Delmar fire dept. wants new $5M home

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

Delmar firefighters have outgrown their house of 65 years. After battling insufficient parking and storage space, the department is proposing a move to a new building on Delaware Avenue.

The topic will be the subject of a public informational meeting, scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 17, at 7 p.m. at the current firehouse at 145 Adams St.

The department, which answers 1,600 medical emergency calls and 300 fire calls a year, has just about doubled its membership in about 27 years, to 85 strong now.

The Delmar department is proposing construction of a $5 million joint facility for the rescue squad and the fire department, possibly where Verstandig's retail business stands now. Department officials said the project should have a minimal tax impact.

"We've outgrown the current facility, which has already been expanded three times," said John Smith, a Delmar Fire District commissioner. "There are more vehicles than space we have to put them."

Ex-trustee blasts library management

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

The administration of Bethlehem Public Library is out of touch with the community and with library staff, a former vice president of the library board charged at the board's October meeting.

Randy Fisher, who served two years on the board before resigning earlier this year, read a four-page statement addressing what he sees as three areas of concern regarding the library's management.

Fisher said library employees are afraid to speak out about their criticisms or complaints. Fisher also alleged the library is not being run properly.

"The management is very bloated and under-worked, performing clerical tasks when they are being paid management

Pilot shares war and peace stories

By MARTIN J. BANNAN

Voorheesville Elementary School students got a chance to observe Veterans Day a bit early this year. On Oct. 21, they gathered to meet and honor Army Capt. Kevin Burns, a hometown hero who many of the students got acquainted with last spring.

Burns, a 1996 graduate of Clayton A. Bouton High School, is a Blackhawk helicopter pilot on a 14-month deployment in Iraq. Together with his fellow troops from the 1st Aviation Battalion based in Germany, Burns spends his free time helping build a new school in the small farming village of Al Hamra, 15 miles west of Tikrit.

"Every unit stationed in Iraq has a partnership with a community helping them improve their standard of living," Burns said. "As a result, we feel more welcomed. Right now they need our help, and we are making a difference."

Burns added that the Iraqis look

Boy goes extra mile for injured man

Who knows what could've brought 14-year-old Brian Jubrey II out for an afternoon bike ride on Oct. 28, except perhaps a timely curiosity.

The two-mile-plus bike ride took the Slingerlands teen farther than he'd ever been along the old railroad tracks and to an injured man who needed help.

The area has been controversial lately, with town officials cautioning residents that although the tracks have been taken up, they are still private property and any people back there are technically trespassing.

The town is looking at making the former railroad bed into a connective recreation trail.

"I've always wondered how far I could ride my bike back there," Jubrey said. "I kept going a mile or two, and I ended up in places I didn't even know where I was. And I kept going."

Jubrey couldn't explain why he went so far, except to say that perhaps "Everything happens for a reason," which was his first question to his father when he got home later that evening, about four hours after he first left.

"I saw this guy, sitting up on the ground, just bleeding, bleeding. He had a bike, a bag of newspapers and a bottle of vodka next to him. I asked him 'Are you OK?'" Jubrey said. "He said he was fine."

Jubrey said the man was even alert

Soares, Breslin score impressive election wins

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

It's been settled.

A divisive district attorney's race full of nasty political rhetoric and, at times, questionable campaign tactics, is over, with Democrat David Soares winning against the Republicans and his former boss.

The race that, at first, pitted two attorneys who share the same ZIP code, against each other, was like a game of Chutes and business when he takes office in January.

Efforts to reach Cusick were unsuccessful.

Jeff Perez, the newly elected chairman of the Bethlehem Republican Committee, commended Clyne the night before the election.

"Paul Clyne is to be admired," Perez said of Clyne's dropping out to support Cusick. "He put public safety ahead of his personal political interests."

The race for the 46th Senate District was also somewhat atypical, with incumbent state Sen. Neil Breslin, D-Delmar, facing Democrat-turned-Republican Albany County Comptroller Mike Conners of Menands.

More typical was the result, as incumbency and party registration powered Breslin to a 74,067-50,209 win over Conners.

"I was fairly confident all the way through," Breslin said of his campaign for his fourth re-election.

"But they spent $1 million and I was concerned they were trying to buy the election," he said of the statewide Republican money that poured into the race.

Reform was the issue, both candidates agreed, though they differed about how to go about it. Conners, who was recruited by state Senate Majority Leader Joseph Bruno, R-Brunswick, touted his ability to get support from both sides of the political aisle, while Breslin promised that a Democratic revolution in the state Senate is looming.

Ladders, from a Sept. 14 primary upset to a solid election night win.

Soares, a Delmar resident, made his way up a ladder to beat incumbent District Attorney Paul Clyne in the Sept. 14 primary, having established among voters Rockefeller Drug Law reform as the top issue.

Clyne, also a Delmar resident, ran on the Independence line until hitting a chute, dropping out of the race days before the election to throw his support to the Republican challenger, Roger Cusick, a Loudonville attorney.

When Wednesday came, Soares had 69,779 votes to Cusick's 53,941. Despite dropping out, Clyne garnered 4,334 votes.

Registration in the county favors the Democrats by about 2-1.

Rockefeller Drug Law reform makes an annual appearance in Gov. George Eataki's State of the State address. Though the issue has not been resolved among lawmakers, Soares is confident that his election will be a catalyst for legislative action.

"Our campaign's victory has created real momentum for Rockefeller Drug Law reform, sending a signal to both district attorneys and state legislators that there is a political price to be paid for standing in the way," Soares said after his win.

He added that voting rights issues will be his first order of Nassau County Executive Tom Suozzi, founder of the political action committee called Fix Albany, endorsed a number of challengers across the state, citing the urgent need for reform of state government.

Breslin was the only incumbent Suozzi endorsed.

That endorsement, along with a few others and a solid victory margin had Breslin re-affirming his commitment to reform three major areas of state government come January.

Breslin noted that basic reform is needed in the Legislature, "the process of the way we do things," he said.

Then, health care and education, which make up 60 percent of state government spending are also ripe for reform, Breslin said.

Bethlehem Town Clerk Kathleen Newkirk estimated 70 percent of the town's 23,033 registered voters turned out Nov. 2. She was not surprised, noting the turnout typically ranges from 65 percent to 75 percent.

Town gets big response to survey

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

Bethlehem residents clearly care about the town's future, judging by the response to a survey about development and a new comprehensive plan.

Town officials have deemed the survey effort, designed to extract ideas about future development from a random sample of residents, a success, with a nearly 47 percent response rate.

In sending out 1,600 eight-page surveys, town officials and Saratoga Associates, the firm contracted by the town to help shape its comprehensive plan, hoped to get about 400, or 25 percent, filled-out surveys returned.

"It's fabulous," said Bethlehem Industrial Development Agency Chairman George Leveille of the 751 surveys that were returned.

Saratoga Associates staff have been scanning in the results, hoping to put together a summary of responses in time for the next Bethlehem Planning Advisory Committee meeting, scheduled for today.

"We got a really great response rate," said Mike Welti of Saratoga Associates. "It was close to 50 percent, which is exceptional, so we're pleased."

Leveille, who is also commissioner of the Department of

"We got a really great response rate. It was close to 50 percent, which is exceptional, so we're pleased."

Mike Welti

Public Works, said the town looked briefly at the returned surveys, though he said it was tough to get a sense of anything by looking at a series of circles on pages.

"(These surveys) will be a major basis for future planning in the town," Leveille said.

The town is nearing the end of the comprehensive planning process, with this survey designed to supplement focus group sessions on development in different parts of town and the philosophy of development the town should adopt for those areas.

Areas discussed included commercial districts, including the Route 9W corridor; greenways and trailways and how they pertain to recreation; rural and agricultural lands; and the riverfront.

Another survey effort is in the process of being completed, with rural and agricultural landowners having one more week to respond to a survey specifically designed to address their concerns.

Leveille said the town has received about 60 of those back so far. That survey was much smaller in scope, but Leveille said that effort is on track.

BPAC has been developing a draft comprehensive plan to guide development over the next 20 or 30 years, largely through amendments to the town zoning law.

Town officials have said the plan will be submitted to the town board, which has the final say on any zoning changes.

A townwide meeting has been scheduled Nov. 18, where the draft comprehensive plan will be unveiled.

New Scotland budget increases to almost $4.7M

By MARTIN J. BANNAN

Turnout may have been high on Election Day, but only a dozen people turned out for a public hearing the next day at New Scotland Town Hall to discuss the proposed 2005 budget and a new cell tower law.

