Public to have say on EPA dewatering

But the Department of Environmental Conservation and the governor's office, while in support of the project, appear committed to provide assistance to the two communities designated as finalists for the project.

Fort Edward, along with Bethlehem, was chosen as a host for the project

"DEC has agreed to pursue what kinds of funds are available to the town so we can hire our own experts to see what kinds of quality of life standards, community health and safety standards should be set standards,' Supervisor Theresa Egan said. "There needs to be some kind of independent assessment so we can be sure they are appropriate, high enough standards so our residents continue to be safe."

Board: Mining is allowable use

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

Limestone mining is an allowable use on a 4.6-acre piece of property zoned rural/not zoned, and is an activity that has been going on for years on the piece of property off of Old Quarry Road, the Zoning Board of Appeals determined at its Jan. 5 meeting.

The 4-0 decision affirmed a determination by Building Inspector Mark Platel that mining had occurred on the property owned by Peter Frueh before Aug. 7, 2004, making the mining an allowable procedure. Platel visited the site in May 2004 and obtained a number of invoices and receipts that he reviewed, eventually deciding that mining had occurred before the August 2004 date. The Department of Environmental Conservation had already come to such a conclusion.

"Of course it's an allowable use; it's always been an allowable use," Frueh said Monday. "All kinds of mining goes on. That's what happens in rural lands."

Frueh said he's been mining on that land for years, a fact that a grassroots coalition of homeowners disputed, saying the proof he documented was not sufficient for Platel's determination. At the public hearing regarding the appeal at the ZBA Oct. 20 meeting, the Fruehs said they have taken a number of materials from the ground of the 180acre property, including clay, topsoil and rock that includes cobble rock and lime

The Feura-Bethlehem Heights Alliance also said that any mining on that property, near the intersection of Collabeck and Old Quarry roads, would harm the water supply to neighboring homes, which rely on well supply.

plans to make repairs V'ville board

By MARTIN J. BANNAN

If practice leads to perfection then it can be said that planning results in cost effectiveness. A least that's the recurring consensus among Voorheesville school officials and board members as they tackle a shopping list of repairs and big ticket item purchases anticipated in the near future.

Leading the list are buses, which after so many miles and years of service become too costly to maintain. This year the district plans to purchase four of them, two 60 passenger buses and two smaller ones holding 20 passengers. School district business official, Sarita Winchell said the district plans to go out for bidding in March and expects to have the buses by summer.

Horror films to chill at Dead of Winter Festival

By DAMIAN PAGANO

As a child, Bruce G. Hallenbeck was drawn to the dark side of movies.

He loved horror films — the tales of vampires, werewolves and robot monsters. The movies' monsters had visual appeal and the storylines represented catharsis — the change that comes when a person goes toe to toe with something bad.

"It's escapism from things that are truly evil in the world," he said. "These films are about facing up to the dark side and being able to walk away from it.'

Hallenbeck and his wife, Rosa, have organized a film festival for people who share that cinematic interest, and for anyone who has ever sat, fixated, while the celluloid boogey man moved in for the kill. The Dead of Winter

State Museum in Albany. The Park, at local cemeteries and at films and starts at 10 a.m. on Jan. 22. It is not recommended for children under 17.

Hallenbeck, 52, of Kinderhook, is one of the filmmakers who will show his work. He has been making movies since he was 11 years old, and he plans to premier his most recent film during the festival. "London After Midnight" is a story about two people who fight the dark forces of evil, and it draws influence from the X-files and The Avengers TV series, as well as from the fiction of H.P. Lovecraft.

The title is the same as a classic Lon Chaney film, which is one of the movies that inspired Hallenbeck to become a filmmaker. Using a digital camera, Hallenbeck and his crew shot "London After Midnight" at The Film Festival will take place at the Crooked Lake House in Averill in one gruesome scene. festival features 11 locally made various locales in Kinderhook. He said he was able to make the movie for "well under $1 million." The actors were mostly volunteers with experience in acting on stage. Rosa, his wife, plays the character of a demon.

"But I'm not going to say it's typecasting, because it isn't,' Halleneck said.

