altitudes.

The Helderberg Escarpment Planning Committee made the first of what is expected to be a series of public presentations of the study last month before the Guilderland town board. And Dan Driscoll of the Albany County Land Conservancy (ACLC), who chaired the committee, said there would be similar presentations before town boards and > planning zoning bodies, as well as historical societies and civic groups in all four communities. Copies will be delivered to public officials and local libraries, where it will be available for public inspection.

The New Scotland Historical Association has already requested a presentation of the study, Driscoll said. And copies have been distributed to the town's planning board for its consideration.

Lindsay Childs

"The town's and villages were instrumental in getting this done, and they're our primary audience," said Driscoll. "We would like to use this guide to help people understand what a significant resource they have in their communities. We think public education and public involvement is an important, way to do that.'

The planning committee was created in 1991 and included representatives of the Albany County planning and health departments, as well as appointees of the

Delmar woman: She's a dandy

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

Carol Butler Simons wasn't going to audition for Park Playhouse's production of "George M!," running now through Aug.18 in Albany's Washington Park.

"Auditions were during Easter weekend," Simons said, "and I was running around, getting things ready for meals and company, and didn't think I had time to do it. My father had loved Géorge M. Cohan, and had taken me once to a production of 'George M!' I got up on the day of the auditions and said to my father, who's deceased now, 'Look, Dad, I'm too busy for this, but if you think I should audition, send me a sign.'

While loading up on cold cuts at The Deli Warehouse, the store's music seeped its way past Simons' to-do list.

"The music was George M. Cohan's music," Simons said. "It was 'Give My Regards to Broadway,' and 'You're a Grand Old Flag." Auditions ended at 2 p.m., and Simons arrived at 1:30 — and has been singing "Mary" ever since "George M!" opened in July. For Simons, the sign from her father meant more than just winning a role in a play.

Five years ago, Simons, 47, was diagnosed with metastatic breast cancer. The stage four cancer was in her bones, ovaries and liver. An intense chemotherapy course called "the red devil," combined with Simons' selfdesigned homeopathic treatment of vitamins and medicines, shrank Simons'

Carol Butler Simons

This summer. Simons is battling her third recurrence of cancer and still taking her place on stage every evening. "I knew that the sign from my father meant that I would be well enough to perform all summer long," Simons said.

The show also keeps Simons' spirits up. "At the beginning of the show, I run up a couple of flights of stairs to be on the scaffolding," Simons said. "I'm glad that I can do it and glad that I can sing.' Simons' spirits are very upbeat, and cancer hasn't dimmed her sense of humor. "I always tell casting directors that I can supply my own wigs," she said. Currently, Simons takes Xeloda, a pill, twice a day, and while she experiences some of the common side effects of chemo, she hasn't lost her hair.

"Some people say they'd rather die than get chemo," she said. "I've done Simons hopes her experience will be an inspiration to others. "About 80,000 people will come and see this play," she said. "If somebody reads the Playbill and sees that I can do this while I'm undergoing treatment, maybe it will make them less afraid.'

In addition to performing in theater, Simons also sings around the Capital District to help raise money to fight cancer. "I sing with friends, and we call it 'Singing for the Cause,'" Simons said. She is also recording a CD of a song she wrote herself called "Wanna Be Here Tomorrow." "It's about hope, waiting for a cure and letting people know that there's life after diagnosis," Simons said.

Friends and faith have also helped Simons through some tough times. Simons baby-sits at Delmar's Health & Fitness and during times when she was too sick to work, friends filled in for her there. A dance teacher wouldn't let her pay for her daughter's dance lessons, and friends helped her move.

"The first summer I was diagnosed," Simons said, "my friends gave me a surprise party and gave me some money to do something fun with." Simons thought she would take her daughter on a cruise to Bermuda and found that her friends had given her exactly the amount of money she needed for that trip.

Faith has been another sustaining factor for Simons, who is Roman Catholic.

"I've survived so long because of the chemo, the homeopathic treatments and the fact that everyone in town prayed for me," she said. Simons said she couldn't imagine how people faced something so difficult without faith. "Why would I get mad at God now?" Simons asked, exhibiting some of the humor that carries her through. "Now's when I need him the

Police make DWI arrest

A Coeymans woman was arrested last week and charged with driving while intoxicated (DWI) in an incident on Route 9W in Selkirk.

According to police, the incident occurred shortly after 1 a.m. on Thursday, July 25, when Officer George Travis observed a southbound vehicle driving in the northbound lane and operating at excessive speed.

After stopping the vehicle, he administered field sobriety tests on Amy Lynn Karas, 23, of 74 Main St., Coeymans, and arrested her for DWI. She was also ticketed for speeding and failure to keep right.

Karas is due in Bethlehem Town Court on Aug. 6.

Library to offer Internet workshop

Bethlehem Public Library will hold an advanced Internet searching workshop Thursday, Aug. 8, at 9:30 and 11 a.m.

The class will cover advanced search techniques, Internet security, site evaluation and email. Registrants must have a command of basic computer skills and be comfortable navigating a Web page.

Both sessions will cover the same material, and each is limited to six participants. Register for one session only by calling 439-9314.

Two accidents reported

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Two recent traffic accidents on New Scotland Road in Slingerlands sent three Bethlehem residents to local hospitals.

While driving westbound on Friday, July 19, at about 1:20 p.m. near Price Chopper Plaza, a vehicle driven by Rolf A. Olsen, 73, of 22 Westphal Drive, Delmar, drifted off the road and struck a tree. Olsen, under medication for a heart condition, told police at the scene that he had fallen asleep behind the wheel.

Olsen, suffering from an arm injury, and his wife Marcelle, 79, a passenger in the vehicle who reported chest pain in the accident, were transported by Delmar Ambulance to Albany Medical Center for treatment.

