Town board declares water emergency

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The Bethlehem town board last Wednesday declared a water emergency in response to the continuing decline of the town's Vly Creek Reservoir in the face of drought conditions.

Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor told the board that the reservoir last week dipped below 60 percent of its seasonal average capacity and 28 percent of its overall volume.

Something's going to go dry in the night if we don't do something.

Bruce Secor

"Our ability to produce water in our own water plant falls off as the reservoir level gets this low," he said. "The reservoir was built back in the 1960s, and it has never been this low before. Something's going to go dry in the night if we don't do something."

The emergency declaration clears the way for Public Works to seek reductions and conservation measures from its customers and additional sources of supply to address the shortage.

The town's largest water customer, Selkirk Cogen, agreed last Thursday to an immediate short term reduction in its daily usage of about 2 million gallons a day (MGD) — almost a third of all water consumed in the water district in the winter months — by half a million gallons. That puts a significant dent in the 800,000-gallon-a-day deficit Secor projected to the town board.

Secor said Cogen would accelerate a planned maintenance shutdown of some of its steam generating capacity, and utilize more recycled coolant water from the nearby GE Plastics plant.

Secor also opened discussions with Watervliet's city manager about a possible future direct pipeline connection between Vly Creek and the Watervliet Reservoir in Guiderland. And he said he will file applications this week with appropriate state agencies for an emergency permit to draw surface water from the Hudson River for treatment at the town's Clapper Road plant. If the town obtains such a permit, it will institute boil-water orders and offer interim bottled water to the score of residential customers served by Clapper Road.

Secor said the shortage will not be long-term. Under last May's settlement agreement with Earth Tech Environment and Infrastructure, a litigant in the town's lawsuit over the Clapper Road plant's lackluster performance, contractors are preparing to drill additional wells to improve the plant's output to at least 6 MGD.

"A year from now, this picture will change dramatically," Secor said. "If the new plant is up and running taking care of the industrial side, we will be able to look at the residential side differently."

In the meantime, he said, "If we have a wet spring, then the whole problem goes away. If we have a mild spring, we probably have this problem lingering through the summer. If we have a drought continue, we've got real trouble."

Secor said he will seek written conservation plans from the town's largest industrial customers, as well as institutional users like nursing care facilities and the Bethlehem Central School District.

Public Works will also request conservation by residential customers in first-quarter bills being sent in January, as well as mailings to residential users normally billed in February and March.

Among other emergency measures, the town building department will temporarily prohibit installation of new lawn-irrigation systems.

Councilwoman Doris Davis also raised the possibility of a short-term residential-development moratorium, and higher water rates.

Board members split on new planner

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The Bethlehem town board kicked off 2002 with a lengthy agenda on Wednesday, Jan. 9, of organizational details, routine appointments and a surprise split vote on a new appointee to the town planning board.

Howard B. Engel won a seven-year appointment to the planning board, replacing outgoing member Patrick Reed. Board members Doris Davis and Daniel Plummer joined Supervisor Sheila Fuller in voting in Engel's favor — but in an unusual departure from the general practice, the board's newest member, Thomas Marcelle, and its longest-serving, the recently re-elected George Lenhardt, each proposed candidates of their own for the vacancy and voted against Engel.

The appointment of Engel, a lifelong Selkirk resident and longtime teacher and administrator in the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk school district, to fill the planning board vacancy sparked an unexpectedly emotional debate.

He was interviewed for the position by Fuller just two days before, though several other board members contacted him privately before the board meeting. Only one other candidate for the position, three-year Delmar resident, state and legislative employee Jeffrey Perez, was formally interviewed by the board, at an executive session on Dec. 31 to discuss the appointment.

All of the board members, including both Marcelle and Lenhardt as well as outgoing board member Susan Burns, participated in the Dec. 31 interview — and agreed to continue searching for another candidate, Fuller said.

"The board had agreed (on the 31st) that it should be somebody from the south end of town," said Fuller, noting that the departing Reed was the lone member of the planning body who resided in that area. With proposals on the planning board's forthcoming agenda affecting the area, including the controversial Waste Management facility — which recently submitted a site plan application for review to the town planning department — Fuller said she viewed such representation as crucial.

At the board meeting, both Plummer and Davis echoed that view.

"He represents a part of the community that is not otherwise represented on the planning board," Davis said.

Plummer characterized him as "an immense asset to the community in that regard," particularly in view of the unzoned character of much of the southern end of town.

"It's my view that it's time to zone that," Plummer said, and the planning board, he added, will play a key role in future discussion of that.

But Marcelle, who called Engel "a man of high integrity, who comes from the southern part of town, who knows the issues down there and certainly can represent the concerns of his neighbors," then proposed another candidate — the IDA last April on the proposal, but no further action had been taken on the project until a request this month by Malm to proceed with payment-in-lieu of taxes (PILOT) and lease agreements. Those agreements concern the construction of the project's first building, just under 21,000 square feet intended for another Malm-related business, Pittsfield News Co.

Malm's attorney Paul Goldman, who along with owner Eitan Evan was present at the IDA meeting last week, said the projected cost of this first phase of construction would be between $900,000 and $1 million.

The agreements, approved at a meeting on the IDA on Wednesday, Jan. 9, authorize the agency's participation in the purchase, equipping and leasing of the site. The standard 10-year PILOT adopted grants Pittsfield exemptions from various real estate and other taxes related to the building's construction, including mortgage-recording taxes and sales taxes on equipment and supplies

IDA OKs Glenmont project

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

"It's been a bit of a long road," declared Bethlehem Industrial Development Agency (IDA) chairman Michael Tucker as the IDA approved on Wednesday, Jan. 9, a long-awaited agreement with a private company to help construct up to 95,000 square-feet of office and warehouse space in Glenmont.

The proposal was first submitted to the agency in August 2000 by Malm Realty, owner of a 15-acre parcel off Hamilton Lane, near the intersection of Routes 9W and 32 in Glenmont.

Malm, the parent company of Hamilton News, a wholesale newspaper and magazine distributor currently on Hamilton Lane, proposed initially to build a pair of "incubator" buildings on the site adjacent to Hamilton, but has since modified that intent to building "spec" office space for general industrial use.

Town police charge five with drunk driving

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Bethlehem police charged five people with driving while intoxicated (DWI) in the first week of the new year and two others offered pleas to similar charges.

A Delmar man was charged with DWI on Jan. 2 after Bethlehem police followed up on an incident under investigation in Albany.

Albany police contacted their Bethlehem counterparts shortly after noon to request a check on a vehicle, registered to Richard Frederick Knaack, 49, of 28 Sheffield Drive, Delmar, reportedly the subject of a complaint filed with them.

Dispatched to Knaack's home to investigate, Officer Jeffrey Vunck found the vehicle in question parked in the driveway, showing signs of recently having been driven. He found Knaack, questioned him about his activities, and then administered field sobriety tests and a preliminary alcohol screening.

Arrested and charged with DWI, Knaack was taken to the Bethlehem police station for questioning by Albany detectives and released. No charges have yet been filed against Knaack in connection with the reported incident, but Knaack is due in Bethlehem Town Court on Jan. 22 to answer the DWI charge.

A second arrest took place on the evening of Friday, Jan. 4, on River Road in Glenmont. Shortly before 8 p.m., Officer Christopher Hughes observed a southbound vehicle without tires on its passenger side, showing signs of a recent accident.

Stopping the vehicle, Hughes administered field sobriety tests and a preliminary screening on the driver, Susan Tower, 36, of 2 Fifth Street, Coeymans. Charged with DWI, she was ordered to appear in town court on Jan. 22.

On Saturday, Jan. 5, shortly after 8:30 a.m., Vunck observed a vehicle on Delaware Avenue whose driver, Jeremy Evan Cramer, 24, of 45 Altamont Road, Voorheesville, was allegedly not wearing a seat belt.

After he stopped the vehicle, a license check disclosed a previous license suspension for Cramer on a DWAI conviction. Police said a small bag of marijuana was also found in Cramer's car.

