Lanahan tapped as parks chief

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Less than two weeks after the departure of her predecessor, longtime Bethlehem Parks and Recreation Administrator David Austin, for a job in state government, the town board last week provisionally appointed assistant administrator Nan Lanahan to fill the chief administrative post.

Lanahan has been acting administrator since Austin's departure on July 13 to assume a position as advocate for business with the state Workers' Compensation Board.

"I'm really excited about the new challenge," said Lanahan about her appointment. "It's kind of the same, but new. I'm doing many of the same things I've been doing over the last 13 years, with new responsibilities for facilities management, an area I'm still learning about."

Lanahan, 43, followed Austin into the assistant administrator's post after his appointment to head the department in 1988. Her responsibilities in that role included developing special events and programs for the department, overseeing budget and personnel matters, scheduling and interaction with the Bethlehem schools, whose facilities are used for various public recreation programs.

In a memo to the board from Supervisor Sheila Fuller recommending the appointment, Fuller called Lanahan "an ideal candidate to assume the position of administrator. Nan has demonstrated her abilities to manage the vast number of recreational programs and associated staff, and is well poised to assume the added facilities

Businesswomen's club celebrates 50th

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

When the Bethlehem Business Women's Club got its charter in 1951, it was as a branch of the New York State Federation of Business and Professional Women, and in its early years, had about 25 members.

"It was more tea with white gloves," immediate past president Kristy Reynolds said. "Today, we have 107 members, 21 of whom are new."

"In the old days, it was more slow and easy-going," said Dorothy Brown, one of the earlier members and president in the 1970s. "The young people today are very gung-ho, and doing a lot with computers and Web sites."

The club ended its national affiliation in order to channel its money directly into the town of Bethlehem. Its mission remains the same as it always has been.

"We want to be involved in community activities, foster a caring spirit, and create opportunities for our members," Reynolds said. "This is a group of women focused on being active in the community."

The Bethlehem Business Women's Club helps adopt families through schools and the town at the holidays, contributes to the Adopt-A-Highway program, the New Day Art Institute in Albany's South End, and the Bethlehem Festival Fund. Each year, they give $1,000 scholarships to two graduating high school seniors from the town of Bethlehem. To provide this funding, the club conducts various fund-raisers throughout the year.

"We've sold flower bulbs, held craft fairs, fashion shows and card parties," Reynolds said.

Currently, the Club's best-known fund-raiser is the Bethlehem throw it designed and started selling two years ago.

"We spent a year designing it," Reynolds said of the blanket featuring different Bethlehem locales, "and working with a company in North Carolina to produce it."

Beyond its community contributions, Reynolds said, is the club's role as a place for women to network.

"It's exceedingly important for women to do this," Reynolds said, explaining that the club defines business in the broadest terms.

Reynolds is a registered nurse at Albany Open MRI, and current president Kathryn Schimanski is a secretary at Glenmont Elementary School.

Ages of the members are as diverse as the careers, ranging from women in their 20s through senior citizens.

"You don't have to own your own business to be a member," Reynolds said. "You only have to be associated with a business to be a member, and what do we have around us that's not business-related?"

The club maintains a networking board, a place for members to post business cards and announcements, to help facilitate networking.

ATV driver charged with endangerment

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

A Selkirk man faces grand larceny and reckless endangerment charges after an incident last week involving an off-road vehicle he was driving on Route 9W in Selkirk.

Shortly after 12:40 a.m. on Sunday, July 22, Officer James Rexford observed an ATV southbound in the northbound lane. According to a police report, the driver, later identified as Craig Steven Dragon, 18, of 441 Maple Ave., Selkirk, refused to comply with Rexford's attempts to stop him.

When Rexford pulled his vehicle alongside the moving ATV, Dragon allegedly attempted to ram the police car before fleeing into a wooded area near the Meilaks Trailer Park on Old Ravena Road.

Witnesses in the trailer park identified Dragon and persuaded him to turn himself in to police, who charged him with reckless endangerment and unlicensed operation of a vehicle, as well as several citations related to improper operation of the ATV. Police also determined that the vehicle was stolen, leading to the larceny charge.

Dragon is due in Town Court on Aug. 21.

Chemical spill forces evacuation at BCBS

A workplace accident last week at Bethlehem Central High School forced the temporary evacuation of the staff and summer school students from the high school until a chemical spill could be cleaned up.

The accident occurred about 8:35 a.m. on Tuesday, July 24, when custodians attempted to move a small metal cabinet in a chemistry lab that contained several vessels of classroom chemicals. Several containers fell off the shelf and spilled, and the contents of two — a liquid and an unidentified crystalline substance — began to release vapors.

Delmar and Elsmere fire companies and Delmar Rescue, Bethlehem Ambulance and Albany County Sheriff's paramedic units responded. One school employee was treated for minor chemical burns as a result of the accident.

A crew from Clean Harbors Associates of Glenmont was summoned to clean up the spill.

Police arrest two on assault charges

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Bethlehem police made two separate arrests on the morning of Thursday, July 19, on charges of third-degree assault — one of those involving an alleged assault of a police officer.

Bethlehem officer Robert Helligrass was attempting to execute arrest warrants from Bethlehem and Guiderland town courts for probation violations against Patricia Ann Desmond, 56, at her home at 101 Meadowbrook Drive in Slingerlands shortly after 9:30 a.m.

According to the arrest report, Desmond allegedly refused to comply with Helligrass' orders and struck him twice with a field hockey stick she was apparently using as a cane, causing minor injuries.

She was subsequently subdued and handcuffed with the assistance of other officers summoned to the scene.

Desmond was arraigned before Town Justice Theresa Egan on charges of misdemeanor assault and resisting arrest, as well as the probation violations, and ordered held at Albany County jail pending a preliminary hearing on July 24. She was also ordered to appear in town court on Aug. 7 to face the charges.

Also arrested on the morning of July 19 was Alisha A. Montalvo, 23, a resident of the Glenmont Job Corps facility on River Road.

Her arrest stemmed from an incident the previous evening in which Montalvo allegedly assaulted another resident in the victim's room, kneeling the victim in the eye and causing injuries.

Arraigned before Egan on a single third-degree assault count, Montalvo was released into the custody of Job Corps officials, and ordered to appear in Town Court on Aug. 21.

Police arrest woman for DWI

A Selkirk resident involved in a traffic accident last Wednesday, July 25, on Feura Bush Road faces charges of driving while intoxicated (DWI), according to Bethlehem police.

Police were summoned shortly after 1 a.m. to the scene of an accident at 514 Feura Bush Road where a vehicle driven by Anna Deborah Groper, 23, of 86

Dorchester Ave., Selkirk, had run off the road onto a front lawn and struck a utility pole.

Officers Gina Cocchiara and George Travis conducted a pre-screening and field sobriety tests at the scene, and charged Groper with DWI and ticketed her for crossing roadside hazard markings. Groper is due in Town Court on Aug. 7.

Tower plan gets lukewarm reception

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Two projects recently referred by the Bethlehem town board to the planning board for its recommendations were the subject of the planning agenda on Tuesday, July 24.

