BC board looks at $260K in cuts

By LINDA DeMATTIA

At the March 3 school board meeting, Bethlehem board members considered almost $260,000 in budget cuts to help offset the increased cost of five new teachers in next year's budget.

The new teachers are necessary to respond to increasing enrollment, according to Superintendent Les Loomis.

"We bring you this list because we can't see a way to afford the teachers, which we need more," he told the board. "We prefer not to bring you anything on this list. These cuts come at a cost to program."

The teacher addition list contained two levels of priority. Top on the list were two high school teachers to provide the major portion of the staffing necessary to respond to a projected 55-student enrollment increase, according to Loomis. An elementary teacher for Hamagrael Elementary School was also on the Priority 1 list to address the projected 38 new students at the elementary level.

Priority 2 additions included one more high school teacher to prevent an increase in class size and an additional elementary school teacher for Slingerlands Elementary School.

To provide supervision at the middle school front door, a hall monitor was also included.

A technology database coordinator was included to consolidate and enhance the district's student database to improve the operation of the schools and provide data to help improve student achievement, Loomis said.

The list did not include special education and elementary guidance additions that were expected to be funded through a grant.

The staffing increase carried with it a price tag of more than $340,000.

Loomis reviewed the proposed cuts with the board.

Wanted: Students for schoolhouse

Site is rich in town history

By KRISTEN OLBY

Efforts are under way to expand an historic Bethlehem schoolhouse that dates back to the mid-19th century, in order to give area students an opportunity to learn more about the town's storied past.

The building, known simply as The Little Red Schoolhouse, opened in 1859, with 24 students in attendance.

The quaint, one-room school sat, at the time, along a dirt road where horse-drawn wagons often passed by — roughly a mile north from where Henry Hudson landed his ship The Halfmoon in 1609. Today, that path is better known as River Road, in the town's Cedar Hill area.

For decades, local children attended classes at the school, which lacked any electricity or heat. Fifty years later, the schoolhouse was expanded to include two rooms that would better accommodate the school's expanded roster of 40 students. The renovated building brought with it electricity, running water, restrooms and a coal-fired boiler for heat.

By 1960, a centralized school system had developed, and area students attended classes in the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk school district, forcing the Little Red Schoolhouse to close its doors.

Faced with the dilemma of a landmark in danger of deteriorating, the town acquired the school that year, and formed the Bethlehem Historical Association to operate it.

By 1965, the old building had been brought back to life as a museum documenting local history, gaining certification from the state Education Department.

Today, exhibits inside the school depict early life along the shores of the Hudson with displays that include fishing nets, authentic farming and ice harvesting tools, remnants of the town's earliest drug store and plenty of historic photos. An American flag with just 38 stars — the number of states in the Union in 1876 — is also on display.

Members of Bethlehem's Historical Association hope to continue passing on the town's 400-year-old history to today's younger generations, by offering class tours.

"The plan would be to have some 20 students at one time from each of the fourth grade classes in the area, spend one to two days at the museum during the school year," said Parker Mathusa, chairman of the association's board of

Police charge former Good Sam nurse

By KRISTEN OLBY

A nurse at Good Samaritan Lutheran Home in Delmar has been charged with endangering the welfare of a patient after allegedly administering sleeping pills that weren't prescribed by a doctor.

Mary Tomaso, 54, a licensed practical nurse who lives at 552 Highwood Circle in Guilderland, is charged with giving an 88-year-old woman sleeping pills over a two-week period at the Rockefeller Road nursing home.

The pills were allegedly given to sedate the patient during Tomaso's midnight shift. After an investigation by the state Attorney General's Office, Tomaso was arrested Feb. 24.

"They were sleeping tablets she had bought at Kmart," said Kevin Ryan, a spokesman for the Attorney General's Medicaid

Pedestrian safety program set

"Is Bethlehem Walkable?" will be the featured subject of a public forum to be held on March 23 at the Bethlehem town hall from 7 to 9 p.m. The focus will be on sidewalks, trails, and bicycling facilities in the town. The forum is open to all town residents.

Bethlehem Tomorrow and Bethlehem Citizens for Pedestrian Safety are co-sponsors of this event. Members of the two organizations, town of Bethlehem staff and other experts will give short presentations on the status of sidewalk, bicycle and trail programs in the town.

Public discussion regarding the planning work to date, program priorities and town policy related to walkability and safety will follow. The information presented and the related public comments will be presented to the town as background information for consideration during the comprehensive planning process.

This forum is a continuation of informational forums and a "Community Conversation" sponsored by Bethlehem Tomorrow during the past year.

Albany Med names Delmar nurse as Employee of the Year

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

It's easy to see why Angela Sheehan, R.N., is so well regarded in her field. The 51-year-old woman is soft-spoken, positive, articulate about her topic, and empathetic. Modest, too, as judged by her reaction to being named employee of the year at Albany Medical Center — the Capital District's largest private employer with 6,000 employees.

"I was overwhelmingly surprised," she said. "I only work part-time."

Part-time clearly has a different meaning for Sheehan, who, as clinical nurse research coordinator, regularly puts in 35 hours a week. Sheehan coordinates drug and other therapy research trials for several of the hospital's divisions, including gastroenterology, allergy, asthma and immunology, and nephrology.

"If the patients are there, I'm there," Sheehan said.

Sheehan and her staff of eight do a lot of Phase II testing, she explained.

"Any time a drug or device is going to be used to treat a problem," she said, "it's required by law that it be tested. It's tested in animals first, and then there are three phases of testing in humans."

Sheehan explained that Phase II testing means that drug companies have an idea of what a dosage should be and what possible side effects a medication might have.

"We're then testing it to see if it works," Sheehan said. "We're testing drugs in diseases that currently have no treatment."

One drug Sheehan worked with is Xigris, an Eli Lilly drug used to combat sepsis.

"Sepsis is a disease with a high mortality rate," Sheehan said. "Somewhere in the body there's a disease that's overwhelming the whole body, and your body organs stop working."

After two years of testing Xigris, results were good enough that the Federal Drug Administration approved its use by prescription. As studies continued, though, the drug wasn't helping, and the study was stopped.

"Drug companies write the protocol," Sheehan explained of the process, "and the FDA is the final agency that reviews the study for a drug's efficacy and safety."

One in 200 drugs tested passes fully, Sheehan noted, and if the Xigris study hasn't yielded success, she has worked with many that have — like most of today's asthma medications.

Sheehan's part-time hours can be irregular, since she must often be at the hospital when a patient is admitted to critical care.

"It's important that our studies compare apples to apples," she said, "so if we're testing drugs in patients, we need to start the course at the same time with all of them."

Meeting with critically ill patients and their families can often be the most difficult part of Sheehan's work, but it's a part she considers essentially important.

"There's a document required by law, an informed consent document," Sheehan said. "We have to inform the patient and his or her family fully about what's being tested; why; step-by-step how the test will go; possible side effects and benefits."

Often, Sheehan said, people are hoping for a miracle and want to quickly consent to being part of a study.

"We have to tell them that we have to read the document to them," Sheehan said. "We'll spend hours talking with the patients and their families. One of our most important jobs is to make sure a patient qualifies to be part of the testing, and that they residents — Susan Rauch, Paula Malone, and Kathleen Miller-Reed. Nurses Kathy Mokhiber and Diane Delmonico are from Albany.