After conducting field sobriety tests, Vunck charged Cramer with driving under the influence of alcohol and drugs, unlawful possession of marijuana, along with several traffic citations. Arraigned before Town Justice Frank Milano, he was released on $250 bail to appear in Town Court on Jan. 8, at which time the case was adjourned until Feb. 5.

Also on Jan. 5, shortly after 2 p.m., Hughes observed a vehicle, allegedly speeding, eastbound on Bridge Street in the vicinity of South Albany Road. Stopping the vehicle near Pictuay Road, he conducted sobriety tests and a preliminary screening on the driver, Jean Marie Roland, 47, of 290 Blodgett Hill Road, Ravena.

Roland, charged with DWI and ticketed for speeding, was ordered to appear in town court on Jan. 22.

Burglars hit businesses

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Bethlehem detectives are seeking information on a pair of burglaries at side-by-side businesses on Delaware Avenue that apparently took place between 1 and 9 p.m. on New Year's Day and cost the two retail establishments more than $6,400 in stolen equipment.

The thefts were reported to Bethlehem police late in the day on Jan. 1 when the proprietor of Creative Images Hair Salon at 50B Delaware Ave. reported finding a broken window at the shop.

Missing from the salon were television and stereo equipment, a microwave, a water cooler, a vacuum cleaner, and numerous items of styling equipment, including waxing machines, hair dryers, and numerous specialized clippers and blades. The total value of the lost equipment was more than $1,600.

While investigating the complaint, police also discovered that an adjacent store at 50A Delaware, Nextgen Communications, an electronics retailer, was also burglarized.

Missing from the store were numerous items of computer and phone equipment, tools, and another vacuum cleaner, collectively worth about $4,800.

V'ville awards $922K sewer rehab contract

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Voorheesville's village board has awarded a $922,000 contract to build a proposed new wastewater treatment plant for the village's Sewer District No. 1, but the trustees may face a legal challenge from a rejected bidder on the project.

In a special meeting on Jan. 3, trustees voted unanimously to award the general construction contract for the new plant to Stephen Miller General Contractors of Mayfield, one of seven bidders participating in bidding that closed Dec. 14. Replacement of the existing aging plant, installed in the 1960s to serve the village's largest sewer district, which includes most of Salem Hills, has been on the board's agenda for nearly a year and was approved in a June permissive referendum. Engineering consultants Camp Dresser & McKee (CDM) last spring estimated a replacement cost of about $1 million. But when an earlier round of bids exceeded that figure, the board called for rebidding. The lower second round of bids ran as high as $1 million, and CDM endorsed the Miller bid in a Dec. 28 memo to the board by project manager Daniel Durfee. In recommending Miller for the general contract, CDM passed over a bid offered by Surface Systems of Guilderland that was $3,100 lower than Miller's, largely on the strength of a lower price quoted on an alternative item included in the bid package.

In his memo, Durfee wrote: "Based on our review, CDM has determined that Surface Systems Inc. lacks the necessary construction experience and qualifications specifically related to upgrades to wastewater treatment facilities. We do not consider that Surface Systems Inc. has the qualifications necessary to perform the work under this contract." Durfee's memo did not outline any specific deficiencies. But the memo said that Miller "has completed similar jobs on time and within budget with minimal change orders" and found them "well-qualified to complete this project."

CDM's bid recommendations were announced on Jan. 1. But Surface Systems owner Edward Virkler, in attendance, requested an opportunity to plead his case, and the board postponed any resolution until Jan. 3, seeking further information from Durfee in support of CDM's recommendations. On Jan. 3, the board reverted to an executive session to hear from Virkler, Durfee, Public Works Superintendent Will Smith and village grant consultant Kevin Jobin-Davis. Representatives of Miller were not present.

On reconvening the public meeting, Mayor Jack Stevens announced, "As a result of the engineering report not recommending Surface Systems, and as a result of no prior experience, we're going to recommend that we take the second bid (from Miller)."

Stevens declined to elaborate, citing the confidential discussion of the bids in executive session.

"I'm going to have to protest that decision," Virkler said. "We're going to contact our lawyer and make an attempt to stop this."

He said the bid documents failed to specify "what constitutes a qualified bidder. To that extent, it needs to be proven that I am not a qualified bidder."

After the meeting, Stevens declined to comment on Virkler's objections, citing his threat of legal action. Virkler said afterward he was "extremely disappointed" with the board decision. As to any legal recourse, "That at the moment I'm not ready to divulge, but we are certainly asking the advice of an attorney," he said.

While declining to discuss the closed-door review of his firm's qualifications, he added, "I think they erred, that they, by voting the way they did, compromised the integrity of the public bidding law system. My understanding of the law is that the award of a public contract should go to the lowest responsible bidder."

"Somebody from the public should stand up and ask why they should pay additional public money (to a higher bidder) to get the same thing done. There has to be justification for that," he said.

Smith projected that work on the project could get under way in the spring, barring any legal challenge to the contract award.

In sixth year, Bethlehem Youth Court in full force

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

One of the most important components of the American legal system is a trial before a jury of peers. Bethlehem Youth Court, now six years old and comprised of 30 Bethlehem teens, provides the same opportunity for first-time juvenile offenders, with the added benefit of not receiving a permanent record of the offense.

Youth Court members defend and prosecute offenders, and a teen judge presides over the case. A clerk/bailiff and a jury foreperson round out the team of five main participants, and a jury of teen peers makes the final sentencing decision. Cases that come before the Bethlehem Youth Court are misdemeanors and lesser charges, mostly involving petty larceny, underage drinking, illegal drug use and criminal mischief.

"Endangerment comes up a lot, too," said Bethlehem Central High School senior Dan Cohen, a three-year member of Youth Court. "We had one case where a kid was charged with threatening a younger kid with a cap gun."

The court hears about two dozen cases a year.

"It's a great way to empower young adults," Youth Court Director Marjorie Maniccia said.

"The members of the court hold responsible roles, and the offenders have a chance to learn about boundaries." Students can serve as members of the jury without any special training, but those who want to step into the "member" roles of prosecuting or defense lawyer, judge, jury foreperson or clerk/bailiff, attend eight hours of training for 10 weeks.

"We heard a lot of lectures about the different roles in Youth Court," Joe Kopchick, who has been a member for two years, said of the training. "We learned how to perform the various roles, and what we're trying to accomplish."

Each of the member roles requires different skills.

"It's harder to be a juror," Kopchick said. "You want to be fair. As an attorney, it's tough figuring out strategy, and finding the focus."

Cohen said he found being a prosecutor tough but interesting.

"It lets you be a jerk," he said. "You're fighting against the idea of a jury of peers, and if an offender has had a lapse in judgment, you want to hammer home what they've done wrong."

"Being prosecutor is a character-building experience," Kopchick said. "You want to remind the jury that the offender has committed a crime, and that they should receive a punishment so they won't do it again."

Max Kaplan, a Bethlehem senior who prefers the role of judge, has been involved with Youth Court since he first served as a juror when he was in sixth-grade.

"It's true to an extent that a jury doesn't want to be too harsh on their peers," he said.

Most of the sentencing comes in the form of community service, usually between 25 and 35 hours.

Restitution, substance abuse counseling and anger management classes are other common sentences. Attorney mentors work with students on their cases. The mentors are all volunteers, and one is assigned when a case is called.

"The students receive the attorney's phone number, in case they want to call and talk to him or her about the case," Maniccia

I had heard of mock trial before. But our actions in the courtroom are legally binding. It's real, and it counts. We're really affecting the community.

Dan Cohen

said. "The attorneys come to the trials and provide feedback to the kids."

The 13-member board of directors that oversees the Youth Court meets monthly. The board is made up of judges, lawyers, local government officials, teachers and other community members.

"We try to get people from all walks of life," Maniccia said.

One of the board members was part of the founding group, and mother of current member Max Kaplan.

"It started as Youth Courts of the Capital District," said Janet Kaplan, a lawyer for Stuyvesant Plaza Inc. "Bethlehem and Rensselaer County decided to split off and found their own courts. Youth Court is a way for first-time offenders to not get a record, but still face the consequence of their action."

