Eagles 2001 carry Super title home

By ROB JONAS

The Bethlehem football team put 1978 to rest and ended a dynasty in the process.

Pat Heenan rushed for 216 yards and three touchdowns to lift the Eagles to a 34-6 victory over four-time defending champion Troy High School in last Friday's Section II, Class AA Super Bowl at Colonie Central High School.

"This has got to be the greatest feeling in my life and everyone else's life," Heenan said. "We're the champions now."

It's the first Sectional football title for Bethlehem, which lost its only other Super Bowl appearance — a 28-0 loss to Bishop Maginn in 1978.

"I was on the sideline 23 years ago when we played in the Super Bowl, and it was a very discouraging way to end a 9-0 season," Bethlehem coach John Sodergren said.

Things didn't look good early on for the Eagles (9-1). A long return by Bruce Riggins on the opening kickoff gave Troy the ball at Bethlehem's 42-yard line.

The Flying Horses then mounted a drive that consumed 7:16 of the first quarter, which was capped by an eight-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Dan Rivers to tight end Tim McEvilly. Ben Adams' extra-point kick sailed wide, though, leaving Troy with a 6-0 lead.

The Eagles quickly put the touchdown behind them. On their first offensive play from scrimmage, Heenan broke loose for a 50-yard gain to get the ball to Troy's 25-yard line. Five plays later, Heenan scored on a 1-yard plunge and Mark Bulger added the extra point to give Bethlehem a 7-6 lead.

"Once we rebounded from the first touchdown, I think we believed that we could win," Sodergren said.

The Eagles might have scored sooner than they did, though, had an inadvertent whistle stopped a touchdown pass by Bulger. The senior quarterback was so effective in faking a handoff to Heenan that one of the

Clark wins New Scotland

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Experience, it turned out, did matter — at least to New Scotland voters who went to the polls last Tuesday.

They joined the countywide trend of returning incumbents of all political stripes to office by comfortable margins, including Democrat Scott Houghtaling and Republican Andrea Gleason, re-elected in a four-way race for two seats on the town council. And in the one town contest without an incumbent — the race to succeed Martha Pofit as supervisor — the voters chose longtime Voorheesville Mayor Ed Clark over first-term council member Richard Reilly.

Clark, who carried the Republican line and a ballot slot under the banner of the New Scotland First Party, rolled up 1,762 votes in preliminary tallies, pending the counting of absentees this week. Reilly, on the Democratic, Conservative and Independence lines, scored 1,283. And Clark's lead was substantial in every precinct except Unionville and Clarksville, which were toss-ups.

"I feel very elated," said Clark at election night festivities at Voorheesville's American Legion Hall. "The effort is over. We've been working for six months and it paid off. Our message was simple: Experience matters. I appreciate that the voters have not been dissuaded from that."

Reilly declined to name the factors contributing to his defeat. "Probably my age, and some misconceptions about law school," where he is a student, he said. "But I'm not sure my speculating on it can be helpful or accurate in any way."

"I tried to focus on issues I thought were important to residents of the town," he added. "Now we'll move on. I look forward to continuing to represent the residents of New Scotland." Two years remain on his term on the town council.

Despite the sometimes bitter contest, he anticipated no problem serving alongside Clark. "I think we'll all just focus on meeting the needs of the town's residents," he said. "If that remains our focus, and even if we do disagree, and I won't say who I think might disagree with whom, I think it can be done."

The Democrats continued a long-standing election night tradition in New

GOP gains bigger edge on Bethlehem board

The Republican ticket in Bethlehem headed by Supervisor Sheila Fuller delivered a setback on Election Day to a town Democratic organization on a roll in recent local elections.

Incumbents of both parties in Albany County mostly thrived at the polls last week, including Fuller and Bethlehem Highway Superintendent Gregg Sagendorph, who both ran unopposed, and Town Clerk Kathleen Newkirk, who handily turned back a challenge from Democrat Patricia Parsons.

But two incumbent Democrats in Bethlehem were defeated Nov. 6.

In preliminary returns, pending the counting of nearly 450 absentee ballots — Slingerlands Republican Thomas Marcelle, in his third campaign for public office, led the field with 5,450 votes. GOP incumbent George Lenhardt secured a third term with 5,328.

Marcelle's win ousted one-term Democratic incumbent Susan Burns, who tallied 4,911 votes. Democrat John Cunningham brought up the rear with 4,460. Burns' defeat leaves town board member Daniel Plummer as the sole Democrat on a board dominated by the GOP since the Civil War.

The Democrats also surrendered one of the two town judicial seats they have held since the 1997 election, as incumbent Kenneth Munnely lost.

Incumbent Democrat Theresa Egan secured a second term, but Republican newcomer Frank Milano led the field with 5,657 votes, to 5,427 for Egan. Milano and Egan bested former county assistant district attorney Paul DerOhanessian with 4,973 — and Munnely, who finished with 4,275.

If you've noticed a whole new batch of stars around town lately, it's thanks to Bethlehem's kindergarteners. Shortly before Election Day, all 320 students made and painted two ceramic stars, put a pin on the back of them and attached red, white and blue ribbons.

A card of each student's own design also went with the pins, which were available for sale at six town polling places on Nov. 6.

Bethlehem police arrest 2 on DWI charges

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Two individuals were arrested by Bethlehem police for driving while intoxicated (DWI), and three others appeared in Town Court last week to offer pleas to similar charges.

An Ohio man was arrested Saturday, Nov. 3, and charged with DWI and unlawful possession of marijuana. Officer Craig Sleurs, patrolling on Route 9W near the Albany city line shortly after 3 a.m., observed a southbound vehicle abruptly turning into the parking lot of the Quality Inn and followed the vehicle behind the motel, where he observed the driver, Brian S. Foster, 29, of 765 Lanzelere Ave., Zanesville, Ohio, attempting to exit the vehicle.

With the assistance from Sgt. James Haker, Sleurs administered field sobriety tests and a preliminary screening and arrested Foster for DWI. A bag of marijuana found on the driver's seat was also seized. Foster is scheduled to appear in Town Court on Nov. 20.

A second arrest occurred shortly before 3 a.m. on Sunday, Nov. 4. Sleurs observed a vehicle failing to signal as it turned from Herrick Avenue onto Delaware in Delmar. He stopped the vehicle, driven by David F. Nelson, 32, of 10-A Hallwood Road, Delmar, and administered field sobriety and preliminary screening tests.

Nelson was ticketed for the improper turn and charged with DWI, elevated to a felony count when a license check disclosed a prior conviction. He refused further testing and was arraigned before town justice Theresa Egan, who released him on $261 bail and ordered him to appear in Town Court the next day. His case was then adjourned until Dec. 4 and a separate hearing set on his refusal to submit to testing.

Also appearing in court on Nov. 5, two individuals charged with DWI pleaded guilty while a third pleaded to a reduced count of driving while ability impaired (DWAI).

Jason David Curless, 22, of 256 Tompkins Road, Ravena, arrested on June 13, and Vera Mushaw, 75, of 31 Skyridge Lane, Selkirk, arrested on July 19, both pleaded guilty to DWI in satisfaction of all outstanding charges against them.

Both were fined $500 and assessed a $95 state-mandated surcharge, and also had their licenses revoked for 6 months.

Pleading guilty to a DWAI count was Elizabeth Fox Corby, 20, of 708 Huron Road, Schenectady, arrested on Oct. 13. She was fined $300 and a $35 surcharge, and had her license suspended for 90 days. Corby, Curless and Mushaw were each ordered to attend a drinking-driver remediation program and to face a victim impact panel.

House fire guts residence

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The cause of a fire that gutted a residence in North Bethlehem last week remains under investigation by Bethlehem police.

The fire on Cayuga Court, at the home of 45-year-old Susan Ungerman, was reported at 10:19 a.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Firefighters from the Elmwood Park Fire Co. in North Bethlehem were first on the scene and found the upper floor and attic of the two-story house fully involved.

Units from Delmar, Slingerlands and Albany fire companies also responded to mutual aid calls and assisted in bringing the fire, driven by brisk winds, under control by early afternoon.

The interior of the structure was severely damaged and the upper floor, attic and roof destroyed.

Bethlehem police investigating the fire determined that it began in a section of wall in the rear corner of the home's garage, and spread through the wall to the attic and roof.

A cause of the fire has yet to be determined, but police do not believe it to be suspicious in nature, according to Bethlehem police Sgt. Joseph Sleurs, who participated in the initial investigation.

Firefighters quell underbrush blaze at Thacher Park

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

A stubborn fire in the underbrush at the foot of the Helderberg escarpment at Thacher Park in New Scotland lingered for more than a day last week — damaging about 20 acres of steep-sloped terrain, briefly threatening a nearby housing development and occupying members of five fire companies and a host of state park police and forest rangers.

But to the relief of the fire crews, the damp, cool weather helped contain the fire, and areas of the park heavily used by visitors were not affected. The cause has yet to be determined, according to state Office of Parks, Recreation and Historical Preservation spokesman Wendy Gibson.

