Clark, LaChappelle square off in supervisor's race

By MICHELE FLYNN

Incumbent New Scotland Supervisor Ed Clark, a Republican, and Democratic candidate Wayne LaChappelle agree on some issues, including expanding the tax base through economic development, and making water more available to those who need it.

"We want to keep things the way they are. We don't want runaway development," said Clark.

Clark

He sees the residents planning advisory committee as a way to work through growth.

"The committee will help maintain balance between development and suburbanization, which we want to avoid," Clark said.

He also wants to keep farms in New Scotland.

"We want to find ways to make agriculture economically feasible and maintain the rural character of the town," Clark said. "We want to make it practical for people to continue to farm here."

LaChappelle had a similarly cautious approach.

"We have to court clean commercial growth," he said. "We need a clean commercial area that is environmentally safe, nice to look at and a financial benefit to the town."

He envisions the area around routes 85 and 85A as an area of targeted growth, with beautiful professional buildings and retail.

It has been said that there are three issues in the town of New Scotland: water, water and water.

LaChappelle

LaChappelle and Clark are each ready to address the water needs of the town. LaChappelle would like to extend the water districts. Clark wants to create a water cooperative in areas where it's difficult to provide water.

Clark is completing his first term as town supervisor. He previously served as mayor of Voorheesville.

"I thought I had a lot to offer and it was a good way to put my experience to use," he said of his 2001 run. "I thought we needed an experienced supervisor and wanted to continue (former Supervisor) Martha Pofit's work."

"I've enjoyed the job a great deal: the opportunity to meet a lot of people, work with them and solve problems with them and for them," he said. "That's why I was mayor for 17 years. I like doing it."

LaChappelle is not happy with how things are currently run in the town.

"It's a wishy-washy government. We need government to be responsible to the people," he said.

"We need fiscal responsibility in the office of the supervisor. I doubt it takes four people to run the office," LaChappelle added. "They could be useful elsewhere."

Eagles soar over Hudson

By KRISTEN OLBY

A Selkirk park along the shore of the Hudson River is proving to be a hotspot for bird watchers eager to catch a glimpse of the endangered bald eagle.

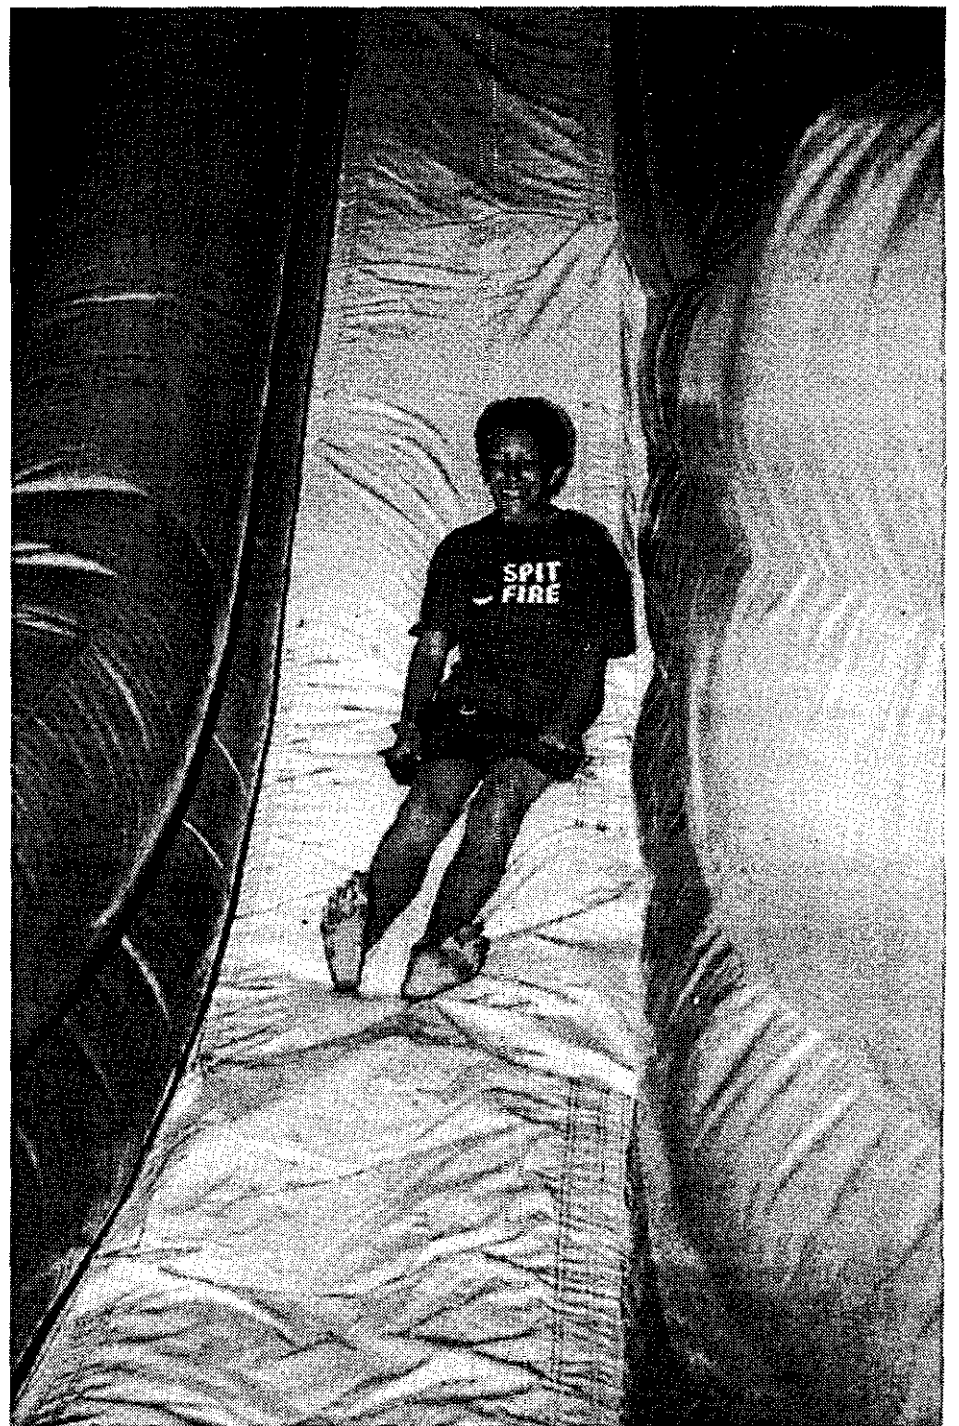

With its striking white head and magnificent size — a mature eagle has a seven-foot wingspan — the bird is hard to miss. Several park goers have spotted the impressive birds at Henry Hudson Park along Route 144.

