Town comes to terms with PSEG on taxes

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

A team of negotiators representing the town of Bethlehem, the town's Industrial Development Agency (IDA) and Bethlehem Central School District, reached agreement last week with PSEG Power-New York that will pave the way for the redevelopment of Glenmont's Energy Center.

Details of the agreement will be spelled out in two public information meetings scheduled for June 18 and 21 at 7 p.m. at Bethlehem town hall, and a July 12 public hearing before the IDA, which will then consider the package at its July 30 meeting. PSEG's board must also ratify the pact.

The agreement will result in no immediate tax rate increases for the town, thanks to a healthy fund balance projected at more than $2.5 million for the current year, said Supervisor Sheila Fuller. But according to school Superintendent Les Loomis, it will force a one-time hike in school tax rates for the coming school year of 7.1 percent for Bethlehem residents and 7.2 percent for district residents in New Scotland, on top of the 3.7 percent increase approved last month by district voters.

"We think we have a responsive, responsible settlement agreement with PSEG," Fuller said. "I think the community will certainly have questions, and we want this process to be as open as possible."

The agreement, outlined by Fuller,

Loomis and IDA chairman Michael Tucker last Friday, trades a reduced tax liability and various incentives for PSEG for a long-term commitment by the utility to redevelop the former Albany Steam Station on River Road and settle tax litigation extending back to 1993, involving the Albany Steam Station's previous owner, Niagara Mohawk Power Corp.

That litigation, seeking reduction of the assessment on the Glenmont property, potentially exposed the district, town, and other concerned taxing entities, from Albany County to local fire and ambulance districts, to as much as $30 million in refunds to NiMo.

From the outset, PSEG has made clear its intent to seek a reduction in its tax bill as a precondition for going ahead with the project.

"We've said all along that we'd hoped to come up with a resolution to the tax issue that was fair to the town but reflected the new competitive nature of the energy marketplace," said PSEG vice president for governmental affairs Neal Brown. "We think this agreement does that."

The steam station property is currently valued by the town at almost $258 million, resulting in a tax bill of roughly $6.5 million annually. But with deregulation of the power generation industry over the last decade, the state's Office of Real Property Services has greatly revised in the utilities' favor its recommended formulas for assessing utility properties. Depending on which of three formulas is used, ORPS projected the assessment of the property at between $35 million and $83 million,

DOT tidies up landslide road work

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Just over a year after the landslide that closed Delaware Avenue to all traffic, the state Department of Transportation will close one lane of the road this week to complete remedial work at the site.

With landscaping work already set in motion last week, DOT crews will shut down one westbound lane in order to make curb and shoulder improvements to complete the job.

"We're just putting on the finishing touches on the roadside," said DOT regional design engineer

BCHS tennis ace captures state title

By ROB JONAS

Matt Treadgold couldn't have scripted a better ending to his high school tennis career.

The Bethlehem Central High School senior captured the singles title with a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Randy Rocchio of Williamsville East (Section VI) in last Saturday's finals of the New York state boys tennis tournament in Flushing, Queens.

"It's still kind of strange," Treadgold said Sunday. "I look at the list of people who have won it in the past and to see my name on that list is unbelievable."

Treadgold overcame a series of foot fault penalties called on his serves in the second set to become the first Section II tennis player to win a state title since Columbia's Travis Boyd claimed the 1989 singles championship.

"In my entire playing career, I had never had a foot fault called on me," said Treadgold, who finished his season with a 27-0 record. "All of a sudden, I was having foot faults called on me left and right. It kind of rattled my confidence a bit."

The foot faults did little more than slow Treadgold's progress to the title, though. He served up the last of his 10 aces on the final point to defeat Rocchio.

"I missed my first serve, and I took a chance with a big second serve because I was ahead in the match," Treadgold

Zoning board approves New Salem FD expansion

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

New Salem Fire Department will move ahead soon with a two-story, 8,400-square-foot addition to its main fire station, on Route 85A near the intersection with Route 85, following approval of the proposal by the New Scotland zoning board of appeals at a special public hearing last week.

The addition would permit the fire company to consolidate on a single 15-acre site the operations currently divided between the apparatus-storage building already on the site and a building across Route 85A that houses offices, storage and social areas. Preparations for the project, expected to cost nearly $880,000, have already begun under the supervision of contractors Beka Construction.

The town planning board completed site plan review and approved the project on May 21, conditional on several provisions regarding storm water runoff and parking, and pending approval by the zoning body as well as review by the Albany County planning board, which had no problems with the project.

The zoning board review was prompted by the need for an area variance due to the size of the expansion of what is a non-conforming use on a property zoned residential-agricultural. The new addition will nearly triple the size of the structure.

Architect Jim Tobin presented the plans for the addition before the zoning board on Wednesday, May 30.

He said the new wing, to be connected with the existing apparatus garage, will include bathroom and shower facilities that comply with federal OSHA standards, larger offices and training facilities, additional storage room — and a second floor social hall with a kitchen and lounge.

I know some of this is for the pleasure of the firemen, and they deserve every bit of pleasure they can get.

Don Cootware

The new wing will be roughly 11 feet higher than the existing structure, and will be located between the current structure and a pole-barn outdoor pavilion already on the site.

Chief Craig Shufelt told the zoning board that the new, larger facility will allow room for future growth of the 52-member fire company and consolidation of its operations.

The current building lacks sufficient room for classroom training and operations space, particularly a radio dispatch room where "We're really crunched in," he said.

"It'll make it more modernistic, it'll make it more convenient, and everything will be on one side of the street," Shufelt said. "We'd like to incorporate everything on one side of the street so you're not running back and forth."

No changes in the existing parking or exterior lighting are planned as a result of the new structure.

The fire company will hold on to the existing office and social building until plans to sell it are finalized, Shufelt said.

He did not anticipate any immediate impact on the Punkintown Fair, the annual community festival sponsored by the department on the property behind the old firehouse. If the property is sold, he said, "We'll have to cross that bridge when we come to it."

Town building inspector Gerald Gordinier endorsed the proposed addition, reflecting on his inspections of various fire company facilities in the town.

"New Salem is ready for an upgrade," he said.

Zoning board member Don Cootware, who joined with three colleagues to approve the variance, said, "I know some of this is for the pleasure of the firemen, and they deserve every bit of pleasure they can get."

The volunteers cover a district that stretches from the Guilderland town line into the Helderberg foothills.

Shufelt said construction should begin soon, to be financed by a bank loan, and it will require no special bonding.

"Hopefully we can be in it by October," he said. "With the approvals we've just gotten, we should have the footings in this week, and the walls should go up before the end of June."

Long-shot challenger plans to primary Fuller

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Supervisor Sheila Fuller may not be facing a Democratic challenger in her bid for reelection, but the four-term Republican will not be without opposition this fall, thanks to the emergence of a long-shot challenger last week.

"There will be a race for the supervisor's office in Bethlehem this year," said four-year North Bethlehem resident Tim Gordon, an advertising and public relations consultant and newcomer to politics.

"The people deserve it, and I'm going to step forward and do it."

Last week, Gordon, 40, interviewed with the selection committee of the Albany County Independence Party seeking the party's endorsement. But with its executive committee announcing Friday their decision to back Fuller, who has run with their backing in several previous Rosenbaum cited Fuller's track record and Gordon's relative inexperience as factors in the choice, but welcomed Gordon's candidacy.

Gordon

"It's an interesting development, actually having a member of our party come forward to say they want our endorsement," he said.

Noting his party's long-range goal to build its own independent slates of candidates for local office, he added: "In the meantime, we want to select candidates who will give the best service to the people, who will try to do things more efficiently, who will look to reduce the cost of government. But we look forward to the day we can put forward our own candidates."

Town party co-chair Cynthia Hill concurred in that assessment:

"I didn't think it would do justice to Tim to put him on the ballot," she said. "In our interview, we told him to work longer in the community, meet with people in the party and get to know the system before we gave him our endorsement."

Gordon, a Capital District native and SUNY Brockport graduate, is the president of Albany Media Group. Married and the father of three, he switched from a non-enrolled voter to a registered Independence member earlier this year.

"There's a growing dissatisfaction with government, and it's really regrettable," he said. "Democracy is a group effort, and everybody ought to be involved."

He initially interviewed with the Independence committee for a possible run for town board, but said he shifted his sights on learning that Fuller would face no major-party opponent.

"When a candidate for supervisor goes unchallenged, that's what they become, unchallenged," he said. "Unchallenged to forge compromise, unchallenged to seek a mandate, and the people are robbed of the recourse and due process they're entitled to, the recourse to an alternative."

Gordon's platform has yet to be sorted out, but he pledged that he will circulate "22 Ways to Build a Better Bethlehem" later this summer.

To petition for an opportunity to ballot in the Sept. 11 primary for the Independence nomination, signatures of 5 percent of the party's enrolled voters in Bethlehem must be obtained and filed by July 19.

Independent nominating petitions must carry signatures totalling 5 percent of all votes cast in the town in the last gubernatorial election, and must be filed by Aug. 21.

When a candidate for supervisor goes unchallenged, that's what they become, unchallenged. Unchallenged to forge compromise, unchallenged to seek a mandate.

elections, Gordon said, "I will seek the support of the members of the Independence Party (in a primary in Bethlehem.)"