Smoke was spotted by park employees at 11:45 a.m. on Thursday, Nov. 8, in a wooded area known as the "pre-slope" near the base of a 200-foot stand of cliffs lining a promontory near the Hailes Cave area.

By the time firefighting crews from the first responding company, New Salem, arrived an hour later, about an acre was involved; by 3 p.m., it had spread to about 20 acres.

The area, north and west of the park's cliffside Indian Ladder Trail, is restricted and posted as off-limits to hikers due to its steep, unstable slope. The persistence of the fire was due in part to the lack of any service or access roads or trails into the area.

About 80 firefighters and police personnel worked for more than a day to put down a smouldering fire at Thacher Park. Joseph A. Phillips

"The challenge of fighting the fire is certainly the terrain," said Gibson. "It's very steep, directly under the cliff, and they (had) to fight it by hand." The fire appeared to have spread from two locations, she said, but that was unconfirmed by on-site fire control officials.

Joining New Salem firefighters on the scene were the Voorheesville, Onesquethaw, Berne and Altamont volunteer companies, as well as state forest rangers, parks employees and Albany County sheriff's EMS and fire coordinators — about 80 personnel in all. Chief James Warwick of the State Parks Police Capital-Saratoga Region coordinated fire control efforts.

Five hundred and 1,000-gallon tank trucks from several of the fire companies hauled in water pumped from nearby Thompson's Lake and sprayed it from the cliff tops at the Horseshoe and Hailes Cave picnic areas. State police and Air National Guard helicopter tankers were requested to assist in fighting the fire, but were unable to fly by nightfall.

Meanwhile, 10-member crews with hand tools worked their way into the forest floor to fight the blaze as it spread northwest, to within about a mile of the Indian Ladder Estates.

"We also brought in bulldozers and bulldozed a fire lane,"

Warwick said, and by dusk, the blaze had been successfully contained.

"It isn't so much flames as it is smoulder," Warwick said. "There were some trees on fire, but it's mostly underbrush."

But with footing in the difficult terrain dangerous after dark, most of the fire crews were withdrawn at dusk.

"It's just too dangerous to be out there after dark," Warwick said. A skeleton crew of about a dozen firemen, and a small complement of rangers and park personnel, monitored the smouldering fire overnight.

"We were just concerned if the winds kicked up in the wrong direction overnight," Warwick said. State police remained on standby to alert Indian Ladder Estates residents if an evacuation was required.

After sundown, dozens of glowing hot spots beneath the cliffs could still be seen from the promontory at Lagrange Bush Picnic Area.

But about an hour's worth of steady rain overnight helped douse the blaze, and the sheltering cliffs of the escarpment kept locally high winds from the passing cold front from whipping it back to life and pushing it across the fire lines.

By dawn Friday, the aerial tankers had been cancelled, and the renewed efforts of firefighters, augmented by prison work crews brought in from the state correctional facility at Summit in Schoharie County, brought the remaining fires under control by early afternoon.

Park police and rangers were posted to monitor the situation throughout the weekend and guard against a resurgence.

Warwick said there was no damage to the trail systems in the park or other popular park facilities, but it was too soon to assess the long-term impact of the fire on the unstable pre-slope held together by the underbrush.

Also yet to be determined is a cause of the fire, but "just an educated guess, human," Warwick said — possibly a trespasser's cigarette.

Gibson said investigators would begin this week to ascertain an exact cause.

"No park facilities were damaged, no crew members were injured, thank God," she said. "We're very pleased with the cooperation of the many agencies involved in fighting the fire. We're very, very grateful for their efforts."

Police investigate several local accidents

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

A fiery two-car crash sent three individuals to the hospital in New Scotland on Saturday, Nov. 10 — one of four local accidents last week involving injuries.

The collision came at about 12:20 p.m. on Rock Hill Road, when a vehicle driven by 17-year-old Michael Kleinke of Slingerlands crossed into the oncoming lane and struck head-on a pickup truck driven by Albert Miller, 76, of New Scotland.

Albany County sheriff's deputies extinguished Kleinke's burning vehicle and extracted Kleinke and a passenger, Desiree Colitsas, 19, of Glenmont. Both were transported to Albany Medical Center, where they remained in critical condition as of Monday with a host of injuries. Miller was also treated at Albany

Med and subsequently released. The cause of the accident remains under investigation.

A morning mishap involving two Delmar residents on Tuesday, Nov. 6, snarled traffic near the Bethlehem Public Library for more than an hour.

At about 7:48 a.m., Robert Rotundo, 83, made a left turn out of the library driveway onto Borthwick Avenue — into the path of an oncoming vehicle driven by Katherine Z. Clark, 24, which struck Rotundo's.

Rotundo and a passenger were unharmed, but Clark was transported to St. Peter's Hospital for observation of a possible neck injury. Police ticketed Rotundo for failure to yield the right of way.

A head-on collision occurred on Murray Ave. just before 8 p.m. on Nov. 7, when Aja Amaro, 16, of Glenmont, reportedly passed out behind the wheel and collided with a vehicle driven by James McGlynn, 51, of Delmar.

Amaro was treated at the scene and not charged in the incident.

And on Nov. 8, at about 7:50 a.m. on Schoolhouse Road in North Bethlehem, N. L. Kellerman Sr. struck a Niagara Mohawk utility pole head-on while exiting his driveway. Kellerman, taken to St. Peter's Hospital for observation and released, was not charged.

Loudonville native Joanne Gallucci has returned home, leaving New York City to become executive director of To Life, the Delmar-based nonprofit breast cancer organization serving Capital District women and their families.

Gallucci, 36, is looking forward to putting her experience in the public relations and marketing fields to work at To Life.

Gallucci

"I'd been thinking of moving back to the Capital District for the last three years," Gallucci said. "The economy slowed down, and I was laid off and thought that this might be a good time to make the move." Gallucci started her new job this past August, but had known about To Life for a while. Her cousin, Joanne Stasio Silverman, is a hair stylist at To Life, and Gallucci had volunteered at the organization's "Beat the Odds" day at the Saratoga Race Track two years ago. Gallucci was impressed with To Life's President and Founder Mara Ginsberg, and was glad to pursue the opportunity to work with her on a full-time basis.

"Mara is such a dynamic woman," Gallucci said. "This is an entrepreneurial place, and we're helping a group of women who need a place like this. This is a great cause to be working for, and it's good to know the work is benefiting people."

One of Gallucci's goals in her new position is to increase national awareness of To Life. One way she will accomplish that is through telecasting the group support meetings held at To Life.

"We're planning to install a camera, and send the sessions over the Internet," Gallucci said. "We also want to keep developing programs that reach the public, like wellness programs, and our educational programs that deal with topics like insurance."

Gallucci received a bachelor's in communication studies from SUNY Oswego in 1986, and a master's in the same field from the University at Albany in 1988. After finishing her master's degree, she moved with a friend to Queens and worked as an editorial assistant at Archway Books, a division of Simon & Schuster.

Gallucci gradually moved into the public relations field, where she worked at companies that included Turner Entertainment, Orion Videos, MasterCard, and Powell Tate. Most recently, she was vice-president of the financial and professional services division at Makovsky & Company.

"I've had some incredible mentors," Gallucci, who also worked for The Spotlight when she was 26, said. "I've brought a little bit of them with me into every new job. I think Mara will be another great mentor, with her vision and passion to help people."

To Life is a different experience for Gallucci.

"I sat at the first group meeting and cried," she said. "Nobody is stronger than a cancer survivor, and I think not enough people know about our organization." Gallucci, who is living in Colonie, is also teaching two management communications classes in the business department at The College of Saint Rose, and has brought her classes to see communication in action at To Life.

Ginsberg said that Gallucci's position with To Life is a good step for the organization, on two different fronts.

"When I started To Life, I knew that I didn't have to run everything," she said. "Last January, I started to think about when to fill this position, and what type of person to hire. I wasn't necessarily looking for somebody steeped in the not-for-profit field," Ginsberg said. "Joanne has a good public relations and marketing background, and ideas to help us grow bigger," Ginsberg said. "She also works hard, and she's passionate. Nobody who works here is less than passionate, and Joanne is energetic, and a sweet person. That's important, because people call here with real problems, and we need all our staff to be understanding and have the right perspective."

Gallucci is happy to be back in the Capital District, and while her career change was not the result of the Sept. 11 attacks, she said she found her move reflective of what many people are going through now.

"Sept. 11 is causing people to re-examine their lives, and ask what we're doing, and who we're serving," she said.

"This is a very positive sign for To Life," Ginsberg said. "It shows our growth, and continuing viability."

We're still wild about Harry on the silver screen

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

It's big, bold and loud, just like the city that hosted the first releases of "Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone."

At the American Movie Classics theater at 42nd Street and Eighth Avenue in New York City late Monday afternoon, adults shivered in the cold and kids tingled with anticipation at being among the first to catch the cinematic version of the boy wizard who has captured our hearts and imaginations.

Adults talked briefly of that morning's plane crash, wearing the worried frowns too familiar these days; commiserated over stories of waiting for bridges to open in time to get into Manhattan for this show; and hoped aloud there would be nothing else like Sept. 11.