According to Supervisor Ed Clark, budget expenditures will total nearly $4.7 million, a 9 percent increase above this year. The proposed budget includes costs for all operations in the town, as well as costs for sewer service, fire protection and ambulances.

Clark said that the increase is necessary to accommodate a reassessment of all properties in the town in order to equalize and bring them up to date.

Other increased costs include a 3 percent pay raise for town employees, repairs to Miller Road after a bridge collapse in July and rising costs for health insurance, retirements, energy and industrial materials.

"All of these increases leave us little opportunity to keep costs down," Clark said.

The proposed budget will raise $1.5 million from property taxes, an increase of $10 per $100,000 of assessed property value. In addition, Clark projects other revenues to total $2.7 million and proposes that $470,000 to be drawn from the town's reserve funds.

"We can raise taxes, cut services or dip into our reserves," Clark said. "We try best to do a combination of the three in order to minimize adverse impact."

One resident, Scott Schaible, expressed disappointment over the low number of people, 12 in all, attending the hearing.

"I'm just a citizen who wants to understand and be a part of what's going on," he said. "It concerns me that few people come out to meetings."

Board members agreed that they would like to see more participation, adding that meetings and minutes are posted on the town's Web page.

Schaible responded by suggesting the town explore airing its meetings on public cable television.

Councilman Scott Houghtaling offered to look into that idea, saying it might have possibilities.

Clark said the budget will be adopted at the Nov. 10 town board meeting.

At the hearing on the new cell tower law, consultant Peter Barber, a lawyer and former president of the Guilderland Zoning Board with experience in telecommunications law, reviewed the current draft of the proposal.

The proposed law requires applicants to provide visual concept plans and a comprehensive report before the planning board as well as meet all county, state and federal guidelines. Towers will be limited to sites in areas zoned residential/forest and cannot exceed 45 feet. Preference will be given to proposals locating transmitters on existing towers or other structures without increasing their height.

As for new towers, the law states that they shall be stealth structures, i.e., disguised as trees but blending in with surrounding vegetation. In addition, future towers must be a minimum of 500 feet from residences.

Barber recommended changes to the proposal calling for mandatory pre-application meetings and coordination with adjoining towns.

Barber also urged that the intent of the law as written on the introductory summary must emphasize that it is not aimed to discourage new cell towers.

"It must be a balanced approach to meeting the public's need for better cell phone coverage and maintaining the character of our town," he said.

Mark Pelersi, whose home sits next to a cell tower on Woods Hill Road, voiced concern about cell tower applicants adding too many antennas to existing towers.

"I don't want to see the tower grow and grow and grow," he said, adding that the arrays of antennae present more of an eyesore than the tower mast itself.

Barber responded that under the new law, applicants would need a special use permit to add new antennae, and in Pelersi's case, the 500-foot limit provision would prevent any new growth to the tower on Woods Hill Road.

Others present voiced concern about the high application fees and deposits.

One would-be landlord, Anthony Genovese, said he has land on Font Grove Road he would like to lease to a cell tower applicant.

In 2003, a proposal to build a tower on his land was rejected.

"They won't connect me to municipal water," Genovese said.

"If I can't use my land to generate revenue to pay the property taxes, I might have to sell out to a developer."

Can the red and blue peacefully coexist?

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

I should be happier: my guy won last week.

Maybe I wouldn't feel like there's this cloud following me if I'd been with fellow travelers when the victory became final. I was at work, in a room full of people wailing and gnashing their teeth at the news of W's election (I'd say re-election, but I really want my co-workers to keep talking to me).

I was glad to be a part-timer, able to leave early and go home to watch Kerry's concession speech and Bush's victory speech. I'll bet my colleagues were glad to see me go, so they could freely say what they had been thinking ... for the past four-plus years.

Here's what I mainly thought: thank goodness it's over, and that we won't be counting votes at Christmas. Thank goodness, too, that Bush won both the popular and the electoral college vote.

The dose of humility to go with being pleased at the election's outcome was probably good for my soul, and to have a visible reminder of the fact that the nation's population is split provided perspective, which is always a good thing.

That split actually feels more like a rift, which is probably another reason for my less-than-joyous post-election feeling.

We all have our ideas about how to fix that rift. I suspect that large parts of both sides have little interest in mending the rift or building a bridge over it. More likely, they'd just rather see everybody jump to their side — where, of course, the grass is so much greener — and those that don't come, or who fall in, well, the thinking might possibly go, that's just where they deserve to be.

Pundits and dissatisfied political partisans have suggested that we're too big and different to be just one nation.

That could be true. It seems like the main thing we have in common these days is, regardless of where we live, we all shop at the same stores: BJ's, Costco, Staples, Foot Locker. Isn't it weird that as our nation's business centers look more and more similar, the split in ideology shows us to be more dissimilar?

But, if we were a number of nations instead of just one, how boring that would be. Sure, we seek to live in places where people share our values, but it's also good to see that there are many different ways of thinking in the world and many different kinds of people.

We could really use a lot more tolerance in our nation. Democrats would probably say that they feel exactly as put upon, but this past election really felt like open season on Republicans in general, and Bush in particular.

married couple of former president and current New York senator that I find...oops, time to zip my lip.

My wish for a more courteous America isn't a wish for a politically inactive one, though. We Americans don't get enough credit for being passionate, and firmly believing in our causes. Can we mix conviction with civility? Can we remain firmly convinced of our side of the debate and still listen to each other?

We work so hard to raise our children without prejudice regarding race, religion or economic class — can we extend that to political parties without compromising what we believe in?

We could really use a lot more tolerance in our nation. Democrats would probably say that they feel exactly as put upon, but this past election really felt like open season on Republicans in general, and Bush in particular.

Does it really help to have bumper stickers that say, "A village in Texas called. It's missing its idiot"?

Sigh, this is America, and we're allowed to express ourselves. There's also the opportunity for humor in political jabs, and while I prefer the Saturday Night Live even-handed mock debates, or the online "Jib Jab" songs, we could all use a dose of humor.

I also have to take my lumps and can't call for a verbal truce unless I promise to mend my ways and never again attack the

When discussing discrimination, we're quick to talk about the importance of not labeling. Now, though, the nation has been labeled red or blue, and vegans ran weeping from Manhattan health food stores when they heard the news of W's re-election. What would they say if Republicans had run from gun shops if Kerry had been elected? And yes, that over-the-top depiction of Democrats as vegetarians and Republicans as gun-toting was intentional. I know Republicans who shop at food co-ops and Democrats who hunt — don't you? I also know Republicans who live in small houses and Democrats who drive SUVs. Don't you?

It would be nice if we could drop a few more labels when talking about others, and make sure that if we're labeling ourselves, we're being accurate. Don't tell me you're liberal and then deride people west of East Coast cities who think differently than you and didn't vote for your candidate. Don't tell me you're tolerant of other people's beliefs and then listen to what I have to say only so you can pick certain points to argue. I may disagree entirely with you, but I like to think I'm still capable of listening, and I will turn your words over in my head for days to come.

How do we decide what we think of each other? I'm going to work really hard not to judge you, although I certainly will form an opinion of you. I'm going to base it on whether you interact honestly yet kindly with the people in your life; how you speak to me, how you treat your spouse, your children, your neighbors, the neighborhood dogs — and countless little things as you go through your day. Your political thoughts will also shape my opinion of you, but unless you're extreme — in either direction — those opinions probably aren't going to be a deal-breaker in our relationship.

It's a naïve, optimistic wish, that we can be one nation and respect our differences to the point of remaining civil to one another. After a long, hard political season, though, maybe it's time for a little optimism as we head for our nation's unique Thanksgiving holiday.

V'ville sets hearing on multiple housing

By MARTIN J. BANNAN

Although there are currently no plans for new multiple housing unit projects in Voorheesville, the village board of trustees is discussing how laws should be drafted should the board be faced with such a proposal.

At a recent meeting, the board postponed voting on an amendment to regulate such units to allow for further discussion.

According to Building Superintendent Gerry Gordinier, multiple housing is defined as apartment buildings, condominiums, multiple dwellings, cooperatives and senior housing.

unanimously to limit lawn and garage sales to three days and allow individuals to hold only three of them in any 12-month period.

"We hope these proposals will help maintain the integrity of our neighborhoods," said Gordinier. "Permanent garage sales create traffic problems from congestion and people turning their cars around in other people's driveways. We're trying to fine-tune the laws to everyone's best interest."

In other business, Stevens announced that Canadian Pacific Railroad will erect berms on both sides of a railroad trestle no longer in use. After Canadian Pacific removed the railroad tracks in June, the right-of-way has attracted walkers and bicyclists, Stevens said.

