall in every respect, far outweighs the benefits of money generated by its taxes.

Planning decisions that only examine the taxes to be added to the town's coffers are not sound decisions. Residents in town depend on elected officials to look after the town's best interests — including quality of life — not those of invading corporations.

PTA committee says thanks

Editor, The Spotlight:

Slingerlands Elementary School recently held its annual PTA carnival, which once again was a success for all who participated.

In addition to the enjoyment of the many games, the abundant treats and interaction between kids and parents, many lucky families left the event with a variety of gift certificates and items donated by town businesses.

We would like to extend a hearty thank you to the following individuals and businesses that so generously donated goods and services for the carnival:

BIG Arena, Blue Sky Music Studio, Coconut, Davey Jones Locker, Del Lanes, Delmar Marketplace, Dunkin' Donuts, Dr. Hargrave of the Macomber Plastic Surgeon Group, Drs. Primomo and Herzog, Drs. Wilson and Hart, Friar Tuck Book Shop, Gold Coin, Hannaford, Hair Studio One, I Love Books, KEM Cleaners, McDonald's, Tom McGrath of Albany Theatre Supplies, Mercato's, Mr. Subb, Papa John's, Paper Mill, Pizza Hut, Picket Pottery, Prestige Photo & Portrait Studio, Price Chopper, Radio Shack, Steve Schragger of The Party Warehouse, South Street Framers/Serendipity Gifts, Toll Gate, the Toy Chest and Video World.

When we think of our school community — teachers, staff, parents and students may first come to mind, but it is also important to remember the valuable contributions made by businesses on behalf of our children. Many thanks again on behalf of the PTA carnival committee.

SHOCKS TO THE SYSTEM

When shocks or struts wear out, your vehicle will bounce when driven over bumps. It will also sway when steered into turns, and the tires may show uneven wear patterns. Because bad shocks and/or struts lead to serious handling problems, they should be replaced at the first signs of failure. Sometimes, a bad shock leaks hydraulic fluid, which collects road dust. A visual inspection will reveal the need for replacement. Another problem involves loose nuts or bolts on the shock absorber mounting studs or brackets, which creates a thumping or banging noise when the vehicle is driven over bumps. Any of these symptoms should be brought to the attention of a technician, who can then diagnose the problem.

If you are having difficulty handling your vehicle and it bounces when you hit a bump, you may need new shocks and new struts. BETHLEHEM AUTO SERVICE offers complete auto service for domestic and foreign vehicles. A technician will inspect every component of your vehicle including the shocks, belts and hoses, and all fluids. We are an AC Delco Master Technician Service Center. For reliable and courteous auto service, call us at 426-8414, or visit us at 62 Hannay Lane in Glenmont off Rt. 9W behind Stone Ends. Business hours are Mon.-Fri., 7-6.

Former student grateful for teacher's influence

Editor, The Spotlight:

This letter is in regard to the Jesse Braverman issue. He was my teacher, and there's no doubt in my mind, I would not have been able to survive middle school without his help.

He would come in early every morning and help me and other students on his own free time. I can remember when I wanted to try out for the baseball team, he came in extra early just to play catch because he loved the game more than anything.

If I did well on a test or quiz, he would buy me a soda. If at the end of a marking period, my average was good, he would take me to games, the movies or out for something to eat. He would let me come in for help even when it was his time to eat lunch.

In 20 years, he hadn't even taken a sick day and as a reward, he had his baseball team taken away. That's some kind of reward. I have seen him coach, and he was dedicated to it. He wasn't just a baseball coach and teacher, he was also the head of the eighth-grade student council. He worked for the school store and was a soccer and basketball coach.

Most important, he was a kind man and all he cared about was the kids and baseball. Now, he's sick since both have been taken away, and that's not fair.

I'm happy all through middle school he was there, but I feel sorry for the kids this year. They missed a chance to learn from one of the most intelligent men I have ever met. He was like a second father to me. He would come in on Saturdays and get the kids who normally didn't do work to come in so they would pass. In the long run, all the kids will lose.