A second accident, at about 8 a.m. on Monday, July 22, involved a vehicle eastbound in the same vicinity, driven by Sheila Hand, 43, of 90 Dorchester Ave., Selkirk. She struck a vehicle driven by 19-year-old Jessie Reinhardt of Slingerlands as it emerged from a driveway.

Reinhardt was unhurt in the incident, but Hand was transported by a police vehicle to St. Peter's Hospital for treatment of a reported neck injury.

No tickets were issued by police in either accident.

Board approves new stop signs

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The Bethlehem town board a passed several amendments to the town's vehicle and traffic laws and approved a settlement of a tax litigation case with General Electric at a meeting last week.

The meeting, chaired by deputy mayor George Lenhardt, began with three public hearings on proposed vehicle and traffic amendments. All involved adding stop signs, two at intersections and several in a newer development in Glenmont.

The revisions were recommended by traffic engineering consultant Mark Sargent of Creighton Manning Engineering, hired by the town last year to review several citizen requests for new signage fielded by the town police and highway departments.

One of the approved amendin Dowerskill Village in Glenmont, including a four-way stop at Hague Boulevard and Guilder Lane and signs on Windmill Drive at Hague and on Holland Court at Bernard Place.

The other two proposals reflected requests by residents to control "cut-though" traffic using side streets in older neighmore heavily trafficked roads. analysis did not find the heavy volume of such traffic that residents reported, in both cases it identified unusual circumstances, like poor sightlines and unclear rights-of-way, that called for the new signage.

Two yield signs on Oldox Road or slowing," he said. at its two intersections with Paxwood Road will be removed, Paxwood to make the oddly- according to association configured intersection a fourway stop.

Two new stop signs will also be installed to create a three-way stop at a Y-intersection where Village, Longwood and Tierney drives join.

The four-way stop at Oldox and Paxwood was one of two alternatives outlined by Sargent, and Chris Hanifin, whose written request last year prompted the inquiry, supported recommended four-way solution and presented a petition to that effect signed by most of his neighbors.

'As the report shows, there is safety concern at the intersection that does require some remediation," he said. "This isn't just a case of neighbors just complaining."

But Paxwood resident Jared ments will mean new stop signs King supported a more modest alternative, putting two stop signs in place to establish a clear rightof-way for Oldox — and board member Tom Marcelle agreed and voted no on the four-way version. But board members Doris Davis and Dan Plummer joined Lenhardt to pass it 3-1.

The other two proposals both passed unanimously. Resident borhoods of Delmar to avoid Brian Marler, who had requested the Village-Longwood-Tierney While Creighton Manning's three-way stop last fall, cited in particular concerns for the safety of children at a nearby bus stop.

president Tom Fiesinger, was pedestrian safety for the users of a recreational facility near the Hague-Guilder intersection -"and the traffic we've seen over the years that's been lulled into thinking (Hague Boulevard is) a country road.'

The association also requested all-way stops at the Hague-Windmill and Holland-Bernard intersections, both of which are near school bus stops, but Fiesinger said the group would support the single stop signs as "a good first step."

In another action, following a brief executive session to consider the terms of a settlement of litigation by General Electric challenging the 2001 and 2002 tax assessments of the company's Selkirk plant property on Creble Road, the board approved a recom-mendation to reduce GE's assessment from $29 million to $20.5 million.

Plummer, noting that GE is a client of his law firm, recused himself. Marcelle disclosed that he owns "several hundred shares" of GE stock, but declined to follow Plummer's lead and voted for the settlement proposal.

The agreement could mean an annual reduction of more than 150,000 in tax revenue for the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk School District based on current tax rates and smaller reductions for other affected taxing entities including the town, according to town assessor David Leafer. He declined to discuss details of the settlement, citing pending "certiori" litigation by Warehouse Services Inc., a tenant in the GE industrial park that has filed a grievance regarding its 2002

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

Stewart's, the Saratoga County-based operator of 315 convenience stores throughout northeastern New York, is seeking approval in the town of New Scotland to build number 316 along a stretch of Route 85.

The town's planning board will take up that proposal on Tuesday, Aug. 6, after a preliminary look at the project earlier this month. The proposed location of the new shop is 1936 New Scotland Road, a commercially-zoned 13-acre plot just north of Olsen's Nursery near the intersection with 85A. Typical of many of its locations, Stewart's proposes to build a 2,700-square-

They also propose to build 29 parking spaces and a 2,100-square-foot retail rental unit, suitable for a video store or adjacent to the convenience store; no tenant has yet been secured for that at present.

There's a lot of growth, not only in New Scotland itself but in project. "Route 85 is a major feeder road into Albany, and this is a natural location for growth. We're trying to position ourselves to capture people we're missing at our other nearby locations in Voorheesville and Clarksville."

Stewart's has a contingent purchase agreement with the current owners, town residents Donald and Robert Zautner, pending approval of the site plan and of zoning variances sought from the town Zoning Board of Appeals. The latter body took its first look at the proposal in June and referred the matter to the planning board for its recom-

Police arrest man on sex abuse charge

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

A Selkirk man faces a felony count of attempted sexual abuse in Town Court stemming from a July 23 incident — one of four individuals arrested last week by Bethlehem police in connection with sexual-misconduct incidents in Selkirk.

According to police spokesman Sgt. Thomas Heffernan, the felony incident took place at a roadside farm stand in the Selkirk area that Heffernan declined to identify in order to protect the victim.

Police said Kenneth John Turner, 48, approached the woman as she was preparing to open the stand, and began to talk did: When Turner allegedly attempted to seize the victim by the neck, she broke free of him.

"She scared Turner off and was able to get away from him" to a residence on the property, while Turner fled in his vehicle, Heffernan said. A license check of the vehicle led investigators from Bethlehem's Family Services unit to Turner's home, where they arrested him for felony sexual abuse, trespassing and harassment.