"We don't have anything on the books. We need to set parameters for multiple housing units."

John Stevens

He said the village can expect such a proposal soon. He added that St. Matthew's Church is still deciding whether to sell or lease land for a senior housing complex.

"We don't have anything on the books. We need to set parameters for multiple housing units," said Mayor John Stevens.

Of main concern, Gordinier said, is possible leakage from septic systems into the aquifer from which the village gets its municipal water supply.

To prevent this, Gordinier suggested that all proposed multiple residences be linked to the village's water and sewer.

He also proposed a 100-foot setback between new complexes and single-family homes.

Gordinier added that he explored zoning laws in other towns and modeled the proposal after Guilderland's law.

"Guilderland requires a 100-foot setback for multiple housing units as well as municipal water and sewer service," he said. "I thought the setback ought to also include parking lots because of lighting and petroleum leakage."

Stevens asked if the setback included the road. After some discussion, board members agreed to revise the proposal to allow a 50-foot setback from the road.

Speaking as a resident, Village Justice Ken Connolly voiced concern that this change might allow future development, particularly on property owned by St. Matthew's, to encroach on residents' property.

"I don't think we should change the law because we anticipate somebody doing future development," he said. "Let's protect the people already living in the neighborhood."

Connolly said he prefers that the land behind St. Matthew's remain vacant but he would be in favor of senior housing if it is done right.

Stevens responded that the board is still in the process of refining the law and has scheduled another public hearing for Tuesday, Nov. 23, at 6 p.m.

In another matter, Voorheesville board members voted

Kindness of strangers

'After the shocking incident in Albany recently involving a homeless man and some teenagers who allegedly taunted and beat him and burned his possessions in the shopping cart he used, we are happy to highlight the actions of a teenager who is a true Good Samaritan.

It's especially gratifying to hear a good news story about a 14-year-old boy who came to the aid of a complete stranger.

Editorial

Brian Jubrey of Slingerlands was out for a bike ride in the late afternoon of Oct. 28 when he came across a man who was bleeding profusely next to an old railroad bed.

The man assured the boy that he was fine, and Jubrey continued on his way. But Brian couldn't help wondering if the man really was OK, so he turned around and went back to help him.

When he found the man, there was blood all over his face, and he admitted he could use some help.

The boy ran off through brambles until he reached a house and knocked on the door of another stranger, Judy Lasher, who was at first reluctant to let him in. But Brian's determination paid off, and Lasher followed the boy who was trying so hard to help the injured man.

Lasher said the boy was very kind administering to the man as they waited for the rescue squad and police to arrive.

Lasher, a teacher, was so taken by Brian Jubrey's actions that she came to Spotlight Newspapers office and told us about what the boy had done and that she believed he was a genuine hero.

The man, by the way, survived the ordeal and was later released from the hospital.

We're very glad Lasher stopped by. Brian Jubrey deserves recognition for looking out for a stranger. He is obviously a caring young man with much generosity of spirit and a level head on his shoulders.

He is a perfect example of following through on "doing the right thing." Some teenagers and some adults might not have gone the distance for a stranger who was clearly in trouble and in need of help. But Jubrey persisted and after the ordeal said philosophically that he believes "Everything happens for a reason."

All too often we recognize only the wrongs people do rather than focus on acts of kindness that show the better side of our nature.

Turn kids on to joy of reading

By MICHELLE F. BAYUK

The writer is marketing director of The Children's Book Council, a nonprofit trade association that promotes the use and enjoyment of children's books and related literacy materials for young people and is the official sponsor of Young People's Poetry Week and Children's Book Week.

The week of Nov. 15 through 21 marks the 85th annual celebration of Children's Book Week, and this year's theme is "Let's Book."

Building upon the energy and fun of this theme, Children's Book Week introduces young people to new authors and new ideas through books.

During Children's Book Week, parties, story times, author visits and other literacy activities will take place throughout your community.

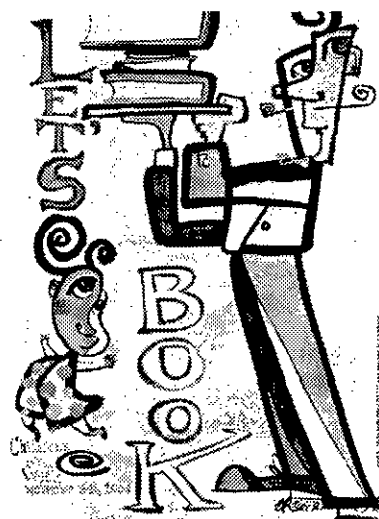

The Children's Book Council, the national sponsor of Children's Book Week, encourages all parents and caregivers to spend time with their kids this week exploring the exciting world of children's books in a bookstore or library.

The first Children's Book Week celebrated the goal of bringing parents, teachers, librarians, booksellers and publishers together "to talk about books and reading and, out of our knowledge and love of books, to put the cause of children's reading squarely before the whole community and, community by community, across the whole nation. For a great nation is a reading nation," said Frederic G. Melcher, co-founder of Children's Book Week.

Eighty-five years later, this noble cause is as important as ever before. During Children's Book Week, and indeed every week, parents have the wonderful opportunity to share with their kids the joy and wonder of reading.

Reading is a tool, a tremendous tool, without which life is very difficult. But reading can, and should, also be an enjoyable, moving and exciting experience.

Everyone who's ever cried with Wilbur the Pig, laughed with Charlie and Willie Wonka, run with Tom and Huck, or just spent an afternoon with Harry Potter, knows how a book can change lives in ways both great and small.

Take your children to hear an author speak, or to see a storyteller perform, or to visit the local library or bookstore and spend time looking through books.

Look at the covers and the pictures inside; read the descriptions, a few pages, or even the entire book. Take a couple of books home with you.

If you can't go out, celebrate at home. Read your favorite books together. Act out a favorite scene. Have a party featuring snacks from your kids' favorite stories, such as Stone Soup or Green Eggs and Ham.

Reading shouldn't be a chore, and there's no better way to make reading fun for your children than to make it a family activity.

You'll have a great time with your family and give your children a love for this valuable experience that will serve them well for the rest of their lives. So this year, join the party — Let's Book.

The Children's Book Council Web site (www.cbcbbooks.org) has a long list of activities for Children's Book Week.

BC music concerts are outstanding

Editor, the Spotlight:

I recently had the pleasure of attending two superb concerts at Bethlehem Central High School. Of course I was attending as a faithful parent, but here's the news I'd like to broadcast to The Spotlight readership: these concerts are great entertainment!

The audience was treated to a wide variety of music that showcased the talents of both the students and music faculty.

Orchestra, Band and Wind Ensemble selections included a spirited medley of show tunes from the musical "Annie", a rousing rendition of the 1812 Overture (with "cannon shots" provided very credibly by bass drums), Lecuona's captivating "Malaguena," Huckleby's haunting "Secrets of McDougal's Cave" and Joio's award-winning "Scenes From the Louvre".

Choral highlights included a dramatic performance of "Battle of Jericho," a medley of Joni Mitchell songs, and "Seasons of Love" from the popular show "Rent."

The male a capella group brought down the house with "Landscape," tongue-in-cheek arrangements of "Mary Had a Little Lamb" in four styles ranging from Gregorian chant to opera.

The Jazz Ensemble closed the program with two swinging numbers, "Stormy Weather," (with soulful vocals provided by All-State soprano Amy Van Deusen), and "Opus One".

If you've never been to a BCHS concert, I invite you to come and hear what you're missing.

You'll not only be amazed by the talent and dedication of local students, nurtured by the school district's extraordinary and professional music faculty, you'll also have an enjoyable evening and leave humming.

Upcoming concerts include Jan. 6, 10, and 12 at the high school. All performances begin at 7:30 p.m.

Another notable event is the Area All-State Concert to be held Saturday, Nov. 21, at Saratoga, featuring performances by Bethlehem and other area students who were selected based on their solo performances at the NYSSMA (New York State School Music Association) evaluation.

For a complete list of concert dates, please visit the Web site at: <http://bcsd.k12.ny.us/departments/music/highschoolconcertdates.htm>.

All concerts are free and open to the public.

Matters of Opinion

Reader takes issue with POV column

Editor, The Spotlight:

In response to the bachelor Point of View recently, I think we are perhaps fortunate that Mr. Pagano is not a parent. (Some suggested reading for him is an article in the Oct. 18 Evangelist called "Babies impact families")

I do not agree that being self-centered helps "prepare you for marriage," as he implies in his article.