Thanks, Mr. Braverman, for all the good years we had, and I hope you have more years to teach and coach kids.

Physically Speaking

by Nick Valenze, P.T.

OVERUSED

Overuse injuries result from the wear and tear of repetitive activity. Tendinitis is the problem behind many overuse injuries. Tendons, the fibrous cords that anchor muscles to bones, are vulnerable because the force of muscle contractions is transmitted through them. People who exercise regularly are especially at risk because of the strong forces produced by their well-conditioned muscles. These forces increase tension on the tendons, which can then rub against bones, ligaments and other tendons to cause irritation. Tendinitis is deceptive. The pain can be severe at the beginning of exercise, then may diminish as exercise continues, only to return sharply once it has stopped. Stretching and strengthening regimens can help prevent tendinitis, but equipment and technique are equally important.

When you visit our physical therapy practice, in addition to treating your condition, we'll also explain how it occurred (in plain English), and show you what you can do to prevent injuries in the future. We provide all the latest therapy options, including ultrasound and massage, and offer day and evening treatment hours for your convenience. Ask your physician for a referral, or call our offices at the number listed below to learn more. Free parking and wheelchair access available.

Pesticide law should be kept on the books

Editor, The Spotlight:

On Feb. 12, the Albany County Legislature approved pesticide neighbor notification provisions, and 14 days later, county Executive Michael Breslin signed the provisions into law.

The new law requires commercial pesticide applicators to notify neighbors on adjoining property at least 48 hours in advance when they plan to spray a lawn.

They also can specify alternate dates in case of wind or rain.

There are exemptions for granular pesticides, spot treatments and less-toxic pesticides.

Homeowners putting down their own pesticides would be required to put out warning signs after applications.

Farms and golf courses are exempt.

With the enactment of the law, Albany County joined the ranks of the select few in New York state to have adopted or introduced similar provisions on a county-wide basis.

Bethlehem Pesticide Watch would like to thank Breslin and local county Legislators Charlie Dawson, David Young and Herb Reilly for supporting the right of the people of Albany County to know when and what pesticides are being applied in their areas.

And we cannot forget the courageous individuals from across the county who wrote letters, called or lobbied their legislators in person.

These untold many deserve the credit for putting sufficient pressure on their lawmakers to make neighbor notification a reality.

Recent mosquito spraying has certainly heightened Bethlehem residents' awareness of pesticide use, but the untold story is that we are routinely exposed to hazardous pesticides in the food we eat, in our schools and offices and even in our own back yards.

In 1998, for example, commercial applicators reported using more than 23 million pounds and 3.5 million gallons of pesticides in New York state.

Although neighbor notification does not prevent a resident or commercial applicator from applying pesticides within the county, it does represent an important first step in making Albany County residents, and especially the residents of Bethlehem, more empowered to protect themselves and their families, pets and property from inadvertent and potentially hazardous pesticide exposure.

Unfortunately, the neighborhood notification law expires in December. Beginning now, we must continue to work locally to preserve the important gains made through the passage of the bill.

What can you do? First of all, learn more about what the law means to you.

On June 6 at 7 p.m. at Bethlehem Public Library, the Bethlehem Pesticide Watch is sponsoring a seminar entitled "Pesticides, Neighborhood Notification and You."

And keep up the pressure. Write your local legislators and Breslin expressing your views.

Reader found travel article delightful

Editor, The Spotlight:

Though late in my getting around to reading the May 16 Spotlight, I must register the high enjoyment that I experienced on reading the vivacious account of Dev Tobin's journey through Italy.

A novice visitor, especially one who has no facility with the Italian language, might be tempted to take a guided tour of "the big three" — Roma, Firenze and Venezia. Mr. Tobin shows, however, that a traveler can, with careful planning, take in the less well-known, but extremely stimulating, locations in Italy.

His planning not only allowed him to find some of the kinds of delightful accommodations that are available to one who plans well and then goes outside of the beaten path, but he also was able to visit and appreciate some of the most significant artistic and historic parts of Italy. Moreover, from his account, I gather that his way of touring Italy allowed him to have the kinds of person-to-person contacts that fully enrich travel.