Rosa Hallenbeck, who uses the stage name Helen Black, said she made her own costume for the part. She has training as a toy maker and constructed a miniature set of goat legs to complement her costumed upper body, which was disguised with prosthetic makeup, horns and an exaggerated forehead. She also made a "demon larva" out of a knee-high stocking, latex and paint. She said her demon character gives birth to the larva

The horror film festival might seem a rarity for the State Museum, which is not usually associated with demonic larvae, disembodied heads or supernatural voices. But Bruce G. Hallenbeck said it was a godsend because Broadway Joe's, the Saratoga Springs dinner theater that initially agreed to host the festival, unexpectedly went out of business. The State Museum is interested because the filmmakers are all local and the 11 movies to be screened were all filmed in the Capital District.

"This is, after all, the state's museum, and we like to celebrate the art of New Yorkers," said Gary Ferris, the museum's development officer.

Brandon Bethhman and Eric Szmyr, both of Albany, shot the film "Raising Hell" around the Empire State Plaza and in Schenectady. It is the story of a corrupt incumbent governor who uses the mystical Keys of Solomon to summon a demon that destroys all who oppose him. The subject of an on-time state budget is not discussed, however.

Bethmann, who grew up in Rotterdam and graduated from Mohonasen High School, said he and Szmyr found the Capital District to be an ideal place to film the movie. The diversity of architecture and landscape gave richness to the visual aspects of production and, when filming on location, nobody ever bothered them. Parts of "Raising Hell" were filmed at the Schenectady County Library and on the steps of City Hall.

He said the film has generated several compliments on the ambiance in "Raising Hell." The film, released in 2002, is commercially distributed by Sub Rosa Productions, a horror film genre-specific production company based in Syracuse. "Raising Hell" and "The Risen," which will also be shown during the Dead of Winter Film Festival, are commercially available on Internet sites like Netflix.com and Amazon.com. But good luck finding the films at major retailers or video rental stores. Those places usually do not deal with small distribution companies.

'You're basically competing for shelf space against Spiderman II. Who is going to win that?" Bethmann said.

For local filmmakers, what matters is giving people a chance to see their work. It is an added bonus for them to show films at the State Museum Theater, which boasts a large screen and a professional-quality sound sys-

"We just want to get it out there any way possible," Bethmann

The Dead of Winter Film Festival starts Jan. 22 at 10 a.m. with a showing of the film "Vampyre." It will continue on Sunday, Jan. 23 at noon with the film "Night Therapy." The festival continues Saturday, Jan. 29 and Sunday, Jan. 30. It is free.

New Scotland board seeks water sources

MARTIN J. BANNAN

New Scotland officials met in a closed session Jan. 12 to determine where future sources of water might come from. Nowhere is this need greater than along Route 85, where future commercial and residential development is sought and anticipated.

Running beneath this corridor lies the town of Bethlehem's water line.

As it traverses New Scotland, the line travels from the Vly Creek Reservoir to Slingerlands and the rest of the town.

Tentatively on tap for this year are plans to refurbish and expand capacity at Bethlehem's filtration plant and install a new 24-inch pipeline along Route 85.

"Something like this doesn't happen often, so we're interested in the long-term effects of water passing through our town," said New Scotland Supervisor Edward Clark declined to discuss specifics regarding the executive session that followed the town's monthly board meeting.

"We're also interested in function as service pipes. knowing what impact this project will have on property owners along the route as well as traffic patterns," Clark said.

According to Richard Sayward, Bethlehem's filtration plant supervisor, the project entails refurbishing the New Salem facility in order to increase its capacity in peak flows from 6 million to 10 million gallons per

To accommodate this expansion, the town plans to install 24inch water mains to run in conjunction with the existing 16and 10-inch pipes.

'We are still in the design phase and waiting for feedback from the town of New Scotland as well as state and county health officials before proceeding," Sayward said. "We haven't even determined what side of the road we might install the pipe."

Savward said that the 16-inch pipe is the main distribution line into Bethlehem and the 10-inch pipe serves customers along the

"We haven't seen this type of work along the route in more than 30 years," Sayward said, adding that the 10-inch pipe was installed in the 1950s while larger pipe was laid in the 1960s.

In the meantime, the town of New Scotland is reviewing plans and specifications regarding the projects and will offer any recommendations to Bethlehem should they see fit, Clark said.

He added, "These are engineering matters that will be decided by those with the appropriate expertise."

In other business, Clark announced the town's planning board need to fill a vacancy created after the departure of Gloria Ozimek, a 13-year board veteran who stepped down to devote more time to her real estate business.

All interested applicants should send their résumés and letters of interest to the town hall by Jan. 31.