And judging from the outcome of the meeting, it may be some time before either project — a residential development in Glenmont and a proposed telecommunications tower in Slingerlands — returns to the town board for further consideration.

Independent Wireless One, an Albany-based network affiliate of cell-phone carrier Sprint PCS, proposes to build a 100-foot "monopole" telecommunications spire behind Price Chopper Plaza in Slingerlands to provide cellular phone service in an underserved area along New Scotland Road.

But their proposal, which received a lukewarm reception when presented in June before IWO's unsuccessful efforts to date to identify possible appropriate co-location sites in the vicinity.

"If there's a structure that'll work, we don't like to build towers," Stockley said. "It's harder, it's expensive and (it's difficult) from a municipal approval perspective."

In order to build their proposed tower on the Price Chopper Plaza lot, owned by Windsor Development, they will need town board approval of an amendment to the plaza's Planned Commercial Development zoning designation.

Planning board Chairman Doug Hasbrouck warned that IWO faces an uphill fight.

"It's a difficult site to work with," he said. "It has a long history of community concern. We know that in amending the building project application at this site, the community is going to be very much involved in the discussion, as well as this board and the town board as well.

You're gonna have to do an awful lot of convincing of an awful lot of people."

The town board on July 11 already voted to hire a consultant, to be paid for by IWO, to evaluate alternatives to a new communications tower on the plaza lot. The consultant has not yet been hired, but the planning board weighed in with several co-location suggestions, including two local churches and the Department of Corrections training facility in Albany on New Scotland Road.

Constructing a new tower, Hasbrouck told the IWO representatives, will be "a battle for you, without question. If you can find other options which are less of a battle, you'll be an awful lot ahead."

Hasbrouck and other board members also raised an issue already cited by the town board: the tower's appearance as seen from the proposed Slingerlands Bypass, that is likely to carry Route 85 behind Price Chopper to link up with Cherry Avenue.

Stockman conceded that IWO had not discussed the likely footprint of that extension with the state Department of Transportation, which has the project on its short-term Transportation Improvement Plan schedule for the coming few years.

That raised red flags for board member Joe Rooks.

"What you see today is not what we hope you're gonna see in a few years after they finish building the highway," Rooks said. "It feels to me very unreasonable not to consider where that highway's going to go."

Some procedural matters remain to be resolved — including what role the zoning board might play in reviewing another piece of the tower proposal, the special use permit the project will require.

Hasbrouck said he is in discussion with the zoning board on that issue.

In the meantime, the planning board voted to table the proposal until IWO and town planning officials have an opportunity to further develop it.

Also on the agenda was a preliminary discussion of a townhouse development on Elsmere Avenue at Feura Bush Road introduced before the town board on June 27 by its would-be developer, Rosen Development.

The 31-acre, 92-unit twin townhouse project, tentatively called Waldenmaier Estates, is located on a 58-acre parcel which Rosen proposes to buy, provided the town board approves rezoning the site as a planned residential district (PRD).

Developer Lee Rosen conceded that the site "would be very prime for development of single-family residences. There's a good demand still for that type of housing in this town. But we also recognize there's a need for other types of housing."

Rosen said the townhouse project is targeted at "empty nesters — the owner who doesn't desire a large traditional-style home with a large lot, but still wants a single-family type of development without the maintenance of a large home and large lot."

But planning board members and town engineer John Fenzl raised numerous issues about the proposed development's configuration, the proximity of several proposed lots to a steep slope down to the Dowerskill, and whether several roads proposed in the preliminary site plans meet state safety standards.

Board member Daniel Odell also suggested the small size of the individual lots would restrict the ability of homeowners to build decks and patios on their townhouse units.

The town board, in referring the matter to the planning board for review but retaining lead agency status for itself, specifically sought a recommendation from the planning body on both the rezoning to a PRD and on environmental quality issues.

For now, the planning board tabled the matter pending further review by the developer and the town's engineering and planning departments.

Another potentially controversial residential development issue will also be headed to the planning board soon.

On Wednesday, July 25, the town board voted to refer to the planning panel for recommendation a request from the developers of the third phase of the Meadowbrook subdivision.

Gladstone Development of Connecticut seeks to waive a town requirement imposed in 1993 that the developer prepare a full Draft Environmental Impact Statement for the 48-unit development on Blessing Road, which would overlook the banks of the Normanskill in an area with a history of slope instability. Discussion of the request by the board has not yet been scheduled.

the town board, faced a barrage of questions before the planning body.

Attorney John Stockley and engineer Scott Stockman made the firm's presentation to the planning board. Stockman spent more than an hour explaining what he called "significant gaps in coverage" in Sprint's cellular network for motorists along Route 85 and New Scotland Road.

He said those service gaps are caused mostly by the unusual topography of the area and its dense vegetation.

Existing "co-located" antennae mounted on various structures in the area, including one on a site in Voorheesville, another recently installed on the town's Kenwood Avenue water tank and another atop Ohav Shalom apartments on Krumkill Road, do not adequately cover the area, necessitating the new tower, he said.

"We are trying to give our customers here adequate mobile service in this area," he said. "We have been receiving complaints from this particular area since 1998."

He and Stockley outlined

County to auction tax-shy properties

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

On the heel of a successful auction last December of more than 120 tax-delinquent properties in Albany County, county budget officials are planning a second auction for next week of 112 more such properties — including several in Bethlehem and New Scotland.

$13,300; a 101-by-147.5-foot lot, assessed at $15,000, on Van Wies Point Road; a 160-by-90 lot on Dewey Avenue, near Hudson Avenue, in Delmar, assessed at $1,000; and a 26-by-111-foot landlocked triangular parcel on Elmwood Avenue, off Russell Road in North Bethlehem, assessed at just $100, the minimum bid price for any of the properties at auction.

An informational meeting on the auction is set for Thursday, Aug. 2, at 7 p.m. at the Cahill Room of the county office building at 112 State St. in Albany.

The December sale netted $830,000 for the county and brought to an end a six-year moratorium on tax-lien foreclosure sales by the county. In the next round, scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 11, at Empire State Plaza, most of the available lots are residential properties — including the four on the block in Bethlehem and both New Scotland offerings.

Only two of those are existing residential structures: a one-family residence on a 1.3-acre lot at 109 Corning Hill Road, with a current assessed valuation of $60,000; and a one-family residence on less than an acre at 2145 Delaware Turnpike in Clarksville, assessed at $78,000.

The remaining lots are vacant residential properties. They include a 5.9-acre lot at 12 West St., Voorheesville, assessed at

An informational meeting on the auction is set for Thursday, Aug. 2, at 7 p.m. at the Cahill Room of the county office building at 112 State St. in Albany, with the auction itself set for 11 a.m. on Aug. 11 in Meeting Room 6 of the Empire State Plaza. Brochures detailing the location and other data on the parcels are available by calling 447-7070.

The tax-lien-sale moratorium was lifted by county finance officials following the passage of hold-harmless legislation by the state to protect the county from liability for environmental cleanup on any of its foreclosed properties.

Last summer, in anticipation of the moratorium's end, the county Legislature voted to forego hiring outside auctioneers — and avoid the buyers' premiums they would charge — by taking the management of auctions in-house through the county's finance, information services and real property tax service departments.