I could not agree more with his claim that "You can do it, too!"

V'ville school district to begin construction

The Voorheesville Central School District will be conducting construction projects at Voorheesville Elementary School, Clayton A. Bouton Jr./Sr. High School and on new playing fields on New Salem Road in Voorheesville.

The construction area will be separated from occupied areas of the buildings.

All construction workers will be required to wear photo-ID badges and noise levels will be kept to a minimum while the building is occupied.

All applicable federal and state rules and regulations will be strictly adhered to throughout the length of this project, which is projected to begin on May 31.

Questions or concerns about the project can be directed to school Superintendent Alan McCartney at 765-3313, ext. 104, or Assistant Superintendent Anthony Marturano at 765-3313, ext. 102.

Series wins award

Bethlehem Public Library's Bethlehem Treasures series has won the Upper Hudson Library System's 2000 Program of the Year Award in the urban/suburban category.

Bethlehem Treasures highlighted the town's civic and cultural life and history throughout the year.

Resident experts — musicians, writers, historians, craftspeople, collectors and travelers — were invited to share their particular skills and interest in the form of slide shows, readings, exhibits, and lectures.

Some of your neighbors who participated were antique doll expert Ursula Mertz, China traveler Dick Buyer, local authors Hollis Seamon and Susan Riback, antique clock expert Charlie Breuel, Normansville resident Darlene Bell, Bethlehem town historian Joseph Allgaier, Delmar Community Orchestra and Bethlehem Central High School music ensembles.

Thanks to all whose enthusiasm and expertise helped win this award.

We have been notified that we will receive $13,750 from the Albany County Legislature to fund upgrades in library technology.

The money will be used to purchase a wireless computer lab, which will greatly improve our ability to offer hands-on computer and Internet instruction for our patrons.

We hope to purchase this equipment before the end of the summer. Watch this column and our newsletter for announcements and programs.

Treadgold, Clair reach Section II tennis finals

By ROB JONAS

Matt Treadgold and Jon Clair know the drill now.

Two weeks after playing each other for the Suburban Council singles title, the two Bethlehem tennis players found themselves going against each other again yesterday in Schenectady — this time for the Section II championship.

"I'm happy to be in the Sectional finals again," Treadgold said. "It's unfortunate that you have to play a teammate in the finals, but I have been playing better lately. So, I'm looking forward to seeing what I can do."

"I'm glad we're playing because we've been friends for a long time," Clair said. "So, it's pretty cool that we're playing each other in the finals. I just hope it's a good match."

Treadgold dispatched LaSalle's Adam Barelski in last Thursday's semifinal match 6-0, 6-1, while Clair needed three sets to defeat Niskayuna's Jonathan Chow 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

"I was more aggressive in the third set," Clair said. "I hit the ball deeper and put more pressure on him. He's a great player."

"I'm hoping Chow wins his consolation match," Bethlehem coach Steve Smith said. "Both of them played hard, so I hope Chow finds a way to get to states."

Their semifinal wins assured Treadgold and Clair spots on the Section II team going to the state tennis tournament in New York City. The top three singles players and doubles teams qualify for states.

Treadgold and Clair were not the only Bethlehem teammates to face each other in the Section II tournament. The doubles team of Peter Cooley and Alan Lewis defeated David Perlmutter and

Nick Finger 5-7, 7-5, 6-1 in last Thursday's semifinals to advance to yesterday's championship against Niskayuna's Nick Denefrio and Albert Alant. Perlmutter and Finger played Albany Academy's Dan Langford and Joe Correa in the consolation finals for the right to go to states.

"On any given day, they could have beaten each other," Smith said. "The scores were that close."

The possibility that six Bethlehem tennis players could qualify for the state tournament is music to Treadgold's ears.

"It's unbelievable the team we've been able to put together this year," Treadgold said. "It would be unbelievable if six guys from Bethlehem were able to go to states."