"It's a pleasure to go to work every day with these intelligent and dedicated people," Sheehan said.

Miller-Reed also had high praise for Sheehan, and was thrilled that she is Albany Med's employee of the year.

"We've always wanted to nominate Angela," Miller-Reed said. "Anyone can nominate an employee, and we encouraged other people throughout the hospital to nominate Angela."

In the end, 73 people nominated Sheehan for employee of the year.

"Every person who nominated her had great things to say about her," Miller-Reed, who has worked with Angela for seven years, said. "She's a wonderful person. She's incredibly intelligent, diplomatic, and compassionate. She has a good way of dealing with people."

Sheehan grew up in Albany, and attended the Academy of the Holy Names when it was called the Maryrose Academy.

She then earned a bachelor's degree in biology from the University at Albany and a master's degree in nursing from Pace University.

"When I was at SUNY," Sheehan said, "the university started an on-campus ambulance corps, and I got credentialed as an emergency medical technician."

That was in 1971, and Sheehan realized that she liked helping people. She considered becoming a physician's assistant or entering the still-new field of nurse practitioner.

After getting her master's from Pace, she entered a residency at Mary Imogene Barrett Hospital in Coopers-town to become a nurse practitioner, but soon discovered it wasn't for her.

She returned to Albany and began nursing at Albany Med, where she was soon appointed director of oncology nursing. The hospital had just received a grant to conduct a regional breast cancer program, and she and a staff of seven began working in the soon-to-grow oncology department.

She worked there for more than a dozen years, and in that time, was drafted to assist with some drug studies. That eventually led to her current job.

In 1988, Sheehan was diagnosed with Hodgkin's disease, and found herself as a patient in the department she'd long been a part of. One of her two daughters was 5 at the time; the other was only 14 months old.

"It was one of those situations where, as an oncology nurse, I knew too much," Sheehan said. She underwent surgery, transfusions, and radiation treatment.

"There weren't the support drugs then that there are now, that fight nausea and other side effects," Sheehan said.

Surviving cancer gave Sheehan an insight she's found invaluable in her work.

"In spite of my best efforts to explain things to patients," she said, "I realized after I got sick that I didn't have any idea of how much a severe illness knocks you off your feet."

During that time, Sheehan said she read the obituaries, trying to convince herself that "God doesn't let mothers of young children die."

With those days of anemia, infection, weight loss and grueling treatments behind her, Sheehan called her illness "the best thing that's ever happened to me, besides my kids and my husband."

"I'm here," Sheehan said. "I have every day, I have my family and my friends. I couldn't have gotten through it without my parents and family. I ask myself sometimes why I'm still here, and it's why I try to do my best as a nurse."

Being a nurse, Sheehan said, has rewards beyond the employee of the year prize, which included two round-trip plane tickets to any destination in the United States; tickets to an Albany Med recreation event; two passes to the Dancing in the Woods fundraiser; tickets to the company picnic; and free parking for a year — a real treat for the woman who parks on the street.

"I love being a nurse," Sheehan said. "Nothing can replace how I feel when I help somebody. The work is demanding, physically, mentally and emotionally. There are long hours, and we have sick patients and their families to work with, but what I have to give, I give best as a nurse. I wouldn't do anything else."

Sheehan is married to Franklin Laufer, who works for the state Department of Health. They have two daughters, 20-year-old Alison, a student at the University of Connecticut, and 16-year-old Rachel, a junior at Bethlehem Central High School.

understand what we're doing."

While individuals might benefit from the research, Sheehan stressed that research is done to better understand a disease and how to treat it. Researchers around the globe will work on the same drug that Sheehan and her staff are testing, to make sure that no geographical variables are affecting the outcome.

Sheehan credited her colleagues for the program's success. Sheehan works with five other nurses who are essential to the research program.

"Nurses are used to working with patients and families, and putting things in lay language," she said. "When I came to the research area, I really felt it was worth the money to have nurses working in this department."

Police acquire Tasers

By KRISTEN OLBY

By this spring, Bethlehem police officers will be enforcing the law with a new weapon at their disposal.

Officers will spend the next two months training with 10 Taser X26 guns the department recently purchased.

By the end of April, officers will wear the Tasers on their belts, along with pepper spray, expandable batons, handcuffs and a Glock 40-caliber handgun.

The 5-watt Taser gun is an electronic incapacitating device that can take a violent suspect down in seconds, according to police.

The gun sends a series of energy pulses, similar to those used by the brain to communicate with the body, to overpower nerve fibers.

Taser use results in instant loss of muscle control, and assailants usually fall to the ground.

"When you're hit with this, you pretty much go right down to the ground, it's all done," explained Bethlehem Police Chief Louis Corsi of the battery-operated gun.

According to the manufacturer, the electronic wave can penetrate approximately two inches of clothing, and the probes do not pierce the flesh or cause bodily harm. The gun provides an alternate defense mechanism for officers caught in dangerous situations with a violent suspect who must be restrained quickly. Up until now, Bethlehem police officers have relied on pepper spray to subdue such suspects, or in more extreme cases, their handgun.

Each weapon carries specific problems. For a bullet to be instantly effective, it must hit an assailant in the brain or spinal cord, which causes permanent damage, while chemical sprays must be aimed accurately at the face.

The Taser gun can be used in crowded situations or in a confined area where pepper spray could adversely affect officers.

"We feel they're a valuable tool for certain circumstances," said Corsi. "The Taser is a less-than-lethal use of force; it protects officers."

He added that officer and suspect injuries are both reduced with the stun guns.

Each gun costs about $1,000, and all were paid for through a grant from the state Division of Criminal Justice Services. Corsi said that in the future, the department might purchase more electronic guns.

Both the Colonie and Gunderland police departments already use Tasers, while Albany police are in the process of introducing them to the force.

Caution: Several twists and turns straight ahead

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

The first hints of spring are as revealing as they are heart-warming. I don't remember leaving all those ice cream wrappers, water guns and sticks all over the backyard, but as the black-crusted snow melts away, March offers its harbingers of summer yard work to come.

Rising to the surface with winter's debris are all the peanut butter jars I'd given the dog to scour when they were as scraped out as human knives could get them. There's also too much of the dog's waste, picked up in summer, but not when there's a foot of snow and it's below zero. It's unfair: Why does cow manure fertilize grass and gardens, but dog-doo burns yards brown?

Ah, well, there's also the small white ball to the bocce set that Christopher and I lost when we couldn't take January's chill anymore and pretended the white snow was the crushed shells of a professional bocce court. Along with the bocce ball, spring is revealing our house's particular gift, appropriate for a home that a sales rep from Titleist once owned — an annual crop of golf balls rises out of the March mire.

Treasures surface inside the house, too, as the promise of spring motivates even the most spring-cleaning-adverse to finally clear out that mysterious pile of stuff that has grown between the dresser and the television set; to relocate the colony of dust kitties under the china closet; or to weed out some of the dusty Fisher Price toys in the playroom.

The reward for those days of hauling, sorting, vacuuming, dusting and sneezing is invariably a treasured toy long gone, a beloved sweater, a book, maybe a buck or two and photographs once set aside to be framed or sent to Grandma.