It's not such a long way from there to here

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

Oh, how the mighty have fallen. Barely four years ago, Christopher and I were going head-to-head over why, exactly, he would continue to be the only third grader who hadn't seen the movie "Air Force One."

Two years ago, he and his brother were silently triumphant when they saw a friend's father renting Austin Powers for them. Right in the video store, I chided the man for such an inappropriate pick for school-age children.

I should have called that man last Friday and offered to buy tickets for his whole family to see the latest shagadelic movie — he could have joined our family.

"I'm wearing big, dark glasses and a head scarf," I said as we concluded the negotiations that resulted in the boys being allowed to see the newest Austin Powers before they leave for college. The truth is, the guard's been slowly falling away since they first graduated from PBS to Cartoon Network, when Christopher was Once upon a time, they were as excited to see the latest Disney movie as they were "Austin Powers" last week. This summer. "Lilo and Stitch" only earned their disdain. Instead, we headed off "Bad Company" see and "The Bourne Identity".

∕∕∕om's

Both were good movies, but, man, all that violence - big shootouts. close-up shootings, people crashing through plate-glass doors, families huddling in basements. When the kids asked to see "Reign of Fire," my love for my husband deepened when he said I could have the night off, and he would take them. Is it a levels of frustration. I'm always on biological imperative that makes the men in my family love movies with explosions, crashing glass and hand-to-hand combat?

I'm first to say that things are way too violent in the media and in real life. I'm very uncomfortable with the arsenal my boys are building — the water guns and the countless sticks in the backyard which are crucial to a game called "Time Warp."

From what I can gather from my vantage point on the deck (far enough to seem to only be reading the paper, close enough to hear the change in voices that indicates real struggle), the game involves a competitive ranking system, pretend currency and land struggles.

All of this, my husband assures me, is normal boy behavior. We sometimes worry that current trends urging boys to be less aggressive short-circuit their hard-wiring and create huge the lookout for a way to channel the competitiveness and propensity for battle into something positive. We're looking for a Colin. Powell here, not an Osama bin Laden.

We face the task of parents in the information age, which is to help them filter all the information they get. Also, as one good friend says, our children are going to have to face many choices in their lives, and it's up to us to teach them how to make good choices. Guns bad, talking good, is the upshot of our post-action-movie speech. Sometimes, when brotherly battles over things like who gets to use the computer next dissolve into fists and curses, my volume goes way beyond talking.

Then, as only a mother can, I worry about what lesson I'm teaching them, as I go for sheer volume to break them up. Mommy's nuts, is probably what they'll conclude, but at least it will end the current battle.

And after James Bond made a poor choice regarding what woman to sleep with, the lesson was immediate: never sleep with a stranger; she might try to kill you. That's what is the most bothersome about Austin Power's lifestyle, and what I finally articulated to my boys. "I don't want you to think like he does about sex," I said, dredging up the lesson from my Catholic school days that sex is a gift from God for couples who want children.

"I know." Cormac interrupted. "We would never think that's the way it is in real life."

I got another dose of mother guilt that I wasn't totally appalled at Austin Power's latest antics. It ' was full of potty jokes, and even after all these years of living in a house full of boys, I still don't get & what's funny about flatulence.

But Mike Myers is very funny. His allusions are subtle and sly, and his physical comedy itself is riotously funny. Christopher and I were breathless and grabbing each others' arms during an innocently funny mole scene that kind of closeness is impossible to plan, and feels increasingly precious as the teen years approach.

During the same weekend, Cormac called to me from the TV room, that I should come see this hysterically funny show he'd found, Cosby. As I snuggled in next to him on the couch, I was grateful that he's still at an age where homey family shows are just as entertaining as spy thrillers and sexual farces.

BCHS senior lands lead in Schodack musical

By LINDA DeMATTIA

· A Bethlehem Central senior who made his acting debut as a sunspot in a third grade play entitled "Our Beautiful Galaxy" has landed the lead role in a new musical being performed in Rensselaer County in August.

Matthew Balluff, who heard about the open casting call through some friends, said he had to be part of "Not Another Musical!" - conceived and written by two Rensselaer County college students.

"I got a call and was asked to read the script," Balluff said. "I loved it and wanted to land a part. It's exciting being part of something that has never been done before, and I'm pleased that I got the role of Nick."

musical, which is the brainchild of Columbia High School graduates Don Ferlazzo of Schodack and Jessica Guyon of Rensselaer. Ferlazzo, who wrote the music and lyrics as well as coauthoring the story, is a television production major entering his sophomore year at Ithaca College. Guyon, also entering her sophomore year, is a theater major at Wagner College in Staten Island. She wrote the dialogue and will be directing and designing the costumes.

"Not Another Musical!" opens in a jazz club in Manhattan. Nick, having just graduated from law school and broken up with his girlfriend Meg, is sitting alone at the bar. His friend Joe the bartender tries to cheer him up by introducing him to the hot new jazz singer, Leila.

When Nick walks Leila home, he finds he is transported to "Euphoria," a place where everything is one big musical. Meg, who followed him hoping to reconcile their romance, also becomes trapped in this land of and Chris Ferro, as well as Troy

"I got the idea while attending a performance of 'Rent' a couple of years ago," Ferlazzo explained of the inspiration for the show. "I was watching the cast members sing and dance and talk to themselves on stage, and then I thought, 'This is ridiculous, yet nobody on stage seems to realize that!' Then I got the idea of a guy getting trapped in one big, ridiculous musical."

Ferlazzo went home and started writing the first song, "Life in a Musical," which, oddly enough, ended up being the last song completed for the show, he said. He enlisted the help of his friend Guyon and over the last two years, they fleshed out the story, music and dance routines.