The Bethlehem tennis team wrapped up its season last Tuesday by knocking off Niskayuna 6-2 to win the Section II, Class A title.

"It was a very exciting match," Smith said. "We went up 4-0, and then the other matches got very close."

Treadgold, Cooley and Lewis each had straight-set victories in singles matches, but the Eagles had to pull out two three-set wins to put the Silver Warriors away.

"It came down to Eric Herd and Sandeep Murthy winning at third doubles for us to clinch it," Smith said.

The victory gave Bethlehem a final record of 18-0 and its second straight Section II title. The Eagles own a 36-match winning streak.

"The great thing about this team is that we had 21 kids on the roster this year, and every one of them had at least one win," Smith said.

Sports award picnic

The Bethlehem Central Athletic Association will hold its annual awards picnic from 5 to 7 p.m. June 8 at Bethlehem Town Park.

The event will honor the Bethlehem Central High School varsity teams, outstanding senior athletes and three-sport letter winners. The BCAA senior scholarship winners will also be announced.

Girls lacrosse team advances to finals

The Bethlehem girls lacrosse team reached the Section II, Division I finals for the third year in a row after downing Niskayuna 17-2 in last Thursday's semifinals.

Carley St. Lucia, Kristin Link and Susie Breaznell each scored four goals to lead the Lady Eagles (15-1) into tonight's championship game against Saratoga at Colonie Central High School. Brianna Bubeck and Katie Wagoner contributed two goals apiece.

Bethlehem opened its playoff run last Tuesday with a 23-2 win against Colonie. Link led the charge with six goals and an assist, while St. Lucia chipped in with three goals and five assists.

Saratoga ends Eagles playoff run in first game

By ROB JONAS

It took one inning to end Bethlehem's baseball season.

Todd Gabarow launched a three-run home run to highlight a four-run fifth inning as Saratoga defeated the Eagles 5-4 in last Friday's Section II, Class A playoff game in Bethlehem.

"It was just a heartbreaker — a tough way to end the season," Bethlehem coach John DeMeo said. "I give those guys a lot of credit for how hard they played this season."

The Eagles, who received the No. 6 seed after winning the Suburban Council Gold Division title, pieced together runs in the first, third and fourth innings to build a 3-1 lead.

Things fell apart for Bethlehem in the top of the fifth inning, though. With two outs, pitcher Avi Rasowsky walked a Saratoga batter. When the baserunner attempted to steal second, catcher Matt Drislane's throw sailed into the outfield. The ball was thrown away again on an attempt to get the runner at third base, which allowed the Blue Streaks a run to close within 3-2.

After back-to-back singles, Gabarow belted a pitch over the fence to put Saratoga ahead 5-3.

Bethlehem had a chance to tie the game in the bottom of the fifth inning. With two outs and runners on second and third, Mark Bulger hit a ground ball to the left side of the infield. Bulger and the ball reached first base at the same time, but Bulger was called out by the umpire to end the inning.

"It appeared to everybody, except to the person who it should have appeared to, that he beat the throw by about a step," DeMeo said.

The Eagles scored a run in the bottom of the sixth inning to close within 5-4, but Saratoga held on to post the upset.

"Avi pitched a good game," DeMeo said. "We just didn't get the timely hits when we needed to."

John Nowak had three hits for Bethlehem, which finished the season with a 13-6 record.

Voorheesville advances to semis

By ROB JONAS

Lately, the Voorheesville Blackbirds have looked like the team that dominated the Section II, Class C softball world in the mid 1990s.

The Blackbirds (10-12) moved into the Class CC semifinals with a 2-1 victory against second seeded Hoosick Falls last Friday at Clifton Common.

"Deep down inside, I thought if we put things together in the second half of the season, we could get into Sectionals," Voorheesville coach John Schachne said. "I think we're surprising ourselves with how well we've played."

Voorheesville, the No. 11 seed, was staring the offseason in the face in the seventh inning. Trailing 1-0 and down to their last out, the Blackbirds received consecutive infield singles from Dana Herchenroder and Britany Burnham.