Maybe this article was meant to be humorous, but if I were a child of any age and I read the article, I would not feel very good about myself.

I would not want to think of myself as a loud, dirty and expensive liability. I would want to grow up secure and confident that I was wanted, and that someone loved me just because I was me. The article was the same old bachelor stuff until the name-calling started.

This town is full of wonderful children. I know because I teach many of them. Why not come to any of our schools and see how we work on being kind to others?

We at Hamagrael have a saying "No put downs, pass it around." Shame on you, Mr. Pagano, for not choosing your words nicely.

Marriage is based on love, not obligation

Editor, The Spotlight:

With my son on the verge of exchanging marital vows this coming January, and myself well in to my 31st year of a happy marriage, I read with interest Damian Pagano's recent Point of View extolling the simple joys of bachelorhood.

Many readers, I am sure, will easily see the weakness in Mr. Pagano's praise of spoiling food. Personally, I remember the college days when all you could find in the fridge for dinner was a jar of mayonnaise. The trick was to see what else you could find in the kitchen to go with it.

And, frankly, it's hard for me to get all melancholy over the days of mayonnaise and saltines.

Other readers, I am sure, will take Mr. Pagano to task for his broad characterization of children as "dirty, expensive, loud, little liabilities that are bound to cause ulcers and hair loss."

I will only note that unlike Mr. Pagano's father, I still have most of my hair despite having raised two beautiful children, neither of whom I would ever consider a liability.

But where I really take exception to Mr. Pagano's article is in his contention that "life's too short to obligate yourself (to marriage)."

And so, just to set the record straight, I'd like Mr. Pagano to know that:

I don't feel obligated to love my wife of 30-plus years, it's just something that comes naturally to me.

I don't feel obligated to come home every night to have dinner with her after work, there's just nowhere else I'd rather be at that particular time.

I don't feel obligated to hold her hand whenever and wherever we walk together, I just enjoy keeping her that much closer to me.

I didn't feel obligated to raise a family with her, it was just the natural extension of the love we've shared for each other over the years.

I don't feel obligated to share my bed with her every night, we keep the thermostat down low and I'd freeze without her.

And I sure don't feel obligated to kiss her and tell her I love her every night before I go to bed, because I do.

If Mr. Pagano is inclined to dismiss all of the above as obligations of marriage, I can only hope that some day, somewhere, Mr. Pagano finds someone who becomes as big of an obligation as my wife is to me.

Boys volleyball ends successful season

Editor, The Spotlight:

We have just completed another Bethlehem boys volleyball season.

We would like to give a big thanks to Beff's restaurant for donating the ice to keep our beverages cold for our snack stand at every home game. They were very gracious every time I came to fill our buckets before each game.

We would also like to congratulate varsity coach Jim Lemoire, JV coach Jimbo O'Keefe and each team member for another successful and exciting season.

5 Rivers Friends thank volunteers

Editor, The Spotlight:

Friends of Five Rivers is a nonprofit citizens group which supports and complements the state Department of Environmental Conservation programs at Five Rivers Environmental Education Center. Friends of Five Rivers is supported by membership, donations, grants and fund-raising activities such as the annual birdseed sale.

But this letter of appreciation is not about Five Rivers or the Friends; it is about the volunteers that helped lift and load 45,000 pounds of birdseed (almost one and one half tractor-trailer loads) and those who fed the volunteers on Oct. 16, as well as those who helped again on Oct. 23.

As in many past years, GE Plastics provided a large forklift and a skilled (and much appreciated) operator to unload the heavy pallets from the truck in the early morning hours of pickup day. DEC's Five Rivers staff helped us prepare for pickup day.

Among the volunteers were dedicated Friends board members, many general members and families and students from the Participation in Government class at Bethlehem Central High School, all working toward the goals of a successful fund-raiser.

This dedicated mix of volunteers provides the living, working definition of community service, teamwork and volunteerism.

We all had fun and accomplished our goal. The Friends group is proud and thankful that the volunteers felt our cause was important enough to give up a Saturday to lift and load bags of birdseed into your cars and trucks.

While each volunteer will receive our personal thanks, they also deserve public recognition for their contribution. If you happen to be fortunate enough to know any of the volunteers or you are a parent, a friend, a spouse, a teacher or a leader of any of the volunteers, you are entitled to a bit of special pride in that person or group.

Thanks to those of you who bought birdseed from the Friends of Five Rivers; thanks to the volunteers that made the 2004 sale a success.

We hope to see all of you next year at the birdseed sale and throughout the year at the center enjoying the environment and the excellent educational programs.

Wal-Mart is big letdown

Editor, The Spotlight:

When Wal-Mart and Lowe's stores were proposed here in Glenmont, there was quite a bit of controversy.

After much deliberation, citing many pros and cons, last year both stores opened. I'll admit I wasn't for them at first, but as time went on I have really enjoyed their availability and convenience.

I must say Lowe's is a pleasure to shop in. The store is clean, shelves are well-stocked, and the attendants are courteous and helpful.

Unfortunately, Wal-Mart has turned out to be a big disappointment. The store hasn't even been open a year, and it's a total mess. The shelves are never fully stocked. They're usually empty or nearly empty.

The clothes in packages — socks, underwear, etc. — are never in their right place. Some packages are even open.

In the food department, many groceries have been opened and left on the shelves. Last week, I was in Wal-Mart for about 45 minutes. The whole time I was there, a glass bottle of applesauce lay on the floor and was never cleaned up. The entire store is unkempt and unsightly.

After all the controversy that went into putting this store here in Glenmont, I would think the Wal-Mart would have done a better job than they are doing.

Apparently, the people that were fighting against putting Wal-Mart here were right after all.

Verstandig's says thank you to community

Editor, The Spotlight:

On behalf of all of us at Verstandig's Florist, I would like to extend my thanks to all who made our first Halloween party such a great success.

First and foremost, we would like to thank the children and families who attended the event. Your enthusiasm was contagious! You are among the very best cupcake decorators and gourd bowlers Delmar has ever seen. We hope this event will become an annual tradition for you.

We would also like to thank the people who gave so much of their time and talent, like Val Kropp of Sweets and Treats who not only provided the candy for the cupcake decorating bar, but she was also up half the night baking.

Thanks also to Tessa Kansas and her friend Emma who assisted with the ghost pop craft, Taryn Ostroff who challenged the children to a word search game, Peggy Maguire and Bailey (aka Dorothy and Toto), and Diane Goggin and her pygmy goat Butthead. A huge thanks goes to Jeff Ostroff who supervised the gourd bowling and the pin-the-nose-on-the-Jack o'lantern game.

Thanks also to our Pride of New York partners, Brian Gallup of Helluva Good Cheese for the cheese snacks, Crowley Foods for the apple cider, crafter Kim Mahar Hand Knits and Noreen Coxon of Harvest Kitchen Homegrown Soups.

Most importantly, thank you to all of the parents who came out on Saturday to share in the good times. We hope you had as much fun as we did!

See you in 2005.

Thanks to all who helped look for lost dog

Editor, The Spotlight:

To all the wonderful people who helped us search for our little white dog, Pepi, we thank you so much.

After five days and four nights, Pepi is now back with us. Words cannot express our gratitude to all who helped.

We would especially like to thank the bus drivers and staff for Bethlehem Central schools (especially bus driver Pat MacCormack and bus attendant Cindy Grovenger), the Bethlehem police and animal control officers, the gentleman from the Water Department, workers from the town garage, all the wonderful residents of Dover Estates, Elm Estates, Haswell Farms and the Enclave at Glenmont (including the elementary school students who felt it important enough to call us about sighting Pepi and put out food for him), Lou Ferazzi, Shirley Nasner, Tracey Waters, Tricia Kandefer-Margic, Stephanie Thompson, Nanette Mayes, Pat Bini, Kim Verner, Ann Wordelmann and Erma Klein who helped us look for countless hours as Pepi criss-crossed the area looking for home. It was an ordeal with a happy ending that mightily reinforced our belief that we live in a community filled with caring people.

Residents should know about fire district's plan

Editor, The Spotlight:

I think all residents of the Delmar Fire District need to be aware of the fact that the Delmar Fire Department is rapidly moving forward to purchase the property along Delaware Avenue across the street from Bethlehem Public Library. I had heard this rumor over the summer and contacted the fire district to find out more.

In my subsequent discussions with fire commissioners, I have learned that the current proposal is to build a new firehouse with an attached eight-bay structure for fire and ambulance vehicles. The cost of this project will be passed along to the taxpayers of the Delmar Fire District. This would be in addition to the proposed increase in Albany County taxes. Preliminary estimates indicate the bond issue would be at least $8 million. I am not aware what the term of the bonds would be or the interest rate, so cannot begin to estimate the per household tax assessment.