Kaplan said the program is a good one and offers something to both the offenders and the students who serve as youth court members.

"Offenders see that their peers think what they've done is bad," Kaplan said. "Youth Court members get good practice in learning how to prepare a case."

"This is something that has a real impact," Bethlehem junior Alicia Ogden said. "It also offers a lot of insight into the legal system." Ogden recalled thinking that Youth Court would be like television's "Law and Order," and being surprised that that wasn't necessarily the case.

"Each case is unique," she said. "It's given me a better understanding of what lawyers do. Sometimes it feels like there's no defense."

"This is a lot different than most extra-curricular activities," junior Christine Khaikin said. "It's something you can really learn from."

"As an extra-curricular activity, it's something that has the biggest overall impact on the community," Kopchick said. "We're helping the community by reducing the amount of teen crime."

That, Maniccia emphasized, is Bethlehem Youth Court's biggest assets.

"It works," she said. "The rate of recidivism is very low." Youth Court members benefit from their experience as much as the offenders do, Maniccia pointed out.

"Ten people beyond the offenders see the effect of the crime on the family, the town, and their peers," Maniccia said. "Everyone's getting an education."

Knitting the piecemeal parts of parenthood into a whole

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

The knitting beckoned from the top of the liquor cabinet in our dining room. Inside the canvas bag that says "Bermuda" (acquired not from a trip there but a trade show attended when I worked in the travel business) is a sweater begun four years ago.

Working for pay was put on hold when Christopher was born 11 years ago; the knitting was interrupted more recently, after the front was completed and the dog unraveled and chewed up enough of the remaining balls of yarn that making them work again looked too daunting.

Picked up again this autumn, though, the yarn sorted itself out nicely enough that only a sleeve and a half stand in the way of this becoming an entire garment.

Sitting down to knit would be a soothing treat on these winter afternoons when the boys are mesmerized by video or computer games, but in the way of modern motherhood, it is also

COMMENTARY:

*Mom's

something to save for moments that need filling.

So the knitting comes out while Cormac practices his bass, or while Christopher works on his first book, a beginner's guide to mythology. Knitting fills the time of television commercials, a calming alternative to the psychosis of channel-surfing.

Rather than a task unto itself, it has become just one element in modern multi-tasking motherhood.

A friend recently described her life as "piecemeal." She sees motherhood as her primary job, but what she does to make it work is daunting.

She has a home business and works part-time for another company. Being involved in her child's school has led to her becoming a coordinator for a volunteer reading program, which led to her desire to become a teacher. So the latest piece in her life is going to school to get a teaching degree.

I grab pieces all over the place, she said, while downplaying how much she does. "We all do a lot," she noted.

We do, but sometimes the way we patch it together, it feels like nothing gets done. I recall with longing sometimes the structured days of a full-time job, when the objectives were clearly defined, and you could switch off the computer and lights in a clear demarcation of the end of the workday.

Kids change all that, of course, and then, instead of ever turning off the computer at the end of the day, we try to figure out a way to get a little extra hard disk capacity to complete all the child-rearing tasks that stretch before us.

Sometimes those little jobs are mind-numbingly mundane. "Mom, do I have a clean Hawaiian shirt?"

Sometimes they are frustrating. "I can't eat these pork chops because they're touching the green beans."

Sometimes they are challenging beyond our ability. "I told you last night I'm not going to school anymore, and I was serious."

Sometimes they call for words from us that ought to be prerecorded and handed out to all parents when they leave the hospital with their first newborn.

"Please don't climb in the rocking chair," we say over and over in our children's first years, to be followed in coming years by, "Please brush your teeth before bed, wash your hands after you use the bathroom, hang your coat in the closet, do your homework."

Sometimes, our operating system works perfectly. We get the child to an early orchestra practice on time; there are clean Hawaiian shirts in the drawer; bills are paid by the due date that seems to come earlier each month; and deadlines are met with no effort.

Other times, our fragmented disks slow us down, and we get so overwhelmed by the mundane tasks we face that we come to a dead stop when we enter the supermarket.

Did we come for those mini carrots, or a two-pound bag of M&Ms? Those are the times that can induce panic.

The reaction to being overwhelmed is often to take on more. Surely, we are just bored, we say. We have lost ourselves in the details of life, and we set out to find a little piece of ourselves that can belong to us alone.

Maybe we join a gym, in the hopes that increased blood flow and a few pounds less will help us remember which child likes peanut butter with jelly, and which will only eat it with marshmallow fluff.

Perhaps a yoga class, or a meditation seminar, will help us

For Those Who Need Dentistry!

Maybe you're one of the people whose parents didn't encourage preventive care... or perhaps your parents wanted to take you to a dentist but you were too scared to go. Now you're an adult and you are possibly ashamed or embarrassed by the condition of your mouth and you're worried that it's too late to correct some of your dental problems.

It's not too late! Your dentist, most likely has the expertise to restore your mouth to a high level of health, comfort, function and esthetics.

Whether it involves crown and bridge work, dentures, implants or simple fillings, your dentist is ready to help or if need be, refer you to the appropriate specialist.

Also, for those of us who are dental cowards, fear not! Many dentist's may offer valium, nitrous oxide or similar aids to relax their fearful patients. It is normal to be apprehensive about getting dental care but your dentist should understand this and be sympathetic to your needs.

focus when the multi-tasking onslaught hits. Maybe a career change, or the rigor of academic classes, gives us a reason to let laundry lapse till the last minute.

Possibly that one thing we always wanted to do finally claims our attention, and we forsake a clean floor for a few hours of writing, painting or creating a business plan.

So one more piece goes into the piecemeal, but this little bit we keep for ourselves is the one that keeps the whole together. Inadvertently, we show our children that you can never be too old or too busy to do something new.

We also are preparing for the day that our children are not the focus of our lives. There will then be plenty of time to keep a clean house, read a book and let vegetables touch meat. There will be time to let yarn slide smoothly from one knitting needle to the next, and it will take less than five years to finish a sweater.

It will be a long time until the pieces weave into a whole. Until then, we keep on with the individual bits, working intently on each one, in the hopes that someday, the finished project of both our children and ourselves is something we can look back on with a sense of satisfaction and delight.

Goldman said the foundation for the new facility, which is industrially zoned, is already completed, and that he expected to close on lease details before Feb. 1. He praised the IDA for moving the project to fruition.

Also at the meeting, the IDA board discussed the status of the Bethlehem Energy Center project in Glenmont and its complex PILOT and tax-settlement agreement concluded last summer by the IDA and the center's owner, PSEG New York. The deadline for closing on the PILOT agreement is Feb. 28, and the board reviewed the status of regulatory approval of the redevelopment project.

The IDA board also approved a $1,770 payment to a legal consultant who helped draft a portion of the PSEG settlement. They also discussed the benefits of hiring an town economic development director who will answer to the agency.

"If this is an emergency, I think our community would be receptive to that," she said.

But Councilman George Lenhardt cautioned that "raising the assessment on our users does not solve the actual problem of more water being available."

Public Works has contacted Albany County emergency management officials about possible emergency pumping from Warner's or Thompson's lakes, upstream of Vly Creek Reservoir, but Secor said he did not consider such measures feasible.

He also sought board authorization to pursue water purchases from Guilderland, which in the winter months has as much as a half million gallons a day of excess capacity under its take-or-pay contract with Watervliet.

But Councilman Tom Marcelle balked at introducing Guilderland water, which is fluoridated, into Bethlehem's supply, concerned about the "adverse consequences" for residents taking prescribed dental fluoride supplements.

Supervisor Sheila Fuller agreed: "Frankly, fluoridated water from Guilderland is not something I can support" at this time.

With the town holding a state permit to purchase up to 2 MGD from Albany, several board members urged pursuit of that alternative. But Secor said his written request in December to double the town's current 1.2 MGD purchase was rebuffed by the city's public works commissioner, citing concerns about as yet undeclared shortages at Alcove Reservoir.

Secor noted that Bethlehem offered a contract proposal for 2 MGD last August but has received no reply from city officials, who again turned down the emergency request Thursday.