After a walk to Cyrilla Suker loaded the bases, Kim Rivenburgh hit a ground ball to second base, where it was bobbled. Rivenburgh beat the throw to first, allowing Herchenroder and Burnham to score the tying and go-ahead runs.

"For a change, we didn't make the error that cost us the game," Schachne said. "The other team made the error that allowed us to win the game."

Suker kept Voorheesville in the game on the pitcher's mound. The eighth grader allowed three hits and struck out 11 for her fifth win since being called up from the junior varsity team midway through the season.

"She's been very cool, calm and collected," Schachne said.

The victory moved Voorheesville into Tuesday's Class CC semifinal against No. 3 Greenwich at Clifton Common.

"We have a tough one with Greenwich coming up," Schachne said Sunday evening. "If we get by Greenwich, then we'll face the top seed, Mechanicville, in the finals."

The Blackbirds opened their playoff run last Thursday with an 8-1 win against Cocksackie-Athens at Clifton Common. Voorheesville scored five runs in the top of the first inning and added three more in the fourth to put the game out of reach.

"We hit the ball right off the bat," Schachne said. "We put a bunch of hits together."

Suker had another strong performance for Voorheesville. She struck out 14 and allowed two hits to Cocksackie-Athens.

Water

"I am going to do everything in my power to see that the Department of Environmental Conservation, the Health Department, the Corps of Engineers and the Department of State understand what is being proposed here," he added.

Alessi said he welcomed Kelleher's input, adding that the permit process would remain a public matter. But he stressed the value of the settlement "any way this turns."

Earth Tech's 13-and-a-half year guarantee of the production level, he said, was significant.

"It's important for the town to be able to market the availability of this system to produce 6 million gallons a day whether there is a current demand or not," he said.

The plant is used almost exclusively for industrial customers, mostly in the town's southern end.

But not entirely, since the town permits residents who specifically request it to connect with the water main along Clapper and Creble roads. Maintaining that protocol intact proved to be the central issue of the Old School Road extension debate.

The proposal called for installing a 20-inch water main along the rural road to provide water for 17 residences there, as well as the nearby South Albany Airport, at a cost of about $70,000.

It would be connected to the Clapper main — making this residential extension the first of its kind to make use of the plant's water.

Several residents requested the connection — enough of the proposed district's residents to justify an extension, Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor said.

But several residents objected to being included in the extension and thus forced take the Clapper water for residential use. So the board tabled the proposal to give Secor an opportunity to research alternatives that would instead tie into the town's principal residential supply mains, more than a mile away from Old School Road.

Last week, he ruled out a connection to the water supplied to the nearby CSX rail yards, and said the cost of a direct line to the Vly Creek main, along Speedon Road, would cost $300,000.

Secor sought the board's guidance on whether to pursue an extension — which would require a formal petition from residents and a public hearing — or simply permit owners of four residential properties adjacent to Creble Road, and the airport, to connect directly to the Creble main.

This would exclude an apartment complex in the old school building and one other resident further south who had requested it, Secor said.

That drew questions from board member George Lenhardt, concerned about those exclusions and about whether the limited measure now would make a future water extension more expensive.

"I certainly would be in favor of a public hearing at least to hear from the residents (if) they're interested," he said.

No way, countered board member Dan Plummer.

"I support use of this water source for commercial-industrial purposes as in the past, and I do support the residents ... that are in a position to hook up, and that they continue to do so (if they wish), but I would not support creation of a water district," he said.

Board member Doris Davis concurred, and Lenhardt's motion to move forward with a public hearing failed for lack of a second.

A motion to authorize only the eligible owners to request private connections to the main passed unanimously.

Old School Road resident Peter Anderson, who had appealed for the approval, applauded the more limited resolution.

"I certainly don't want to push anything on my neighbors that they don't want," he said.

In a related action, the town board unanimously approved Secor's recommendation to enact restrictions on lawn sprinkling.

Residential lawn sprinkling is limited under the measure to the hours of 7 to 9 a.m. and 7 to 9 p.m.

