School board meeting hits a sour note

By LINDA DeMATTIA

A proposal to eliminate the grade six to eight Sound Sensation choral group triggered more than an hour and a half discussion at Bethlehem's school board meeting last week.

Middle school music teacher Patrick Pisanello, director of the group, read from a two-page written statement as he charged the administration with cutting the most popular choral group to beef up the participation in a year-long sixth grade music program, rather than the current half-year Sound Sensation.

"As a six-seven-eight grade ensemble, the group has enjoyed the highest levels of success, as reflected in the testimonials of music educators, including New York State School Music Association adjudicators, parents, administrators and students," Pisanello said of Sound Sensation. "Attendance and eager participation have never been stronger. Furthermore, these changes were proposed without any consultation with me, or even any notice whatsoever, at the very end of the year."

Pisanello said the half-year choral group fills a need for students who are involved in the musical and do not want to overextend themselves by joining the full-year Piping Rock seventh and eighth grade chorus.

In addition, by allowing sixth grade

Towns' histories lost with RR track demolition

The railroad used to be a regular timekeeper for people who lived along its tracks.

"You used to be able to set your watch by it," said Bob Zautner, owner of the Toll Gate Restaurant in Slingerlands, as he recalled busier days along the railroad line that pass behind his home and establishment. "Every night at 11:30 p.m., the coal train would rattle you out of bed as it made its way to feed the power plant on the Hudson."

Over time, fewer trains traveled the route, until, about three years ago, they stopped coming altogether. Now the railroad tracks themselves are going, and with them, a piece of Bethlehem, New Scotland and Voorheesville history.

Earlier this month, crews from R&R Railroad Contractors of Cabot, Vt., began prying loose what was once known as Albany's Main Line.

The green light to remove the tracks came in June of last year when federal transportation authorities gave the line's current owners, the Canadian Pacific Railway, permission to abandon a nine-mile section of the railroad running from the port of Albany to Voorheesville.

Final removal is expected by early

July, said railroad spokesman Michel Spenard, adding that all dismantled equipment and materials will be recycled and used on other portions of the railroad.

The future of the corridor, however, is still uncertain as the railroad is negotiating a sale of the land to Albany County. The county is considering plans to convert the corridor into a recreational trail and bike path.

"We are now looking to hire an appraiser to help us come up with a fair price to offer for the land," said Albany County spokesperson Mary Witkowski. "This phase should take six months."

The county's plan, known as rail banking, keeps the corridor intact in case a future need for a railroad or other public project arises. Witkowski added that county planners are open to other suggestions for the corridor. The possibilities include running water and fiber optic lines along the railroad right of way.

In 1994, the county and Scenic Hudson, a preservation group, were ready to buy the land until the railroad reconsidered and left the tracks in place. At the time, the county's senior natural resource planner, Mark King, stressed that it was important not to allow the corridor to be broken up and sold to private buyers. The Federal Surface Transportation Board, which authorized abandonment, requires railways to offer the land to public entities in the order of state, county and local agencies before allowing private buyers to bid.

With abandonment and removal of the tracks, the county is looking to make another offer to purchase the land.

Albany County has applied for state and federal funds through grants managed by the state Office of Parks, Recreation and Historic Preservation, said Witkowski. Money for the grants comes under New York's environmental protection act and the federal land and water conservation fund. Those are matching grants determined by the cost of the project. The maximum amount available from this source is $350,000. Once the corridor is acquired, the

V'ville teacher retires after 33 years

By MARTIN J. BANNAN

Perhaps the most touching memory a teacher can imagine is turning over his or her class to a former student upon retirement. For Mary Ellen O'Brien, a fourth grade teacher at Voorheesville Elementary School, that pleasure was all hers as she left her class to Michael Burns, a substitute teacher who had been O'Brien's student when she taught sixth grade in 1988.

"She made it fun to be in school," Burns said. "I'll try to do the same for my pupils. It's important for kids to like to learn."

A graduate of The College of Saint Rose, O'Brien began teaching at Voorheesville right out of college in 1971, and never thought of working anywhere else.

"I always wanted to be a teacher," she said. "I would do it all over again."

Old Songs to present festival with ballad opera

By MARY LANNON

You'll be sure to hear some fish stories at this weekend's 24th annual Old Songs Festival at the Altamont Fairgrounds. That's because along with the usual wide variety of dance and music, one of this year's featured groups will be Big Trout Radio.

Some say the origins of that musical group are a little fishy.

But the story goes that Carlton

Munson assembled a mail-order transmitter and went on the air in 1959 with his tiny 10-watt radio station in the mountains of trout country. The station with the motto, "All trout, all the time" played only songs about fish.

At some point, Munson piggybacked onto a 50,000-watt, clear channel signal and became an overnight sensation from Montauk to Missoula. Since the Federal Communication Commission cracked down, Munson is back to transmitting to a four-mile radius.

But he's allowed musicians, Tom Akstens, Chris Shaw and Artie Traum to raid his archives for the band named in honor of his station. They will perform many original fish songs in concert Saturday night at 7:30 p.m.

Band members will offer kids the opportunity to learn to fly cast at 10 a.m. Saturday.

The Big Trout Radio songs and kids activities follow a long tradition for the festival, said Andy Spence, treasurer of Old Songs.

Keeping busy and entertained is not difficult, Spence added as the festival features 120 daytime workshops, a juried craft show, food and instrument vendors, as well as a children's activity area.

Another big story (but not a fish story) to be told at the festival this year will be in the form of a ballad opera called "The Transport."

"It's a very folky kind of thing," said John Roberts, who will play a convict in the opera. "To call it an opera is a little grand; it's more of a kitchen opera than a concert hall opera," he added.

Peter Bellamy wrote the piece 25 years ago, Roberts said, and in Great Britain, an anniversary edition of the songs on CD as well as a book have been released. So, several regular festival-goers and performers from Great Britain suggested the festival put on this show, he explained.

The British opera to be performed follows Henry and Suzanne Cabbell who were held in British prisons in the 1790s and sent off to Australia, part of the first colonizers of that country. The two had a child out of wedlock and had to fight to be able to stay together.

The story is based on historical fact. The opera will be performed on Friday and Saturday at 3 p.m.

Spence highlighted some of the other acts that will take place at 10 venues. Three concerts will be held on the weekend: Friday at 7 p.m., Saturday at 7 p.m. and Sunday at 3:30 p.m.

"We have a band coming from Denmark," Spence said.

The name of that group is Phonix, and it will perform Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with other performances and workshops Saturday and Sunday.

The festival will also feature Southern black string band music Saturday at 3 p.m. and Sunday at 12:15 p.m.

John Doyle and John Williams, who have been in the band Solas, will provide a taste of Irish music Saturday at 10:30 p.m.

Footworks, a percussion dance ensemble, will celebrate its 25th anniversary this year, host of workshops and performances on Saturday and Sunday and perform Saturday at 9:30 p.m.

Michael Cooney, the Klezmer Mountain Boys, Pat Humphries and Sandy O, as well as Bruce Molsky, Archie Edwards and Blues Heritage and many more, will also perform.

Visitors to the Web site at www.oldsongs.org can view the entire schedule and search for performance times of particular acts.

Funeral home celebrates 100th

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

The stately brick building is a defining point of Delmar's Four Corners. Inside, dark woodwork, plush carpets and an air of dignified quiet provide comfort and confidence to customers. Running a funeral home is a difficult business, but the Applebee family must do it well, because this is their 100th year in business.

Peter Applebee runs the business from the brick building at 403 Kenwood Ave., but it was his grandfather, also named Peter, who started the business in 1904. The family's first funeral home was in Clarksville. It used horse-drawn hearses and a sled hearse for the winter months.

At the time, most wakes were held in the home of the deceased. Today, Applebee said his grandfather must have seen a need when he opened the first Applebee Funeral Home.

"Back then, you held a license as an undertaker," Applebee said. "My grandfather also did embalming."

The first Peter Applebee eventually moved the business from Clarksville to Delmar, although he thought seriously about moving it to Feura Bush,

With a stone foundation that proved challenging when Applebee updated the funeral home's heating system, the building is literally unshakeable.

"In the earthquake a while ago, we didn't feel a thing in this building," Applebee said.

Applebee went to college for a couple of years before joining the family business. He then took a 12-month course at Simmons College of Embalming and Mortuary Science in Syracuse, did an apprenticeship and took his practical exam.

For a while, his brother Paul worked with him, but Applebee eventually bought him out. Paul sometimes helps out in what Applebee described as a "very small business."

Applebee and John Rutski work full time, and there are two regular part-time employees. Five to six other people work on an as-needed basis. Last year, the home handled nearly 100 funerals.

Applebee acknowledged that working with people in times of sorrow can be tough.