"It was incredible," said David Young, who spotted a bald eagle during an evening visit to the park. "It sort of swooped down and circled around, and we realized it was a bald eagle."

Sightings of the birds along the shores of the river aren't

Developers target Van Dyke parcel

Proposal features senior rental units

By KRISTEN OLBY

Ninety-one acres of plush farmland, known as the Leonard Farm on Van Dyke Road in Delmar, may one day be transformed to include hundreds of houses designated specifically for seniors. At least that's the plan, Edward Feinberg and Rex Ruthman of Van Dyke Spinney development firm — would like to see approved.

The duo brought Adams Station, a 282-unit apartment complex, to Delmar in the late 1980s. The developers presented their proposal to rezone the farmland from residential to a Senior Citizen Residence District at the July 9 town board meeting.

The town board unanimously approved referring the application to the planning board for consideration.

"Our population in Bethlehem is getting older, and a lot of those people no longer want to deal with their housing situation," said Feinberg.

The senior complex would include 220 single-family, ranch style homes on roughly half of the 91 acres, leaving the other 45 acres relatively undisturbed. The homes, consisting of one and two bedrooms, would be rented to seniors, age 62 and older, for roughly $900 to $1,200 a month. Construction is estimated to take about two years at a cost of roughly $12 to $15 million.

The developers maintain there's a need for low-maintenance housing complexes geared toward seniors. An estimated 6,000 people over age 60 reside in Bethlehem.

"Most people in their 60s and 70s are quite active and do not need convalescent care," said Feinberg.

The senior complex would include a community center, trails, walkways and possibly a pool. Under the zoning code, children would be excluded from living at the complex.

There are four assisted care facilities for the elderly in Bethlehem, with a fifth under construction, and one full-time nursing home. Seniors also have three "affordable" apartment complexes available with state-subsidized rental assistance.

Police arrest 2 for DWI Kenwood center to open in Rensselaer

Bethlehem police arrested two individuals for driving while intoxicated (DWI) last week.

Debra Luck, 39 of 180 Whitbeck Road, Coeymans Hollow, was stopped while driving on the Delmar bypass on July 7 at 12:43 a.m.

Police said Luck failed to signal for a right turn and crossed the white fog lines. Luck failed field sobriety tests, police said, and was charged with felony DWI. The felony charge stems from a prior DWI conviction in 1995. Luck is scheduled to appear in Town Court later this month.

Adolf Paliwoda, 63, of 1651 Tibbits Ave., Troy, was stopped by police while driving on the Delmar bypass on July 6 at 1:23 a.m. Police say Paliwoda failed to signal for a turn and crossed the hazard markings. Paliwoda failed a chemical test, police said, and was charged with DWI.

By KRISTEN OLBY

A 35-year-old Albany day care center on the verge of closing its doors has secured funding to move to a new location and remain open.

Kenwood Child Development Center, located off Route 9W, has gathered nearly all of the $75,000 needed to renovate the former St. John's School in Rensselaer, and just in the nick of time.

Kenwood will move from its current location on the Convent of the Sacred Heart campus Aug. 15. The convent asked the school to relocate last October so the space could be used to house aging members of the religious order. But without funds to make state-mandated renovations to the former school, Kenwood's future was uncertain.

"We said, 'we believe in miracles' and it's been a miracle," said Betty Bellino, former executive director of Kenwood.

Kenwood's board of directors voted July 1 to make the move after receiving a $52,000 grant from the Schenectady-based Wright Family Foundation to be used toward renovating St. John's.

Kenwood officials said state Senate Majority Leader Joseph Bruno has also promised the center an additional $25,000 state grant, with final confirmation expected from Bruno's office this week. Contributions from parents, former students and businesses have brought in roughly $12,000 over the course of three months.

By May, Kenwood had only $5,000 raised for renovations. The center held fund-raisers in a last-ditch effort to raise more money.

"It was looking bleak, we were discouraged, and we were preparing for the worst case scenario," said Marc Inger of Glenmont, president of Kenwood's board of directors.

The uncertainty forced roughly 20 parents to find alternative day care sites. The school, which is licensed to care for 106 children, now has a new location but a shortage of students to fill it. Kenwood will lose 35 students this fall, when children move on to kindergarten. A survey of Kenwood's parents shows 40 students will make the move to the Rensselaer location.

"It's imperative we get our enrollment back up to 90 as quickly as possible," said Inger.

Kenwood officials are optimistic the move to Rensselaer will boost enrollment. Downtown Rensselaer has no other day care option for low-income families, Inger said.

Kenwood serves children age 6 weeks through pre-kindergarten, with approximately 30 percent of the children living in low-income homes.

Renovations to St. John's will begin once Kenwood signs the lease. Fire retardant doors, emergency lights, classroom sinks and kitchen modifications will need to be made.

Kenwood was spared the expense of installing a $20,000 sprinkler system required by the state in classrooms serving children age 3 and under. The center applied for and was granted a waiver of the requirement by the state.

Positive thinking pays off

By JACOB DAY

For anyone looking to get back on track, develop new goals, spark a life change or simply get their lives focused on a new path, the Positive Plan may help.

Recent studies and advances in the field of positive psychology have confirmed what many people have believed for years: Human beings have enormous potential for happiness and fulfillment, and that happy people are healthier, more productive and creative.

The Positive Plan, a new type of life-coaching being practiced in Glenmont by psychologist Michelle Marks, is designed to help people create goals to better their life and keep those goals on track and in focus. It uses phone and Internet counseling to guide patients in a plan that is designed specifically for the individual.

"I help people to make their lives better and experience great rewards," said Marks, who had practiced psychotherapy for 10 years before integrating aspects of the Positive Plan into her practice about three years ago.

Marks recently started a practice that works only with the Positive Plan and is not designed to help those with a mental illness, but to guide happy people toward change in their life or to new goals they want to pursue.

"I want to take people further in their happiness, and this is the vehicle to do it. I have helped people to lose weight, build their businesses and enhance their relationships. A lot of people who feel they have lost the wind in their sails or given up on their dreams can benefit from the Positive Plan," said Marks.

"A lot of people simply float through life on auto-pilot without really being 'in' their lives. This breaks them out of that cycle and helps people to reconnect with the dreams they once had," Marks said.

Recent studies in the science of human flourishing, led by Martin Seligman, have unearthed the benefits of positivity and the unused motivation many people have within. The Positive Plan, the first of its kind in the area, uses a combination positive psychology, life coaching and mind-body medicine techniques to help users strengthen self-knowledge, clarify goals and identify action strategies.