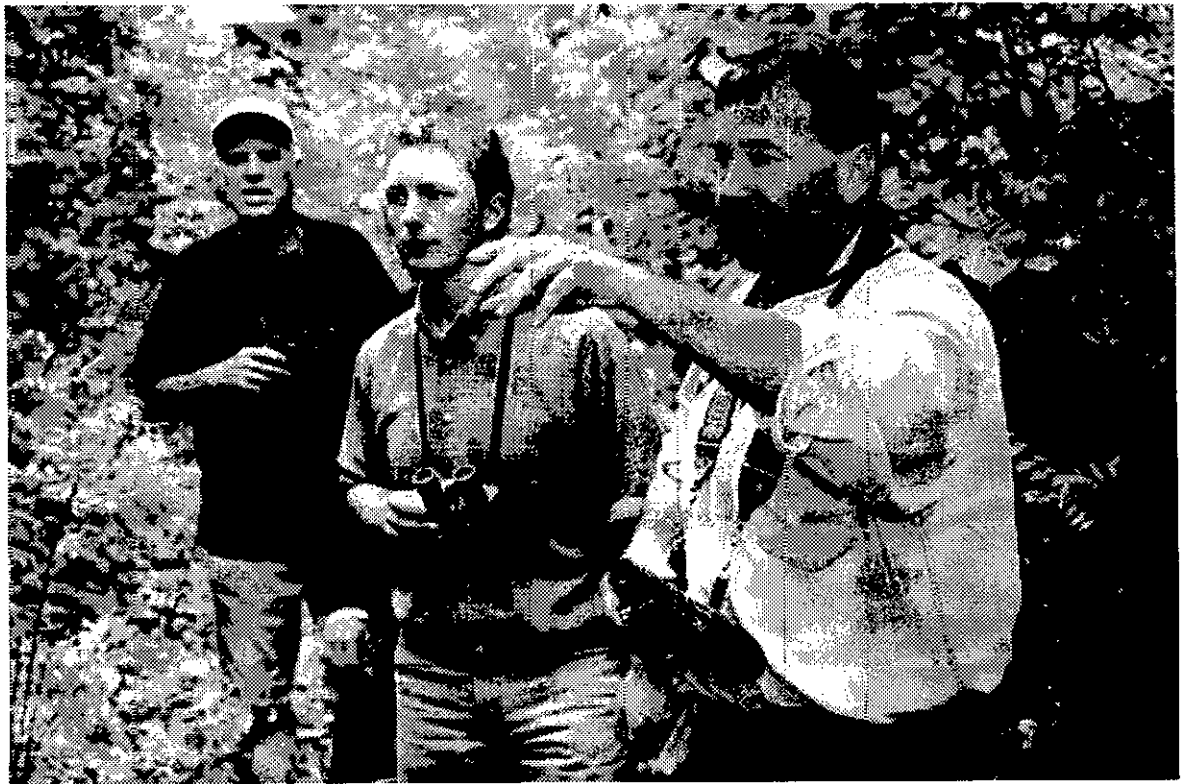

He has also approached the county Conservative Party about possibly seeking its support.

"Another thing we are considering is the possibility of running as a true independent," Gordon said.

"I would like to benefit the Independence Party in this process, but ultimately I want to get on the ballot in any case, and will run as a true independent if I can," he said.

"We did consider Tim," said County Independence chairman Lawrence Rosenbaum Friday.

Independence Party endorsements

Supports Fuller, Sagendorph, Newkirk; splits on judges, board

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The Albany County Independence Party's executive committee met last week in Delmar to endorse county and town candidates for this fall's elections — and announced its backing of a mostly Democratic ticket in many municipalities, including New Scotland.

But their Bethlehem slate was a split ticket. They backed both unopposed Republican incumbents, Supervisor Sheila Fuller and Highway Superintendent Gregg Sagendorph, and also supported five-term GOP incumbent town clerk Kathleen Newkirk over Democratic challenger Patricia Parsons, in a vote that county party chairman Larry Rosenbaum said "came very close."

Committee members split on the two town justice positions, endorsing incumbent Democrat Theresa Egan and Republican challenger Paul DerOhannessian. They withheld support from Democratic incumbent Kenneth Munnely, whom they had backed four years ago.

Munnely, originally elected to fill two years of the unexpired term of the late Peter Wenger, secured a four-year term through a 1999 lawsuit, and Rosenbaum said that factored into the committee's rebuff.

"We were stunned when he took a legal procedure and tried to make it a four-year term," he said. "And once he was there, we didn't feel we had a relationship with him."

By contrast, he said, DerOhannessian, supported by the party in his run last year for county district attorney, "is one of the top legal minds and talents in the county."

And he praised Egan's reputation for organization, fairness and directness.

"She runs a very effective court," he said.

The committee also passed over Republican judicial hopeful Frank Milano, despite support for him by town Independence co-chair Cynthia Hill — and overrode her recommendations on the two town board seats up for election as well.

Both Democrats, incumbent Susan Burns and newcomer Jack Cunningham, were tabbed, passing over current GOP board member George Lenhardt and his running mate, Tom Marcelle.

"Too bad we couldn't do three people," Rosenbaum said. "I really can't say anything negative about Tom Marcelle."

But he said Burns "has done a very good job on the board in representing the people" and Cunningham, a bank executive, would be an important board asset.

Hill, who co-chairs the party committee for Bethlehem and Coeymans with Selkirk resident Dave Pillittere, said "Tom Marcelle, without a doubt, interviewed the best of all the town board candidates" and that she had also spoken in favor of Lenhardt, the town board's longest-tenured incumbent. She said she was "absolutely stunned, floored" by the decision to override her.

"They went over my head," she said, "leaving me completely out of this process, painting me completely out of the picture."

Pillittere did not attend the endorsement meeting, she said, and would not have had a vote, since he is not a state committee member. Efforts to reach Pillittere were unsuccessful.

"The towns of Bethlehem and Coeymans were slighted and not handled the same way the other towns were handled," Hill said. "Hopefully that can be corrected."

The county committee will meet on Thursday, June 7, to consider whether to invoke the Wilson-Pukula procedure for any of the candidates passed over for endorsement — allowing their names to appear on a primary ballot in September, rather than forcing them to challenge the committee selections by write-in through an "opportunity-to-ballot" petition.

"I think we should do Wilson-Pukulas on anybody that got dissenting votes at our meeting," she said. "If we interviewed a candidate that one of our committee members thought was worthy of getting our vote, they ought to be on the primary ballot."

Rosenbaum conceded that the Bethlehem selections had been made over Hill's dissent, but blamed it on the aftermath of her election to the party's state committee two years ago, ousting Pillittere. Rosenbaum said at the time that he considered Hill part of a GOP takeover of the local Independence organization.

Hill dismissed the view of her as a GOP Trojan horse. "That's not an accurate perception at all. I was hit pretty hard at my first meeting of the county committee with that accusation. 'We're not going to let the Republicans shove you down our throat.' I'm an independent voter. I'm a strong advocate of non-partisan, third-voice representation."

The committee's pro-Democratic leaning in many of the endorsement votes, she said, "was all about the strong Democratic powers at the county level forcing their opinions on the town of Bethlehem."

In New Scotland, Independence threw its support for supervisor behind Democrat and current town board member Richard Reilly. Democrats Scott Houghtaling, a town board incumbent, and former member Edward Donohue both won backing for board seats.

Independence also endorsed Democratic incumbents Diane Deschenes for town clerk, Darrell Duncan for highway superintendent, and Thomas Dolan for town justice — all running unopposed.

College reunions let you touch up the past

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

It is easy to forget, as we gathered for our 20th reunion from Middlebury College, that most of us had begun higher education with some combination of trepidation, insecurities, pretensions or arrogance.

Children, jobs and geography provided easy sources of conversation throughout the weekend, pulling many of us closer than we ever were during our days as students.

Maybe it's because not everybody comes that it is easy to chat with the people who are there. Maybe the people who come back are the nicer, the more flexible, the more outgoing. Maybe the intervening years have shown us that our own personal selves and our own little groups are much less important than the greater whole that shaped us as we made the transition to adulthood.

For one weekend, it is great to see the faces that once made up the daily weave of our lives. There are, of course, the friendships that have sustained us in the 20 years since we left this sheltered place.

I am blessed in my closest friends, all those women whose names end in the final "y" so popular in 1959, names on their way to becoming the equivalent of "Edith," or "Mabel" or "Irene," names so clearly belonging to older people that babies never get them any more.

With these women, I shared not only college, but also working years in New York City, where we learned that the world was full of much more than people who lived their lives in accordance with the most popular book of our college days, "The Preppy Handbook."

When we meet again, no matter how long the absence, it is as if we had only last night walked down the hall to our dorm rooms, making plans for before-class breakfast the next day. Reunion for us is a re-evaluation, and we laugh, snicker and sigh over the things we did and the way we thought when we first set out on our own.

Beyond closest friends, it is interesting to see who else comes, to hear where everybody has been and what they've done. We probably didn't realize it in the days when we all did the same thing, but we are an interesting group of people.

Middlebury College is as much about the place as the people; nestled, as the brochures promise, in the Green Mountains of Vermont, and we all once again admired those classic stone buildings and the mountains that truly shelter this place.

My favorite part of the weekend is one that some consider too hokey to attend, when we march behind our class banner up the hill to Mead Chapel, and the convocation that follows.

As we gather at the foot of the hill, and catch up with each other, I remember arriving at this place from a modest family in a modest town. Middlebury looked so beautiful, and I had never seen so many Izod shirts in my life. What did I think I was doing?

The words on the chapel, "The strength of the hills is His also" comforted me — I was from Vermont, these were my hills. With the knowledge that there was strength to be drawn from them, I went forward. Twenty years later, those words still comfort me, and we took our place in the chapel balcony, glad to see that we are still young enough to be sent upstairs.

In a way more studied than the past, we checked out the older classes as they entered the chapel, many of whose name badges included pictures of themselves from younger days. At what reunion does that start?

When does the studied gait of people walking down the aisle become less about ceremony and more about physical limits? When do the women all let their hair stay gray?

When the lone member of the Class of 1926 walked down the aisle between the college president and his wife, the rest of us could only stand and applaud, our eyes misting over at his age and the distance he traveled from Hawaii to get there. How many of us would be walking down that aisle for our 75th reunion in 2056?

The college and the nation's histories were brought home to us as the alumni directors introduced each reunion class. It only feels like a moment ago that we left Middlebury, but history tells otherwise as we were reminded that, during our final year there, Ronald Reagan was elected to his first presidential term and the Iranian hostages were released.

Perhaps being given this sense of passing time makes us treasure these weekends more. By our next reunion, many of us may bring our children less to show them off and more to start them on their own college-hunting process.

We may live in different places; we may have different jobs; more people will have come into our lives; sadly, more people will have left them, too. But always, there will be this wonderful place, to welcome us back and remind us of the beginnings of our own adulthood, and the people who shared that time with us.

Inventor takes bike seat for ride on the Internet

By DEV TOBIN

The century-plus-old sport of bicycling has evolved tremendously over the past few years, with new materials making bikes lighter and stronger than ever and with the development of an entirely new form of the sport, mountain biking. But one thing hasn't changed, according to inventor James Hansen of Loudonville — the basically uncomfortable seat.

After several years of research and tinkering, Hansen is now marketing his patented solution to the sore saddle problem, the Mega Ride seat.

"I bought a mountain bike a few years ago and loved it," Hansen recalled. "But after two weeks, I found that the seat was way too uncomfortable."

In talking to other bicyclists, he found he wasn't alone, "You don't have to convince people that there's a problem."

So Hansen, a construction contractor by trade, began tinkering in his Collegeview Drive basement with ways to make a comfortable bike seat.

He came up with the Mega Ride, a pair of heavily padded cylinders joined together at a slight "swept-wing" angle. There is no "nose" or "horn" as in conventional bike seats.

