BIG on thin ice, but programs to grow

By KRISTEN OLBY

The BIG Arena is for sale, but the company's board of directors has no plans to close the skating rink, which opened four years ago. In fact, the arena is expanding its programs.

At the start of the year, the Delaware Avenue arena came under new, local management in an effort to revive the failing facility. The 75,000-square-foot arena, developed and built by Bethlehem Ice Group in 1999, boasts two skating rinks on 29 acres.

From January to October 2003, Rink Management Services (RMS), based in Mechanicsburg, Va., managed the facility.

"They were absentee in every sense of the word," said Brendan O'Shea, a member of the arena's board of directors.

Under RMS' watch, the rink failed to turn a profit, according to O'Shea, and fell further behind in electricity payments to Niagara Mohawk.

All the while, RMS received a monthly payment of $4,000 for its services from Bethlehem Ice Group. In October, RMS canceled its contract with the arena.

Last month, the board of directors hired Steve Heenan and Lee Bormann, both of Bethlehem, to handle management and scheduling of the facility. The board of directors is now faced with the task of getting the arena back in financial shape.

The company has not paid $56,893 in 2003 school taxes due to the town in September, according to tax records. It also owes $20,497 in property taxes due in January and has yet to pay a $13,576 payment in lieu of taxes (PILOT) bill, according to tax records.

The tax break was granted under a PILOT agreement reached with the town's Industrial Development Agency. The company has until March 31 to pay the tax bills, accumulating a two percent penalty, before they are turned over to Albany County.

"We have become current with all of our creditors, and we paid down arrears that we owed to NiMo," said O'Shea. "Once we get NiMo up to date, we are going to pay off the back taxes."

For the first time in months, O'Shea said the facility is beginning to turn a profit, and the future looks promising.

"We are gearing up for two very full spring and summer programs," he said.

The arena hopes to make better use of a sport floor that can be installed allowing for in-line skating and flag football games. In the past, O'Shea said the arena "failed miserably" at marketing the facility's unique feature, something they hope to change this time around.

Although work on promoting the arena is in full swing, the complex was recently put on the real estate market with an asking price of $4.2 million. The board of directors made the decision to list the arena with Coldwell Banker Commercial Prime Properties Inc., in December.

"We would look at offers that would allow the operation to continue as a skating facility," said O'Shea, adding that no potential buyers have directly contacted the board of directors.

However, the Capital Region YMCA has had ongoing talks with the arena's prime financial investor and former Slingerlands resident, Kit Guntner, now living in Colorado.

Barry Relyea, the Y's vice president of property management, recently toured the facility.

"It's not a triple A location as far as we're concerned, but we haven't found any that are better," said Relyea, who added that the second ice rink is underutilized and could potentially house a pool, gym and fitness center.

According to Relyea, arena representatives are crafting initial

Sex offender moves to Bethlehem

By KRISTEN OLBY

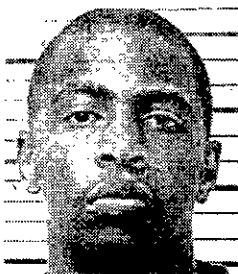

A convicted sex offender has moved to Bethlehem, putting parents of school-age children on high alert.

Amene Memminger, 28, was convicted of third-degree rape, a felony, for having sexual intercourse with a 14-year-old girl in 1998. He was released from state prison Feb. 1, and is on parole after serving a four-year sentence.

He now lives at 512B Delaware Ave. with family. His home is located near the Bethlehem Public Library, about a mile from the high school and in close proximity to school bus stops.

Memminger is considered a level three sex offender, meaning he is at high-risk for being a repeat offender.

Under Megan's Law, sex offenders are required to register with the Division of Criminal Justice Services and maintain close ties with the local police departments.

"We notified vulnerable areas which includes the schools, public libraries, parks and recreation, and the local neighborhood," said Bethlehem Police Lt. Thomas Heffernan.

The Bethlehem Central School District said it was notified of Memminger's anticipated arrival at the end of January, though the exact date was not readily available.

"We acted immediately, we started the process that same day we received the information," said Acting School Superintendent John McGuire. "We distributed the information to each of our buildings. We also sent an e-mail to all staff within the district." The district later provided faculty and staff with copies of Memminger's criminal history and his photo. "We directed them to let us know if they see anyone matching the description on the school grounds or near the facility," he said.

On Feb. 3, the district sent a letter to parents notifying them of a sex offender living in the area, but the letter did not name Memminger or include his photo. The district said it was advised by legal counsel not to distribute that information to parents, only to in-house faculty and staff. In the letter, the district provided parents with the phone number of Bethlehem police and the New York State Sex Offender Registry Web site, where Memminger's information can be obtained.

Bethlehem police have fliers available at their front desk outlining Memminger's criminal conviction. Police said he is being closely monitored.

The news of Memminger's arrival has put some parents on edge, especially following the recent murder of an 11-year-old girl in Florida. Police there have charged a man who had a lengthy criminal record, including kidnapping, with her murder.

"I'm not thrilled that he's living here," said Karen Graziade, president of the Bethlehem Central Community Organization, a high school group comprised of parents and students. "A lot of our students have to walk back and

Bethlehem police find center a busy part of beat

Because of an editorial error, this story did not run in its entirety in last week's issue.

By KRISTEN OLBY

The opening of Bethlehem Town Center in Glenmont may mean added convenience for some shoppers, but it's proving to be a bit of a headache for the local police department.

The plaza is home to a Wal-Mart Supercenter, open seven days a week, 24 hours a day, and a Lowe's home improvement store, among others. Each store employs several hundred people, and both opened for business in January.

Throughout the month, Bethlehem police were called to the plaza 35 times, for a variety of reasons.

The majority of calls, 30, occurred during the 10 days Wal-Mart has been open.

"We're seeing a lot of traffic accidents," said Bethlehem Police Chief Louis Corsi. "It's a new intersection, it's unfamiliar to a lot of people."

A new traffic light has been installed in front of the plaza on Route 9W, a two-lane state highway that many town officials say is over-utilized.

Police have responded to seven traffic accidents, six of which involved property damage and one resulted in injuries.

Tripped burglar alarms — all false alarms — have sent officers to the plaza six times. Three shoplifters have been arrested at Wal-Mart and one assault arrest involving employees was made, according to Bethlehem police. The remaining calls involved lockouts and medical services. Police have yet to respond for reports of bad checks but said it may take time for them to be processed.

"We knew we were going to get an increase in calls," Corsi said. "We researched it with other municipalities that had super Wal-Marts go in."

If the Wal-Mart Supercenter in Glenville is any indication, Bethlehem officers can expect to be busy in the year ahead. Glenville officers responded roughly 600 times to the store, located on Dutch Meadows Lane, over a 17-month period.

"It's the type of business that will tax your resources," said Deputy Chief Dominick Macherone of the Glenville police department. "There's more traffic, more people, more volume."

The store employs about 400 people and attracts customers from Glenville and several surrounding communities. The department estimates Wal-Mart utilizes about 3,000 manpower hours, or roughly one-and-a-half officers, each year. Last year, officers responded to an attempted murder-suicide and a robbery at the store.

"Probably the biggest complaint is for larcenies," said Macherone, who added officers arrest as many employees for stealing as they do customers.

"We do have zero tolerance when it comes to shoplifting and we work with local police in helping to meet that goal," said Wal-Mart public relations representative Sharon Weber. The Bethlehem Wal-Mart employs loss prevention officers but does not have a full-time security company on staff, said Weber.

Corsi said the department will continue to monitor Bethlehem Town Center and review calls for service to determine how much manpower needs to be allotted to the plaza.

RCS board petitions available in Selkirk

Nominating petitions for three of the nine seats on the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Board of Education can now be picked up at the board of education building at 26 Thatcher St. in Selkirk.

Those seeking to run for one of the three board seats up for election on May 18 must secure the signatures of 45 registered voters who reside in the district. Those petitions must be returned to the district office by 5 p.m. on April 19.

The three seats up for election this year are currently held by board of education president Dr. Mona Selover and board members Jeffrey Stumbaugh and Gerald Deluca.

The three candidates who garner the most votes during the May election will serve three-year terms on the board.

Church to display quilts

Delmar Reformed Church is offering a large selection of quilts on display on Friday, Feb. 27, from 4 to 8 p.m. and Saturday Feb. 28 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The display will feature more than 100 quilts. There are several very old quilts made in the late 1800s and a variety of quilts from the early 20th century. The show is to benefit a program sponsored by the Reformed Church of America to organize volunteers to assist ministries here and abroad with special needs.

Volunteers from across the country, including Delmar Reformed Church, traveling at their own expense, donate their time and money to support this project. Admission to the show is $3. All proceeds will be donated to the Hawley Mission Fund.

For information call 439-9929.

Chamber event set

Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce will sponsor "Catch Them If You Can" Small Business Fraud: Prevention and Detection Techniques Thursday, Feb. 26, from 7:45 to 9 a.m.