The initial meeting begins with Marks getting to know the patient as a person. She looks at who they are, where they are in their life right now and where they would like to be.

Each Positive Plan is individually tailored to meet the needs of the person. There is no cut-and-dry formula for this approach to counseling, but Marks uses her skills and knowledge as a therapist to help guide her patients to where they want to be.

Once Marks has assessed the person's needs, she and the patient cooperatively develop a plan that they will execute together. As the patient puts the plan in motion, he will phone Marks on a weekly basis to track his progress.

Changes are made based on success or failure, and Marks offers the encouragement, guidance and skills her patients need as they move toward their goals. As they reach their goals,

Michelle Marks

Marks will decrease her counseling, but patients can always call to check in with her.

Generally, sessions are held once a week over the phone for at least three months and continuing as needed.

"I am working with an out-of-state person right now whose goal is to have the best medical practice in her county. She defines what best is, not me. She wants her practice to be a certain way, so we develop a plan for action," said Marks.

"I am a teacher, supporter and motivator who helps the people find the next step to take in their path. When life interferes, it's very easy to get off track. I am there to hold the path," she said.

For information, visit www.positiveplan.com or call Marks at 478-0093.

Brewers toast Funny Cide

By KRISTEN OLBY

As Funny Cide begins training for the Travers this August, a group of beer enthusiasts are busy brewing a concoction to commemorate the New York bred gelding.

By the time the Saratoga Race Course opens later this month, Sackets Harbor Brewing Co. will unveil a unique pilsner dubbed Funny Cide Light, in honor of the horse that's made history.

"I just think it's remarkable what the horse has accomplished, and I think it's a way to show our support for the owners of the horse," said Steve Flynn, owner of Sackets Harbor Brewing Co.

Nestled along Lake Ontario, the small brewery and restaurant is located just outside Watertown, where several of Funny Cide's owners hail from, including J.P. Constance, who Flynn calls a family friend. Funny Cide has gone down in history as the first-ever New York-bred gelding to win the Kentucky Derby. The horse went on to capture the second crown jewel at the Preakness but lost his bid for the triple crown in the Belmont.

Flynn describes Funny Cide Light as a pilsner similar to Amstel Light. "We decided to do a light because it has broader appeal," said Flynn of the No. 1-type of beer in the country.

The recipe has been created and sent to Old Saratoga Brewing Co. in Saratoga, a full-time brewery that can create Funny Cide Light in mass quantities.

"We brew it in one day, and then it ferments and ages for two to three weeks," said Bob Craven, general manager of the brewery.

The brewing process began last week, and Funny Cide Light is expected to be on the shelves of grocery stores and Stewart's shops by July 25. The average cost of a six-pack will be about $6.50, with cases and kegs available.

Flynn is working to ensure Saratoga's spectators can sip Funny Cide Light as the horse competes for the Travers $1 million purse. "We're going to do whatever it takes to get it on tap at the track," he said.

It's likely at least one of Funny Cide's owners will be sampling the pilsner as the horse takes off from the gate. Gus Williams of Delmar, who holds a 20 percent share of the Sackett Stables horse, admits he isn't one to pass up a brewsky — especially one named after such an impressive horse.

"I'll try it, but I'll probably still drink Budweiser," said Williams with a boisterous laugh.

Williams and other racing fans may have no trouble finding the brew, even after the August race.

"If he does well at the Travers that could be a shot in the arm to make it a year-round thing," said Flynn.

With a little luck, both Funny Cide and his namesake beer could be on tap at the Breeders Cup this fall.

Identity of old bones still under scrutiny

By KRISTEN OLBY

A proper burial for three partial skeletons discovered on Elsmere Avenue in 1992 has been delayed until questions regarding the deceaseds' identities can be resolved.

A construction crew unearthed the remains while digging a trench to install electrical service to a home under construction. In a shallow, three-foot grave, 350 feet east of Elsmere Avenue, three mandibles, or lower jaws, were discovered along with several other bones. The bones were stored in a cardboard box at Albany Medical Center's morgue, until now. Because the bones were handed over to the town, Bethlehem became responsible for interment. The town board was expected to vote on the cost of interment at its July 9 meeting but unanswered questions about the identity of the remains resulted in the board tabling the matter.

Anthropologists with the University of Florida, who analyzed the bones in 1992, determined the bones date back more than 150 years. The Spotlight recently obtained results of the osteological report which reveal that the identities of the unearthed remains is still uncertain. The report states that the bones are those of an adult man and woman, both of whom were African American. The remains of a third unknown male were also discovered but his age and race could not be determined. The report shows the black male died between the age of 30 and 45, and the woman died around the age of 58. The report identifies the bones as those of David Bender who died in 1838 at the age of 37 and Elizabeth Bender, who died in 1866, at the age of 58.

But Census records from 1830, show the Benders were Caucasian. The revelation leads some to believe the bones are likely those of runaway slaves, who may have been part of the Underground Railroad.

Slavery ended in New York state in 1827, and "There were no slaves in Bethlehem in 1830 and 1840," according to the book entitled, The People of the Town of Bethlehem.

"They were most likely runaways, and they wouldn't have been listed because it was illegal to assist runaways," said town board member Thomas Marcelle, who has reviewed the reports.

Further proof that the bones aren't those of the Benders lies in the location of the burial plot, said Town Historian Joseph Allgaier. The Bender family burial ground was discovered 500 feet from Elsmere Avenue in 1935, according to town records, and the remains were later moved to the Bethlehem Cemetery.

Confirmation that the bones are those of African Americans has led Marcelle to inquire as to whether any organization would be interested in obtaining the bones. The town board will address the matter in August.

The long and winding road was an uphill battle

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

When they were 10 and 8, the boys started talking about the bike ride to Burlington, where Grandma lives. They hatched the idea after Christopher got a "Mission to Mars" tent, full of secret pockets and a fake antenna one can only guess would be good for contacting aliens.

We'd bike around the neighborhood, and the boys would plan this journey that mostly involved storing walkie-talkies in the tent and foraging off the land for their day's sustenance. The idea of the big bike ride got tabled when Cormac graduated to a bicycle with gears and he hit the pavement on his maiden voyage.

COMMENTARY:

*Mom's
Word*

He got back up on his two-wheeled horse, but currently views his bike as a short-distance vehicle that takes him to Taster Freeze. In the world of siblings loving opposite activities, Christopher loves bike riding, and we've found a 10-mile loop we love — that also ends in ice cream.

Noodling around on the Internet this spring, I found the New York Parks and Conservation Association's recently concluded Buffalo to Albany bike ride along the Erie Canal. With planned meal stops and a sag wagon (a support vehicle), plus guidelines about how to train, it looked interesting.

