Town, V'ville gear up for adult venue sites

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The town and village boards in Bethlehem and Voorheesville are about to take up what has been a hot-button issue in suburban communities: how to protect communities from the unfettered growth of adult-entertainment businesses without infringing on those businesses' right of free expression.

A well-established series of state and federal legal precedents has guaranteed adult entertainment — from video stores and movie theaters catering to "XXX" tastes to nightspots offering harder-core live entertainment — the right to exist in any municipality.

"You can't just enact a law that says, 'We won't have any adult use businesses in our community,'" said Voorheesville village board member Camille Jobin-Davis, who is spearheading a drive to craft a village adult-use ordinance.

"There is recent case law from the Supreme Court that you have to accommodate them reasonably," said Jobin-Davis, who is a lawyer.

But that law does permit communities, in the interest of public safety, to restrict those activities to limited areas — provided they do not attempt to interfere with the business' lawful content.

"You can't stop them from coming. That's definite," said John Flanigan, the former Bethlehem building inspector who, at the request of town Supervisor Sheila Fuller, began researching the issue. "But you can put down (in the town code) where they can go."

The delicate question is how to draw those restrictions broadly enough to protect residential and commercial areas but narrowly enough to provide adult-entertainment purveyors their rightful place.

Bethlehem's town board will get its first overview of Flanigan's efforts at tonight's town board meeting, where he is scheduled to open, he said, "a back-and-forth with the town board to see where they want to go with this."

The goal is to put in place, hopefully by year's end, a local law or amendment to the town zoning code establishing standards for where adult-use businesses could locate in the town should any ever step forward. "It's better to have those conditions in place before anyone wants to come here," Flanigan said.

In Voorheesville, a three-member ad-hoc committee acting at the behest of the village board and led by Jobin-Davis, has been laboring since March over a similar draft law. In July, Jobin-Davis, who has worked on the draft along with board counsel Don Meacham and her successor as counsel to the village planning commission, Ann-Jo McTague, promised the board a report on the status of the draft law at its Aug. 28 meeting.

Zinzows, passenger file notice of claim

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The town of Bethlehem may face legal action stemming from a traffic accident last April on the Delmar bypass at Bender Lane that killed a Selkirk woman and left another facing long-term rehabilitation for his injuries.

Separate notices of claim have been filed in state Supreme Court against the town by attorneys acting on behalf of the estate of Elizabeth Zinzow, a 42-year old killed in the April 19 collision, and Richard C. Snell, 48, of Locust Drive in Selkirk, now recuperating at Sunnyview Rehabilitation Hospital in Schenectady from head trauma and partial paralysis stemming from the accident.

Both notices charge the town with negligence in the presence of dangerous conditions and the absence of appropriate warning signs or traffic control devices at the intersection where the accident took place.

Notices of claim seek resolution of potential liability claims while preserving the right to sue within a year and 90 days of the accident.

Snell's attorney, Joseph Muia Jr. of Altamont, also filed notice against Albany County. And attorney Marc Goldberg, acting on behalf of Zinzow's husband William, executor of her estate, has filed a notice of intent to file a similar claim against the state; the Delmar bypass is a state highway.

In addition, Goldberg said Monday, "We are at this juncture considering our options" of legal action against the drivers of both vehicles involved in the mishap — including Zinzow's mother, 71-year-old Alice Hahn of South Bethlehem. Muia could not be reached for comment on potential further legal action by his client.

Both Zinzow and Snell were passengers in Hahn's vehicle, crossing the bypass at Bender at about 7:10 a.m. on April 19, when the vehicle was struck by another driven by 42-year-old Daniel McKay of Feura Bush.

Bethlehem police investigators concluded that Hahn had failed to yield the right of way to McKay's northbound vehicle.

But both claims served on the town last month — Zinzow's filed in on June 29 and Snell's on July 18 — maintain that a poorly designed road and intersection, the lack of any traffic control device, and conditions at the time resulting from detours related to roadwork on Elsmere Avenue nearby contributed to the accident.

Experts advise keeping close track of kids

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

The July 10 arrest of Delmar resident John Christopher Smith on charges of rape and endangering the welfare of a child raises a number of serious questions for the community.

Knowing that as many as 10 middle school children had been involved with Smith — drinking, smoking and disrobing — parents might well ask, "How do I make sure this never happens to my child?"

The answer seems blindingly simple, but equally difficult as kids get older and gain more independence. Police, psychologists, teachers, administrators and parents all agree that it's critical to know where children are and who they're with at all times, and that parents not give up on staying connected with their children —

Woman injured in rollover accident

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

A rollover auto accident on Wednesday, Aug. 15 on Kenwood Avenue left a Delmar woman hospitalized and closed part of the road to traffic for several hours.

According to police reports, an eastbound vehicle driven by Marilyn F. Mather, 76, of Hartwood Road in Delmar apparently crossed into the westbound lane shortly after 8 p.m., struck a utility pole on the shoulder and rolled over.

Bethlehem police, as well as Albany County Sheriff's paramedics and units of Elsmere Fire Co. and Delmar Ambulance responded at the scene, and Mather was subsequently transported to Albany Medical Center by Delmar Ambulance for treatment of abdominal and leg injuries. She was reported in fair condition at the hospital.

Police closed Kenwood between Greenleaf Drive and Woodridge Road for several hours, resulting in traffic backups in the stretch of Kenwood connecting Delaware Avenue and the Delmar Bypass. A Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. crew responded to repair the utility pole, and no service interruptions were reported in the residential area as a result of the accident.

Police spokesman Sgt. Thomas Heffernan said police are continuing to investigate the incident but believe it to be medically related.

Police arrest 2 for DWI

Bethlehem police arrested two individuals last week and charged them with driving while intoxicated (DWI) — while an earlier DWI case was recently resolved in Town Court.

The first new arrest occurred on Route 85 in Slingerlands shortly after 2 a.m. on Sunday, Aug. 12. Officer Brian Hughes, on a radar patrol near the Albany city line, observed a southbound vehicle operating erratically.

Hughes administered field sobriety tests on the driver, Michael Everett Pickett, 39, of 604 Catlyn Court, Delmar, and charged him with DWI and several traffic violations. Pickett already faces another DWI count in a July 14 incident.

Another arrest took place shortly after 3 a.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 15.

Responding to an accident call along River Road in Selkirk, Officer George Travis found a southbound vehicle driven by Jacob Andrew Osterhout, 22, of 11 Second Ave., Coeymans, that had veered out of the roadway, crossed several lawns and struck the guide wire of a utility pole before coming to a stop in front of 1478 River Road.

After administering field sobriety tests, Travis arrested Osterhout, who was not injured in the accident, and charged him with DWI.

Both Pickett and Osterhout were ordered to appear in Town Court on Sept. 4.

In an Aug. 7 court appearance, Michelle Marie Bechand, 28, of 502 8th Ave., Troy, arrested on June 16 for DWI, pleaded guilty to a reduced count of driving while ability impaired (DWAI).

Bechand was fined $300 and a $35 state-mandated surcharge, had her license suspended for 90 days, and was ordered to attend a victim impact panel and undergo drinking-driver remediation.