COMMENTARY:

Mom's
Word

Kids listened attentively, but were relieved to speculate about the Harry Potter movie instead. After four best-selling books, audio tapes that have accompanied families on any driving trip more than an hour long and promotional trailers that have gotten increasingly more interesting as the year went on, how does the film fare?

The special effects are brilliant, the cast is wonderful and the music sets the perfect tones in just the right places in "Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone."

The first sign that Harry is different from the boring and obsessed-with-being-normal relatives he has lived with since his parents' death comes when he dissolves the glass holding a boa constrictor at the zoo. Even better is that his horrid, fat cousin Dudley, in a departure from the book, gets trapped back inside the glass after the snake slithers off with a hissing "thanks" to Harry.

Once Harry enters his magical world, the effects go into overdrive. Walls behind pubs disappear; magic wands make flower vases explode; castle staircases move at will; and three-headed dogs and ugly, dim-witted trolls make the wizarding world come alive.

The Quidditch match is a great example of how special effects can make something completely unreal entirely plausible.

Quidditch is the wizard's game, played high in the air on broomsticks, with four different kinds of balls. In "Harry Potter," the Quidditch match is Air Jordan meets jousting match, as the royal setting and robed players only enhance the high-speed broomstick flying and goal-scoring of the game.

In Harry's world, the people in pictures come and go, and it's a treat to notice, aside from the main action, that the characters in the oversized paintings on the school walls are drinking tea, waving to students, or chatting with one another.

The best use of special effects comes toward the end of the movie, when the three main characters play a giant chess game, and the oversized pieces come to life, battle one another and often fall apart with huge exploding crashes.

While the whole cast is superb, special kudos go to Daniel Radcliffe, who plays Harry, Rupert Grint, who plays Harry's best friend Ron, and Emma Watson, their gal pal Hermione.

Radcliffe fits neatly into his role of Harry, excellently conveying himself as an 11-year-old boy while giving full and excellent range to Harry's resignation at living with a cruel aunt and uncle; his melancholy at not knowing his parents; his hopefulness when he learns of the wizarding world and his triumph on the Quidditch field.

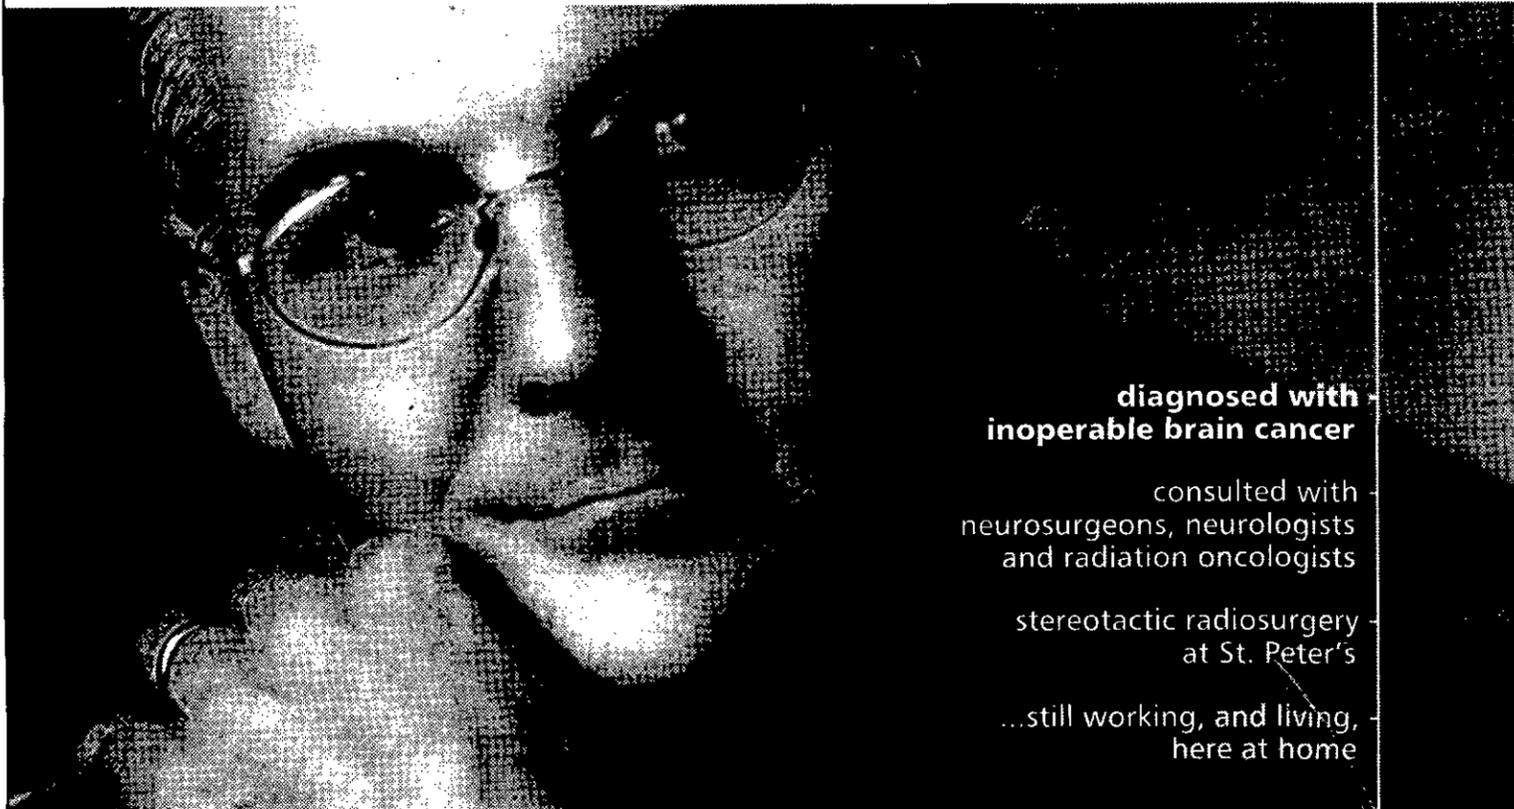

Grint is a good best pal who can lighten the mood, and Watson really morphs well from the bossy, know-it-all girl nobody can stand to somebody you would always want on your side.

The character of Severus Snape, the potions master Harry distrusts from the start, has found its perfect personification in Alan Rickman. With a sly smile, underplayed smirk and a lift of the eyebrow, he lets you into his character's soul.

Richard Harris as Hogwart's Headmaster Albus Dumbledore and Maggie Smith as Professor Minerva McGonagall honor themselves, the British acting tradition and all things Harry Potter by their performances.

Robbie Coltrane as Hagrid, keeper of keys at the wizarding school, is a true delight. He really seems, as Hagrid is described in the book, "too large to be allowed." His face plays warm, kind and startled, and his repeated, "I shouldn't have told you that," provides the movie with a bit of humor.

Good thing — the movie's a little short on humor, which starts down that slippery slope of how the movie differs from the book. Some of the differences are small details, like Harry's eyes being blue not green and the boa constrictor in the movie coming from Burma, while in the book, he came from Brazil.

Not surprisingly, a lot of the book doesn't make it to the screen, and some other elements are moved around, or lumped in together to keep things moving. Some characters' traits get switched around: Seamus Finnegan, and not Neville Longbottom, seems to have become master of the mishaps, and Hagrid gets a line of Harry's, so that Harry's last words in the movie are touching instead of funny.

Sadly, the Weasley twins, Fred and George, don't get much time in the movie, and their humor, which greatly added to the book, was missing entirely.

Side character Lee Jordan's commentary at the Quidditch match, which had been insightful and humorous in the book, was absent, to the movie's detriment.

Still, the movie's not without its funny moments. Richard Harris' unfortunate draw of a Bertie Bott's Every Flavor Bean drew "eews" and laughs from the crowd, as did John Cleese demonstrating why he's called "Nearly Headless Nick."

"It went fast," said our 11-year-old son and Harry Potter buff. "You never really got the time to settle in to it."

"I liked it," his 9-year-old brother said, "but it wasn't as good as the book."

The "Harry Potter" movie is bound to be the gold mine the books have been, but the book will always outshine it. This is not entirely the movie's fault; you can go at your own pace, settle into the book, and savor its rich detail, complex language and clever word plays, and imagine for a time a world where magic rules and good kids always triumph. The movie is nearly two hours of good, fast-moving entertainment. Take the movie for exactly what it is, and it'll be a great way to spend a couple of hours.

Bootery collecting Shoes for Shoeless

Gail Leonardo Sundling, spokeswoman for the Shoes for the Shoeless campaign and owner of the Delmar Bootery, estimates almost 10,000 pairs of wearable shoes are gathering dust in the bottom of people's closets in the Capital District.

Since 1995, the Delmar Bootery has collected over 30,000 pairs of shoes.

The collection point for the Capital District is the Delmar Bootery in Stuyvesant Plaza.

Donators should remove the shoes from their boxes and tie or rubber-band them together. This expedites collection and distribution.

Effort under way to restore park

Virginia Acquario, project coordinator for the restoration of Bethlehem Veterans Memorial Park, is on a mission. And she's looking to accomplish it one brick at a time.