The program will focus on examples of small business fraud that are based on actual investigations. Certified public accountants Frank Venezia, Tiffany Morris and Jennifer Malinski of Marvin & Co.

The fee is $9, which includes a hot buffet breakfast, and reservations are required.

For information or to make a reservation, call 439-0512.

Wal-Mart opponents speak at town hall

By KRISTEN OLBY

The arrival of big-box stores in Bethlehem, specifically the retail giant Wal-Mart, was the focus of a community forum Sunday afternoon at town hall. The event was sponsored by Citizens Coalition for a Better Bethlehem.

About 75 people gathered to hear union representatives and town activists detail how Wal-Mart can erode the community, stifle small business and contribute to suburban sprawl.

"It has a tremendous impact on our communities," said Andrea Goldberger, referring to Wal-Mart stores. Goldberger is a representative of United Food and Commercial Workers, AFL-CIO. "They're changing the complexion of our communities all over the country."

Goldberger, who does not live in Bethlehem, estimated that many small, independent businesses such as groceries, pharmacies and hardware stores remain open two years at best, following the arrival of a Wal-Mart. The retail giant's discount prices drive out fellow competitors who can't keep up, said Goldberger, while lowering the standard of living in a community. She alleged that Wal-Mart workers make sub-par pay, have inadequate health care, and are prevented from unionizing in the hope of obtaining better working conditions. The company works covertly to squash unions, said Goldberger, often firing employees who may be likely to support organized labor.

"We have an obligation to send a message that if you are going to be a member of our community, then we expect you to do so at a higher standard," she said.

By creating a community code of conduct that Wal-Mart should adhere to, Goldberger said residents can help ensure a meaningful standard of living is preserved in Bethlehem.

Wal-Mart flatly refuted allegations that it pays employees poorly, citing wages that are always above state minimums.

"We go to a community and we do a salary survey to ensure that our wages are competitive with other retailers in the market," said Mia Masten, Wal-Mart community affairs manager.

Wal-Mart also claims it is not anti-union; rather employees don't feel the need to organize.

James Howard Kunstler, urban planning critic and author of The Geography of Nowhere, spoke of the "wake of destruction" left behind by Wal-Mart stores throughout the country.

Small town merchants play a vital role in the communities they serve, participating in town government, planning boards, and assuming social roles, said Kunstler. That era of social and civic responsibility is evaporating, he said, as big-box retailers arrive and eventually drive out local businesspeople.

"When Wal-Mart and other big box stores came along, that class of people that did business locally was destroyed," said Kunstler. "The American public has been absolutely complicit in the damage Wal-Mart has done to our community."

Wal-Mart maintains it can successfully coexist with independent retailers, if they strive to meet a customer niche and offer products Wal-Mart may not. Forum speakers repeatedly encouraged the crowd to refrain from shopping at Wal-Mart.

It was a message that resonated with Karen Beck of Delmar. While she hasn't visited the Glenmont Wal-Mart, Beck has shopped at others, and vowed not to return.

"It's depressing, I don't know what it is," she said of her Wal-Mart shopping experience. "So I find everything I need elsewhere."

Neighbors speak out about proposed mine

By KRISTEN OLBY

A proposal to open a limestone mine in Feura Bush drew a crowd of residents from two communities to town hall Thursday night, all eager to air opinions on the project.

Peter Frueh is seeking a permit from the state to mine limestone on 5.3 acres of the family's 170-acre parcel of land in Bethlehem near the intersection of Collabek and Old Quarry roads. The Fruehs intend to mine the limestone for their construction business, Peter K. Frueh, Inc., while selling some of the remaining stone. With only one other limestone supplier in the immediate area, the Fruehs say there is a lack of competition in the market, resulting in high prices.

The state Department of Environmental Conservation held a public hearing on the matter to gather community input. The DEC has issued a draft negative State Environmental Quality Review declaration, initially finding the project would not have a negative effect on the environment.

According to the application, rock would be extracted from the mine several times a year through blasting with dynamite. Many of the surrounding homeowners, who reside just over the town line in New Scotland, fear the blasts would affect groundwater wells and have a detrimental effect on the quality of life in the area.

The surrounding homes rely on well water, and neighbors contend a single geologic shift could result in wells drying up or no longer functioning properly.

"Without the water source I have nothing," said Garry Reinhart, who lives roughly 950 feet away from the proposed mine on Collabek Road. "There are too many unanswered questions and 'what if's' and we can't afford mistakes."

A group of concerned homeowners dubbed the Feura-Bethlehem Heights Alliance funded a study by hydrogeologist Paul Rubin, who studied the area and supports their claim.

The potential mine site is part of the Helderberg Escarpment, an area where limestone rocks underlie surface soils, creating a landscape known as karst terrain, according to the Helderberg Escarpment Planning Committee. Karst areas typically have caves, sinking streams, sinkholes and complex underground drainage systems.

Assemblyman John McEneny (D-Albany), who represents part of New Scotland, believes the unique geologic feature could be easily disturbed with blasting.

"I don't think anybody can guarantee that blasting with dynamite is going to protect that flow of water," said McEneny. "Mother Nature is very fickle and it's not uncommon in this very unique geologic area for errors to occur, for shifting to occur, and for somebody to wind up without any water - and who's going to make good on that?" McEneny said.

The Feura Bush public water supply ends roughly 2,500 feet away from Collabek Road. If homes lost water as a result of blasting, it is highly unlikely that New Scotland could afford to extend the public water pipeline.

According to New Scotland Town Supervisor Edward Clark, an extension of the water district would cost approximately $1 million and would be complicated due to changes in elevation, poor soil conditions, low density of homes, and the considerable distance from existing pipes.

Opponents of the project also argued that the Indiana bat, an endangered species, may be living in the area.

They repeatedly asked DEC to conduct a full comprehensive environmental analysis of the project.

The Fruehs declined to speak at the hearing but their attorney outlined the need for the family-owned business, which has existed for 40 years, to stay competitive.

"The Fruehs are not going to do anything to impact their own water supply," cautioned attorney Karen Bulich Moreau. Both Peter and Chris Frueh live in close proximity to the mining location. Moreau assured the crowd that blasting would meet federal guidelines and have no impact on nearby above ground or below ground structures. Through their attorney, the Fruehs offered to perform baseline water quality tests on their neighbors' wells to measure turbidity, or cloudiness, in the water.

"If it can be shown that operations at the mine cause an increase in turbidity above the established baseline level, the Fruehs will provide filters to remove the turbidity," said Moreau. The Fruehs submitted their own hydrogeologist's report, conducted by Alpha Geoscience, stating that the mine would have no impact on nearby water wells or water quality.

A steady stream of residents spoke in support of the project, touting the Fruehs' legacy as upstanding businesspeople who take pride in their community.

"All this stuff is being blown way out of control," said Brian Snyder. "It's such a small mine compared to what's already been operating in the area for years." Snyder's reference was to Callanan Industries on Old Quarry Road. Until the early 1930s, Callanan mined crushed stone in a five-acre quarry, roughly a half-mile from the Fruehs' proposed mine. The facility was shut down because blasting endangered the Albany County Filtration Plant, according to Callanan Senior Vice President Charles A. Stokes.

The company continues to operate a second quarry located about three miles away on County Route 101 in northern Coeymans.

"We periodically do blast there for smaller amounts of material," said Stokes, who estimated that the company blasts once a year.

The Fruehs' land sits in Bethlehem's rural not zoned district. The state Supreme Court recently settled controversy over allowed uses in that district, but even with subsequent clarifications made by the town board, it's still unclear whether mining is a permitted use in the area. The DEC will review public comments but did not indicate when a decision would be made about whether mining would be allowed.

No hearts, no flowers, just acceptance on V-day

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

Who doesn't yearn for grand, romantic gestures? We can all daydream a little about the perfect Valentine's Day gift as advertisements for hearts and flowers fills the airwaves, the print media, even the Internet.

A dozen lushly red roses would be lovely, with silky soft petals to brush against noses and cheeks when we bend our heads to drink in their lovely, winey odor.

Sweets for the sweet call to all of us. This winter has either been too cold or snowy to even think of wearing a bathing suit again, so why not get lost in a box of rich, gooey chocolates? Cormac, able to get to the deepest essence of my soul, has offered us a great justification for chocolate.

"If you eat between two M&Ms and half a candy bar a week, it makes you feel loved, and you'll live an extra year," is his interpretation of something he heard on the Food Network.

Hooray — I'm going to live forever!

In every family, though, somebody is the voice of reason, and it's Christopher who drew us back from immortality before I even finished putting on my boots

COMMENTARY:

*Mom's
the

to go to CVS to purchase a two-pound bag of M&Ms.

"He's making it up," the skeptical teenager said, and Cormac just shrugged. "Well, it's something like that," he said. "Check Foodnetwork.com."

When it comes to chocolate, I'm willing to believe his intelligence is credible. Any chance there's a health benefit to eating those sugary candy hearts with "Be Mine" printed on them?