I have recently been informed by the commissioners that there will be informational fliers mailed to all residents of the district. Look for these very soon. There will also be two public information meetings, tentatively scheduled for Nov. 17 and Dec. 1, to be held at the Delmar Fire Station on Adams Street. The public vote to approve the bond issue has been tentatively scheduled for Dec. 14.

I urge all residents of the district to become informed on this matter and vote on Dec. 14.

Book sale to benefit RCS schools

Barnes & Noble Booksellers is holding a book fair at its Colonie store this week to support literacy and intergenerational programming at Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk's elementary schools.

On Friday, Nov. 12, Barnes & Noble customers who present a special yellow voucher to the cashier when making a purchase will ensure that a portion of the proceeds will benefit RCS elementary schools. The proceeds will be donated to Stars Interger Corporation, a nonprofit organization that provides intergenerational programming for the RCS School District. Proceeds will support the intergenerational programs and the purchase of reading books for A.W. Becker Elementary School, which serves many Bethlehem students, and Pieter B. Coeymans Elementary School in Ravena. Twenty-two Bethlehem seniors participate in the intergenerational programs offered by Stars Interger Corporation.

The Barnes & Noble book fair will take place from noon to 11 p.m. at the Colonie store, which is located at 20 Wolf Road. From 7 to 8 p.m., New York's first lady Libby Pataki will make an appearance at the store to sign copies of her new children's book, Madison in New York, the story of a young girl who takes her dog on a trip to New York City. Like all other books in the store, anyone buying a copy of Pataki's book and presenting the RCS voucher will directly help the lives of RCS students and Stars volunteers.

Free gift wrapping will be available. Anyone planning to go to the Barnes and Noble store that day should pick up a yellow voucher in the main offices of the RCS school buildings, Bethlehem Public Library lobby, at local Bethlehem businesses or by contacting Stars Interger Corporation at 439-1505.

Stars Interger Corporation recruits adults ages 60 and older to volunteer in RCS elementary-school classrooms and to mentor middle-school students. The Stars volunteers provide children with individualized attention to help them strengthen fundamental skills and bolster their self-esteem. The nonprofit also runs an intergenerational program at Van Allen Senior Apartments in Glenmont, where RCS middle-school students meet with residents weekly to develop friendships and team up on community service projects.

Libraries, librarians go beyond the call

Here are some interesting facts about New York State libraries and librarians, compiled by the Upper Hudson Library System from New York State Libraries: How They Stack Up (www.nysl.nysed.gov/libdev/stackup.htm):

New York State provides $66.8 million in state aid to public libraries but the estimated value of services provided by public libraries in the state is $838 million. That's $12.50 worth of services for every $1 of state aid.

Those services are provided by 12,900 librarians, who work a combined total of 27 million hours a year.

More than half of New York State residents are card-carrying public library users. More than 10 times as many folks visit public libraries in New York State each year than attend the state's professional baseball, basketball, football and hockey games combined (Think about that, Mr. Steinbrenner!).

New York State's libraries

Check It Out
Bethlehem Public Library

hold 11 items for each New York State resident. That totals out to over 210 million items.

Bethlehem Public Library is proud to be a part of this extraordinary network. Our own facts and numbers are available on our annual report bookmark. Patrons can pick up a copy at the library.

Upcoming programs

What does the library have to offer? This week's schedule offers a sampling of the broad reach of programs available here at the library.

• On Tuesday, Nov. 16, at 7 p.m., high school students and their parents can learn the ins and outs of financing higher education in "Paying for College." Bill Burke of Burke, Miller Associates returns to talk about how financial aid works, how to negotiate an aid package, how single parents can cope with college costs and more.

• As long as you heed a few basic guidelines, Internet shopping is convenient and safe. Hone your Internet shopping skills with "Shopping on the Web" on Thursday, Nov. 18, at 2 p.m. Get tips on product research, merchant catalog navigation and secure-payment transactions.

• The Capital District Harmonica Club joins us again on Friday, Nov. 19, at 2 p.m. Eight harmonica players and a guitarist will perform old-time waltzes, jazz, polkas and Latin rhythms. Hum along with the old tunes you know. This free event is co-sponsored by Bethlehem Senior Projects.

• Middleschoolers are invited to "Book Bites," a potluck supper with a literary twist on Friday, Nov. 19, at 7 p.m. Bring a dish to share that's inspired by a book you've read. Dinner guests will talk about their books between mouthfuls.

To register for one or all of the above programs, call 439-9314.

Computer classes

Hands-on computer classes for adults are offered regularly on a rolling basis.

Three levels are offered, from very basic to advanced.

If you are new to this technology, we can allay your fears and get you started. If you're an old hand, we can expand your knowledge. Call the library at 439-9314 for more information.

Klopfer leads Blackbirds to long-awaited title

By ROB JONAS

Soccer fans in Voorheesville and New Scotland can relax now. The Voorheesville Blackbirds have returned to their lofty perch as Section II champions.

Greg Klopfer scored two goals and assisted on another to lead Voorheesville past Taconic Hills 4-1 in last Saturday's class B boys soccer title game at Colonie Central High School.

It's the first Sectional boys soccer title for Voorheesville since 1992, and it sends the Blackbirds into their first regional game since 1990.

"I had always thought of them as a power, and I was surprised to see when I looked up at the banner in the gym that it had been 12 years since they won a Sectional title," first-year coach F.J. Zwicklbauer said.

Klopfer notched his first goal in the opening half to put the Blackbirds ahead 1-0. He struck again less than 10 minutes into the second half to double Voorheesville's lead, and the Blackbirds were on their way to the title.

"Their defense gave a lot of room in the back, so you could get by them and attack," Klopfer said.

"He has the ability to go in there and create a goal, and you've got to give him a chance and the freedom to go in there and create a goal," Zwicklbauer said.

Voorheesville's defense did the rest. The Blackbirds kept Taconic Hills off the scoreboard until James Frederick tallied with less than four minutes left

"I don't think Taconic Hills had their best game, but I think our guys came out so hard and played so well that I think we just slowly knocked down their confidence until they started to doubt themselves in the second half."

The victory gave Voorheesville an opportunity to celebrate a championship and Zwicklbauer an opportunity to put a tumultuous six months behind him.

"It's been a great experience for me, and it's almost saved me," Zwicklbauer said. "Not having a job for six months and going through everything with selling the (Bavarian Chalet) restaurant, (coaching has) helped me focus on something else and get some of my confidence back."

F.J. Zwicklbauer

in the second half. By that point, Voorheesville had a commanding 4-0 lead.

"I don't think Taconic Hills had their best game, but I think our guys came out so hard and played so well that I think we just slowly knocked down their confidence until they started to doubt themselves in the second half," Zwicklbauer said.

"We knew who their star players were, and we figured that if we could shut them down, we would win the game," Klopfer said.

The Blackbirds survived a semifinal scare from Chatham last Wednesday to get to the finals. Voorheesville built a 2-0 lead and withstood a Chatham charge to pull out a 2-1 win at LaSalle Institute.

"Every great team has to learn to win when their game is not on," Zwicklbauer said. "Our passing game was not working ... but they came together and worked hard."

It looked good for Voorheesville early on. Klopfer sent a crossing pass to Greg Jones, who charged in front of the Chatham goal. Jones' first shot was blocked, but the rebound came back to him and he tucked the ball under the crossbar to put the Blackbirds ahead 1-0.

Voorheesville's second goal was more unorthodox. Chatham cleared the ball out of its penalty box, but it went directly to Ben Keller. Keller lofted a high arcing shot that sailed over the goalkeeper's hands and landed just inside the goal to double the Blackbirds' lead.

Chatham tallied late in the first half to cut Voorheesville's lead in half and had several scoring chances early in the second half, but the Blackbirds recovered and dominated the final 20 minutes to secure their spot in the finals.

"We had to beat them at their game, and that's why it was such a huge win," Zwicklbauer said. "They're kind of like Gunderland in that way. They take you out of your game."

Voorheesville faces another challenge Wednesday when it travels to Chittenango High School east of Syracuse to play Section III champion Westhill in the regionals.

"I know they came on strong toward the end, and they had a lot of one-goal wins," Zwicklbauer said. "But, I think we're at the point where the guys are focused and well prepared."

Eagles fall in semifinals

The Bethlehem boys soccer team lost in the Sectional semifinals for the second consecutive year.

Corey Dempsey's goal late in the second half propelled Shenendehowa to a 2-1 victory over the Eagles in last Thursday's class AA playoff game at Colonie.