"Getting rid of the nose really reduces the stress on the body," Hansen said. "If somebody gives it a ride, they'll find out that it's really comfortable."

After working through several prototypes, Hansen was awarded U.S. Patent No. 6,074,002 last June.

While he was developing the seat, the ABC news program 20/20 broadcast a piece on Dr. Irwin Goldstein, a Boston University urologist who argues that conventional bicycle seats can cause impotence.

According to Goldstein, "Men should never ride bicycles" because of potentially permanent damage to blood vessels that are necessary for erections.

Hansen said that until he saw that report, "I didn't realize the comfort issue was also a health issue."

Hansen went to Boston to meet Goldstein and showed him a Mega Ride.

"He liked it," Hansen said. "His issue is with the horn."

Most other seats that attempt to deal with the bike seat/impotence problem "don't completely solve the problem; there's still a horn there," Hansen said.

To come up with the name, Hansen said he had to have something that described the seat and that he could both trademark and secure an Internet domain name for.

The domain name was important, because the Internet is essential for do-it-yourself marketers, he noted.

"The Internet has allowed me to take this on and promote it more efficiently than I could have 10 years ago," Hansen said. "The Web site is a powerful way to market the seat — it's an electronic brochure with so much information for so many people."

Through the Web site, he's sold about 150 Mega Ride seats

all over the country — from Alaska to Florida. He estimated that the site currently receives more than 10 hits a day.

Hansen said he is also working to interest bike shops in stocking the seat, and down the road would welcome a licensing agreement with a major manufacturer.

A native of Clarksville, Hansen, 39, is a graduate of Bethlehem Central High School and the University at Buffalo.

He lives on Collegeview Drive with his wife Toni and 1-year-old daughter Olivia.

Hansen showed off the Mega Ride during last Sunday's Tour de Cure for the American Diabetes

Association, at Stillwater High School.

He said he plans to ride 100 miles in the fund-raising event.

Mega Ride seats are available at 1-800-738-8055 or the Web site, www.megaride.com.

The seat costs $69.95, plus $7 for shipping and handling and 8 percent sales tax.

A done deal

Nearly a year of nail-biting is over for the town, the Bethlehem Central School District and Bethlehem Industrial Development Agency.

Negotiations between the town and PSEG Power-New York have resulted in a draft agreement that outlines a new tax payment structure for the former Albany Steam Plant, which is the largest property taxpayer in town.

Editorials

The bottom line for taxpayers is that there will be a one-time 7.1 percent school tax increase — $214 in Bethlehem and $237 in New Scotland, for homes assessed at $150,000 — over and above the regular increases approved by voters in May.

But it could have been much worse. School Superintendent Les Loomis characterized the agreement as "the very best deal" that could have been negotiated on the town's behalf.

Loomis and Supervisor Sheila Fuller credited IDA chairman Michael Tucker for securing the agreement, which among other things, will wipe out assessment challenge lawsuits dating from 1993 lodged by Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., former owner of the steam plant.

Those lawsuits represented a potential of millions of dollars in lost revenue for the town. In addition, a payment in lieu of taxes agreement will kick in in 2004, with PSEG's tax payments gradually increasing over 20 years.

Details of the complex agreement are outlined in today's Page 1 story, but at first blush, the draft does indeed seem to be a good one for the town and its residents.

Fuller said Tucker spent nearly 50 hours in direct negotiations with PSEG, and at least as many hours preparing for the meetings.

According to Fuller, the town will be able to absorb the hit, because of a fund balance in the general town tax fund, so that town taxes will not be affected. But she voiced concern about the impact on senior citizens as a result of the school tax increases.

"They're the ones who built this town, and I'm here to see that they can afford to stay here," she said.

Under the state STAR program, many seniors already are exempt from school tax payments.

Another plus for Bethlehem is that it will have a new, environmentally friendly power plant which will make electricity available so the town IDA can promote economic development.

For further particulars of the draft agreement, attend one of the public hearings scheduled at town hall on June 18 and 21, at 7 p.m. IDA members, Fuller, Loomis and PSEG representatives will attend.

We applaud Tucker and his negotiating team for their efforts. Other towns have not been as fortunate in negotiations with out-of-state power producers intent as paying as small a tax bill as possible.

Give childhood back to our kids

By FIONA EDELSTEIN

The writer is a former school psychologist currently working part-time in an elementary school early-intervention support program.

A colleague's daughter and 9-month-old grandson joined us at lunch, an every day scene carrying a profound truth in its ordinariness. The child nestled in his mother's lap, bright eyes scanning smiling faces around the table as he edged forward, reaching out to explore the hard surface.

Gradually, his cautious glances became bolder and he began cooing and smiling in response to the interest shown in him. Periodically, he would glance back at his mother, checking that his interpretation of each step of this little venture into unknown social territory was in sync with hers.

She, while allowing him to set the pace, continually supported his curiosity and his daring with gestures of encouragement. The adoring grandmother fretted that her grandson wouldn't let his mother out of his sight.

But, as an objective onlooker, I was awestruck by this simple reminder of the power of parent-child attachment to provide a bedrock for limitless individual development.

As this little boy meets the world with increasing independence, his parents should not confuse his desire to expand his horizons with a diminished need for their presence in his life. The continuing quality of the primary parent-child bond serves as the anchor for all of a child's experiences, as well as the blueprint for every relationship to come.

Disturbing images of childhood now flood the media. They bring a gnawing awareness that children are increasingly in crisis at all levels of society.

Harrowing visions of abandoned, touch-starved infants in Romanian orphanages have given way to ghastly new images piling up on our own doorsteps. The Columbine High School massacre jolted us into realizing that children from intact, "good" families can lead lives so emotionally detached from parents, that such an atrocity can be contemplated, planned and hatched unnoticed.

I talk extensively with parents in my job in an elementary school early intervention program. And if the truth be told, middle-class parenthood is fraying at the seams. For many, the weekday scene is a complex juggling of two very demanding jobs and daytime child care arrangements, while evenings and weekends are consumed by hallowed pursuits of the "involved parent" — extensive supervision of homework, active participation in PTA, coaching young kids' sports teams.

There is pressure to accelerate this life in the fast lane as communities urge us to become more involved with our young to inoculate them against the dangers of modern society. But in the outer-directed lifestyles that we model for our children, and the long hours we spend at work to afford "enriching" middle-class opportunities, do we pause long enough to look into our children's eyes, to listen carefully to their voices and to discover whether our paths are really connecting?

For only if parents and educators allocate sufficient time to meet the unhurried, natural pace of childhood will our children's essential needs be addressed. Higher standards of education will not result in happy, productive adult lives unless each child is patiently guided and supported daily in acquiring a steady inner life, an infrastructure of strong emotional, social and moral development.

My friend's daughter, her baby's anchor, is intimately attuned to the unique status of his development. Efforts to expose our youngsters to inspiring role models and to humanize them with "values" programs in schools will fall on stony ground if personal "anchoring" is weak or absent.

While teachers always expect wide variation in student activity level and attention span, they now see, in classrooms everywhere, many more children whose behavior seriously impedes their learning.

The assumption that even a boisterous young child will readily form an attachment to his teacher and want her approval no longer holds true. As they enter school, significant numbers of children appear rootless, agitated, inattentive or attention-seeking and have difficulty forming an adequate adult-child bond for good academic and social learning to take place. Something appears to have changed.

Picture the quality of life for a 9-year-old fourth-grader whose daily routine typifies that of many children. She awakens at 6:45 a.m. and is on the school bus by 7:30. After a six-hour school day, she proceeds to an after-school day care center whence a parent picks her up at 5:30 p.m. She needs at least 10 hours sleep, so bedtime preparations start around 8, leaving about 2-1/2 hours for family activities of driving home, organizing and eating dinner, conversation, family chores, homework (hers averages 45 minutes daily), reading and playing.

Additionally, she has gymnastics class twice a week and a weekly Girl Scout meeting. Both parents, hard-working professionals, travel intermittently on business, so often one or other is "holding the fort" alone with the 9-year-old and her younger sibling. The family's basic weekday routine started when this young girl was 8 weeks old.

In class, this child's behavior is erratic. She is attention-seeking and aggressive toward other children, seldom at peace with herself. During lessons, she distracts others, or else detaches herself from what's going on and daydreams.

Given the chance, she would curl up with a book for an hour or two at a time and her inattention is a similar escape into her inner world, the only refuge she has from a weekday life of tight schedules and demands by adults in numerous group settings. Her current experience of stress is probably compounded by a deficit of individual experience in her first years of life.

Satisfactory emotional development proceeds through stages of dependence, independence and interdependence (socialization) that parallel a child's progression from home and family into a wider world.

If a child is shortchanged in the development of any of these stages, the strong emotional foundation necessary for success in school and beyond will be permanently undermined.

Dependency allows a child to experience success in his enlarging world while he still has extremely limited individual capabilities. In the "dance" of everyday An adult, attuned to the child, detects that the child is ready to master a new "routine," and keeps the child close enough to become quickly successful in the new patterning.

Parents must learn to step back a little as they guide their young children and to allow them, increasingly, to meet life independently; however, for a long time, parent and child should remain in the security of the same orbit where the reassurance of success can be counted on, and adult patterning for the next "routine" is readily available. Upon reaching kindergarten, the child will then have mastered and internalized many "routines."

We must convince our legislators and employers of the critical nature of parent-child ties in respect to family-leave provision in the first years of life. We have some catching up to do, compared with other countries. We need financial incentives to encourage expansion of good, home-based day care, the closest substitute to a child's own home.

As parents we need to slow down and remember that the greatest gift that we can give our children is our time and calming presence. In short, we must do whatever it takes to give childhood back to our children.

Trespassers violate sanctity of cemetery

Editor, The Spotlight:

In August 1998, my 20-year-old daughter died and was buried at Bethlehem Cemetery at the corner of Kenwood and Elsmere avenues adjacent to Bethlehem Central Middle School.

Nearly three years later, I continue to mourn her death and visit her gravesite very often, almost daily in good weather. I plant flowers and take care to see that the flowers and grass are watered and otherwise maintained.

I was tempted to write this letter two years ago, after planting and preparing the site for Memorial Day, which included weeks of daily visits for watering. I arrived on Memorial Day to discover that someone had found it appropriate to allow their dog to defecate on my daughter's gravesite.

Then again one year ago, I wanted to write when one evening while visiting the cemetery during Little League season, I was disturbed by a father who thought it fitting to take a shortcut through the cemetery to drop off his son who had practice behind the middle school. He was apparently too lazy to walk from the front parking lot of the school.