According to recent research, the blood vessels of older athletes are comparable to those of people half their age. The study focused athletes and non-athletes, both young and old. The average age for both of the younger groups was 27. The average age for the older group of non-athletes was 63, while the older athletes's average age was 66. The study found that the older athletes's blood vessels functioned as well as those of the participants in either of the two younger groups. Exercise, it seems, helps the arteries relax and renders them more able to expand, thereby preventing arterial stiffness, which can lead to cardiac problems. This adds to the growing body of evidence showing exercise's healthful benefit.

Taking care of yourself over time is a good idea, yet how often we put it off just because it demands our effort. Once exercising becomes a habit, however, how much better we begin to feel! Local man restoring oldest house Officials to outline road plan at hearing

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The restoration of a historic Selkirk home in progress for two summers, and a related archaeological dig on the property, are rewriting some of what is known about Bethlehem's earliest colonial days — and its pre-Columbian history as well.

The Winne farmhouse in Selkirk, a homestead for one of Bethlehem's oldest families, sits in a hollow within a mile of Route 9W, amid a stand of trees set a few dozen yards back from the south shoulder of Creble Road. Astride what was once a crossroads, one of perhaps an early cluster of houses, it is now largely hidden from the road.

But the Winne House is emerging from the shadows to stake a claim to the title of oldest known extant house in Bethlehem.

"The paper trail says 1720 — deeds, maps and so forth," said Floyd Brewer, director of the Bethlehem Archaeology Laboratory, who has immersed himself in researching the property's history and overseen the archaeological work being done.

Working with genealogists Flo and Peter Christoph, Brewer uncovered references to the marriage in January of 1720 of Pieter Winne and Rachel Van Alen in what would become their new home; later records confirmed that the couple lived in the Creble farmhouse.

Evidence uncovered last summer in the archaeological dig on the site — more than 3,200 bits of pottery, coins, pieces of clay pipe and an old English bottle — all suggest a date of somewhere between 1710 and 1725. And details of the house's construction discovered by restorer Brian Parker, who now owns the property jointly with his brother Kevin, dovetail with those conclusions, which would make the home the oldest in town by six or seven years.

"I'm reasonably certain it's 1720," said Brewer.

Another important find, turned up last month by Brian Gosselin, a 15-year-old Bethlehem Lab School student working the dig this summer, provided confirmation for a hunch by Brewer and his colleagues that Indians of the late Woodland period, about a thousand years ago, inhabited the vicinity.

"I'm immensely relieved," said Brewer of the find, a small shard of pottery of a type known to have been fabricated by the Owasco tribe in the late 12th century and early 13th century. "Indians roamed this area as long as 8,000 years ago, and there's evidence of the Vosburgh culture from around 3,000 B.C. But we've been stymied all summer trying to study the later Indian culture in this area. Now I'm able to say the Owasco were here about eight centuries ago."

The Winne farm was part of the patroonship parcelled out to Kiliaen Van Rensselaer, and Pieter Winne was a tenant farmer there by the mid-1700s.

The home remained in the hands of Pieter Winne's descendants until its 1906 purchase by Harris Creble. After his death in 1966, the property went through a series of owners who were largely absentees.

Local history buff Allison Bennett brought the home, fallen into disrepair, to Brewer's attention, and he in turn contacted Parker, a longtime Slingerlands resident whose business, Brian Parker Restorations, has been devoted to bringing colonial architecture in the Northeast back to life.

When he was shown the Winne property, the steep gabled roofline of the house and its orientation gave away its early 18th-century, urban Dutch-style origins.

"I was in the house maybe 20 minutes, went through it very quickly, and was on the phone from my car to the realtor to begin this rather complicated process of getting this out of (the previous owner's) estate," Parker said. "I knew immediately it was an example of a very rare type of Dutch house of which there are very few left."

"We were delighted Brian bought the property," said Brewer. "He has the skill to restore it, and the passion, which is more important."

Parker's first concerns: "For several years, it had been left largely unoccupied and in sort of a dilapidated condition," he said. "My first concern was that the house itself be saved."

Drainage was improved in the basement, crumbling stonework shored up, deteriorated sections of roof removed.

Fortunately, most of the many alterations to the home over the years covered, without destroying, its oldest features.

"Affluence destroys houses," said Parker. "Fortunately, nobody lived here very affluently."

Or threw much away, either.

"The house was a treasure chest," Parker said. "The attic was just stuffed with original materials that had been here for hundreds of years. Anything that's anywhere near original is carefully conserved and preserved, and anything that needs replacing will not be replaced without precedent."

How much has it all cost so far?

"Lots of money — we haven't added it up yet," said Parker.

A proposed road improvement project on County Route 52 in Bethlehem — the stretch of Cherry and Elm avenues between Kenwood and the Delmar bypass — will move into a new phase next week as county Highway Department officials outline plans for property takings related to the project.

A public hearing has been set for Thursday, Aug. 30, at 7 p.m. at town hall to display the final design of the Route 52 project and outline eminent domain procedures for the more than 80 property owners who are targeted for strip-takings in connection with the program.

The proposed roadway and sidewalk improvements were introduced in public meetings last October and in January. No major changes have been made in the plan since last January, according to county Deputy Commissioner of Public Works Michael Franchini.

The plan calls for replacing the badly worn pavement all along the road, standardizing the width of driving lanes at 14 feet, making drainage improvements and adding or replacing sidewalks in the area at a standard five-foot width.

The project also calls for several new left-turn lanes at critical intersections and making improvements to a sharp bend in the road at Murray Avenue. Project planners hope to begin construction sometime next spring.

"We're not making any radical changes here. We're not looking to realign the road," said Franchini. "Mainly, we're upgrading the pavement."

Representatives of his department will be on hand beginning at 6:30 p.m. to informally discuss elements of the plan with the public.

The hearing, Franchini said, will be devoted to "bringing everyone up to date on the status of the project so far," describing the eminent-domain process and obtaining public comment.

"This is a little more formal than our other public forums, where they will have an opportunity to make either a spoken or a written statement on the process," he said.

No land seizures are imminent, Franchini said.

"We have between now and the start of construction to deal with residents' concerns, and that's what we'll be doing," he said.

Most of the land the county plans to acquire consists of relatively minor strips being sought for sidewalk improvements. Many of those parcels, he said, are already subject to easements granted by residents to the town years ago for the current sidewalks.

"They own the land under the sidewalks now," Franchini said. "The only real difference is, they won't own it any more, so they'll see their property tax bill go down slightly. Most residents will see little or no impact from this at all."

"Right now we're in the beginning stages of the property acquisition process," said Franchini. "With so many property owners involved, some meetings (with appraisers) have occurred, some are still scheduled. The appraisers are working with the schedules of the residents, so some of the meetings are still to be scheduled."

"A lot of people fear the worst, but once we explain to them what we can and are willing to do, most are pretty satisfied," Franchini said. "We do not come in there and say, 'This is the only option; there's nothing we can do.' We get a lot of input from residents, and we have plenty of time to resolve their concerns."

Those unable to attend the public hearing, he said, will have an opportunity to comment in writing.