"Should we do this?" I asked Christopher. He shrugged. "I'd rather do the bike ride to Burlington," he said.

"Really?" I asked. "We could bike from Burlington to home after the Fourth of July."

"OK," he said. "We'd have to train," I said, showing him the pace that NYPCA outlined for its riders.

"OK," he said again. Two OKs from a 13-year-old is the equivalent of tears and a scream from Miss America, so we shook hands on the deal.

We trained as much as we could as the school year concluded and June brought too much rain. We strained the family budget buying a bike rack for the car, racks and panniers for our bikes, and to make sure we looked the part, bike shorts and screaming yellow jerseys.

Using a map that outlines the Lake Champlain Bikeway, a route that loops Lake Champlain through Canada, Vermont and New York, we left Grandma's house on a clear Sunday morning, Power Bars and water at the reach. We'd mapped out 30-mile stretches to include flat, lakefront road and stops at local beaches, but the first four all-uphill miles almost killed us.

"I feel like my lungs are going to explode," Christopher said as we lay under some pine trees at the top of the town in a condo development.

A rest, a joke and a Power Bar later, we were back on the road along a slightly downhill-sloping ridge. To our left were the Green Mountains, to our right that beautiful blue lake, and we passed both big houses and open fields bordered by Queen Anne's lace, tiger lilies and chicory. The sun was hot and our bodies were soon sticky with sweat, but the smell of lush, green summer lodged in my nose and pulled me forward.

We stopped a lot that day, at every general store we saw and at a beach in Shelburne, where the water felt blessedly cool and made the next stretch easier. On a warm Sunday, we seemed to be just two of thousands of cyclists out there.

"Why are so many people talking to us?" Christopher asked. "They don't usually when we're out biking."

"Must be the shirts," I said to him.

We'd arranged to meet Dad in Vergennes, our first day's destination. I worried that seeing him might make Christopher opt for home, but when Chris caught up with us on a back road, it spurred Christopher on. When Chris went ahead to stand in front of Emerson's Guest House and cheer us in, it made us proud of our day's work. After an incredible dinner at the Black Sheep Bistro, we waved good-bye to Dad, who was headed back to his work week, and we went to bed earlier than we had since school got out.

We lulled ourselves to sleep with a game of 20 Questions, which must have been enhanced by all the physical exercise. No simple trees or flowers for us — we guessed at obscure topics like "health insurance" and "written language" until the day's exertion made us conk out.

Day two dawned perfect for long-distance cyclists, with a lovely cloud cover to escort us on flat terrain to the lakefront Button Bay State Park. On the first day, Christopher had been content to follow; today, he easily took the lead, his strong 13-year-old legs making his bright yellow shirt my beacon.

Away from home, our belongings saddled to our bikes, and surrounded by green fields and flowers framed by the Adirondacks and the Green Mountains, we were transformed into different people. I was no longer a short-tempered, middle-aged mother with a weight problem, and Christopher wasn't a computer-and-television-obsessed teenager who should be getting better grades in school.

On those curving hills, we were two people with the single mission of following the road ahead of us, drinking as much water as we could, eating when we were hungry and stopping when we were tired. We picked up a deck of cards to help pass quiet times, and laughed about our 20 Questions topics.

By 2 p.m., we were exhausted. Bicycling into Bridport, Christopher made one acerbic comment: "Is this whole state goddamned uphill?"

We both moaned as we faced a giant one, but got religion when the Inn at Lover's Lane appeared before we had to climb it. We had dinner in Middlebury that evening, with brother Cormac, Grandma, Aunt Peggy and cousins Ama and Kokaale, who were trekking the length of the state in their car after visiting the family's 87-year-old matriarch in Bennington. Modern-day nomads, we ate pizza on the green and compared notes of our journeys.

Our bike trek concluded earlier than planned on the third day, when sore muscles, scorching sun and hills that looked like Hemingway's white elephants took the fun out of the trip. We did a 20-mile loop to Orwell, where a general store and a beautiful village green made a great finish to the trip. Dad came to fetch us, and I checked to make sure we didn't bill this trip a failure.

"Look how far we've come," I pointed out to Christopher, marking our 80 miles on the map while we waited for our own personal sag wagon. "And it's hot and hillier than we thought it would be, or than when we trained. We should be really proud of ourselves."

As we settled down to a game of poker with pebbles as chips, I knew it had been a success.

"Maybe," Christopher said, "when it's cool in the fall, we could come back here and finish the trip."

Straight flush, I thought. "You know it," I said.

Get away from it all

This is the perfect time of year to get away from the everyday routine and stresses of life.

With perfect weather of late, even a weekend or daylong getaway can provide a much-needed respite from work or daily regimens.

We are fortunate to live in a region so replete with beautiful places that can help to recharge our batteries and clear our perspective on life.

The Adirondacks, the Catskills and the many lakes and nature centers, like Five Rivers in Delmar and Holyhock Sanctuary in Selkirk, offer perfect settings for this kind of rejuvenation.

And for those who seek entertainment as relief from the humdrum, there's Saratoga Performing Arts Center, with its first-class ballet and orchestra performances and special rock and folk concerts, and a host of other regional venues to whet the aesthetic appetite.

And, of course, Saratoga Race Course will soon attract thousands of local folk with its beauty and spectacular thoroughbreds. This year's meet will likely attract even more local fans since Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner Funny Cide will be there in a bid for the Travers stakes.

For another kind of thrill, amusement parks are just the ticket. Kids who tire of the weekday trips to the pool will probably relish the thought of a special getaway designed with their tastes in mind. Although somewhat pricey, The Great Escape is a sure winner for kids, with its rides, climbing wall and water slide.

For those who prefer a less hectic entertainment venue, area parks offer a more old-fashioned approach to family fun.

With county fair season upon us, why not plan a day trip that, in some ways, is like taking a step back in time.

Farm animals, fresh vegetables, the alluring foods and entertainment at reasonable prices that one only finds at venues like these make for a grand old time for young and old alike.

Then there are the free performances at Albany's Alive at Five and Tawasentha Park in Guilderland, and concerts at many local libraries that receive rave reviews from local patrons.

The point is not to let summer pass by without taking advantage of opportunities only this season has to offer.

Winter, after all (apologies to ski enthusiasts), is long, and many of us are forced into a state of hibernation for months.

Enjoy summer's bounty!

Add a dose of humor to your diet

By JACK RIGHTMYER

The writer is a teacher at Bethlehem Central Middle School in Delmar.

The definition of sabbatical in Webster's Dictionary reads, "a period of leave from work for research, study or travel, usually granted to college professors every seven years."