I witnessed this again this year several weeks ago, although it was a different father and son this time.

Another night, I arrived to find a car parked beneath a sign reading No Parking Anytime, and within 30 feet of another identical sign. I waited to see that the car had been parked there by another father and son duo that had been walking their dog behind the middle school. It should be noted that all three entrances to the cemetery are clearly marked by No Dogs Allowed signs.

I am regularly interrupted by walkers, joggers, bikers, dog walkers and people taking the Loss of trees on Delaware is disturbing

Editor, The Spotlight:

You recently ran a letter from a young girl who asked why so many trees were being cut down.

I wonder if she has gone down Delaware Avenue and seen the devastation caused by a large claw, a saw and a chipper.

The area where the deer found shelter is now gone. The sounds from Delaware Avenue once muted are loud and clear. The stately locust trees have been cut down, turned into a pile of logs.

A vixen with her two young babies runs across the yard, looking for a safer place. The beautiful song of the wood thrush who sang every evening is no more. A newborn fawn still showing signs of his birth is abandoned by his mother.

I must ask why?

Norrine Cooke

shortcut to the middle school and often find cigarette butts and beer bottles strewn about. I can tell you that the cemetery is well maintained by the Bethlehem Cemetery Association and regularly visited by people like myself mourning the loss of a friend or relative.

I can't speak for the other visitors, nor for the cemetery association, but it is my understanding that the cemetery is private property, and I do know that there are signs prohibiting dogs and parking. I also know that the interruptions of these trespassers disturbs me, destroys the tranquility and is disrespectful of the sanctity of the cemetery, its visitors and the people interred there.

I would like Spotlight readers to consider two things: first, the cemetery is not a public recreation area. Please show some respect, compassion and consideration for the people who visit the cemetery and stay out of the cemetery. Second, as we wonder why our children do things that are inappropriate, we need to look in the mirror.

We need to ask ourselves what lessons we teach our children when we drive our son and dog past the no-dogs-allowed sign and then park our car under the no-parking-anytime sign or drop off our Little Leaguer in the cemetery because it saves us one minute and saves our son the walk from the school parking lot, even though it disturbs the mourners at the cemetery.

Please teach your children that a cemetery and its visitors are to be respected.

Many helped with park run

Editor, The Spotlight:

May 20 was the seventh annual running of the Tour du Parc cross country races at Elm Avenue Park in Delmar.

Runners, 129 strong, challenged the five-kilometer course covering the entire park. Ninety children ran the children's one mile or shorter fun runs. Tour du Parc is a favorite of area runners because the entire course is off pavement over rolling hills and through wooded glades and open fields.

The Bethlehem Youth Track and Field Club and the BC Track and Field Boosters Club want to thank all of the participants and sponsors, particularly the children's race sponsors — General Electric, Stewart's Shops and attorneys Conway, Lavelle & Finn.

With their help, along with major sponsors Capital Cities Imported Cars, Delmar Health and Fitness, Farm Family Insurance, First Care Primary and Urgent Care, Fleet Bank, Hannaford supermarkets, Dr. Christopher Maestro, Marshall's

Transportation, Price Chopper and Serling, Decker, Sbuttoni, Boghosian, DDS, the clubs were able to raise funds needed for transportation and training expenses. Many thanks also to Dave Austin and the Department of Parks and Recreation for the excellent facilities and to Paul Turner for directing the event.

Matters of Opinion

Glenmont is no place for big boxes

Editor, The Spotlight:

In spite of the laudable efforts of the designers to "put lipstick on a pig," the plan for Bethlehem Town Center in Glenmont is only slightly more imaginative than a plan for a self-storage facility.

A big box mall is a no-brainer. John Nigro can tell us his development will benefit our town; Home Depot and Wal-Mart can say the same thing. The truth is we are only a target on their corporate maps. They draw circles around their existing stores and look for areas "lacking coverage." Then they move in, like vultures, to help us fulfill our shopping needs. Excuse me if I'm not grateful!

To their credit, our town board learned some valuable lessons from the Southgate fiasco and asked for certain measures, such as storm water management and wetland mitigation, at the beginning of the review process, and the designers, Sear-Brown and Gifford Engineers, gave a credible and thoughtful response. The DEIS written for this project is a significant improvement over the one prepared for Southgate. But no document, however well prepared, can hide the fact that this is an inappropriate development for this site.

What would be appropriate, and what we ought to be able to attract, is development such as found on Computer Drive and Aviation Road in Colonie or in the office park behind Stuyvesant Plaza. We need space for small businesses. Just look at what is now before the town board — the problem of insufficient parking space for a doctor's office. It will be a loss for the town if this doctor decides he has to move his practice to some other town. How many small businesses want to move here, to take advantage of the wonderful environment this town has to offer, only to see that there is no space for them?

Unfortunately, our town board is dominated by the party which cries "infringement of private property rights" every time regulations are proposed in the name of environmental protection but screams "NIMBY" when private residential property owners try to protect their largest investments, their homes, from devaluation as a result of inappropriate development in their neighborhood. I hope our town board will evaluate the true effect this proposal will have on the surrounding neighborhoods and existing businesses. I hope they will pursue appropriate commercial development for this site. I hope they will vote no to big box retail development.

Task force should consider community center for kids

Editor, The Spotlight:

This letter is in response to the proposal by the Community Partnership Task Force that appeared in the May 30 issue.

Instead of acting as vigilantes with the kids, why doesn't the adult population of Bethlehem learn from the alert posed by the task force to work toward the creation of a community center?

Such a center (sorely and long needed by our youth) would provide what other communities, no more financially fortunate than we, have created to promote wholesome alternatives to what the task force deplores here in town?

Personally, we prefer working with other adults to create a positive solution of long-range value to being instructed in how to go on witch-hunting forays, all too reminiscent of the McCarthy era.

Meanwhile, is a local committee being formed to recognize the thoughtful acts performed every day by local youth?

And how will we as adults react when the kids get around to watching the watchers?

What will they have to report about the collection of empty liquor bottles waiting at our curbs for the trash pick-up?

Town board deserves thanks

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to commend the town board for its active part in supporting the Four Corners Merchants Group.

Most recently, the board took a significant first step in passing the shared parking amendment. This is critical for the recovery of the Four Corners and potentially for other areas of town where parking is limited. By doing so, the board has given property owners, merchants and, most of all, the entire town hope for a revitalization of Four Corners that is so desperately needed.

Changes are going to happen soon for the better.

Thanks, town board, for your confidence and future involvement.

AUTO FACTS

by John Quirk

ASSESSING SEVERITY

Many car experts say that regular oil changes are the best form of auto insurance in that they help to ensure the health and longevity of the engine. With this in mind, take a look at your owner's manual and review the recommendations for oil change intervals. The manufacturer is likely to make the distinction between "normal driving conditions" and "severe driving conditions." The latter is usually defined as driving through dusty areas, towing a trailer or boat, frequent idling or idling for long periods, and driving for ten miles or less. Cars operated under these conditions should have an oil and oil filter change every three thousand miles or every three months, whichever comes first.

The intervals for changing the oil in your vehicle will depend on the driving conditions it is subjected to. Bring your vehicle to BETHLEHEM AUTO SERVICE for quality service and fair rates. An A.S.E. Certified Technician can advise you on the maintenance program that fits your vehicle's needs. A routine maintenance check includes inspection of the battery, brakes, all fluids, A/C and tires. For customer's convenience, we are pleased to offer shuttle service. Call 426-8414, or visit us at 62 Hannay Lane in Glenmont off Rt. 9W behind Stone Ends. Business Hours are Mon.-Fri., 7-6.

Town's HILL offerings are unique

Editor, The Spotlight:

A recent letter to The Spotlight described Elderhostel courses made available locally by UAlbany and claims to be "the only such offering in the immediate Albany area." It does indeed offer attractive and unique course and provides welcome programs for the community.

Here in Bethlehem, we too have something unique. The Humanities Institute of Lifelong Learning (HILL), with very little fanfare, is now completing its eighth year, and has been offering many college-level courses, taught by a roster of distinguished specialists in their field.

Course offerings have increased over the years to five per session, currently lasting eight weeks. Enrollment has risen from about 125 at the start to more than 400 this year, attracting people from many segments of our community.

The retired seniors are delighted to attend the day courses (no night driving) locally (no commute). People still actively employed slip in a course or two before reporting for work, and young mothers seek a few hours in a stimulating atmosphere. It is apparent that a strong need is being met.

Part of the success of this enterprise is due to the unique way in which the programs are designed and the strong vision of the HILL planning committee.

First of all, course offerings are not arbitrarily set up, but are determined by the availability of specialists in their field. Secondly, outstanding teachers are actively sought and interviewed, and their classes are audited.

The course offering is then designed by the teacher. Thus there is an expert in Victorian art giving a course in that subject, a professor of literature lecturing on the Book of Job, or a well-known film critic offering a course on movie directors.

The result of this time-consuming process is not only a wide variety of stimulating courses, but an institute of learning with exceptional teachers.

Our board of education has been an indispensable component of this organization, administering the finances for HILL, collecting the fees and handling the payment of salaries for faculty and rental fees.

But as a nonprofit group, where course fees are kept low, HILL depends mainly on its staff of hard-working, dedicated volunteers and it is to them I wish to pay tribute.

Not only do these volunteers spend hours securing faculty and devising programs, they must also search out facilities where courses may be held, provide technical assistance and equipment, take attendance, design and distribute publicity fliers and schedule planning meetings.

They even arrange concerts and lectures on their own time.

We are a fortunate community to benefit from this highest level of volunteerism.

Hats off and a salute to these members of the HILL planning committee: Helen and Fred Adler, Gytelle Bloom, Nan De Santis, Roslyn Faust, Roberta Glatz, Mary Jeram, Fred Tubbs and Natalie Weinstein.

Candidate appreciates support

Editor, The Spotlight

I write to thank everyone for the incredible support and encouragement received during the recent school district election. Please join me in not being disappointed.

Stuart Lyman and Dick Svenson bring excellent qualifications and attitude to the board.

I trust I will have another opportunity to ask for community support so that I, too, may contribute.

Please look for my message next year.

Thanks so much.

BCMS parent says thanks for counselor's caring

Editor, The Spotlight:

It is with pleasure and gratitude that I write this letter. I am a parent of an eighth-grader in Patroon House at Bethlehem Central Middle School.

It is on rare occasion that I have had the pleasure to encounter someone of the caliber of Counselor Van Duzer. She is counselor to this year's eighth-grade class.