"You have to be sympathetic, but be careful not to let it overwhelm you," he said. "That can be tough, especially when it's children."

Applebee, approaching 60, said he's noticed that there seem to be more people dying at age 60 or younger.

"Maybe it's a combination of disease and accidents," he said.

Applebee also said that hospice has made his job easier, since it allows families to prepare for their loved one's death.

While he still sees a number of traditional funerals, nontraditional ones are held more often than in the past.

"Sometimes there will just be something small at the church or graveside," he said. "We also do a lot of cremation work. People also like to write their own obituaries, which is fine with us."

Applebee follows the family tradition of giving back to the community. His father donated the first ambulance to the town's rescue squad in 1940; today, he makes donations to numerous local organizations, among them Babe Ruth baseball, Bethlehem Veterans Park, Feestelijk and the high school graduation celebration.

Looking ahead, Applebee said he plans to continue to work with families to provide the services they need. Since his is an all-day business, his telephone is always on — and rings frequently — enabling him to help people when they need it most.

Applebee raised his family in Delmar, where he still lives. His wife Nancy works for the state Dormitory Authority. They have two sons, Peter, 35, and Brian, 31.

Residents, officials plan for growth

Visioning workshop draws a crowd

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

By the end of last week's visioning workshop, four aerial maps of Bethlehem and outlying areas were cluttered with markings representing a collective wish list of locations for schools, trails and commercial development.

About 50 residents turned out to put ideas they have for future development in Bethlehem on the maps.

Tuesday's workshop marked the halfway point in a 10-step planning process the town has undertaken, that will eventual result in an updated comprehensive plan to guide all future development.

Michael Welti of Saratoga Associates, the firm leading the charge to identify areas suitable for development and to update zoning codes, urged participants to be "big thinkers," noting that the visioning workshop is a preliminary stage to development.

Glenmont resident Judith Fetterley said affordable housing for senior citizens tops her list of goals for town development.

"A number of us are aging out a bit," Fetterley said. "One of my worries is that I will be forced to move out of Bethlehem."

Fetterley said affordable, senior-type housing complexes should be located near the center of town.

"As the population ages, families leave," Fetterley said. "Then you have this whole population of people wanting not to leave Delmar, but not take on the burden of a house."

Delmar resident Jim Booker said connectivity between neighborhoods and walkability are important goals to consider.

"Delmar works because its neighborhoods are connected in one way or another," Booker said. "We need connectors for the pedestrians to move through the neighborhoods."

Looking over the Bethlehem Center and Glenmont map, Booker said he'd like to see elementary schools located near light industry.

Any commercial development along the waterfront would most likely be retail commercial.

Welti noted a list of identified concerns, ranging from updating land use, zoning issues and infrastructure and transportation issues to protecting environmental and cultural resources and economic and fiscal issues.

"There are a number of long-standing questions about Route 9W, the Slingerlands bypass and a Selkirk bypass," Welti said. "There is also a concern about job creation and the ability to balance the tax rolls."

Welti asked participants to rate, on scale from one to seven, 52 slides depicting various planning approaches for commercial and residential development, streetscape development, public places and waterfront development.

Slides depicting quaint downtown areas with a variety of storefronts, sidewalks, benches and trees scored relatively high.

Stores that rose up out of a sea of asphalt and so-called "big box" stores scored relatively low.

Residential areas with porches and sidewalks lead to a sense of community, many residents said.

Cookie-cutter houses and lack of trees seemed undesirable for Bethlehem, as many participants rated these slides with a one or two.

The next Bethlehem Planning Advisory Committee meeting is scheduled for Monday, July 12, at 6:30 p.m. at First United Methodist Church at 428 Kenwood Ave.

Delmar works because its neighborhoods are connected in one way or another. We need connectors for the pedestrians to move through the neighborhoods.

Jim Booker

neighborhoods, so children could walk to school.

"It's an odd place for a school to be near a Wal-Mart. They should sell it and put a Target in there or something," Booker said. "A school doesn't belong there, even though there is one there."

Supervisor Theresa Egan has some ideas about development for the South Bethlehem and Selkirk riverfront area.

"Think Saratoga and put it on the waterfront," Egan said.

Egan said industry should be scaled down, as development moves toward the waterfront, creating a nucleus for since that's where the trains went. In the late teens of the last century, Applebee's relocated to Delmar, moving into the current building in 1933.

Peter Frederick, driver of the horse-drawn hearse, and Peter Applebee in front of the Clark House, former home of Applebee's Funeral Home, about 1910.

The second Peter Applebee's father, Paul, went into the family business right out of school. His wife Jacoba "Jackie" had an undertaker's license and worked with her husband. The family once lived in part of the house that is now the funeral home.

"One side was the home, and the other was the chapel and showroom," Applebee said. "There are still two separate meters in the building."

What's better, change or more of the same?

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

We'll tell you that we're looking forward to it, but it's not entirely true. We'll tell you that it will be good to have a change in the routine; that it will be great to not hound children from their beds each morning and check that homework is getting done each night. We'll tell you that the kids are ready for a break, that warm weather and loads of free time will be good for them. Look more closely, though, and you'll see the corners of mothers' eyes twitch ever so slightly at the thought of all the impending quality time that the end of the school year will inflict upon us.

In today's over-structured world, of course, most kids have been signed up for sports camps, art camp and time at Grandma's since April vacation reminded parents of the downside of unstructured time. I wish that were the case in our house. Our family's devotion to taking it as it comes borders on anarchy. I am

COMMENTARY:

*Mom's

the one in the family who likes to have a plan; to know there's something to do; that there's a purpose to the day. Or so I think, until I go through too many days that have been script-ed, and I realize that what I really want is to bike past a field full of Queen Anne's lace and chickory; to sit in my front porch rocking chair, reading a book; to soak up the sun on the back deck on a Sunday morning, with two fat newspapers, a second cup of coffee and the love of my life to share my outrage at the liberal media bias du jour.

No wonder, then, that my children eschew organized activities. Sports went out the window for them a long time ago, and a favorite aunt validated that one summer when I threatened them with sports camps if they didn't stop picking on one another.

Aunt Holly shuddered. "Aaargggghh, sports camps," she said, making the boys laugh. "C'mon, let's go watch Monty Python where your mom can't find us."

They tried a few other activities for a while, but none suited them as well as reading, a quick swim at the town pool, having friends over, or the enemy that is exhausting to battle, television.

We have reached a kind of summer peace in our house, where the kids spend some time outside every day, they get together with friends, and we take the occasional road trip that enriches all our lives and bonds us together as a family.

You can't really be a modern

American family without spending a few hours trapped together in a car a few times a summer, poking at your siblings and whining about when you'll get there; threatening to throw up if somebody doesn't pull the car over now; launching paroxysms of pleading at the sight of the golden arches; reminding your parents of a promise made but never made good upon when you were little;

The car trips turn the twitch in parents' eyes to full-blown quakings, and there's still a lot of summer time left to fill. Although my personal belief is that reality is well worth avoiding, I wonder what my children, who remain adamantly opposed to the organized activities that are their generation's reality, will be like as grown-ups. Will they be ill equipped to handle the world; will they not function well in social or business settings?

The part of my brain that works as a spin doctor likes to think that since they've been outside-the-box thinkers practically since birth, they will be problem-solvers; creative types; leaders among men; the Bill Gates of their adult (and my retirement) day. When I push them too hard to join anything, I get the answer that speaks to the part of me that values individuality: Do you want automaton droids for kids?

No, I just want you to grow up healthy, happy and exposed to ideas and things outside of this house. I also want you to get to know people with different ways of looking at the world, so that you can develop tolerance for others and perhaps draw from their strong points, too. I want you to find a place you can share and nurture your own strengths, your imaginations, your senses of humor and your intelligence.

There is a tendency when raising kids to romanticize the way we grew up — when we're not blaming all our adult shortcomings on the way we were raised. Nearly everyone I've met who's over the age of 35 reminisces about childhood summer days. In those days, we'll tell you, we were out of the house at sunup, were as likely to have lunch at a friend's house as at home and chased fireflies as we made their way home at the end of the day.

I wish that my kids could do that. I wish they could go and play in the woods, wetlands and creeks that still dot our suburban areas. I wish that they could ride their bikes to friends' houses, with only the traffic to worry about, not sexual predators, kidnappers or gun-toting wackos. I also wish that Internet predators would turn themselves in for the summer, so that we could be assured of our children's safety in our own homes.

I wish there were a park in every neighborhood with basketball courts, tennis courts, ball fields and really cool staff who would lead the kids in games like "Red Rover, Red Rover," "Mother, May I" and human chess. Maybe a little arts and crafts time, too — lanyard making, clay projects and bead necklaces.