Well, I'm not a college professor, but I've had the wonderful opportunity of taking a sabbatical from my seventh-grade teaching job at Bethlehem Central Middle School from February through June, and it's been wonderful.

From February through the middle of April, I spent three or four days a week working at The Humor Project in Saratoga Springs. I did quite a bit of writing for them, along with press releases, newspaper features on the organization and magazine profiles on some of their speakers. I also read quite a few of their books on humor in their vast library, especially any books having to do with writers or education.

In early April, I attended the international Humor Conference on the Positive Power of Humor, Hope and Healing, and I had the opportunity to meet some comedians, writers, motivational speakers and educators who have spent their careers encouraging people to not take life so seriously.

I was considered staff at the conference, and my job was to check in with each speaker and make sure they had the correct materials, see if they needed a glass of water, find out if they knew how to operate the video equipment and be an aid to them in any possible way. I also was able to sit in and listen to as many speakers as I could.

I especially enjoyed Steve Allen Jr., a medical doctor and the son of the famous comic Steve Allen. I loved what he had to say about the importance of humor in the medical field, and I loved his anecdotal stories about his dad,

Point of View

who was just as funny at the kitchen table as he was on the "Tonight Show."

Another favorite was Devon Harris, a three-time Olympian and captain of the Jamaican bobsledding team. He got me so pumped up I felt like I could accomplish anything, and I'd love to bring him in to speak to my Bethlehem girls cross country team.

My favorite speaker was Brett Leake, who despite having a debilitating handicap, has had a very successful career as a comedian and has been on the "Tonight Show" with Jay Leno five times.

Here's a guy who is in a wheelchair and he's making jokes about it, while I get stressed out when I'm in a traffic jam for 15 minutes.

Since April, I've been taking much of what I learned and I've been writing a book about humor and education. One of the people who is helping me by supplying quotes and giving me names of other people to interview has been Steve Lundin, the best-selling author of those FISH books, which have been all the rage for the past few years in the business community.

And I've tried some new things. I submitted an essay to WAMC about listening to baseball games on the radio, and they called me up and had me come to their studio and read it. I plan on submitting a few more. And I entered a screenwriting contest put on by the New York State Writers Institute, and I was one of the 12 winners, which meant I could take a free screenwriting class. William Patrick, who has written a number of screenplays, taught the class and we also had the opportunity to meet William Kennedy at our last class.

I've been able to do much more freelance writing for The Daily Gazette, where I've been their book reviewer for the past few years. I've had the opportunity to interview some famous writers such as Pat Conroy, Richard Ford, Bobbie Ann Mason, T.C. Boyle, Gail Godwin, Marge Piercy and Carol Gilligan. It's been a wonderful opportunity for me to have one-on-one discussions about writing with some of the best writers and poets in the country.

I also spent a weekend in June at a writers conference at Blue Mountain Lake, where I attended classes, met authors and agents and just immersed myself in the creativity of writing.

So what will I bring back to my classroom next year? One thing I'll bring back is all the knowledge I've learned about humor and about writing. I have a much better idea how to write a screenplay now, and I also have learned a bit about the inner workings of Hollywood. I know what it's like to read an essay aloud at a radio station, and from my interviews with authors, I learned that the process of writing is never easy, even if you've won a Pulitzer Prize.

Next year I want to start an after school humor club, and at the end of the year I'd like to publish a student magazine of humor, filled with stories, essays, poems and cartoons.

I want to fill my classroom with humor every day, even when we're doing something that appears humorless like grammar. I want to motivate my cross country team to achieve even beyond their expectations, which is what Devon Harris did as a Jamaican bobsledder.

This half-year out of the classroom has shown me how much I enjoy teaching. I missed my students very much. I missed their enthusiasm and their sense of fun.

But I also enjoyed the opportunity to take a risk and try some new things. I've loved all these days when I have spent time creating something. I've enjoyed waking up 30 minutes later than usual and being able to eat a real breakfast with my wife and my two children and not having to rush off to face all that traffic on the Northway.

One of the most important things I've learned over the past few months is how important it is to slow down. That was a clear message at the Humor Project.

Too many times as a teacher I've felt rushed, and my goal for next year is to enjoy each day and put as much play into it as possible.

BC should consider different building plan

Editor, The Spotlight:

As I read the recent news about the parking problem at Bethlehem Central High School, I started to think more about this large bond issue and have found that there may be some more serious issues at stake here.

This current proposal allows for "adding-on" to our schools and may include the building of a new elementary school as well. While this may relieve some of the pressure, it may also lead to the eventual recognition of inadequate preparation for the future.

It seems that a more rational plan would be to construct a new building to house the seventh, eighth and ninth grades only. This would allow for the high school to house 10th through 12th grades, the middle school for fifth and sixth grades and the elementary schools would house grades one through four.

This would relieve current spatial pressures at all of our buildings and provide for any additional future growth. It has been shown that these grade levels are compatible in areas of cognitive and physical growth, and therefore, this proposal should not have any negative impact upon the education of our children.

While we would all like to believe that our administrators have taken a hard look at all possible avenues, it seems to me that this approach has only gotten a cursory glance.

In my opinion, keeping the "traditional" format of education simply for the sake of tradition is a huge mistake. Slapping together another set of build-ons and converting storage areas into classrooms could leave us open to these same issues down the road.

It would seem to be more prudent to seriously look into a solution that does more than patchwork our current buildings to fit the problems of today.

Child enticement should be issue of concern to everyone

Editor, The Spotlight:

I do not know Mr. Scott Ritter. I'm sure he has expertise in politics — he is probably also a good speaker.

He must be quite an educated man — therefore, I am surprised to learn that he believes trying to entice an under age child to meet him is a "non-issue."

All of us hope to keep our children safe. If it happened to his daughter, it wouldn't be a non-issue. It is hard to believe that anyone could just throw this issue to the side and pretend it does not exist.

Parking is an ongoing issue at high school

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to respond to last week's article "Board debates parking plan for BCHS."

It does not appear to be an "old issue that we thought we fixed," but an on-going issue due to increasing student enrollment. If we continue to need additional space for indoor needs, then it holds that we would also need additional outdoor space.

A few weeks ago, I attended the moving-up ceremony at the high school for the graduating eighth graders. The parents of these 400-plus kids did not all fit in the BCHS parking lots.

It was likely a harbinger of future parking problems for visitors and daytime regular (staff and student) parking space users as our school district population continues to grow.

If there is a solution to students not parking on roadways, then the school board needs to address this seriously. I am happy to see that Dr. (Les) Loomis feels strongly about this. School board member Jon Bartow is correct in saying that we have to recognize that we have student drivers and that a school bus only alternative is not realistic.