Finally, the town approved Jonathan Fuglein as a new junior member of the New Salem Fire Department,

There's a new cookie monster in our faces

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

So now the government has come out with new dietary guidelines, just as the all-points bulletin I put out for every cookieselling Girl Scout is yielding fruit. Better than fruit — Trefoils, Thin Mints, Samoas, low-fat lemon drops and all those delightful delicacies that make me alert neighborhood Scouts that we're the house that could help make them their troops' leaders in cookie sales.

The cookies come at a tough time of year, when our just-got-itbuttoned waistbands still serve as a reminder of Christmas past. New dietary guidelines surely policy — leave no cookie uneaten, no glass of eggnog undrunk -needs revamping. Now, the consequences of the holidays and the arrival of the Girl Scout cookies are being challenged by the Dietary Guidelines for Americans 2005, issued by the federal Department of Health and Human Services and the Department of Agriculture.

It's time to deep-six the Thin mean that my personal holiday Mints, and replace them with four cups of fruits and vegetables every day, along with an hour of exercise. The new food pyramid got a little revamping, but it's daunting to think about how to get moving, and how on earth to get that much fiber into a family that gravitates towards meat and rolls, not broccoli and couscous.

I live in a family where each person requires a different type of mustard; when it comes to fruits and vegetables, it's worse. Everybody likes carrots, but Chris will only eat them cooked, and Cormac will only eat them raw. Cormac and I love bananas; they make Chris and Christopher vomit. Celery can only be eaten raw; we all love berries, but in the winter, it's a choice between paying the mortgage or buying fresh raspberries; the boys eat Caesar salad only; only Mom likes squash; only Dad likes turnips; and nobody will eat Brussels

So far, the recommendations are only guidelines, but I worry that they could lead to legislation. There's some talk of regulating vending machines in schools or requiring schools to provide healthier lunches. It seems natural to think that would be the case, but it turns out that most school lunch programs have to pay for themselves. Health and government officials talk about the cost of obesity in terms of increased health insurance costs, lost work time and higher hospital bills, but having to pay for apples instead of Doritos at school could add to the school tax bill. That's well worth paying for, really, but could junk food become the next cig-

Probably there will never be an outright ban on empty calories,, but could it be against the law to eat potato chips in the workplace?

Will cookie monsters be forced to join smokers just outside the door of office buildings? This becomes a real case of "get your laws off my body." Go ahead and monitor my library books, my travel, my bank accounts, but what happens between me and a package of Oreos in a stressful moment is nobody's business but mine.

Then there's the whole exercise issue. We used to need 30 minutes every day; now it's 60. How am I ever going to do that now that I need to figure out who will eat what in my house, find new ways to cook it so people will eat it, and take the time to prepare good food?

I'm going to have to quit my job, which is just part-time, but somehow the days already feel too full to add one more thing. Maybe if all those scientists who created the food guidelines came to my house to pack school lunches, clean the bathrooms, do the dishes, the laundry, grocery shop, run out and buy the poster for the school project, I could go to work, cook for my family and get the exercise I need.

Of course, it's our kids we worry most about, the kids who sit in front of computers and TVs instead of going out to play — like we all did. Well, OK, I spent as much time as I could inside, reading, but I do remember going sliding at the country club with my parents and siblings, and I remember going to the neighborhood park to ice skate every day after school in the winter, from a very young age, without parental supervision.

There was a warming shack, and older siblings would help younger kids lace up their skates before we'd all head out to claim a piece of the ice far from the boys playing their perpetual game of hockey. We'd stay till we knew we had to leave to meet the rule, "Be home before dark."

Not many kids get that much freedom any more, which is too bad physically, but also since it prevents our kids from developing independence and self-reliance. It's easy to see where our worries come from: news reports of abducted children, terrorist attacks, bullying, binge drinking, pedophile priests and any number of societal ills make us loathe to let our kids out the door alone. When I wandered off to skate, I'll bet at least 30 mothers saw me heading to the park with my siblings. The social network that kept an informal eye on the village's kids is smaller than it used to be. This is an issue that's hard to approach, for even those of us who left the work world to be full-time parents for any amount of time would be reluctant to say that every family should do. the same. Still, it would be nice if we as a society could come up with a way to let our kids be kids, and have a lot more unstructured. active time than they're now getting. The new guidelines are a good wake-up jolt, even if they're something to grumble about, and the things that are hardest to do usually yield the greatest reward. They're a reminder that we parents need to shut off the TVs and computers sometimes.