To Grandma's house we go for a blast from the past

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Grandma's 85th birthday was in April, but she deferred her present until this month, when she asked for the gift of her family, gathered again to celebrate Bennington Battle Day in her backyard.

The "16th of August" had been

COMMENTARY:

*Mom's

a key date in our family lexicon, as my parents brought their five children to my mother's hometown every summer to celebrate the Green Mountain Boys' rout of the English during the Revolutionary War. The Bennington Battlefield lies in today's New York state, but Vermont's third-largest city erected a monument to celebrate the victory, and honors it during one weekend every summer with reenactments, activities for children, and a firemen's parade on Sunday.

My sister won a pie-eating contest one year, and her laughing face covered with blueberry pie filling made the front page of the Bennington Banner. We never caught the greased pig, and none of us ever attempted to climb the greased poles, one with a $5 bill tacked to the top; the taller one sporting $10. The marching bands tuned up for the parade in Saturday night's Battle of the Bands on a high school field close enough to Grandma's house to hear from her front porch. Sunday's parade was always a chance to see every fire truck within a 100-mile radius of Bennington, and sometimes even further.

Hoosick was the first town to sport a yellow fire engine in the 1970s, eliciting great debate from the adults as to the merit, possible safety, and strong break with tradition of that color. This year, Pownal's green fire truck passed without comment, the curiosity factor having been satisfied instead with the truck espousing non-fluoridated water for the town of Bennington and offering thirst-quenching, and presumably fluoride-free, water from Poland Spring, Maine.

Fire trucks from the pre-engine days inspire murmurs of admiration from parade-goers, and a tank and two accompanying fighter jets overhead thrilled the boys in the family.

The occasional hurling of candy by clowns, marching Little League players and firemen in cherry pickers, kept the kids poised to spring from their curbside seats. The adults applauded all the vets, from crew members of the U.S.S. Bennington to the small group of Vietnam vets who marched down Main Street in the shadow of the Green Mountains.

Shriners ended the show on an upbeat note, leaving us all to ponder grown men dressed in Aladdin-style clothes riding on mini-cars and the children's hospitals that their organization helps finance. Then, in the finest of American traditions, it was time for a picnic in Grandma's backyard.

At some point this summer, every American backyard had a party like this, full of the great American fare that helps keep our weight up. Hamburgers, hot dogs and a true sign of dangerous living: mayonnaise-based salads on an 85-degree day. That starchy summer staple, corn-on-the-cob, would serve as the only vegetable, its benefits brought into doubt by generous dousings of butter and salt. It has been a number of years since so many of us gathered for this picnic. Grandma's three children have 11 children among them, and while some have remained in Bennington, many of us have scattered far and wide. But Grandma's 85th birthday is a remarkable enough occasion that all but the Texas cousin with the 10-day-old baby were there. Even at that, modern technology brought them to us, as we downloaded and printed e-mailed pictures to show off to all gathered.

We were the broadest definition of family, with Grandma's children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren joined by her nieces and nephews and their children, her great-nieces and great-nephews. 8-year-old Timmy claimed the prize of the most "greats" — "My grandmother is her niece, my mother is her great-niece, and I'm her great-great-nephew," he opined.

Relatives by marriage came, too, as in-laws of in-laws spread the branches of the family tree wide across the backyard on a summer day. As a child, I sat and listened to the grown-ups in a way that my children don't yet seem to want to.

There were stories of the Depression, of the iceman before refrigeration, of my grandfather adding on the front porch to the house my grand-mother grew up in after the two of them moved in with her mother and disabled sister. Hardships of a less-modern era seemed romantic when my mother and her brothers talked about the woodstove in the kitchen that heated the whole house, and trudging up the mountain to bring home a Christmas tree each year. Low-voiced conversation and giggles among my mother, her brothers and her cousins served as a reminder that they had had a life before they were responsible adults and parents.

This year, my cousins, siblings and I were the adults, leaving our children to find their way together and bond over Gundam Wing toys, paper and colored pencils, badminton, and a tent to sleep in with Uncle Tom and almost-Aunt Vicki. An old-fashioned swimming hole in the Branch River at the end of Grandma's street cemented their relationship, as the 11-year-old from Texas, on his first visit to a Battle Day celebration, exclaimed that it "rocked" to be swimming in the forest. His Southwestern perception of a row of trees and some creekside shrubs made us laugh.

But as the kids sank down on the soles of their feet, heads disappearing and arms stretched up to show us the deepest part of the swimming hole, it became clear that the next generation was in place to continue this fine summertime tradition.

Spotlight reporters earn promotions

Spotlight Newspapers has announced the promotions of two full-time reporters to editorial positions with the suburban weekly newspaper group.

Joseph A. Phillips, reporter for The Spotlight, has been named as assistant editor. While retaining his writing duties, Phillips in recent months has assumed increased editorial responsibilities for all of the newspaper group's editions.

The new editorial post reflects the broader scope of his responsibilities, according to Spotlight General Manager John McIntyre.

A former associate editor of the now-defunct monthly Capital Magazine, newsletter editor and freelance journalist for numerous other publications for more than two decades, Phillips joined Spotlight in October 1998.

"Joe Phillips is a great asset to all eight Spotlight Newspapers," said Executive Editor Sue Graves. He is a especially help to younger staff members."

Spotlight Newspapers has also announced the appointment of Roger Noyes as editor of the Clifton Park Spotlight, effective immediately.

A Plattsburgh native currently residing in Albany, Noyes is a Union College alumnus and freelance writer for Spotlight's three Journal newspaper editions in Schenectady County prior to accepting a full-time position as a reporter for the Journals last June.

"Roger is a conscientious, hardworking reporter," said Journals editor Philip Schwartz. "He was an asset to the Journals."

I'm sure the same qualities that made him a strong reporter will make him a strong editor."

His new responsibilities will involve editing Spotlight's sole weekly in Saratoga County, which covers local news in Clifton Park and Halfmoon. The Clifton Park Spotlight is one of eight weekly editions in suburban communities of the Capital District published by the Spotlight group, owned by Syracuse-based Eagle Newspapers.

A replacement for Noyes as full-time correspondent, principally covering the town of Rotterdam but also covering Schenectady County, Niskayuna, Scotia and Glenville for the various Journal editions, will be named shortly, according to Schwartz.

X-rated

It's understandable that suburban residents get upset when the issue of adult entertainment businesses is introduced in their towns. Most people don't fancy living close to a strip joint, juice bar or an establishment that peddles pornography. Adult entertainment businesses have been or are a concern in all of the suburban towns covered by Spotlight Newspapers.

Editorials

Even decision-makers in the towns seem wary of the prospect of playing host to X-rated money-making ventures.

But the dilemma of town officials and residents is that adult entertainment businesses have every right under the law to operate in Any Town USA. Towns are mandated to provide an area where adult businesses can operate, so no matter how distasteful some people find them, they can not simply be banned for that or any other reason.

We think town officials who are considering local laws or who have enacted them are on the right track. Not doing anything could cause serious problems and prospective adult entertainment entrepreneurs deserve to know where they can or can't set up shop in a town.

So far, at least in Bethlehem and Voorheesville, no would-be adult businesses have expressed an interest in setting up shop, but that doesn't mean they won't at some point in the future.