This old house clamors for thorough cleaning

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

We have a charming house, all interesting angles, gorgeous woodwork and hardwood floors. It has the kind of front porch that makes you long for a quiet Sunday morning, the fat New York Times and a fresh pot of coffee.

Right now, it is a house crying out in despair, begging for someone to stage an intervention so that it gets a thorough cleaning.

Not the mop-and-bucket kind, but the kind that will get rid of the piles of paper on the guest room floor, the Legos lurking on the dining room rug to pierce the bare feet of children rushing to meet the ice cream truck on a summer day, and the stack of

*Mom's
the

catalogues overflowing the reading basket in the bathroom.

The house is currently retaliating for the fact that the detritus of daily family life covers easily one quarter of it. Mysterious signs of wear and tear appear seem to be appearing randomly — and nearly daily.

First, there was the china and crystal fiasco, when two glass shelves in the china closet broke and my idea that I am "not a thing person" was as shattered as all the treasures that lay in shards, wedged in the doors of the china cabinet.

While Chris reminded me that the important thing was that nobody was hurt, I learned that spontaneous china closet shelf collapse wasn't sufficient reason for an insurance company to replace our treasures.

To prevent a recurrence, we wedged the china closet into a less-traveled place near the dining room table, making that part of the house feel cramped and small.

That corner of the dining room is resolutely ignored except to squeeze past the table to water the plants.

This house with a mind of its own continues to demand attention, sometimes by sending flakes of paint down from the ceiling, just feet away from the china closet. I would repaint it, but all of what we presume to be disposable income is currently going into plumbing repairs.

The cardinal rule of homeownership seems to be that right after you pay to have two leaky faucets fixed, the kitchen sink will start to run — not drip, not leak — incessantly in a manner that leaves the children claiming mental torture.

It's not really the house's fault for looking for a little TLC. It's been five years since we made it ours and five years worth of stuff seems to be scattered throughout the house. When the boys were still very small, a friend told me that while cleaning out her recently deceased mother-in-law's house, they'd found a suitcase full of her husband's grade-school artwork. We scoffed, and swore that we'd never do that.

Ha! I'll be lucky if I can keep it to just one suitcase.

The Egyptian mask from third grade, the cityscape from fourth, the boldly-lettered portfolios — how can they go?

Some treasures must remain, chief among them the Crayola drawing Cormac made of his brother for the first-grade Thanksgiving play, and held up to announce that he was grateful for his brother Christopher.

My eyes still sting when I remember that — a great comfort in these days when "jerk" sounds nearly like a brotherly endearment.

The kids aren't the only culprits, though. Our bedroom is overflowing with everything except the Thor costume I packed away for Christopher, which he has decided he cannot wait for Halloween to wear again.

Too easily at hand are old newspapers, old shoes, old clothes, blank computer disks, winter clothes that never got put away last summer, books to read and scraps of fabric — I have to lie down just thinking about it.

This being fatigued when I try to organize worries me. Although it's more likely a validation that motherhood is more taxing than anyone will admit, is it a sign of mental deficiency?

Why can't I see how it should all be organized; what should be given away, thrown away, boxed

Pain in the backside

Piriformis syndrome is a condition in which the piriformis muscle in the buttock irritates the sciatic nerve, the long nerve that originates in the spine and runs down the leg. The result is a pain in the buttocks, lower back and down the back of the thigh. The culprit, the piriformis muscle, is a small muscle located deep in the buttocks that helps rotate the hip. The muscle runs horizontally beneath the gluteal muscles of the buttock, stretching from the lower spine to the femur (thighbone). The sciatic nerve runs vertically and usually passes beneath the piriformis muscle. In about 15% of people, the sciatic nerve goes directly through the muscle, which makes these individuals particularly prone to piriformis syndrome.

and put in the attic, folded and put in drawers?

Why do I panic at the thought of truly cleaning out a room, when most of the world seems to possess the resources to keep a place for everything, and everything in its place?

We're all calmer when the house is clean, when we can find a blank piece of paper in less than an hour.

The cruel trick is how much work it takes to keep everything neat and clean. I love to visit friends with tidy houses, savor the serenity for a bit, and leave feeling that I, too, could have a home this orderly.

When push comes to shove, though, there are about a million things I'd rather do than clean. Attempting a massive organization makes me feel angry and aggressive — and not only toward the mess.

The kids head for higher ground, grabbing up their most precious possessions and barricading themselves in their room — which they insist is theirs and they like it messy.

When I've had enough — a time which comes faster each time I have at it — I call them from their room (whose disarray is a personal rebuke of my mothering skills and I apologize in advance

Five Rivers to host program on turtles

A program on turtles will be offered on Saturday, Aug. 18, at 10 a.m. and repeated at 2 p.m. at the Department of Environmental Conservation's Five Rivers Environmental Education Center, 56 Game Farm Road, Delmar.

Center naturalists will lead the group on a walk around some of Five Rivers' ponds which are home to lots of turtles.

This program is free.

Participants should dress for an outdoor walk.

to any future daughters-in-law), and teach them the only true rule of housekeeping.

If you can't see it, it doesn't exist. If you're watching TV, your eyes aren't looking at the mess. If you're reading, you're in a totally different world, and if you're out of the house, you're unaware a mess even exists.

We spend a lot of time out of the house in the summer. Yet, the mess is there and the house is begging for mercy.

I make my annual August promise: When the kids go back to school, I'll get after the clutter, basement to attic, invest whatever money the plumber doesn't get into Rubbermaid bins, and make the whole family help tidy up for a few minutes each day.

With everything organized and neat, we can paint the ceilings, maybe replace some old wallpaper, and enjoy cozy winter evenings in front of the fire. Perhaps this will appease the house, so the faucets will stop leaking and paint will stop peeling.

Journal keeping workshop on deck at Five Rivers

A workshop on journal keeping will be held on Saturday, Aug. 11, at 10 a.m. at Five Rivers Environmental Education Center, 56 Game Farm Road, Delmar.

The basics of journal keeping will be explored in this adults-only session.

Participants will write, draw, and/or collect and label items during a nature exploration.

A respectful stewardship ethic will be stressed.

Call Five Rivers Center to pre-register and to request the journal keeping pre-course list.

This list will have all the materials information needed for the workshop.

Matters of Opinion

Kudos to clubs

Two longtime Bethlehem women's groups marked significant anniversaries this year.

The Delmar Progress Club, which was featured in a story in July, celebrated its 100th birthday, and the Bethlehem Business Women's Club, featured this week, turned 50 this year.

Both groups have evolved into something far different from what they started out as. Both initially were rather social in nature, for the "white glove set," as one business woman member said.

But it should be noted that the Progress Club took an early role in the betterment of the community. Club members more than 75 years ago had the vision to begin a public library, which is now the town's public library. Those early pioneers deserve our thanks for their efforts.

Today the focus of the clubs is different, reflecting the changing role of women in the community. But the Progress Club and the Business Women's Club remain vibrant community supporters, sponsoring various fundraisers and funding scholarships for local students.

Business Women's Club members also network with each other and the community, keeping abreast of modern-day concerns for women.

We salute these groups for their community service and encourage them as they continue to grow.