We also need to swap the junk food for fruits and vegetables, and be tough in the face of opposition - even our own. There was one bright light in the new guidelines. Women apparently get five servings of sweets each week, and men only get two. So hands off the Girl Scout cookies, fellas. They're Kim Fusco's fifth-grade class at Elsmere Elementary School has set a lofty goal for itself of outfitting every one of the 110,000 National Guard and Army troops in Iraq with red, white and blue braided bracelets.

They're about 4,000 down.

The patriotic Fusco had last vear's class send a batch of bracelets out to a teacher's brother-in-law who was stationed in Iraq at the time. A poem was written to go with it and troops sent a letter back.

This year's class saw the letter posted up and said they wanted to do it, Fusco said.

"It was their idea. They set it up, and I just guided them through," Fusco said. "I didn't know how we were going to fit one more thing into our crazy day. Our schedule is so tight."

With some wrangling of the schedule, the kids now settle in during read aloud time after lunch and make bracelets for the troops while Fusco reads a book.

The class keeps tally, and after 800 here, 900 there and 500 somewhere else, 110,000 doesn't seem like such a big number. With another 13,000 troops in Afghanistan and 23,000 in Kuwait, the kids could be busy through "The kids are so into it," Fusco said. "I'll let them stay in from recess once in a while, and after school one day a week.'

Strands for the bracelets are cut before the reading period, Fusco said, so the class can listen to stories in peace. Fusco then packages a certain number of bracelets, after an order is placed, and gets postage and sends them on their way. Postage runs about $2 to $3 a package and she estimates she's spent about $100 on materials.

"You get a lot of bracelets out of three things of yarn," Fusco said.

Recipients of the bracelets, and the letters that are sent out with them, include members of the National Guard and Army. Some are relatives of the students, some are relatives of the teacher, and some are relatives of people who

Blueprints help

Some of the suburban towns in our coverage area are still grappling with land use and development questions during moratoria that are due to end soon. Many towns have used a moratorium to get input from residents about what they would like in terms of development and maintaining green space.

Not everyone will be satisfied or happy about decisions that will inevitably be made. We hope, though, that these decisions are fair to the residents and home and landowners in the affected towns.

What we've observed in the past is often a stalemate when any group perceives itself to be treated unfairly, so little is actually accomplished. Some master plans are never officially adopted, which simply prolongs the problem.

What makes more sense is to provide large landowners with an incentive to preserve the land and thus the character of rural areas that would otherwise be turned into suburban housing sprawl that does not come close to paying for itself in tax money to towns and school districts. More houses mean more kids and schools that must educate them and be big enough to house them.

Some of the attractiveness and charm of the region is a result of beautiful views and countryside we enjoy and are so proud of.

It's a fact that business is needed to support that tax base in suburban towns, and that causes problems since many residents don't usually like the idea of having businesses in their backyards. About the only acceptable "businesses' would be doctors and dentists' offices, but there are only so many of those that want to locate in suburbia.

Town leaders don't have an easy job of it, but they are obligated to make decisions to give the towns a blueprint for the future. Without a clear plan, confusion and discord will continue and stall growth of any kind, which is unfair

We think town leaders should look at towns and cities that are successfully addressing land use and aesthetic needs. Saratoga Springs, for one, has done a bang up job of blending the old with the new. It has a thriving downtown, interesting restaurants and nightlife, malls to satisfy the fussiest of teenagers but not smack in the middle of town and glorious rural areas. We'd like to see all of our towns become such a showplace for what can be done.

Saratoga for the most part did not try to erase its history like Troy and Schenectady did to parts of their downtowns, but rather preserved and enhanced it.

Local boards as regulatory agencies

By KEVIN M. BRONNER

This article poses the question of whether local governments in the Capital District act as regulatory agencies? The study of regulatory agencies usually centers on large and well known organizations such as the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) or the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington D.C.

Many communities throughout the Capital District have regulatory powers. One of the more prominent functions is the power to regulate land use. Many communities such as the towns of Bethlehem, Colonie, Guilderland, Clifton Park, Halfmoon and others have conducted work on highly visible comprehensive planning and/or land use moratorium implementation. This activity represents a form of environmental and land use regulation by local governments. Thus local governments can be viewed as important "service providers" in implementing regulation.

If you examine the field of regulation in a classical textbook such as Economics of Regulation and Antitrust by W. Kip Viscusi et. al., you will find that there is an enormous amount of regulation at the state and federal level in the United States.