If current conditions persist, Secor said he might request an emergency board meeting.

"I can't wait until the next town board meeting," he said. "If we're able to get additional water from Albany to meet that need, fine. If not, we're going to have to deal

Matters of Opinion

Recognizing a hero

As the Capital District prepares to celebrate the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday Monday, the most newsworthy local racial issue involves a black Army hero whose exploits occurred before King was born.

In May 1918, Henry Johnson was on sentry duty when he singlehandedly fought off a German patrol of about 30 men, killing four of them, wounding at least 10 more and suffering more than 20 wounds in the process.

His grave was recently discovered in a segregated portion of Arlington National Cemetery, an improvement over the potter's field now under Albany International Airport that had been thought to be his final resting place.

Family members and local veterans have rallied support to have Johnson be awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for his bravery in action in May 1918. The French gave Johnson their highest military honor, the Croix de Guerre; he was the first American to be so honored.

But he got nothing from his own government, which at the time was, there is no other way to put it, remarkably racist. Johnson's Purple Heart, which obviously should have been awarded in 1918, was not awarded until 1997.

In fact, for more than 70 years, no black World War I serviceman was awarded the Medal of Honor, the only war for which that was true.

In 1991, President George H. W. Bush approved awarding the first Medal of Honor to a black who served in World War I, Freddie Stowers, who was killed in action leading a charge and now lies near Johnson in Arlington.

If President George W. Bush can, as his father did with Freddie Stowers, lend just a small bit of his considerable political capital to Henry Johnson's cause, justice will finally come for this American hero. And that small loan will be repaid many times over.

Still time for shot

About 20 percent of us will contract the flu this year, and that can mean more than just the discomfort of coping with a bout of influenza.

Most of us who get the flu will feel horrible for a few days and lose work time and that will be the end of it.

But for some of us, the flu poses real health risks. The elderly, in particular, at at risk of developing serious complications like pneumonia. People who are age 65 or older and people with heart disease, lung disease and diabetes need to take precautions. The flu vaccine is the best all-around defense against the flu.

Even though it's January, it's not too late to contact your doctor for a flu shot.

Bearing witness in New York City

By THERESA RODRIGUES

The writer is a part-time school social worker in the Scotia-Glenville school district.

Little did I think that as a disaster mental health volunteer with the American Red Cross, I would one day help deal with a cataclysmic terrorist attack.

I was placed at the Family Assistance Center at Pier 94 in Manhattan. City officials had erected a temporary structure at the pier, about the size of two football fields.

They put in plush carpeting and curtained off small areas so that all state, local and federal agencies that families would need were under one roof.

In addition, free child care and massages were offered, and pet therapy to reach people wordlessly. Interpreters were available for many languages.

There were cafeterias for staff and families, set up like four-star restaurants with fresh flowers, fine linen and buffet tables full of exquisite food, provided free of charge.

In order to provide privacy for the families, no photographic equipment was allowed.

It was inspiring to see the number of people from all walks of life come to volunteer. I met people from as far away as Alaska, Hawaii, Guam and Saipan.

Kids from all over the country sent cards. Boxes of stuffed toys arrived daily from all over the country.

A Japanese TV show was doing a story on the 100th anniversary of the teddy bear. They asked me about the significance of giving stuffed toys to people at a time like this.

I introduced them to a 7-year-old boy I had met. His dad was a security guard at the World Trade Center and had been badly burned. This boy had received a bear from us a few days earlier.

He told me that he had named the bear after his dad, took the bear everywhere. He could not take care of his dad but he could take care of the bear.

Point of View

which helped him feel close to his dad.

As one of our local children said, when she sent off her favorite bear to New York City, "The kid who gets it will feel the caring that is inside."

The stories I heard were no different from the stories heard on TV. But instead of a TV screen, I saw the faces of pain and suffering up close and clear.

They knew that their presence would be barely noticed by the New York City families in their present grief; yet, they wanted these victims to know that they had survived, been transformed by their suffering and were now strong enough to reach out to others. They wanted the New York City families to know that such a time would come for them as well.

The disbelief of a wife who was on the phone being reassured by her husband that he was OK and on his way out, but never heard from him again.

The stories of people who had survived and felt guilty for it. A man, who fled after the first tower was hit despite being told not to, kept repeating, "They did what they should have done for a fire drill, but this was not just a fire we were fleeing from," as though to explain to himself why many of his friends did not survive.

The ripples of this disaster went on. Families who had to evacuate homes; minimum-wage workers who lost their jobs and faced homelessness; a woman with depression, at the brink of hospitalization because she lost her job and with it the ability to pay for medication; the hot dog vendor who supported his widowed mother in Peru with the $20 he sent her each month, but now had no place to vend his wares.

There was a memory wall where families left messages for their loved ones.

I will never forget the picture of a child and parent. Underneath it was scrawled in childish script, "This is my dad. Have you seen him?"

Or the sister who wrote underneath her brother's picture "I need you — you promised to teach me how to body surf."

One of the hardest things I had to do was accompany family members on boat trips from Pier 94 to ground zero.

Mental health workers were asked to "adopt" a family for each trip. Among others on the trip were parents who had lost children in the Oklahoma City bombing.

This was the first opportunity for families at that time to see the disaster up close. Because the area was still unstable, toxic and was also a crime scene, families could stand there for only three to five minutes.

Viewing the massive pile of ruins that was still smoking, surrounded by twisted girders, and breathing acrid air was surreal.

Seeing this brought home to the families that there was slim chance of recovering bodies, much less of finding anyone alive.

We went to a memorial site where families could leave the flowers and bears they were given at the beginning of the trip.

One mother I was with asked if she could keep the bear I gave her. It was all she had to verify that she had indeed visited the massive grave where her only son was buried.

Because of the intensity of emotions that one faced on the trip, it was not a trip that mental health workers made often.

Yet, the Oklahoma City families did this trip several times a day. I talked to them and asked how they could make this journey so many times.

They acknowledged that it was hard to walk to ground zero because it was rife with triggers reminding them of their own search through the rubble for their loved ones; yet, they wanted to be present.

They knew that their presence would be barely noticed by the New York City families in their present grief; yet, they wanted these victims to know that they had survived, been transformed by their suffering and were now strong enough to reach out to others.

They wanted the New York City families to know that such a time would come for them as well.

Carl Jung said that the sole purpose of human existence is to kindle a light for those around us. I witnessed many lights that were kindled in that great darkness of the World Trade Center tragedy.

I was grateful for the abundance of this country and the generosity of spirit people had demonstrated to cushion the pain of those affected.

At the same time, my thoughts turn to the children of Afghanistan who also suffer — the children who have their limbs torn as they pick up bomb fragments that they mistake for air-dropped food, their families whose humble homes have been destroyed by our bombs.

I pray that we can find a meaningful way to alleviate their suffering, too.

Tree/wreath sale proceeds benefit the community

Editor, The Spotlight:

On behalf of the Bethlehem Lions Club, I wish to thank all those who generously supported our fund-raising efforts last year, especially a very successful Christmas tree and wreath sale in December.

We also see many community residents at other fund-raising activities, such as our annual pancake breakfast at the VFW post and our walkathon during the summer.

The following are supported by the profits realized from Lions Club activities:

- The Eye Institute in Albany.
- A puppy attending the Seeing Eye Dog school.
- College scholarship to a deserving student at Bethlehem Central High School.
- Senior citizens' picnic at the town park.
- The purchase of glasses and hearing aides for individuals in the community.
- Diabetes education.

• Youth and substance abuse abatement education efforts.

• The Northeast Association for the Blind.

• The Adopt a Family program at Christmas.

• The Lions Foundation of New York state to support statewide efforts similar to those listed above.

• Grants in response to requests from various community organizations and individuals that are related to the Lions Club mission.

We wish to invite all individuals from the community to attend our regular meetings on the first and third Wednesday of each month at Quality Inn on Route 9W in Glenmont at 6:30 p.m.

We hope you'll look us over and then decide to join this very worthwhile community service organization.