That's not today's reality, though, and so it remains for parents to find the activity that entices their children while keeping them safe. For some of us, it means a little more hunting or standing strong with the house rules of "Let's go into the yard for just a little while."

No matter how the kids spend their summer, here's betting that when they're all grown up, they'll look back on these days with great fondness, and surprise when Grandma and Grandpa say they'll skip the road trip this time.

There is a tendency when raising kids to romanticize the way we grew up — when we're not blaming all our adult shortcomings on the way we were raised.

and Dad turning up the radio to drown it all out after bellowing, "Don't make me stop this car!"

It all leaves Mom, who planned the event, wondering why, exactly, she felt it necessary to dislodge the kids from their quiet stupor in front of the television.

Second Milers celebrate 40th anniversary

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Forty years ago, Barry Goldwater was nominated for president at the Republican National Convention in California. Martin Luther King, Jr., received the Nobel Peace Prize, Nikita Krushchev was deposed as head of the Soviet Union and Jimmy Hoffa was found guilty of jury tampering.

Locally, the Elsmere Fire Station and the town of Bethlehem War Memorial were dedicated. Bert Kohinke was Bethlehem's supervisor, milk cost 79 cents per gallon, and sirloin steak was 69 cents per pound.

At the same time, a Delmar man spending the winter in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., got to thinking about home, and with that thought, the Second Milers came into being.

The Second Milers are retired men who meet once a month for lunch, fellowship and to hear a speaker or watch some entertainment. Earl S. Jones Sr. was the retired lawyer who got the club started with the help of the Rev. Robert Thomas, then-pastor of the Delmar Methodist Church, Howard Davenport and Miller Larkin.

Twenty men came to the first luncheon, and for the past 40 years, a group of men have met every month at the Delmar Methodist Church.

"It started as members of the Methodist Church," said Howard Gmelch, a past president of the Second Milers who's been involved with the group for 35 years. "We branched out to include men from the town of Bethlehem and from Albany. It became non-denominational pretty quickly."

At its peak, some 200 men were listed on the membership roster, and about 135 attended the monthly meetings. Today, there are 170 members, about 60 of whom make it to the monthly meetings.

"We've had doctors, West Pointers, people from the telephone company and school principal as members," Gmelch said. "We never solicited for funds."

The meetings, Gmelch said, offered men a chance to enjoy good citizenship and good fellowship.

Members paid for lunch each month, which for a long time was provided by the female membership of the Order of the Eastern Star. A catering company provided lunch after that, and to celebrate their 40th anniversary, the Second Milers held their June meeting at Normanside Country Club.

Thomas O'Connor is the outgoing president of the Second Milers, and happy to offer visitors a mint from a bowl in the Normanside's lobby.

"I grew up in Arbor Hill during the Depression," the retired deputy commissioner of centralized services for the state Office of General Services said, "and I always loved penny candy."

Candy certainly costs more than a penny now, and the retired men arriving for lunch and to hear Supervisor Theresa Egan talk about the status of town business are differently attired than the men in the 1960s and 1970s photos in the Second Milers' history book. Those men wore suits and ties to their monthly meeting; except for O'Connor, today's members take full advantage of casual dress styles, and look ready for a round of golf in polo shirts and casual slacks. There are retirees of all ages, and represent not just their history, but the nation's and the state's. Gmelch fought with Gen. George S. Patton in what his wife recalled being described in New York newspapers as the "mystery brigade" in Europe; Gov. Nelson Rockefeller hired Korean War vet O'Connor to oversee the installation of the state's first computer system.

At the 40th celebration of the Second Milers, though, O'Connor and Gmelch weren't sure the club would continue, since members seemed reluctant to take on the role of officers. By the end of the meeting, though, things had worked out, and the Second Milers will be looking at another 40 years of lunches together.

Rather than a few officers, 10 members will organize lunches and make the phone calls to let members know about them. The lunches will take place at the Normanside Country Club on Salisbury Drive in Delmar and will cost $13, which includes tip and sales tax. There will be a cash bar and a 50/50 raffle at each meeting. The Second Milers take the summer off, but will resume meeting in September, on the second Wednesday of each month. Membership is open to all the retired men in town.

Matters of Opinion

School's out

School's out, and the kids will likely head to camp or to the streets for some summer fun.

That means drivers need to be especially careful and stick to the speed limit on town roads where we see more and more traffic every day. It only takes an instant to be involved in an accident. Highly traveled roads like Delaware Avenue and Route 9W tend to slow some drivers down, while others continue to zoom through town.

Although the majority of kids get the safety message in school and at home, they too are part of the problem, especially when they travel in groups.

Many town streets are practically unwalkable because many streets don't have sidewalks or much of a shoulder. In essence, all pedestrians are in jeopardy when they use the road itself to get where they're going.

Kids, after all, are kids who enjoy being with their friends and a little horseplay from time to time. But when the horseplay goes on with three or more walking side by side, it's time to lay down the law.

Drivers should not be distracted by cell phones (hand-held cell phones are illegal in the car) or blaring radios and should pay strict attention to what they're doing — driving.

Vigilance at all times is key when we are behind the wheel. Don't put yourself at even greater risk when you are driving. Speeding in suburbia is like carrying a gun that might go off at any time.

And at the risk of sounding like a broken record, remind your children of the correct way to navigate suburban streets. Darting out between parked cars is very dangerous since drivers can't see the victim until it's too late. And a simple always look both ways before crossing is worth repeating.

Driving at night can be tricky since some pedestrians do not wear light or bright clothing and glare from headlights make it even more difficult to see.

And if the teens are old enough to drive, make sure they get the message about following the rules of the road and be especially careful on busy roads where there are likely walkers, bikers and joggers sharing the road.

Teenagers and adults both need reminders about their safety and the safety of pedestrians.

Neglecting to address pedestrian safety in our suburban towns is remiss and could cause serious harm or even death.

Editorial

Nostalgia sweetens summers past

By DONNA J. BELL

The writer is editor of Capital District Parent Pages.

Summer vacation is finally here. My three kids all have their bright-eyed plans of days spent sleeping in, hours swimming at the lake, friends over for outdoor camp nights, sleeping in, trips to Lake George and The Great Escape, hamburgers and fresh corn grilled on the barbecue, riding bikes and, oh, did I mention — sleeping in.

For my son, the middle-schooler who has to leave the house at 6:30 a.m. to catch the bus for band practice, there is no greater indulgence than waking up slowly to your own internal clock rather than the rude blare of the alarm.

The kids' father and I each have our own memories of freedom-filled summer days. He lived near a lake way up in the North Country in the tiny hamlet of Tupper Lake.

For Roger, summer meant leaving early dressed only in swim trunks to head down to the "beach." There he would swim with one or more of his six siblings, hang with friends and, as he got older, cozy up to the summer girls whose families rented cabins for the season.

Later in the evening there were hotdogs roasted and tales told over campfires. With so many members of the family, there was a built-in source of entertainment and plenty of plans for adventure.

My family was much smaller — my parents and just one younger brother. My father was in the Air Force from the time I was born until I entered junior high. So when I was smaller, our "crowd" was found in the many base housing complexes we lived in over the years.

A typical summer day would mean cartoons for an hour and breakfast before my mother shooed us outdoors. The kids always congregated near the center of the playground to wait for everyone to show up. We might start off the day with a game of baseball or dodge ball or, perhaps, Mother-May-I or Rover-Red-Rover.

One of our favorite things to do, and forgive me if I sound a little like an old Judy Garland-Andy Hardy movie, was to organize a show for our parents to watch.

The spectacle would often feature a segment where we would ride our bikes in formations, much like a ballet on wheels. There were always skits with camp songs sung at the top of our voices: "Great green globs of greasy grimy monkey meat, chopped up baby paracetamol" or

A typical summer day would mean cartoons for an hour and breakfast before my mother shooed us outdoors. The kids always congregated near the center of the playground to wait for everyone to show up. We might start off the day with a game of baseball or dodge ball or, perhaps, Mother-May-I or Rover-Red-Rover.

"Comet, it makes your mouth turn green, Comet, it tastes like gasoline" or "I like to eat worms, long thin skinny ones, big fat juicy ones, that's what I want for lunch. Yum! Yum!"

There would be some side-splitting impressions (at least to us) of the teachers at school and often a play complete with construction paper crowns and props and clothes snuck from the back of our parents' closets.

At lunch we would run back home and inform our parents that there would be a show after dinner. Then we would wolf down our meal and head back out so we could have more time to practice.

After the evening meal, troops of parents, lawn chairs and cocktails in hand, would gather for the big production. I'm sure the libations had a small part in the great time they all seemed to have at the performances.

One of my favorite things to do on a summer day was to sneak off with a blanket and a book and read for hours. My mother bought me a subscription to "The Happy Hollisters," book club about the adventures of a family with four children, one daughter my own age.