There are two basic types of regulation. The first is economic regulation, which concerns market structures of price, quantity, entry and exit of firms and other considerations. Economic regulation often focuses on items such as the regulation of telephone, cable television, electricity, and natural gas prices.

The second area of regulation concerns health, safety, and environmental issues. This type of regulation attempts to protect the public from health issues such as unsafe prescription drugs, safety issues related to consumer goods, and environmental issues such as clean air and water.

Point of View

The two areas of regulation have been enforced by a myriad of regulatory agencies at the state and federal level. Currently there are 34 major regulatory agencies at the federal level. Some of the better known regulatory agencies are the Environmental Protection Agency, and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

New York state also has a large number of regulatory agencies as explained by Robert B. Ward in New York State Government, What It Does, How It Works. Some of the oldest and best known state regulatory agencies are located in New York including the New York State Banking Department formed in 1851, the New York State Insurance Department formed in 1860, and the Public Service Commission formed in 1907

Other important regulatory and anti-trust functions concern the insurance and securities regulation being undertaken by New York State Attorney General Eliot Spitzer, and state Department of Environmental Conservation.

Local regulation

The research question here is to explore what type of system of regulation is inherent in local government? This question can be addressed by examining some of the legal processes and structures used by the town of Colonie. Many other local governments throughout the Capital District have similar types of functions. The town of Colonie has a town board, 30 major operating departments, and additional boards and committees. Colonie also has an extensive town code with statutes pertaining to numerous items such as planning and zoning, quality of life issues such as a noise ordinance and numerous other statutes. Taken together, these structures, processes, and laws represent a significant degree of regulation that affects the citizens and businesses in the community.

Town board

The Colonie town board has the power under the New York State Municipal Home Rule Law to pass local laws that affect the public. It acts, therefore, in a formal rulemaking and legislative capacity and can pass rules and regulations that represent a system of regulation. It also enforces state and federal laws.

The town board passes statutes to regulate land use and the operations of certain businesses.

Economic regulation

The town of Colonie has several organizations that can be viewed as a system of economic regulation. The planning and economic development department, a planning board, and a zoning board of appeals regulate land use. The land use management council is also involved in regulating land usage.

Working together these four organizations enforce the local zoning code as well as any appropriate New York state laws pertaining to zoning. The hours of operation of certain businesses are also regulated. The economic value of the land is affected by the determinations of these entities so in theory this activity represents a form of economic regulation.

The town of Colonie building department, and a separate sign review board regulate building use and sign use in Colonie. These organizations enforce local building regulations and the New York state building code as well.

Environmental regulation

Many organizations in the town of Colonie are involved in aspects of environmental regulation. The environmental services department runs a landfill operation. This is a highly regulated entity that is subject to state and federal environmental laws. A separate pure waters department operates the town's sewer system. It enforces state and federal environmental laws and regulations also. There are other organizations in Colonie involved with environmental regulation including the conservation advisory council, the significant environmental areas management appeals board, the land use management council, the Latham water district, and the solid waste alternative planning committee.

Health & safety regulation

A number of organizations in the town of Colonie are involved with health and safety regulatory issues. The office of fire prevention sets guidelines to ensure that buildings and structures are safe from fires and other problems. The senior resources department and a town nurse work to provide a safe environment for seniors.

Other health and safety functions include the emergency services committee, and the highway safety committee. The town attorney's office has a consumer protection function, allowing residents to file a complaint against a business. The building department, the engineering department, the highway department, the police department, and the emergency medical services department are also concerned with health and safety issues.

Licensing

The Colonie town clerk issues numerous types of licenses to the public. Examples include marriage licenses, going-out-of-business permits, dog licenses and peddler's licenses. The building department and the sign review board also issue licenses.

Summary

It is apparent that local governments should be viewed as a full system of regulation. If you examine the functions of the town of Colonie, it is easy to illustrate how many regulatory functions are embedded in the operations of a town government in New York. This phenomena exists in many other local towns, cities, and villages throughout the Capital District.

BCUEA asks district for fairness, respect

Editor, The Spotlight:

We think everyone agrees that in the school district. Bethlehem Central is a good school district, one that is always striving to improve. Part of the reason for the success of the school district is the hard work of its dedicated staff at all levels.

Our school district has programs to teach our children to respect others and to appreciate differences in people. What we say carries no weight if our actions speak otherwise.

The district is not dealing in a fair or respectful manner with the members of the BCUEA. We are your teachers' aides, clerical staff, noon aides, kitchen staff, maintenance, custodians and bus drivers. We are the smallest and lowest paid group of employees

Simple math tells us that the district will not balance its budget by taking away rights and benefits from this small group, as the district has proposed.