Both programs will be in the high school auditorium.

Music department staff will be available to answer any questions and provide information about Bethlehem's instrumental music program.

Buildings

building, 10,000 square feet, is slated to be built behind the other two — big enough for two small business tenants or, more likely, a day care facility.

But in order to move ahead, will first require the purchase and rezoning of a residential building property, less than half an acre, at 1224 New Scotland Road, currently surrounded on three sides by First Columbia's existing 17-acre parcel, which was rezoned two years ago as a Planned Commercial District.

First Columbia's Development Director Ray Milnarik made a brief presentation of the plans before the town board at last Wednesday's meeting — and the board referred the proposal to the town planning board for its recommendation.

Milnarik told the board that, pending approval of the rezoning request, his firm already has a contingency purchase agreement for the residence, a rental property that is currently vacant.

"What we're really looking to do is to add to the current site out there, and build another building or two," he said.

But the new buildings are not an offshoot of the medical building, he said.

"We don't currently see a need for additional medical space, but what we are proposing is a general office use for this next building. ... We think really there is a demand and a need in the town of Bethlehem and this part of Albany County for Class A general office space. What we're envisioning is a new state-of-the-art, high-tech office building," he said.

He said the firm hoped, subject to rental demand, to have the new building completed by summer 2002. The facility would also require an extension of the public water line along New Scotland Road and additional parking.

Building of the smaller structure would follow; no preliminary schedule for its completion has yet been set. Both buildings would share the main driveway with the medical building, although a secondary driveway onto New Scotland Road is also proposed.

Responding to inquiries by board member George Lenhardt, Deputy Town Planner Janine Saatman said she anticipated the two new buildings would complete the build-out of the existing PCD.

"I wouldn't say, given the environmental character of the site, that they would probably be able to get something else (on the site)," she said.

The property is uphill of the Normanskill, and runoff drainage from the property flows there — and the remainder of the property is likely too steep for building.

The board unanimously voted to accept the proposal for review and refer it to the planning board.

The resolution also declared the board's intent to stand as lead agency for the purpose of the environmental quality review.

For either rezoning or an amendment of the PCD's boundaries, a public hearing would be required before the town board.

The planning board will likely take its first look at the rezoning and building proposal at its June 5 meeting.

The Paws That Refresh

Caring for an ailing mate at home can be such a demanding responsibility that many wonder who is caring for the caregivers. To answer the question, researchers studied 60 men and women who were caring for spouses suffering from significant medical conditions. All the caregivers had stress-related hypertension. Half were asked to adopt a dog. For six months, blood pressure of the caregivers was monitored while they took care of their spouses and interacted with their new pets. At the end of the study, it was found that the caregivers with the dogs had significantly reduced blood pressure and heart rates, compared with those with no pets. The unconditional love of the pet was seen as the beneficial factor.

There's no doubt about it — connection with pets can ease one's loneliness. At Good Samaritan Lutheran Health Care Center, 125 Rockefeller Road, we work hard with each person who resides here to help him or her find those stress relievers that make life easier to manage. Our residential community features assisted and independent living. Come see for yourself! Give us a call at 439-8116.

CALENDARS ♦ ART & ENTERTAINMENT

By JOHN BRENT

There's music in the air in Albany this summer. Alive at Five begins its season of free outdoor concerts on Thursday, June 7, and continues every Thursday afternoon from 5 to 8 p.m. through Aug. 23. The concerts take place at Tricentennial Park on Broadway (rain location will be at the Corning Preserve Boat Launch under the 787 overpass).

This year, concert series organizers have chosen a different theme for each evening of music.

June 7 is Irish Night featuring Seven Nations. Blending Celtic music roots into American Pop and Rock, the group has been described as the "Dave Matthews Band with Bagpipes."

Seven Nations has logged more than a quarter million miles in touring in the U.S. and abroad. Remaining fiercely independent, the group from Orlando, Fla., has remained true to its unique sound — a blend that has been ignored by major record labels but embraced by their ever growing, loyal following.