"I want to access everyone in the community. I walk every day and noticed the disrepair of the park, and I thought of the World War II vets dying and wanted to do something," in honor of service men and women from Bethlehem, Acquario said.

From there, she hooked up with Bob Horn, chairman of the Bethlehem Community Appearance Committee, to begin an effort to restore the park on Delaware Avenue, near the Stewart's shop and the railroad overpass.

One of the ways she hopes to accomplish this is to launch a "buy-a-brick" campaign. "Buying a brick is like building our community," Acquario said.

Although some improvements have already been made like new plantings at the site, Acquario will be recognized," she said.

She estimates the cost of the project to be about $60,000 and hopes to realize the renovations in about five years. "We need at least 500 (bricks) to start," she said.

Acquario hopes to contact town service and other clubs for support.

"We want to revisit the site with respect for those who served," she said.

For information about the buy-a-brick campaign, call Acquario at 439-7132.

I walk every day and noticed the disrepair of the park, and I thought of the World War II vets dying and wanted to do something.

Virginia Acquario

wants to accomplish much more, with a sign and bricks sponsored by individuals and businesses. Bricks will be offered for $50 for individuals and $100 for corporate donations.

"The bricks will be used for a pathway with five or six bronze plaques commemorating the various services, and individuals

Matters of Opinion

Up, up and away

The Bethlehem football team proved its critics wrong last Friday night by trouncing defending Section II champion Troy 34-6 in the Class AA Super Bowl.

The Eagles were considered underdogs, despite owning a better record than the Flying Horses. That may have been due to Troy's reputation of winning Sectional championships as much as it was due to Bethlehem's lack of title game appearances. The last Bethlehem team to reach the Super Bowl was the 1978 squad, which lost to Bishop Maginn 28-0.

That perception changed after running back Pat Heenan, who rushed for 216 yards and three touchdowns in the game, broke off a 50-yard gain on Bethlehem's first play from scrimmage. Heenan scored on a 1-yard run a short time later to give the Eagles a 7-6 lead, and they never looked back.

Heenan wasn't the only star for Bethlehem, though. Quarterback Mark Bulger completed 6 of 11 passes for 83 yards and a touchdown, and defensive ends Brian Geurtze and John Cameron applied heavy pressure on Troy's backfield all night.

This group of Eagles, which includes 26 seniors, now gets the chance to do what no other Bethlehem football team has ever had the opportunity to do — win a state title. The road figures to be tough, with top-ranked North Rockland (Section I) possibly awaiting the winner of Saturday night's regional game between the Eagles and Newburgh Free Academy (Section IX).

But if last Friday night is any indication, these Eagles are up to the challenge.

Seniors need shots

The flu can be debilitating and even deadly. About 3,000 New Yorkers, in fact, die as a result of the flu each year, according to the state Health Department.

The DOH is conducting a media campaign to alert senior citizens and other high-risk individuals about the importance of vaccinations against the flu and pneumococcal disease.

If you are age 65 or older, it is very important to get a flu shot. If you have elderly parents, make sure they arrange to get their shots, since they are more vulnerable to complications of flu.

The DOH flu information hotline can be reached at 1-800-342-9871. It can help callers locate the nearest flu clinic. More information is available on the state influenza Web site at www.flu.state.ny.us.

Individual who have been exposed to someone with influenza should contact their doctor immediately to determine if antiviral drugs could be helpful.

Use Smokeout to kick habit

By LISA BONACQUIST-CURRIN

The writer is regional director of tobacco control for the American Cancer Society.

Twenty-five years ago, the American Cancer Society started the Great American Smokeout as an annual day to spotlight the dangers of smoking and challenge the country to stop using tobacco. This important milestone gives us an opportunity to renew our pledge to conquer lung cancer, help smokers make the important decision to quit and support them in their efforts.

Thousands of people will try to stop smoking on Thursday, Nov. 15, the Great American Smokeout. Many will quit for good. But the power of tobacco addiction will make it more difficult for others.

Stress and smoking

We are all faced with varying degrees of stress on a daily basis. Unfortunately, people turn to smoking as a familiar way to deal with those feelings. Recent world events have placed many at an increased risk for engaging or re-engaging in unhealthy behaviors like smoking.

While some smokers report feeling relaxed after inhaling, this false sense of control is no different than taking a 'hit' from other dangerous drugs. It won't be long before your body begins to react to the toxins in nicotine. Smoking is an addiction like any other, and it must be dealt with thoughtfully.

Help is a phone call away

To quit successfully and permanently, most people need support. It's not just one simple act. Quitting involves four crucial steps: making the decision to quit, setting a date to quit, dealing with withdrawal and maintaining a smoke-free life.

The American Cancer Society provides a variety of progressive, science-based resources that can double your chances of quitting successfully. By calling our hotline at 1-800-ACS-2345, you can:

Talk with trained specialists about your decision to quit.

Receive printed material designed specifically for where you are in the quitting process.

Learn about options to increase your success.

Receive information on over-the-counter and prescription therapies (patch, gum, inhaler, nasal spray, and tablets) that might help.

Making a difference

While helping smokers quit is

a priority, every community must work to help America kick its addiction to tobacco on other fronts:

Research — to better understand the health effects of smoking and ways to quit.

Advocacy — to establish smoke-free public places and public programs that impact all levels of government, schools, and workplaces.

Community Outreach — Thousands of volunteers dedicated to eliminating cancer and spreading awareness are making a difference in communities everywhere.

The past 25 years have seen tremendous strides in reversing attitudes toward smoking, understanding the addiction and learning how to help people quit. But, too many lives are still lost to this very preventable cause of cancer.

An estimated 47 million US adults currently smoke. Tobacco use can cause lung cancer, which remains the leading cause of cancer deaths for both men and women, as well as other cancers, heart disease and respiratory diseases.

Each year, smoking is responsible for one of five deaths. Overall, the annual American death toll from tobacco-related causes is estimated at well over 400,000.

If you are ready to quit, get help. If you know a smoker who wants to quit, support them in this effort. For information about how to quit, call the American Cancer Society at 1-800-2345 or visit our Web site: at www.cancer.org.

Smoking cessation tips

- For the first few days after you quit, spend as much free time as possible in places where smoking is prohibited — libraries, museums, theaters, churches.

- Drink large quantities of water and fruit juice.

- Avoid alcohol, coffee and other beverages that you associate with smoking.

- Strike up a conversation instead of a match for a cigarette.

- If you miss the sensation of having a cigarette in your hand, play with something else — a pencil, a paperclip, a marble.

- If you miss having something in your mouth, try toothpicks, cinnamon sticks or celery.

- Avoid temptation by staying away from situations you associate with pleasurable smoking.

- Find new habits and develop a non-smoking environment around you.

- Stress constructive, not destructive, thinking to lessen discomfort.

- Avoid resuming the habit by anticipating future situations/crises that might lead to smoking, and assert your reasons for not giving in.

- Take deep rhythmic breaths similar to smoking to relax.

- Remember your goal and that the fact that the urge will eventually pass.

- Think positive thoughts and avoid negative ones.

- Brush your teeth.

- Do brief exercise (isometrics, pushups, deep-knee bends, walk up a flight of stairs or touch your toes).

- Call a supportive friend.

- Compile a list of "urge activities" and start at the top when it hits.

- Eat several small meals. This maintains constant blood sugar levels and helps prevent the urge to smoke. Avoid sugary or spicy foods that trigger a desire for cigarettes.

- Above all, reward yourself. Plan to do something fun for doing your best.

- Keep oral substitutes handy: carrots, pickles, apples, celery, raisins or gum.

- Take 10 deep breaths, hold the last one while lighting a match. Exhale slowly and blow out the match. Pretend it is a cigarette and put it out in an ashtray.

- Take a shower or bath if possible.

- Learn to relax quickly and deeply. Make yourself limp, visualize a soothing, pleasing situation, and get away from it all for a moment. Concentrate on that peaceful image and nothing else.

- Light incense or a candle, instead of a cigarette.

- Never allow yourself to think that 'one won't hurt,' because it will.

Natural gas users should realize price reduction

Because of a decline in wholesale market prices, Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. forecasts its residential natural gas customers can expect to experience a reduction of about 20 percent in their heating bills during the coming winter compared with last winter, assuming comparable weather and barring unforeseen circumstances in the market.

"Market supply-and-demand forces have brought wholesale costs down from last year's record-high levels closer to the prices of the previous few years, and a freeze on NiMo's delivery charges remains in effect," said Joseph T. Ash, vice president of gas delivery.

He noted that NiMo does not profit from the cost of gas supply, passing those costs through to customers without markup. The company can earn a return only on the delivery portion of the bill — the cost to maintain the gas system and provide emergency response and other customer services. Pipeline transportation charges — the cost of bringing gas from where it is produced to NiMo's service territory — form the third component of a bill and are expected to remain stable.

As part of its proposed merger with National Grid, a freeze on NiMo's gas delivery charges would be extended by a year to August 2004.

Based on current wholesale commodity projections, a typical residential customer who paid about $900 in gas heating costs during the last November through April heating season should pay about $720 for the same amount of gas this winter.