Each month the mailman would deliver two books to my house, and my mother knew not to even bother to look for me for the next two days. When those books ran out we would venture to the library for Half Magic, The Secret Garden or A Wrinkle in Time.

When we moved to Washington state, where my father retired, one of his first purchases was a truck with a camper on the back. Several weekends a month we would spend a few days in the woods, the mountains or at the ocean.

My father worked a swing shift, and while he was at work my mother would pack up the camper and let my brother and me fall asleep in the cubby over the cab. When my father got home late at night, he and my mother would head out toward our destination.

There was a narrow window that looked out over the hood and sometime in the night I would wake up, rocked by the camper's sway, and look out the window to see shadowy trees, lit by the headlights of the truck, lining the back roads my father preferred.

In the morning, we would wake to the smells of salt-infused breezes or a heavy pine-needle carpet outside our door — depending on my father's whim. My brother and I knew to head out and gather wood for the evening fire before we asked for our bikes.

It was a more innocent time, and we would soon be off in search of new friends to either invite over for marshmallows that night, or to go to their site for a mug of hot chocolate. There really were no strangers in campgrounds.

When we were a little older, friends of my parents owned property on a private lake, and the mothers and kids would often spend weeks at the camp, with the dads coming up for the weekends.

It was during that time that my parents bought us mini-bikes. I still can't imagine anything cooler than the summers we spent savoring freedom as teens — being able to come and go as we pleased, putt putt around on two wheels.

We didn't care what the weather was like, we would often ride in the pouring rain, come back to the camp and stand in front of the fire, our clothes steaming, until we warmed up enough for our hands to work the bike's clutch. Still damp, we would head back out.

On the nicest days we would ride down to the dock, slather ourselves with baby lotion (who knew?) and crisp ourselves to a brilliant lobster red. The tan that would inevitably follow seemed worth the several days of sleepless nights, followed by days of peeling skin.

It seems my summer memories have become more nostalgic as the years have passed since I had an entire summer to while away. I'm sure there must have been days, and perhaps even weeks, when the summer seemed to stretch out and I whined, "I'm bored." But, for the life of me, I can't remember them now.

Your Opinion Matters

Program to highlight suburban problems

Editor, The Spotlight:

Many Bethlehem residents are alarmed at the rapid growth and resulting issues with traffic congestion, crowded schools, pollution, noise and shortage of green space.

Existing roads are no longer adequate for local traffic, and much of Bethlehem's remaining farm and vacant lands are being swallowed up by development. Some of us who sit in traffic weekday mornings waiting at yet another light, wonder how much longer it will take to get to work in five years. Will there be gas available for the drive?

In Glenmont, in less than a year, considerable changes have taken place in our neighborhood since the opening of Wal-Mart. We have experienced substantial alarm as the rush continues to open new "big box" stores along Route 9W.

Will our local businesses survive this surge of sprawl?

Moving to the suburbs was a dream come true for many of us. We were lured by the hope of better schools, cleaner air, less crime, larger homes, lack of traffic congestion and the hope of a place for our kids to ride their bikes. We must now question if this dream can still be realized, and if so, for how much longer.

As the town engages in a comprehensive planning process, this is an appropriate time to consider some of the systemic and long-term concerns we are facing as a community and as a nation.

Serious questions are beginning to emerge. How much farther will suburban sprawl continue? Is the suburban lifestyle sustainable? As the global supply of oil begins to decrease, how will our lifestyle be affected? Are today's suburbs destined to deteriorate? Collectively, how can we build a more energy efficient and sustainable future? What can be done to avoid "The End of Suburbia?"

These issues will be the focus of a community forum on June 29, from 7 to 9 p.m. at town hall. This will be the Capital District's premiere showing of a new documentary called "The End of Suburbia: Oil Depletion and the Collapse of the American Dream," featuring local author James Howard Kunstler.

Following the documentary, Kunstler will answer questions from the audience.

This event is sponsored by Bethlehem Neighbors for Peace and Bethlehem Better Community Coalition. Please join us.

Loss of old house would be a shame

Editor, The Spotlight:

I was dismayed to hear that the 19th-century house on Elm Avenue will be reduced to a parking lot for Bethlehem Lutheran Church.

I would appeal to the congregation of the church to reconsider this decision.

Residents of Delmar often say that the charm and character of Delmar brought them here.

I believe that the charm and character are best reflected by the old houses and buildings that, in addition to being aesthetically pleasing and historically important, remind us that this is an old town with a strong sense of community and community pride.

The loss of even one one of our old houses threatens to tip the balance in our community from one characterized by interesting and diverse architecture to being yet another grouping of parking lots and subdivisions.

Grandmother: School gave short shrift to special-needs girl

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am a grandmother of a child born with Down Syndrome.

Lindsay is now 15 years old and has attended Voorheesville schools since she was 5. She was mainstreamed with an aide until moving up to the seventh grade when the middle school opened.

At this time, Voorheesville had no program for her. Her mother worked to have a BOCES program started in Voorheesville so that Lindsay could remain a part of her community.

She is well-known by the students, the teachers, the bus drivers and others working for the school and living in the community.

As she moved to the middle school and into the BOCES program, she was forgotten by the school. When it came time for the seventh-grade class trip, she was not notified or included.

At the end of the school year, she had perfect attendance but again was ignored.

When her mother asked why she didn't get a certificate for perfect attendance, she was told the school doesn't take attendance for the BOCES classes.

What happens to these students if there is some kind of emergency when the school doesn't know who is or isn't there?

Again this year when the eighth-grade has its school trip, she was overlooked.

She is a healthy, functioning, independent child capable of many "normal" things.

Now is the time to move up again. Once more, the school has no program and is not willing to work with the parents and build a program.

Lindsay's parents asked for mediation. The representatives of the school came to the mediation with their minds made up that this was just a formality they had to endure — there would be no program.

This "Blue Ribbon" school's solution is to spend the money to send Lindsay off to Gunderland and wash their hands of this student with a special need.

But students with special needs are not going to go away.

Voorheesville HS class of 2004 to graduate Friday

The Voorheesville high school class of 2004 will graduate Friday, June 25, at 7 p.m. at the high school.

Church to offer Bible camp

First United Methodist Church of Voorheesville will hold a Hero Quest Vacation Bible Camp from June 27 to July 1, from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. If there is enough interest, an all-day option will be offered for children who need full-day programming, which will cost an additional $5 per day. The cost for a week of half-day camp is $8 per child. The camp is for children from age 4 to 11.

Children will learn that what makes an ordinary person a hero is what is in that person's heart. The kickoff will be held on Sunday, June 27 from 3 to 6 p.m. at the church and will include a picnic for campers, staff and their families.

Each hero quest mission will be filled with mission stories, fun, crafts, games and music. For information, call 765-2895.

A Message to Our Clients and Friends:

Jerry Pittz

When I joined Edward Jones 10 years ago, I had two goals. The first was to build a successful business here in Delmar. The continued trust and support of my clients have allowed me to do so, and I sincerely thank them.

My second goal was to provide exceptional personalized service to every investor who chose to do business with Edward Jones. I've worked very hard to achieve this goal, but as my business has grown, it has become more challenging. That is why I am so pleased to announce that a second investment representative, Bill Melchior, has joined me in my office.

Thacher to host hiking program

Cornell Cooperative Extension of Albany County is offering a summer hiking camp for families and kids ages 10 to 14. Grandparents, parents and kids will discover that Albany County is a big, beautiful place.

From the Pine Barrens to the Helderbergs, Albany County offers a grand variety of outdoor adventures. Animal tracks, tree and flower identification, local history and ecology will be highlighted.

An orientation packet, maps and educational material will be offered along with trail snacks.

Weekly rate is $110 per student for a family of two or more, or $140 per student or $25 per day hike. Destinations include the Pine Barrens, Cole Hill State Forest, Black Bear Swamp, sections of the Long Path and the Blue Circle Wetlands trail.

Hikes will leave Cornell

Cooperative Extension's headquarters in Voorheesville at 9 a.m. and return at 4 p.m.

The leader has 25 years of environmental education experience and is a former Adirondack Program guide for Sagamore Institute.

The weeklong program will be held July 12 through 16. The group will hike rain or shine.

New publication debuts at library

A new library publication has hit our literature display rack. "Reserve It Now" is a monthly collection of excerpted reviews from recent issues of trade publications and other sources. The books on this list are just becoming available at the library. The list will include publications across genres and formats.

"Reserve It Now" will be current and frequent, but by no means all-inclusive. For a complete listing of new materials for children and adults acquired each month, check our Web site under "Read, Listen and View."