"We are lucky," said lead singer/songwriter Kirk McLeod, "Because we come from two unique cultures. We love American pop and rock 'n' roll, but we also love our Celtic roots music."

McLeod also plays bagpipes, keyboard and guitar, is joined by Ashton Geoghagan (drums), Scott Long (bagpipes and mandolin, Dan Stacey (fiddle and step dancing) and Struby (bass and vocals).

"We want to touch everybody with our art," said McLeod.

Having sold more than 125,000 independently produced, pressed and released CDs it looks like Seven Nations has come along way toward achieving this goal.

Opening for Seven Nations will be the Jimmy Kelly Band featuring high energy Celtic rock.

The Stylistics are the main attraction for 70s Soul Night on June 14. A leading soul group from the 1970s, the Philly based Stylistics had 12 straight Top 10 hits including "You Are Everything," "Brake Up to Make Up" and "You Make Me Feel Brand New."

Their finest hour came, perhaps, when the latter was nominated for a Grammy Award.

Known as one of the longest lasting and most popular R&B groups, they have based their success on performing beautiful harmonies with moving ballad-type songs. No wonder their album "The Best of The Stylistics" went double platinum!

Their latest record is entitled "Love is Back in Style."

Opening for the Stylistics will be Georgia Jones.

Roots Rock Night is scheduled for June 21 and features Professor Louie & the Crowmatix.

Based in the Hudson Valley,

The five members of Rockapella, the popular a capella singing group. They will perform June 28 as part of the free summer concert series, Alive at Five.

The Stylistics, the popular 70s group whose sound never goes out of style, will appear as part of Soul Night for the Alive at Five Concert Series on June 14.

this group has toured and recorded together for the past eight years.

Ranging from funky to etherial, the Crowmatix combine influences from rock 'n' roll, soul, country and folk while playing a combination of electrical and acoustic instruments.

Professor Louie Hurwitz performs vocals and plays keyboards and accordion. Brooklyn native Marie "Miss Marie" Spinosa is a singer/songwriter whose strong blues vocals enhance the recordings and performances and whose writing talents have contributed to the original work the group performs.

Other members of the group include Mike Dunn (bass), Jim Eppard (guitar, mandolin and vocals), Gary Burke (drums, percussion and arrangements) and Mike Demicco (guitar, mandolin).

Many people will remember the singing group Rockapella from the Folger's Coffee TV commercial a few years back.

The vocal powerhouse will take the stage on June 28 as part of a capella night. Beginning as a group of collegiate street performers in New York City, whose love of singing was apparent from the beginning, the ensemble perfected their a capella style and today are considered a major force among groups who perform without instrumental accompaniment.

Blending rock 'n' roll, R&B, soul and jazz into an infectious sound exemplified by their first U.S. CD release "Don't Tell Me You Do," the group has only become more popular with time.

A follow up album simply titled "2" and a Christmas collection have sold beyond expectations.

Elliott Kerman, Barry Carl, Scott Leonard, Jeff Thacher and Kevin Wright will help you rethink any preconceptions you may have about singing a capella.

Opening for Rockapella is the popular group, Naturally Seven who recently appeared at Albany's Tulip Festival.

Performing a capella, Naturally Seven combines a gospel style of music with R&B.

Gospel Night is the theme for July 12. The Soul Stirrers will be featured.

Zydeco master Terrence Simien highlights Cajun

Night on July 19. Beginning his career as a singer of spirituals at St. Ann's Roman Catholic Church in his home town of Mallet, Lo., he left Mallet at age 17 to join a band and explore the more sensual side of the music scene.

Combining spicy Cajun with soul and funk, the seasoned recording artist had his first CD, "Zydeco on the Bayou" in 1990 and has been very active ever since.

"Terrance Simien is the hardest working man in zydeco ... his show has a flair and excitement that burns up the stage," said The Boston Globe.