For some couples, warmer climes keep the love alive. There are stories of spouses who arrange whole trips, then blindfold their better halves and lead them on a plane to a romantic getaway. The thought of being surprised with a trip takes my breath away — for all the wrong reasons.

"Look, honey, the Library of Congress!" might vie for top billing along with "Check out this great fare I got to Yellowknife!"

For women in particular,

Valentine's Day brings up a dilemma that arises at Christmas, his birthday and on a couple's anniversary: What on earth do you get the man who has everything?

As time goes by, the choices get harder. Check any man's wallet, and there's bound to be about $100 worth of bookstore gift cards; maybe a gift certificate for a massage; and a credit from Home Depot for the tool he didn't want or need but that somebody else's husband couldn't live without so some misguided wife thought her husband might like one, too.

Sometimes, gift giving reveals the awful truth that we're thinking more of ourselves than our spouse. Chris got a lovely small stereo for his January birthday this year, and while I was remembering times he sang along to his CDs as I bought it, I have to admit that the lure of hearing "A Prairie Home Companion" in even better sound weighed heavily in my decision-making.

For some couples, practical expressions of love make the best gifts. Two friends said years ago that the best Valentine's Day presents they ever got were a remote car starter and really good snow tires. A warm, safe winter morning surely is the greatest expression of love a man can show a woman.

Valentine's Day is one of the "pressure" holidays, when advertising would have us believe that we MUST hearken back to the days we fell in love, and spend some time together. We should gaze into each other's eyes over a candlelit dinner — even if it means hiring a babysitter, despairing over a frumpy wardrobe in the hunt for clothes that look at least presentable if not alluring, and spend money better put into the college fund or IRA on a gorgeous meal. It's a day for lovers, so even if we'd rather curl up on the couch in a ratty bathrobe with our family close by, we feel compelled to work on our marriages, savor our relationships — anything to keep us together just a little while longer.

Togetherness is wonderful, but sometimes giving our partners the space to be who they really are could provide the cushion to keep us together when we hit a bad patch.

Probably the best gift Chris could get would be an uninterrupted day to surf obscure Web sites. The bow on that package would be that the boys and I would listen raptly as he explained why, exactly, Newfoundland is one-and-a-half hours ahead of us; how the advent of the mercantile system in Europe has an impact on today's World Trade Organization; and how you can sing the Gilligan's Island theme song to the tune of "Stairway to Heaven."

I would pick family togetherness as a Valentine's Day gift, as our children get older and pursue their own interests. Chris would lead the throwback to the days when the children were little and we found family activities each weekend. I'd love to snowshoe at Five Rivers, or slather pine cones with peanut butter and roll them in birdseed. We might ice skate, or cross-country ski together. There'd be no whining, no complaining that it's boring, no video games, no grouching about school, and no shouts of "I call the T.V. when we get home." Maybe we could even go to a movie where not one single thing blew up.

Sometimes, on special days like Mother's Day or Valentine's Day, I ask for a day without questions. Well, OK, some questions would be OK, like, can I bring you the other bag of M&Ms now, dear? Or Can I refill your champagne glass, my angel?

But no questions like "Where are the car keys?" "Are there clean pants in the dryer?" "What is this bizarre thing the computer's telling me?" "Do we have any extension cords?" and the most-dreaded questions of all: "What time is dinner? What are we having?"

The key to Valentine's Day is to find romance in the mundane, and to appreciate the unexpected gifts. When our coffee pot died recently, Chris volunteered to replace it, and he took the boys with him to the big box store that would surely mean a cell phone call for help with the decision. But no, they managed quite well on their own — a gift in itself — and purchased a coffee pot with a timer, so that we wake to the smell of coffee already brewed.

So skip the flowers and chocolate — when sunlight peeks into our room this Valentine's Day, I'll burrow a little deeper under the flannel-covered down comforter, sniff that rich, deep aroma and hug the man who gave me the gift of mornings full of promise.

NYSERDA names Delmar man to top post

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Nearly 30 years ago, the state Legislature established the New York State Research and Energy Development Authority. NYSEERDA's establishment was a reaction to the energy crisis of the early 1970s, when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' embargo meant long lines at gas stations and high energy costs. NYSEERDA's mission was to fund research into energy supply and efficiency, as well as energy-related issues.

Just a few weeks ago, on Jan. 26, Gov. George Pataki appointed Peter Smith of Delmar president of the public benefit corporation that has been in existence since 1975. While long lines at gas stations have been relegated to memory and history books, Smith and NYSEERDA remain committed to finding and implementing efficient energy use.

Smith, who grew up in Jordanville, Herkimer County, and attended a one-room schoolhouse, has been in the energy field for more than 25 years. He started his career when the former secretary of the state Senate, Albert J. Abrams, hired him to work on a National Science Foundation grant studying energy policy in the Northeast. Smith, a 1975 graduate of LeMoyne College in Syracuse, was working on a master's degree in public administration at the Nelson A. Rockefeller School of Public Affairs and Policy at the University at Albany when he took that job.

"I was going to stay in Albany for two years," Smith said.

Two years stretched well beyond that, since Smith joined the state Energy Office and worked there until 1995. When that office closed in 1995, NYSEERDA picked up its data and analysis division, and Smith came on board as program director for energy analysis. The analysis, Smith said, assisted NYSEERDA in carrying out its mission of finding improved energy and energy usage.

"There's a need for objective information," Smith said. "The data and analysis influences how we do our program plan. The backbone of NYSEERDA is research and development."

What NYSEERDA does is to look for the best pair of hands and for the people with the best ideas. We take the risk at the front end, by investing in a project and bringing it to the market. Then, we get out."

To do that, NYSEERDA outlines broad energy and environmental challenges, and receives program opportunity notices from people or company's looking to meet those challenges.

NYSEERDA's technology evaluation panel ranks the proposals, and recipients of funding have ranged from companies like Comfortex and Price Chopper to "people inventing things in their garages," Smith said. "We look for innovation."

Much of NYSEERDA's funding comes from a systems benefit charge, an assessment on the intrastate sales of the state's investor-owned electric and gas utilities. In the Capital District, Smith estimates the SBC to yield about a $10 surcharge on private customers' Niagara Mohawk bill. First imposed in 1998, Smith said the SBC yielded $55 million in its first three years, and he estimated that NYSEERDA leveraged it 3-1 for ratepayers.

"If New York state invests $30 billion in energy, we can see savings of $200 million," Smith said. "There are lower energy costs, and long-lived security in that we've reduced the demand on our energy system. We work all the time with our industrial customers to utilize technology and energy management systems."

Some of NYSEERDA's success was demonstrated during last August's blackout, Smith said, when they worked with 700 of their customers to use those energy management systems.

NYSEERDA also receives voluntary annual contributions from the New York Power Authority and the Long Island Power Authority, and receives federal grants and limited corporate funds.

Most private consumers see NYSEERDA's work in the Energy Star labeling of appliances, part of the Energy Smart program started in 1998. Its "Keep Cool" program offered a bounty to people who replaced their old air conditioners with Energy Star units.

In the first year that NYSEERDA offered $75 for old air conditioners, they received 750. In the second year, they got 40,000; and in the third, 160,000. Retailer inventory increased from 6 percent carrying the Energy Star label, to 60 percent today.

"We also created an industry for recycling air conditioners," Smith said. "About 50 new jobs in the Bronx, Syracuse and Buffalo resulted."

NYSEERDA also has a list of Energy Star-certified contractors. For $100 to $200, homeowners can have a high-tech audit performed by an Energy Star contractor to analyze and offer suggestions for improved energy use. If a homeowner implements those improvements, the cost of the audit is waived. NYSEERDA can also help homeowners lower the cost of financing those improvements — by about 4 percentage points.

NYSEERDA also offers incentives to contractors who become Energy Star-certified.

"The benefit to the state is that we're saving on energy usage," Smith said. "Also, we're improving the health and safety of New York residents."

On a larger scale, NYSEERDA has partnered with the University at Albany and the Saratoga Economic Development Corp. to establish the Saratoga Technology and Energy Park, a 280-acre site in the town of Malta that Smith called "the first clean energy park in the nation."

STEP is a reclaimed brownfield on the site of a former rocket fuel and testing ground for the Department of Defense. Its 21,000-square-foot manufacturing facility is full, Smith said. When NYSEERDA's board met in January, they approved moving forward with the park's master plan, which will involve more building.

Games people play

Super Bowl XXXVIII will likely go down in sports history as one of the better athletic contests of the annual spectacle that attracts millions of fans and viewers throughout the country and the world. It was, in fact, a good game right up until the last eight seconds.

Unfortunately, except for the most avid sports enthusiasts, a year from now, most people will likely forget the particulars of the game, the names of the players and even the score.