Sign off on rumor

Last week, The Spotlight received an unsigned letter viciously attacking a community business person. The anonymous writer urged us to probe into the matter.

Most of the vitriolic comments of the writer were personal in nature, and none of our or anyone else's business.

As we state every week in our letters policy boxes, unsigned letters are never considered for publication. And unsubstantiated attacks on individuals are taken as rumor, not worthy of consideration.

We wonder if these types of letters would ever be written if the writer knew his or her name would appear in print.

It's easy to vent a gripe when you remain anonymous. People's private lives, however, deserve more consideration and respect than that.

The Spotlight makes every effort to report local news and every effort to avoid targeting individuals who have not been charged with wrongdoing.

When that happens, it may be libel and certainly is irresponsible, illegal and reprehensible.

It's alarming to think that someone would expect that a community newspaper would participate in a personal vendetta. That's not our job and never will be.

Editorials

Protect the developmentally disabled

By KIRK M. LEWIS

The writer is general counsel for the Schenectady County chapter of the NYSARC. His brother is developmentally disabled.

The rapid development of medical technology has resulted in a clash between what medical technology can do to prolong life, versus what medical technology, tempered by humanitarian and ethical considerations, should do to allow life to end without intervention.

This conflict was highlighted in the case of Karen Ann Quinlan, which was decided by the New Jersey Supreme Court in 1976. Quinlan was comatose, on a respirator and in what was called a "chronic and persistent vegetative state, existing at a primitive reflex level."

The court granted Quinlan's father's request that he be appointed her guardian, with the understanding that life support would be terminated if her physician concluded (and a hospital ethics committee agreed) that there was no possibility that she would ever emerge from her condition.

The court based its decision on a fundamental, constitutional right of individuals to choose to decline medical treatment. The court determined that this valuable right should not be discarded because Quinlan's condition prevented her conscious exercise of that right. The court held that "the only practical way to prevent destruction of the right is to permit the guardian and family to render their best judgment" as to whether she would exercise that right under the circumstances then existing.

Court cases and legislation since then have simplified the ways in which individuals can exercise this fundamental right. In 1990, the New York Legislature passed the Health Care Proxy Law, which requires that physicians and hospitals follow the directions of a substituted decision-maker, identified by the patient in a health care proxy, if the patient is incapable of making medical decisions.

The health care proxy can only make decisions about withholding treatment at the end of life (such as withholding nutrition or hydration, or withdrawing mechanical assistance) if the patient clearly expressed his or her wishes as to how he or she wants to be treated in those circumstances. The patient can express his or her wishes right on the health care form or in another document such as a living will. Without this direction, the person appointed as a health care proxy cannot make these critical end-of-life decisions.

This limitation on the power of a substitute decision-maker is based on decisions from New York's Court of Appeals. Unlike the New Jersey court, which said that the guardian of Karen Quinlan could exercise his "best judgment" as to what Karen Quinlan's decision would have been under the circumstances of that case, New York courts have consistently required "clear and convincing evidence" of how the patient would have decided, if he/she had the capacity to make the decision.

This requirement of New York law is one compelling reason why all competent adults should execute living wills and health care proxies.

Although this requirement seems fair on its face, in fact it discriminates against a small and very vulnerable segment of the population. The requirement that there be clear and convincing evidence of how the patient would wish to be treated under extreme circumstances presumes that at one time, the patient had the ability to contemplate, understand and clearly express what their decision would be.

If an individual is born with mental retardation or a developmental disability, however, they may never have the capacity to make an informed decision about how they would wish to be treated if they were in a terminal condition. Under New York law, the courts must presume that the individual would wish to be kept alive under all circumstances.

This issue gained national attention with the case of Sheila Pouliot in Syracuse. In March 2000, Pouliot lay dying in the hospital, in pain, with her intestines and other bodily systems failing. Eight physicians favored terminating a hydration tube and the judge agreed.

The state attorney general challenged the judge's action, stating that "While we obviously feel tremendous compassion for this patient, what the judge seeks to do is unlawful."

State Supreme Court Justice James Tormey took the unusual step of visiting Pouliot in the hospital before reaching a decision. After the visit, the judge challenged the attorney general to come to the hospital to visit Pouliot before deciding whether to appeal his order.

The attorney general did not visit and did pursue an appeal. Pouliot died before the appeal could be heard.

Since the Pouliot case there have been at least two other cases in which persons with mental retardation have been kept alive, with forced hydration, against the wishes of caring family members.

New York law requires this treatment even if a legally appointed guardian wishes to pursue other treatment, and even if this "treatment" causes pain and prolonged suffering. Until the law is changed, it is inevitable that there will be more such cases.

Fortunately, there is a solution on the horizon. This spring, legislation was introduced in both the Assembly and the Senate that would give legally appointed guardians of persons with mental retardation the right to make all critical health care decisions.

This law would require that every person with mental retardation should receive medical care and attention based exclusively on what is in the best interests of the person. The law would permit individuals appointed as guardians to make decisions to withhold or withdraw life-sustaining treatment, but only if specific conditions and notification requirements are satisfied. Specifically, treatment may be withdrawn or withheld only if two physicians agree that the patient has certain medical conditions, and then only if life-sustaining treatment would impose an "extraordinary burden" on the individual.

In June, this law, the Health Care Decisions Act for Persons with Mental Retardation passed the Assembly by a vote of 143-0. The Senate version, Senate Bill No. 4622, sponsored by Sen. Kemp Hannon, R-Long Island, awaits action by the Senate. Advocates for the legislation hope the Senate will act soon on this critical legislation.

All competent adults have the right, under New York law, to make advance decisions about the circumstances under which they would wish to have life-sustaining treatment withdrawn or withheld. An individual born with severe mental retardation does not have this right. The Health Care Decisions Act provides a limited and careful means for ending this discrimination against the most vulnerable members of our society. Anyone who wishes to support this important legislation should write to his or her state senator and urge its passage.

Twenty five years ago in the Quinlan case, the New Jersey Supreme Court acknowledged that the only way to prevent the destruction of the right to choose to decline medical treatment for a person who had not issued an advance directive was to permit a caring guardian to exercise his or her best judgment.

The Health Care Decisions Act is the way to provide this important right for persons with mental retardation in New York. Please support the passage of this important legislation.

Your Opinion Matters

'Bethlehem Cares' gears up for walk Hats off to photographer

Editor, The Spotlight:

Many people, both kids and adults, in our community live with diabetes every day.

Those of you who are lucky enough to have escaped living with this disease might think that, as long as we avoid sweet foods, we people with diabetes will continue to enjoy good health. Unfortunately, this is not true.

Every day can be a struggle. Many of us take insulin — up to three or four shots daily — just to survive. We must measure all the food we eat. We must test our blood sugar by pricking our fingers up to seven or more times each day. Still, even if we do all of this, we run a great risk of developing some or all of the life-threatening complications that strike people who have diabetes for a number of years.

You can help change the future of all people who have diabetes. On Sept. 23, our team of walkers call "Bethlehem Cares" will participate in the Walk to Cure Diabetes at Corporate Woods.

Over the past two years, our team has raised $30,000 for research. You can join us as a walker this year by calling us at 439-6894. All of the money raised will benefit diabetes research.