Now just weeks away from Nick is the male lead in the opening night, the group is busy with rehearsals, making costumes, props and sets. The production is going even better than they had hoped, Ferlazzo

He and Guyon have added musical cues and dialog based on suggestions by the actors. One such suggestion from Balluff was changing a musical fight scene. He volunteered to do the choreography for the scene because he has done it before.

"It is very easy working with Don and Jess," he said. "They listen to suggestions and are very open to the actors ideas. We are really having a lot of fun, too"

In addition to Balluff, the production includes another former Bethlehem student, Betsy Stambach, who is the production's orchestral director.

Matters of Opinion

Wake-up call

The recently released Helderberg Escarpment Planning Guide can and should be a resounding wake-up call about preserving an area of spectacular beauty and rich geological history in our region.

The guide involves the towns of New Scotland and Guilderland and the village of Altamont, but is actually a regional blueprint for preservation of a unique landscape that must be protected from both above and below the escarpment. In order to do this, we need to remind ourselves of the importance and uniqueness of the escarpment.

Driving from Delmar on Route 85 to New Scotland and on to Altamont on Route 156 is a history lesson and a visual feast. The road itself isn't in the best of shape (and we hope it stays that way) and on our trip ours was the only car on the road after leaving Voorheesville.

That made it easier to view the majestic escarpment and think about its natural value to the area. This lower view could be tainted by a glut of suburban sprawl and a sea of vinyl clusters denuded of trees, drawing attention to itself by its drabness and lack of character.

If that were to happen, the escarpment would lose some of its splendor, some of its presence. There are some developments along the route, but most are not obtrusive and do not spoil the view.

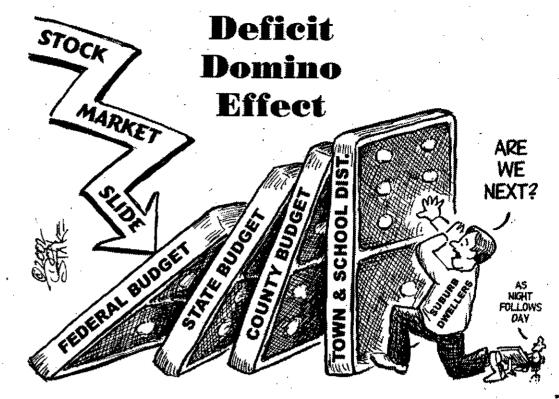

Looking at the escarpment from below is like taking a trip far back into history and one that shouldn't be spoiled for future generations. Our children and grandchildren should be able to experience the escarpment as it is and has been for many many years.

It is a genuinely awesome view, and it's not in a book that shows the way it used to be. It's up close and very in your face personal.

The committee that prepared the guide is hoping that its recommendations for the future of the escarpment will be shared by the public. This is an opportunity for towns and villages to come together toward a greater goal.

The first step is to examine the escarpment guide and its recommendations. The second is to convince town and village leaders that this is something we all care about and want to preserve. Take the time to take the back roads to Altamont to remind yourself of what we should never take for granted. This is a gift from nature that must be protected.

We applaud the committee's effort to help us begin to see this natural resource in a way that will help us better understand what now needs to be done to preserve it.

Recycling raises many questions

By MARY ARMAO McCARTHY

At the moving up ceremony for Fiddler's Lane Nursery School, my grandson Noah was named Resident Recycler. I'm not sure where his passion for recycling came from, but I've learned a lot as we do intergenerational bond-ing over his favorite video, about — what else — recycling.

I have always regarded myself as a responsible citizen, so I recycle. It has been entertaining but humbling to have my 4-year-old grandson give me lessons on container codes and other details, because he understands them better than I do.

Recycling has been receiving new attention with a proposal to increase bottle deposits and the decision in New York City to stop collecting glass and plastic, stating that processing them is too costly and has limited results.

A friend of mine who teaches environmental science has told me for years that accomplishments of our recycling efforts are more myth than reality, a kind of conscience salve for our overconsumption. But she feels it's best to keep a low profile on this. I find myself facing the difficult question: Where has the road of my own good intentions led?

Several months ago, I spent considerable time on the telephone because I was determined to finally figure out what I can recycle. It's not simple, and there's no one-stop shopping. Because my trash collector does use the town dump, the things they collect are not the same. My trash collector will take newspapers, magazines and cardboard. By going to the town dump, I can also recycle office paper, junk mail and batteries. Only my local supermarket will take plastic bags.

I am painfully aware that my understanding remains incomplete. I'm still not sure if I can recycle brown paper bags. When I made calls this winter for general information, no one mentioned plastic container codes

Then Noah took up recycling this spring and showed me these numbers, which appear on the bottom of plastics inside the triangular symbol that indicates an item can be recycled. When I thought to look on the Colonie town Web site, it said they take Nos. 1, 2 and 3. Who knew? And now, I must find out if this is the same for my trash collector.

I still have lots of questions.

Do plastics, which are mainly petroleum byproducts, have less environmental impact than products made from natural resources such as wood?

Have lumber practices and reforestation programs been successful enough to remove concerns about overuse of paper products?

Does the amount of soap and water needed to clean the residue from an empty peanut butter jar negate the benefit of recycling it?

Can a former New York City kid learn to compost? Should I?

What happened to all the bottle tops that I'd put in recycling before Noah taught me they were not accepted?

I have lived through the transition from deposit bottles to disposables and back again. I used to theorize that the demise of back porches contributed to disposable soda bottles, because none of us had space to store them anymore. But then, a legislative mandate for recycling began, and we found that there was nothing like a deposit law to help us discipline ourselves to store and return used bottles. The current proposal to increase the deposit and to extend it to noncarbonated drinks encourage us all still further.