Supervisor Sheila Fuller is right on target: Let's act now rather than be forced to react later.

Drive responsibly

In two short weeks, school buses throughout the region will be out in full force. What that means for all drivers is the need for extra caution in the early morning and afternoon hours.

Young drivers especially need to be reminded that flashing red lights mean stop — nothing less. Violating this rule means breaking the law, since it endangers children boarding or exiting buses.

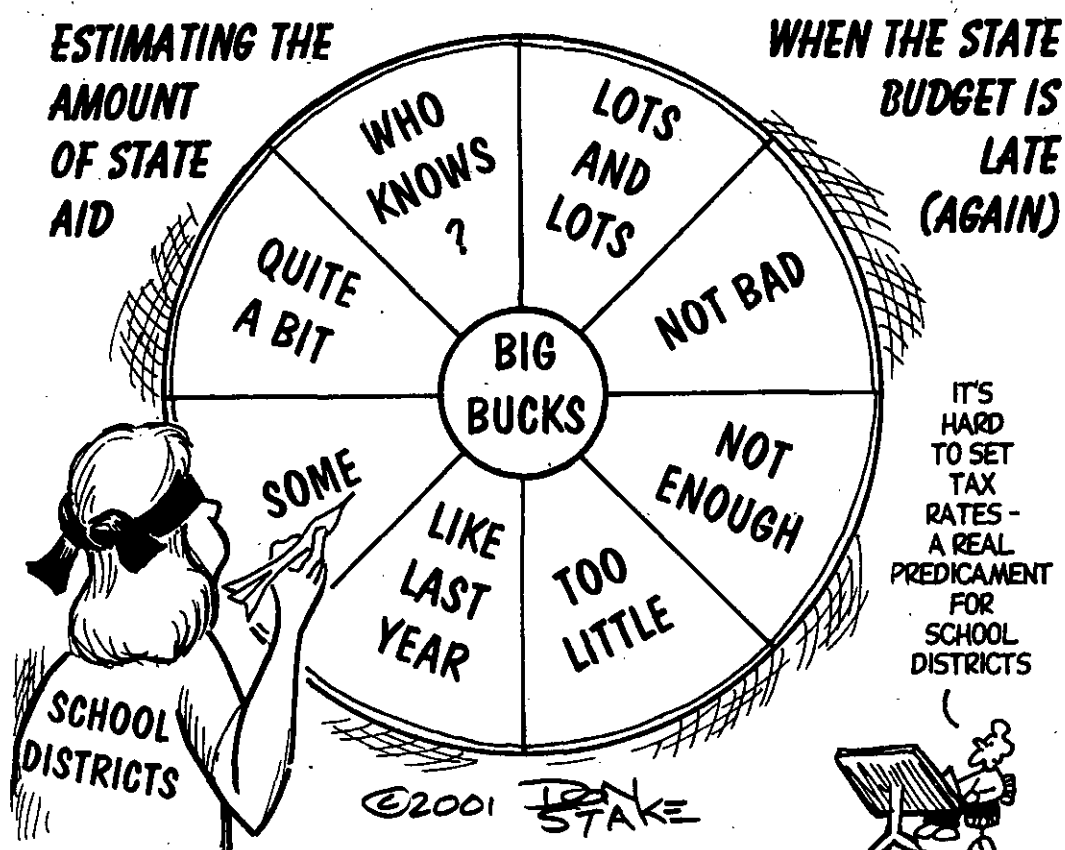

Some drivers apparently don't see the logic behind this law and ignore it especially when the bus is coming to a stop. That is pure foolishness and very risky. Children in the region have been killed by drivers who opted to ignore the law. Certainly, the extra seconds "saved" aren't worth it.

Obey the law. Children's lives are at stake.

Parents should also review pedestrian "rules of the road" with their children before school begins.

Kids who walk or bike to school need to be alert and aware especially at road crossings. Remind your kids that it is dangerous to walk three and four abreast — particularly where there are no sidewalks.

Longtime recycler reaps big benefits

By DONALD G. HARMANDE

The writer is retired from the state Finance Department. He lives in Clifton Park.

All my life as far back as I can remember, I saved things, not just anything but items I could use again or perhaps invent another way for their use.

What comes to mind at first is something I created back when bottles of milk were delivered to your door. They came with thin wires to hold the thick paper top on the neck. I saved a supply of these wires as a craft project not knowing what direction it would take me.

It was the time of my mother's birthday and an idea struck me that I could twist these wires in a shape forming the word "Mother" and then carefully attach it to my project paper, doubling it up to form a sturdy backing. I would include a poem that I composed to make a personal gift. I was successful and I must say that more than 50 years later it is still possessed as part of the family's treasures. As you see, Mom never threw out anything either, especially something homemade by her loved ones.

There was a time when silver was very important and the trash dealer who we called the "junk" man would pay money for carefully rolled silver from chewing gum, candy wrappers and the like. Rolling it into a ball was the desired way of saving it since it became one big item rather than little bits of pieces that were easily lost.

I don't recall how much per ounce was paid but the fact we got something for nothing was a thrilling experience, notwithstanding the fact it would take many months of frugal saving for anything substantial in return. A quarter in those days was considered a good amount and worth all the effort.

The man in charge of this operation was very fair, knowing that we would come back with our savings, spreading the word to our friends and thus give him most of the business. Yes, there was competition during those prudent years since most people were in the same mind-set of not wasting, especially for the war effort.

Products were scarce and difficult to come by. One would have to come up with a very good reason for purchasing just about anything. Frivolous pursuits of toys and games were secondary on any list of reasons for spending. Frequently we found out how necessity was indeed the mother of invention and we all put our heads together to find different ways of making our own fun with ingenuity. We were always conjuring up ways to re-use something in another way.

One of the big undertakings for boys was to build a skateboard or what we called a box-car made out of plywood obtained from the castaways at the grocery store and our old roller skates that had been outgrown. A simple concept but one that gave us many hours of fun and excitement and the opportunity to tour all the neighboring streets that perhaps were too far away to travel on foot.

We made our own airplanes from magazines' sturdy front and back covers. When the wind was right we would take them to the nearby open fields in the park. They would travel a good distance and were comparable to the store-bought light wooden planes that cost more than a week's allowance which we diligently and happily would save for the weekly movies.

If there were any money left over at the week's end I would put that in a special box marked for savings not to be used except for presents and/or emergencies. There was always something that occurred forcing me to, most of the time, have very little saved or nothing at all.

That all changed the year I started my Home News delivery route of about 50 customers. With tips alone that first Christmas I realized one hundred dollars in profit. I felt quite rich never seeing that large amount at one time before. This experience opened up a whole new world of independence for me which allowed me to even help pay some of my high-school expenses.

My grandmother always said the best free cleaner for windows was warm water and old newspaper. Needless to say there was never a dearth of paper in our house and the windows were always sparkling. And not too long ago I used unworn material from my old, thick woolen army socks to create soft cushions on cabinet doors' corners to keep them from noisily closing shut.

By wasting nothing and using what was given to me, namely energy and stick-to-itiveness, I learned the most important lesson that the best things in life are free but only if one were willing to work for it.