Every child benefits from the work we do. We challenge this school administration to show our children they respect all of its staff by giving a fair contract to BCUEA members. Any organization that treats its employees with respect is always made better for having done so.

Assistant superintendent is grateful for support

Editor. The Spotlight:

As I conclude my tenure as assistant superintendent for educational programs and instruction at Bethlehem and transition to my new position as superintendent of the Greenwich Central School District, I want to thank you for your interest and support over the past six years.

It has been my personal and professional pleasure to experience the positive collaboration among diverse groups and individuals in the Bethlehem Central community on behalf of our children.

The many educational enhancements achieved by the district in recent years are tangible products of the commitment and hard work of district staff, parents and community members. Those efforts continue, as evidenced by excellent student achievement coupled with continuous improvement work throughout the K-12 program related to teaching and learning.

The Bethlehem community can be proud of its accomplishments to date and confident of its future educational excellence.

Again, thank you for your efforts and your many personal kindnesses. I extend best wishes to each of you and to the Bethlehem Central schools.

Property rights are fundamental

Editor, The Spotlight:

During the meeting of the. Planning Advisory Committee on Jan. 10, it was recommended by committee member Patricia Salkin that the guiding principle referring to property rights be removed from the comprehensive plan because "zoning does affect property rights."

I have attended just about every community forum and committee meeting that has been held with regard to this comprehensive plan. At almost every meeting the subject of protecting property rights has been dis-

Different individuals at numerous meetings have expressed the importance of property rights. The consultants have even confirmed that this is an issue in this town. I would like to remind everyone that property rights have long been an issue in this town. The rural landowners of Bethlehem have stood for and fought for property rights for everyone for many years.

There are large and small landowners in this town that are disturbed by the rhetoric and hype that is guiding the direction of this comprehensive planning and subsequent zoning changes. Properties in rural areas of town are being targeted for new and very restrictive zoning.

Much of this zoning is opposed by people living and owning property in the affected areas. This, too, has been brought up at many meetings, yet seems to be disregarded in the draft plan. Now, with a request that a guiding principle of property rights be removed from the comprehensive plan, one certainly wonders what direction this plan is really taking.

Since this comprehensive plan is supposed to reflect the desires and views of the community, I feel it would be a great injustice to the people of this town to remove this guiding principle.

All property owners, regardless of the size of their land. should have their property rights ensured.

The right of an individual to own property and to decide the best use of that property is essential to all of our liberties and basic to all our rights. It is not unreasonable to expect that the government will uphold the ideal that this country was founded on, since it represents all people in the rights that are guaranteed to them in both our Constitution and Bill of Rights.

Removing this guiding principle from the comprehensive plan can only be symbolic of the disregard by the town for the rights and concerns of its citizens. residents who have repeatedly requested the protection of property rights.

Is this comprehensive plan really about our town's citizens?

Mud slinging is unfair to reputable man

Editor The Spotlight:

I am writing in response to John Fuhrnam's comment, "We shouldn't be held hostage by Mr. Verstandig" in reference to having a real estate closing date on Dec. 31, 2004, in the Dec. 8 issue of The Spotlight.

If anyone is a victim in this situation, it is Bob Verstandig. Mr. Fuhrnam, just because you are angry with the Delmar Fire District members and their method of planning, why on earth would you bash uch a respectable person as Bob Verstandig? You really need to get your facts straight before you make such com-ments. When one signs a real estate contract, one has to have a closing date stated in the contract.

Junk car ordinance should be enforced

Editor, The Spotlight:

I travel through the town of Bethlehem and could not help but notice several junk vehicles parked on property located on Meads Lane and Waldenmaier Road within the town of Bethlehem.

I recall a while ago, the Altamont Enterprise had several articles about issuing tickets to property owners within the town

Doesn't the town of Bethlehem enforce its junk vehicle regulations? I feel sorry for property owners in the town of Bethlehem, as it must impact the value of their property.

Choosing a Bank that Works for You

By REGINALD FULLER, Senior Vice President, KeyBank

V hen I was a kid, opening my first bank account was easy. I went to the bank where my parents banked, signed a couple of papers and made a deposit.