Before recycling became the responsibility of municipalities, we used to sell our old newspapers at the Port of Albany. Twenty years ago, that was the only way to recycle paper. Newspapers piled up in alarming quantities at our house because my husband, who loves a good newspaper, read four a day (two locals, The Wall Street Journal and The New York Times).

Calls came up empty to our town, to the Boy Scouts; to anyone I could think of who might recycle. So off we went to the port, where papers were purchased for a recycled paper market. Our kids loved it. Driving our car twice onto the industrial scale. Then comparing the withand-without-newspaper weight. We even made a few bucks.

And making a few bucks is what is driving the decision to suspend some recycling in New York City. Mayor Michael Bloomberg has objected to the cost of recycling glass, metal and plastic, half of which he says winds up in the landfill anyway.

Hard questions arise. Is such expense and effort justified, even if the result is not a success? How do we measure success? And most importantly, how do we make our programs a success?

I urge that we use these discussions to improve recycling; to reduce all the confusion and make our systems more effective; to implement methods to reduce unnecessary packaging and waste; and to transfer a healthier planet to all our little Noahs.

Group gears up for diabetes walk

Editor, The Spotlight:

Many people, both kids and adults, in Bethlehem and neighboring towns live with raised will benefit diabetes diabetes every day. For people with diabetes, every day can be a struggle.

Many of us take insulin — up to three or four shots daily — just to survive. We must measure all of the food that we eat. We must test our blood sugar by pricking our fingers up to seven or more times every day.

Still, even when we do all of this, we run a great risk of developing some or all of the lifethreatening complications that strike people who have diabetes for a number of years.

Over the past three years, our community has rallied around an important cause — finding a cure for diabetes. People from all over our town and beyond have joined together as Bethlehem Cares, a team that has participated in the Walk to Cure Diabetes, sponsored by the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation.

Thus far, we have raised more than $50,000 for this cause. On Sept. 29, Bethlehem Cares will participate in this year's walk at Corporate Woods in Albany. You can join us as a walker this year by calling 439-6894 or by pre-brochures found in many local Decker, Sbuttoni, Boghosian & businesses. All of the money research

If you are one of the first 175 people to turn in at least $25 for diabetes research, you will receive a free team T-shirt. We would like to thank our business friends for sponsoring our T-shirt this year, especially our presenting sponsor, DeGraff, Foy, Holt-Harris, Kunz & Devine. Our team also has three gold sponsors, Crossroads Ford Mercury, the Kiwanis Club of Delmar and Meadowbrook

We would also like to thank all of our silver sponsors: Allen & Taub Plumbing & Heating, Bethlehem Family Practice, Blackman & DeStefano Real Estate, Callanan Industries, Capital Cities Imported Cars, Capital District Oral & Maxillofacila Surgeons, Choices Hair Studio and Day Spa, Delmar Pediatrics and Farm Family Casualty Insurance Co.

Assembly candidates kick-off campaign

By JOSEPH A. PHILLIPS

The candidates who will face off in November in the newlyredrawn 108th Assembly District, which now includes Bethlehem, launched their respective public campaigns in July.

At a public appearance on Tuesday, July 16, at the gazebo at Coeymans Landing before a small group of family, Democratic leaders and campaign supporters., attorney M. Tracy Brooks of Coeymans formally kicked off her effort to unseat five-term incumbent Republican Pat Casale

A week later, on Tuesday, July 23, Casale chose the backdrop of Trov's Monument Square to launch a whirlwind round of public announcements, including an appearance at Bethlehem town hall, to set his own campaign in Casale has also won the backing of the Conservative and Right-to-Life parties — but the two will go head-to-head in a Sept. 10 primary for the Independence Party line. Brooks qualified for listing on the primary ballot as a registered member of the party,

The outlines of the campaign are already clear. "Experience counts," Casale said in his kickoff, stressing his years in office as a Troy city councilman, mayor and Rensselaer County clerk prior to the Assembly.

But Brooks' campaign will make a virtue of her newcomer status against a mid-60-ish veteran pol. Democratic leaders believe a 32-year-old, female first-time radically-redrawn district.

"Those are all things where she has Pat Casale beat," said New Scotland's Mike Burns, Albany County's Democratic chairman — and offer perhaps the party's best opportunity upstate to wrest away a Republican seat and add to its Assembly majority.

"Sure, it's unfamiliar territory for Tracy," said County Executive Michael Breslin of Delmar, who attended the Coeymans event. "But it's a lot of unfamiliar territory for Pat Casale as well."

And party leaders cite recent Democratic inroads in Bethlehem despite setbacks in last year's elections — as a positive sign. "We'll do much better for her than we did last fall," said Selkirk resident and town committee member Howard Shafer.

The shifting of party loyalties in Bethlehem will be a key factor in the election's outcome. numerical enrollment advantage

> Only a small portion of Troy and a string of Rensselaer County communities from Schaghticoke to Rensselaer remain from Casale's former district. The 108th also now encompasses Coeymans in Albany County, as well as portions of Greene and Columbia counties, all formerly represented by Assemblyman John Faso, whose district has been disassembled in the candidate will be a plus in a reapportionment process, in the wake of his decision to step down to run for state comptroller.

Casale said he is unconcerned about the new configuration. "Half of the district's new to me," he said. "But the whole district's new to my opponent." He believes he will have little trouble with name recognition or running on his record.

"I feel very comfortable in Albany County," he said. "I also have a very high voter identification and favorable ratings in Columbia County. It's a very conservative district, and I have one of the highest conservative ratings in the Legislature." Now the owner of a liquor store in downtown Troy, he is a former salesman on the west side of the Hudson.

"In some communities," he said, "it's like meeting old friends again."