What most people will remember, however, is the triple X-rated brouhaha about the halftime "show" that captured the TV and news media spotlight and created anger and confusion in countless families who felt offended at the antics of Janet Jackson and Justin Timberlake. Families who were upset were likely made even more so because they were watching the Super Bowl with their children.

This extravaganza was after all broadcast on primetime TV, where censorship still is exercised — at least on most shows or at least with a warning about "sensitive" material not suitable for children.

CBS officials are now decrying the incident as are most others including the perpetrators. But that's too little too late.

And it's small comfort for parents whose children saw the halftime show and who now are puzzled about what to allow their children to watch or what to expect to see on major networks.

The bare-breast incident itself raises questions for all of us. Kids and fans make icons of sports personalities, emulating them in the hope of someday becoming just like their heroes on the playing field. Many celebrities in the entertainment business enjoy the same adulation. When Britney Spears bares her belly and dons hip huggers, tweens and teens head for the mall in droves in the hopes of buying slacks that will make them look just like their idol.

So how are kids supposed to know when sports and entertainment heroes take the low road and put their own interests above that of the public's?

For good or bad, there are plenty of venues for nudity and bad taste on TV. But those venues don't include major networks that attempt to appeal to a broad audience — an audience comprised of millions of impressionable children along with others who find provocative material like the Jackson stunt just plain offensive.

The viewing public deserves better than this and deserves much better than to be duped into watching something that wasn't in the script.

AARP working to make Rx bill better

By FRED GRIESBACH

The writer is manager of government affairs for AARP New York.

From the initial announcement AARP made in support of the Medicare drug bill, it has stressed that this new law is a start and has vowed to strengthen and improve it. Now AARP is working to do just that.

Nationally, AARP recently announced aggressive plans to make the law better, allowing the safe re-importation of drugs from Canada and giving the federal government the power to negotiate directly with drug companies to get lower costs for drugs.

Across the nation, AARP has begun educating AARP members, volunteers, and the public about the Medicare law, how it affects them and what we can and need to do to make it better.

In New York state, AARP is working with the legislature to increase access to prescription drugs. In recent state Senate hearings, AARP has recommended New York implement a bulk purchasing program utilizing the buying power of Medicaid, EPIC and state and local government employee plans to negotiate lower drug prices, saving state dollars and creating access. A similar program exists in Maine and has proven to significantly lower prescription drugs costs in the state.

AARP also sees promise in some recent proposals set forth in the governor's budget, maximizing funds available under the new Medicare law waiving fees for low-income individuals who qualify and choose to obtain the new $600 Medicare prescription drug discount card. This initiative would save the EPIC program money and continue to provide individuals with prescription drug coverage without any increase in co-pays, deductibles or fees. Working to ensure that older New Yorkers benefiting from EPIC are able to retain their coverage and not feel the effects of state budget constraints is always a top concern for AARP.

Point of View

Very importantly, New York's EPIC program will remain intact and will not be pre-empted by the Medicare prescription drug law. The law has no requirements that people leave Epic, and it does not force people off of EPIC into the Medicare program. Enrolling in a Medicare prescription drug program is completely voluntary for seniors in New York state. When an individual in the EPIC program signs up for the Medicare prescription drug benefit, the federal law calls for a seamless transition between the two programs.

New York's seniors who

the most effective drug at the best price.

While AARP has worked hard and will continue to work on ensuring affordable access to prescription drugs, we also must address some of the misconceptions, misinformation and rhetoric that have circulated about the new law. Some have made the mistake of buying into this misleading, misstated and mistaken information being presented on employee retiree coverage, Medicare privatization and AARP's reasons for supporting this new law.

The prescription drug law does not open the floodgates for companies to drop retiree health coverage. AARP fought strongly against amendments that would expressly allow employers to eliminate retiree health benefits, not just prescription drug benefits, for retirees eligible for Medicare or state health plans, such as EPIC. As a result of AARP efforts, the amendments failed and the new law provides more than $80 billion worth of incentives for employers (both public and private) to ensure that retirees who already have good benefit from the EPIC program are not at risk of losing their coverage. They do not have to leave the EPIC program. New Yorkers benefiting from the EPIC program have nothing to fear from the Medicare prescription drug legislation, it simply offers individuals who have little to no prescription drug coverage more benefits and more choices to meet their healthcare needs.

The new law is focused on helping those who need it most: people with low incomes, including those who depend on Social Security for all or most of their income, and people with very high drug costs. It also provides modest relief for millions more. And it protects retiree benefits through financial incentives to employers and by upholding the health benefit protections of the Age Discrimination and Employment Act. This will help ensure that people who have good employee coverage now do not lose it.

One of the most promising things about the law is that it adds new preventive services for all Medicare beneficiaries, including a one-time physical examination. It also provides a new benefit to better manage care for those with chronic conditions. There are huge potential savings here. About 5 percent of Medicare beneficiaries account for some 50 percent of the cost, and many of these individuals have multiple chronic diseases.

Another important step in the law is funding for research to compare the effectiveness and safety of therapeutically similar drugs and to make the information available to physicians, pharmacists and consumers so they can choose health and prescription drug coverage will not lose it.

In terms of privatization, what was once a proposal that would have actually resulted in privatization became a demonstration that is time limited, geographically limited, exempts low-income individuals from participation, and actually puts a cap on the increases in premiums faced by traditional Medicare recipients. This does not jeopardize traditional Medicare.

Lastly, AARP did not support this law in order to accrue financial benefit. There is no connection between AARP policy decisions and AARP marketing of insurance and other products. AARP social mission drives our for-profit activities — not the other way around. We are proud of the offerings we provide. Millions of Americans have AARP insurance for expenses Medicare doesn't cover. And through our pharmacy service, AARP members have saved $402 million in 2003 alone on prescription drugs.

The money generated by AARP's for-profit arm goes into serving our members with education, information and services they need to make their lives better. For example, these revenues helped us lead the fight for national "Do Not Call" legislation. It has funded our work to protect the elderly and poor children from being dropped from Medicaid rolls. We have used these revenues to curtail the activities of predatory lenders, expand EPIC, provide grandparents with legal custody standing regarding their grandchildren and many other accomplishments.

The decision to support this law was based on the answer to a question. Will this new benefit help Americans today and will it help Americans in the future? The answer is yes. One need only look at the statistics: 38 percent of current Medicare recipients are without coverage; an explosion of future beneficiaries would be without coverage unless we take action.

AARP is serving notice that we are stepping up our efforts in the states to strengthen Medicaid coverage and supplemental prescription drug programs and to lower drug costs. AARP will work with Congress to improve the new law, including making legal the importation of prescription drugs from Canada. AARP will be a watchdog to make sure this new law is properly implemented to improve the lives of people in Medicare and the quality of the Medicare program. And AARP will keep the heat on to make drugs more affordable and accessible.

"The Power to Make it Better," is much more than simply a motto for AARP - it is an anthem. AARP will continue to improve affordable access to health care not just in New York state, but across the country. AARP will continue to fight the prescription drug on all fronts — to ensure that older New Yorkers and their families have the health care they need, want and deserve. AARP will continue to work on behalf of our members and all Americans to truly make it better.

Cubs say thanks for food drive help

Editor, The Spotlight:

Cub Scout Pack 81 would like to thank all those who donated items for the Pack's food drive this past November. A special thanks to all those who donated their time to help the Pack with this annual community service. The collection was given to local food pantries.

The Cub Scouts will be recognized for this accomplishment during our upcoming Blue and Gold Banquet.

In addition, Pack 81 would like to show appreciation to all of those who donated returnable bottles toward the Pack's Annual Bottle Drive held in conjunction with the food drive. A total of $417.40 was raised. This annual drive provides crucial funding needed to support the Pack.

Cub Scout Pack 81 would also like to express thanks to the Bethlehem Police Officers Union for their support.

Thanks to Good Sam for excellent care

Editor, The Spotlight:

The family of Edna Colbert would like to express our sincere gratitude to the entire staff and to Deacon Robert Fricke, chaplain, of Good Samaritan Lutheran Health Care Center for the exceptional care given to our mother.

At 92 years of age, Mom was admitted in June 2002 having suffered a debilitating stroke that left her totally incapacitated. From that day until her death on Dec. 27, 2003, Mom was always treated with dignity, compassion and love by the staff of Good Samaritan. The staff always interacted with her, and although she was not always able to respond, her beautiful smile and the twinkle in her eyes led us all to believe she understood.

During the past 18 months, our family was at the home on a daily basis and the staff was always appreciative and welcoming. They were attentive to our needs and appreciated our input and suggestions for her care. They were also responsive to our input regarding the general needs of the center.

For the last two weeks that Mom was at Good Samaritan, the entire staff was extremely supportive to our family. They never tired of us being there at all hours of the day and night, and they could not do enough for us and for our mother in her final hours. The staff and Deacon Fricke were extremely comforting and compassionate during this time of grief.

We are forever grateful that she was able to spend her final days with the staff at Good Samaritan. We realize that many of the staff cherished her as her family did. We thank them all for their love and generosity. The staff of Good Samaritan will always be in our prayers.