Pool hours are unfair

Editor, The Spotlight:

Again in early August, as in prior years, the Bethlehem town pool is reducing its hours of operation, closing at 7 p.m. instead of 8 p.m.

This year, the change happened on Aug. 13, only the beginning of the second full week of August.

As a person who must work during the summer months, I'm very unhappy about this situation, and I probably speak for a great many other working people in Bethlehem.

I understand and accept the decision to reduce the pool's hours as summer winds down, but this particular means of reducing hours hurts those of us who can not swim in the late afternoon hours on weekdays.

In my case, I don't arrive home from work until about 6 pm. Once the early closing begins, I need to change quickly, skip dinner and dash to the pool. I then might get in a mere half-hour's swim time. Yet, I might be luckier than some.

Doubtless, there are some working people entirely unable to meet the pool's new schedule. This change in hours hurts and discriminates against those of us who work weekdays in the summer, and who, incidentally, because we do work, are probably the principal taxpayers for the town.

Couldn't the same purpose of reducing hours be achieved in a fairer manner by shaving a half-hour off the pool schedule at the beginning of the day and again at the end, instead of eliminating an entire hour at the end?

I hope the pool officials will seriously consider this proposal next year.

Pay equity study long overdue

Editor, The Spotlight:

In 1996, Republican County Legislator Peter Clouse introduced legislation asking for a county-wide pay equity study. After much political wrangling, Resolution No. 316 of 1997 was passed, authorizing Albany County to undertake the pay equity and job classification study.

The resolution called for the county to hire interns to complete this study, though it was clear that a consulting firm would cost less and be more efficient.

In April, a resolution was passed, giving the county a deadline of Aug. 1 to produce a full and complete pay equity job classification study. The county has failed to meet this deadline. Now, nearly four years after Resolution 316, Albany County is still waiting for its study. There are many employees who have patiently waited for the results of this study.

They have waited too long.

It seems County Executive Mike Breslin is in no rush to release the information to ensure county employees are being treated fairly and equitably. Obviously, Breslin would rather sit on a $40 million surplus than give the employees of Albany County what they rightly deserve.

He can thumb his nose at the Legislature by ignoring the Aug. 1 deadline, but he must stop taking the employees for granted.

Vacation Bible school deserves praise and thanks

Editor, The Spotlight:

Recently, Delmar Full Gospel Church ran a Vacation Bible School for the community. What a wonderful experience my family had being a part of this program.

I would like to thank the pastor and his wife, the staff and volunteers and especially Mary Louise Freda, who ran the program and invited my family (practicing Catholics) to attend.

My 7 year old said it was the "funnest" thing he did this summer — and it was.

Since this program was entirely volunteer, I was asked to assist with the crafts. The assistance of the Bethlehem community in collection of craft material was tremendous. Thank you to CVS, Heidi Harbinger and other employees who collected many plastic film holders, Payless Shoes for more than 100 shoe boxes, and First United Methodist Church thrift store for ties. A special thank you to Jeanne Herrmann who donated over 20 ties to our craft project.

Thank you to these members of the Bethlehem community for your support — it helped more than 60 children have a very beautiful and spiritual (along with spirit-filled) summer.

Physically Speaking
by Nick Valenze, P.T.

Prescription for Health

Medical massage is practiced by massage therapists whose work is guided by prescriptions provided by physicians and chiropractors. The directed course of treatment makes use of specific techniques for treating injuries and illnesses, in addition to facilitating physical rehabilitation. Medical massage utilizes the basic strokes of Swedish massage in specialized techniques that are intended to achieve precise physiological contraindications to massage and about the course of disease processes. In addition, they must be familiar with other medical treatments so as to be aware of possible side effects. Thus, medical massage therapists work in conjunction with primary health practitioners to provide optimum treatment.

If you are experiencing pain or stiffness, ask your doctor for referral to our physical therapy practice. In addition to therapeutic massage, we also provide ultra sound, sports medicine, and orthopedic rehabilitation, and injuries resulting from accident or overuse; treatment may include the design and use of assistive and adaptive devices. To learn more, please call the number listed below. We offer pleasant, well-equipped facilities, and experienced and supportive staff, and evening treatment hours.

Plummer's program will begin at 2 p.m., and as with any good restaurant, reservations are required. Call 439-9314 to register and reserve your ticket.

Tickets can be picked up at the reference desk or at our "box office" on Library Day. But don't despair if you are closed out.

Plummer will stay after his presentation to do informal participatory demonstrations for passers-by.

All other Library Day activities are open to the public.

Wireless computer lab

Library Day officially inaugurates our new wireless computer lab, purchased this summer with a technology grant from the Albany County Legislature.

The lab's six laptop computers can be linked, enabling hands-on computer and Internet instruction for up to six people at a time.

The lab will be set up in the board room from 1 to 4 p.m. on Library Day.

Library staff have planned short demonstrations related to the day's culinary theme. Patrons will also have a chance to try their hand in mini-instructional sessions.

Several workshops have been scheduled in September and October that utilize the lab.

Check out the adult program listings in the September/October edition of the library newsletter, footnotes.

out there is no specific potential business driving the effort to draft these laws.

"We don't even have anything in the wind," said Jobin-Davis. "There's no business application immediately stirring this. It was just something we eventually would need to do ... there's nothing on our books right now regarding adult entertainment."

Likewise, Fuller said she is unaware of any pure adult-use business seeking to locate in Bethlehem; in fact, she said, she has fielded only one even remotely related complaint from a citizen, about racy material on the jackets of some videos in a commercial video outlet in town.

"But we need to be prepared," said Fuller. "It's better to act than react. We'd like to have a policy in place with any requirement for this type of business in the community before a situation comes along."

Recent controversies in Schenectady and Colonie have spurred their suburban neighbors to put some sort of statute on the books.

Guilderland has a long-standing adult-use zoning statute, and Rotterdam recently enacted one in response to a potential new business. Clifton Park has been engaged in a heated public discussion of an adult use zoning law for most of the past year, and Glenville has also enacted one.

The basic shape of future Voorheesville and Bethlehem laws is likely to be similar to those that already exist.

"At this point, we're somewhat sure how our law's going to go," said Jobin-Davis. "We're going to limit uses to industrial areas while incorporating provisions to limit their proximity to residences, schools and churches."

For Voorheesville, the only sizable industrial zone stretches across the village's northern tier, near the Guilderland town line.

"You wouldn't want it next to a residential zone, next to a church, next to a day care," said Flanigan — and density provisions to prevent adult businesses from clustering.

But court decisions also make it clear that there must be a reasonable number of potential locations in a community to accommodate applicants, and that those locations must be accessible.

"They can't all be in undeveloped parcels that aren't adjacent to a road," said Jobin-Davis.

Flanigan said the Bethlehem law is also likely to lean toward industrially zoned areas, of which the town has several along River Road in Glenmont and in the Selkirk-South Bethlehem area.

"Most of the communities that have done this have put these in industrial zones, and it seems to be working," he said.

The Bethlehem law may also incorporate provisions restricting adult businesses from commercially zoned parcels, owing to their proximity to residential property in densely settled areas of the town.