The new 108th offers a slight but independent and third party voters outnumber either bloc a demographic Casale said he faced in his old district, which extended into Saratoga County and included Rensselaer County's mix of urban and rural.

to stay focused," said Scotia's Pam Fitzgerald, who heads up a local group of marathon canoers. "There are some tactics. You can it up," Young draft other boats like in an auto said. "I got into draft other boats like in an auto race, and if you can get other people to go into shallower water and you stay in deeper water, you can also gain an advantage.

The sport has been around for a long time, but it's only been part of the Empire State Games the last three years as a master's (senior) division event.

"Canoe racing at the games participating in isn't as competitive as we'd like it Fitzgerald's to be, but we're trying to build it back up," Fitzgerald said.

The races at the Empire State Games last from 6 to 10 miles, but other marathon canoeing courses are anywhere from 15 to as many as 120 miles in length. To prepare, Fitzgerald and several other rowers meet weekly to train on the Mohawk River.

"I live right on the river, so it's easy for me to host the group,' Fitzgerald said.

Fitzgerald's group includes a pair of Delmar rowers — Dale Carpenter and Brian Young.

"The group ... is very committed," Carpenter said. "We paddle virtually 12 months of the vear."

"We practice every Tuesday night and have races from the Rexford Bridge every Wednesday," Young said.

Fitzgerald, Carpenter and Young took different routes to the world of marathon canoeing.

"I work at the Center for Sports Medicine, and one of the doctors there got me into it when I hurt my wrist and couldn't do judo anymore," Fitzgerald said. "I kind of liked it right from the start. It was a different sport than what I had been used to."

Carpenter came across Fitzgerald's group by chance and

SENIORS AND RECREATION

Older adults exercise more frequently than their teenage grandchildren, according to a study published by American Sports Data. The national survey indicated that 26% of people over 55 exercised at least 100 times in the past year, compared with 18% of those from ages 12 to 17. Apparently, older Americans are taking to heart the proven notion that exercise improves the quality of life and promotes longer life. The exercise that is most popular among older adults is walking. According to the Sporting Goods Manufacturers Association, the most popular sports for seniors (based on frequency of participation) are recreational walking (1), fitness walking (2), and treadmill exercise (3). Stretching came in fourth place, followed by golf.

Recreation isn't always easy as our bodies age, but moving our muscles so we don't lose even more mobility is essential. At Good Samaritan Lutheran Health Care Center, 125 Rockefeller Road, Delmar, we help our residents find the right exercise or movement regimen that suits their medical and health care needs. the All-Stars survived several single-elimination games to win the Section 2 championship.

"You can't do it if you don't have all the pieces of the puzzle, and this team has all the pieces of the puzzle," deVries said. "These kids are a special group. They're very good players for their age group.'

Tri-Village's run was placed in jeopardy when it lost to Geneva 9-2 in last Saturday's openinground game of the doubleelimination state tournament, but the All-Stars' bats came alive against Massapequa Coast last Sunday. Mike Carroll and Mike Bellizzi each launched solo home runs, and Carroll added an RBI double to help Tri-Village stay

They didn't have the kind of dominant pitcher that Geneva had," deVries said. "We were able to string things together, and we also had big hits by Mike Carroll and Mike Bellizzi,'

The All-Stars wrapped up their bid to the state tournament last Thursday when they shut down Ramapo 6-0 in the Section 2 finals.

"It was tremendous. You've never seen a better played baseball game at any level as that one," deVries said.

Carroll was sharp on the pitcher's mound and at the plate. He limited Ramapo — which beat Sorensco (East Greenbush) 11-10 last Wednesday — to three hits and struck out 16, and he helped his own cause with a two-run homer.

Nick Nardacci contributed an RBI double, and Matt Nash added a two-run single to help Tri-Village put Ramapo away.

"The score did not indicate how close the game really was," deVries said. "Ramapo was a very good team,"

The All-Stars, who hadn't lost a game in their playoff run prior to the state tournament, couldn't get anything going against Geneva in last Saturday's opener at American Little League. Down 2-0 in the bottom of the first inning, Tri-Village manufactured a run on three walks and a wild

After that, the All-Stars were kept off the scoreboard until Carroll belted a solo home run late in the game — one of only three hits they managed against Geneva pitcher Torrell Northrup.

"If he could get ahead of you in the count, then he could go to this fading off-speed pitch that was difficult to hit," deVries said.

Robbie Gilles and Kyle Schroeder each belted two-run homers for Geneva, which dropped into the consolation bracket with a loss to Harlem last Sunday.

"The top five players in the Geneva lineup were responsible for all nine of their runs," deVries

Whether or not Tri-Village was able to avenge its loss to Geneva and stay alive in the state playoffs Monday, deVries said that this year's All-Star team has already made history.

"It basically raises the bar for where Tri-Village players have to go," deVries said. "It does create a point for future teams to focus four towns and the village of Altamont. The group surveyed a roughly 60-square-mile area that encompasses Thacher State Park the Black Creek Marsh Wildlife Management Area in Guilderland, which extends into New Scotland, and agricultural and residential areas both above and below the escarpment, which rises to elevations of nearly 1,800 feet above the valley floor.

"The idea of the planning guide was that the escarpment is a regional asset," said Lindsay Childs, a former member of Guilderland's planning and zoning boards who co-edited the study with Driscoll. "Some people call it the signature landform of Albany County. It's ecology is very interesting, with a variety of habitats because of the varied altitudes.

"Geologically, its very sense the birthplace of American paleontology. And of course it's beautiful, and that's the bottom line as far as I'm concerned. The views from the top are spectacular, seen by hundreds of thousands of visitors every year, but the views from the bottom are also quite nice, and we want to make sure both are preserved and used."

The study calls upon each of the municipalities to better inventory the resources of the study area, including its geological features above and below ground, wetland and groundwater resources, plant and animal species and its scenic resources. It also urges public education to foster recreational use of the area and a better understanding of its character.