The Plainsmen took the lead on Matt Rosenthal's first-half goal, but Chris Dudek tied the game early in the second half for Bethlehem.

The Eagles continued to mount steady offensive pressure in the second half, but they could not get another shot past Kyle Boni, who made eight saves for Shen.

Bethlehem finished the season with a 14-4-2 record and the Suburban Council Gold Division title.

Indians roll into regionals with impressive win

By TOM JOHNSON

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk football team used Saturday's Section II, Class B Super Bowl not only as an opportunity to add a championship to the program's rich tradition, but also as a chance to showcase its talents on both sides of the football.

The Indians scored touchdowns on their first seven possessions of the afternoon and held a talented Lansingburgh offense to one first down through three quarters to defeat the Knights 59-28 at Wilbur H. Lynch Sports Stadium in Amsterdam.

The victory served as a measure of revenge for Ravena, which suffered a 31-13 loss to Lansingburgh in the 2003 class B title game. The Indians beat the Knights 44-0 earlier this season.

"Tremendous effort from top to bottom," Ravena coach Gary VanDerzee said. "They often amaze me at game time on their ability to prepare for a game. They often come in with a mental preparedness that is tough to equal."

The physical Indian offensive line played a key role throughout, opening gaping holes for running back Ryan Cross, who led the offensive explosion with a season-high 181 yards on 16 carries and three touchdowns. Junior quarterback Tim Jordan also came through big, passing for two touchdowns and running for another in helping his team jump out to a comfortable 46-0 advantage. Cross scored on runs of 13, 47 and 51 yards in the first half while Jordan reached the end-zone on a 62-yard scamper at the beginning of the third quarter.

Ravena amassed 390 yards of total offense, and Cross and Jordan were quick to credit the "men in the trenches" for the foundation of their big plays.

"I could not ask for more from my offensive line, and I can't single one person out," Cross said. "Josiah Quinn, Jeff Correll, Miles DeBacco, Zach Snide — they were all tremendous."

"A lot of our offensive production has to do with the way our offensive line steps up and plays every game," Jordan added. "They set everything up for us, and we try to take advantage as best we can."

After shutting down Lansingburgh on a fourth-down conversion attempt on the opening drive of the game, the Indians (10-0) did not waste any time putting points on the board. Fullback John Lynch scored on a one-yard run with 4:52 remaining in the quarter. Cross added his touchdowns over the next two quarters, and Jordan found wide receiver Ryan Ruxton with a 30-yard pass to give Ravena a 34-0 lead at halftime.

Jordan added his touchdown run on a quarterback keeper and connected with tight end Eric Stott with a seven-yard touchdown toss to make it 46-0 at the end of three quarters.

Playing primarily against Ravena's reserves, Lansingburgh (8-2) tallied 28 fourth quarter points. Running back Mike Hepp scored twice while quarterback Ben Weber and fullback A.J. Feraci registered one touchdown a piece.

"This was a real good football team (Ravena) we played, and I knew coming in they did not have too many weaknesses," Lansingburgh coach Pete Porcelli said.

"I thought if we had some breaks then we would have a chance to win. Our goal was to make the Super Bowl, and we didn't want it to be like this. We wish them the best of luck."

Ravena hosts Peru (Section VII), which upset Saranac Lake last weekend, Friday at 7 p.m. Jordan and the rest of the Indians are looking forward to the contest.

"Peru has a strong offense where they can run the ball hard and they pass well," Jordan said. "I think we will be prepared just like we are for every other game."

Cardinal honor

Delmar's Amanda Oliver was named SUNY Plattsburgh Student Athlete of the Week after helping the Cardinals place fifth at the SUNYAC Women's Tennis Tournament. Oliver reached the semifinals in No. 6 singles.

"They often amaze me at game time on their ability to prepare for a game. They often come in with a mental preparedness that is tough to equal."

Freshmen lead Voorheesville at Sectional meet

By ROB JONAS

Voorheesville has discovered its love for cross country running.

After years of struggling to field competitive squads, Voorheesville's boys and girls teams each placed in the top five at last Friday's Section II, Class C Championships in Saratoga Springs. The boys team placed third in its division, while the girls finished fourth.

"We've got more people out this year," veteran Voorheesville coach Ken Kirik said. "We had more than 50 come out this year, and our modified boys team did quite well."

Freshmen led both Voorheesville teams. Hilary Edmunds and Chantal Little posted top-10 times at Sectionals to earn individual berths to the state meet, and Mackey Lloyd grabbed a spot on the Section II team after finishing sixth in the boys race.

"I'm really happy to have someone going with me (to states)," Edmunds said.

Edmunds broke up a powerful top-five pack from Sectional champion Greenwich with a fifth-place finish in a time of 19:49.6. Greenwich — which absorbed five runners from the defunct Argyle program — wound up placing five runners in the top six to finish with 16 points.

"I was really happy," Edmunds said. "I thought I was going to come in after the first five (from Greenwich). I just wanted to make it to states."

"She's very good," Kirik said. "She's got a lot of natural talent, and I'd like to see her develop as a runner."

Little was not far behind Edmunds. Little placed ninth overall with a time of 20:14.3 on the 3.05-mile course.

"It's exciting, it's really thrilling (qualifying for states)," Little said.

Lloyd barely missed out on a top-five finish in the boys race. He and Fonda-Fultonville's John Moore both crossed the finish line in a time of 17:02.0, but Moore got his body in front of Lloyd to claim fifth place. Lloyd still earned an individual state meet berth with his sixth-place finish.

Voorheesville's Sectional performances could be a harbinger of things to come. The girls team has six of its top seven runners coming back next year, and the boys team returns five of its top seven from Sectionals.

"We have some good teammates coming up from modified, so we're hoping to do better next year," Little said.

Class C

Boys division

Team scores: Fonda-Fultonville 50, Maple Hill 74, Voorheesville 106, Schenectady Christian School 114, Greenwich 143, Chatham 148, Granville 162, Catskill 168, Schuylerville 208, Tamarac 255.

Top five Voorheesville runners: Mackey Lloyd (sixth place, 17:02),

Indians place fifth in class B

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk boys cross country team had a strong showing at last Friday's Sectional meet. The Indians finished fifth with 113 points, five points behind fourth-place Schalmont.

Senior Sean McGrath led RCS with an 18th-place finish in a time of 18:38.7.

RCS sent two girls to Sectionals. Jennifer Gunnun placed 47th in class B with a time of 23:45, and Melissa Ciaccia was 58th in a time of 24:42.3.

Lady Eagles advance to class AA soccer finals

By ROB JONAS

Who will win round three?

That was the question entering Tuesday's Section II, Class AA girls soccer championship game between Bethlehem and Shenendehowa. The teams split their two meetings this season, with Bethlehem firing the opening salvo with a 3-2 overtime win Oct. 2 and Shen retaliating with a 1-0 victory in the Suburban Council Tournament.

"It should be another great game — another typical Shen-Bethlehem game," Bethlehem coach Tom Rogan said. "If you look back at the last eight times we've played, we've alternated wins and losses."

Neither team was challenged in last Friday's semifinals. Shen handled upset-minded Ballston

Juniors schedule team tryouts

The Albany Juniors elite volleyball club is holding tryouts for the 2005 season Nov. 21 and 28 and Dec. 5 at the University at Albany.

The club, which is open to girls age 12 to 18, is entering its second season. Its schedule runs from January through Memorial Day.

The Albany Juniors is the only area volleyball club that plays a national schedule. Last year's teams played in tournaments in Nevada, Maryland, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

The club is also holding an information and registration meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the University at Albany's Recreation and Convocation Center Hall of Fame room.

For information, e-mail albanjuniors@yahoo.com or call director Patty Blacklock at 346-4647.

The Capitaland Lacrosse Club is starting its beginner indoor league Sunday.

Spa 3-0 in the first game, and Bethlehem defeated Big 10 champion Amsterdam 1-0 in a contest where the Eagles outshot the Rams 24-6.

"One of our goals was to get back into the Sectional final, so we're excited about that," Rogan said.

Becca Lee scored off a feed from Tess McGrath in the first half, and Bethlehem's defense made that stand by keeping Amsterdam away from the goal on a windy night at Colonie Central High School.

"Wind is probably the worst condition to play in because it's so unpredictable, but it's the same for both teams," Rogan said.

The winner of Tuesday's Shen-Bethlehem Sectional final advances to the regional tournament this weekend against Section III champion Oswego. The game will be played at a site to be determined near Syracuse.