It is my understanding that she left her secure position as a teacher to take on the overwhelming job of counselor two and a half years ago with a cut in pay. During that time, she has been an irreplaceable asset.

I appreciate her remarkable ability to care for the educational, emotional and physical well-being of students under her area of responsibility.

Eighth-grade is tough, with many issues to deal with. Yet Carol Van Duzer has always been there for the kids as well as parents, who on so many occasions have gone to her for advice and guidance.

The kids feel safe with her and give her their trust.

Thank you, Carol, for all the love and care you put into your work.

People like you make our world a better place.

Parade brought out community support

Editor, The Spotlight:

Everyone loves a parade — rain or shine. It was great to see the number of folks who attended the Bethlehem Memorial Day parade on Monday — despite the uncertainty of the weather — to show thanks to our American veterans.

It was also great to see the business owners of Turtle Pointe handing out free balloons to children along the parade route and those marching in the parade.

What would a parade be without balloons? It always nice to see business owners giving back to the community and getting involved in the spirit of the town. I commend them for their efforts and dedication to their community.

All in all, it was a great show of community support all around.

Town provides drop sites for used license plates

The state Department of Motor Vehicles is in the process of issuing new license plates for all registered vehicles in New York state.

As a vehicle is re-registered, the owner will receive newly designed licence plates to replace the outdated ones.

To help residents properly dispose of old license plates, the town Highway Department has designated three drop-off sites where old plates can be brought for recycling.

They are the town highway garage at 74 Elm Ave. East, Monday to Friday, 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; the Rupert Road Transfer Station in South Bethlehem, Monday to Saturday, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and the town clerk's office in Bethlehem town hall at 445 Delaware Ave., Monday to Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

To insure the safety of the disposal process, residents are asked to mark the face of the old plate with an indelible permanent marker.

Good Samaritan Senior Living

by Lee Bormann
President/C.E.O.

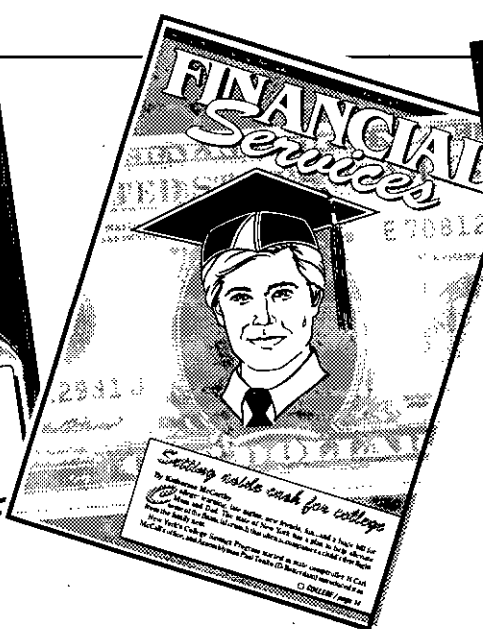

Don't Take The Fall

Although falls are hardly restricted to senior citizens, they become progressively more common as we age. Falls should not be regarded as an inevitable part of the aging process, however. There are simple preventive measures that we can all take to reduce the incidence of falls. In fact, the 1999 Prevention of Falls in the Elderly Trial (PROFET) showed that simple interventions can reduce the risk of falling by 60%, even in elderly, high-risk individuals. To build a fall-safe body, consider staying active, walking for aerobic exercise, building muscle strength through resistance exercise, stretching exercises for flexibility, balance exercises, getting sufficient calcium and vitamin D, having regular eye exams, reviewing medications, and having your blood pressure checked.

Falls can be particularly disabling for seniors, which is why it is important to have the right kind of medical support and care and advice. At Good Samaritan Lutheran Health Care Center, 125 Rockefeller Road, we make sure you get the kind of immediate attention and superior medical care you need if you have had a fall or other medical problem. Tools of the trade — what you need

Snap quiz for the home handyman: just what the heck is a "molding profiler" anyway?

According to John Meier, an employee of Curtis Lumber in Ballston Spa for more than 23 years and the Friday morning "tool guy" on radio station WGY for a decade: if you don't know, you probably don't need to.

"You remember those things years ago with all those little pins that you used to stick your face in and it would hold the shape?" he said. "This is something like that for the shape of molding. Like a lot of other gimmicky stuff, it's worthless for most of us."

And who needs a router — even if you know what it is? "For the average homeowner, just putting up an occasional shelf, it's too much," Meier said. A pry bar? "Only if you're gonna remodel and rip down some paneling." Otherwise, the basic claw hammer will do.

"It's the real macho stuff that guys think they need but they really don't," said Meier, who hammers away with such homespun wisdom in his weekly radio gig. "Leather nail aprons. Tool belts. They're real macho-looking, but if you're just gonna put up a shelf or replace a wall outlet, who needs 'em?"

Speaking of macho, doesn't everybody need a stud-finder?

Unless you live in a really old fixer-upper, probably not. "But boy," Meier said, "it sure looks cool in the shop."

For the rookie homeowner, on a budget and striving to be self-sufficient, equipping a home workbench can be daunting. Flat head or Phillips-head? How many hammers — and what kind? Power tools? How many kinds of nails?

It's enough to make Harry Hacker answer that late-night TV ad for a complete home tool kit.

Don't do it. "It may have 70 pieces, but 60 of them you may never use," Meier said. "You're better off buying an empty toolbox and filling it with what you really need."

So what do we really need?

A hammer, natch. How to pick one? Pick it up in the hardware store. How's the balance? Does it feel good in your hand? That rule of thumb works well in picking any tool.

"You probably want a middle grade, with a curved claw so you can pull nails with it," he said. "Not so heavy you can't use it, and not so small you can't drive nails with it." And something that stays together — either one-piece construction or something properly bound together, where the head doesn't wobble.

A good plumbing wrench and a pair of adjustable pliers handle most bolt-and-nut chores around the house.

Screwdrivers: a couple of middle-sized Phillips and flat heads. Most applications now use Phillips-head screws — with those four-pronged slots — or square-drive, with a star-shaped slot, which you can probably drive with a Phillips anyway. Still, "You'll always run across a slot head, even if it is going the way of wooden pegs," he said.

Pick up a tape measure, maybe a 10- or 24-footer; a square or tri-square for straight lines and square corners, and a two-foot level for righting that shelf, and sturdy enough to drop — a lot. A utility or sheet-rock knife, a putty knife or two — inch-and-a-half or five-inch; a calking gun; a durable hacksaw and a mid-sized hand saw.

Get an assortment of nails, screws, and hollow-wall fasteners. Nails sell by the pound but they're cheap; "Six or eight different kinds of nails will cost you 16-20 bucks," Meier said.

Screws often come in smaller packages. "And you'll never have the right size you're looking for if you don't have a lot," he says. "It's worth laying out your tool shop to leave space for lots of nails and screws." In a pinch, duct tape will fix almost anything.

Don't scrimp on quality in the name of cost. You get what you pay for; a $2 screwdriver good in a college apartment won't last. "You can always ask the guy who's selling the tools what he thinks is the best," said Meier.

"But if he tells you to go with the top-of-the-line, ask somebody else for a second opinion."

Power tools are for the veteran; and you only need a circuit tester or neon tester if you feel comfortable working on your home electric yourself.

"Mark Twain had a great line," Meier said. "We're all ignorant, we're just ignorant of different things." Know your ignorance. Speaking of which, don't forget safety goggles, a respirator mask if you're doing painting or fume-producing work, and sturdy work gloves.

Beyond that, be guided by your comfort level. "You grow into it," Meier said. "It's what you decide you want to do."

Oh, and don't forget a tool box to fit everything in.

"When my daughter got married, I gave them a tool box with most of those things," said Meier.

How romantic.

Options on home improvement loans

By DONNA J. BELL

Getting ready to make some improvements to your home? Perhaps you want to add a pool or a deck? Maybe you need a new roof or would like to add an addition?

For major improvements, the first place you need to stop is your local lending institution. Or better yet, get out the phone book and stop looking around for the best deal.

"It is always smart for people to shop around," said Fred Shellard, vice-president and area sales leader for Key Bank. "There are pricing differences. It is always good to talk to your banker."

When you start shopping for the cash you need to start working on your home you will have many options — which is why you should talk to a professional to find out which is best for you.

Should you choose a home equity loan, a home improvement loan or a rotating home equity line of credit best?

Shellard said that some questions homeowners should think about are how long they plan on borrowing the money, how much they want to borrow and if they have short-term plans for selling their home.

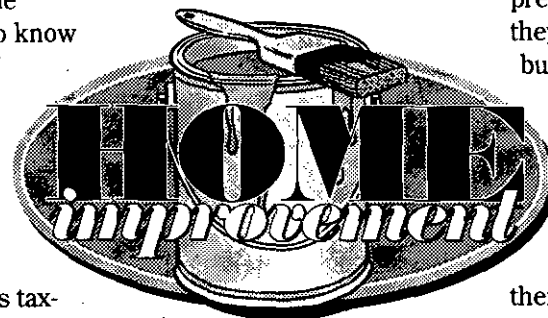

Each lender offers different incentives and rates; the specific information provided below is based on information provided by Key Bank. Check with other institutions for their own rules and rates.

- Home Equity Loan. A home equity loan is like getting a mortgage because the property is used as collateral. According to Shellard, Key Bank can offer a home equity loan that is worth up to 85 percent of the value of the home — taking into account that if there is a mortgage on the home, the amount of the loan will be reduced by the amount of the current mortgage. In order to get to that figure, the bank will do an appraisal on the home and title search. At many banks, including Key, the bank absorbs the cost for those procedures. However, if a customer backs out of the loan early (usually before three or four years), they may be charged either a flat rate or the full amount of the fees. "If you plan on selling your home within a year you need to know the cost of getting out of the home equity up front," Shellard said. You should also talk to your accountant when you obtain a home equity loan, because in most cases the interest is tax-deductible.

- Home Equity Line of Credit. Another option is to obtain a home equity line of credit. "This is a revolving line, if you pay it off and have a zero balance you can then use it for whatever you want," Shellard said. For example: a couple may suddenly need a new car or use it to pay for a child's education. At Key, a home equity line is good for 15 years is tied to the prime rate. There are many options on how to set up your line of credit. Some options include an annual fee, others don't. The best thing about having the line of credit, said, is that you have the money available to you immediately without having to reapply for a loan. Also, as you pay off the loan that money becomes available to you again. And in many cases, you can take a deduction off your taxes.

- Home improvement loans. A home improvement loan is an unsecured loan geared strictly toward improving your house.