Board was right to OK NYC field trips

Editor, The Spotlight:

Recently, news reports have cited in grave tones that many school boards have banned field trips to New York City, fearful of such visits in the wake of Sept. 11.

While such fears are understandable, I would like to laud one local school district that did not give in to fear, and instead supported once in a lifetime educational opportunities for its students.

The Bethlehem school board approved visits for the high school's two fantasy literature classes to see "Beauty and the Beast" in November, and for British literature classes and a theater arts class to see "Othello" at the Shakespeare Festival in late December.

Despite being mockingly referred to as "the death trips" by one administrator, both visits went off without a problem. All the participants went safely, watched the plays attentively and returned in one piece.

For most of these students, the trips were their first to New York City or to Broadway. For all, it was their first production of "Othello." Seeing live performances in the greatest city in the world enriched the classroom study of the respective texts immeasurably, but the impromptu post-show chats with the very grateful and sweaty actors made these two field trips unique.

Both casts expressed their enthusiastic thanks for visiting the city and their shows at this time. Liev Schreiber, who played Iago, stayed for an extra half hour answering questions about his performance, acting in general, and his pet dog, before leaving for a quick bite and walk before his next three-hour performance that evening.

While recounting the months of planning and effort that went into the trips to the parent chaperones, their apprehensions melted as each trip unfolded without the difficulties some fearfully envisioned. New York City never looked more resilient, exciting or welcoming.

As one still-ecstatic student exclaimed on the return to Delmar after "Othello," "Mr. Y, it's easy to talk the talk, wag the flag, and rip the trip, but I'm glad they let us go to the show."

For the benefit of their students, I hope that other school boards follow Bethlehem's in the more difficult task of "walking the walk."

The Bethlehem school board deserves almost as much applause as the performers, actors, parent chaperones and students for these two trips.

TV station honors youth librarian

Youth Services librarian Polly Hartman was featured last week as TV-10's Educator of Excellence. This honor was bestowed as a result of recommendations from library patrons.

Check It Out Bethlehem Public Library

Dan Levy and a cameraman attended the library's annual "New Year's Eve at Noon" program for toddlers on Dec. 31. About 100 children and parents attended this lively event, which included a puppet show performed by youth services staff.

Hartman, a former kindergarten teacher who has worked at the library for 15 years, was gratified and encouraged by the recognition.

"It's nice when libraries are recognized for their contribution to the enrichment of children's lives," she said. "Studies of early literacy show that attendance at library story hours is a good predictor of later literacy achievement."

In other library news, a new PowerMac 5400 and a wealth of updated software are on loan to the youth services department by approval of the Bethlehem Central Middle School Technology Committee. The loan coordinates the library's electronic resources with that of the schools, so that homework and projects can be downloaded and continued at either site.

Features include spreadsheet and presentation software, as well as graduated word processing programs that serve a wide age range. There is also software that enables students to graphically organize report material. Adobe PageMill, Photo Deluxe and Internet Explorer are also available. The computer will remain in the youth services department until the end of the school year.

Department head Beverly Provost said that the middle school's generous action will make a difference to students.

"Students who use our computers are generally those who have no home computer, whose computer is down, or who have an older model incompatible with new software," Provost said. "This is a valuable step in bridging the digital divide."

On Thursday, Jan. 31, at 2 p.m., New York's canal days come to life through slides and hands-on artifacts.

"Life on the Erie Canal" will compare workaday and leisure activities on this great waterway. The program is presented by the Scotia-Glenville Travelling Museum and cosponsored by Bethlehem Senior Projects.

Call 439-9314 to register.

Don't miss this special event, which could serve as a helpful introduction to "All Along the Erie Canal," an exhibit of pastels by J. Erwin Porter at the New York State Museum through April 17.

The library will close at 5 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 21, for the Martin Luther King holiday.

Regular hours resume on Tuesday, Jan. 22.

Books group considers Dostoevsky novel

The Books in the Morning program of the Humanities Institute for Lifelong Learning will present a free lecture and discussion about Dostoevsky's novel The Idiot on Friday, Jan. 18, at 10:15 a.m. at Bethlehem town hall, 445 Delaware Ave.

Group to discuss 'Life Is So Good'

George Dawson, born in Texas in 1898, grew up poor and had to leave school to help support his family.

As a black man in a strictly segregated society, he never forgot the time he saw a young black man lynched after being falsely accused of rape by a white girl. Despite the hardships and tough times, he always remembered his father's maxim, "Life is so good."

Voorheesville Public Library

Although he was illiterate, George survived in the world by observing and maintaining a positive outlook, and at 98 enrolled in a literacy program to learn to read.

Talk about this fascinating story with others in the February book discussion. Sign up now at the reference desk and receive a copy of Life Is So Good.

On Wednesday, Jan. 23, families can salute the popular author of Max and Ruby and McDuff at a "Happy Birthday, Rosemary Wells" party. Come for an art activity, books and snacks and storytime fun at 7 p.m.

Renaissance woman Kelly Blakeslee has hung a "rediscovered" collection of her old black-and-white photographs in the hall gallery this month.

Blakeslee studied at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston under Amos Chan and Kittredge Opal. She is also an accomplished writer who has led our creative writing (Lifestories) group for several years.

If you would like to join Blakeslee and the creative writers, no signup is necessary. Just bring a short prose piece to share with the group when it next meets on Monday, Jan. 21, at 7 p.m.

While you are here, don't miss the menorahs in the showcase from the collections of Library Director Gail Sacco and library friend Judy Avner.

This style of menorah is a candelabrum having nine branches and is used in the Jewish festival of Hanukkah. Modern menorahs incorporate artistic as well as religious elements into their design. This makes an attractive and educational display.

Food for Fines continues throughout the month. Bring in overdue materials and pay the fines with a food donation for the New Scotland Food Pantry.

Use TIME to plan for plan for secure financial future

In our hectic lives, it seems there's just never enough time. But when it comes to planning for our financial future, there's always too much TIME, as in Taxes, Inflation, Mistakes and Emergencies.

Building a nest egg that can withstand the test of TIME requires careful planning. We can't change time, but there are some steps we can take to help minimize its ravages.

T is for Taxes

The old saying is that only two things are certain in life — death and taxes. It's true that we can't evade taxes, but some financial products do have particular tax advantages. Permanent life insurance, for example, has three distinct tax advantages — cash value accumulates within the policy on a tax-deferred basis; loans taken against cash value are generally not taxable; and, in most instances, the death benefit paid to beneficiaries is free from federal income tax.

Annuities are another product that puts the power of tax deferral to work for you. With an annuity, you won't pay taxes on your funds while they're growing, only as you withdraw them. Withdrawals prior to age 59 1/2 may be subject to a 10 percent early withdrawal penalty.

I is for Inflation

Always lurking just around the corner, eroding the buying power of hard-earned dollars, is the specter of inflation. Even moderate inflation can have harmful effects on a lifestyle. For example, in just 14 years, a 5 percent inflation rate will double the cost of everything you buy.

Perhaps the best strategy to use to outpace inflation is to place a portion of your portfolio in more aggressive, growth-oriented financial products. There may be short-term risk to your capital, but over the long haul, you may be amply rewarded with returns that keep you ahead of inflation.

We can't change time, but there are some steps we can take to help minimize its ravages.

M is for Mistakes

Nobody's perfect; we all make mistakes. But financial mistakes can cost us dearly. There's no foolproof strategy to avoid missteps, but here is an outline of the five most common insurance and personal planning errors.

- Failure to plan — Most people don't put together a cohesive plan for reaching their financial goals. However, with a comprehensive and flexible plan, you can have a blueprint for success.

- Insufficient diversification — "Don't put all your eggs in one basket" is an excellent rule of thumb. True diversification utilizes a variety of different products, asset categories and lengths of maturity in an attempt to reduce risk and raise the potential for a positive return.

- Inadequate life insurance — Failure to cover all income earners with a sufficient amount of life insurance can cause a burden for survivors.

- Inadequate disability income insurance — Our income earning potential is the engine that powers our lifestyle. If that engine were to break down, would our lifestyle suffer? Sufficient disability income insurance could help in that emergency.