"You wouldn't want to allow one to go into the commercial strip along Delaware Avenue, on 9W near the shopping plazas or on New Scotland Road," Flanigan said.

Flanigan is seeking input from the town board on how restrictive it wants to be. That feedback will form the basis of a draft local law, and Flanigan said he intends to consult with town attorney Robert Alessi before presenting it for the board's review. A local law revision would eventually require a public hearing.

Flanigan said he is well aware of community sensitivity to enacting such laws — the fear that even opening a discussion of adult-use zoning could prompt such a business to seek a home in town. But the law makes it clear, he said, that the process must be open and public.

"We have to go through a public hearing process. That's out of our hands," Flanigan said.

Youth Network

A BETHLEHEM NETWORKS PROJECT

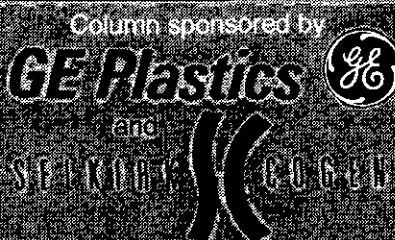

Discuss new activities

Many of us look forward to fall because it is the time when we return to more familiar school routines. Fall is often when children begin a new activity. Young children may want to start to play a musical instrument, begin gymnastics or tennis or learn to dance. Teens may choose to try a new sport or may consider taking a part-time job.

Parents and children should spend time talking about the benefits, responsibilities, time commitments and possible problems of taking on a new activity. It is important that the student realizes the time and commitment required to learn a new sport, play an instrument or to learn a new skill. Parents need to point out the importance of having enough time for schoolwork, which should be a student's first concern.

Jobs can help teens by enhancing self esteem, providing work life experience and offering extra income. Remind your teen that having a job should not exempt him or her from home and family responsibilities. Satisfactory grades should be a condition of employment. Parents may want to limit the hours teens are allowed to work and should help students plan for how to spend their extra money.

After school activities are an important part of a young person's development. They should be enjoyable and should contribute to growth and learning. Students need to find a balance of work and family time and fun.

no matter how much of a challenge that can present.

Bethlehem Youth Officer Michael McMillen, who has worked in the middle school and was instrumental in gathering evidence to arrest Smith, stressed the importance of knowing children's whereabouts, along with their friends and their friends' parents.

"This guy (Smith) met adults outside of his house, and wouldn't let them in," McMillen said. "He also offered to bring the kids home. Now we wonder why the parents wouldn't have been alerted to what was going on inside."

"As a parent, you need to know where your child is and who your child's friends are," Bethlehem School Psychologist Karen Fein said. "I'm not saying you baby-sit your child every second, but know where he is and who he's spending time with."

As kids move from the small size of elementary schools to a middle school full of kids parents don't yet know, networking among parents can be the key to keeping kids safe, according to Mona Prenoveau of Bethlehem Networks, an organization that works to support parents and students in the Bethlehem schools.

"When you live in a town like Delmar, there very often is a good network," Prenoveau said. "Don't drop your kids off without checking out the people. Always go to the door, and keep the network even more as kids get older."

"The networking is really important," Fein said. "One of the things parents should do more of is support each other."

Networking can be as simple as a thing as being in touch with other parents. If a phone call to a friend causes parents to trust a family they haven't yet met, the child's safety is further insured.

"Middle school is a time of finding that fine balance between letting go and holding on to your child," Prenoveau said. "It's important to explain to your child that you are not trying to be controlling, but you're just trying to keep them safe."

Fein said parents need to know their own children's readiness for handling independence.

"It's the same as when they were 2 and wanted to walk not holding your hand, or when you had to figure out when to let go of the bicycle they're learning to ride," she said. "If you're not involved with your child, you won't know when to do that. You can't forbid them from doing things, but you need to be there until you're sure they can take the steps without you safely."

McMillen pointed out an easy step toward independence.

"The middle school dance ends at 9:30 p.m., and a lot of the kids go to Friendly's afterwards," he said. "Let the independence be going from the middle school to Friendly's, but don't let them leave there without you picking them up. Don't let them wander the streets; a lot of kids who get involved in problems are wanderers."

Finding the right balance between independence and keeping kids safe involves that critical — and difficult — parenting element: setting limits. It also means talking with children.

"You have to try and keep talking," McMillen said. "Even if it seems they're not listening, keep talking, and set their limits. If you make a rule, enforce it. Make sure you have consequences, and let the kids know what the consequences are."

"It's harder to say no than yes as a parent," Fein said. "It's comforting to kids to know there are limits, although they won't tell you that. They don't like it, and they're often sullen, angry, and will let you know you're the worst person in the world. But don't let your kids blackmail you into doing things."

Being a parent, Fein said, does not mean being a child's friend.

"Children will push to their limits, and you have to work, and put in your time," she said.

This can be trying, as middle schoolers and their parents face the emotional upheaval that pre-adolescence can bring.

"Kids this age can be happy and talking with you, and two hours later, you ask them a question, and they'll bawl," retired middle school teacher and Bethlehem board of education member Warren Stoker said.

Signs of trouble, Stoker said, aren't always red flashing lights, but things that people who spend a lot of time with kids would notice.

"You have to see beyond the moodiness," he said.

Stoker also advocated talking, but mostly listening.

"Keep your ears wide open, and not necessarily to make a comment," he said.

Cougars offer outlet for challenged athletes

By ROB JONAS

A local team is providing an opportunity for athletes who want to play hockey but may not otherwise be able to.

The Albany Cougars is a 4-year-old program that consists of athletes who have developmental disabilities that prevent them from playing regular hockey.

"The biggest benefit is that it gives them exercise, and it gives them self-esteem," said Cougars coach Mike Cox of Delmar, whose 6-year-old son Tyler plays on the team. "They get to show people that they are no different than anyone else."

"It's really good," said Jeff Isaacson of Niskayuna, whose son Phillip joined the Cougars last year. "It gives him a chance to play with kids of his ability."