Fire

One-third of the project is an answer to the growth the company has experienced in the emergency medical field, said company president Amos Bastiani.

"We're really the last bastion of volunteer EMS services," Bastiani said, noting the direction many surrounding suburban towns have taken to charge for ambulance services. "We probably answer more calls where the patient doesn't get charged than anyone else. That's my scientific guess."

The department has sent out letters to neighbors and a preliminary plan was on display at its open house in early October. The department has planned two public meetings to answer questions and address concerns; next Wednesday's and a second on Dec. 1. A vote on the project is scheduled for Dec. 14.

"We've been in the Delmar community a long time," Smith said, noting the purposes of the public meetings are to give information, quell rumors and get input.

Smith said most neighbors seem in favor of it. At the open house, "they could see the building had outlived its usefulness," Smith said.

The department will use a bond to finance the project. Smith roughly estimated $3.5 million for the firehouse portion and $1.5 million for the rescue squad.

The length of the bond hasn't been determined yet, according to Bastiani, who guessed the tax impact could be "the price of going out to dinner once a year."

A feasibility study has already been done, Bastiani said, to determine how much office, storage and training space was needed.

Smith said department leaders met with Bob Verstandig a few years ago, discussing a move to that site when and if he decided to give up the retail business and focus on his wholesale business.

The department is looking to build an approximately 29,500-square-foot facility. The current firehouse is about 14,000 square feet, Bastiani said.

Bastiani said that, for year, the department has had to buy custom-made apparatus built to a smaller size than what is normally made, resulting in extra costs.

When the company first moved into its current home in 1939, it only had two fire trucks.

The existing building was built to house one ambulance, Bastiani said.

Now, the department parks two ambulances for the rescue squad and three different fire trucks, including a ladder truck.

"We've actually increased the medical and have had to cut back on the fire," Bastiani said.

As if that weren't enough, department members say there is no space for members to park when they respond to calls.

Member Lars Allenson said the parking situation "is not the best of all possible worlds."

The department shares some parking with a group home and other offices on Delaware Avenue, but Allenson said the department is allotted "just a small portion" of that space.

"Most members park on Nathaniel Street or sometimes in the Methodist church parking lot. Then there's an indentation for four to five cars on the Adams Street side," Allenson said.

Compounding all of that, Allenson said, "You have to leave room for the trucks to get out."

He added that the parking situation is "slightly hazardous."

Space for equipment is also a pressing issue. Both Smith and Allenson noted the stacks of equipment in small spaces not necessarily designed for storage.

"Every storage room is filled. What was going to be the training room for paramedics now has stacks of equipment," Allenson said. "Periodically, we pull it out and clean it and check it, but there's nowhere to put it but back where it was. You have to be able to get to it, but there's no easy access."

Bastiani said being able to get to stored apparatus is a matter of safety.

"You have to walk sideways in front of one engine to get from one bay to another. The side compartments of the ladder truck are not accessible when it's parked in the bay," Bastiani said. "We have serious space concerns. Very serious."

Helping

enough to tell him he would end up in Albany if he continued on his path.

So Jubrey continued, toward Albany before he got to a taped-off, rickety bridge and decided he couldn't go any farther.

"I just kept wondering if he was OK. So I turned around, and I prayed, 'Don't let this guy die. Give him the power to go on or wait until I get there,'" Jubrey said.

When he got back, Jubrey said the man's condition had worsened and some of the vodka had been drunk.

"There was blood all down his face. I've never seen anything like that," Jubrey said.

The sun had begun to set, and temperatures were dropping. This time, the man admitted he needed some help, which Jubrey went to find at a nearby house.

Judy Lasher heard a knock at the door, was told it was a stranger and told the door-answerer to tell him she was busy. Jubrey was persistent.

Lasher's initial response is a reasonable one, even Jubrey's father admits, given the stories of residential assaults and robberies in the local news lately.

But Jubrey was convincing. He led Lasher through briar bushes with thorns and burrs until she finally saw the man in need.

She said she was impressed Jubrey's maturity.

"He was very gentle with him, telling him help was on the way," Lasher, a teacher, said.

Paramedics and police arrived, placing the man on a stretcher and taking him to the hospital. Lasher said he's since been released.

Lasher said the gash looked like a horseshoe. Jubrey characterized it as a bite, noting that the man probably didn't fall because his handlebars and wheels were aligned, the bike was just placed on the ground, and there were no scrapes on the man's hands.

Jubrey's father, also named Brian, said he is proud of his son for probably saving a man's life.

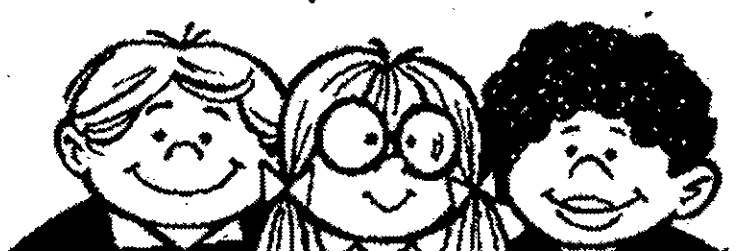

"The fact that he prayed, took a path he hadn't taken before and then showed all the values I've tried to teach him: caring, compassion, concern and courage. The extent he went to for a stranger's concern. The way he saw it through and stayed with him until help came," Jubrey's father said.

He admitted that until he received a call from Lasher, he "didn't think much of it," and later realized the temperature had dropped down to near freezing that night.

As an afterthought, after hearing Lasher's side of the story, Jubrey called her actions a "leap of faith," and said she should be commended too, for trusting a stranger, though he knows his son is trustworthy.

McNulty easily beats Redlich for house seat

Challenger cites lack of funding

By MARY LANNON

Guilderland's representative in the U.S. House, Michael McNulty, D-Green Island, will return for a ninth term to a Republican-controlled and partisan Washington.

As expected, McNulty easily beat Guilderland native and Republican Warren Redlich, 88,491 to 31,679 in the 21st district in the Nov. 2 election.

McNulty was out of the country on congressional business and could not be reached for comment.

McNulty ran on his record of obtaining funding for local projects including the new trauma unit at Albany Medical Center Hospital, development at the airport and the Rensselaer Technology Park.

He said during the campaign that the most important issues to voters this year were the war in Iraq and the growing deficit.

Redlich said he was happy with the results of the election.

"I didn't expect to win, and I hoped to break 40,000," Redlich said. "I feel I did reasonably well under the circumstances."

The major problem, Redlich added, was that he did not have the financial support of state Republicans to help get his name and ideas to the voters.

"I think the message worked. It clicked with the voters. But it didn't get to enough voters," Redlich said.

He got between 4 and 6 percent more of the vote than the last seven challengers who faced McNulty, he said, and he spent only about $40,000, primarily from his own pocket.

Several friends and family members also offered their support.

"If the state GOP had made even a minimal effort to help me I would have done better."

Warren Redlich

Two prominent Republican contributors gave about $3,000, he said.

"If the state GOP had made even a minimal effort to help me, I would have done better," Redlich said.

People needed to know that they had an alternative, he added.

Voters in Schenectady, Troy and Amsterdam, where there's a poor economy, have every reason to vote for someone new, Redlich added.

He said he would run in 2006 if he got the support of the state Republican Party.

But he didn't think that would be likely because efforts will go to the Senate race against Hilary Clinton and to the governor's race.

Redlich said he's also considering a non-profit political action committee devoted to trying to elect challengers, regardless of party, to office.

The major message of Redlich's campaign was that the United States needed to bring troops home from overseas outposts.

Locally, he also wanted mass transportation to be improved and to see greater economic development.

salaries," Fisher said in a phone interview before the October board meeting.

The library board "owes it to taxpayers to do a staff evaluation analysis to see the actual needs at the management level and to see possible ways to save money," he added.

David Moore, a librarian who ran unsuccessfully for the board of trustees twice, agreed, saying a few members on the board, along with administration, have created a "culture of secrecy."

Power was grossly abused in the first expansion plan for the library in 2000, said Moore, who also spoke at the October board meeting.

"They went through this procedure of holding public meetings which weren't really meetings. They were presentations, like they had already made up their minds, and it went down in flames," Moore said of the defeated expansion proposition.

That was the same year Moore decided to run for the board, when he saw the library acquiring property for a parking lot he felt it didn't need. He lost by 12 votes.

"They assumed this big project was going to go through, and they discarded books, weeded out the collection, stopped periodical subscriptions," Moore said. "They were going to move two-thirds of the collection to one site, obviously trying to pare it down to a manageable size. It's not good librarianship, not worrying about the content that's offered."