If you are one of the first 175 people to turn in at least $25 for diabetes research, you will receive a free team T-shirt. We would like to thank our business friends for sponsoring our T-shirt this year, especially our presenting sponsor, Prime Care Physicians. Our team also has two gold sponsors, the Kiwanis Club of Delmar and Nigro Companies.

We would also like to thank our silver sponsors: Allen & Taub Plumbing & Heating, Angela's Pizza and Pasta Restaurant, Bethlehem Family Practice, Blackman & DeStefano Real Estate, Callanan Industries, Capital Cities Imported Cars, Capital District Oral & Maxillo-facial Surgeons, Choices Hair Studio and Day Spa, Robert M. Deitz, DDS, Delmar Pediatrics and Farm Family Life & Casualty Insurance Co.

Also, First Care of Delmar, Klersy Building Corp., Meadowbrook Farms, Northeastern Dental Laboratory Corp., Oldcastle Precast, Papa John's Pizza and Something Olde, Something New.

The next time you visit one of these businesses, please thank them for supporting diabetes research.

If you can't join us for the walk but would like to make a donation, you can mail your check (payable to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation) to "Bethlehem Cares" at 65 Boylston Drive, Delmar 12054.

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am making a tip of the lens cap to photographer Jim Franco for the great work exhibited in the July 18 issue. When I saw the picture of youth soccer players giving a low five in the burst of enthusiasm after a goal, I was going to dish out a few insults to the editors of The Spotlight for burying the photo on page 16.

Then I turned to the cover and took a closer look at the celebration of the Albany County ARC, portraying a toddler reaching for the high-pressure burst of water from a firefighter's hose. The composition and emotion were first rate.

I like the words in The Spotlight as well. I've lived in a number of communities across the fruited plain.

In all of them, it's fashionable to make sport of the local newspaper. In some, the ridicule is justified.

In Bethlehem, I've always felt the editorial guts of The Spotlight is under-appreciated.

Not from this quarter — keep up the good work.

PageTurners, our quarterly compilation of book reviews by library staff. The reviewers encourage readers to try something different from their usual fare.

Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone by J.K. Rowling has taken the world by storm. A bespectacled 11-year-old who is small for his age and neglected by his caretakers, Harry is an unlikely hero. He is tapped to join the Hogwarts, a boarding school for wizards in the making, with a course schedule that includes Charms and Defense Against the Dark Arts, and competitive sports like quidditch, played in the air on broomsticks.

Reminiscent of the work of Roald Dahl, the book and its sequels are now bewitching people of all ages and making converts of readers who never thought they would enjoy fantasy literature.

A genealogist's nightmare is the discovery of crime among his own ancestors — especially a vicious crime like murder. That's the plot for A Comedy of Heirs by Rett MacPherson.

This cozy mystery is a good story whether or not you're interested in genealogy. Polly Hartman and Babs Carlson provided these reviews.

Delmar student wins national forensics competition

John Brilling "J.B." Horgan of Delmar won the 2001 Sen. John Stennis Student Congress, National Forensics League Competition in Norman, Okla.

As the national champion, Horgan received $6,100 in scholarships. The last time a student from New York won this championship was in 1940. Horgan was awarded a special certificate and scholarship for having qualified to participate at the national tournament all four years of his high school career. Horgan is a 2001 graduate of Christian Brothers Academy in Colonie.

He is also the 2001 state champion in Student Congress. He will be attending Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service in the fall.

Competing with him was Ben

J.B. Horgan of Delmar, left, joins his coach Alicia Slavis and CBA junior Ben Seymour, who also competed in the forensics competition. Horgan won first place honors.

Seymour, a junior at CBA, who competed in the House of Representatives and advanced to the semifinals.

Both CBA students were coached by Alicia Slavis, who was also honored with a career coaching award, receiving a diamond pin.

Albany High School was a charter member of the National Forensics League, yet the Capital District has not produced a student congress national champion until this year.

The student congress competition involves debate on bills submitted by the students.

The students were expected to research and debate more than 300 bills on topics such as DNA blueprinting of newborns, the death penalty and Internet filters for students.

For each bill, speeches in favor and against must be prepared.

Students are judged on the quality of the speech given, including the research supporting it and their knowledge and use of parliamentary procedure.

Horgan was elected presiding officer of the semifinal round and presiding officer in a preliminary round.

Preliminary and semifinal rounds took place last 18 hours each day.

The final round of debate on Friday, June 15, lasted 10 hours.

All are welcome at 'Beat the Odds' day

The race is on to beat the odds of surviving a diagnosis of breast cancer.

To aid in this fight for life, To Life of Delmar is hosting an education-packed program featuring talks by leading health care professionals on topics vital to a person's journey to breast cancer recovery.

Co-hosted by Amgen and New York Oncology Hematology, the third annual "Beat the Odds" Day is open to the public and free of charge.

It will be held on Thursday, Aug. 9, from 9 a.m. to noon in the Paddock Tent at Saratoga Race Course. Lunch and an afternoon of fun will follow the educational program.

Founded in 1998 by breast cancer survivor Mara Ginsberg of Delmar, To Life is a nonprofit organization providing comprehensive breast cancer education and support services to residents of the greater Capital District.

"Each year thousands of women battle breast cancer and win. The reasons for recovery are as multi-faceted as the diagnoses," said Ginsberg, To Life president.

"Our 'Beat the Odds' event is for women living with breast cancer, for their family members and caregivers — for anyone concerned about battling this disease," she added. "It will provide a discerning look into medical breakthroughs, treatment options and supportive resources that are available for journey to breast cancer survivorship."

Highlights of the program include talks on new trends in radiation and transplants, and complementary therapies, including the benefits of Reiki, nutrition and exercise.

Program presenters are Dr.

Roy Beveridge of Inova Fairfax Hospital, Anandale, Va.; Dr. Lance Hellman of Glens Falls Cancer Center; Dr. Robert Soiffer of Dana Farber Cancer Center, Boston, Mass.; and Donna Shoss, MSW, CSW, Reiki master teacher.

Special attractions of the day include a race dedicated to To Life, a silent auction and fashions by The Worth Collection, Le Beau Chapeau and Eyedentity Eyewear.

For information and to register for "Beat the Odds" Day, call To Life at 518-439-5975 or e-mail info@ToLife.org. Seating is limited.

management responsibilities of the position. It is a credit to the town that the management depth within the Parks Department allows us to promote from within."

Lanahan's appointment will carry a salary of just under $49,000. Her appointment is provisional, pending the establishment of her eligibility through successful completion of a Civil Service examination, which is subject to state Civil Service requirements regarding open and competitive appointments.

No current list of eligible candidates exists, according to Randy Houghtaling, an official with the Civil Service Division of the Albany County Department of Human Resources, which would oversee establishment of the list and administration of the relevant exam on behalf of the state Department of Civil Service.

Lanahan, with her 13 years' experience in a competitive-class position in line for promotion, would likely be high on the eligibility list.

Upon notification by the town of the appointment, county Civil Service administrators must review existing minimum qualification standards for the post, to be used as the basis of an exam, yet to be scheduled, whose results would determine an eligibility list. The exam could consist principally of a rating of training and experience, and would likely be narrowly tailored.