It's the pictures that get me. This year, I found a picture of a thin, tanned young woman on a beach — my children say she looks a great deal like me. There were pictures sweet with promises fulfilled: Christopher waiting for his first school bus; Cormac, caught in mid-hop on the front porch on his first day of kindergarten; toddler boys in blazers holding Easter baskets; pajama-clad boys with hair sticking straight up from the crowns of their heads, wide-eyed on Christmas morning.

More recent pictures showed Christopher before he became taller than practically all his adult relatives, and his voice changed. There's Cormac, blond-haired, chubby-cheeked and delighted in his muggings for the camera.

Spring is supposed to be about new beginnings; about moving forward; new starts. Yet, it's also a time of year that finds me mentally revisiting roads long-since traveled. Maybe it's the smell of spring that has me yearning not for a time to come, but times gone by.

I read somewhere that our sense of smell is most strongly linked to memory. So it's not just moldy leaves I smell when the snow finally melts, but the scent of my childhood, of walking across Caroline Street to get to school, looking for crocuses, daffodils, irises, or budding elm leaves in the giant trees that shaded a neighborhood street.

Maybe I smell the days of being a college student, when the ivy came back to life on those towers I didn't appreciate enough at the time.

Maybe we look back because it's easy to see the promise the past offered. That taut mama in the picture taken on a Portuguese beach certainly was more appealing than the wrinkling woman who serves as the family's cook, clock-watcher, chauffeur and cleaning service.

at school, helped more around the house, been more outgoing — how would my life now be different?

Thoughts like these make these trips down memory lane hazardous. All of us had planned to travel certain roads. Usually, we envision them as smoothly paved, surrounded by green fields, gorgeous mountains and charming country inns where we'd stop to eat. We don't reckon with the fact that we might end up in an urban traffic jam, lose our axle in a crater-sized pothole or take a turn that puts us exactly where we didn't want to go.

It's hard in those moments to stay calm and figure out what to do. It's how we deal with those metaphorical twists — which in real life can be job loss, death of a beloved one, or a mistake of our own making — that shape us into the people who travel the next stretch of road.

Traveling smooth roads can sometimes be more challenging than traveling the bumpy ones. We might forget to appreciate the smooth surface; the sweet-smelling air coming in the open windows; the joy we feel with our fellow passengers.

In the spring, though, we look back and can see the places we've traveled and the people we've met. Maybe spring brings the past so much to mind because we are shedding the shell of winter — casting the bulky clothes from our pale and pasty flesh and thinking about what roads we might travel when summer vacation rolls around. We can't always see the future, even if we catch a whiff of its promise in the contradictory March breezes.

We can look at the past and think about what we might do differently if a similar situation arises again.

Mostly, we can live fully right now, making this stretch of the road one we'll gladly look back on some day.

Mostly, we can live fully right now, making this stretch of the road one we'll gladly look back on some day.

My life is far from over, but most of the promise I see these days is in those much younger than I. There are all those high school seniors, receiving their promises from the colleges that will start them on their lives. There are my own 11- and 13-year-old sons, in whom I am investing nearly all of my resources, so that they can figure out ways to maximize the promises and hopes of their own lives. They are all about the future, impatient for vacations to come around; contemplating the day they'll drive; daydreaming about the careers they'll have — world domination for one, writing and full-time parenting for the other.

My primary job is to help them relate the here and now of school, homework and chores to that future. While I strive to guide and not dictate, I unwittingly relate their lives to my own. No wonder, then, that I find myself looking back. What if I had tried harder trustees. Fourth grade is the year that students study New York as part of the social studies curriculum.

Over the years, the museum has undergone a number of expansions, including the addition of two adjacent buildings. The Toll Gate House was relocated from the Bethlehem Center area 15 years ago. The building was originally used to collect tolls from travelers heading south from Glenmont to Selkirk. A carriage house used to store the most luxurious wagons of the 1800s is also located on the school grounds.

The museum lacks the proper facilities to accommodate student tours and must construct a third building that would include computers for student use, handicapped accessible bathrooms, offices and storage space for artifacts.

The 1,200-square-foot addition would be built on land already owned by the town and linked to the schoolhouse through an aboveground passageway.

"The facility would be constructed using materials from old buildings dismantled throughout the town of Bethlehem," said Mathusa.

Those structures include several old barns and an historic farmhouse once located along Route 9W. The new building would be constructed on town land, allowing the municipality to provide all of the associated utilities and support services.

The expansion carries an estimated $100,000 price tag, with half of that amount being sought through federal funding.

Historical association trustees hope to secure the balance through state funding and private contributions. The U.S. Department of the Interior lists the schoolhouse on its National Register of Historic Places.

John Piechnik oversees the Bethlehem Central School District's social studies programs and welcomes the opportunity to incorporate local history into lesson plans.

"We're always looking for resources to engage students," said Piechnik. "Local history is not only part of their past, it's part of their present."

Kim Fusco, a fifth-grade Bethlehem teacher, believes the school is a unique teaching resource that should be better utilized.

"It's a great value to the community," she said. "Students absolutely love to learn about their own community and things in the past."

Safe schools

School safety and what to do about it throughout the region was brought close to home last month when a student was charged with bringing a shotgun to school at Columbia High School in East Greenbush.

Most of the school districts in our coverage area are similar to Columbia — moderate to large suburban districts, with the vast majority of students hoping to go on to college.

High school years are no longer as care-free as they once were, with more and more pressure placed upon students to excel so they'll have a better chance to get into the college of their choice. Still, high school remains a place and a time when junior proms, field trips and hanging out with friends are priorities.

But school districts are facing serious questions about how to protect students when they are at school.

Is the answer to lock kids in during the school day to protect them from intruders? Do the schools need to use metal detectors to screen students and visitors?

We hope the answers to these questions are no. By making everyone a suspect, we take away the students' sense of ownership in their schools. We also send the message that students themselves can't be trusted. That's a real shame since the vast majority of students are never involved in any violent or potentially violent episodes in their schools.

But violence in our schools cannot be ignored.

It's as though an enormous weight has been placed upon school administrators, teachers and staff: Find a solution to what may be an unsolvable problem. Keep schools open and friendly — places known mostly as safe havens where kids spend the greater part of their waking hours during the school year. But at the same time, make schools "safe" places where bad things like shootings will never happen.

That's a tricky tightrope for school officials to walk. If we go too far, we alienate the very people we are trying to protect, if we don't go far enough, we jeopardize the well being of those same people.

We don't want to send our kids to school in fear of what might happen there, and yet we know most children are aware of incidents that happen in schools in our region and throughout the country.

This issue should not be sugar-coated, but rather treated as realistically as possible. Most of our schools are safe, nurturing places, and chances of getting hurt at school are rare.

Let's work together to keep our schools safe and sane places to be.

Another view of taxes and history

By PETER CHRISTOPH

The writer, a Selkirk resident, is director and senior editor of New York Historical Manuscripts.

In last week's issue, Professor Kevin M. Bronner wrote a lengthy Point of View attempting to demonstrate New York state's long history of high taxes and the reactions thereto. Unfortunately, he consistently misreads the historical record, besides demonstrating various logical fallacies.