July 26 is Latin Night with Ned Sublett. The performer's lyrics, Professor Louie and the Crowmatix will take the stage on June 21 for Rock Roots Night, part of the Alive at Five Concert Series at Tricentennial Park.

compositions and vocals combine with a first-rate team of musicians from Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico and the New York salsa scene for a state-of-the-art Latin Sound.

Bringing his own Texas touch to the mix, Sublett and his band released the debut album, "Cowboy Rumba," featuring a unique sound that local audiences will be able to enjoy.

Swing Night with Big Jake Rude is on the schedule for Aug. 2. Starting out in his native Canada in the early 90s, Rude (real name: Jacob Hiebert) was popular with audiences but never seemed to find his niche with the north-of-the-border music biz. In a bold move, he came to New York City in and founded a new band in 1998 and soon began touring the U.S.

Combining acoustic guitar, clarinet, trumpet and other instruments, Rude describes his sound as a jump blues band while listeners identify the sound as swing.

Opening for Big Jake Rude will be Dem Brooklyn Bums.

Bill Wyman and the Rhythm Kings take the stage for Rhythm and Blues Night on Aug. 9.

Former Rolling Stones band member Bill Wyman has moved from his rock 'n' roll roots to a style closer to R&B. The Rhythm Kings have released three albums with a fourth due out in late June. Double Bill, the new CD will feature guest performances by former Beatle George Harrison and other high profile music-ians Wyman has met along the way in his four-decades as a pop music force.

The Tom Healey Band opens for the Rhythm Kings.

A second Irish night is in the works for fans of Irish music on Aug. 16. An intense group of performers known as The Saw Doctors, one of Ireland's most popular rock bands, present a combination of rural Irish sensibilities with more cosmopolitan musical influences. Songs with intense pop energy, songs with wistful reflection and songs of smoldering love — the Saw Doctors have them all. "Crowd pleasing to the max," said the Boston Globe.

Opening band for the Saw Doctors will be Barra McNeils.

Wrapping up the series of summer performances at Tricentennial Park will be Les Respectables and One Ton who join forces for Quebec-New York Night.

For information on the Alive at Five Concert Series, call 434-2032 or visit the Web site at www.albanyevents.org.

Negotiations with the Joels have been under way for about two years. Thompson said. Their property lies less than a mile west of Fisher Boulevard, the main spine of such rapidly-growing developments as Cedar Ridge and Delmar Village. Mason Road itself, and the intersecting Old English Road, have in recent years been extensively developed as residential estate properties.

The flat, 30-acre meadow that dominates the Joel property has been a tempting target for developers, who have repeatedly approached the family about purchasing it, Thompson said.

"They came to us saying they wanted to do the right thing with their property. It's a stewardship ethic you don't see very much, and it's very refreshing," he said.

The sale agreement includes the Joel home and a small garage, which complicated negotiations over the purchase price, as DEC officials were hesitant to spend open space money on an improved lot. Five Rivers managers, however, plan to use the residence as seasonal housing.

But the most attractive features of the new property are the riparian zone surrounding the Phillipinkill, a tributary to the Vlomankill that runs through both lots and Five Rivers; and the Joel meadow, a nesting ground for numerous bird species.

"The species that nest in these flat, open fields are being driven out because grasslands are being chopped up into postage-stamp-sized lots by developers," Thompson said. "We think it's important to preserve large areas of open land."

That growth also poses a threat to streams like the Phillipinkill.

"With local development at an increasing rate, we're concerned about erosion, stream turbidity, as well as the loss of wetland habitat," he said.

Continuing local residential development also puts increased pressure on Five Rivers itself. For the past quarter century, Thompson said, use of the grounds has increased annually at a steady 4 percent, raising demand for potable water and waste disposal and new trails.

"We are concerned about the double whammy of increased local development, which we expect to continue, and increased use of our facility," he said.

"For now, we'll use it as a buffer between Five Rivers and the developing area," he said. "In the long run, it will be possible to provide foot access to these grounds. The kinds of uses environmental education puts the land to are very benign — a footpath here, a guided walk there. But that's a 10-to-15 year buildout, most likely."