- No estate plan — Some people think that estate planning is just for rich folks. Not true. A proper estate plan can help reduce exposure to taxes and provide heirs with the inheritance they deserve.

E is for Emergencies

From time to time, disaster strikes, and we end up paying the bill. We can do little to prevent death and disability, but through sufficient insurance coverage, the financial damage can be lessened.

Life insurance proceeds can provide beneficiaries with the means to pay final expenses, defray lost income and continue to live in the lifestyle to which they're accustomed. Disability income insurance covers a portion of your salary (usually 50 to 60 percent) if you become unable to work due to disability. Private insurance such as long-term care insurance and Medicare Supplement insurance may help fill in the gaps of government-sponsored programs.

TIME Marches on, trying to wreak havoc on your finances. But you don't have to surrender to it. With proper insurance and personal planning, you can limit the ravages of TIME in order to retire with a comfortable nest egg.

Tax advantaged savings for education

By LENORE FERRARA

A child born today will need an estimated $236,533 to attend a four-year-private college or about $107,769 for a public institution. Given the enormity of this expense, parents can't begin to prepare soon enough. Thanks to the latest legislation, parents have more options from which to choose. Among them are IRAs (educational, traditional and Roth) and state-sponsored programs. If you did not qualify for these tax-favored savings vehicles in the past, or if you thought they were limited to get the job done, take another look.

The educational IRA

Beginning in 2002, the maximum annual contribution to the educational IRA increases to $2,000 per child for married taxpayers who file a joint tax return and have adjusted gross income (AGI) of up to $190,000. The ability to contribute phases out for salaries between $190,000 and $220,000. This is a $40,000 increase over previous AGI limits.

Another plus is in addition to college or graduate school, parents can now use these funds to cover the cost of elementary and secondary school expenses. So, the educational IRA could be a smart investment vehicle if you plan to send your children to private grade school or high school. All earnings will be exempt from federal tax as long as the account is used to pay for qualified expenses. Even if you send your children to a public grade school, you can still use an educational IRA to save for certain out-of-pocket expenses.

The new tax law allows you to use your tax-free distributions to purchase computer equipment, uniforms, transportation, extended-day programs, academic tutoring, books and supplies in addition to tuition, room and board at public, private or religious schools. The tax-free distribution provisions are not subject to the expiration provisions of the new tax act.

If you are considering a 529 savings plan, you will be glad to know that educational IRA contributions or distributions are permitted, even if you contribute to or withdraw from a section 529 savings plan in the same year. You may also claim a HOPE scholarship or Lifetime Learning credit in the same year as an educational IRA or section 529 college savings plan distribution, as long as you claim different expenses. There are additional advantages to opening a 529 savings plan, particularly if you are off to a late start in planning for education costs.

Section 529 savings plan

These are state sponsored plans that allow you to invest more than ever before in a tax-advantaged program. Any U.S. resident can invest, and withdrawals can be used at any eligible post-secondary school in the U.S., including public and private colleges, universities, community colleges and most vocational schools. As of January 1, 2002, your qualified withdrawals from any state-sponsored college savings plan or qualified tuition program will be free from federal income taxes. Many states extend favorable tax deductions and tax-free withdrawals to state residents.

State sponsored savings plans also offer a unique opportunity for grandparents and other older relatives to contribute up to $50,000 ($100,000 for married couples) per beneficiary in one year without incurring gift taxes. These dollars are considered to be a completed gift and out of the donor's estate unless the account owner dies within five years of the gift. If that should happen, a prorated portion of the original contribution amount only will be included in the donor's taxable estate.

A word on traditional and Roth IRAs

You can withdraw funds early from traditional IRA to pay higher education expenses without paying the 10% penalty. However, you will still be liable for any regular income taxes due on the amount withdrawn. So, the educational IRA is a better choice.

The benefit of a Roth IRA is that it allows you to withdraw your earnings for educational purposes before the age of 59 1/2 without penalty, if the IRA has been established and funded for five years or more. Any earnings you take out, however, will be subject to regular income tax.

Before you make any decision on how you will finance your children's, grandchildren's or other relative's education, speak with your tax and financial advisors. They have information and experience that could help you plan for the important event, without jeopardizing your own financial security.

WHOM ARE YOU CALLING "OLD"?

According to a recent survey by Roper Starch Worldwide, nearly one person in three between the ages of 19 and 29 considers age 65 to be the beginning of old age. Not surprisingly, only 7% of those aged 60 and older think old age begins before age 65. For people under age 30, "old" is a term that is applicable about ten years sooner than for those close to it, at an average age of 67 versus nearly 77 years for those aged 60-plus. All this may change quite a bit, however, as baby boomers enter late middle age. While the bar has yet to be raised on old age nationwide, it is likely to move up as boomers enter their sixties.

"Old age" is largely perception, and while you cannot control the perception of others, you can control how you feel about yourself. At Good Samaritan Lutheran Health Care Center, 125 Rockefeller Road, Delmar, we know how unkind others can be to the inevitable processes that affect us as we age, so we make a special point of focusing on the person and his or her strengths to foster the well-being that leads to continued health.

Lady Eagles sweep Averill Park and Mohonasen

By ROB JONAS

It didn't take long for the Bethlehem girls basketball team to rebound from its poorest offensive performance of the season.

After losing to Shaker 39-28 Jan. 4, the Lady Eagles downed Averill Park 56-35 last Wednesday and Mohonasen 51-30 last Friday to improve their record to 4-1 in the Suburban Council (8-4 overall).

"I think (the Shaker loss) was more of a mental challenge for us to get ready to play every game," Bethlehem coach Kim Wise said.

"I think it was a lesson learned."

The Lady Eagles nearly scored as many points in the first quarter against Averill Park (20) as they had in the entire Shaker game in beating the Warriors last Wednesday. By halftime, Bethlehem had built a 34-13 lead.

Kaitlin Foley scored 20 points, and Sue Kelly contributed 14 points to pace the Lady Eagles.

Bethlehem's defense had a tougher task last Friday in trying to stop Mohonasen's Amanda Blackstone, but the Lady Eagles rose to the occasion. They held the University of Delaware-bound senior forward to three points.

Bethlehem's Kaitlin Foley, left, goes in strong against Mohonasen's Amanda Blackstone during last Friday's Suburban Council game. Foley had 19 points in the Lady Eagles' 51-30 victory. Jim Franco

"She did get herself into foul trouble early in the first half, so she had to sit out a while," Wise said of Blackstone, who is one of the leading scorers in the league. "But in the second half, our outside defense did a great job of defending her."

Foley netted 19 points, Kelly chipped in nine points and Megan Baldwin added eight points to lead a balanced Bethlehem offense.

"We need to keep doing that," Wise said. "I'd like to see more players in double figures, but I want to keep the balance."

The Lady Eagles travel to Shenendehowa Friday night before hosting Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake Jan. 25.

"Shen is Shen. They're always going to be good," Wise said. "They're young and I think that contributes to their inconsistency, but they'll always give you a great game."

BC boys remain unbeaten in league

The Bethlehem boys basketball team kept its Suburban Council record perfect by beating Mohonasen 67-41 last Friday in Rotterdam.

The Eagles (5-0, 11-0) used their power game inside to wear down the Mighty Warriors. Forward Bob Boughton scored 26 points, and center Matt Robbins contributed 16 points to pace Bethlehem.

"He rebounded well, he got a lot of put-backs and he had seven free throws, so he got to the line quite a bit," Bethlehem coach Chuck Abba said of Boughton.

Mohonasen, which received 13 points from Nick Forchilli, was within six points at halftime before Bethlehem put the game away by outscoring the Mighty Warriors 21-10 in the third quarter.

"We've always had tough games when we've gone over there," Abba said.

The Eagles had another strong performance in a 72-47 victory over Averill Park last Tuesday. Bethlehem jumped out to a 19-7 lead after the first quarter and used a 26-12 third quarter run to put the game out of reach.

"When you have a strong third quarter, it makes it difficult for the other team to come back," Abba said.