Don and Maria Colbert

Residents should support local business

Editor, The Spotlight:

With the new commercial development on Route 9W in Glenmont, the town of Bethlehem is forever changed. Among those changes are the growing threats to existing local merchants of the town who have established themselves and worked hard at building relationships with the residents who patronize them.

I am writing to remind the residents of Bethlehem that the local merchants, etc. still deserve our support despite the convenience and prices of the larger chains.

I heard a rumor just today that Casa Mia in Glenmont would be closing because they had sold their business to TGI Fridays. Having planned a dinner there with friends for this very night, I was shocked to hear the news. Then, just a few hours later I had heard the rumors were not true and Casa Mia was in fact remaining open, which I then confirmed with one of the owners at Casa Mia before my dinner party arrived. The rumors are hurting their business more than the Applebee's or whichever other restaurants plan to open would ever do.

A perfect example of the type of family business we should support, upon arriving at Casa Mia (ahead of the other three people in my party, one of whom is in a wheelchair), I was greeted and seated immediately. I advised the owner I would be waiting in the alcove by the bar to keep an eye out the window for my disabled boyfriend to arrive so I could bring him in from the cold.

Our waitress (the same one we get every time we dine there) saw me and asked me if I would like my usual cocktail and if my parents would be joining us. I accepted the offer of the drink, but told her friends would be joining us instead. It's so nice to be able to receive that kind of service at reasonable prices. It's what keeps people going back.

There is a place for everyone in our community to an extent. I grew up in Albany, have worked in Bethlehem for 14 years and even lived here for five years before relocating to Saratoga County. I have always tried to support the local businesses wherever I've lived and I appreciate the personal services I receive in return. Casa Mia is an excellent restaurant with a nice relaxing atmosphere. It's a place where I try to dine five or six times a year despite the fact it's now a 40-minute drive for me. I have had private showers and birthday parties there with the best of results and compliments from my guests.

The bottom line is to remember our community businesses and visit them as often as you would have before the new kids in town arrived.

BCMS student upset by 'insensitive' remarks

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am a Bethlehem Central Middle School student who had the good fortune to have had Mrs. McNulty as my social studies teacher until tragedy struck her family.

I am outraged and appalled by the insensitive remarks made by Mr. Olsen in a letter to the editor last week. I wonder, has he ever had any tragedies in his family? Did it ever occur to him that communities should work together to help those in need? Why is it a problem that people are willing to help, especially when it was a police officer seriously injured while protecting one of our communities?

Perhaps it's time for all of us to ask what we can do to help others instead of being so self-focused and annoyed at others who have come forward to help a great teacher and her husband and their two young children. I wish Lt. Finn a speedy recovery.

Caitlin Dole

Church program is heartening

Editor, The Spotlight:

Bethlehem Lutheran Church is involved in many outreach ministries, and our community merchants play a big role in their success.

A committee meets weekly to make and deliver sandwiches for the Homeless Action Committee. Price Chopper supplies bread, Deli Warehouse supplies cheese and cold cuts. Soup is provided by Perfect Blend, and cookies are donated by Cookies by Design. This food is given to the homeless on the street.

Our in-house food pantry is always very low during the coldest winter months. This year, we initiated a new program called "Bags of Blessings." SuperValu in Voorheesville is supplying the bags. We decorated each paper bag with a heart and a list of needed items. Our church and preschool families were each given a bag to fill by Valentine's Day weekend.

Many bags have been returned. It's heartwarming to walk into our church and see all the bags with hearts on them full of food to replenish our food pantry. We appreciate the donations from our community members and send them our heartfelt thanks.

with some breakfast-themed stories and an art activity.

Older kids will form teams to compete in a two-day game of Book Baseball, testing their knowledge of common and classic picture books on Feb. 18 and 19 from 10:30 a.m. until noon. Book Baseball is designed for grades two to five. Sign-up is required for both programs.

There will be no regular story times during school vacation week.

Quilt lovers will appreciate the display in the hall gallery by Linda Crannell. Raffle tickets for the Nimblefingers quilt are available for $1 at the circulation desk. The drawing will be held March 21.

In the showcase this month is a tableau of articles significant to the Jewish faith. On view are ram's horns and other items on loan from the Habar Gift Shop at Temple Israel, prayer shawls handmade by Anita Rabinoff-Goldman and personal items from the collection of library Director Gail Sacco.

"We told them that if they could make it work financially with us, we would give it some thought," he said.

Another location being considered for the construction of a YMCA is a corner lot at Route 9W and Wemple Road in Glenmont.

Town Supervisor Theresa

Egan recently met with YMCA President John Flynn to discuss the feasibility of certain locations.

"There have been several different sites that we talked about," said Egan. "We're giving them the pros and cons from the town perspective on each," she said, adding there is a need to maintain an ice rink in town.

Egan also met Feb. 2 with representatives of the arena to discuss back taxes.

Bethlehem native to lead Caregivers

By MARY LANNON

A local organization known for lending a helping hand has a new guiding hand at its helm.

In a re-organizational move, Community Caregivers named its first executive director, Judith Paige McKinnon.

McKinnon's guiding hand comes with a familiar face. She's a native of Bethlehem with roots that go back five generations and forward one generation.

She grew up here and then returned in the early '70s to raise her daughter. In 1994, with her daughter off to college and after the death of her fiancé, McKinnon took off for adventure in the Southwest. There she worked in community service organizations, including a stint at the Seton Home, a home for teen mothers.

In 2002, she came back to the Northeast, working in Glens Falls as associate executive director at the Council for Alcohol and Substance Abuse.

After the death of her father Harry Paige, a professor and writer, in September 2003, McKinnon felt it was time to head home. Her mother now lives with her and her daughter and sister are in the area.

Judith McKinnon

"It's a real gift for me to come and service this area and to give something back to this community and to be in touch again with my roots," McKinnon said.

Reached on her first day of work, she said she was settling in, getting her desk organized.

Along with keeping the nuts and bolts of the operation going, McKinnon hopes to reach more diverse groups in the community.

Since 1994, those taking the offered helping hands have been the elderly, the disabled, the chronically ill, any caregivers in need of a respite and single and teen parents.

McKinnon said that the organization is well known for its service to the elderly, but she'd like to expand services to single and teen parents. Another goal will be to increase partnerships with other community organizations in the area, including the public school district.

More than 400 volunteers, from school kids to seniors, have put in more than 6,800 hours of service last year in all or parts of Guilderland, Voorheesville, Altamont, New Scotland and Bethlehem, as well as much of the Hilltowns.

Among other services volunteers offer transportation, home visits to the home-bound, in-home assistance, telephone reassurance, library book home delivery, temporary light housekeeping, yard work and shopping assistance.

It also provides referrals to other agencies for Alzheimer's and hospice care, as well as offering regular blood pressure clinics.

Volunteers are given an orientation and are insured for liability when they work.

The organization's funds come from churches, fraternal organizations, grants and some members of the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce, as well as from individual charitable contributions.

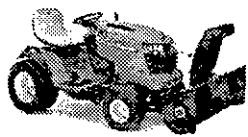

If you or someone you know might qualify for services, you can call 218-1167 to arrange for an in-home interview with a member of the Community Caregivers staff.

To volunteer or for information, call 218-1167. The organization especially seeks to increase its volunteer base in Berne, Knox, New Scotland and Bethlehem.

"Hopefully we can provide other people with opportunities to serve. That's what were all about: service," McKinnon said.

BC relay team wins Suburban Council title

The Bethlehem boys 800-meter relay team posted a first-place finish at Sunday's Suburban Council Indoor Track and Field Championships at the University at Albany's Recreation and Convocation Center.

The quartet of Steve Blanch, Steve Allen, Chris Honeywell and Dan Felitte finished with a time of 1:39.1, five-tenths of a second ahead of runner-up Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake.

Blanch earned an individual victory in the long jump. The senior leapt 21-feet, 5-inches to edge Shaker's Shaun Kippins for the title.

Conor Murphy contributed a fifth-place finish for Bethlehem in the 1,000. Murphy finished with a time of 2:41.92, two-tenths of a second behind Shenendehowa's Dan McManamon. John Mueller of Burnt Hills won the event in a time of 2:36.75.

Bethlehem was in seventh place in the team standings with the shot put and pole vault yet to be contested. The Eagles had 22 points, three points behind Colonie and five points behind Saratoga. Shen was leading the team standings with 112 points.

On the girls' side, Shen's Tara McRae edged Bethlehem's Emily Coles in the 55-meter hurdles finals. McRae won with a time of 9.03 seconds, while Coles placed second in a time of 9.16 seconds. Burnt Hills' Brittany Dexter was third in a time of 9.17 seconds.

Emily Malinowski was the first non-Saratoga runner to cross the finish line in the 1,000. Malinowski placed fourth in a time of 3:06.09. Nicole Blood, who won the girls high school mile race at the Millrose Games in New York City last Saturday, led a trio of Saratoga runners at the front of the pack with a winning time of 2:57.8.