Other library publications

The latest edition of the Bethlehem Town Directory is now available in the library and at town hall. Compiled with help from the town's community relations and public information office, this popular publication contains a wealth of information about town services, area school districts, local government and more.

Community Contacts, an annotated list of service and interest groups in and around Bethlehem, appears each fall. Each entry in this handy booklet provides a description of the group's activities and affiliations, membership details and contact information.

Preschool Possibilities is a directory of area preschool programs, issued at the beginning of each calendar year. It includes names, addresses and contact information, enrollment details, tuition and supplemental services.

Footnotes, the library newsletter, is mailed six times a year to every household in the Bethlehem Central School District. It includes a complete list of library programs for adults and children, special features and news from our Friends and the board of trustees.

If you live outside the school district, you may subscribe to our newsletter for a nominal cost of $5 a year.

Check our service desks and literature racks often for informational brochures, fliers, and booklists ranging from the latest in large-print to graphic novels for teens.

Musical favorites to play library lawn

There's something for all ages going on at the Voorheesville Public library this summer.

Families and seniors, rock 'n' rollers and swing lovers, should mark their calendars now for July 14 and 28 and Aug. 11, which are the dates for musical appearances by Radically Sheep, Skip Parson's Clarinet Marmalade and the Lustre Kings on the library lawn.

All of our adult programs will meet for at least part of the summer. Nimblefingers and The Thursday Night Poets will meet on their regular dates and times. There will be adult book discussion on Thursday, July 15, but no August meeting, and Lifelines will meet on Aug. 2, but not in July.

The season is full of wonderful programs for kids. "Read, White and Blue" Summer Reading Club registration is ongoing now.

Stop by the library to sign up and receive your reading packet. Anyone entering kindergarten through sixth grade next fall is eligible to enroll for a weekly afternoon session.

Grades one through three will meet on Mondays, and grades four through six on Wednesdays, both at 2 p.m. The SRC kickoff will be on July 7 at 7 p.m. with a lively performance by musical storytellers Tales 'n' Tunes.

New this year is a Thursday morning club for middle school volunteers who are helping out with SRC for the younger kids. Monday Teen Nights are offering some excellent programs on cooking, photography, Monopoly, and other activities for an older crowd. Sign-up is requested for both programs.

Voorheesville Public Library

Students in grades six, seven and eight will be enjoying a fantastic experience at Sky Camp, a three-day aerial adventure taking place on July 7, 8 and 9.

This free program is supported by Federal Library Services and Technology Act funds, awarded to the State Library by the Federal Institute of Museum and Library Services, and culminates with a real flight at the Schenectady Airport in September. Spaces may still be available if you call now!

Storytimes will resume on July 13 on Tuesdays at the library at 10:15 a.m. and Thursdays at Village Park at 11 a.m.

The Thursday Night Poets meet on June 24 at 7 p.m. No sign-up is necessary. Bring a poem to share.

The July/August Bookworm will be out at the end of June. You can also call the library for program information, or visit the newly revised library Web site at www.voorheesvillelibrary.org.

Associate to help seniors with housing

Gretchen Willi, a sales associate with Coldwell Banker Prime Properties in Delmar, who has been in real estate business since 2001, was recently awarded the Seniors Real Estate Specialist (SRES) professional designation by the Senior Advantage Real Estate council.

Seniors Real Estate Specialists help seniors make wise decisions about selling the family home, buying rental property, managing the capital gains and estate tax implications of owning real estate, obtaining a reverse mortgage, moving to a senior community, and other issues.

Willi can be reached at 640-4629.

Glenmont woman wins service award

Empire State College recently awarded the Altes Prize for Exemplary Community Service to Karen Pass of Glenmont, recognizing her devotion and dedication to those who have been given less opportunity to succeed in life than most.

In addition to the award, state Sen. Neil D. Breslin issued an honorary proclamation.

Pass is associated with Support Ministries, Interfaith Partnership for the Homeless, Center for the Disabled, Habitat for Humanity, the Immigration and Refugee Program and New Day Art.

Senior specialist joins Delmar fitness club

Mike Mashuta, owner of Delmar Health & Fitness, recently announced the appointment of Rex Trobridge to the position of senior fitness specialist.

Trobridge is a certified personal trainer through National Council of Strength & Fitness (NCSF) and has senior fitness certification and advanced personal trainer certification, through Aerobic and Fitness Association of America (AFAA).

Delmar Health & Fitness recognizes that seniors are often ignored and yet this is one of the fastest growing populations. Trobridge will concentrate on functional fitness designed to maintain and improve clients' capacity to lead an active lifestyle and continue to engage in the important activities of daily living.

HILL announces fall semester courses

For the fall semester of its 12th year, Bethlehem Humanities Institute for Lifelong Learning will offer the following courses:

"Around the World With Art History and Archaeology" will be given by Associate Professor Sarah Cohen, together with a number of her colleagues in the art history department at the University at Albany, on Monday mornings.

Participating in the presentation of this course will be Professor Roberta Bernstein, Associate Professor Rachel Dressler, Associate Professor Stuart Swiny, Associate Professor Michael Werner, and other members of the art history department.

"The Stages of Life in 19th and 20th Century Short Stories" will be taught by Charlotte Goodman, professor emerita of English at Skidmore College, on Tuesday mornings.

"Radical Thinkers" will be offered by Peter Heinegg, professor of English and director of the Religious Studies Program at Union College, on Wednesday mornings.

"The Sixties" will be offered by Andrew Feffer, associate professor of history and director of the American Studies Program at Union College, on Wednesday afternoons.

"Chamber Music and the Ensemble" will be given by Ann-Marie Barker Schwartz, chamber musician and violin recitalist, on Thursday mornings. The course will consist of alternate weeks of lectures and recitals, when Barker Schwartz will be joined by music colleagues in presenting ensemble works.

Classes begin the week of Sept. 27, except for the Tuesday class, which will hold its first session on Oct. 5.

For information, call Murray Block at 439-5754 or Helen Adler at 439-9661.

Host families needed for exchange students

Host families are needed for 35 American Field Service (AFS) foreign exchange students who will be coming to the Capital District for the 2004-05 school year.

Students from countries all over the world will attend local high schools and participate in all aspects of family, school and community life.

Families who apply early this spring will have the best opportunity to view applications from students with special interests that match theirs, such as athletics or music. Local AFS volunteers provide family orientation and student support, as well as social and educational events for students, host families and host siblings.

For information about hosting or about intercultural opportunities for U.S. high school students to study abroad for a summer, semester or year, call Happy Scherer at 439-0016.

Student wins awards

Christopher Sherin, a recent graduate of Marist College, received the Award for Excellence in Political Science and The Hermitage Community Service Award at the college's commencement Baccalaureate Awards ceremony.

He received the service award in recognition of his volunteer service to the disadvantaged and the community during his four years at Marist.

He was also inducted into the Alpha Chi academic honor society and the Dean's Circle for academic excellence.

He is the son of James and Rose Sherin of Delmar.

Doctor joins medical practice

Dr. Michael Greenblatt has joined the staff of Community Care Physicians' Internal Medicine office in Delmar.

Greenblatt is a graduate of Cornell University and of the SUNY Science Center at Syracuse College of Medicine.

He is board certified in internal medicine and welcomes new patients to his practice. For an appointment, call 477-8077.

Greenblatt was previously employed at Crystal Run Healthcare in Middletown, Orange County.

CALIFORNIA CLOSETS®

Undercurrents of the Capital District

By DAMIAN PAGANO

At first glance, Schenectady's North Jay Street does not look like an obviously ethnic neighborhood.

The road, which intersects with Union Street a few blocks from the city's downtown, looks like a construction site. Pallets of cement blocks are stacked on the sidewalk. The road is covered with gravel, and manhole covers protrude about six inches above the crushed stone. A passing car drives down the street, crunching as it goes, and kicks up a cloud of gray-stone dust. Construction vehicles are parked at the side of the road and the fine, gray dust coats their windshields.

Inside the businesses that line this street the scene is much more colorful. At Cornell's Restaurant a bartender pours a glass of burgundy wine as a black-clad waiter walks past with a dish of creamy pasta Alfredo dotted with green broccoli crowns.

Pink and yellow candy-coated almonds fill display bins inside Civitello's Pastry Shop, and children smile as they hold cups of pale-yellow lemon ice and scoop the sweet treat with white plastic spoons. Inside Perreca's Bakery, the unmistakable and comforting scent of fresh-baked bread wafts from the kitchen.

"Everyone who comes in says something about it," bakery clerk Anna Hendrick said. "It's the bread. You can't beat it."

Developers and government officials hope that sometime in the near future the North Jay Street construction site will be a bustling neighborhood with a theme. They hope to transform the area of North Jay Street, South Avenue and Barrett Street into Schenectady's own Little Italy—a condensed and pedestrian-friendly commercial hub that stands as a tribute to Schenectady's Italian heritage.