The rate is usually higher than a home equity loan, but less than a regular unsecured personal loan because you are improving your property. Many people would choose this type of loan over the previously mentioned loans if they don't have enough equity built up in their home. There are usually no fees or early payoff penalties. Key offers 12- to 60-month loans. The bank will ask you what type of improvements you are choosing to make, but there are usually no other stipulations.

If it is time to make changes to improve your home, right now is an economically good time to get a loan. "Credit when used wisely is a very powerful tool and a home equity line is the most powerful line of credit there is," Shellard said.

He added that people looking for loans can apply at 1-800-KEY-2-YOU, at www.key.com or at any Key branch.

Fixing your driveway, it's all filler and seal

By ROGER NOYES

Crack kills.

Your driveway, that is.

But with general maintenance, major cracking and other results of wear and tear — which may result in more extensive damage to your driveway down the road — can be avoided.

Carl Macri, a foreman at C. Macri & Sons Blacktop Specialists in Delmar, said your typical driveway lasts for about 15 to 20 years after which a complete repaving will probably be needed to keep it in good condition and looking nice.

In the between years, however, there a number of upkeep projects you can do so general weathering doesn't wreak havoc on your pavement.

In general, Macri said driveway maintenance should be done about every two to three years. This primarily includes fixing cracks or any other larger gouges in the pavement, and giving your driveway a good seal coating.

For filling in minor cracks, the first step, said Macri, is to stores. Macri recommends laying the coat on the entire driveway, since you probably will be repairing a number of cracks at one time.

Doing this kind of general maintenance is important to seal out water, which can cause more damage in the future.

"The main reason is to seal out the water," he said about the process. "It also beautifies the driveway."

As for your large driveway holes, Macri said there is a product called Cold Patch that is composed of stone, oil and tar and can be purchased at hardware stores. The consistency forms to the shape of a hole in your driveway.

The process is fairly similar to the crack filler, except a tool called a tamper — which is basically an 8-inch by 8-inch plate with a handle — is used to push the material into the hole and fit it into the shape, or a smaller hole can be filled with a hammer. Making sure the filler is flattened out is important for aesthetic reasons.

Macri said this product usually takes about 24 hours to dry and should also be followed up by a layer of seal coating.

are applied much like caulking.

Once you have applied it to the problem spot, the filler can be flattened out using a trowel or a putty knife for smaller cracks. Macri said these fillers usually take a couple of hours to harden.

The next step is to put a layer of seal coat down, which can also be purchased at hardware

Custom deck design adds to enjoyment

By CINDY MILOS

With summer right around the corner, more and more people are itching to be outside enjoying the nice weather, especially on their decks.

But for those who don't have a deck, now is the perfect time to find out about how to have a deck installed on their home.

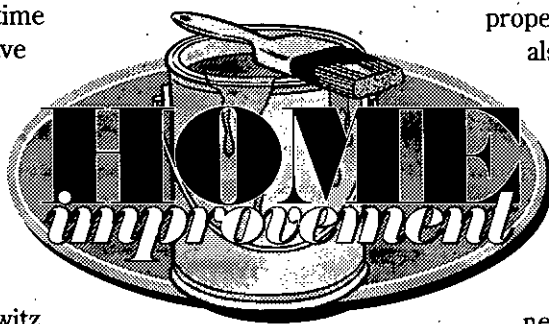

"Most people don't really know what they want, they just know that they want some outdoor living space," Ric Kaplowitz owner of Kaplowitz Company, said.

"That is where we come in. When a customer comes to us, we try to find out what they intend to use the deck for first."

According to Kaplowitz, there are a variety of different uses for a deck, including sunning, entertaining and merely relaxing.

Kaplowitz determines how big the deck should be. He then works with the customer to determine its shape and design.

"We go out and look at the property where the deck is going to be built and that also helps us decide on the size, shape and design," Kaplowitz said. "Then we begin discussing the type of material we will use."

Kaplowitz said that the company, located at 318 Delaware Ave in Delmar, then draws up a budget and design.

Once a design and builder is selected, the homeowner must remember that there is one other step in the process. According to the supervisor of Colonie's Building Department, Michael Rosch, all deck proposals have to be brought before the Building Department. Homeowners should check with the building department in their town to find out if their plan is in compliance with the building code.

"We need to look at the site plan for the deck so that we can check the location in comparison with the distance of the property lines," Rosch said. "We also need to make sure that it meets all of the state building code."

Kaplowitz agreed with Rosch, saying that anytime you are planning on building a permanent structure, you need to have a permit. He also mentioned that his company completes the process for its customers.

"We really offer the full package," Kaplowitz said. "We provide the design service, inspections, the permitting and the follow up. Our customers actually prefer this, because most don't want to go to the building department. It is also easier for us to go, because we know all of the rules and regulations of the building department."

Kaplowitz also added that going before the building department is a good idea for the sake of the customers, because it somewhat assures them that they are dealing with a reputable contractor.

According to Kaplowitz, the spring and the fall are when his company makes the most new deck sales. Rosch also added that this is the busiest time of the year for the building department, and that people who are planning to have a deck built should bring the design to the town at least two to three weeks before they plan on building it.

"The reason that I like to build decks is because you can really have fun with the design," Kaplowitz said. "You can really be creative, and every deck is a little different depending on who built it."

For information on decks and other remodeling projects, call Kaplowitz at 439-6919 or visit the Web site at kaplowitzcompany dot.com.

Keep your power equipment running smoothly

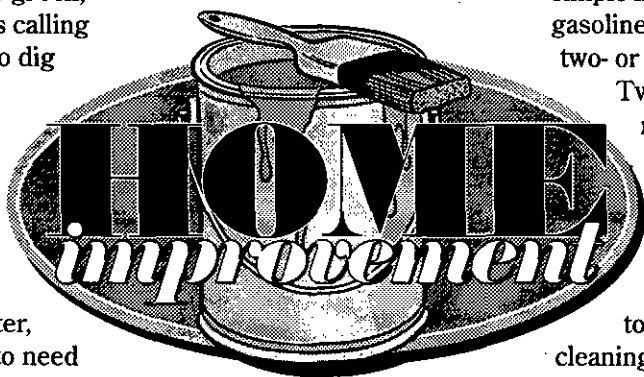

By DONNA J. BELL

on your garden power equipment will not only protect the

It's spring and if the green, green grass of home is calling you outside, it's time to dig around in the garage and pull out the lawn mower. And while you are there, better get the chain saw, tiller and trimmer out too.

After sitting all winter, those tools are going to need a little maintenance before you start them up for a season of work. Regular maintenance investment you made in them, it may save you from an injury.

Most outdoor power equipment is run by a relatively simple machine powered by a gasoline engine — either a two- or four-cycle engine.

Two-cycle engines require a combination of gas and oil to run, whereas four-cycle engines run on straight gas.

Even top-of-the-line tools need regular cleaning and sharpening to perform their best. The following are steps to keep your outdoor power equipment running smoothly.

- Lawn mower. Disconnect the spark plugs and check the contacts. If they're rusty, use an emery cloth, lightly rub each contact point to remove rust.

Turn over the mower and look at the blade. If you notice rust, remove it with a steel brush and steel wool. Ideally, the cutting edge should be sharp enough to slice a piece of paper cleanly. If it's not, detach the blade and take it to a lawn mower repair service for sharpening. Check the engine oil. If you didn't change it in the fall, you'll probably need to change it now. You should change your mower's engine oil twice each year. If you didn't drain the tank of gasoline in the fall, do that now, too, and refill it with fresh fuel. If your mower has a collection bag, look it over. Repair or replace as needed. And, of course, after you have finished with your spring-cleaning regimen, reconnect the spark plugs.

- Chainsaw. Only operate a chainsaw with sharp teeth. You can sharpen chain saw teeth yourself or take it to a professional. Check chain tension and lubrication system regularly. Make sure you are using the proper lubrication for the season. Use SAE 30 bar and chain lubrication in the summer and SAE 10 bar and chain lubrication in the winter. Check run the engine at idle until it stops, this removes any gasoline from the carburetor and fuel lines. Remove the chain and store it in a container of oil to prevent rust. Refer to the owner's manual for additional instructions on proper storage preparations. Keep in a dry place and out of the reach of children.

• Riding lawn mowers. Give the battery a thorough charging before reinstalling after winter storage; also, check electrolyte level in each cell. Check electrical system for loose or dirty connections. Change engine oil and clean or replace air filter. Also, change the spark plug(s) every year.

Check mower deck for bolt tightness, belt wear and blade sharpness and while you're at it, check safety devices to ensure that they are attached and working. Check that tires are inflated to proper pressure. Be sure to disengage power to attachments when leaving operator's seat, when transporting or when tractor/rider is in storage.

• Rotary tillers. Change spark plug if necessary.

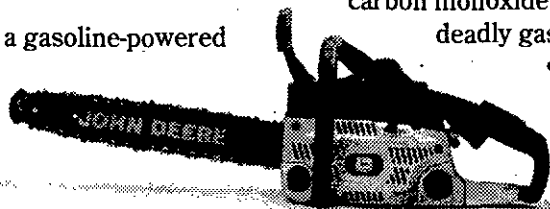

Clean or replace air filter and check safety devices to ensure that they are attached and working. With spark plug disconnected, sharpen tines in accordance with the owner's manual. Change oil and check the belts/chain drives and nuts and bolts for wear and tightness.

Power equipment safety

Despite all the dire warnings, it is possible to use, store, maintain, and repair gasoline-powered equipment safely. Mostly, the necessary precautions are just common sense — for example, don't smoke around gasoline. The following represent the basic precautions to take when performing maintenance or service procedures on gasoline-powered equipment and dealing with gasoline in general.

- Never work on a gasoline-powered engine indoors unless it has been totally drained of gas and given time for the residue to evaporate. The various solvents used for cleaning carburetors and degreasing engine parts are also very flammable. The vapors are also not exactly beneficial to good health.
- Always store gasoline in an approved gasoline can. These will be red in color. Never store gasoline indoors or anywhere else that vapors can build up or in a location near an open flame (gas or oil heater, etc.).
- Always stop the engine before refilling the fuel tank. If possible, add gasoline when the engine is cold — a splash on the hot cylinder could catch fire. Rinse off spills with water or wait till they evaporate before starting the engine.

• Never attempt to run a gasoline engine indoors. In addition to the general fire and explosion hazard, internal combustion engines produce significant amounts of carbon monoxide — a colorless, odorless deadly gas.