Today, choosing a bank is not so simple. Our financial lives are a bit more complicated than trying to save a few dollars earned from a newspaper route or chores, and competition, loosened regulations, technology, as well as a more transient society, have changed the way banks do business. Also, the bank you grew up with, the bank that seemed to be an institution in your your bank but a merged superbank that offers a broad array of convenient and costsaving products and services. All of these changes make choosing a bank more difficult than it used to be. However, these changes can also mean that making the right banking choice now can be more rewarding than ever.

> Why are you choosing a new bank?

You may be in the market for a new bank for two reasons: one, you may be a new banking customer, or two, your current bank does not offer the products and services you need.

If you are a new banking customer, chances are that you are looking to open a basic hometown, is probably no longer checking or savings account. If you are an existing but not > completely satisfied customer, you are more likely to be looking for an expanded range of products and services that can meet your growing financial needs, such as retirement accounts, credit services, mortgages and financial planning.

is not what you want your bank to do for you today but what you may want your bank to do for you now and in the future. Do you have young children you plan to assist through college? Is relocation in your future? Maybe you are more rooted and live in a house you love but would love a little more with some updates. Whatever the case may be, a good bank can, and should, grow with you.

Reginald Fuller

What bank should you choose?

When shopping for a bank in today's market, you should consider four things: customer service, accessibility, technology and products/ services.

1. CUSTOMER SERVICE. A bank is only as good as its people. This is particularly true in branches, where consumers rely on bank employees to be knowledgeable, responsive, professional and client-focused. So how do you, as a consumer, know which bank has the right people? Easy. Visit with different banks and ask open-ended questions, such as, "What can your bank do to meet my financial needs?" A professional banker will be able to give you an overview of the bank's products and services in language you can understand. A good banker will also work to understand your particular financial situation and make recommendations based upon your needs.

2. ACCESSIBILITY. Today's consumers are busier and more mobile than ever. Banks try to meet the demands of this trend and more convenient access to their money through ATM networks, online banking, branches and customer service phone lines. Still, the needs of each consumer and the scope of services each bank offers vary. For instance, if you travel, larger banks provide a larger network of ATMs and branches, which can save you time and, more important, money. If you are a mother of young children or have a disability, drive-through windows and having access to a teller without getting out of your car can be a big stress reducer. Also, another thing to think about when evaluating a bank's accessibility is your local branch's operating hours. Do they have Saturday hours? Are they open when you need them to be open? Can you get a live

3. TECHNOLOGY. According to a year 2000 report by the Comptroller of the Currency, only 2 percent of national banks offered transactional Internet banking in 1997. Today, financial services companies that are not at the cutting-edge of technology are being left behind, as customers realize the time-saving benefits of convenient access to their money 24 hours a day, seven days a week. For example, online banking, ATMs and customer service lines can provide customers with up-todate financial information for all of their accounts. Online banking also offers the added convenience of transferring money between accounts, paying bills and applying for loans from the comfort of your home. Some financial institutions even allow you to access and manage accounts you may hold with other banks through online banking. In short, whatever you can do in a branch or at an ATM you can do online.

4. PRODUCTS/SERVICES. Arguably the greatest change in banking over the years is the transition from bank as depository to bank as a fullservice financial institution. Therefore, when selecting a bank, evaluating your future hopes and dreams is as important as meeting your current financial needs. For instance, will you need a line of credit to secure important purchases? What are your retirement goals? Do you have or could you benefit from brokerage/investment services? Other products and services to consider are debit cards (a great alternative to cash), direct deposit, automatic transfers and all-in-one statements. Your banker should be able to help you determine which products and services work best for you.

In the end, the selection of which bank is right for you is your decision, and it comes down to your own personal by providing people with greater_values and preferences. There is no right or wrong answer. However, understanding your needs "for both today and tomorrow" will help you make a more informed decision. It will also help ensure that you grow with your bank and get more value from your banking relationship. You might even one day realize that your banker has become a trusted financial advisor who values your business and has helped you realize and achieve your dreams. What could be better than that?

Gerstman cited a Supreme Court decision made in 2003 that the town had some illegal zoning ordinances. Rather than penalize existing businesses, Gerstman said, the uses in existence prior to the 2003 decision became nonconforming uses, thanks to a decision by the town board. Frueh's lawyer Karen Moreau had said during the Oct. 20 public decision did not come into play; that the issue was whether mining had occurred before the August 2004 date, noting there was no definition of mining in the town

"Why the ZBA listened to the cloudy and vague recollections of the Fruehs is beyond me," Gerstman said.