But talk to people who live and work there and they will tell you that their neighborhood already has a rich cultural tradition. They say the street improvements might look nice when finished, but the neighborhood is already what developers hope to make it.

"We've always been Little Italy," said Roie Angerami, whose family has owned and operated Civitello's Pastry Shop at the same location since 1921. "This has always been an Italian neighborhood. I don't think the streetscape work is going to hurt us, but I don't know if it's going to become what some people hope."

The idea to create a distinct Little Italy district in Schenectady was formulated about 10 years ago. Local attorney Paul Sciocchetti said he got the idea after visiting Little Italy neighborhoods in New York City and Boston.

"Schenectady has a lot of little pockets that are rich in Italian heritage, but there is no distinct Little Italy section here," he said. "With North Jay Street, the district was already there. I think we just wanted to showcase it a little more."

Sciocchetti and businessman Dave DiToro, who is a partner in Rossi and DiToro Funeral Home at the corner of North Jay and Union streets, lobbied for government support of the project. The Schenectady County Legislature responded and created a Little Italy task force to formulate a master plan for redevelopment. The plan calls for development of the neighborhood in three phases, the first being streetscape improvements to North Jay Street. The idea is to create a pedestrian-friendly corridor that links Union College with downtown Schenectady.

That work is currently underway and is being paid for with a $750,000 grant of public money from the Schenectady Metroplex Development Authority. The money will pay for sidewalk improvements, better lighting, decorative trees, new paving and other decorative features that should give the neighborhood a unified theme, according to the Metroplex general project plan.

The plan also calls for creation of a distinct masonry and ironwork gateway that will draw attention to the Little Italy neighborhood.

"It ought to look really nice," said DiToro, who is also president of the Little Italy Neighborhood Association.

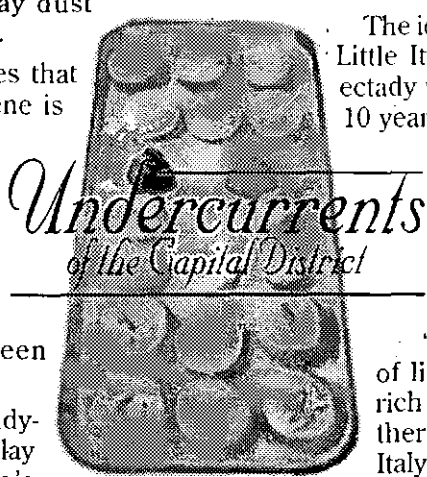

The project does face some challenges, as evident from delays in completing phase one of the streetscape project.

A current lack of adequate parking concerns some business owners and they wonder how much development can take place in a neighborhood that is already built up with houses and a few small shops.

"Schenectady, I hope it does come back," Angerami said. "Putting a lot of little shops in, I don't know if that's the answer to the city's problems."

"But I've always loved this street. If they can make it look nicer, then I guess it can't hurt."

Track

county would apply for additional funding to develop it, Witkowski added.

A railroad has run along this route since 1863 when the Albany and Susquehanna Railroad Company laid down the first tracks.

"My great-great-grandfather, John J. Wademan, fought the railroad in 1855," said Bob Cook, a Font Grove Road resident who has lived his whole life near the tracks. "He did not want the railroad cutting through his farm." Wademan, of course, lost.

Among the railroad's prized cargo were Bender melons grown and picked in New Scotland and carried to waiting boats in the port of Albany. From there, the melons went to New York City hotels and restaurants where they gained worldwide fame, Zautner said.

Locally, commuters rode the line to and from Albany.

"It was sort of like the commuter trains that serve New York City today," said Bethlehem's town historian Joe Allgaier.

"Many of the passengers were kids from Altamont, and everywhere in between, going to school in the city," he said. "There weren't many high schools in the country back then."

Passenger service on the route ended in the early 1930s, when the railroad handed the job over to the Slingerlands, Delmar and Elsmere bus company. "My brother rode the train to school from the Font Grove Road station to Slingerlands for five cents on that last trip," Cook said. Afterward, the Slingerlands station would be converted into a firehouse and later be demolished to make way for the fire department's current facility.

The tracks became a kind of playground where kids hung out to watch trains, collect rocks or ride motor bikes.

"We used to place pennies on the tracks and wait for the trains to come and squash them," recalled Voorheesville Mayor John Stevens. "We then sold those paper-thin pieces of stretched copper for a dime."

Stevens' Bethlehem neighbor,

Supervisor Theresa Egan, recalled helping her grandfather load molding sand on trains at the Slingerlands freight shed, which still stands on Kenwood Avenue, across the tracks from the rear of the Slingerlands firehouse. "I would be right behind him shoveling the sand," she said.

Not all memories of the tracks are so fondly recalled. Gardner Terrace in Delmar had a railroad crossing until Oct. 6, 1950, when a train engine collided into an automobile, killing Mrs. Leon Tinkham and Mrs. Stanley Snyder. Afterward, the crossing was deemed unsafe and closed, permanently cutting the street in two, Allgaier said. There were other fatal collisions, as well as a 1907 derailment near the Slingerlands Printing Plant, now the Tollgate Apartments. More recent nuisances include regular flooding beneath underpasses which snarl traffic after heavy thunderstorms.

In 1949, the Albany and Susquehanna merged with the Delaware and Hudson Railroad. Later, the Delaware and Hudson became a subsidiary of Canadian Pacific after they bought the line in 1991.

As the tracks disappear, communities along the route await the outcome of the corridor's future.

"The railroad's departure closes another chapter in this area's history," Egan said. "However, I believe turning unused space into something positive such as a rails-to-trails program will be a benefit providing residents with a needed recreational alternative."

Local women's boxing program continues to grow

By ROB JONAS

A woman putting on boxing gloves and stepping into a ring is no longer a novelty. It's become a phenomenon.

At Sweeney's Boxing and Fitness in Delmar, the number of women working out at the gym has increased dramatically in the last several years.

"The women's program has probably quadrupled since I started it," gym owner Rick Sweeney said. "It's gone from 20 women to over a hundred."

Sweeney said the reason for the increase in interest is that a boxing workout provides faster results than aerobic workouts. "They see the results very fast," he said.

Lisa Avella of Selkirk said she likes the no-frills atmosphere of Sweeney's gym.

"The thing about boxing is that it's simple and basic. There is no fancy equipment," said Avella, an administrative judge.

"You don't have to care about what you're wearing or how you look. There are no pretensions," added Slingerlands resident Cheryl Buley, a member of the New York State Racing and Wagering Board.

Buley said a typical one-hour workout includes elements of boxing and kickboxing. There are several work stations, including a boxing ring, which participants use for five-minute bursts of time before moving on to the next piece of equipment.

"Each element has a different feeling to it," she said. "The speed bag is meditative. The (boxing) ring work is exhilarating, and jump roping is a more intense workout — even more than sprinting. Then, you finish with a (stationary) bike, which is a relief."

"It really helps me channel my energy," Avella said. "If I'm feeling frustrated, I can release it at the gym."

Sweeney said that the women who join his program are "a little apprehensive at first, but once they see the results, they like that."

"They're willing to learn a lot more because they want to learn technique more than the guys do," he added. "They're more concerned about their workouts than the guys are."

Boxing

Even though it is a regimen that develops boxing skills, Buley said the program is open to any woman looking for a way to get in shape.

"You can either be a real serious boxer who wants to train to do something big, or you can be someone ... who wants to use it as an intense workout," she said.

Sweeney is doing his part to promote his women's boxing program. He held an evening of networking and boxing demonstrations May 25 that Avella said raised approximately $2,500. The evening included an appearance by former heavyweight contender Gerry Cooney.

"It was a wonderful feeling because it brought the community together — people from different parts of the community, people from all walks of life," Avella said.

Malinowski, relay team place eighth

By ROB JONAS

The high school track and field season officially ended at Bethlehem two weeks ago, but five Eagles wanted one more chance to fly.

Emily Malinowski and a 4-by-1 mile relay team consisting of Conor Murphy, Adam Hill, Matt Shaffer and Pat Shaffer traveled to North Carolina State University last weekend to compete in the adidas Outdoor National Track and Field Championships.

"The kids did that on their own. I didn't have anything to do with it," Bethlehem boys track coach Dave Banas said. "I was impressed that they did it. They organized the trip all on their own."

The trip worked out well for Malinowski and the relay team. Malinowski placed eighth in the girls 2,000-meter steeplechase with a time of 7:13.68, while the quartet of Murphy, Hill and the Shaffer brothers finished eighth in the 4-by-1 mile relay in a time of 18:08.59.

"They must have averaged 4:32 (per mile), so that was very good," Banas said.