Prof. Bronner notes the late Sen. Moynihan's observation some years ago that New York state was paying more in taxes to the federal government than it was receiving in return in benefit, and follows this with a statement that New Yorker Alexander Hamilton invented the concept of a national debt.

From these two statements, he concludes, "Thus we can infer that New York has a high tax and high debt culture." Actually, the only thing we can infer from Sen. Moynihan's comment is that our elected officials have not done a very good job of getting money out of Washington.

What Hamilton did, as I think we all remember from our school days, was to consolidate the pre-existing debts of the various states as a national debt in order to demonstrate to the world that America intended to pay her debts; Hamilton was not creating new ones.

Working backwards in history, for some reason, the next suggestion is that "New York state is, of course, one of the original 13 colonies, and our country was founded, in part, because of a tax revolt associated with the Stamp Act tax and other revenue legislation imposed by the British in 1765."

But the issue then was not whether the taxes were too high or not, but whether we should be taxed by Parliament when we had no representative there. In short, the issue was, as stated at the time, "Taxation without representation is tyranny," and not whether the taxes were too high. From the British standpoint, of course, it was not unreasonable for us to help pay the costs of the recent war, since our diplomatic bumbling (and a rash action by a Virginia militia officer named George Washington) led to the French and Indian War between the English colonies and French Canada, which in turn rapidly escalated into a war between the mother countries, King George's War.

In a curious bit of reasoning, Prof. Bronner says, "One would think that New Yorkers would be a proponent of low taxes since we were once the leading commercial state in the entire United States," and "It is reasonable to expect, therefore, that New York residents and businesses should be against high taxes. Yet we continue to have the highest tax burden in the country," after which he endeavors to show that we have had high taxes since the 1620s.

But since we had all that former greatness despite the high taxes (or maybe because of them?), how would it restore our former greatness to suddenly adapt the taxing schedules of, say, North Dakota? The writer seems to be arguing against himself.

We then move on to a discussion of four incidents which Prof. Bronner introduces with these words: "It is interesting to note that in the 1600s, there were four major events where the local administrative heads of the colonial empire tried to impose taxes in New York. Some of these tax increases led to revolts where lives were lost and the colony was almost ruined."

The first concerns a "major tax revolt" in 1639, "when the Dutch administrator Willem Kieft attempted to tax Native Americans who were in a cooperative venture with the Dutch. This led to a war in 1641 to 1645, which almost ruined the Dutch colony in New York City."

Kieft had indeed tried to get the Indians in the Manhattan area to pay tribute in return for the protection they received from the Dutch, but the Indians had not noticed any protection and thought that they were doing more for the Dutch than the other way around, and so declined to pay tribute.

Then in 1640, some pigs were stolen from a settlement on Staten Island, the Raritan Indians were falsely accused, and Kieft sent a military force against them, with the result that some Raritans were killed and crops destroyed. A war did indeed follow in which a lot of people were killed and a lot of property damaged, but taxation was hardly the prime issue.

The next statement is introduced with a sentence which, while off the subject, needs comment. "Peter Stuyvesant, who became director in 1647, quickly replaced Kieft in an attempt to save the new Dutch settlement." This is like saying, "George Bush became president and quickly replaced Bill Clinton."

Kieft was fired by the West India Company and Stuyvesant, who was given the greater title of director-general (and the added responsibility of governing Curacao) was sent to replace him. The date should be 1646.

Prof. Bronner notes that, "During 1653, a number of delegates to a General Assembly meeting complained about high taxes, and in 1654 some tax reforms were made. Stuyvesant held on to power but was clearly harmed by his high tax policies."

First of all, there was no such thing as a General Assembly, which was a colonial English body.

Secondly, we are given no definition here, or anywhere else, as to what Prof. Bronner means by high taxes. That people will complain whenever their taxes are raised goes without saying, but does that demonstrate that the taxes were actually high? In comparison to what?

Third, we are offered no evidence that Stuyvesant was "clearly harmed by his high tax policies." He not only was not harmed, he remained in office for another 10 years, and would have continued longer with the full appreciation of his employers, the West India Company which owned the colony, had not New Netherlands been conquered by an English military force.

We then have this: "The third tax revolt occurred during 1665 when an early British governor, Richard Nicolls, implemented a new series of laws (The Duke's Laws), which led to another tax revolt." Nicolls, of course, was the first English governor and not just an early one, and the revolt had nothing to do with how high the taxes were, but rather with religion.

English Puritans on the east end of Long Island objected to being now subject to a governor who was an Anglican churchman, and a new owner of the colony, the Duke of York, who was Roman Catholic. The Long Islanders refused to pay taxes to New York because they renounced New York authority, and sought to secede and join either Massachusetts or Connecticut, whichever would have them.

Nicolls informed the leaders of the revolt that he would treat them as traitors, the punishment for which was death by torture, and they wisely elected to remain New Yorkers.

The final example we are offered says that, "By 1690, however, taxes had been increased and this helped to fuel the fourth and final tax revolt of the 1600s against another leader, Jacob Leisler, who proceeded to raise taxes. Leisler was replaced in 1691." The actual question here was whether Leisler had the authority to tax, or even govern, New York, and not whether his taxes were too high. William of Orange had forced James II into exile and, together with his wife Mary, became ruler of England. There was some delay in informing New York as to who was in charge over here, and Jacob Leisler as a militia captain

Town has much to offer beyond big-box stores

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to respond to the letter to the editor welcoming the new Glenmont stores.

When I think about "something special" about Bethlehem, I think about the reasons we chose to return to this community after years away. We could have lived elsewhere but chose Delmar because of its good schools, the proximity to open spaces and the feeling of a "town," not just a series of developments.

I love to walk to the Four Corners, stop at the post office and stop in at some of my favorite haunts: I Love Books, Four Corners Luncheonette, Delmar Wine & Liquor and McCarroll's.

I want to encourage more lively small businesses. I remain committed to shopping at the independent stores that remain at the heart of our town. I fear that the new big-box stores will drive the business from the center of our town and take up all the open spaces in town.

I would also like to respond to the comment about unwelcoming library staff. I visit the library regularly, and my family and I are greeted by name. My 6-year-old son is eager to tell the staff of his newest exploits and feels very much at home at the library.

We have always been friendly with the library staff and have been treated with respect and warmth in return.

I thank the librarians for all they have done for us over the years. It has helped me and my family feel like it is our library and a central part of our town.

Writer thankful for saving 'Grace'

Editor, The Spotlight:

I owe an enormous thank you to a woman named Grace. I had inadvertently dropped my wallet in a parking lot behind the Perfect Blend.

I realized around 11p.m. that I did not have my wallet.

The next morning at 7 a.m., the Perfect Blend called to tell me a woman named Grace had recovered my wallet in the parking lot and turned it in. I was so surprised but then extremely grateful for the kindness and honesty of a stranger.

So I would like to send a big thank you to Grace for her honesty, integrity and, most of all, kindness.

Without involvement, development inevitable

Editor, The Spotlight:

Congratulations, Bethlehem! We are now in the same league as Colonie and Latham! No more need to travel to these meccas of shopping in order to satisfy our urges to spend money at big-box warehouse stores.