For an entire year's consumption from Nov. 1 to Oct. 31, a typical customer's total gas bill is projected to decline to about $975 in 2001-02 from about $1,175 in the current year.

Ash said NiMo is mindful that

- Conservation — Install sufficient insulation and weather stripping.

- Have appliances inspected, especially furnaces and water heaters. Change furnace filters regularly. Consider purchasing a set-back thermostat.

- Replace aging appliances — Newer furnaces and water heaters use fuel more efficiently. High-efficiency units may cost more to buy, but they will save money in the long run.

- Billing — Niagara Mohawk's budget billing program is a convenient payment plan that helps by spreading payments out more evenly across the year. This is particularly helpful to individuals on fixed incomes.

- Choosing another supplier — NiMo customers have the option of purchasing their natural gas supply from a number of qualified energy service companies. This allows customers to choose among plans best suited to their needs.

- Special assistance programs — Help is available for customers who have difficulty paying their heating bills. The Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program provides financial assistance to income-eligible applicants.

Households receiving public assistance, Supplemental Security Income (SSI) or food stamps are the most likely to be eligible for HEAP.

This federal program opens Oct. 1 and is available on a first-come, first-served basis to all utility customers.

Association touts benefits of using oil for heating

According to the New York Oil Heating Association (NYOHA), your local oil dealer may not be able to control world energy prices, but he can help you make sense of how things work, so you can make the best decisions for your family.

If you have any questions at all, don't hesitate to contact your local dealer. He's there for you.

Some frequently asked questions from consumers are:

Why aren't oil prices regulated?

They used to be, but this led to inflated prices and artificial shortages. Now, while prices can fluctuate sharply under a free market, they have generally stayed much lower and supplies have not been a problem.

How are oil prices set?

Heating fuels like oil, natural gas, propane and electricity are traded on the commodities market which goes up and down like the stock market. By far, the biggest influence on the cost of heating oil is the price of its raw material, crude oil.

What can cause rapid price changes?

The market responds immediately to any situation that might affect supply or demand, including unexpectedly cold or warm weather, supply interruptions or excess production. These changes are immediately reflected in the wholesale price your dealer pays for the oil.

Do dealers profit during price changes?

No. When world oil prices rise, it doesn't mean they get a bigger share of it. It's similar to when orange juice prices go up because of an early frost. The local grocery doesn't make the extra money.

Who does make the money?

Anyone (including major oil crystal ball, dealers base their deliveries on customer needs and the most efficient truck routes.

Can companies in the same area charge different prices?

Heating oil is a very competitive business. At any time, you may find people who are priced either higher or lower than your dealer. The difference depends on:

- The quality of the fuel and certainty of supply.
- The quality of service they provide.
- The payment terms, delivery options and equipment repair service they offer.

After wholesale prices drop, do retail prices follow?

It depends on how much oil your local dealer bought or stored at a higher price and how quickly he sells it due to cold weather. It also depends on how much of the original wholesale increase he absorbed to cushion his customers when prices went up.

Here are some more facts about oil heat:

- Oil heat systems are 16 percent more efficient than gas heat systems, according to the Department of Energy.
- Oil heat makes faster hot water than gas heat.
- Fuel oil has been less expensive than natural gas for seven straight years.
- Home heating oil burns so cleanly it's not subject to any clean air requirements.
- Residential oil burner particulate emissions are now approaching near-zero levels.
- Oil heat consistently emerges as the better value for New York state homeowners, according to the Energy Research Center.
- Converting to gas heat can cost at least $3,500, but upgrading to a new oil system costs considerably less and can save you 25 percent in heating and hot water costs.
- Fuel oil usage is measured in familiar gallons; gas heating measures its usage in "therms."
- With oil heat, you can enjoy personalized service from a fuel provider that knows you and your heating system.

Effective Jan. 1, New York state is offering a Fuel Oil Tank Replacement Income Tax Credit. Have you been thinking about replacing your existing below ground, above ground or basement oil tank? There's no better time than now.

Eligible residents who replace an existing heating oil tank with a new oil tank will receive a $500 personal income tax credit from New York state.

Though the possibility that your tank could experience a problem is remote, if you've ever thought of upgrading, now is your chance.

Simply upgrade your tank to a new residential fuel oil model and you can enjoy the benefits of this great deal. Should you choose an above ground model, let your oil dealer show you the wide variety of tank enclosures available today.

When can you take advantage of this money-saving offer?

Mark your calendar — the $500 tax credit may be taken for oil tank replacements completed during 2001, 2002 and 2003.

companies, refiners, speculators and others) who was either smart or lucky enough to have secured oil before the prices started to rise. However, these same people would have lost money had prices dropped.

Do dealers wait to deliver until prices are highest?

It's tempting to think that, especially if you've just gotten a high-priced delivery. But remember, your local dealer has no way to tell what will happen to wholesale prices from week to week. Until they can find a better

Wenzl lecture on deck Sunday

In the winter of 2000-2001, excavation for the Albany Parking Authority's new garage uncovered artifacts from the city's early history. Hartgen Archaeological Associates conducted a dig on the site, which was fenced off for public observation.

The library's 12th annual Wenzl lecture examines some of their finds in "Ode to Rum: an 18th-century distillery on the outskirts of historic Albany" Sunday, Nov. 18, at 2 p.m. Justin DiVirgilio of the Hartgen firm will be the speaker.

Join us for a look back. The Friends of Bethlehem Public Library will host a reception following the lecture, which is free and open to the public. The lecture series honors the late Dr. Theodore Wenzl, educator and longtime library board member. To register, call 439-9314 and press "2" for adult programs.

Post-Sept. 11 help

On Tuesday, Nov. 20 at 7 p.m., a psychologist and a social worker will present "Helping Children and Teens Cope with Traumatic News."

Steven Marcal and Margaret Kelder will answer questions of concern to parents and others who care for children.

To register, call 439-9314 and press "4" for youth services.

Holiday closings

The library will close at 5 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 21 for the Thanksgiving holiday. The library will reopen from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 23. Regular hours will resume the following Saturday.

Family storytime meets tonight at 7 p.m. to experiment with Go Figure cooking.

Two other family programs are scheduled for Nov. 23 and 25. Open viewing for the exhibit is on Mondays from 5 to 8:30 p.m. and appointments can be made for other times.

Call 765-2791 for information or pick up a brochure at the library.

Remember there are some location changes for ongoing library programs for the duration of the Go Figure exhibit.

referees blew the play dead once Heenan was tackled — before Bulger threw the ball.

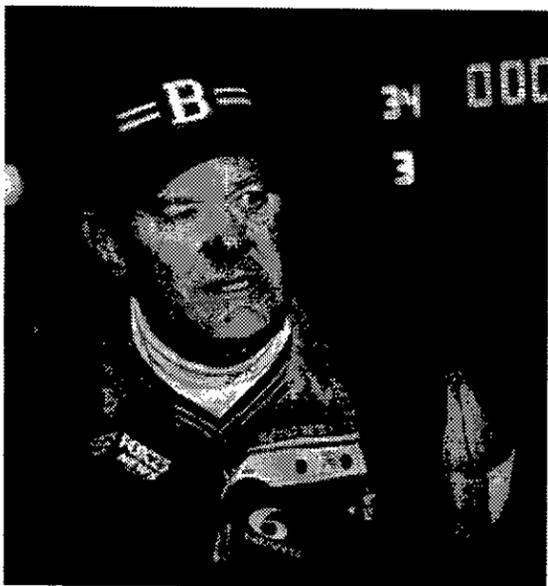

"That could have been monstrous, but we turned right around and scored," Sodergren said.

Bulger got his touchdown pass on Bethlehem's second series. He threw a high spiral down the right sideline to John Cameron, who made the catch for a 28-yard scoring play midway through the second quarter. Bulger missed the extra point, though, to make the score 13-6.

"We were able to mix up the pass and run," Sodergren said. "I didn't know if we could do it, but once I saw we could run the ball early on, I knew we could start mixing the pass and the run."

Troy (7-3) made a push to get back on the scoreboard late in the second quarter. Three long runs by Lou Pastore brought the ball to Bethlehem's 30-yard line with less than 10 seconds left. The Flying Horses then faked a field goal, but holder Anthony Casale's pass was intercepted by Heenan as time expired in the first half.

Brendan Hughes gave Bethlehem good field position to open the second half when he returned Troy's kickoff to the

Coach John Sodergren

Eagles' 41-yard line. A holding penalty pushed Bethlehem back to its 31, but three runs by Heenan gave the Eagles a fourth-down-and-one at midfield.

Rather than punt, Sodergren put the ball in Heenan's hands again. The senior found a hole on the left side of the line and broke away for a 50-yard touchdown run to give the Eagles a 20-6 lead.

"I hit the hole as hard as I could to get that one yard, and the left side opened up for me," Heenan said. Troy's defense in the dust for a 23-yard touchdown run to make the score 27-6 with 8:13 left.

Meanwhile, Troy was self-destructing under the pressure of Bethlehem's defense. A potential scoring drive by the Flying Horses was halted early in the fourth quarter when Pastore fumbled the ball as he was hit at his own 45-yard line. The Eagles failed to capitalize on the turnover, but they got another chance two minutes later when a bad snap on a Troy punt gave Bethlehem the ball at the Flying Horses' 23.