The five Bethlehem runners were part of a large contingent from Section II schools that competed at the national high school meet. Saratoga produced two national champions in Nicole Blood (girls mile) and Lindsey Ferguson (2,000 steeplechase), and Shenendehowa's 4-by-1 mile boys relay team took first place with a time of 17:25.32. Colonie Central and Shaker also sent relay teams to the national meet.

Banas said young runners such as Matt Shaffer will be the keys to Bethlehem's success next year.

"We have a very talented 10th-grade class, and next year, they'll all be juniors with a year under their belts," he said.

Bethlehem rowers lead ARC team at nationals

The Albany Rowing Center women's varsity 8 boat raced against the best teams in the country and placed ninth at the US Rowing National Youth Invitational Regatta June 5 and 6 on Harsha Lake outside Cincinnati.

In the 2,000-meter course, the seven seniors and two juniors from five area high schools turned in a final time of 7:25:39. Oakland (CA) Strokes Rowing Club had the winning time of 6:55:30.

The Albany boat was rowed by Sophia DeBlasi, Jaclyn Entringer, Molly Jaffe and Kate Madden from Bethlehem Central High School; Charlotte Glennie from Columbia; Kirsten Beil from Guilderland; Jamie Waterhouse from Ichabod Crane; and Zoe Rogers from Tamarac. The coxswain was Sari Lipnick from Bethlehem.

"This was great for us," Albany coach Steve Knapp said. "It was a good experience. We've got some people from that boat who'll be back next year. And this gave us the confidence to know we can compete against anybody.

"Our program is coming along very well. This is the second time in that last three years we've sent a boat [to Nationals]. And I think that it'll allow us to build a highly competitive program at the national level."

Knapp came to Albany three years ago from Creighton University in Omaha, Neb., where he was head coach of the women's varsity team.

Competing nationally required dedication and sacrifice for the high school rowers. Besides the rigorous training schedule, some of the crew missed their senior balls and others missed college achievement tests for this competition.

The girls, who launch their boat in the Hudson River six days a week rain or shine even dodging ice chunks in the Hudson in early spring for the love of the sport, were a come-from-behind team during the local season.

There were 85 clubs represented at the regatta from across the country. Fifty-six clubs competed in the New York state high school rowing championships for the opportunity to go to the national competition.

Feura Bush runners complete Freihofer's

Six runners from Feura Bush were among more than 3,200 competitors at the Freihofer's Run for Women 5-kilometer race June 5 in Albany.

Elizabeth Mooney led the contingent with a time of 20:43.6. Barbara Turi ran a time of 22:29.1, and Maryanne Barry finished with a time of 30:50.9.

Joan Winne (35:28), Tamara Arnason (38:29) and Nancy Lawson (38:42.6) also represented Feura Bush in the Freihofer's race.

New York Energy SmartSM Programs to Benefit All New Yorkers.

Albany, NY- To ensure a more energy independent future, New York State created the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSERDA) as a public benefit corporation to serve the state with programs promoting energy efficiency, economic growth, and environmental protection. In 1998, NYSERDA was designated administrator of New York's statewide public benefits program and New York Energy SmartSM was created.

To help consumers, New York Energy SmartSM programs are designed to bring lasting changes in purchasing habits, drive sales of ENERGY STAR[®] products, improve construction techniques, and deliver energy efficiency services. These programs help consumers better understand their energy use resulting in energy and money savings. To guide New Yorkers towards these benefits, New York Energy SmartSM programs offer certain financial incentives and assistance for residential customers, retailers, manufacturers, contractors, and builders. These programs strive to increase consumer demand for energy-efficient products and services while building an infrastructure to supply and deliver them.

The following are several New York Energy SmartSM programs offered to residential New Yorkers.

New York ENERGY STAR[®] Products Program

Increases promotion, sales and availability of ENERGY STAR labeled consumer products, such as clothes washers, freezers, dehumidifiers, ceiling fans, dishwashers, refrigerators, room air conditioners, and lighting products.

Home Performance with ENERGY STAR

Helps homeowners make energy efficiency improvements to their existing homes. A Building Performance Institute-certified contractor performs a Comprehensive Home Assessment to test the performance of your home with respect to health, safety, and energy efficiency. Reduced interest financing or incentives are available.

Assisted Home Performance with ENERGY STAR[®]

Provides additional assistance to income-qualified families participating in Home Performance with ENERGY STAR[®]

New York ENERGY STAR Labeled Homes

New homes built through this program incorporate increased insulation levels, high performance windows, as well as energy-efficient heating, cooling, lighting and appliances to achieve higher energy efficiency and comfort levels. By building a New York ENERGY STAR[®] labeled home, you know you've built a home that's more durable, more valuable, and gentler on the environment.

Funded by the System Benefits Charge (SBC), New York Energy SmartSM programs are designed to lower electricity costs by encouraging energy efficiency as the State's electric utilities move to competition. The SBC is paid by electric customers of Central Hudson, Con Edison, New York State Electric and Gas, Niagara Mohawk- a National Grid Company, Orange and Rockland, and Rochester Gas and Electric.

For more information about New York Energy SmartSM programs visit our website www.GetEnergySmart.org, or dial toll free 1-877-NY-SMART and speak with an operator.

students to participate in Sound Sensation, the group gives younger students a chance to work with older students and set their performance to a higher standard. Students are also less intimidated to try out a few months into the school year, he said.

He questioned the concept of creating a sixth grade only full-year choral group to replace Sound Sensation.

"The concept of a sixth-grade advanced group is highly questionable," he said. "Sixth grade students on their own do not have the range, vocal power and development, musicality and part-singing experience to study and perform advanced literature. However, in having the opportunity to sing and work with their older peers — seventh and eighth graders with more physically developed voices, more musical experience and maturity — cooperative learning takes place, and the whole becomes much more than the sum of its parts."

David Norman, the district's music department supervisor, disagreed with Pisanello's assessment of the decision.

"I am obviously going to argue that the recommendation makes sense musically and educationally," he said. "The sixth graders should be given the opportunity for the entire year select choral group. It can have some good benefits."

Superintendent Les Loomis explained the decision.

"I have worked with Dave Norman and (middle school principal) Dave Ksanzenak in bringing this to the board for these reasons," he said. "I have not seen the same K-12 strength in the choral program as I have seen in the band and orchestra. We are interested in doing this the right way. We want to continue with a seven and eight grade full-year program and want the sixth grade program to function the same way."

Many parents and students came to Pisanello and Sound Sensation's defense.

"Kids don't want to do Piping Rock because of the music selections," said parent Dave Van Deusen, who is also a musician. "Kids are in Sound Sensation because the music is fun. The challenges are there, and the performance caliber is not there in Piping Rock."

Loomis acknowledged there had been some problems with Piping Rock's previous director but he was confident that under the leadership of high school music teacher Jason Dashew, who took over Piping Rock this year, the group would turn around.

The board listened politely to discussion and said they did not usually question program decisions made by the administrative team.

However, the magnitude of the outcry from the 20 or more parents and students took more than one board member by surprise and a few expressed their displeasure that they were not better prepared by administration. The board only had one line in their packets, asking them to abolish the Sound Sensation stipend.

"Unfortunately, I've got one thing in front of me and that is to remove the stipend without any companion piece," said board member Jon Bartow. "I am concerned. I am eventually going to defer to administration but I'm troubled right now that this was presented as a one-liner with back-up."

Loomis explained that for an administration to propose a new position, the old one first had to be abolished.

Board member Stuart Lyman took Loomis to task.

"This board should have been treated fairly by giving us more information," he said. "I am willing to table this pending a full explanation. I am not prepared to sit here before the public and make a decision based on a one-liner."

Loomis said the complexity of the issue was unanticipated. While Richard Svenson joined Bartow and Lyman in a move to table the issue, they were outvoted by the other board members and the motion to abolish the stipend for the Sound Sensation director went forward.

"We are constantly facing these challenges but we primarily have to defer to the people we put in these positions who make these recommendations," said board member James Lytle. "At the end of the day, the benefit of the doubt is with those we've entrusted to make these decisions. This should not be seen as a referendum on Mr. Pisanello's talent and long service to the district. The question is how to see this program mature and grow. It seems worth it to me to give the new program a chance."

In her 33 years at Voorheesville, O'Brien taught grades four, five and six.

"Classrooms today are more flexible than they were when I began teaching," she said. "Children were in their seats all the time back then.

Today, with computers, there is more interaction and activities to keep them busy. As a result, they learn more from each other."

O'Brien said it still brings tears to her eyes when students having difficulties turn everything around and improve. "It happens every year," she said. "I see children who hate reading turn to literature, or a reluctant writer pick up a pen and enjoy it."

Both Burns and Principal Edward Diegel credit O'Brien's love of teaching with being an inspiration to her students.