Moore, who lives near the library, said he supports the current expansion project, calling it "less grandiose."

Beyond his own observations, Fisher said that his position as a board member put him in the position to hear complaints by library employees against library management, especially Library Director Nancy Pieri.

"There is a great consistency to their claims," Fisher said, adding he had been approached by "more (employees) than you could count on one hand."

Moore said he saw Fisher as "the only board member at that time" to reach out to him and the community.

"From what I observed with the library board and the administration, it is not what you'd expect from a public board," Moore said. "They are secretive and insular. They didn't know, care or attempt to know what the community wanted."

Fisher made a number of allegations against library management regarding "excessive control and coercion," employees facing the threat of demotions and a lack of open communication. He also criticized library management in business and financial areas, as well as what he characterized as a "leadership struggle of the board."

Another former employee supported the critics.

In a telephone interview, Bill McDowell, who worked in the children's section for about five years, cited "autocratic rule" at the library as being a problem.

"Everybody's afraid to say anything. It kills any incentive for suggestions," McDowell said. "I frankly think (Pieri) should step down, but I don't think that's going to happen."

Moore, who joked that he was the Al Gore of Delmar in 2000, said he grew a beard and quietly went off the radar after his second unsuccessful run for the board.

Both he and Fisher are considering running for the board again.

Moore also noted that the library bought a house at 51 Borthwick Ave. for around $120,000. The reason given, according to Moore and a former library employee, was that the space was needed for storage.

"They bought it four years ago, it's still sitting there, vacant. The roof obviously leaks. Whatever they're storing better be waterproof," Moore said. "We all know why they bought it, for a parking lot, but we've never gotten them to say that. Why take it off the tax rolls?"

Moore said he'd "give it a few months," to see if his or Fisher's or other employees' concerns are addressed.

Fisher, meanwhile, said he'd "run hard" for a spot on the board again, especially given the unusual circumstances of his Aug. 19 resignation, after another employee said she suffered a personal attack from Fisher.

Board member Happy Scherer said "a fellow board member" accused her of "deception, manipulation, having a selective memory and being sanctimonious," in her Aug. 9 resignation letter.

Fisher, who contends he was falsely accused in that letter, said his resignation was forced by the Aug. 9 one and wonders why his was accepted while Scherer's wasn't. She continues to serve on the board.

"That gave me no choice but to resign. They said her letter was a potential resignation letter, but there was nothing potential about it. They got rid of me because I was pushing for change," Fisher said. "I plan on running again and I plan on running hard for the board. I've been urged by many employees to do so."

Library officials were hesitant to respond to Fisher's allegations.

Pieri wouldn't say whether the issues Fisher brought up would be formally addressed by the board at its Nov. 15 meeting, noting that the agenda for that meeting hadn't been set yet.

"The board has not discussed those matters yet. I'd rather not (discuss them)," Pieri said. "It's all still very preliminary, that being the first time the board heard his concerns. I don't have anything to discuss yet."

The next library board meeting will be Monday, Nov. 15, at 7 p.m. at the library.

Voorheesville American Legion Post, girls from St. Matthew's Catholic Youth Organization basketball team, Nichols Market and Transworld Entertainment, the Voorheesville students shipped more than 900 pounds of supplies, as well as letters to troops in Iraq. The kids donated pencils, paper, markers, scissors, glue sticks and books for the new school.

The local children first got on board after Mary Nolan, a first-grade teacher, overheard the school secretary, Kevin's mother Chris Burns, telling a co-worker that her son had safely arrived in Iraq. After inviting Mrs. Burns into her class to talk about her son's experiences, Nolan launched a schoolwide effort to collect supplies for the children in Al Hamra.

During his recent visit, Burns led the students in the Pledge of Allegiance after which the kids sang patriotic songs.

Burns also received fan mail from the kids, some of which spoke of people they also knew were serving overseas.

To the children's delight, Burns presented slides to show them how successful their efforts were.

"This is the new school,"

Burns said as he clicked through the slides. "It doesn't look like yours, but it's an improvement on what they were used to having."

Burns noted that Americans take a lot for granted.

"Before we arrived, the Iraqi children went to school in a crumbling building made of mud and old bricks," said Burns.

He added that the school had no electricity and used outdated books, some more than 40 years old.

"Because of your help, the children have a better place to learn," Burns said, after which students and faculty burst into applause.

Principal Kenneth Lein agreed. "I'm so happy to have the opportunity to see what your simple acts of kindness have accomplished," he said. "I am grateful to Capt. Burns for paying us a visit."

For her part in leading the effort, Nolan received a certificate of appreciation signed by Burns' commander.

"I have a smile on my face, but a tear in my eye," Nolan said.

"It's such an emotional occasion honoring this amazing man who came from Voorheesville," she said.

Obituaries

Francis Carine

Francis V. Carine, formerly of Slingerlands, died Monday, Nov. 1, at Teresian House in Albany.

Born in Brooklyn, he graduated from St. John's University School of Law.

He was an Army Air Forces veteran, having served with the Third Army Air Corps.

After practicing law in Queens, he joined the law offices of Tate and Tate in Colonie in 1967, from which he retired in 1985.

The Now You See It exhibit features a video performance by local magician, along with many magical objects from the collection of Bob Connors.

Airport gallery sponsors magical exhibit

By DEV TOBIN

The real how-did-he-do-that excitement in magic is live performance, whether in a glitzy Las Vegas casino (Penn & Teller, etc.) or on the street (David Blaine, etc.).

How can that excitement be captured and presented in the context of a museum exhibit?

The Albany International Airport Gallery answers that question in its current exhibit, Now You See It, with a multi-media combination of vintage posters and ads, magicians' props, videos of famous magic tricks, and works by modern artists that reflect on what gallery director Sharon Bates calls "a realm in which disbelief is suspended and the unexpected and impossible are gracefully produced."

Bates said the genesis of her "favorite" exhibit was two years ago, when she was visiting Bob Connors of Round Lake to discuss having his collection of carnival paraphernalia in Private Eye II, the gallery's collections.

"He showed me an entire room of magic stuff, and I thought that I'd really love to do a show about magic," she said.

Connors, a member of the local chapter of the Society of American Magicians (SAM), provided a wide variety of vintage materials, from broadside ads to props like wands and a card star.

Recognizing that performance is the key to magic, Bates said she wanted to have "some sort of performance element" in the exhibit.

So, working with local SAM members and using a studio at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, the gallery produced three videos of magicians performing well-known tricks like Metamorphosis and the Mis-made Lady.

Bates said the show is "rounded out" by several pieces of contemporary art by local artists for "a full experience of the number of types of visual illusion."

The modern works include a montage of time travel films, viewed wire sculpture that seems abstract until light is projected on it; a solar-powered roving eye; and several paintings of colorful hands doing magic tricks.

"I think we found some nice pieces that touch on different aspects of magic," Bates said.

Now You See It has proven to be popular, Bates said.

"The response has been incredibly favorable; we've had people applauding after the video," Bates said.

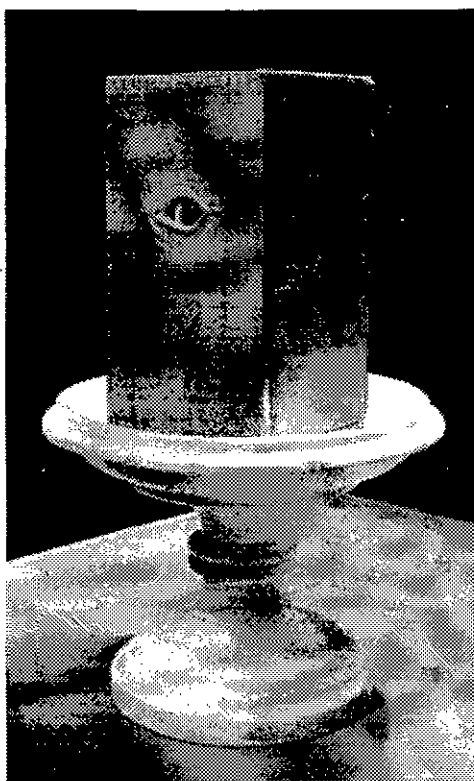

She added that last week's performance by local Society of Americans Magicians members, including those on the videos, attracted about 150 people. The airport will also sponsor roaming performances by SAM members during the busy Thanksgiving and Christmas travel weeks.

Now You See It runs through Feb. 6. The gallery is on the third floor of the airport terminal, adjacent to the observation deck. Hours are daily from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Admission is free, as is the first 30 minutes of parking in the short-term lot.

For information, call 242-2241 or log on to www.albanyairport.com