Two thoughts come to mind. The first one has to do with the times we are living in. In years past, there were far fewer extracurricular activities after school. All those who participated were able to fit within and/or outside the school building simultaneously in the immediate (2 to 5 p.m.) after-school hours. Therefore, there were often late buses for transportation home, many parents did not have to pick up children and student-driven cars were not necessary.

Today, we offer so many activities, (the wonderful increase in girls' participation in athletics being a major factor) that the large volume of participants must be divided into shifts. And schedules may vary day to day, depending on circumstances, so that, justifiably, no one group gets the more desirable time slots.

This can become very disruptive to the average household when there are sometimes four to six trips to school in one evening.

Our family's solution has been to provide our oldest high school student with a second-hand car. He can then commute independently in the morning, stay directly after school, when most activities take place, or ping-pong back and forth in the evening without disrupting the rest of the family.

Such arrangements have become even more important to many parents, including parents who remain devoted and involved in their children's lives, than it is to the kids. Frankly, we do not see it as an indulgence for the child but as a convenient time-saver and sanity preserver for the parents.

Secondly, because kids' schedules are so packed, sleep quantity has become an issue. Although an unarguably privileged benefit, the extra time saved by driving and avoiding a bus ride contributes to a little better rested student.

Please do not suggest that students cut back on activities. They happen to be doing exactly what we, their parents and teachers, want them to be doing — staying busy in healthy school activities, being active young adults and preparing themselves for productive post high school lives thanks to all that our excellent school district has offered them academic and extracurricular activities.

Keeping our students and school visitors safe will always be a priority. Parking on the roadside is unsafe and disruptive.

Our district residents will be voting in November on new constructions projects to accommodate our ever-growing community. These projects are crucial to maintaining safety and the outstanding quality of education in Bethlehem.

Camping with Jessica Loy

Tomorrow, Thursday, July 17, at 2 p.m., children in grade two and up can Follow the Trail with local author Jessica Loy. Discussion and activities revolve around her new book. Find out how to identify leaves, predict the weather, search for a star constellation and play a camp game. The adventure will conclude with a "master camper quiz" and a tasty energy treat called "gorp."

Summer reading

Another book suggestion gleaned from "Pageturners," our quarterly collection of book reviews by library staff. This one's by yours truly: The Last

Girls by Lee Smith is a tale about four college friends who journeyed down the Mississippi on a raft 35 years ago. Now they make the journey again, on a posh riverboat. Their aim is to memorialize the death of a fifth friend, Baby Ballou, whose wild and troubled personality had affected them profoundly many years before. Smith moves skillfully between present and past to show how each woman comes to terms with Baby and also with her own life. The author's Southern voice, full of humor, directness and keen observation, is compelling and true.

Women join real estate firm

Two women recently joined the sales force at Weichert Realtors-Northeast Group in Delmar.

Monique Ting, a Delmar resident since 1986, has earned her real estate sales license and joined the staff.

Ting, who was born in Vietnam, grew up in the south of France and attended school in Canada, operated her own business for several years before becoming a realtor.

She has a bachelor's degree in biology from the University of Omaha, is fluent in French and understands some Vietnamese.

Crystal Starr has also joined the sales staff to specialize in residential sales.

Starr, who has a degree in early childhood education, was director of a child-learning center before entering the real estate field six months ago.

Plan now for a financially secure family vacation

By TIMOTHY P. MINAHAN,
Vice President, KeyBank N.A.

Might as well just back up to your front door and start loading everything into the car — clothes, beach towels and hiking boots; tents, sleeping bags and coolers full of food and drink; CDs, DVDs and players — and definitely some books.

Traveling light on vacation? Great idea, but who can really manage it?

At least you can start organizing for vacation by examining your wallet. In fact, organizing your finances will help you, and your family, enjoy your vacation and feel secure wherever you go.

FINANCIAL CHECKLIST

First, empty your wallet then put back into it only what you really need. This way, it will bulge less noticeably in your pocket or bag. Return only these items:

- ID (driver's license and one other photo ID),
- Health and auto insurance cards,
- No more than two national credit cards or debit cards,
- Long-distance calling card,
- National discount club memberships (AARP, for example),
- Cash and traveler's checks,
- ATM card and/or gift money card, and
- Business cards.

Write down your credit card account numbers and emergency phone numbers and store this valuable information in an easily accessible place at home in case you need to call someone to retrieve it while you're away. Don't carry credit card information in your wallet; instead store this valuable data securely in your traveling bags or inside jacket pocket.

Remember to carry only as much cash as you expect you'll need for the day's outing, using travelers' checks (which only the owner can spend or cash) and ATMs to limit cash and safeguard funds. American Express Traveler's Cheques, available at KeyBank, are probably the best known and most widely accepted.

Use credit cards carefully for purchases or cash advances for unexpected needs, protecting account number information particularly. Also take along a few of the easy access checks often sent in your monthly statement.

Vacation travel preparations are also a good opportunity to teach your children about cash management while traveling, including how to control spending through gift money cards. Larger financial institutions issue gift money cards such as the Key Possibilities card of

Timothy P. Minahan

KeyCorp, that you can use anywhere MasterCard is accepted — at hotels, restaurants, car rental agencies or department stores. Branches issue, activate and allocate funds to these cards, which eliminate the need to carry cash.

Wiring funds also helps vacationers travel light, especially when traveling overseas or if a large sum is needed for a specific purchase. Full-service financial service institutions can help wire funds, overnight if necessary.

SECURITY ANYWHERE

For out-on-the-street security, remember to:

- Carry only the cash you'll need for the day and secure the rest in a hotel safe box.

- Carry wallets in an inside or front pocket, not in a coat pocket, and carry purses in front, preferably inside a coat.

- Carry travelers checks, which are reimbursable if lost or stolen, and ATM cards, which cannot be used without your PIN.

- Separate your cash and cards, with some in your wallet and the rest elsewhere on your person; if one is stolen you still have the other.

- Carry in a secure place the phone numbers for your bank and credit cards you're using on the trip, in case the cards are stolen.

- Be aware of your surroundings and those around you.

PLAN AHEAD

Whatever kind of vacation you want for your family, plan ahead. Ask friends and family how they arranged their vacations. Research at the library and through consumer services such as convention and visitors' bureaus at your destination. Recall what last year's vacation cost and set that as your budget and stick to it. American families spend an average of $1,000 to $1,200 per week away these days, and too many of us run up our credit card balances by that amount. Compare offerings and costs at several travel agents. Take advantage of discounts, for seniors and others including multiroom hotel discounts for families. Use your computer and Web sites for research; to order maps; get local weather reports and compare hotel, restaurant and car rental rates — even to find the ATM closest to your hotel.