We now only need to travel on Route 9W to spend additional time in traffic, increase our risk of traffic accidents and pay for additional police services to deal with the increased accidents and crime that such "progress" engenders.

Is this the kind of town we have chosen to live in, raise our children in and spend our retirement years in? In our rush to increase the tax base, are we, either knowingly or unwittingly, changing the character of Bethlehem?

Commercial and residential developers seem to have free rein to destroy green spaces and replace fields and woods with asphalt — and, at the same time, reducing the values that have made Bethlehem such a desirable address.

Is it too late to change direction? The new Democratic administration in Bethlehem has called for a temporary moratorium on new residential construction. Can that moratorium be extended — both in duration and extent — to allow for a more reasoned approach to development that allows for the maintenance of the character of the town?

If you are also disturbed by these changes that have, in my opinion, lowered the quality of life in Bethlehem, let our elected officials and members of the current planning board know of your dissatisfaction. Without active involvement, we all face the risk of having our neighborhoods turned into condominiums and shopping centers.

Was anti-Delmar diatribe for real?

Editor, The Spotlight:

OK, Spotlight editorial staff, fess up! Last week's letter from Jane Robinson belittling Bethlehem for its supposed "antiquated and provincial" attitudes was a plant, right?

It couldn't have been genuine, but was instead fabricated by The Spotlight in order to provoke a large response by readers.

Surely no one would actually write to a townwide newspaper and unthinkingly insult their neighbors to the degree the writer of that letter did. After all, if someone truly felt that Bethlehem's taxes were exorbitant, the water supply and garbage removal expensive and inadequate, the resources limited, and the shops ready to burst into flames, they would never have moved to such a crummy locality in the first place. I mean, come on, who in their right mind would stoop to taking cheap shots at librarians?

Yup, that letter just had to be a phony because no one would end a letter that was so full of negativity for their town with the juicy line, "maybe then I'd stay?"

Hey, hey, hey, so here's to you, Ms. Robinson

Editor, The Spotlight:

Were it not for Jane Robinson's letter of March 3, I would not have realized how backward the community she refers to as "Delmah" (how cute!) is.

I was not aware that the eight local banks had closed their drive-through windows. And thanks to her discerning taste, I now appreciate the delight of shopping in an impersonal big box rather than in the atmosphere of a locally owned, antiquated hometown business.

And why on earth did the Post Office choose to remain in the center of town, expand the parking lot and install an elevator for easy access? Tsk! Tsk!

As for those scowling librarians, well, we won't even go there. They refuse to let you use your cell-phone, thus infringing on our right to have constant contact with the immediate world.

Regarding the local dining scene, I am eternally grateful that an ex-resident of North Colonie, the culinary capital of the Tri-City area, has educated us provincial folk.

How can one possibly compare The Perfect Blend, Mercato's, The Hidden Cafe, Casa Mia, The Four Corners and Cafe 333 and others with the epicurean delights of Applebee's and Wendy's?

So Here's to You Ms. Robinson "Delmah" is not begging you to stay. Hey! Hey! Hey! Go away!

Little town suits resident just fine

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Spotlight gives us a great avenue to express our feelings. It's good that we have different viewpoints, and that we have the right to express them.

While reading the letter to the editor from Jane Robinson in the March 3 Spotlight, I raised my eyebrows a number of times.

Here are some of my reactions:

- I love our "antiquated & provincial" little town of Bethlehem. I find that description not necessarily negative.

- When I greet our librarians with a smile, I receive one back.

- I enjoy and often shop at Delaware Plaza. The shops are varied, and I wouldn't change a thing. I'm certainly glad it's there.

- The Post Office is in the "center" of the town. A drive-through window would be nice, but most of us can use the exercise of walking those steps.

- I like the variety of shops that we have in this town. When I need something from a Wal-Mart or Kmart, you'll see me supporting Kmart. I hope enough people support the smaller stores so that we continue to have a choice.

The local rumor is true. Delmar does have something that the other suburbs do not.

We have Bethlehem townspeople with the caring, loving attitude for our special home town.

Writer takes issue with Neighbors for Peace letter

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am writing in response to Paul Tick's letter in the March 3 edition of The Spotlight entitled "Soldier's loss hits home."

Mr. Tick is writing to the community as a member of Bethlehem Neighbors for Peace. I have several issues with the letter that Mr. Tick wrote. Mr. Tick's letter uses the death of a neighbor who was stationed in Iraq to advance his anti-war ideology.

I feel deep sympathy for each and every family of soldiers who die all over the world every day. A soldier's life is a dangerous one, and that fact is not hidden when young men and women volunteer for the military.

Mr. Tick quotes a neighbor as saying the war in Iraq is "senseless," and that "self-serving politicians" created the situation in Iraq. While this may be true, our current president inherited the problems that were already present in the Middle East, with Iraq at the top of the list.

I do not think that many reading this letter doubted a year ago that Saddam had weapons of mass destruction and the capability to use them. Nor do I think that anyone now would dispute the argument that the world is better off with Saddam out of power.

Whether or not you agreed with the war in Iraq, it is very much a reality. Our president went forward with action that he felt safeguarded our country, which is really what his job is all about.

To "get our boys and girls out of Iraq now," as Mr. Tick suggests, would be irresponsible and dangerous. The reason we have such a large military presence in Iraq is because it is needed to secure some semblance of peace.

Pulling out of Iraq, or lessening our presence before it is prudent to do so would not only send the country into chaos but would endanger American and Iraqi lives in Iraq.

If you ask most soldiers who are in Iraq how they feel about the situation, I suspect they will tell you that they feel they are making a difference there, and really working to better the country and the world. The same goes for most Iraqi civilians you speak with on the street.

Unfortunately, the media do not report these things accurately, and the average American gets a negative news broadcast each night in their living room.

What is occurring in Iraq is a painful transition from oppression to freedom. It is an arduous journey, one that will be marked with pain and death.

To make outrageous calls to bring our troops home now is not only overtly dangerous, it is offensive. If you do not like the policies of the current administration, make your voice heard in the form of a vote on Nov. 2.

B'birds find new class to rule

By ROB JONAS

After losing in last year's Class CC finals to Watervliet, the Voorheesville girls basketball team saw its streak of Section II titles come to an end. It proved to be only a brief hiatus, though.

The Blackbirds claimed their ninth Sectional championship in 10 years by downing Fonda-Fultonville 53-38 in last Saturday's Class B title game at Hudson Valley Community College.

"It always feels good," Voorheesville coach Jon McClements said. "Every time you have the opportunity to go (to the finals) and you can do it, it's good — especially coming off of last year."

Voorheesville (14-9) jumped out to a 7-0 lead against Fonda and never led by fewer than four points the rest of the way in earning its first Class B championship after being bumped up from Class CC when the section reshuffled its schools to include Class AA this year.

The Blackbirds also earned a trip to this weekend's regionals at HVCC.

In Class C, you have to play an extra game to get into regionals, and with the Bs, it was nice not to have to play that other game, McClements said. The key for Voorheesville against Fonda was getting contributions from the three players who have been involved in several of the teams previous championship runs — Brittany Baron, Michelle Nadratowski and Jackie Markert.

Baron led the way with 19 points, including a six-for-eight performance from the foul line, while Nadratowski and Markert each chipped in 12 points.