Roxanne Wegman took fifth place in the 1,500 in a time of 4:56.69. Sara Turner finished sixth in the high jump with a height of 4-feet, 10-inches, Johanna Marvin placed sixth in the long jump with a distance of 15-3 and Jessica Venezia was sixth in the triple jump with a distance of 32-1.

Bethlehem was fifth in the team standings with the pole vault and shot put yet to be contested. The Eagles had 21 points, less than 10 points behind fourth-place Burnt Hills. Shen had a one-point lead over Saratoga.

Eagles avenge earlier loss to Mohonasen

By ROB JONAS

The Bethlehem boys basketball team played a power game against Mohonasen last Saturday.

Center Josh Lewis and forward Brendan Venter combined for 32 points to lead the Eagles to a 63-56 victory over the Mighty Warriors in a Suburban Council Gold Division game in Rotterdam.

"We got a total team effort inside," Bethlehem coach Jeremy Klugman said. "I thought we did a better job rebounding the ball (than the first game against Mohonasen)."

A fast break layup by guard Ben Cooke helped the Mighty Warriors (1-12 league, 1-16 overall) pull within three points with 59 seconds left. However, two free throws by Cameron Brown and a layup by Lewis in the final 30 seconds sealed Bethlehem's victory.

"They've got a lot of fight," Klugman said of Mohonasen, which never trailed by more than nine points the entire game. "I've got to give coach (Ben) Pierson a lot of credit. Those guys never give up."

After falling behind 21-16, the Eagles (5-8, 6-12) used a 16-3

Bethlehem's Brendan Venter breaks away for a layup during last Saturday's Suburban Council game at Mohonasen. Venter scored 14 points to help the Eagles defeat the Mighty Warriors 63-56 for their fifth league win.

second quarter run to take the lead. Lewis scored six points in the spurt, including a three-point play that opened the run. Venter added a three-pointer that gave Bethlehem a 23-21 lead — a point from which the Eagles never trailed again.

"Our offense was well balanced tonight," Klugman said. "We had scoring from the perimeter and the low post, and we did a good job of passing the ball around."

Mohonasen never let Bethlehem get too comfortable with the lead, though. The Mighty Warriors stayed within nine points the rest of the way and cut the Eagles' lead to less than four points several times in the second half.

"The ball just doesn't bounce our way sometimes," Pierson said. "I think fouls hurt us in the game. We had two players foul out (in the fourth quarter)."

Lewis led the way with 18 points, while Brown contributed 15 points and Venter added 14 points for Bethlehem. Cooke had 16 points to pace Mohonasen, which defeated the Eagles 70-65 Dec. 16.

Bethlehem entered its game at Mohonasen fresh off a 50-46 victory over Niskayuna last Wednesday. Brown scored 22 points, and Craig Orner added the go-ahead basket late in the fourth quarter for the Eagles.

Following a home game against Averill Park Tuesday, Bethlehem concludes its regular season Thursday against Columbia.

Dolphins host swim clinic

The Delmar Dolphins swim club is hosting a swim clinic Saturday, Feb. 21, at Bethlehem Central High School.

The featured guests are Olympic medalist Kristy Kowal and Pan American Games champion Ben Michaelson. They will instruct swimmers age 8 and older from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and then give a speech from 11:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. that is open to athletes in all sports, and their parents.

Space is limited for the morning clinic, which includes stroke and dryland training, as well as in-pool demonstrations by Kowal and Michaelson.

Registration forms can be obtained by calling 439-3455.

Hoop game raises scholarship funds

The Bethlehem Central Middle School staff will play the Fly 92 basketball team Thursday, Feb. 26, at 7 p.m. at Bethlehem Central High School.

Proceeds from the game benefit the Russell Eilers Scholarship Fund. Admission is $3, and refreshments will be sold.

For information, contact Kristin Burns at 439-7460.

Order UHLS books online, February is Library Lovers month

Automated cataloging has allowed for consolidation of holdings throughout the 29 libraries of the Upper Hudson Library System. This in turn has simplified the request process for patrons. If it's not on our shelves, up 10 percent of our total circulation last year. Translated into numbers of items, that's almost 55,000, at a rate of about 150 items a day.

The number wasn't always that high. Before electronic request capability, staff would process an average of 20 to 30 requests per day. Part of that process was patron notification. Our staff made calls daily to patrons whose items had arrived. To call 20 patrons in an afternoon is one thing; to call 150 is quite another.

But help was on the way. Our cataloging system is now programmed to trigger a recorded phone message announcing that requested items are ready for pickup. In the interest of patron privacy rights, the message specifies only the number of items available; items are not named.

If you would prefer not to receive this recorded message, you can ask us to notify you by mail. Just see one of our staff at the circulation desk, and we will make the switch for you.

Love your library!

February is Library Lovers Month. Here are 10 ways you can show your love:

1. Join Friends of Bethlehem Public Library — volunteer your time and talents.
2. Take care of library materials — they belong to you and your neighbors.
3. Advocate for your library — write to your county, state and federal legislators. Ask them to support much-needed funding.

4. Visit the library with your children — find books you can read together.

5. Thank a library staff member for great service.

6. Visit Bethlehem Public Library online — www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org

7. Give a monetary gift in honor or in memory of a friend or family member.

8. Find out about planned giving through the Bethlehem Public Library Fund.

9. Buy a Bethlehem Public Library book bag (available at the circulation desk).

10. Come often!

Construction closing

A reminder — the library is closed today as the construction crew prepares for phase three of our renovation project. As before, old walls are coming down, new ones are going up, and whole shelf ranges are being picked up and shifted. But we're still here, ready to answer your questions and help you find your way around. Ask us!

Louise Grieco

it's virtually at your fingertips. With a valid library card number and a few keystrokes on your computer, you can make an online request for an item from another UHLS library, and ask that it be delivered to your library for pickup.

Obviously, libraries with smaller collections make more requests than libraries like ours, which have larger collections. Even so, requests originating at Bethlehem Public Library made

Glenmont school to hold spring craft fair

Glenmont Elementary School PTA will hold its 22nd annual craft fair on Saturday, March 6, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

More than 80 crafters from the Northeast will display and sell a wide variety of handcrafted wares, including wood, pottery, jewelry, glass and edible goods.

Admission is free. Lunch and snacks will be available throughout the day. The school is located on Route 9W in Glenmont, across from Wal-Mart, two miles south of Thruway Exit 23 and the end of I-787.

Organizers start planning for Feestelijk

Feestelijk Bethlehem is "Opening the door for 2004." The event showcases performing arts in Delmar and surrounding community and will take place on Saturday, May 1.

Multiple performances of music, dance, theater and children's entertainment are held in over 15 public and private venues located in the center of town and along the Delaware Avenue corridor.

Started in 1996, as an outgrowth of Bethlehem's Bicentennial, Feestelijk is derived from a Dutch word meaning "celebrate".

Event organizers are always on the search for local talent, volunteers and corporate partners.

For information, contact Bob Girouard at 439-0512 or bgthreshold@hotmail.com.

Bethlehem Central hosts scrapbook workshop

Bethlehem Central Continuing Education program will host a 5-week scrapbooking workshop for beginners and advanced scrapbookers on Thursdays, March 4, 11 and 24 and April 1 and 8.

The session runs from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. The cost is $30.

Each week students will receive a four-page handout and learn a new scrapbook technique with a mini-lesson.

Students will work on their own album projects in class.

Scrapbook tools will be provided, and scrapbook materials will be available for purchase.

For information, contact the continuing education program at Bethlehem Central High School at 439-4921, ext. 248.

A BETHLEHEM NETWORKS PROJECT

Driving while chit chatting

- Nationally, 20 percent of 15- to 20-year-old drivers killed in motor vehicle crashes were found to have been drinking.
- Incoming calls are responsible for 42 percent of cell phone-related crashes and drivers age 16 to 20, are 63 percent more likely to take incoming calls.

The first statistic is very familiar. We hear often about underage drinking and driving and the dangers it brings. There are prevention programs and organizations like MADD and SADD to keep the issue in the spotlight.

But what about the second? When the cell phone rings in the car, teen drivers answer it! That puts inexperienced teen drivers even more at risk than most. People often believe that "hands free" laws are enough, but they aren't. Studies have shown, it's the thought processes involved in carrying on a conversation that distract most drivers (called "inattention blindness").

So teens, drive safely by leaving your cell phones off when behind the wheel. Pull off the road to make emergency calls. And please, don't call friends if you know they're driving.

And parents, remind your teens often that no conversation is worth endangering lives.

NYSERDA

materials used in the aerospace and automobile industries, as well as power generation and micro-electronics, is one of the tenants. Another is the Building Professional Institute, which certifies Energy Star contractors.

NYSERDA's goal with STEP is to create a knowledge-based community while remaining good neighbors.