Heenan made the most of Bethlehem's field position. This time, he found a hole along the right side of the line and left performance, while Cameron and Brian Geurtze led Bethlehem's defense with several tackles apiece.

"We had a lot of preparation," Geurtze said. "We had a lot of plays (in practice). We just needed to stay low and keep moving."

The Eagles advance to Saturday's regional playoff game against Newburgh Free Academy at Dietz Stadium in Kingston. The winner of that game advances to the state semifinals the following weekend in Kingston.

"We're just taking it one game at a time and prepare for (NFA)," Heenan said.

Bulger completed 6 of 11 passes for 83 yards to go along with Heenan's 216-yard

Scotland following their defeat in the supervisor's contest: when the result was no longer in doubt, they abandoned their own election night gathering at The Crossings restaurant to cross Voorheesville Avenue and congratulate their Republican counterparts at the Legion Hall.

"This is the way it's done here," said outgoing Supervisor Martha Pofit, who joined the courtesy call. "We celebrate together after the dust settles."

When the dust had settled in the council race, Houghtaling's vote total of 1,626 led the field, with Gleason tallying 1,564 votes. Gleason won strong support in Voorheesville and New Salem, and Houghtaling polled solidly everywhere; he and fellow Democrat and former board member Edward Donohue, who finished with 1,390 votes, performed best in the south and east of the town. Republican first-time candidate Christian "Scott" Schaible garnered 1,223 to finish fourth. "Hey, it's a learning curve," he said afterward. "I'll have to stay involved in other ways."

Also re-elected, unopposed, were town Highway Superintendent Darrell Duncan with 2,065; receiver of taxes Marilyn Holmberg with 2,048; town clerk Diane Deschenes, 2,015; and town Justice Thomas Dolin with 1,980. All but Holmberg, a Republican, carried the endorsements of the Democratic, Independence and Conservative parties.

Pofit offered perspective on the modest turnout: "Fifty percent during an off year on a cold day," she said. "Not bad."

The outcome of the supervisor's race also casts next spring's village elections in Voorheesville in a new light—the first new mayor in 17 years and at least one new board member, as three of four trustees' seats are up for grabs.

There is widespread speculation that trustee and long time deputy mayor Jack Stevens, who will assume the mayor's post when Clark steps down in January, will seek a full term in March.

"He's been deputy mayor for a while and doing a great job," said Clark. "He's up to date on everything going on in the village, and he really carried the load for me while this (campaign) was going on. I hope he gets it."

With trustee Camille Jobin-Davis having been appointed last spring to fill the unexpired term of Harvey Huth, the remaining two years must be filled by election in March. Stevens' four-year term and that of incumbent Richard Berger also expire this spring.

Jobin-Davis has already announced she will seek election to a full board term, but Berger has not yet indicated his intentions. Trustee William Hotaling, elected in 2000, has two years remaining in his term.

at Picket Pottery, located at Delmar's Four Corners.

"They looked like something the kids could do," Salamone said. "We had one day when we made them, and the kids loved it. Every time they see somebody wearing one, they report it back to us."

Lisa David, owner of Picket Pottery, said she has made the stars for a long time, with the Fourth of July being the main time that she sells them.

"After Sept. 11, I felt awkward profiting from them," David said. "I put them out front for donations, and sold 100 at the shop." After Salamone had the idea of having the kids make them as a fund-raiser, David donated the clay and cookie cutters, and showed the teachers at the Early Learning Center how to make them.

"The kids cut and decorated them, and I fired them," David said. "They look different than mine, and each one is different and unique. You can't imagine what 600 pins looked like when they came out of the kiln—it was like a sea of blue stars."

David said she has done a lot of other fund-raisers with schools and other organizations, and this was one that she was pleased to do. "When you see them around town, it's a bond with people," David said. "It was great for the kids to be able to do something, and for a little amount of clay, they got a lot of profit."

The pins sold for three dollars each, and there are still a few for sale at area schools. Salamone estimated that so far, the pins have made $1,500.

"The teachers suggested we donate one dollar per pin to President Bush's Afghan children fund," Salamone said. "We will donate the other two dollars to a disaster relief fund."

Salamone said the ELC students had assisted with Slingerlands School's penny drive, but she wanted the kids to be able to actually do something themselves. "They know that a lot of people were hurt or might need things," Salamone said, "and this lets them help."

Bethlehem Auto Service

AUTO FACTS

by John Quirk

At the end of a lease

At the end of a lease there is the option of purchasing the vehicle in accordance with the previously agreed upon "residual value" amount (its expected market value). Most leases are "closed end" leases, which means that the residual value is not subject to change once it is agreed upon, regardless of what changes might take place in the marketplace. This presents a potential opportunity in that, if the vehicle has held its value, it can be purchased for a price that is under the prevailing market rate for a vehicle of its type. And, of course, those purchasing vehicles at the end of leases certainly know who the first owner was and how the vehicle was maintained. A properly maintained vehicle retains market value. Whether you own or lease, BETHLEHEM AUTO SERVICE can help keep your vehicle running smoothly. Locally owned and operated, we have earned a reputation for reliable auto service and reasonable rates. When you bring your vehicle to us, we review your driving patterns and then inspect the tires, brakes, battery and belts and hoses. Is your car ready for winter driving? Call 426-8414 to arrange a convenient appointment. We have a clean, comfortable waiting room and offer shuttle service when vehicles are left for repairs. We are located at 62 Hannay Lane in Glenmont off Rt. 9W behind Stone Ends. Business hours are Mon. - Fri., 7-6.

HINT: It is important to determine which models hold their value well before agreeing to lease with the intention of purchasing the vehicle at the end of the contract.

DerOhannesian. But Friday's recanvass turned up only minor discrepancies, according to Newkirk, who participated in the recanvass.

Fuller rolled up 7,346 votes in her unopposed bid for a fifth term as supervisor, second only to Sagendorph, with 7,381. Newkirk bested Parsons with 6,316 to 3,511.

Newkirk reported only a handful of write-in votes — "maybe 18 to 20" — for Fuller's unsuccessful primary opponent, Tim Gordon.

The Republican ticket, as a whole, posted strong pluralities in precincts in Glenmont, Selkirk and South Bethlehem, with the Democrats generally faring better in Delmar.

"Certainly South Bethlehem and Selkirk were extremely strong for me," said Marcelle. "I grew up there, and I think they understand my commitment to represent the southern end of town on issues like the Selkirk bypass."

Democratic party Chairman Matthew Clyne cited overall low turnout — below 50 percent and roughly 1,000 fewer voters than the last local election two years ago — and a "very low Democratic turnout" as the decisive factors.

"We're usually playing catchup ball unless we reach about 12,000 votes, and we didn't come anywhere close," Clyne said.

The lack of a hotly contested election countywide was a factor in that, he said, since county Sheriff James Campbell ran unopposed and county Clerk Thomas Clingan faced a relatively unknown opponent. But so was the lack of a candidate at the top of the town ticket.

"If there was one single factor we should have done that we didn't do, it would probably be running a supervisor candidate," he said. Fuller concurred: "Historically there's poorer turnout when there isn't a supervisor's race."

Of the board election, she said, "I was surprised, I guess, by the results. I thought the community would continue the incumbents back in office on the town board. I really didn't think Susan would lose. I thought she was a shoo-in." Equally surprising, she said, was Marcelle finishing ahead of both incumbents.

"Susan was a good board member and will be missed," she said. "But I look forward to working with Tom Marcelle."

Marcelle said he was "ecstatic, very grateful but very surprised" by his strong showing. He was particularly surprised, he said, to finish ahead of Lenhardt.

"One of the greatest things about this campaign was getting to know George Lenhardt on a personal basis," he said. "I'm looking forward more than I can say to serving with him on this board." Economic development, he said, will be "the focus."

Lenhardt said he was unperturbed finishing second. "Tom's a new face and people are therefore giving him the benefit of the doubt. When you're in office making decisions, you're never going to please everyone," he said, pronouncing himself "elated" with the outcome of "a very, very hard-fought campaign from my perspective. With all the new (residential) development in town, I literally had to knock on virtually every door. I felt emotionally drained with the whole thing."

The low turnout, however, was a disappointment. "I had hoped more people would show their patriotism and demonstrate what it means to be an American by getting out to vote," Lenhardt said. "I had hoped they would find it more important to be involved right now. Unfortunately, it looks like we're still moving in the wrong direction."

"I'm disappointed, of course, but I congratulate my opponents on their win," said Burns. "But the sentiment I'm hearing from everyone around town is they're shocked and surprised." The low turnout, lack of a supervisor candidate and "the lack of resources to fully communicate our strengths and our goals, and along with that, the seemingly unlimited resources of the Republicans" sealed her party's defeat, she said.

"The way I'm looking at it, we need to regroup, we need to rededicate ourselves to Democratic principles—equality of opportunity, open government and participation by all," she said. And, the party, she added, needs to better connect with younger voters and "make a better effort to raise more money" for campaigns.