The study recommends comprehensive zoning standards and other land-use measures to preserve agricultural land and to protect the historically and environmentally unique features. A key recommendation is the important because it was in some creation of special zoning districts to help preserve open space through changes in zoning density and lot sizes in the affected areas.

These would include a "critical zone" designation for an area within roughly 500 feet of the escarpment itself, both above and below, and including the Onesquethaw Creek corridor just west of Clarksville.

The area and its unique "karst" geology poses problems for groundwater contamination, particularly with the growing pressure for additional use of the creek as a water source for the Bethlehem Water District, which has sought year-round use of a "diversion" of the creek to Vly Creek Reservoir.

The study recommends strict limits to any development within the critical zone.

Just east of the lowland portion of that zone, an area in New Scotland roughly west of New Salem and Feura Bush and bounded by Rock Hill Road between the two hamlets, the group proposes to develop a "Lowland Zone" designation in which 5-acre zoning density and special clustering regulations for residential development would be adopted, as well as rigorous site plan review. Some areas above the escarpment in the uplands would receive similar treatment under the study's recommendations.

The study also endorsed use of transfer of development rights agreements as an effective curb on development. Coupled with their density and clustering recommendations, the report states, "These techniques can result in the preservation of farmland, open space and wildlife habitat, and the location of homes so that they are partly hidden by vegetation and terrain when viewed from the Escarpment."

The study predicts "significant development pressure in the next decades" on the lowland areas. "The area below the Escarpment will become a prime target for development. The preparation of sound management plans that transcends municipal boundaries should be a priority in this unique area."

The study particularly notes concern about the impact of development around the Black Creek Marsh. "Any proposed development adjacent to this marsh should trigger a review process that includes an assessment of possible impacts to the plants and animals of the marsh," it says, with a particular eye toward maintaining existing flows of groundwater into the

Among other recommendations of particular interest in New Scotland:

- The study calls for better mapping of the underground "karst terrain" that makes aquifers and wells particularly susceptible to groundwater contamination. It also proposes consideration of "karst overlay zones," creation of wastewater management districts and other land use controls to restrict development in these areas.
- It recommends the use of transfers of development rights to preserve the limited remaining farmland in the study area, like the agreement entered into by the ACLC and Indian Ladder Farms in Voorheesville last year.
- The study draws attention to the concept of "viewshed analysis" and particularly in focusing on the views available from below the escarpment. And, said Driscoll, it addresses the concern over "light pollution" in the area. "There's a lot of people we've spoken to in New Scotland and Knox who are very interested in discussing how to control the spread of light pollution from residential and industrial development," he said.
- It also calls for development of biking trails in the lowland areas - and development of more hiking trails, including one "along the base of the Escarpment from New Salem to Altamont and connecting with the Thacher Park trail system." It recommends using conservation easements and property tax abatements to acquire access to the private land necessary for creating such a

The study grew out of a conference held in Knox in 1991 to encourage a regional approach development in the Escarpment area. "There was a sense that the municipalities needed to get together and understand how fragile the escarpment is, and to create a comprehensive regional plan to manage it," said Childs.

Completed last February after numerous drafts and published by ACLC, the study will now be distributed to the municipalities.

"I've just sent it to all of the boards — the town boards, planning boards, zoning and conservation boards — and offered to give them presentations," Driscoll said. While the Guilderland town board has been the only taker so far, he expects to make additional presentations to other governmental bodies in the coming months. Civic groups including several local Kiwanis Clubs have also asked for presentations.

Copies will also be distributed to the Albany County Visitors Center and to local bookshops including The Book House in Stuyvesant Plaza and I Love Books in Delmar.

The study notes that it lacks the force of law, but Childs said, "I think this will be a useful guide to planning bodies and anybody considering development in the area. I think our most important recommendation is to try to make everyone aware of what kind of resource the escarpment area is, what its problems are, what its opportunities are. It's a very special place, and it will remain special only as long as people respect what makes it special."

most."

Simons said she doesn't think about dying, but about living, particularly for her 14-year-old daughter Breanna.

"A teen-age daughter needs her mother," Simons said. "Right now, as she's starting her freshman year in high school, my biggest prayer is that God will give me four more years with her."

Simon's mother, Joan Burke, lives with Simons, her husband Stephen, and Breanna. Burke is also a cancer survivor and has just returned from a cruise after battling colon cancer.

Simons grew up in Locust Valley on Long Island in what she described as a "fantasy child-

She attended the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and Pace University, and spent some time at London's Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. She did some acting in New York City and Long Island before moving to the Capital District. When Breanna was six months old, Simons played the lead in The Village Stage's production of "Pajama Game." She has also performed with Steamer 10 and the Schenectady Light Opera Company. Twelve years ago, she started working at Delmar Health on.

& Fitness and has also run a toddler class called "Musical Moppets," which she hopes to teach again.

It was while performing "Guys and Dolls" for Park Playhouse that Simons was first diagnosed with cancer. She remembers seeing a bald woman in the front row of the audience one night.

"I thought about her all night," Simons said. "I wondered how anyone can have fun when they've had that diagnosis. Life takes some funny turns, doesn't it?"

That same summer, Simons met her husband, who she said was her "stage door Johnny," undaunted by her cancer diagnosis. Today, Simons draws on the strength that family, friends and her oncologist, Dr. Steven Grund, give her. On Aug. 4, she'll be singing "God Bless America" in a benefit that Park Playhouse is doing for Strides for the Cure.