"We're not building on spec," Smith said. "We've got a memorandum of understanding with Malta's town board that everything we do will go through the board."

As a state authority, NYSERDA doesn't require town approval.

"Seventy-seven percent of the land at STEP will remain pine forest," Smith said. "We'll also be using a Battery Park City model, like in New York, where the state will lease the land to a developer. We will provide the linkage for business activity, and a place where people can walk and talk with each other. This will provide a place for some of the innovators who are growing out of their garages."

To further that knowledge base, Smith said that NYSERDA would be open to having Hudson Valley Community College locate at STEP as the college seeks to open a north campus.

Since joining NYSERDA, Smith has also been vice president for programs, with responsibility for the authority's energy efficiency, research and development energy analysis, economic development and residential programs. He was acting president of NYSERDA for a year before being named president.

Looking forward, the 51-year-old wants to continue the systems benefit charge and work with the state's Public Service Commission, which administers the charge, "to create real programs for real people."

"I want to make STEP a reality," Smith said. "I also want to realize the Public Service Commission's renewable portfolio standard, which calls for 25 percent of New York's energy to be clean and renewable by the year 2012. We're already at 17 percent."

A priority of Smith's is West Valley, south of Buffalo and home of the Western New York Nuclear Service Center. Established in 1961, it was the nation's only commercial nuclear fuel reprocessing plant. In 1972, when nuclear regulations became more stringent, the operator, Nuclear Fuel Services, shut down the plant to modify it, but it never opened again.

Today, Smith said, there are 600,000 gallons of highly radioactive liquid waste there. In 1980, Congress passed the West Valley Demonstration Project Act, which directed the Department of Energy and NYSERDA to solidify and clean up the waste.

"We're waiting for Yucca Mountain to open to dispose of the waste," Smith said.

Yucca Mountain is in Nevada, and will be the nation's repository for nuclear waste. Its earliest possible opening date is 2010.

"DOE wants to leave in 2008, and we're saying they need to wait," Smith said.

Smith succeeds William Flynn, who left NYSERDA to become chairman of the Public Service Commission.

"I've known Peter since I walked in the door to NYSERDA in 1999," Flynn said. "He is a great resource on energy, and I still rely on him. He's respected statewide and nationally."

Flynn named Smith vice president for programs at NYSERDA.

"He was responsible on a daily basis for $150 million annually," Flynn said. "Peter was my choice, and he exceeded beyond expectations. I'm confident he'll do a good job as president of NYSERDA."

Smith, who earns $132,000 annually, has lived in Delmar for 14 years. His wife Suzanne teaches the 4-year-old class at Delmar's Tri-Village Nursery School. The Smiths have two children, 23-year-old Michael, a student at Buffalo State, and 19-year-old Rebecca a student at her father's alma mater, LeMoyne.

forth to school in that area so it makes it kind of dangerous."

Graziade said she and other parents have advised their children to walk in groups, be on the lookout for anyone following them and refrain from walking in the area where Memminger lives.

The school district is reminding parents to talk with their children about personal safety.

Under the legislation, sex offenders are required to check in with officers every 90 days and notify police should they move. Predicate sex offenders, such as Memminger, remain on the registry for life.

James Muhlfelder

James Leo Muhlfelder, 55, of Slingerlands died Monday, Feb. 2.

A graduate of The Albany Academy and Dartmouth College, he spent a year at the University of Cologne on a Fulbright Fellowship before attending the School for Advanced International Studies at John Hopkins University.

He began his business career at Cummins Engine in Columbus, Ind. and Jamestown.

In 1980, Jim returned to the Albany area to join J. deBeer & Son, a family baseball and softball business.

Under his leadership, the company expanded to include the making of lacrosse equipment, gaining national and international recognition.

Mr. Muhlfelder had a great love of life and the outdoors. He especially enjoyed fishing in the Adirondacks with good friends and their annual fishing trips to northern Canada.

He served as the chairman of the baseball/softball committee of the Sporting Goods Manufacturing Association. He was also a committee member of the US Lacrosse Organization Industry Council.

Mr. Muhlfelder was president of Equinox and served on the boards of The Albany Academy and the Jewish Family Services.

Survivors include his wife Wendy Muhlfelder; two sons, Joshua Muhlfelder of Seattle, Wash., and Nicholas Muhlfelder of Washington, D.C.; three daughters, Kait Muhlfelder of San Francisco, Calif., Julie Muhlfelder of Columbia, Md., and Laura Muhlfelder of Slingerlands; his mother, Adelaide deBeer Muhlfelder; a sister, Mary Harowski; and a brother, Lewis Muhlfelder.

Services were from the Levine Memorial Chapel in Albany. Contributions may be made to The Albany Academy, 135 Academy Road, Albany 12208, Albany Academy for Girls Athletic Facility, 140 Academy Road, Albany or Equinox Inc., 95 Central Ave., Albany.

William VanNatten

William C. VanNatten Sr., 71, of Clarksville, died Monday, February 2, at his home.

Born in Clarksville, he worked as a school bus driver for the Bethlehem Central School District for 33 years, retiring in 1992.

He was an avid outdoorsman who enjoyed hunting and fishing. He loved animals, especially the goats he raised and wild turkeys.

Survivors include his wife, Patricia D. Snyder VanNatten; three daughters, Lauri Cutting of Elizabethtown, Barbara Pielo of West Sand Lake and Melanie Pate of Middletown, N.J.; three sons, William C. VanNatten Jr. of Florida, James D. VanNatten of Salmon, Idaho, and John M. VanNatten of Plattsburgh; and eight grandchildren.

Arrangements were by the Applebee Funeral Home in Delmar. Spring burial will be in Onesquethaw Cemetery. Contributions may be made to Community Hospice of Albany, 445 New Karner Road, Colonie 12205.

CALENDARS ♦ ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

By DONNA J. BELL

Keeping kids busy during a week off from school is easy in the Capital District. Parents are lucky to have museums, theaters and events to choose from. Here are some of the many activities planned for Feb. 16 through 21 to keep the little ones happy.

The Junior Museum in Troy is offering "Discovering The Past" workshops on Feb. 16 through 20 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The series is geared to children age 6 to 10. Each camp includes a variety of hands-on activities, stories, games and exciting experiences that will educate and entertain your child all week. With a different topic each day, the camp schedule will cover:

Monday, Feb. 16, "Dinosaurs;" Tuesday, Feb. 17, "Native American Lore;" Wednesday, Feb. 18, "Early American Traditions;" Thursday, Feb. 19, "World Traditions;" and on Friday, Feb. 20, "Museum Discovery."

Participants should bring their own lunch and snacks, and the kids will each receive a free museum T-shirt. The fee is $35 per day per child for museum members and $45 per day per child for non-members. You must reserve a spot by calling Tiffany Fleming at 235-2120 ext. 202 or tfleming@junior-museum.org. Credit card reservations can be made by phone. For details, check www.junior-museum.org.

The Schenectady Museum & Planetarium is offering "Things That Fly" programs Monday through Friday from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Each day there will be a variety of programs that explore the engineering design process. Children can create a different flying object each day. The series of programs celebrates National Engineers Week and the 2004 Centennial of Flight. The programs are free with museum admission.

In addition to the programs, planetarium shows are offered at noon, 1, 2 and 3 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Call 382-7890 for information. The Schenectady Museum is located in Nott Terrace Heights. Admission to the museum and planetarium is $6.50 for adults and $4.50 for children; admission to the museum only is $5 per adult and $3 for children; $4 for seniors.

Steamer No. 10 Theatre will hold a full schedule of February break events with all shows running twice a day.

"We've lined up a great variety of performers that will appeal to a wide range of ages," said Ric Chesser, artistic director. "We want to help parents keep their sanity during the long break week."

On Monday, Feb. 16, at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. Alex the Jester, a one-man Renaissance fair, keeps the audience laughing at a non-stop stream of surprises.

On Tuesday, Feb. 17, at 1 and 3:30 p.m., the Puppet People will present the "Last Dragon." The show features a seven-foot dragon, a memorable jousting scene with a life-size knight on horseback, a prince and plenty of action.

Ventriloquist Steve Charney will present magic, music, jokes,

Fabulous February FUN

Capital District provides activities for winter break

ventriloquism, vaudeville and comedy on Wednesday, Feb. 18 at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Mime, modern dance and a bit of clowning hit the stage in KoMotion on Thursday, Feb. 19 at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. In "Balloonery," several clowns enter and, with numerous mishaps and false starts, manage to get their jackets on with string balloons in hand.

Local favorites the Zucchini Brothers will put on a high-energy performance that is a blend of original songs and traditional tunes. Their style is a folk-rock with jazz and R&B influences. The top-notch musicians will perform Friday, Feb. 20 at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Tickets are $10 for kids and seniors and $12 for general admission. You can save $2 per ticket with an advance purchase discount. "Lapsitters," children under the age of 3 are admitted free. Tickets can be purchased by phone with a credit card or through the mail with a check or money order.