"We chose an honest, grass-roots campaign of door-to-door, lots of shoe leather," she said. "Obviously, we came up short."

It is still too early to evaluate her own political future, but she remains publicly active, she said, in such commitments as her membership on the County Industrial Development Agency — and would not rule out a future run for public office.

Efforts to reach Munnely were unsuccessful.

One local Republican who did not fare well was Delmar funeral director Stephen Meyers, who was defeated in a four-way race for two county coroner's positions by Democratic incumbents William Loetterle and Paul Marra.

Good Samaritan Senior Living
by Lee Bormann

In Good Company

There is increasing evidence to show that older individuals can stay sharp as they age by surrounding themselves with those whom they love. A study of people in their seventies shows that a strong network of family and friends actually helps slow cognitive decline among seniors. In this respect, it isn't only the quantity of the ties that one maintains, but also the quality of those ties that seems to make a difference. The more emotional support and satisfaction people felt they derived from loved ones, the better their brains functioned as they aged. The reason may be that social interactions stimulate the mind, keeping people cognitively active. In addition, social interactions produce better stress responses and lower blood pressure.

Our lives go by so fast, and we spend so much time worrying and so little time establishing the kinds of relationships that can help sustain us. Friendships can form at any age if we keep our hearts open. At Good Samaritan Lutheran Health Care Center, 125 Rockefeller Road, Delmar, we help our residents stay connected to others through social activities and cultural events. Our residential community features assisted and independent living. Come see for yourself! Give us a call at 439-8116.

Local swimmers qualify for state championships

By ROB JONAS

Lindsay McKenna reminded everybody just how good of a swimmer she is.

The Voorheesville high school student qualified for the state meet in two events at last Saturday's Section II championship at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute's Robison Pool.

McKenna, who missed last year's meet due to tendonitis in her shoulder, won the 200-yard freestyle in a time of 1:55.35 and finished second in the 500 freestyle with a qualifying time of 5:15.50.

McKenna's efforts helped the Guilderland-Voorheesville swim team place ninth overall with 153 points, one point behind eighth-place Albany. Megan Vos also qualified for the state meet from Guilderville after placing second in the 100 backstroke with a time of 1:02.17.

Bethlehem, which is sending two swimmers and a diver to the state meet, placed fifth in the Class A team standings with 194 points.

Jen Rodgers won the diving competition with a score of 438.40 to lead the Lady Eagles. Becky Corson and Meredith Singer also qualified for the state meet. Corson placed third in the 100 butterfly with a time of 1:00.39, while Singer finished fifth in the 50 freestyle with a time of 24.90 seconds.

Guilderland-Voorheesville swimmer Lindsay McKenna stands on the podium after accepting the second-place patch in the 500-yard freestyle at last Saturday's Section II championships in Troy. McKenna won the 200 freestyle earlier in the day. Rob Jonas

Physically Speaking

by Nick Valenze, P.T.

A Woman's Vulnerability

The anterior cruciate ligament (ACL), one of the four stabilizing ligaments in the knee, can be injured due to a blow to the knee or twisting motion of the leg during sporting activities. Women are eight times more likely to sustain this injury than men, and there is now mounting evidence that hormonal activity may be a contributing factor. Recent research shows that a woman's risk of tearing her anterior cruciate ligament is eight times greater during ovulation than at other times of the month. This increased risk may be due to hormonal influences that occur on a neuromuscular level, affecting a woman's coordination and balance as well as the overall response of her muscles and tendons. As there are few forms of exercise which don't involve the use of your knees, it's important for women to seek diagnosis and treatment of knee pain or stiffness at the onset of the occurrence; waiting until the pain becomes severe increases your chances of sustaining permanent damage. If you have been injured due to accident or overuse, or have recently undergone surgery, ask your physician for a referral to our physical therapy practice. For more information about our services, which include ultrasound and massage, please call the number listed below.

Kuhn, Malinowski place at state championships

By ROB JONAS

Rob Kuhn refused to be swallowed up by the pack he was running with.

The Bethlehem high school senior finished 21st overall in the boys Class A race at last Saturday's New York State Public High School Athletic Association cross country meet in Buffalo.

"I thought I did pretty well," said Kuhn, who ran in his first state meet. "Twenty-first was pretty good, considering the competition."

"He's come a long way," Bethlehem boys coach Dave Banas said. "Through a lot of hard work, he's come a long way."

Kuhn was part of a tight pack of runners that included Amsterdam's Jaime Julia. The difference between Kuhn, who completed the course in a time of 16:44.7, and Julia, who placed 18th, was 1.1 seconds.

"It was a pretty significant pack that I kept my eye on," Kuhn said. "I just tried to stick with them."

Kuhn was one of four local runners to participate in the state meet. Bethlehem's Emily Malinowski was 44th in the girls Class A race, and Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk's Dave Whydra was 31st in the boys Class B race. Slingerlands resident Anne Hessberg, a member of Holy Names' cross country team, finished 43rd in the girls Class B race.

Malinowski completed the course in a time of 20:10.01 to help the Section II team win the inter-sectional title with a score of 125 points.

"She felt a little bit of a cramp, and I think Emily is a team runner," Bethlehem girls coach Jack Rightmyer said. "I think she runs on emotion."

Whydra, who had a time of 17:24.4, was the fourth Section II runner to cross the finish line in the boys Class B division. Section II finished second in the inter-sectional team standings with 441 points. Hessberg's time of 20:41.9 was third-best on a Holy Names team that finished second in Class B with 88 points.

Kuhn, Malinowski and the rest of Bethlehem's girls cross country team will travel to Poughkeepsie Saturday for the Federation meet.

For the Lady Eagles, the invitation caps a season in which they were ranked among the top 20 Class A teams in the state.

"Our goal at the beginning of the season was to be ranked in the top 10 or top 15 and go to the Federation meet, and we've accomplished every goal," Rightmyer said.

Bethlehem was invited at the last minute after Holy Names dropped out of the meet, and Rightmyer hopes his team will be ready to take on the best teams in the state.

"I actually think we have a shot at being in the top 10," Rightmyer said. "We've been competing against the top teams in the state every meet" in the Suburban Council.

Bethlehem will attempt to join Saratoga, Colonie Central, Columbia and Shaker near the top of the team standings. Saratoga won the state Class A title, while Colonie finished a close second to the Blue Streaks at the Section II championships Nov. 2.

"It wouldn't surprise me if the Suburban Council has four of the top five positions," Rightmyer said.

Kuhn is also hoping to have a solid performance at the Federation meet.

"I'm pretty confident," Kuhn said. "Our section won the meet, so you know you're running with the best in the state anyway. So if I can finish 21st at the state meet, I think I can do the same thing at the Federation meet."

Bethlehem holds gymnastics clinic

The Bethlehem gymnastics team will hold a clinic Saturday, Dec. 1, from noon to 2 p.m. at Bethlehem Central High School.

Basic fundamentals in vaulting, floor exercise, balance beam and uneven bars will be taught to girls in grades one through five during the clinic.

The cost is $15 per person, with proceeds benefiting the high school team.

Simple smiles create healthy living

A simple smile can actually change your life and improve your health. Although this statement may seem unwarranted to some of you, there is proof to its validity: Current research supports this that if depressed persons force themselves to smile, their mood will improve allowing them to feel better and allowing the people around them to stimulate further good will.

The lack of a smile can often be linked with an insecurity of appearance. Broken or discolored teeth are often reasons that people choose not to smile and should be considered for repair not only for appearance purposes but also for change in attitude and lifestyle.

Of course, it is not suggested that poor appearance is the only reason that people may not smile, and it is strongly advised that if a feeling of sorrow and depression seems to dominate your life, you should seek advice from your physician. However, please keep in mind that by improving the appearance of your teeth, you can become a happier and healthier person.

Bethlehem police probe Cayuga Court blaze

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The cause of a fire that gutted a residence in North Bethlehem last week remains under investigation by Bethlehem police.

The fire at 9 Cayuga Court, the home of 45-year-old Susan Ungerman, was reported at 10:19 a.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 6. Firefighters from the Elmwood Park Fire Co. in North Bethlehem were first on the scene, and found the upper floor and attic of the two-story house fully involved.

Units from Delmar, Slingerlands and Albany fire companies also responded to mutual aid calls at the scene, and assisted in bringing the fire, driven by brisk winds, under control by early afternoon.

The interior of the structure was severely damaged and the upper floor, attic and roof destroyed. Bethlehem police investigating the fire determined that it began in a section of wall in the rear corner of the home's garage, and spread through the wall to the attic and roof.

A cause of the fire has yet to be determined, but police do not believe it to be suspicious in origin, according to Sgt. Joseph Sleurs, who participated in the initial investigation.

Proctor's celebrates 75 years entertaining area audiences

By JOHN BRENT

The doors of Proctor's Theatre in downtown Schenectady first opened in December 1926 as one of the premiere motion picture showcases of the Capital District. The facility cost more than $1.5 million dollars (a far more impressive sum in its day than now) and like its rival picture palaces of the time part of the show was the venue itself. Showplaces so spacious and ornate with screens so large that the movie going experience began with the arrival at the theater before the movie actually began.