Use your imagination, creativity and careful planning to enjoy a vacation that is both fun and safe for your pocketbook and credit card balances.

Swing Docs to perform at lawn concert tonight

"You ain't got a thing if you ain't got that swing" the music tells us and we'll be putting the sentiment to the test at the next library lawn concert on July 23 with the Swing Docs.

The Swing Docs were formed in 1998 by Dr. Stewart Sell, an internationally known cancer researcher who also happens to be a wonderful alto sax player.

Making their first appearance at the library, the band is made up of local physicians, technicians and scientists, educators, salesmen, a prison warden, a builder and a lawyer. They boast a fantastic "hot horn" section, piano, guitars, drums and vocals. They play regularly at Savannah's in downtown Albany and should be an exciting addition to our summer lineup.

And — if you are a swing dancer or have one in the family, we'd love to have a volunteer to give a quick lesson to the crowd. Be here by 7 p.m. with your lawn chairs or blanket. Rain site is the new performing arts center at the high school.

Teen Night on July 21 at 7 p.m.

will be a session called "Camping 101."

Grades six and up are invited every Monday evening through Aug. 11 for teen nights at the library. Sign-up is necessary. Call 765-2791 or e-mail voorefq@uhs.lib.ny.us.

First- through third-graders will meet on Monday, July 21, with Carol Ann Margolis to do some digging and planting in the Native American gardening tradition.

Margolis also presents "Making a Rainbow from Roots, Shoot and Fruits" for fourth-through sixth-graders on Wednesday, July 23. Both sessions are at 2 p.m.

The library staff surprised a co-worker with a 30th anniversary celebration this week. Mary Jane Martterer has been working in technical services for the library since 1973. The board of trustees presented her with a gift to reflect their appreciation of her long-term devotion to the library.

Martterer is the daughter of former Voorheesville high school and public library librarian Jane Salvatore.

Barbara Vink is the featured reader on July 17 at 7:30 p.m. at Changing Spaces Gallery, 306 Hudson Ave., Albany. The event is presented by the Poetry Motel Foundation and hosted by Dan Wilcox. Vink is coordinator of The Every Other Thursday Night Poets group, which has been meeting at the library for more than 12 years.

The board of trustees meets at the library on Monday, July 21, at 7 p.m. There will be no meeting in August.

The library is closed on Sundays and open Saturday from 10 a.m. through 1 p.m. until after Labor Day weekend. For details of the summer schedule, a copy of the "Bookworm" may be picked up at the library or visit www.voorheesvillelibrary.org. Remember it's never too late to join summer reading club 2003. You can sign up any time during the program, which runs through Aug. 13.

Eagles

uncommon, thanks to an aggressive restoration program enacted by the state Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) in the early 1970s.

At that time, the bald eagle teetered on the brink of extinction with one infertile pair known to be living in the state. The relocation of roughly 20 young eagles from Alaska to different parts of the state has helped the bald eagle make a comeback.

"Now we have about 80 nesting pairs including eight along the Hudson," said Peter Nye, of the DEC, who oversees the Bald Eagle Restoration and Management Program.

A pair of eagles is known to be nesting about three miles from Henry Hudson Park, although Nye declined to say where, in an effort to protect the birds.

"We've had sightings there fairly frequently. It wouldn't surprise me that birds will pioneer into new areas and set up a new nest," said Nye.

The Hudson provides an ideal feeding ground for the eagles, which hunt for fish in the mud flats left behind as the tide goes out. Eagles can often be seen perched a top tall trees waiting for prey to float by.

For those eager to catch a glimpse at Henry Hudson Park, "The best thing to do would be use binoculars and scope the trees on the far side of the shore," said Craig Thompson of Five Rivers Environmental Education Center in Delmar.

The most popular time to view an eagle is during the winter months, when large numbers flock to the Hudson. Environmentalists suggest looking overhead for eagles soaring high in the sky or checking river islands and ice floats for eagles sunning themselves or enjoying a meal. Eagles are most active between 7 and 9 a.m. and in the early evening hours, between 4 and 5 p.m.

"It's a much larger bird than your typical hawk," said Thompson, who notes red tail hawks and turkey vultures are more common in-land, near open fields.

We've had sightings there fairly frequently. It wouldn't surprise me that birds will pioneer into new areas and set up a new nest.

Peter Nye

When an eagle flies, its wings are held straight out, unlike a turkey vulture, which soars with its wings in a V-shape. The eagle's feathers at the tips of its wings are widely separated, with its short tail fanned open. The trademark white plumage of the bald eagle doesn't develop until the eagle reaches maturity, at about 5 years. Younger bald eagles are chocolate brown and mottled with white, according to the DEC.

Each winter and summer, the DEC surveys the number of bald eagles along the Hudson using helicopter flyovers. Bird watchers who see adult bald eagles nesting between April and June are encouraged to call the agency. The discovery of four or more eagles in one location, especially after 3 p.m., could reveal a significant roost site, according to the agency.

Environmentalists caution the return of the bald eagle to the Hudson doesn't mean conservation efforts should cease. Those who are fortunate enough to catch a glimpse of our nation's symbol are encouraged not to disturb it.

"If you see them, it is a federal and state offense to harass them," said Nye.

Offenders can face a maximum penalty of $20,000 and up to one year in jail.

CALENDARS ♦ ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

By DEV TOBIN

The race track is not the first place parents would normally think of for a family day out.

But the Saratoga Race Course is not a normal race track — it's more of a happening, with the only true major league-level sports in the Capital District. It regularly has the highest daily attendance of any track in the country, remarkable for a small upstate city four hours from the metropolis.

To do that, the track obviously attracts more than the hardcore horseplayer. Unlike most gambling venues, it's family-friendly.

Saratoga is the training ground for community involvement and family-related activities.

Ed Lewi

The track's annual free open house, Sunday, July 20, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., is proof that Saratoga Race Course is not just another place to gamble, according to Ed Lewi of Clifton Park, longtime public relations consultant for the New York Racing Association.

Lewi came up with the idea of an open house 23 years ago as a way to "bring more people to the race track, especially families."

Lewi said Saratoga has been able to grow at a time when race track attendance and handle elsewhere is declining because of its focus on attracting families.

"Saratoga is the training ground for community involvement and family-related activities," Lewi said, "A lot of other tracks are starting to do this now."

Lewi noted that about 20 charities will benefit in some way from the open house, and that the Saratoga meet has become a key fund-raising opportunity for many other local charities.

For families during the meet, "There are always activities going on in the backyard," where there are scores of picnic tables, Lewi said.