The theater is located at 500 Western Ave. — 3 miles east of the end of the Northway (I-87) where Western, Madison, and Allen intersect. For information call 438-5503.

You can get some star-gazing in at the Albany Heritage Area Visitors Center/ Henry Hudson Planetarium with planetarium shows each day at 1 p.m. as follows: Feb. 16, Little Star That Could; Feb. 17, Planet Patrol, Feb. 18, Bear Tales, Feb. 19; Albany: New Star on the Hudson and on Feb. 20, Planet Patrol. The cost is $4.50 adults; $3 seniors, students and free for children age 5 and younger.

From 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily, the center will be hosting the exhibit "Reaching for The Stars: The Story of the Dudley Observatory." The Dudley Observatory is the nation's oldest independent organization supporting research and education in astronomy. Visitors will get to see current images of Mars taken by the Mars rovers, Spirit and Opportunity. There is no charge to see the exhibit.

"It's exciting to be able to see the images taken from the Mars rovers," said Kathleen Quandt, the director of operations.

The Henry Hudson Planetarium at the Albany Heritage Area Visitors Center is located on the corner of Broadway and Clinton Avenue in Albany.

For information call 434-0405 or visit the Web site at www.albany.org.

Kids can enjoy fabulous February fun this winter at three half-day workshops at Fenimore Art Museum and The Farmers Museum. Workshops will highlight aspects of both museums and Native American life and are open to children age 7 to 11. Each workshop runs from 9:30 a.m. to noon and cost $15 per workshop with discounts for multiple children. Call (607) 547-1410 for reservations. The programs will center around the theme of "Art Movements: Transportation in Art and History."

The program will introduce children to various modes of transportation and their role in history and art, through a series of fun, hands-on projects and will be held in the Louis C. Jones Center at The Farmers Museum, with different stations set up for Fenimore Art Museum, The Farmers Museum, and Native American life workshops. The Fenimore Art Museum section will focus on how transportation is depicted in art, with visual examples from the folk art collection, and from other examples by American artists such as Charles Sheeler and J.M.W. Turner.

Children will then decide on a style and subject they wish to depict and create this with mixed media on paper. At the Farmers Museum children will be able to participate in and learn about the Snow Snake Game a traditional Iroquois winter game. A 40-yard snow gutter (similar to a mini-bobsled track) will be created and it will accommodate up to 25 kids at once.

Up in the air — it's a bird, it's a plane, no it's a Bell X-1 rocket! On Feb. 16 through 21, the Empire State Areosciences Museum will hold an Aviation Adventure program from 9 to 11:30 a.m. Kids ages 8 to 14 can discover aviation through a variety of classes including: A Day at the Airport, F-4 Phantom, Helicopters, Stick Rockets and Bell X-1. For children ages 12 to 14 activities include: a strategic board game, "Battle for Leyte Gulf," and a Wright glider class. Costs begin at $15 per class. Call 377-2191, ext. 12 for information or to register;

The Children's Museum at Saratoga will host a series of arts and crafts workshops during the break. Children age 5 and up will have the opportunity to explore different crafts each day of the week. The workshops will run at 10 a.m. and at 11 a.m., and no pre-registration is necessary. Each workshop carries with it a $1-materials fee, and children must have an adult with them in the museum. Space is limited, and the workshops are filled on a first-come, first-served basis.

On Feb. 16, the theme will be Color Splash Fishbowl, and children can create a unique "aquarium" with neon paint, black paper and 3-D fish.

Stained "Glass" windows will be held on Feb. 17. Using paper and glue, kids will create beautiful works of "stained glass" art to can hang in a window.

Feb. 18's workshop is Grass Heads where participants will create a "creature" that will grow a head or sprout a horn made entirely of grass.

Kids will create Fantastic Fans on Feb. 19. The fans can be used as a wall hanging, as part of a costume, or just to add glamour. Carved Wooden Fish will be the theme for Feb. 20 as kids paint tropical fish.

During Feb. 16 through 21 the museum will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Admission is $5 per person, and children under 1 are free. For information, call the Museum at 584-5540. The museum is located at 69 Caroline St.

Regional cancer support organization opens

By TANYA LEET

The current offices of Gilda's Club of the Capital Region are tucked in the back of a brick one-story building off Wade Road in Latham.

The club, a worldwide organization designed to support people with cancer as well as their families and friends, is the first of its kind in the area.

After five long years of planning, Gilda's Club finally moved into its 8 Wade Road office last September. With a grand opening tentatively scheduled for the fall, the club's two current staff members have their hands full.

Executive Director Sheri Scavone apologized for the messy office, which, except for signature red doors scattered around, was more empty than messy. While the club owns the entire building, it currently occupies only one large room, which will become a children's area after renovations.

The front space will be leased to help pay the mortgage, Scavone explained. Before renovations begin, the board of directors is assessing how to reduce construction costs and continues to fund-raise.

As of last Wednesday, Gilda's Club had just finalized its floor plans, in the end retaining some walls and lighting to minimize costs of replacement materials.

Gilda's Club is a nonprofit organization, entirely supported by philanthropy. The current fund-raising campaign's goal $3.67 million, and Gilda's Club has already received a commitment for $1.7 million. Another $1 million was bequeathed to the club. Sometime this month, it will open bidding for a contractor, with work beginning on 8,000 square feet shortly thereafter.

Scavone is courting buy-ins, allowing companies to offer contributions instead of cash. For example, one union has already agreed to offer labor through its apprentice program and Davies Office Furniture of Loudonville will donate furniture.

"We are trying to get the cost of renovations covered through in-kind contributions," she said. "It's easier to give $20,000 in cupboards than $20,000 in cash."

Even local schools have gotten involved. Teachers at Guiderland and Schenectady high schools have committed to volunteering their students when Gilda's Club needs them. When finally opened, the club will need anywhere from 100 to 150 volunteers to operate.

Through speaking with health professionals in the past few months and from the sheer number of calls she has received about the project, Scavone believes there's a lot of demand for a Gilda's Club in the Capital District.

"Everyone recognizes the beauty of what we do," she noted. "We are able to provide something that doesn't exist in the community. There is no question that this is needed."

The Gilda's Club program has three core components: support and networking groups that let members share emotions and information; lectures and workshops that teach new skills to help members deal with living with cancer; and a wide array of social activities that allow members, friends and families to gather for potluck dinners, movie or improv nights, yoga sessions or scrapbooking.

When completed, each room at the clubhouse will have a theme. There will be rooms for teens, children, exercise, meditation (the "It's Always Something" room), arts and crafts and a resource room equipped with a computer.

Teens are one of the population groups that have the hardest time dealing with the issue of cancer, partly due to the intermediate status of their own personal development. Many of the activities focus around teen chat or teen gatherings.

The main entrance will open to a central reception area with an area of four armchairs under a "circle of friends" canopy. This lobby will lead directly into a nutrition area.

"It will be warm and welcoming, like a home," Scavone said.

Another aspect Scavone stressed was the fact that the club is not associated with any one organization and not specifically medically-oriented.

The board chose Latham because of its centralized location, and will serve Saratoga, Schenectady, Albany and Rensselaer counties. It's also looking to expand its charter, based on inquiries from Vermont, Amsterdam and Glens Falls.

One woman from Nashville called Scavone to relate how the club helped her and her brother, both of whom live away from their family, deal with their mother's death.

Due to the comfort they received at Gilda's, the two handled the loss better than the rest of their family who all live in the Capital District but did not have a Gilda's Club for support.

"Three out of four families in the Capital Region are affected by cancer," Scavone noted, adding that the club brings "experts" — people with cancer — together, to "re-empower themselves," and keep their lives from being controlled by chemo appointments.

Chamber slates business fraud seminar

Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce will sponsor "Catch Them If You Can" Small Business Fraud: Prevention and Detection Techniques Thursday, Feb. 26, from 7:45 to 9 a.m.

The program will focus on examples of small business fraud that are based on actual investigations.

Certified public accountants Frank Venezia, Tiffany Morris,

"They also develop a customized plan for living with cancer," Scavone said.

As for family and friends who don't know what to say or do to help, they can help the "expert" continue to manage daily tasks by offering to drive them to appointments or watching their children.

Scavone stressed that Gilda's is all-inclusive and available to anyone from any background with any kind of cancer. One of the challenges facing Scavone is how to reach out to different populations, such as Hispanic, gay and lesbian or Jewish communities, since cancer transcends racial, ethnic and socioeconomic lines.

Gilda's Club was created in the memory of Saturday Night Live comedian Gilda Radner, who died from ovarian cancer in 1989. There are currently 17 Gilda's Clubs open in America and Canada, with 11 more in development.

and Jennifer Malinski of Marvin & Co. will discuss the prevention, detection and deterrence of such fraud.

The fee is $9, which includes a hot buffet breakfast, and reservations are required.

For information or to make a reservation, call 439-0512 or e-mail the chamber at info@bethlehemchamber.com.