One can imagine the people from Schenectady and surrounding areas going to see silent films like "What Price Glory?" or Lillian Gish in "The Scarlet Letter" or "Ben-Hur" with Ramon Novarro and Frances X. Bushman.

The theater continued to flourish during with the coming of sound films and during the 1930s and 40s and only with the advent of TV in the 1950s and a generally declining Schenectady economy did Proctor's fall on hard times.

By the 1970s the theater was taken over by the city and was closed. Proctor's seemed destined to go the way of so many other showplace theaters of its era — destroyed by the wrecking ball, but a group of concerned citizens formed the Arts Center & Theatre of Schenectady to save the institution from destruction. Proctor's was purchased from the city for the sum of $1.

In 1979, the theater received listing on the National Register of Historic Places. After some much-needed renovations, Proctor's reopened with a sold-out performance by magician Harry Blackstone Jr., whose father had played at the theater several decades earlier.

Proctor's continues as one of the area's most attractive venues for theater, movies and the performing arts.

This year Proctor's will be celebrating the 75th anniversary of the theater and while the actual anniversary date is the last week in December the festive note for the three-quarter century mark will be enjoyed throughout the 2001-02 season.

And this year's season is something to celebrate. A wide range of shows brings to the region classic Broadway musicals from the past and present — from George and Ira Gershwin's late 1920s show "Strike Up the Band" to Andrew Lloyd Webber's more recent smash hit "Cats," some of the best of Broadway will be appearing courtesy of the touring companies on the Proctor's stage:

"Guys and Dolls," one of the most popular musicals of the 1950s will be opening at Proctor's on Nov. 27.

Originally envisioned by the producers as a serious romantic story along the lines of "South Pacific." Composer and lyricist Frank Loesser worked with 11 librettists before it was finally decided to make the project a comedy and Abe Burrows, a radio/TV writer with no prior theater credits was brought on board.

Based on Damon Runyon's short story "The Idyll of Miss Sarah Brown," "Guys and Dolls" revolves around Nathan Detroit, the organizer of the oldest established permanent floating crap game in New York, who bets fellow gambler Sky Masterson that he can't make the next girl he sees fall in love with him. The next girl he sees is Sarah Brown, a no-nonsense Salvation Army reformer who has absolutely no interest in a romance with the shifty gambler. Sky has to try to wear down Sarah's resistance even as he finds himself falling in love with her in spite of himself.

"Guys and Dolls" opened on Nov. 24, 1950, and enjoyed a run of 1,200 performances.

Runyon, created a stylized picture of the New York City underworld of the 1930s complete with gangsters, gun molls, chorus girls, grifters, gamblers, beggars and other colorful characters complete with their catchy slang and "honor among thieves" code of ethics. "Guys and Dolls" succeeds in capturing the Runyon style and the flavor of his big city milieu.

The production of "Guys and Dolls" at Proctor's stars renown dancer Maurice Hines as gambler Nathan Detroit with a cast that includes Brian Sutherland, Diane Sutherland and Alexandra Foucard.

The show, which is on a tour of 40 cities in the U.S., will be presented at Proctor's Tuesday through Saturday, Nov. 27 through Dec 1, at 8 p.m. and on Sunday, Dec. 2, at 7 p.m. There will be matinee performances on Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 1 and 2, at 2 p.m. Ticket prices range from $42 to $49 for the weekend shows and $39 to $46 for the Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evening performances.

To reserve tickets or for information, call the box office at 346-6204 or visit the Web site at www.proctors.org.

Webber's "Cats" will be presented Tuesday through Thursday, Jan. 22 through 24. The Gershwin show, "Strike Up the Band" will be on stage for one show only on Friday, Feb. 8.

Other Broadway hits to be presented this season include "The Music Man" (Tuesday through Sunday, Feb. 12-17), "Annie Get Your Gun" (Saturday and Sunday, March 16 and 17) and "Kiss Me Kate" (Tuesday through Sunday, April 23 through 28).

In addition to the Broadway musicals, Proctor's will be presenting touring dance and ballet companies and several big name entertainers like Maurice Hines stars in "Guys and Dolls" presented at Proctor's Theater beginning Tuesday, Nov. 27.

Engelbert Humperdinck (Wednesday, March 13, at 8 p.m.); Bob Newhart (Tuesday, April 9 at 8 p.m.) and Debbie Reynolds (Saturday, May 11 at 8 p.m.). The Three Irish Tenors will appear on Tuesday, March 12, at 8 p.m.

This Saturday, Nov. 17, "Burn the Floor," a popular touring dance show will be presented at 8 p.m.

Featuring a variety of dance styles from rumba to waltzes with jive, jitterbug and swing, the routines are performed by championship dancers from 15 different countries. "Burn the Floor" combines the intensity of rock 'n' roll with the sophisticated elegance of ballroom dancing.

Tickets for the show range from $26 to $34.

Other dance companies appearing during the season will be Grigorovich Ballet Company

As one of several holiday shows, Proctor's will present "The Nutcracker" on Dec. 8 and 9.

British musician has dual role at ASO concert

By DEV TOBIN

The Albany Symphony Orchestra will present a rare kind of program Saturday at Troy Savings Bank Music Hall.

The orchestra will play a modern composer's work (not unusual at all for the ASO) and that composer will also be the featured soloist for the evening.

The concert will open with the symphony playing John McCabe's "Red Leaves" and McCabe will follow as the pianist for William Schuman's "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra."

One of the leading British musicians of his generation, McCabe composed "Red Leaves" as a miniature tone poem, inspired by the fall foliage he saw during a trip to New England.

The Schuman piece will be recorded, part of a complete Schuman disk that the ASO will finish recording this year for release in 2002, according to ASO

General Manager Sharon Walsh.

Rounding out the program is Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. 6: Pathétique," one of Music Director David Alan Miller's "absolute personal favorites."

In his notes on the "painfully beautiful, brooding" symphony, Miller says, "It is hard not to think of the work as an autobiographical statement prefiguring Tchaikovsky's own death," which occurred nine days after he conducted the premiere of "Symphony No. 6" in 1893.

Indeed, Miller states that Tchaikovsky "once described his plan for the work as being a depiction of life, ending obviously with death."

Miller especially notes the symphony's final movement, "one of the most achingly tragic slow movements of all times."

The concert will be at 8 p.m. Tickets are $17, $29 and $36. Free parking is available near the music hall. For information, call 465-4663.

John McCabe

"The Music Man" will be on stage at Proctor's in Feb., 2002.

Temple Israel craft fair to show solidarity with Big Apple

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Columbus Avenue on New York City's Upper West Side is a cornucopia of delights during the fall and winter seasons. The smells of roasting chestnuts and big soft pretzels waft from corner street vendors, fresh flowers fill the outdoor stands of grocers, and unique gifts and goods lure shoppers into boutiques.

To show its solidarity with the city that never sleeps, Temple Israel is having more than your average craft and holiday fair this coming Sunday, Nov. 18.

"We wanted to try to replicate the ambience of the Upper West Side, and show our solidarity with New York City," said Faye Silton, director of Temple Israel's education center. "We borrowed the theme of 'Take Back the Night' from young women trying to stem the tide of sexual assault, and adapted it to the feelings following Sept. 11. We want to take back New York."

To try to rekindle the excitement that Capital District residents have always felt about visiting New York City, Temple Israel's "Meet Me On the Upper, Upper West Side," will offer events and goods to replicate those offered on Manhattan's Upper West Side. A variety of foods like those offered in New York will be available, including those famous chestnuts and pretzels.

"We'll also have Chinese food, Middle Eastern food, and eastern European food," Silton said. "We'll be cooking it ourselves, so it should be really wonderful. The aromas will be irresistible." There will be music throughout the day, and hands-on crafts that kids can make and enjoy.

There will be flower sellers, and more than 21 crafters offering fine, hand-crafted gifts. Since the idea grew out of Temple Israel's annual book fair celebrating Jewish Book Month, there will be multi-cultural books, Judaica, and other media, including CDs.

Barbara Diamond Goldin, the author of many children's books, including Mountains of Blintzes, and Cakes and Miracles, will be on hand to autograph her books, and will speak during the day. Storytellers will also weave their magical web throughout the event.

"The only thing we're lacking are the Korean nail artists you find on every corner of the Upper West Side," Silton said. Proceeds from the day will benefit Temple Israel's education department, a supplemental school children in kindergarten through grade 12, with a focus on Jewish education. Part of the proceeds will also go to the American Red Cross.

"At our synagogue, we've been saying extra prayers, and hosting speakers to discuss Sept. 11," Silton said. "But we wanted to do something grass-roots, to make us feel comfortable with each other, and meet together in a safe and enjoyable place. We didn't know what to call it, and a friend suggested 'Meet Me on the Upper, Upper West Side.'"

The day-long event will take place at on Sunday, Nov. 18, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Temple Israel, at 600 New Scotland Ave., across from St. Peter's Hospital. There's no admission fee, and plenty of parking.

"This is our first venture into this kind of thing, and we're very excited about it," Silton said. "We want this to be for the community, to have a wonderful time."

We wanted to try to replicate the ambience of the Upper West Side, and show our solidarity with New York City.