Robbins scored 17 points, and Paul Stewart contributed 14 points for the Eagles. Boughton chipped in 10 points.

Physically Speaking
 by Nick Valenze, P.T.
HELPING CHILDREN

There are children born with birth defects who require physical therapy along with medical treatment, while other children suffer injuries that require physical therapy for exercises and treatment. Pediatric physical therapy promotes wellness, detects health problems, and uses a wide variety of treatment techniques. Physical therapy is sometimes confused with occupational therapy because young patients may require both courses of therapy for the same injury or condition. Where as physical therapy deals with pain, strength, range of motion, endurance, and gross motor functioning, occupational therapy addresses motor skills, visual-perceptual skills, strength, cognitive skill, and sensory-processing deficits. While physical therapy helps seriously injured children regain muscular strength, occupational therapy helps them re-learn the coordination needed to care for themselves.

If your child has a congenital condition, or is recovering from illness or injury, ask your pediatrician about the benefits of participating in physical therapy. We provide the latest treatments for a wide range of health issues for individuals of all ages. To learn more about our services, which include sports medicine, ultrasound, and massage, please call at the number listed below. For your convenience, our staff will be happy to process your insurance claims. Evening treatment hours available.

Bethlehem bantams win Clifton Park tournament

The Bethlehem Youth Hockey club's Bantam "A" team won the title at last weekend's Between the Pipes Tournament at the Clifton Park Arena.

The Eagles opened the three-day tournament with a come-from-behind 4-2 victory over Lake Placid last Friday.

After Lake Placid scored the first two goals, Bethlehem's Tom Phibbs got the Eagles on the scoreboard with a second-period tally. Phibbs then assisted on Zack Wallens' goal one-and-a-half minutes later that tied the game at 2.

Phibbs put Bethlehem in the lead midway through the third period with a goal off a Chris Dudek assist, and Dillon McNiven added a goal at the 8:30 mark to seal the victory.

Andrew Bonelli stopped 29 shots to pick up the win for the Eagles.

Bethlehem had little trouble in its second game of the tournament, a 6-2 victory over the Albany Capitals last Saturday morning.

The Eagles jumped out to a 4-1 lead on two goals by Dudek and one each from Wallens and Tim Moriarity. Joe Scialdo and Ian Stiles Mikl netted third-period goals to conclude the scoring.

Hazen leads Eagles at Dutch Duals II

Dan Hazen finished with a 5-0 record to lead the Bethlehem wrestling team at the Dutch Duals II tournament last Saturday at Guiderland High School.

Hazen pinned three opponents and won his other two matches in the 215-pound division by technical fall.

Dan Dugas also had a 5-0 record in the tournament for Bethlehem. Dugas (130) pinned one opponent and won his other bouts by decision.

The Eagles finished last in the eight-team tournament with an 0-5 record and 141 points. Bethlehem dropped its first match to Broadalbin-Perth 48-33, and then lost to Northport 50-24, Cobleskill-Richmondville 40-39, Ballston Spa 60-18 and South Lewis 51-27.

RCS grapplers place at Shen tourney

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk wrestling team finished sixth at last Saturday's Shenendehowa Tournament.

Curtis Graham (125 pounds), Herb Tompkins (140) and Seth Houle (152) placed second in their divisions.

Bethlehem secured a spot in the championship game by beating Clifton Park 4-1 last Saturday afternoon.

Stiles Mikl gave the Eagles a 1-0 lead in the first period with a slap shot that got past the Clifton Park goaltender. Clifton Park tied the game three minutes later, but Erik Russo scored two minutes into the second period to put Bethlehem ahead for good.

Dudek netted a goal shortly after Russo's tally, and Ariel Kredentser added a third-period goal for the Eagles. Bonelli made 17 saves to pick up the victory.

Bethlehem met Clifton Park again in Sunday's championship game, with the Eagles coming away with a 3-2 win.

Mike Dunn scored the first Bethlehem goal less than four minutes into the first period to make the score 1-0. Dudek then struck for his fourth goal of the tournament to give the Eagles a two-goal cushion.

Clifton Park scored late in the second period to make the score 2-1, but Dudek tallied on a breakaway with 30 seconds left before the intermission to re-establish Bethlehem's two-goal lead.

Bonelli made 20 of his 25 saves during a third-period rally by Clifton Park to give the Eagles the title.

The Bethlehem Youth Hockey Bantam "A" team will be on the road until Feb. 2, when it hosts Albany Academy at BIG Arena.

The Bethlehem Youth Hockey Bantam "A" team won the Between the Pipes Tournament last weekend at the Clifton Park Arena.

BC hockey team defeats Troy/Columbia

The Bethlehem hockey team improved its record to 3-5-2 with a 7-3 victory over Troy/Columbia last Saturday in a Capital District High School Hockey League game at Knickerbocker Arena in Lansingburgh.

Chris Bub had two goals and an assist, and Nate Drake contributed two goals for the Eagles. Erich Minnear chipped in a goal and an assist, and Evan Gall and Jim Moerhinger added goals.

Bethlehem struggled in its previous CDHSHL game, a 4-1 loss to defending Section II, Division I champion LaSalle last Wednesday at BIG Arena.

The Cadets took a 2-0 lead after the first period and tacked on two more goals in the third period before Moerhinger broke up the shutout bid.

Shay McGlynn made 28 saves for the Eagles, who own a 3-3-2 record in the Capital District High School Hockey League.

Bethlehem Auto Service
AUTO FACTS
by John Quirk

More Electric Power

With heated seats and windshields, cell phones, and other electrically powered features being added to vehicles, it has become clear that today's nominal 14-volt DC electrical systems and 12-volt batteries will not be able to handle the power requirements of cars, light trucks, vans, and SUV's of the future. Current luxury vehicles typically use up to 2.8 kW of power, and this is expected to double in the next five years. Even today, radios in some vehicles may momentarily cut out under sustained braking, when the overall electrical load becomes too great. A consortium sponsored by the Society of Automotive Engineers has advocated introduction of a 42-volt system with a 36-volt battery, which we may see within a few years.

Today's vehicles feature an array of luxury features that put new demands on electrical systems. A car or truck is a significant financial investment. Don't wait until your vehicle stops running before bringing it to BETHLEHEM AUTO SERVICE. We encourage readers to have their vehicles professionally inspected on a routine basis. During an inspection, an A.S.E. Certified Technician will inspect the battery, brakes, belts and hoses, and heating system. For auto service with a personal touch, call 426-8414, or visit us at 62 Hannay Lane in Glenmont off Rt. 9W behind Stone Ends. Business hours are Mon.-Fri., 7-6.

HINT: The introduction of 42-volt systems could eliminate power-robbing and heat-producing pumps and institute use of electrically powered heating and air-conditioning systems, which could reduce engine energy consumption by 5%-20%.

Town stops recycling alkaline batteries

The town of Bethlehem will no longer accept alkaline batteries for recycling.

Because the alkaline batteries now being produced no longer contain mercury, they do not require recycling and can be discarded with regular trash. These include A, AA, AAA, C, D, 9-volt and 6-volt lantern batteries.

The town will continue to recycle all nickel cadmium (rechargeable), zinc-air, zinc-carbon, lithium, silver oxide and sealed lead acid batteries that are turned in.

Radio Shack will also accept rechargeable batteries for recycling.

Vehicle lead acid batteries can be recycled at garages, service stations and Kmart service centers.

Call sewer district before calling plumber

Bethlehem residents who experience slow drainage or water backup problems in their homes are urged to call the town Sewer District at 439-2125 before summoning a plumber or drain cleaning service.

While the sewer lateral serving the home is the responsibility of the property owner, public sanitary sewers are operated and maintained by the district.

If the drainage or water backup problem is the result of an obstruction in the main sewer, unnecessary charges to the property owner can be avoided by first contacting the district.

The sewer district number operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

When contacted, sewer personnel will check for potential problems in the main sewer line. If the problem is in the sewer lateral, a plumber or drain cleaning company may be required for proper service.

CALENDARS ♦ ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

By BILL FONDA

They're names that even people who aren't art connoisseurs know — Picasso, Cézanne, Matisse, Rodin and Frank Lloyd Wright.