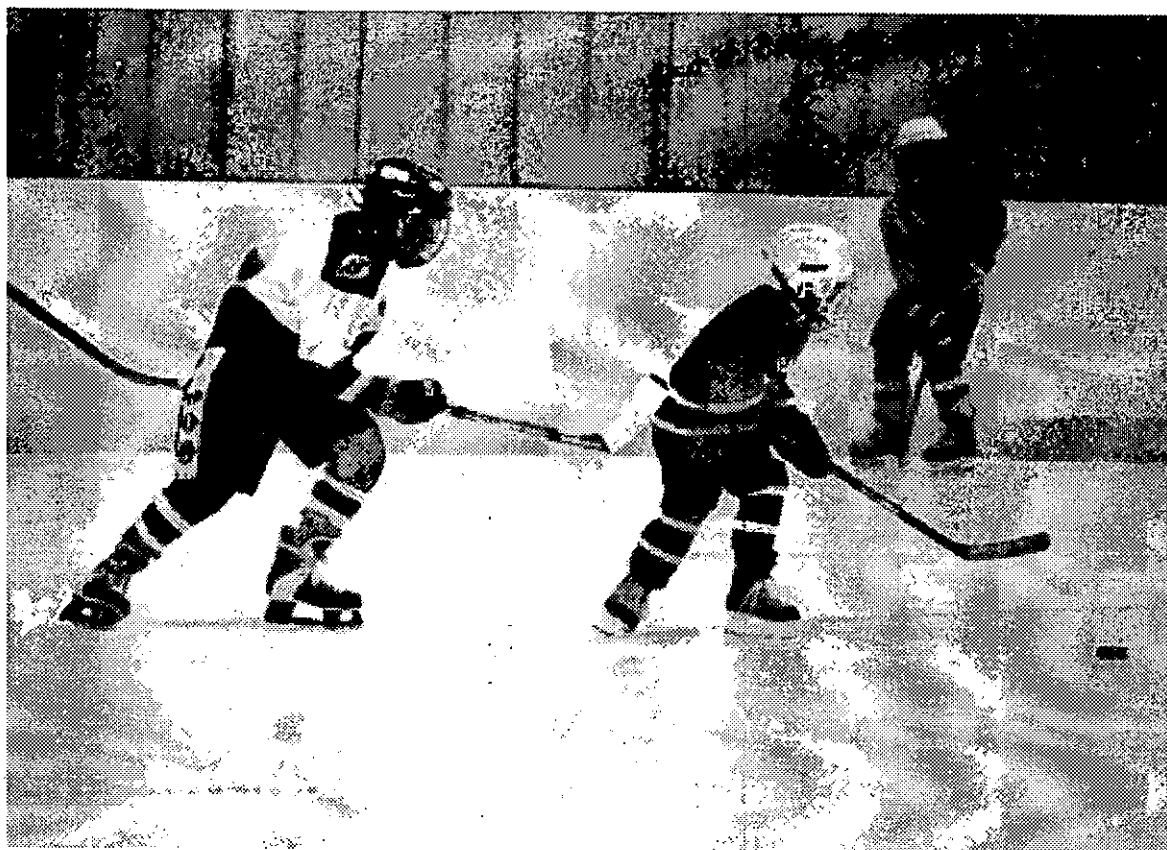

The Cougars were created four years ago by Laurie Furlong after she watched her son Sean get frustrated playing in the Troy Youth Hockey Association.

"He had skated in-house hockey with Troy Youth Hockey for seven years," Furlong said, "but once he moved up to the travel program, the play became more physical and he had trouble adjusting to it."

Sean's frustrations were born out of a developmental disability that made it difficult for him to deal with certain aspects of hockey, such as being checked by another player and having the puck stolen.

"They were checking," Sean said. "I tried to check somebody, and he didn't go down. My dad said, 'Do your best,' but it didn't work out."

"Once it gets to be more physical, it gets harder for them,"

Rob Jonas

Furlong said. "They get frustrated, and then they tend to act out their frustrations."

Furlong then heard of a special hockey team for developmentally challenged people in Westchester County called the New York Raptors. She had Sean join the Raptors in 1996 and watched the team's practices and games intently.

"I wanted to see how they ran things," Furlong said.

What Furlong saw downstate helped her when she created the Albany Cougars in 1997. The members of the Cougars range in age from small children to adults, but because of their developmental disabilities, they are able to share the ice without incident.

"(The older players) comprehend that when the kids are out there, it's about protecting the kids," Furlong said. "When the kids are off the ice, they play more physical."

That doesn't mean the younger players shy away from playing as hard as they can.

"It's supposed to be non-competitive, (but) it gets extremely competitive between the kids," Furlong said.

The team plays by modified rules — checking is not allowed, icing and offsides are not called and a running clock is used.

"We try to orchestrate the games so it winds up either with one team winning by a goal or it ends in a tie," Furlong said.

Cox, who is entering his second year as the Cougars' coach, said the players enjoy the atmosphere surrounding practices and games.

"They're always happy," Cox said. "They don't expect much from you, so that makes the job easier."

Cox tries to make the practices as personable as possible for the players.

"Here, there's a lot more coaches to the players," Cox said. "Plus, the goal is to learn to play hockey."

The Cougars wind up practicing a lot more than playing, since there aren't many teams nearby. An annual tournament, which will be hosted by the Cougars in March at the BIG Arena in Delmar, helps give the players a chance to test their skills against other teams.

"We try to play home-at-home series with the New York Raptors" the rest of the year, Furlong said. "There's also a team in Rochester now, and I heard they love to travel."

Furlong hopes to expand the size of the program in the next few years.

"It's been a long haul to get the team to where we've gotten it," she said. "The goal is to get two teams."

Breaznell, St. Lucia named All-Americans

Bethlehem Central High School seniors Susie Breaznell and Carley St. Lucia were named high school All-Americans by United States Lacrosse.

Breaznell scored 68 goals and registered more than 100 points in earning her second consecutive All-American honor. St. Lucia also broke the century mark in points with 65 goals and 45 assists for the Lady Eagles, who won their third straight Section II title.

"They are both very different players who complimented each other in their styles and were able to make the players around them better with their poise and skills," Bethlehem coach John Battaglini said. "They're a lot of fun to watch and coach, and they helped us integrate a style of play that other teams find difficult to stop."

Breaznell and St. Lucia, who will continue their lacrosse careers at Boston College, join a list of Bethlehem All-Americans that include Lindsay Piechnik, Ellen Lowrey and Grace Tsan.

Other Lady Eagles recognized by U.S. Lacrosse include Kristin Link, Brianna Bubeck, Dani Blanchard, Katie Wagoner and Sara Virgil. Link was a first team All-Star selection, while Bubeck, Blanchard, Wagoner and Virgil were named to the second team.

Premedication for Dental Appointments

There has been much controversy regarding premedication for dental appointments. Premedication with antibiotics for a dental appointment, is a precautionary method taken by your dentist and physician, to avoid a very serious infection. There is a list of conditions that your dentist and physician follow, as to whether a patient should premedicate for their appointment. These conditions include heart murmur, mitral valve prolapse, artificial joint replacement, and history of rheumatic fever. If you have any of these conditions you need to ask your physician if antibiotics are needed for dental treatment. If you have any questions call your dentist and they can contact your physician. We are always concerned about your total body health. It is important for you to inform your dentist of all health, as well as different environmental conditions, that may put you at risk. Always follow the instructions of your dentist and physician and if required always premedicate with the prescribed antibiotic one-hour prior to your appointment. If you have any questions or concerns contact your dentist and physician immediately.

AUTO FACTS

by John Quirk

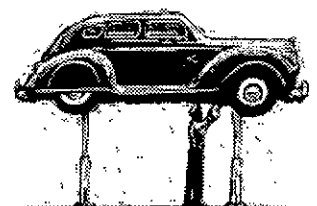

More Belted Drivers

Americans are buckling up in greater numbers, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. While there are regional discrepancies associated with seat belt use, since 1995, when the government began regular surveys, seat belt use nationwide has increased from 58% to an average 71%. Motorists in the West have the highest rate of seat belt use (80%), and those in the Northeast have the lowest (67%). Seat belt use is highest in those states with tough enforcement regulations. Wearing a seat belt reduces deaths in passenger-car accidents by 45% and in light-truck crashes by 60%. Seat belts are particularly effective in rollover accidents, where they prevent the occupants from being thrown from the vehicle.