"She is a super teacher who cares about her students but maintains high standards and expectations at the same time," Diegel said. "Most of all, she is consistent and loves her work. She never has a bad day, or if she does, never shows it."

Two of O'Brien's favorite memories include leading students in a play about New York's anti-rent wars in the 19th century and her sixth graders' medieval festival, reflecting their study of the Middle Ages.

With her fourth graders, O'Brien has ended their year of studying New York state with a musical production celebrating the state's cultural heritage. Included are songs and dances of the Iroquois, Dutch settlers, Shakers, Erie Canal workers and a rendition of "New York New York," recognizing Broadway's significance.

After leading the performance for the last time on June 4, Diegel, also retiring this year, presented her with a bouquet of roses for a job well done.

"I don't know what it's like to teach in other schools, but at Voorheesville you become part of a family," she said. "I know I will miss it."

Long time Voorheesville teacher, Mary Ellen O'Brien, turns over her classroom to new teacher Michael Burns. Burns was a student of O'Brien's in 1988.

COLDWELL BANKER PRIME PROPERTIES

Don't depend on "do-it-yourself"

While the American "do-it-yourself" approach has its advantages in many endeavors, it can cost you unnecessary time and money if you try to sell your home without professional assistance.

The overwhelming majority of homes that sell are listed with a real estate sales professional. In most markets, Realtors are responsible for over 90 percent of successful real estate transactions.

Rarely does anyone actually save money by selling their own home. By listing your home with a Realtor you are relieved of the costs of advertising your home, the inconvenience of showing your home to prospective buyers, and the time you might spend in talking to potential buyers who do not qualify to buy your home. In addition, your Realtor can help you realize the best price for your home and guide you through the complex legal process of transferring the title. Most importantly, a Realtor can provide a "higher quality" buyer, such as a transferee into the area. This type of serious buyer is more likely to pay top dollar for your home.

For professional advice on all aspects of buying and selling real estate, call me at Coldwell Banker Prime Properties, 518-640-4444 or email me at abbey@cbpp.com.

Central Park Festa celebrates Italian heritage

By ADRIENNE LANCHANTIN

Dolores Scalise has been helping to plan the Capiello Festa Italiana in Schenectady's Central Park for the eight years it has been in existence. In those eight years, she said, it has only grown.

This year's festival will kick off on Friday, June 25, and run through Sunday, June 27.

"As far as Italian festivals go, this is one of the largest," Scalise said. "We really wanted to promote our Italian heritage and our customs. We want everybody to walk away saying 'Wow, I learned something about the Italians.'"

And people will certainly be given the opportunity to learn.

One of these chances will be both on both Saturday and Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. when Italian Language classes will be held in the children's tent. Scalise said while these classes are geared mostly toward children, adults are also welcome.

Also on Saturday and Sunday at 3 p.m., Bob Cudmore will lead a discussion on "Growing up Italian: Our Customs and Traditions."

Scalise said these discussions will be a chance for people to discuss their memories of growing up with Italian traditions and customs in their households.

Now that's Italian!

There will also be a chance for people to show off their palm-weaving skills, or if this custom was not one his mandolin on the pavilion from 5 to 7 p.m., and on the park stage from 7 to 10 p.m., Benny Cannavo & The Accents, a local seven-piece band, will be performing.

The music will continue on Saturday, with Adamo playing throughout the day, as well as Italian native Gianni Mennillo playing his organetto, a Music Haven stage on Friday at 5:15 p.m. and on Saturday at 3 p.m. the children's theater will also be on the music haven stage performing

"Pinocchio Commedia."

With entertainment and Italian heritage events, the only thing left for the three-day event is the food, which will every bit as Italian as Mennillo and his Italian-style accordion.

The food demonstrations in the food tent, complete with Capiello cheeses and Dececco pastas, will begin on Friday at 4:30 p.m., and will continue from 1 to 4 p.m. on both Saturday and Sunday.

People may even catch a glimpse of Schenectady Mayor Brian Stratton cooking up some traditional Italian dishes, Scalise said.

And don't forget the wine.

Local winemakers are invited to bring their best red and white wines to the festa and take part in the annual homemade wine competition.

Scalise said first, second and third prizes will be handed out to the top red and white wines, and the winners will be announced on Sunday at 4 p.m.

Applications to enter the competition can be picked up at the festival.

One of Italy's most popular sports will also be featured at this year's festival with the first annual Schenectady three-on-three Soccer Shoot Out tournament.

The tournament will be ongoing both Saturday and Sunday, and Scalise said the committee expects more than 250 teams from throughout the area and the Northeast to take part. Anyone with a team of three is invited to sign up for the tournament.

Because of the soccer tournament, Scalise said she expects more than 20,000 people to attend the festa over the three days.

Other events include a demonstration by the Schenectady County Sheriff's Department and their K-9 unit on Friday at 6:30 p.m., a visit from Italian Vice Consul Stefano Acunto on Saturday evening, and a chance to meet the state lottery's star spokeswoman Yolanda Vega on Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m.

All events are free, Scalise said, except, of course, the food.

There will be several vendors at the festival, serving everything from Adirondack Kettle Corn to Dom's Fried Dough and Tiscione's Pizza.

people experienced growing up, there will be a chance to learn.

Lessons and demonstrations of the art of palm-weaving will take place on both Saturday and Sunday at 4 p.m., and will be facilitated by Loretta DeAngelus.

But the festa will also be about having fun, with several musical groups performing throughout the weekend.

Alyssa Rizzo will kick off the event at 5:15 p.m. on Friday with the American National Anthem, as well as the Italian National Anthem.

Also on Friday evening, Dominick Adamo, a festa regular, will be playing squeezebox type accordion. Mennillo will be playing at 6:30 and 8 p.m. on the Music Haven stage.

From 7 to 10 p.m. on the Music Haven stage, The Good Times will be performing for their eighth festival.

Adamo will be back again on Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. on the pavilion. Also, from 3 to 7 p.m., Schenectady's Sal Cannavo will be holding his "Extravaganza of Entertainment," with music, dancing and more.

The Schenectady Theatre for Children and the Ferrara Dance Studio will be performing.

The dance studio will be on the the Bonds, the "Financial Assistance"); and (E) the lease (with an obligation to purchase) or sale of the Project Facility to the Company or such other persons as may be designated by the Company and agreed upon by the Agency. The Agency is considering whether (A) to undertake the Project and (B) to provide certain exemptions from taxation with respect to the Project, including (1) exemption from mortgage recording taxes with respect to any documents recorded by the Agency with respect to the Project in the office of the County Clerk of Albany County, New York or elsewhere, (2) exemption from sales taxes relating to the acquisition, construction and installation of the Project Facility, (3) exemption from deed transfer taxes on any real estate transfers with respect to the Project, and (4) exemption from real estate taxes (but not including special assessments and special ad valorem levies), subject to the obligation of the Company to make payments in lieu of taxes with respect to the Project. If any portion of the Financial Assistance to be granted by the Agency with respect to the Project is not considered with the Agency's uniform tax exemption policy, the Agency will follow the procedures for deviation from such policy set forth in Section 874(b) of the Act prior to granting such portion of the Financial Assistance. If the Agency determines to proceed with the Project and the issuance of the Bonds, (A) the Project Facility will be acquired, renovated and installed by the Agency and will be leased (with an obligation to purchase) or sold by the Agency to the Company or its designee pursuant to a project agreement (the "Agreement") requiring that the Company or its designee make payments equal to debt service on the Bonds and make certain other payments and (B) the Bonds will be a special obligation of the Agency payable solely out of certain of the proceeds of the Agreement and certain other assets of the Agency pledged to the repayment of the Bonds. THE BONDS SHALL NOT BE A DEBT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK OR ALBANY COUNTY, NEW YORK, AND NEITHER THE STATE OF NEW YORK NOR ALBANY COUNTY, NEW YORK SHALL BE LIABLE THEREON. The Agency has not completed its review of the Project pursuant to Article 8 of the Environmental Conservation Law, Chapter 43-B of the Consolidated Laws of New York, as amended (the "SEQR Act"), and the regulations adopted pursuant thereto by the Department of Environmental Conservation of the State of New York, being 6NYCRR Part 617, as amended (the "Regulations"), and collectively with the SEQR Act, "SEQR"). After the Agency completes its review under SEQR, it expects to be able to adopt a resolution determining that the Project will not have a significant effect on the environment. The Agency will at said time and place hear all persons with views on either the location and nature of the proposed Project and the financial assistance being contemplated by the Agency in connection with the proposed Project or the proposed plan of financing the proposed Project by the issuance from time to time of the Bonds. A transcript or summary report of the hearing will be made available to the Town Board of the Town of Bethlehem, New York. Ap-