The board discussed the replacement of Austin in an executive session following its July 11 meeting, and in appointing Lanahan opted not to pursue a more extensive search for a replacement.

"It is always a pleasure to recognize the accomplishments and talents of a town employee; I look forward to working with Nan in this new role," Fuller said.

Lanahan said Monday that with the department in the midst of its busiest season, it was unlikely interviewing for a new assistant administrator would begin before mid-August. The search for a new youth employment services director has also been time-consuming, she said.

"It's budget time, the pools are open, our summer programs are under way, and right now, I'm trying to hold down both jobs," she said. "But once we get past the budget process, things will settle down. We haven't really had time to do a lot of promotion of the position up to now."

Club

Brown, who ran Butler & Brown Insurance with her husband before retiring 13 years ago, continues to attend the monthly meetings.

"I enjoy meeting new people," she said. "There are only 10 of us old-timers left. I know a lot of people and am involved in the town, and it's great."

Schimanski became president at the club's June meeting, following her term as vice president. She first joined in 1997, after a friend brought her to a meeting.

"This is a nice group of women to work with," she said. "It's been a chance to meet people from all different walks of life and all different ages."

In her coming term, Schimanski wants to continue inviting interesting speakers to the monthly meetings.

"We try to get things that will interest the women, and things we can learn from," Schimanski said.

Past speakers have included Helen Volk of Beyond Clutter, cooking consultant Rachel Ray and gardening expert Nancy O'Donnell.

"We meet at the Normanside Country Club at 6 p.m.," Reynolds said. "We're always looking for new members."

Annual membership is $20. After conducting business at the meeting, dinner is served, followed by a speaker.

"We're always out by 9 p.m.," Reynolds said.

Extension readies for fair

Cornell Cooperative Extension's exhibit draws hundreds of people to the 4-H Building at the Altamont Fair every year.

This year runs from Tuesday, Aug. 14 through Sunday, Aug. 19. Fairgoers will want to be sure to stop by for information about Lyme disease, West Nile virus, money management, nutrition and health, food safety, agriculture, horticulture, indoor air quality, parenting, and match your trash.

Live demonstrations will also be presented on topics like groundwater safety, plant propagation and heart healthy snacks.

Be sure to stop by the master gardener booth to ask how to get rid of those pesky pest problems or to get tips for a spectacular garden.

The main 4-H building will feature usual plants, flowers, foods, woodworking and clothing, all made by local 4-H youth, and the baby chicks in the brooder.

There will also be a 4-H youth giving demonstrations about projects they have learned about through their 4-H work.

One of the main attractions at the fair is the animals raised by 4-H members.

Dairy and beef cattle, sheep, goats, rabbits and poultry will all be there to see close up.

The 4-H horse show will go on most of the day Friday and working dogs will perform on Tuesday.

Angelina LaSure.

"I'm an old-fashioned grandma," Zini said. "I'm really indulgent to my grandchildren, immensely so."

Indulgence, it seems, runs in the family. Zini went into business in 1998 thanks to the prodding, and financial underwriting, of her late husband, Frank Zini Jr.

A New York City native, Korean War veteran, and, beginning in 1964, a resident of Delmar, he carved out a diverse career as Pontiac salesman, lecturer on alcohol and substance abuse, and a longtime counselor with the state Division of Veterans Affairs. A widower, he married Colonie native Rhonda in 1989.

An avid woodworker, Frank prompted Rhonda to enter, and win, craft competitions, in crochet, woodwork, flower arranging, at the Altamont Fair.

"They were great years, those last 10 years," Rhonda recalled. "He spoiled me rotten."

And he challenged her. "One day he told me, it was time to put up or shut up," she said. "It was time to either open a shop or quit fooling around."

She joked, "I think he just got tired of so many crafts just lying around the house."

A put-up-or-shut-up kind of guy, Frank used some of the proceeds of a half century of careful stock investments, bequeathed to him by his mother, to finance Northland Granny's, now at 427B Kenwood Ave.

But in December 1998, just months after the store's opening and a few months shy of his 10th anniversary, Frank died of a heart attack.

Rhonda suddenly found herself in a new role: executor of Frank's will — which contained a few surprises.

"I'm in culture shock," said Rhonda. "We didn't live like millionaires."

But that's what they were: Frank left healthy sums for his surviving family — and two highly personal bequests of more than a half million each.

For years, Frank held steady, blue-chip stocks. "He did some shrewd investing and got it to grow. It more than tripled his inheritance," Rhonda said.

Out of his carefully marshalled wealth, Frank willed $560,000 to the Mohawk & Hudson Humane Society, from whom he and Rhonda had adopted numerous animals over the years, including King, Rhonda's partner in child-minding. An identical bequest creates a unique special fund for the Hospice at St. Peter's Hospital, to provide terminal patients a little dignity in the form of creature comforts — cosmetics, hair stylists, manicures.

Two and a half years of probate later, the tortuous process of carrying out Frank Zini's last wishes is nearing its end. Attorneys for St. Peter's and the humane society in June finally signed the necessary papers that clear the way to execute the will.

"It's almost done," Rhonda said. "Within a few weeks, hopefully. Enough is enough. It's time to let Frank rest in peace."

The delay, she said, stemmed from the datedness of Frank's will — drawn up before their marriage — and, ironically, the specificity of his wishes.

The care of dying cancer patients and the welfare of unwanted animals, she said, were matters close to Frank's heart.

Frank's first wife Ruth Marie was a patient at St. Peter's before her death from cancer in 1981.

"It made her feel so good when she was dying, to be able to look good, to have a cosmetician around, to have her hair done," Rhonda said.

With much of its resources devoted to basic health care, the hospice program has long relied on volunteers to provide these small touches, so Frank wanted to create a mechanism to ensure provision of what he considered the best medicine of all for the terminally ill.

His love for unwanted pets grew out of an encounter on a South Carolina beach with a stray shepherd-Labrador mix named Sheba.

"She had been shot, stabbed, hit by a car," Rhonda said.

Frank took her in — and Sheba returned the favor.

"She was there for him when his first wife died," Rhonda said. "After that, he always, always adopted strays."

Frank's gift to the shelter — a bequest nearly three quarters the size of its annual $800,000 budget — carries no restrictions.

"We were very shocked," said shelter manager Bob Guyer. "It's such a big help to our organization."

St. Peter's attorneys hoped their gift would be similarly unrestricted, Rhonda said, but, as executor, she was insistent.

"They wanted to put it in their general fund, but I said, you can't do that," she said. "The will said it should be set up in a fund in the name of Ruth Marie."

With probate issues resolved, Rhonda has a new perspective on preparing for the inevitable.

"Make a will now, and update it every two years," she said. "Things change, and if you decide you don't want something in the will, you've got to keep it up to date. And if you've got stocks and bonds or money in the bank, let someone know where it is."

Soccer, field hockey teams strike gold at Games

By PHIL BLACKWELL

When competing in the Empire State Games, teams from the Adirondack region wear gold jerseys. Some of them get matching gold medals.

That was the case in the 24th renewal of the ESG, which took place last week in the Mohawk Valley and surrounding college campuses.