"I know there's going to be a cure," Simons said. "If not for me, then my daughter will never have to deal with this." Now, Simons is going about the business of living. "It's important for cancer people to go on and have fun," Simons said. As she takes her place on the scaffolding as the show opens, it's clear that, in Simon's case, so much more than the show will go principal owner, notified the IDA on July 23 of the company's intent to seek a $75,000 grant under Build Now NY, an economic development initiative administered by the Empire State Development Corp.

Build Now offers seed money to help develop pre-permitted, shovel-ready business development sites around the state and promotes those sites to companies seeking new locations in the state. Pataki announced on June 27 that a second round of 25 Build Now grants of up to $75,000 each will be awarded this year, with a July 31 application deadline.

One of the three announced objectives of the current round of Build Now grants is to promote the development of multi-tenant business and tech parks. Haseotes has proposed a pair of adjoining parcels totalling about 88 acres on Wemple Road as the future home of Bethlehem Technology Park, an initiative the IDA has touted for nearly two

In order to qualify for the Build Now grants, applicants must match the state award. In a special meeting on July 24, the IDA voted to provide $37,500 toward that requirement, provided Haseotes matched it and Milltowne wins the grant. The IDA also drafted a letter of support to be submitted Milltowne's with along application.

Sharon Hoorwitz

Should Milltowne fail to winning a Build Now award, last week's IDA resolution stipulates that the matching money will be partially refunded to the IDA. The agency also agreed to consider entering into a purchase-option agreement with Milltowne for the park parcel.

The IDA began discussing the possibility of partnering with Haseotes to develop the park site after a proposed option agreement between Milltowne and another potential park developer, Albany-based Anderson Group, expired last month.

The IDA's newly-hired development economic coordinator, Brian Hannafin, subsequently identified Build Now NY as a potential funding source for exploring the project and attended an informational meeting on the program held by EDC earlier this month before recommending that Haseotes

IDA chairman Michael Tucker described the matching funding the agency will provide as a "cautious first step" into a new undertaking by the agency.

"We discussed the request from Milltowne regarding our assistance to help them with the project, and we entered into a discussion of the best way to assist them, considering the various options we had discussed" at a previous meeting on July 18, he said.

Those options included develop the park within a year of spending $25,000 to obtain a purchase option on the parcel in the agency's name. "But we weren't sure we wanted to be in the land development business,' said Tucker.

> Instead, he said, "The ability to partner with Milltowne and match the state grant requirement, to the tune of a $37,500 expenditure by us, will hopefully give Milltowne $150,000 to explore their options and pursue the project." It also buys the IDA more time, until Sept. 30, to further consider its own purchase-option alternative.

Build Now NY's current round of grant recipients, to be selected following review of the applicants by site selection consultants Lockwood Greene, are scheduled to be announced by Sept. 25.

State museum begins reflection on 9/11

By DEV TOBIN

t's a question that every public and many private institutions will soon face with the urgency that comes with a first anniversary - how to commemorate the Sept. 11 terror attacks, particularly those that brought down the World Trade Center towers in lower Manhattan.

For the New York State Museum, the question is not just what to do for the anniversary in six weeks, but also for the future, as the museum works to reconfigure its New York Metropolis Hall to host a permanent exhibit of artifacts from the World Trade Center site.

For this first anniversary, the museum will host a touring exhibit of 42 remarkable photographs by photographers from the renowned Magnum Photos agency, opening this week and running through Oct. 14.

. And the museum will begin displaying its collection of artifacts from the World Trade Center site, which include a partially crushed fire engine and thousands of smaller bits and pieces, all destined for the permanent exhibit. The initial exhibit, as a companion to the Magnum show, is entitled "Preserving History: New York State Museum and the World Trade Center."

The Magnum agency was founded in 1947 by famous photographer's Robert Capa and Henri Cartier-Bresson, among others, as an outlet for independent photojournalists. Eleven agency photographers were in Manhattan for a meeting on the Monday night before that fateful Tuesday morning. They were there when the biggest, most shocking news event of at least a generation took place, and headed out with their cameras.

"These are photos most of the public hasn't seen they're rare and unique,"said Mark Schaming, director of exhibitions.

While the photographs are not gory, they may not be appropriate for children, particularly those who were greatly affected by the attacks and subsequent media coverage, Schaming noted.

Schaming said the photographs complement the museum's first attempt to present artifacts from Ground Zero, including architectural fragments, signs and things from the daily life of the massive office towers, as well as memorials from the area around the site.

> "There's great drama to this material (from the site); it looks like history," Schaming said. "It's very interesting to see photos of the collapse, along with objects from the scene."

Schaming said he has been to the Fresh Kills landfill in Staten Island, where ton after ton of debris from the World Trade Center site was brought, 30 times so far.

"We had a very narrow window to collect and we acted quickly," Schaming said. "We had to think about what people from 100 years from now would want us

The result is the most comprehensive collection of artifacts from the Ground Zero site, that will be organized in the permanent exhibit around the themes of Rescue, Recovery and Response, Schaming

The Magnum exhibit was organized in cooperation with the New York Historical Society; it has toured to Atlanta already and will go on to Chicago after Albany. Photos from the exhibit and more are in a book: "New: York September 11 by Magnum Photographers," that is on sale in the museum shop.

The museum is open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free and free parking is available just west of the museum for museum-goers.

MPT (Miles Per Tire) How to Get More

What's the going price for a set of four tires for the typical car? If you guessed $300 you fell short of the mark. Car Care Council says four tires of quality that come on a mid-size car, such as a Ford Taurus, would cost about $400 plus sales tax and disposal fee. Failure to protect this investment with proper inflation, rotation and alignment can accelerate tire wear by about 20%, the equivalent of $80 over the life of the tires. Adding to the cost, says the Council, is the effect on gas mileage. Car Care Council offers a pamphlet,

"Be Tire Smart, Play

Your Part". Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Car Care Council. Dept. TIRE, 42 Park Drive, Port Clinton.