Other players chimed in for Voorheesville.

Cyrella Suker pulled down seven rebounds off the bench, while Alexandra Fish made a three-pointer as time expired in the third quarter to give the Blackbirds a 42-32 lead.

They had scored five points in the last 1:45 of the third quarter to get within seven points, McClements said.

Christina Denny had 11 points, and Olivia Mosconi added 10 points for Fonda.

Voorheesville opens the regional tournament Friday with a game against Section X champion Potsdam at HVCC.

The winner of that game meets either the Section III or Section VII champ in Saturday's regional final.

"We've been fortunate to have opportunities to play at home and on the road (in regionals)," McClements said. "I don't necessarily know if there is an advantage to playing at home, but it's certainly nice."

Library hosts concert

Celebrate the promise of spring with the Musicians of Ma'alwyck and Alla Gitana: A Program of Music Inspired by Gypsy Musical Traditions at the sixth annual Harbinger of Spring classical music concert.

Exotic melodies with wild virtuosic pyrotechnics and simple tunes with great pathos were elements that 18th- and 19th-century Europeans considered to be characteristics of gypsy music. Composers of the time assimilated the lively style into their music, sometimes titling a movement alla zingara or alla gitana (meaning, "in the gypsy style"). Composers featured in the concert include Pleyel, Keler, Albeniz, Kodaly and Haydn.

Musicians of Ma'alwyck is a violin, cello and guitar trio directed by Ann-Marie Barker Schwartz. The group performs regularly at concert series in upstate New York. The other performers are Sten Isachsen, guitar, and Petia Kassarova, cello.

This free concert is made possible in part with public funds from the New York State Council on the Arts Decentralization Program administered in Albany and Schenectady Counties by the League of Arts Community Arts Connection. Friends of the Voorheesville Public Library have provided partial funding for the performance.

Also on March 21 will be the Friends of the Library annual meeting and quilt drawing at 1:30 p.m. Prior to the music performance, everyone is invited to meet-and-greet members of the library Friends group.

Voorheesville Public Library

The Friends are celebrating their 15th anniversary this year, the same year the library moved from the South Main Street building to the new facility on School Road.

The "Bookworm" should be in homes this week. Extra copies are available at the library. Note a typographical error on Page 2: The book discussion group for grades 4 to 6 will meet on April 10, not Feb. 10 as printed.

The April adult book discussion book is The No. 1 Ladies' Detective Agency by Alexander McCall Smith. Copies are available when you sign up at the reference desk.

The impressive oil paintings in the hall gallery this month are by Bob Mokricki.

John Lyons

Dr. John J.A. Lyons, 92, of Feura Bush died Monday, March 1, at his home.

Born in Rotterdam, he attended Cathedral Academy and Christian Brothers Academy in Albany. He was a graduate of Union College and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi Scientific Honor Society. He graduated from Albany Medical College, where he was a member of the Honor Society Alpha Omega Alpha.

He served in the North African and Italian campaigns in World War II and was honorably discharged with the rank of major.

After the war and until 1967, he was in the private practice of internal medicine. From 1967 until 1982, Dr. Lyons was commissioner of health of Albany County. During that time, he was responsible for the design and construction of the Albany County Health Facility in Albany's South End. By resolution of the county Legislature, the building was renamed the John J.A. Lyons, M.D., Albany County Health Facility.

He also was instrumental in the creation of the Albany County Sewer District in 1968 and served as division physician to the State Police for 27 years and was a consultant to the state Department of Health for seven years. Dr. Lyons served in many capacities including associate professor of medicine at Albany Medical College, attending physician at Albany Medical Center and St. Peter's Hospital and consultant to the Stratton Veterans Administration Medical Center Hospital. He was chairman of the Albany County Sewer District Commission and a member of the Council of Community Services, Mental Health Board, the state Health Planning Advisory Council, board of directors of Blue Cross-Blue Shield, advisory board of Child's Hospital, board of Bender Laboratory and Environmental Conservation Advisory Committee.

Survivors include his wife of 61 years, Anne Doherty; six sons, Clifford Lyons, Kenneth Lyons, Richard Lyons, Thomas Lyons, John Lyons and Robert Lyons; and seven grandchildren.

Services were from the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Albany.

Burial was in Calvary Cemetery in Glenmont.

Arrangements were by the Meyers Funeral Home in Delmar.

Contributions may be made to St. Peter's Hospital, 315 S. Manning Blvd., Albany 12208.

Roberta Cooper

Roberta Barnick Cooper, 86, of Slingerlands and formerly of Nassau, died Sunday, Feb. 29, at Hospice Inn at St. Peter's Hospital in Albany.

Born in North Greenbush, she had lived in Nassau for many years before moving to Slingerlands two years ago.

She was a member and past matron of the Order of the Amaranth Court No. 100, a member of the Royalty Club, the Edward Swartz Senior Service Center and a former Senior of the Year there and a member of Covenant Methodist Church in Averill Park.

She was a former member of Grace United Methodist Church in Nassau and the Van Rensselaer Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star.

She was the widow of Matthew Barnick and Ralph Cooper.

Survivors include a son, Peter Barnick of Albany; a stepdaughter, Nancy Rhodes of Chesapeake, Va.; a stepson, Larry Cooper of Nassau; nine grandchildren; and 13 great-grandchildren.

Arrangements were by the Thomas P. Mooney Funeral Home in Nassau.

Burial was in Evergreen Cemetery in Wynantskill.

Contributions may be made to Community Hospice of Albany County, 315 S. Manning Blvd., Albany 12208.

Bernard Dwyer

Bernard F. Dwyer, 80, of Delmar, died Monday, March 1.

Born in Troy, he was a lifelong resident of the Capital District.

He was a graduate of LaSalle Institute and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

Mr. Dwyer was an Army veteran of World War II.

He was an electrical engineer with the state Department of Public Service, where he represented the employees on the statewide board of directors of the Civil Service Employees Association before he retired after 30 years of service.

Mr. Dwyer was a member of the Colonie Historical Association, the Lake George American Legion Post and the Tibbitts Cadets in Troy, where he was on the board of directors. He had been a member of the S.W. Pitts Hose Co. in Latham. He was a volunteer with the American Cancer Society and Capital District Alzheimer's Association.

Survivors include his wife, Mary P. Schmidt Dwyer; three daughters, Linda D. Cleary of Delmar, Nancy M. Swift of Glenmont and Susan M. Dunne of North Easton, Mass.; a son, James G. Dwyer of Williamsburg, Va.; and 10 grandchildren.

Additional book drop now located in lobby

Our patrons now have the convenience of a third drop slot for returned items. The slot is located in the lobby near the new automatic doors.

Items dropped off here go directly into the new sorting area behind the checkout desk.

So if your visit to the library includes browsing time, a story hour or online research, you don't have to carry your returns a step farther than the hallway.

Our curbside drop remains open anytime the library is open. The garage drop is open when the library is closed.

ADA improvements

When a public building undergoes major renovations, federal law requires a new level of ADA compliance. We now offer front-access stations at all service desks. Front-access means that the patron's side of the desk is recessed or open, to accommodate a chair or wheelchair.

The front-access station at the circulation desk has the added advantage of being child-friendly. Stop here with your child to check out books or sign up for your child's first library card.