This week's column highlights the benefits of wearing a seat belt while driving. BETHLEHEM AUTO SERVICE encourages drivers to wear their seat belts and to use cellular phones responsibly. By having your vehicle professionally inspected every 3,000 miles, you help avoid breakdowns and accidents and costly repair bills. A routine maintenance check includes inspection of the tires, brakes, belts and hoses, and all fluids. Call 426-8414 to arrange a convenient appointment. We are located at 62 Hannay Lane in Glenmont off Rt. 9W behind Stone Ends. Business hours are Mon.-Fri., 7-6.

HINT: Seat belts are intended to be used in conjunction with air bags, which are no substitute of seat belts.

Writers Institute presents fall programs

By JOHN BRENT

Some dramatic changes were taking place in American theater in the years following World War II. The well-made play of the 1930s and 40s as best represented by talented writers like Lillian Hellman ("The Little Foxes," "The Children's Hour") was giving way to a new breed of playwright. The conventional three-act structure with realistic sets and traditional character development would always have its place on the stage, but a new generation of authors pushed the boundaries of American theater and challenged audiences to think "outside the box."

Tennessee Williams brought a pathos and poetry to the stage with dramas like "The Glass Menagerie," and "A Streetcar Named Desire." Arthur Miller dealt with harsh, emotionally riveting issues of the post war era in plays like "Death of a Salesman," and in the process redefined the theatrical concept of tragedy.

In the 1950s and 60s experimental theater was the rage with more sophisticated critics and audiences, and one of the leading playwrights of the avant garde was Edward Albee. In his early one-act plays like "The Zoo Story," "The American Dream" and "The Sandbox," Albee combined a scathing wit with dramatic insight as he tore into the conventional standards of a complacent middle class.

His full length plays, "A Delicate Balance" and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" held a distorting, fun-house mirror up to everyday American life and while the reflected image may have been bizarre it was not without truth.

Now, the New York State Writers Institute will be bringing Albee to Albany as part of its fall 2001 Visiting Writers Series and presenting the film version of Albee's best known play, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" as part of the fall Classic Film Series.

Albee will appear on Tuesday, Oct. 2, at the Main Theatre of the Performing Arts Center at the University at Albany uptown campus at 8 p.m.

Like many artists whose work spans more than four decades, Albee's career has had its ups and downs and at various times the writer has been thought to have his best work behind him. Just when he seems more a part of the past than the present he presents a new work that revitalizes interest in him and brings new acclaim for his career.

In 1994, his play "Three Tall Women" won new audiences and critical acclaim as well as a third Pulitzer Prize for the author for drama.

As part of the film series, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" will be screened on Sept. 21. Directed by Mike Nichols and starring Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton the 1966 movie follows the play quite closely.

As George and Martha, Taylor and Burton take on very different roles than the glamorous couples they played in earlier films. Taylor down plays her beauty and movie star image to get under the skin of the frumpy, frustrated wife of mediocre college professor Burton.

New faculty member Nick (George Segal) and his wife Honey (Sandy Dennis) are invited over by George and Martha and the evening becomes a perverse game as the characters verbally attack each other and before long, all pretense and protocol is stripped away.

Like most of the films in the fall series,

Mike Nichols' 1966 film version of Edward Albee's play, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" featured Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton in the decidedly unglamorous roles of George and Martha.

"Virginia Woolf?" will be presented at Page Hall, 135 Western Ave. on the University at Albany Downtown Campus. Unless otherwise noted screenings take place on Friday at 7:30 p.m.

The film series opens with a Québec New York Film Festival to be presented over four evenings beginning on Monday, Sept. 10 and continuing through Thursday, Sept. 13.

Monday's films included a short, "Speak White" and a feature "Pour La Suite Du Monde" (Of Whales, the Moon and Men). The feature is a documentary about the revival of a traditional whale hunt.

A short film, "The Street" opens the Tuesday screening, and this is followed by the feature "Mon Oncle Antoine" (My Uncle Antoine). Twice selected by Canadian critics as the "greatest Canadian film of all time," "Mon Oncle Antoine" tells the story of life in a small asbestos mining town.

On Sept. 12 the short film "Crush" will be presented and the feature for the evening will be "Yes Sir! Madame ..."

The Québec New York festival concludes on Thursday with "Atomic Saké," a short and the feature, "La Moitié Gauche D Frigo" (The Left Side of the Fridge).

On Oct. 5 "Epidemic," a Danish film from 1988 will be presented. Shot in documentary style, the film depicts the efforts of two filmmakers to create a script about a global epidemic as a real epidemic begins to strike everyone around them.

"Stealing Beauty" will be shown on Wednesday, Oct. 10, at the Recital Hall at the Performing Arts Center on the uptown campus at 7 p.m. The film marks director Bernardo Bertolucci's return to his native Italy to shoot this film after a 15 year period of working in other countries. The screening will be followed by a commentary and question and answer period by American fiction author Susan Monot who wrote the screenplay based on a story by the director.

British comic actor John Cleese appears in "Clockwise," a 1986 film from England. Cleese plays the headmaster of an English school who values punctuality but on his way to a conference where he is scheduled to speak all sorts of absurd encounters conspire to delay him.

Audrey Hepburn was perfectly cast as a runaway princess in her first starring role in the film "Roman Holiday."

On Oct. 19 at 7 p.m., the 1953 American film "Roman Holiday" will be shown. In her first leading role, Audrey Hepburn plays a runaway princess who finds freedom and romance in the arms of a newspaper man played by Gregory Peck.

Directed by William Wyler, an American director who had a reputation for bringing out the best in star performers, the screenplay was written by blacklisted writer Dalton Trumbo. Because Trumbo could not take a screen credit for his contribution, his "front," Ian McLellan Hunter was given credit and when Oscar time came it was Hunter who was given the Academy Award for Trumbo's script.

The screening of "Roman Holiday" will be followed by a talk by Metroland Arts Editor Peter Hanson who recently completed a biography of Trumbo.

"Kafka," an American/French collaboration follows on Oct. 26. The film is an earlier effort from director Stephen Soderbergh who was double Oscar nominated for best director this past year with "Traffic" and "Erin Brockovich."

The French film "La Religieuse" (The Nun) follows on Nov. 2.

On Nov. 9, the silent film, "A Girl in Every Port" will be shown. Directed by Howard Hawks in 1928, this film, stars Victor McLaglen, Robert Armstrong and Hollywood legend Lousie Brooks. Piano accompaniment will be provided by Mike Schiffer.

A Cuban film, "Los Sobrevivientes" (The Survivors) is on deck for Nov. 16 and "YiYi," a Taiwanese/Japanese film directed by Edward Yang will be shown on Nov. 30.

The fall schedule of films concludes on Dec. 7 with Robert Altman's "McCabe and Mrs. Miller," made in 1971. A snow covered Pacific Northwest mining town is the setting for this dream-like western which stars Warren Beatty and Julie Christie.

Admission to the films is free. For schedule updates and information on the Visiting Writers Series or Classic Film Series, visit the Web site at www.albany.edu/writers-inst or call 442-5620.