- Never smoke while working on gasoline-powered equipment.
- Dispose of used engine oil in a safe manner — don't just dump it down the drain or in the trash. Your local service station or recycling center may accept engine oil or recommend a place for its environmentally friendly disposal.
- Always disconnect the spark plug wire and tie it safely away from the spark plug terminal (several inches minimum) when doing any work on the engine's moving parts. You don't want any chance of the engine starting on its own.

Outdoor lighting brightens summer nights

By CINDY MILOS

The lawn mowers are running and the flowers have been planted. Everyone who has ever taken pride in the landscaping around their homes, want their yards to be noticed. While they may be easy to do during the day, outdoor lighting is required at night.

"There are basically three types of lighting that people come in looking for," Larry Verch of The Lighting Place said. "Depending on what they want to do, people usually choose from path lighting, driveway lighting ground, usually around three-feet high.

Verch also explained that landscape lighting can be found in or around shrubbery.

"We have lights that you can unsnap and move within your plants and shrubs," Verch said.

"We also offer low voltage lights, so if you hit the line with a shovel by mistake, then you don't have to worry about being electrocuted."

Landscape lighting is not only used to light up the shrubs and plants, but also to illuminate the outside of the house.

"People like to light up their landscape, but the lights also provide security for people's homes," Verch said.

The Lighting Place, which is located in the 20 Mall in Guilderland, is open Monday thru Friday from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m., and Thursdays until 8 p.m.

The store is also open on Saturdays from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. during the summer.

Chris Bisner from Thorpe Electric Supply Inc. said that the whole concept of selling merchandise to customers is to provide more decorative, higher quality and longer lasting lighting.

"People choose to buy lighting to add value and security to their homes," Bisner said.

"Whether they decide to use path lighting, step lighting or deck lighting, we have the material and the means to help them make their purchase."

Thorpe Electric Supply Inc. at 27

Washington Street in Rensselaer, is open Monday thru Friday from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m., and Thursdays until 8 p.m. It is also open on Saturdays from 8 a.m. until noon.

Bethlehem earns third straight Sectional title

By ROB JONAS

Coach John Battaglino made a deal with the players on the Bethlehem girls lacrosse team — win a third Section II title, and they can give him a new hair cut.

The extra motivation paid off. The Lady Eagles scored eight of the last nine goals of the game to post a 16-5 victory against Saratoga in the Division I finals last Wednesday at Colonie Central High School.

The prize for the players is their third straight Sectional title. The prize for Battaglino is a Mohawk.

"I can't get it cut too short," Battaglino said. "It has to grow back."

The game started as a see-saw battle between the top two Division I teams, but goals by Kristin Link and Suzie Breaznell in the final 44 seconds of the first half helped Bethlehem (18-4) take an 8-4 halftime lead.

"Those (goals) are really critical," said Breaznell, who finished with six goals. "Going into halftime, it's good to be up like that."

Bethlehem made certain Saratoga never threatened after that. The Lady Eagles scored four times in the first nine minutes of the second half and then held onto the ball the rest of the way to secure the title.

"I just liked our composure with the ball, especially tonight," Battaglino said.

Lost in the shuffle of Bethlehem's strong offensive effort was the goaltending of Dani Blanchard. The junior, who had never played between the pipes before this season, made four saves in the first half to hold Saratoga at bay until the Lady Eagles took command.

"Those are critical plays (that Blanchard made)," Battaglino said. "You stop them, you get a fast break as a result and you score on them. That's a two-goal play."

"She's really helped us this year," Breaznell said. "She's a main factor why we're winning these games."

Carley St. Lucia also made a significant, if subtle, contribution. The senior was shut out in the goal-scoring column, but she dished out five assists to propel the offense.

"At this point, the most important thing to me is to win," St. Lucia said. "Saratoga did a very good job of stopping our isolations, but we did a good job of adjusting to their slides."

"We really came together as a team in this game," Breaznell added. "We were just in a zone the whole game."

Link and Brianna Bubeck each contributed three goals, and Emily Riegel added two goals and an assist for the Lady Eagles.

Lady Eagles lose regional Bethlehem's playoff run came to an end last Saturday in a 12-11 loss to Lakeland-Panas (Section I) in the Region I finals at Nanuet High School.

The Lady Eagles trailed 11-10 when Breaznell scored her second goal of the game with under a minute left to tie the game. However, Lindsay Robinson tallied with two seconds left to give Lakeland-Panas the victory.

"What I loved about the kids is that it showed what they were made of," Battaglino said. "They never gave up."

Link had three goals and an assist, and Bubeck contributed two goals for Bethlehem.

Physically Speaking

by Nick Valenze, P.T.

GOING TO GREAT(ER) LENGTHS

An estimated 80% of the population has legs of slightly different lengths. This may not pose a problem until a person begins a program of vigorous walking, running, or high-impact aerobic exercise, which can result in hip, back, leg, or foot pain. Generally, the symptoms occur on the side of the longer leg since it is the one that absorbs an unequal share of the pressure; however, the pain can occur on the other side. Leg-length discrepancy can cause immediate problems for beginning runners because the condition slightly distorts posture and thus affects the ability to withstand the pressures of running. It can also be a problem for those who have recently stepped up their exercise program.

As May is National Physical Fitness and Sports month, the staff at our physical therapy practice would like to congratulate those individuals who have begun to incorporate some form of exercise into their lives. If you have stopped exercising due to pain or injury, or experience strain or stiffness at the onset of your fitness program, don't be discouraged, instead, ask your physician for a referral. To learn more about our services, which include sports medicine and massage, please call our center at the number listed below. Evening treatment hours available.

Voorheesville rally falls short in semis

By ROB JONAS

The Voorheesville baseball team went down swinging in an 11-8 loss to Watervliet in last Wednesday's Section II, Class CC semifinal game.

The Blackbirds (12-9) belted Cannoneer pitchers for 14 hits, but it wasn't enough to overcome a 7-2 deficit.

"The kids showed great resiliency," Voorheesville coach Mike Paolino said. "They tried to fight back until the last out of the game."

Voorheesville built a 2-0 lead in the top of the first inning on Kevin Vanderwarker's two-run homer, but Watervliet responded with one run in the bottom of the first and six runs in the second, highlighted by a grand slam from Chris Salamida to make the score 7-2.

"We had two or three errors right off the bat (in the second inning) to put them in position to score some runs," Paolino said.

The Blackbirds battled to within 7-4 in the top of the third inning, but the Cannoneers scored three more runs in the fourth to pull away.

Vanderwarker drove in five runs with his home run and a bases-clearing double in the seventh inning for Voorheesville. Mark Murray contributed three hits.

The Blackbirds advanced to the semifinals with a 12-7 win against Hoosick Falls last Tuesday.

Colin Adalian paced Voorheesville with three hits and three RBIs, and Spina added a three-run double to highlight a fifth-inning rally.

In the Class CC softball playoffs, Voorheesville was eliminated by Greenwich 3-1 in last Tuesday's semifinal game at Clifton Common.

Cyrilla Suker allowed two hits and struck out five for the Blackbirds (10-13).

PARENTS, JUST SAY "NO"!

Parents have a tough enough job to do without having to battle their children every time they are waiting in the grocery store check-out line. Most of our markets and pharmacies tend to put the candy right under our toddlers' noses. The verbal and sometimes physical tug of war that ensues unfortunately could have been avoided if the candy counter were somewhere else in the store, and under glass.

As guardians of the next smiling generation, we as parents have an obligation to protect these unwitting consumers from the extensive damage that candy can cause. It is your duty as a responsible parent to recognize the danger to your child's teeth if they are allowed unlimited access to candy.

As a frequent shopper, I am astonished at the amount, and type of "goodies" that adults allow their kids to put into the cart.

Parents, I implore you to learn to say "NO". You are the boss! In the long run you will spare your child from hours of work in the dental chair. You will also save yourself the unavoidable expenses that accompany dental visits. Save your kid's smile—trust me, they'll thank you!!

said. "Fortunately, he was unable to return it."

"His serve was on all weekend, especially in the finals," Bethlehem coach Steve Smith said. "I didn't keep track, but he must have had several aces."

Treadgold had an unusual road to the finals. After overcoming a shoulder injury to win his first two matches in straight sets, he needed three sets to defeat Michael Accordino of Briar Cliff (Section I) 6-4, 4-6, 6-1 in last week's quarterfinals at the United States National Tennis Center.

"Matt used a lot of strategy in that one," Smith said. "The kid (Accordino) was all over the court, so Matt had to use a lot of different shots."

Treadgold was then supposed to meet Dan Cohen of Scarsdale in the semifinals, but Cohen withdrew because he was already scheduled to take the SAT exam.

"It was strange to find out that I didn't have to play my semifinal match," Treadgold said. "I felt a little uneasy about it because of the legitimacy of it, but coach Smith told me that I had earned my spot in finals."

"That took a little away from Matt because he got a bye in the semifinals," Smith said, "but he dominated the kid in the finals."

Treadgold's championship highlighted the strongest showing by a Section II team at the state tournament. Bolstered by the presence of six Bethlehem Eagles, Section II won the team title with 37 points.

Bethlehem's Jon Clair made a bid to meet Treadgold in the finals for the third straight tournament. The junior won his first-round match before losing to Harrison's James Moore in last Friday's round of 16.

"I was happy with the way I played," said Clair, who lost to Treadgold in three sets at last Tuesday's Section II championships in Schenectady. "I played pretty well in the first round, and then I lost to (Moore) in the second round, but that kid outplayed me. He deserved to win."

The doubles team of Peter Cooley and Alan Lewis reached the quarterfinal round before being defeated by eventual state champions John Tully and Jason Rabinowitz of Pittsford Sutherland (Section V) 6-2, 7-6 (10-8). Nick Finger and Dave Perlmutter made it to the second round before being eliminated.

"I've been very fortunate," said Smith, Bethlehem's first-year coach. "This team has been absolutely great."

resulting in a tax bill of less than $1.4 million.

The agreement reduces that tax loss more gradually, establishing payments to the IDA by PSEG over the next quarter-century for distribution to the various taxing authorities. Those come in the form of gradually declining "transition payments" for calendar years 2000-03, and a proposed payment in lieu of taxes (PILOT) agreement with the IDA through the year 2024. PSEG agreed to a $5.5 million transition payment for 2000; those payments will go down, in half-million annual increments, to $4 million by 2003, according to the agreement.

"We recognize that the community was faced with some choices it would probably have preferred not to make, but this reflects the reality of what it takes to make it in this business," Brown said.

The proposed 20-year PILOT agreement, if approved by the IDA, would kick in beginning in 2004, with PSEG owing $2.875 million initially. Those payments would climb in 2.5 percent annual steps to an eventual total of just over $4.3 million by 2024.