ADA improvements also include a new single-use public restroom, located near the story hour room in the southwest hallway area. This facility is also family-friendly.

Our new entryway's automatic doors ease passage for all patrons. Our public and staff restrooms have been refitted to meet ADA mandates; a new ADA-compliant staff restroom has also been constructed.

Our bookshelf aisles remain accessible to wheelchairs, and we provide a wheelchair-accessible Internet station.

Our Optelec magnifying reader remains at the ready; if you need help using it, don't hesitate to ask for assistance.

Books to People

Don't forget "Books to People," our free delivery service for patrons living in the Bethlehem Central School District who are unable to come to the library because of a medical condition or physical disability, either permanent or temporary.

Eligible patrons can request standard-format or large-print books, magazines, music CDs and audio books from our collection.

Materials you select are delivered every other week via the library van. Portable CD players are also available for loan.

There are no age restrictions on this service. If you think you are eligible, or know someone who is, call the library at 439-9314 for information.

Barrett, Mendez marry

Kerry Anne Barrett, daughter of Richard and Kathleen Barrett of Loudonville, and Wilson Mendez, Jr., son of Wilson and Sara Mendez of New York City, were married Nov. 22.

The Rev. John Bradley performed the ceremony at Blessed Sacrament Church in Albany.

A reception followed at Birch Hill in Schodack.

The maid of honor was Katie Colleen Barrett, sister of the bride. The bridesmaids were Wandie Lorenzo, aunt of the groom, Sherry Young and Mercedes Martinez. The flower girls were Kelsey and Renee Sandwick, cousins of the bride and Yelmar and Jeslyn Lorenzo, cousins of the groom.

The best man was Brian Brazil. The groomsmen were Richard Barrett, brother of the bride, Julian Mendez, brother of the groom, and Hector Lorenzo, uncle of the groom. The ring bearer was Cameron Colon, cousin of the groom.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Albany High School and Marist College and the College of Saint Rose.

She is a teacher at St. Thomas School in Delmar.

The future groom is a graduate of La Salle Academy and Marist College.

He is telecommunications administrator at the University of Albany.

After a wedding trip to Punta Cuna in the Dominican Republic, the couple lives in Slingerlands.

ASO performs contemporary American composers

By DEV TOBIN

Although the Albany Symphony Orchestra almost specializes in performing new works by American composers, March is more special than usual, because it's the ASO's American Music Festival month.

Underwritten by KeyBank, the sixth annual festival offers several concerts highlighting modern American classical music, including a rare concert in the state Capitol this weekend.

Music Director/Conductor David Alan Miller said The Capitol Concerts — commissioned short pieces inspired by three parts of the Capitol, the Million Dollar Staircase, the Governor's Reception Room and the Assembly Chamber — grew out of the symphony's successful Tiffany Windows concerts.

"We knew we would run out of Tiffany windows, and I always wanted to do something with the Capitol — it's such a fantastic building," Miller said. "Many of us drive by it every day, but few have been in it. And even fewer have explored it as we will."

A 13-member chamber orchestra conducted by Miller will play three world premieres inspired by the three rooms by Paul Moravec, Roshanne Etezady and Dorothy Chang on Saturday, March 13, beginning at noon. UAlbany history professor Warren Roberts and Capitol Architect James Jamieson will give a brief talk about each room prior to the performances.

"It will be a progressive concert, like a progressive dinner party," said Miller, adding that one piece will be played on the staircase and two in the reception room because it is impossible to set up a concert in the Assembly Chamber.

Tickets for the concerts and tour are $30; a dinner package including a light supper at Jack's Oyster House is $60.

The orchestra's main concert of the month will also feature a modern American work, Michael Torke's one-act opera "Strawberry Fields." This will be the first time the symphony has performed (and recorded) a

The Albany Symphony Orchestra will present the one-act opera "Strawberry Fields," a contemporary work by Michael Torke, right, on Friday, March 19 at 8 p.m. at the Troy Savings Bank Music Hall. ASO will be joined by singers from the Glimmerglass Opera company and backed by a chorus from Albany Pro Musica.

ACT presents "Two Rooms"

Sara Melita, left, and Scott Wasser take on roles in the current Albany Civic Theater production of "Two Rooms," a play by Lee Blessing. Performances continue through March 14 at the theater on 2nd Ave. Tickets are $12. Call 462-1297 for information.

contemporary opera.

"Strawberry Fields" is a gorgeous 40-minute chamber opera, with a libretto by A.R. Gurney, that premiered at Glimmerglass in 1999," Miller said. "It's a very powerful piece about aging and life, and about music, inspired by Strawberry Fields in Central Park."

The original singers from the Glimmerglass production will perform, backed by a chorus from Albany Pro Musica.

The all-American concert will also feature Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings," Dorothy Chang's "Short Stories" (a world premiere) and Aaron Copland's "Suite from 'The Tender Land.'"

The concert will be Friday, March 19, at 8 p.m. in the Troy Savings Bank Music Hall. Tickets are $17 to $37.50.

And the Dogs of Desire, the ASO's 18-member avant-garde chamber orchestra, will perform eight new works by prominent young composers in a multi-media format on Friday, March 26, at 8 p.m. in Revolution Hall in Troy.

"There will be eight world premieres, all connected to American popular culture," Miller said.

Featured composers include Ken Eberhard, Dan Roumain, Philippe Bodin, Dana Wilson, Dan Cooper, Randall Eng, Huang Ro and Arthur Bloom.

Tickets are $20 for adults, $15 for seniors and students.

Finally, soprano Sylvia McNair will perform a concert of classic Broadway show tunes, along with a buffet brunch at the Hall of Springs in Saratoga Spa State Park on Sunday, March 28, at 11 a.m.

"The festival is not limited to serious classical music," Miller noted.

Tickets for the concert and brunch are $65.

For reservations of tickets for any festival performance, call 465-4755.

in New York City took control of the city. He sought thereafter to extend his authority throughout the colony, and was met with much resistance, particularly in the Albany area. Leisler was eventually tried and convicted on charges of murder and counterfeiting, and put to death. Taxes were the least of the issues in this whole affair.

As a final fillip, the writer takes a quick look at the colony of Rensselaerswyck (which he seems to confuse with the community of Beverwyck, "where present-day Albany is located"). He notes that in 1665, tavern owners objected to the high taxes being imposed on them, but this is just another case of people objecting, as we all always do, to a raise in taxes.

Prof. Bronner then talks about "some effort at tax relief in the form of a 10-year tax exemption that the Dutch patroon was allowed to grant to colonists who decided to settle in the area." This seems to be a reference to the charter of 1629 which established the conditions for patroonships, including: "that the colonists of the patroon were not to have laid upon them any 'duties, tolls, excise, imposts or any other contributions for the period of 10 years, ... Registration of the patroonship had been made in November, 1629, but for a quarter century thereafter no attempt was made to obtain any taxes of any nature from the patroon or his tenants" (S. G. Nissenson, The Patroon's Domain, 250).

In short, it was not the patroon who was excusing the settlers from paying taxes, but the West India Company itself.

There is a term, exegesis, which describes the scholarly act of reading and gaining understanding of a text, and then deriving some conclusion out of the text. But Prof. Bronner has done quite the opposite here, starting with his conclusion, and then trying to force the historical record to agree with him.