Among Adirondack's scholastic teams, none was more successful than the field hockey squad, which beat the field at Colgate University.

Adirondack and Hudson Valley both finished with 4-1 records, but the tie-breaker went to Adirondack because it beat Hudson Valley 3-2 last Thursday. Abigail Copeland's goal with 8:15 to play gave Adirondack the victory, despite being outshot 24-7.

The good fortune spread to men's soccer, contested at Herkimer County Community College. Adirondack worked its way to the finals by going 2-1, then won a classic final over Central 2-0 in overtime. Thomas Osborne of East Greenbush scored both goals after the teams went through 90 minutes of regulation in a 0-0 deadlock.

Bethlehem's Bob Barrowman, Steve Maltzman and Stephen Perazzelli played for the scholastic men's soccer team.

Also golden was the Adirondack scholastic water polo team, which wrapped up its memorable week Sunday at Utica College with a 13-5 rout of Long Island in the gold-medal match. Of its six games, the only close call was a 6-4 decision to New York City.

There were other success stories for Adirondack's scholastic teams:

Baseball: By virtue of an 8-0 win over Western Saturday at

Murnane Field in Utica, Adirondack won the bronze medal on the diamond. The team, which included Bethlehem's Mark Bulger, went 3-2 in round-robin play. Women's soccer: At SUNY-Morrisville, Adirondack overcame an opening 1-1 tie with Western and penalty kicks with Hudson Valley to work its way to the finals, only to settle for a silver medal after a 2-1 loss in the rematch with Western. It was the 13th consecutive year that Adirondack won an ESG medal in women's scholastic soccer.

Volleyball: At Hamilton College, Adirondack's men's volleyball team took the bronze medal, surviving a rough double-elimination tournament before losing in four games to Long Island. It was Adirondack's first men's scholastic medal in volleyball since 1996.

Bethlehem was represented on the scholastic men's volleyball team by Eric Hunter and Sandeep Murthy.

The women's team was eliminated from medal contention when it lost to Central 30-24.

Basketball: Adirondack's quest for a scholastic boy's medal at Colgate was derailed over the weekend — first by an 87-72 loss to Central in a game where the winner went to the finals, and then an 80-76 loss to New York City Sunday in the bronze-medal game.

The Adirondack scholastic women's team took fourth place at Utica College. Its quest for the bronze medal ended Sunday in an 81-57 loss to Hudson Valley.

Lacrosse: The first-ever ESG women's lacrosse tournament took place at SUNY-Cortland, where Adirondack upset Central 5-4 early in the event to gain a shot at the bronze medal, only to lose that match to Western 11-7. Bethlehem's Kristin Link scored two goals, and fellow Lady Eagle Katie Wagoner added a goal in the bronze medal game.

Other Bethlehem players on the team were Brianna Bubeck, Kate Metevia, Amy O'Donnell, Katelyn Primomo and Emily Cohen.

The Adirondack men's team, which played at Rome Free Academy, had a 1-4 record.

Ice Hockey: Playing at the SUNY-Morrisville Iceplex, Adirondack's men's team could not defend its gold medal. Delmar residents Matthew Hickling and Ken Porter were members of the team.

Western also won the women's division, while Adirondack went 2-2-1. Adirondack was denied a medal, despite its final 1-1 tie with Long Island. Clarksville resident Danielle Blanchard and Voorheesville's Jessica Matthews played on the team.

Tennis: Both Adirondack teams were held without a victory in the matches, which took place at the Mott Tennis Center in Utica. Jacquelyn Cary of Selkirk, Tricia Russel of Voorheesville and Carrie Zurenko played for the scholastic women's team.

The 2001 Empire State Games took place last Thursday through Sunday across the central Mohawk Valley region of New York, with the cities of Utica and Rome sharing hosting duties.

DON'T IGNORE CAVITIES!!!

"Look Ma, only two small cavities!" Sounds good? Don't kid yourself. If you could look THROUGH each cavity-marked tooth you'd probably see that a lot more damage has been done than meets the eye. When a cavity first appears, the enamel of the tooth has already been damaged. Below the enamel, the bacteria that caused the cavity in the first place may have multiplied and begun attacking the dentin (or core) of the tooth. If you continue to ignore the cavity, the disease process continues until the bacteria starts attacking the pulp (or nerve) of the tooth. By this time you will begin to realize the extent of the damage because you will begin to feel the pain of a toothache. Unfortunately, by then it may not be possible to save the tooth. Don't ignore any cavity, no matter how small and inconsequential it may appear. Not if you wish to save your teeth. Early treatment by your dentist and regular check-ups are the only ways to protect your dental health.

Nature and Longevity

Conventional scientific wisdom holds that nurture, not nature, determines whether a person will live to an extremely old age. Now, however, based on a study of the family trees of four American families with histories of siblings living beyond age 90, researchers have accumulated sufficient circumstantial evidence to show that some families have a genetic predisposition to living past the century mark. The researchers compared the estimated life expectancy of the average person born in 1801, 1850 and 1900 with the actual life span of the members of each of the families. It was found that groups of siblings in the four families typically lived far beyond the norms of their times. This was attributed to genetics and not mere chance.

Well, we don't have control over our genes, but we do have some influence on how we treat our bodies, no matter what our age. At Good Samaritan Lutheran Health Care Center, 125 Rockefeller Road, we urge our residents to make good choices to support both their mental and physical health and well-being. Call us at 439-8116 for more information.

Bethlehem Auto Service
AUTO FACTS
by John Quirk

Shifting For Themselves

The arrival of the automatic Hydramatic and Dynaflo transmissions of the 1940s signaled a shift away from manual transmissions. Today, only 17% of U.S. adults own a car equipped with a standard transmission, and automakers increasingly regard aficionados of stick shifts as a niche market of hardcore driving enthusiasts. It used to be that cost-conscious Americans purchased automobiles with stick shifts, lured by lower price tags and better gas mileage. While these benefits still hold true, today's manual shifters tend to be affluent, married, college-educated men over 45 years old, who are drawn to the old-fashioned way of heel-and-toe downshifting. Today's consumers who have turned to manual transmissions want to add an aspect of entertainment to their driving.

The type of vehicle you choose depends on the nature of your driving habits. Whether you buy a car to get to and from work or to vacation, routine maintenance will help keep it in peak condition. BETHLEHEM AUTO SERVICE emphasizes preventive maintenance and reminds readers that they can save themselves time, money, and expensive repair bills by having their vehicles professionally inspected at least every 3,000 miles. A routine maintenance check includes inspection of the tires, battery, brakes, belts and hoses, and all fluids. For customers' convenience, we are pleased to offer shuttle service. Call 426-8414, or visit us at 62 Hannay Lane in Glenmont off Rt. 9W behind Stone Ends. Business hours are Mon.-Fri., 7-6.

HINT: Automakers are increasingly making available hybrid transmissions that combine the elements of both automatic and manual transmissions.

CALENDARS

By JOHN BRENT

The town of Hunter, tucked away in the Catskill Mountains on Route 23A, is about 50 miles south of Albany and known mainly as a destination for skiers during the winter months. They enjoy the slopes of Hunter Mountain and the Hunter Mountain Ski Bowl lodge. But the village and the ski resort offer so much more. Beginning this month and continuing through October, they feature a series of festivals with different themes that attract people from near and far.