Between watching the horses saddle up and relaxing in the shade, "The kids just have a good time in the backyard," Lewi said.

Family activities at the open house include a wide variety of children's entertainment, like clowns, magicians, jugglers, the "Backyard Circus," a dachshund derby, pony rides, a petting zoo, miniature golf and tours of the backstretch.

Musical entertainment throughout the day includes the Hi-Flyers, the Leftovers and the Storyville Stompers.

Family activities at Saratoga's open house include a wide variety of children's entertainment, like pony rides, a petting zoo and the "Backyard Circus."

And they're off!

Track open house features family fun

While there is no gambling, there will be racing at the open house.

The Newman E. Wait Jr. Trials, for 2-year-old horses getting ready to compete at the Saratoga meet, and several steeplechase races, will go off every half-hour beginning at noon.

All of the track seating will be open, so people can sit in clubhouse boxes to watch the races.

Open house attendees can also get a peek at the track's new modular luxury suites, which will be installed at the top of the stretch.

For those who hope to sharpen their horseplaying skills, there will be four handicapping seminars in the Paddock Tent.

This year, the Funny Cide story, coincident with the release later this month of a movie based on another track Cinderella, 1930s claimer-made-stakes-champion Seabiscuit, has sparked renewed interest in thoroughbred racing. Funny Cide is slated to race in the Travers, Saratoga's premier race, on Aug. 23.

Lewi noted that "a lot of the footage" of the Seabiscuit movie was shot at the Saratoga track.

At the open house, 1,500 limited edition prints of Seabiscuit by artist Karin Vollkommer will be offered for sale by the Wilton Rotary Club for $38.

Refreshments, provided by local nonprofits, will be available throughout the day.

Repowering a car saves money

Getting a few more years out of the family car is one way to tighten the purse strings when budgets are squeezed. For the owner of a vehicle with a worn engine who may be considering trading cars, the prospect of such a major expense can be daunting. Many owners don't realize there's a better way to go: repowering the vehicle rather than replacing it.

This lack of awareness first came to light when Automotive Repower Council (ARC) conducted a survey among consumers. They discovered that nearly 75% of respondents did not realize their worn out engine could be replaced with one that has been rebuilt. An educational effort was in order.

This first took the form of a brochure comparing costs of replacing the vehicle vs. having a rebuilt engine installed. Entitled "Sticker Shock!", the illustrated pamphlet produced a strong public response.

Another survey was conducted, this time among the hundreds of respondents who had requested literature. Of the one in four who replied, 15% said they proceeded to have their engines replaced. Forty-two percent said they plan either to replace their engines or to have them overhauled.

From owners who proceeded with the replacement, ARC received comments such as "Extended my car's life ..." and "Happy with engine. We saved a lot of money."

Beyond the economic factors cited in its literature, longer warranties on remanufactured engines are credited with the industry's optimistic forecasts.

Many

remanufactured engines offer features comparable to a new engine, according to ARC. Available with lifetime warranty protection, as many are, a rebuilt engine is the intelligent option.

"This job will let me give a little back," LaChappelle said. "At this time in New Scotland history, I can make a difference."

Clark and LaChappelle, though both retired, have different backgrounds. Before retiring, Clark worked on legislative research, primarily for the state Assembly. He has a master's degree in public administration and is an Army veteran.

His memberships include: the American Legion, Community Caregivers Advisory Board, Voorheesville Community and School Foundation, Kiwanis, New York State Historical Association, and the New Scotland Senior Citizens Club.

Clark, 66, and his wife Patricia live in Voorheesville. They have one son, Thomas, age 33.

LaChappelle grew up in Delmar.

"My father died when I was 10, so I went to work at the Normanskill dairy at 12," he said.

He attended Messiah College and the University at Albany.

LaChappelle is retired from the Bethlehem Police Department, where he served for 25 years. As a K-9 trainer and handler, his specialty was training police dogs, and he has worked with dogs for law enforcement agencies across the country.

LaChappelle, 47, lives with his wife Sherry in a house they built in Feura Bush. They have two children, Jeffrey, 26, and Jennifer, 22.

approximately 6,000 seniors to approximately 9,000 seniors by the year 2030," said Karen Pelletier, director of Bethlehem's Senior Services department.

The land is currently zoned for residential use but it sits outside the town's water district, without public sewer or water lines. The town board would need to approve any zoning change to the property.

The Senior Citizen Residence District was adopted by the town in 1990, "to provide moderately priced housing for those senior citizens living on fixed or limited incomes," according to the code. The floating district was initially created to accommodate the Marie-Rose Manor complex in North Bethlehem — a 50 unit apartment building for seniors on low incomes.

"These regulations are geared toward an apartment building," said Town Planner Jeff Lipnicky of the senior residence code.

The planning board must determine if the project meets the zoning code requirements. The senior district should include appropriate recreational facilities for seniors and be located within reasonable proximity to public transportation, according to the code. The proposed district sits next to Bethlehem Central High School, near the Delmar bypass extension.

"This is obviously on a major route that probably needs a bus stop to be developed," said Feinberg, who adds his company would be willing to pick-up any expenses associated with a stop.

The senior district should also be in a location convenient to retail shops, social and medical facilities. With rental prices hovering around $1,000 a month, the planning board must decide whether the complex is in fact moderately priced for seniors.

"I would think that one must have planned pretty well to afford that as a retiree," said Pelletier of the estimated rent.

She added that every community should have a variety of housing options available to seniors.

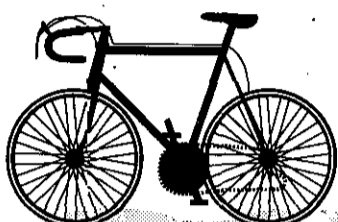

If the planning board recommends the rezoning, a public hearing will be scheduled.

The housing complex would still need to undergo extensive site plan review before final project approval could be granted.

DOANE STUART SCHOOL

We live in a coed world.

COEDUCATION AT DOANE STUART...

Our founders recognized that Doane Stuart's mission would be best accomplished in a coeducation setting. Their forward-looking commitment to coeducation remains a cornerstone of the Doane Stuart experience to this day, as we continue to maintain gender equality among our students in their academic and extracurricular activities, ensuring that boys and girls alike have consistent and fair opportunities to excel. The coeducational setting at Doane Stuart is designed to accurately reflect the challenges and opportunities of a society in which our students will live, work, play and worship for the rest of their lives. For us, coeducation is another facet of our commitment to diversity. It is the belief that you are a richer, better educated person, when you have learned to see the world through the perspective of people unlike yourself; whether they are of different gender, religion, race, or background.