But ultimately this novel tour through the distant past seeks to place blame in irrelevant places. Instead of looking to a colonial model as the source of all our trouble, it might be more fruitful to contemplate the fact that other parts of the country have, over the past 40 years or so, finally begun to catch up to New York in terms of education and skills, and that it is now possible for a manufacturer to maintain adequate levels of production in other states where not only taxes but wages are lower, fringe benefits are fewer, labor unions are weaker, and air-conditioning now allows for comfortable living.

In recent decades, the entire United States finds itself in much the same position that New York has occupied for the past half-century, with jobs now departing these shores for other countries for exactly the same reasons they left New York.

Whatever faults Peter Stuyvesant had, causing our current job drain is not among them.

Fraud Office, which oversees nursing homes. "The staff member who came on after Tomaso discovered the sleeping tablets in the nursing home medication cart."

The employee recognized that the pills were not dispensed by the pharmacy and reported the incident to a supervisor. Tomaso was employed by Good Samaritan from August 1999 to Feb. 3, when she was fired.

She has been charged with five counts of first-degree falsifying business records, a felony; five counts of unlawful practice of a profession; five counts of endangering the welfare of an incapacitated person; and five counts of violating health laws.

Ryan said Tomaso falsified business records when she failed to record the medications.

"After she had given the patient sleeping tablets, she omitted making entries into the patient's medical chart that she had administered the medication," said Ryan.

Tomaso was arraigned before Bethlehem Town Justice Paul Dwyer and sent to Albany County jail in lieu of $10,000 bail, which she later posted. She faces up to four years in prison if convicted.

She is scheduled to appear in Bethlehem Town Court on March 16 at 4 p.m.

"Providing quality resident care is our ministry at Good Samaritan Lutheran Health Care Center," Good Sam Administrator Keith Henchey said in a prepared statement. "The well-being and quality of resident care is of paramount importance to us and we take it seriously. When the situation came to our attention, we immediately self-reported to the appropriate state agencies and fully cooperated in the Attorney General's office. We are pleased with the expedience of the investigation and are grateful to report the resident involved was not harmed."

LEGAL NOTICE

VOORHEESVILLE CENTRAL SCHOOL DISTRICT NOTICE REGARDING ABSENTEE BALLOT PROCEDURE
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that pursuant to Board of Education action taken December 9, 1991, the following procedures must be followed to procure an absentee ballot to be used for elections conducted by the Voorheesville Central School District. An absentee ballot and application will be mailed to each qualified voter who requests such in a signed letter provided the voter meets the criteria listed below: The person will be unable to appear in person on the day of the school district election for which the absentee ballot is requested because he/she is, or will be on that day:
a) a patient in a hospital, or unable to appear personally at the polling place because of illness or physical disability or;
b) because his/her duties, occupation, business or studies will require him/her to be outside of the county or city of his/her residence on that day:
1) Where such duties, occupation, business or studies are of such a nature as ordinarily require such absence, a brief description of such duties, occupation, business or studies shall be set forth in the affidavit.
2) Where such duties, occupation, business or studies are not of such a nature as ordinarily require such absence, the application shall contain a statement of the special circumstances that such absence is required; or

c) because he/she will be on vacation outside the county or city of his/her residence on that day. The application shall also contain the dates which he/she expects to begin and end the vacation, the place or places where he/she expects to be on vacation, the name and address of his/her employer, if any, and if self-employed, a statement to that effect; or
d) absent from his/her voting residence because he/she is detained in jail awaiting action by a grand jury or awaiting trial or is confined in prison after conviction for an offense other than a felony.

Letters requesting applications for absentee ballots may be received by the District Clerk not earlier than the thirtieth (30th) day nor later than the seventh (7th) day before the election. Requests should be addressed to: Clerk, Board of Education Voorheesville Central School District Voorheesville, New York 12186

The Clerk shall post the list in a conspicuous place or places during the election, and any qualified voter may challenge the acceptance of the absentee voter's ballot of any person on the list at that time, by making a challenge and the reasons known to the inspectors of election before the close of polls.

Cuts

He asked the board to consider the reduction of $25,000 in the district equipment line, even while he pointed out the need to equip new classrooms.

"If you add five more teachers, you have to equip five more classrooms," he said.

Steven O'Shea, assistant superintendent for business, told the board that the district was proposing a rolling cut that would not affect any one program completely.

"Each year, department priorities vary," he said. "They would request (to purchase) their highest priority. One year it might be microscopes."

Field trips would be all but eliminated, with funding remaining only for Nature's Classroom, Children's Theatre, and those essential for high school courses.

Computer equipment purchases would be reduced; elementary pilot programs to help students meet Regents requirements when they reach high school would be eliminated; curriculum development would be funded by grants; and the summer Early Learning Focus program would be cut back, for a savings of more than $150,000.

Rounding out the proposed cut list were the elimination of the elementary intramural program, $55,000 worth of textbooks — which also would reduce state aid — aptitude testing and $10,000 for athletic officials and supplies.

"In order to make the budget affordable and to add the teachers to address growing enrollment, we knew we had to do this," Loomis said. "We in this district are experiencing what every district across the state is dealing with, but are in better shape than most. There's never a more difficult job than having to make these kinds of decisions."

BOU plans 18th annual auction

The 18th annual BOU auction is slated for Friday, March 19, at 7 p.m. in the Bethlehem Central High School cafeteria.

More than 200 unique items will be available.

A bucket auction will include items generally under $25. The silent auction offers goods and services from a variety of merchants and individuals.

The live auction, which begins at 7:30 p.m., includes such perennial favorites as principal for a day, superintendent and supervisor for a day, fly-fishing trips, and a weekend on Cape Cod.

Kids' entertainment and live music will be available. A dessert table promises a sweet evening.

The money raised goes back to the community in grants for youth projects.

Church offers special-needs Bible classes

Bethlehem Lutheran Church in Delmar has a special-needs Bible class on Sundays.

The class for adults with developmental disabilities is held from 9:15 to 10 a.m. the second and fourth Sundays of each month.

Those attending can come at 9 a.m. to enjoy coffee, tea and fellowship.

Participants must be able to enjoy a class that lasts approximately 45 minutes (one hour total time, allowing for arrival, etc.) and have transportation to and from the church.

The interactive class, started in the spring of 2002, includes Bible study and music. The teacher and the coordinator have special education or related degrees and years of experience.

Worship services at Bethlehem Lutheran Church are held at 8 and 10:30 a.m. from September to June.

For information or to register, call Bethlehem Lutheran Church at 439-4328.

Five Rivers hosts maple sugaring demos

Five Rivers Environmental Education Center on Game Farm Road will host free maple sugaring demonstrations on Saturday and Sunday, March 13 and 14, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Maple sugaring demonstrations will also be held March 20-21 and March 27-28, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. each day.

During this introduction to small-scale, backyard maple sugaring, visitors will learn how to identify a sugar maple, observe tapped trees and see maple sap being boiled into syrup over a wood stove. Visitors can taste real maple syrup as well as boiled sap.

Scout and youth groups are welcome. Youth groups must call to pre-register at least three days in advance.

For information or to pre-register, call 475-0291.