The World Cultures Festival kicks off the series of weekend-long events for this season. Held on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 4 and 5, the festival will feature singers, musicians and dancers from around the globe who will entertain visitors with a celebration of life through music and performance.

Other festivals held at the Hunter Mountain Ski Bowl during the late summer and autumn months have a long history and include a German Alps Festival (Aug. 11 and 12) which began 29 years ago and an International Celtic Festival (Aug. 18 and 19) which has been running for more than 23 years. There is also a Hunter Mountain Fair on Sept. 1 and 2; a Microbrew, Wine and Fine Food Festival on Sept. 22 and 23; an Oktoberfest on Sept. 29 and 30 and a Harvest Festival on Oct. 13 and 14.

This will be the first year for the World Cultures Festival which replaces the Native American Festival, an event that had been offered for 25 years.

World Cultures offers a wide variety of entertainment that will no doubt appeal to varied tastes and interests.

Some of the featured performers will be:

Big Apple Circus Circus to Go!

An international group of acrobats, trapeze artists and clowns who are current and past performers with New York City's famous Big Apple Circus a traditional circus group that has been a popular tourist destination in the big city.

Moscow native Irina Burdetskaya is a master of hula-hoops, acrobatics and contortion. French trapeze artist Philippe will take to the air for a thrilling performance and Yang Xiao will demonstrate Chinese acrobatic forms.

American clown Karen McCarty, who trained in France, specializes in Commedia dell'Arte.

The various acts in Circus to Go! will be presented by a traditional ring master and the show opens with a traditional circus parade featuring all the acts and closes with a fantastic fiery finale.

"... a smash hit! You couldn't pry people away for the performance area ... spectacular entertainers and true professionals," said a "New York Magazine" review of Circus to Go!

Batoto Yetu

Traditional African dance and music are the focus of Batoto Yetu, a celebrated children's dance troupe whose mission is to bring the performance art to African-American children.

Raised in Angola and Portugal, the group's founder, Julio Leitao started the troupe on a Harlem playground in 1990.

The group features between 15 and 20 young people ranging in age from 6 to 19 who utilize traditional costumes and makeup for the performances.

The music is all percussive with four drummers accompanying the electrifying dancing of the group.

The performance troupe, Batoto Yetu, features youngsters and teens who celebrate traditional African dance forms.

WORLDS OF FUN

Hunter hosts global celebration

The Super Rail Band

The legendary band from Bamako, Mali, is making its premiere tour of North America this summer and will be the other performers at the Hunter Mountain event.

Combining the sensuality of Latin stage shows in today's African pop."

La Familia Valera Miranda

Carrying on the rich musical traditions of their native Cuba, the Valera family has performance roots going back to the 19th century.

Felix and his wife Carmen join with their sons Ernesto, Raul Felix and Enrique and use bongos, acoustic bass, tres and cuatro (guitars with three and four double strings) and maracas to create their unique sound.

Considered masters of the Trova/son tradition of their native music the family presents a purity of style and simplicity and authenticity of expression.

The Saigon Water Puppets

The astonishing, ancient tradition of puppetry on water is brought to the festival by this Vietnamese group.

Looked upon as a national treasure in their native land, the group blends stories of traditional life in the fishing and farming villages in Vietnam with native myths and folklore. The stories are combined with centuries-old choreography, dance and music to provide an unusual presentation that reflects this colorful land.

The small orchestra that accompanies the performance is made up of gongs, drums, bells, flutes and stringed instruments from fiddle to zither and present a musical tradition that dates back at least a thousand years.

The musicians also sing and provide the voices for the puppets.

"... their artistry was so enchanting it drew choruses of 'ahs'. It returned puppetry to its primal role of enchanting the tribe," said a review in the Chicago Tribune.

Soh Daiko

The first taiko performing on the east coast uses drums of various sizes along with atarigane and dora (traditional Japanese brass bells), horagai (conch-shell horns), fue (bamboo flutes), as well as instruments from other cultures.

Saba

Samba and her ensemble will perform the graceful, highly athletic moves of the exotic form of traditional Turkish bellydancing.

Ustad Sultan Khan

The sarangi, a stringed instrument played with a bow and very much a part of Indian musical tradition, dates back to mythological times.

Khan represents the third generation of sarangi players from his family and is widely regarded as the most revered master of the ancient instrument in India today.

Sout Al Gorba

Sout al Gorba, a five-member group led by Karim Alaoui, represents Morocco's Gnawa music tradition.

Roughly translated, the name of the group means sound of the immigrants. The Gnawa are descendants from an ethnic group brought to North Africa as slaves four centuries ago.

David (Dudu) Fisher

Born in Israel, David Fisher studied at the Music Academy of Tel Aviv. Performing a repertoire ranging from opera to cantorial music to Broadway show tunes to Yiddish lullabies, the singer has acquired a reputation for mesmerizing his audience.

Fisher appeared as Jean Valjean in the Broadway production of "Les Miserable" and was featured as a speaking and singing voice in the animated Steven Spielberg film "The Prince of Egypt."

Didjworks

Didjworks features the didgeridoo and Australian-Aboriginal instrument dating back nearly 40,000 years. The instrument is made from the branch of a tree and played with a technique called circular breathing.

Presented by the Catskill Mountain Foundation and Hunter Festivals, Inc. the two day event takes place under several big tents at the Hunter Mountain Ski Bowl. There are food and arts and craft vendors at the site.

From Albany take the NYS Thruway south to Catskill exit 21. Go west on 23A to the resort.

Adult admission for each day is $10. Children age 7 to 12 are $5 per day and children six and under are free.

For information call 263-4223 or visit the website at www.huntermtn.com.

Delmar student killed in V'ville car crash

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

A Bethlehem Central High School graduate, home from college on summer vacation, died in the early morning hours of Saturday, July 28, in a Voorheesville accident under investigation by the Albany County Sheriff's Department.

According to reports by sheriff's deputies, David B. Maher, 22, of Delmar, was killed when the car he was driving northbound on Crow Ridge Road at about 3:24 a.m. failed to negotiate a turn near the intersection of Route 85A.

Crossing the intersection,

Maher's vehicle struck a guard rail and then a tree before coming to a stop near Voorheesville Elementary School.

Maher was pronounced dead at the scene by Albany County Coroner Philip Furie. A passenger in Maher's vehicle, William J. Bush, 23, a college student from Littleton, Colo., suffered head injuries in the accident, and was transported by Voorheesville Ambulance to Albany Medical Center Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Police interviewed Bush at the hospital, but as of Monday the circumstances of the accident remain under investigation.

Undersheriff John Mahan said: "Speed was definitely a factor. We've made measurements at the scene and we're doing our calculations right now as we speak" about how fast Maher had been driving.

Investigators are also seeking to determine whether alcohol may have been a factor in the accident.

But it may be as much as a week before toxicology reports are available for analysis, he said.

Maher, a student at Buffalo University, and Bush, an acquaintance, were both on summer vacation and had reportedly been visiting friends Friday night.