For NiMo, currently in the process of being acquired by the British firm National Grid, settling its almost decade-long tax litigation, due for trial in November in State Supreme Court, removes the cost of that litigation and of distributing refunds to its ratepayers — not to mention eliminating an element of uncertainty.

"We believe we had a good case," said NiMo property tax manager Dave Hillary on Monday. "But in court, you just don't know. There's uncertainty for us, as well as the town, county and school district, in what the court might decide."

Hillary stressed the benefits of the agreement for NiMo's customers.

"Obviously, New York state needs this new generating capacity," he said. "Our customers will be greatly benefited by the addition."

And he pledged NiMo's support for the agreement.

"We want it to happen," he said. "We'll do what we think is appropriate to make sure the public recognizes the value of this agreement. It's important to recognize the agreement is not

"I think we need to develop criteria so it's not available to just anyone who walks through the door, but so it's reserved for helping to attract the types of business the community wants," industrial businesses that would enlarge the town's tax base, Tucker explained.

• A fee of $700,000 to the IDA, payable by PSEG in installments keyed to various stages in the approval and construction process.

The agreement also commits the IDA, school board, and town board to consider resolutions supporting PSEG in its Article X application, which seeks approval by state regulatory agencies to re-license and redevelop the Energy Center into a state-of-the-art 750 megawatt generating facility. The agreement is contingent upon a successful approval of that application.

Last month, PSEG filed applications with the state Department of Environmental Conservation for necessary air and water quality permits, and Brown said he anticipated an amended Article X application to be filed with the state Energy Generation and Siting Board next month. Public hearings on those applications are likely to follow in the fall, he said.

"We would certainly hope that the positive comments we've seen so far and are expecting would be reflected in the application process," Brown said. "We're going to work as best we can with the parties and the siting board to get this done as expeditiously as possible."

The projected tax rate hikes in the Bethlehem school district, Loomis said, add an estimated $214 for a home with a full-value assessment of $150,000 and $237 for a $150,000 in the New Scotland part of the Bethlehem district.

"We've been telling people all along that if there were an agreement, it would be reflected in their tax bill," Loomis said.

The impact, he added, is likely to be hardest on fixed-income seniors not eligible for STAR exemption.

Fuller concurred, and pledged "to do everything possible to make sure this tax increase does not hammer them in any way."

Nevertheless, without an agreement, and with the possibility of a high refund judgement in the pending tax litigation, "You would have had a tax increase that would have gone on for years and years," Loomis said.

"The district had considerable exposure here, and it's a big relief to get an agreement that cancels those past challenges," he said. "I hope people will recognize the need for this agreement and what it displaces, and move on from there."

The long-term agreement allows the district to better plan for the future, Loomis said.

"We will be working with the town to rebuild the tax base," he said.

The agreement culminated a year of what Brown characterized as "vigorous" negotiations.

"In any negotiating process, there were probably some points in the process that were difficult," he said. "All parties worked hard to negotiate a fair and equitable agreement."

Loomis and Fuller credited the IDA's representatives on the negotiating team, Tucker and IDA vice-chairman Joseph Richardson, with an agreement Tucker called "Ninety-five percent of the best we could possibly get."

"I don't think there's a community that could have been better represented than we were," Loomis said. "Mike and Joe were aggressive in representing our interests. I'm no expert, but this certainly seems to me we could not have gotten a better deal."

I don't think there's a community that could have been better represented than we were.

Les Loomis

the heart of the matter. The redevelopment of the plant is."

Other key elements of the agreement include:

- Additional "performance contingency payments" from PSEG to the town, starting in 2007, of up to $1 million a year, based on the new plant's operating performance in excess of 80 percent of capacity. "It's an extra payment if PSEG has a good year," Tucker said.

- A separate agreement between NiMo and the town concerning the portion of the existing steam station property that NiMo will retain — a transmission station and related switchyard and transmission assets. Hillary said a tentative agreement has been reached with Bethlehem Assessor David Leafer to evaluate those assets consistent with those in other communities.

- An agreement that the new plant will, beginning in 2007, sell energy to the IDA at a discount from wholesale prices. That energy would be available to the IDA for resale in connection with its economic development activities.

CALENDARS ♦ ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

By JOHN BRENT

Norman Rockwell's career covers much of the 20th century. He was a popular illustrator whose work frequently appeared on covers of "The Saturday Evening Post" and other magazines, in many advertising campaigns and on calendars and other materials published by the Boy Scouts of America.

Now, a traveling show, opening June 9 at the Norman Rockwell Museum in Stockbridge, Mass., celebrates his career and examines his work in a new light. Entitled "Norman Rockwell: Pictures for the American People," the exhibit has been touring the country and finally comes to Stockbridge where it will be on display through Oct. 21.

Featuring more than 70 original Rockwell paintings and all 322 of his "Saturday Evening Post" covers, the exhibit has had wildly successful engagements in Atlanta, Chicago, Washington, D.C., San Diego and Phoenix. A quarter of a million people have taken the opportunity to see the paintings.

"It's a joy to be able to present a major comprehensive exhibition to the nation with well-known works from our museum, as well as rarely seen classics from private collections and other institutions," said Laurie Norton Moffatt, museum director.

Rockwell was born in 1894 and by the time he was in his early 20s had already started to develop a reputation as a highly skilled commercial artist.

He died in 1978 after more than five decades of defining America's image of itself — not always as we were perhaps, but as we always wanted to be.

By showcasing many of Rockwell's original paintings, visitors are given the opportunity to see the actual works that might otherwise be available only in reproductions. "We've watched with pleasure as a new generation has discovered the power of Rockwell's original paintings," said Moffatt.

Loved by ordinary people, Rockwell was looked down upon by serious art critics, connoisseurs and students and rarely taken seriously as an artist. His subjects were thought to be too "cornball" and his style too representational for him to be regarded as anything more than a prolific illustrator.

In the art world, time has a way of changing people's perceptions and in more recent years Rockwell has been the subject of considerable reassessment.

Rockwell revisited

Touring show sheds new light on popular artist

The tour of this particular exhibit with its large number of paintings and visits to key cities has helped enhance Rockwell's reputation. In a book published to accompany the show and sharing its name with the exhibit, beautiful reproductions of Rockwell's works are accompanied by text written by experts from a wide range of fields including leading art historians, cultural critics, a renowned child psychiatrist and a leading graphic designer. They shed new light on Rockwell's art and his contribution to mass media (for a sample of some of the quotes from the book see box).

Many of the paintings traveling with the show are part of the collection at Stockbridge and may be familiar to those who have visited in the past, but other works have never been shown at the Rockwell museum.

The World War II era painting "Rosie the Riveter," "Doctor and Doll" from the late 1920s, "Gary Cooper as the Texan" from the early 1930s and "Girl with Black Eye" are all works that visitors will be able to see for the first time in Stockbridge.

"It was heart-wrenching to send some of our most-loved Rockwells on the road, but we knew the reward would be the return of this big, glorious show to Stockbridge where people in this part of the country would be treated to a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," said Moffatt.

Other special features of the show include an adult audio tour created to enhance the show featuring interviews with Rockwell's models and a commentary by writer/historian Doris Kearns Goodwin.

There is also an audio tour designed for children and families.

The Norman Rockwell Museum is located just outside of Stockbridge, the town where Rockwell lived and worked in the later years of his career.

The village itself has the air of a Rockwell painting which is hardly a surprise — one of the artist's famous works is a painting of Main Street in Stockbridge during the Christmas season. The street remains largely unchanged to this day.

The museum opened in 1968 and moved to its present location in 1993. Rockwell's studio was also moved to the site and stands in a separate building where visitors can walk through and see the workspace very much as it was during the artist's lifetime.

General admission to the museum during the exhibit is $12 for adults, $7 for students and free for young people 18 and under (4 per adult). Admission includes the use of the audio tour. The museum is open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. with extended hours on Thursday to 8 p.m. For information, call (413) 298-4100 or visit the Web site at www.nrm.org.

Raves for Rockwell

A sampling of comments from the book, "Norman Rockwell: Pictures for the American People," which accompanies the traveling exhibition of Rockwell's work.

"In American art there has rarely been a creator of such influence as Norman Rockwell. These days, now that the obsession for abstraction has cooled, his achievements are being discovered by scholars."

— Tom Hoving

"Rockwell's great achievement was investing the everyday activities of ordinary people with a sense of historical consequence, and this acute micro-historical consciousness, I think, best explains Rockwell's survival as an artist of consequence."

— Dave Hickey

"... Rockwell keeps pricking my art-historical conscience... We are learning that there are many fresh approaches to Rockwell, even psychological ones... it is a tribute to Rockwell's diverse powers that his art now seems to look in so many directions..."

— Robert Rosenblum

Rockwell in a typically whimsical mood. This painting from 1955 is called "Art Critic."

By the 1960s, Rockwell had begun to tackle more controversial subjects. In "The Problem We All Live With," the artist gives a graphic representation of a young girl being escorted to a newly integrated school.

THINGS WE TIE

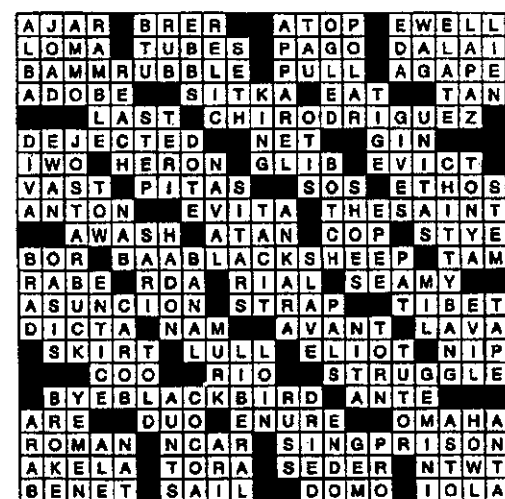

ANTIQUE clocks, watches, toys and music boxes. Collecting those items helped to keep me sane after a stroke last year. I will pay more because I am a collector. Timepieces by Patek, Vacheron, Audemar, Omega, Howard, Gruen, Cartier, Rolex, etc... are prized. Railroad watches are welcome. Large wall clocks, calendar clocks, early American clocks.

Complicated, odd mechanisms are very appreciated. I will be happy to look at your items and give you an idea of their value. Give me a chance before you sell. Dr. R. Malebranche- 374-9453. Leave message if nobody is home. I will get back to you ASAP.

BUYING: All old costume and better jewelry. Call 439-6129.