Not only are they famous, their works are among those in a new exhibition at the Albany Institute of History & Art. "Circa 1900: From the Genteel Tradition to the Jazz Age" covers the period between 1880 and 1920 and will be on display until March 3.

"I have to kick myself to think we're in the Albany Institute," museum spokeswoman Penny Vavura said. "There really is something here for everyone."

The items were gathered from the institute, Albright Knox Art Gallery in Buffalo, Everson Museum in Syracuse, Herbert F. Johnson Museum of Art in Ithaca, Memorial Art Gallery in Rochester and Munson-Williams-Proctor Arts Institute in Utica.

"To be able to pull the resources from these small museums and create this world-class show is exciting," Vavura said.

The exhibit is traveling through the six museums in the consortium, with AIHA being the fourth stop.

"We sometimes get spoiled when we have the Internet and can take virtual tours," Vavura said.

Patrons will encounter traditional works when they enter the first of the exhibit's rooms, and the second gallery demonstrates the transition between the Genteel Tradition and the more modern works displayed at the end of the exhibit.

The hallway between the rooms includes photographs from the period.

"To have that included, it's nice," Vavura said. "It brings a whole new language to art."

Those familiar with Stickley Furniture may take special notice of the Stickley magazine rack on the display.

"This was how it started," Vavura said. "People see Stickley Furniture, they don't realize it was part of an art movement."

Although Wright became a famous architect, his contribution to the exhibit is a chair.

"There's so many examples of items that changed our perspective on things," Vavura said.

"Circa 1900" came on the heels of "Scenes of American Life," a collection from the Smithsonian Art Museum, and the institute's curatorial staff had two weeks to switch the exhibits.

"It was an amazing installation schedule," Vavura said.

Admission to the museum is $5 for adults, $4 for senior citizens and students, $2.50 for children 6 to 12 and free to museum members and children under 6.

The museum is offering several activities in addition to the exhibit. On Wednesday, Jan. 23, it will host a reception and lecture by David Ogawa of the visual arts department at Union College from 5:30

Works from early 20th century highlight new Albany Institute show to 7:30 p.m. Admission is free for members and $10 for nonmembers.

The museum will present part one of the film "America 1900" Sunday, Jan. 27, at 2:30 p.m. The second part will be shown Sunday, Feb. 17, at 2:30 p.m. Both events are free with admission.

Museum staff will conduct a 45-minute tour of the exhibit Sunday, Feb. 3, at 2:30 p.m. It is free with admission.

Sunday, Feb. 10, is Museum Explorers' Day, as adults and children can participate in the Valentine's Day in 1900 program from 2 to 4 p.m. The event includes gallery activities and art making, and is free with admission.

The museum is offering winter break specials Feb. 20 to 22 from 10 a.m. to noon. On Feb. 20, participants will create a time machine; Feb. 21 is Erie Canal Day; and the Feb. 22 activity is titled "A Day in 1900." Reservations are required by calling 463-4478, and there will be a $2 materials fee in addition to admission.

Sure starts 101: battery health

Among the concerns of parents of fledgling teenage drivers is whether they're vulnerable to car trouble away from home. Parents can't always take the responsibility of the cars their kids are driving, especially considering that young peoples' priorities may divert maintenance and repair funds to other things. Considering that the output of a healthy battery at 80 degrees will have dropped to 65% at freezing and, when the temperature dips to zero, it has only 40% of its power.

Compounding the situation, oil flows less freely in extreme cold, increasing starting resistance. Consequently, a strong battery becomes more critical.

Being stranded in the cold with a car that won't start, which can be a nightmare, need not happen, says the Car Care Council.

No-starts, the most common reason for motorists to call for emergency road service, usually can be attributed to a weak or dead battery, faulty electrical connections or a problem in the fuel system.

When a battery is on its last legs, it usually gives warning signals. You can stay in control of the situation by making the decision to have the electrical system checked and, if necessary, a new battery installed while the old one still has some life in it. But what to buy?

Car Care Council recommends replacing your battery with one that's at least as good as the one that came with the vehicle. In this case the term good means one that has the cranking power (that's starting oomph) and reserve capacity so that it isn't just riding on the edge of failure if you happen to leave a light on. Check the ratings.

If you're driving an older vehicle, remember that it deserves just as good a battery as a late model. Also, if you've added electrical accessories, they may put greater demands on the battery.

Consider the warranty, too. How long does it cover full replacement and what is the total warranty coverage? Finally, when in doubt about your selection, ask the advice of your service shop or your auto supply store.

For more information on automotive maintenance, repair and enhancements, log on www.carcarecouncil.org.

Planner

Slingerlands attorney Paul Green, a Marcelle acquaintance whom Fuller told the board had contacted her less than an hour before the meeting to express interest in the position.

Calling Green "a strong advocate of the town," Marcelle added, "One of the most important issues facing the town is our economic development, and the planning board plays a key role in that. And I would just like us to consider this other candidate and other candidates that may come forward, but certainly Paul Green, before we vote on this."

That in turn prompted Lenhardt to endorse Perez: "the only candidate who came before this entire board in person to interview. ... I do not know Mr.

Engel. I am sure he is a very capable and fine individual, and will represent the entire town as all the board members should. However, I have thrown my support to Jeff Perez."

A request to divide the resolution — which called for the reappointment of board chairman Douglas Hasbrouck for one year as well as the seven-year appointment of Engel — was challenged by board counsel Alessi, and Davis declined to withdraw her original motion. Fuller then called for a vote, which passed 3-2, to reappoint Hasbrouck and appoint Engel.

Fuller later expressed frustration over the 11th-hour maneuvers by her board colleagues.

"Never in my nine years on this board have I seen anything like this. ... The board had agreed it would be someone from the southern end of town two weeks ago," she said. "To arrive at the board meeting and find (Lenhardt and Marcelle) each with a candidate who was not from the southern end of town, I find to be less than professional. ... We're there to conduct the business of the town. We can agree or disagree, but we must keep in mind who we serve."

By the clock, discussion of the current water emergency occupied the lion's share of the Jan. 9 meeting that stretched to nearly three hours. But as the board's first gathering of the year and therefore its official organizational meeting, the bulk of a 13-page agenda was devoted to routine governmental housekeeping, everything from setting salaries and reappointing public officials to designating official town holidays, meeting dates and official hours, bank depositories for public funds, and the official town publication for legal notices — The Spotlight.

George Lenhardt, newly re-elected to the town board, was reappointed to a one-year term as deputy supervisor; Town Attorney Robert Alessi and Commissioner of Public Works Bruce Secor were both unanimously re-appointed. Zoning Board of Appeals member Robert Wiggand was named to a new five-year term, and Michael Hodom to another one-year appointment as ZBA chairman.

Left vacant for now is the post of counsel to the ZBA. According to Fuller, former town justice Peter Bishko, who has served in the post since 1998, was sidelined in September by illness, and has not sought reappointment.

Former ZBA counsel Don DeAngelis, who has filled in as counsel on a per diem basis since October, "has agreed to remain on till the end of February," Fuller said, while the search continues for a permanent replacement.

Two new part-time appointees as assistant town attorney, Charles J. Tobin III and Paul F. Dwyer, Jr., will split the duties of the departing Joshua Efron, who stepped down in December after nearly two decades' service as chief prosecutor and town representative in proceedings before the town court.

The board also approved the appointment, effective Jan. 12, of two new police officers: Glenmont native Michael Berben, 26, a University at Albany graduate with a degree in criminal justice who is currently employed as a child protective worker with the state Department of Social Services; and Delmar resident and Voorheesville native Michael Whiteley, 30, a county probation officer with a SUNY Brockport degree in criminal justice.

Both will be assigned to the Zone 5 Law Enforcement Training Center and to the department's patrol division upon completing their studies in July. The addition of two new patrol officers cleared the way for the promotion to detective of officers Vincent Rinaldi and Bruce Oliver, 16- and 15-year department veterans respectively. Both will also continue to serve in the department's school resource officer program.