According to the application to DEC, rock will be extracted several times a year by blasting the land with dynamite. Limestone acquired through that process will be sold, Frueh said.

The issue went through a lengthy appeals process within

"Both sides did a very good job presenting their sides," ZBA Chairman Michael Hodom said.

Hodom said the board was confident enough in the documents provided to Platel that the use was within the realm of Bethlehem's town code.

The board will adopt a formal resolution at its next meeting, scheduled for tonight.

"It's over, as far as we're concerned," Platel said. "We determined (limestone mining) was a permitted use."

Gerstman said he didn't know what would happen.

"We'll have to wait and see the written decision," he said.

FBHA and its lawyers have supported their arguments with case law and what they see as a foggy definition of mining. More than 20 affidavits from residents who live near the property saying they've never seen any indication of mining activities on the Frueh property were included as part of Scrapbooking is a hot hobby for cold winter days, and the library is ready to help you with a two-part instructional program.

Join us on Tuesday, Feb. 1, at p.m. for an informational presentation on this exciting new trend for displaying your memories with Wendy Burke, a Creative Memories consultant.

Burke will show what types of materials are available and will provide examples of scrapbooks - some simple and some fancy.

Participants are encouraged to bring and share with the group any scrapbooks or pages they already have to illustrate a variety of styles.

On Thursday, Feb. 17, at 7 p.m., we will put all that information to good use at a scrapbooking workshop.

The workshop is open for beginners and experienced. Bring your scrapbooks and start working on those pictures.

Burke will bring tools for you to use and will offer her experience and talent to help you frame your pictures in some innovative ways.

town will have held about 30 meetings, said Public Works Commissioner George Leveille, also finishing up his inaugural year as head of that department. That figure excludes all the impromptu meetings at automotive body shops, in grocery store parking lots and on soccer fields, Egan and Leveille laughed.

"This community demands, at this point, that type of approach. We've tried our best to be open and transparentand public," Egan said. "Everything's an open book, from the government we run to the policies we're trying to enact."

for halls of the Delmar Fire District, Egan said, when residents defeated a $6 mil.ion bond project By the end of the process, the in mid-December. A slew of residents, at public meetings, criticized the fire department for providing what they saw as a .ack of information about the project.

> "Unfortunately, what w∈ saw with the Delmar Fire District, was that people felt they didn't have enough input. What we've found is that if you're up front, give them the facts, people are very reasonable, and they ask great questions.'

Though some have publicly criticized the town board for holding its meetings at 5:30 p.m., Egan doesn't believe it's indicative of the majority of residents. At the organizational

That value reverberated in the meeting, two residents who attend most board meetings said the time prevented residents who want to participate from doing so.

Councilman Tim Gordon, an Independent, agreed.

"Five-thirty is convenient to me, but a hindrance to public participation," Gordon said, before he voted "no" to set board meetings on the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month at 5:30 p.m.

Egan said she's gotten no calls on the issue.

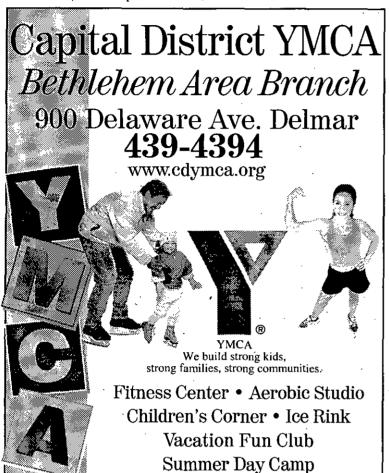

"Anyone who walks into my office or calls me up on the phone can talk to me," Egan said. 'There's a level of trust that's developed. Someone who wants answers doesn't have to wait until a board meeting."

Leveille said the most contentious issues usually get a public forum, where residents can participate. Public forums are usually set for later in the evenings and, with regard to the comprehensive planning process, have been mostly well attended.

In 2005, residents can expect more public forums, Leveille said.

Town officials are awaiting word about a local waterfront revitalization plan (LWRP) grant that would put into place some sort of long-term vision for the Hudson River waterfront.

After what town officials deemed a successful open space, trăilways and recreation focus group that was part of the comprehensive planning process, another group of landowners or open space advocates or both, will be assembled with the task of establishing a greenway system within town.

"We have a seven-year plan by which we rotate buses in our fleet each year because we don't want a fleet of olc buses that is too costly to maintain," Winche I said. "This way we never have to go to the public asking to replace our entire fleet." She added that buses are retained or retired on the mechanics' recommendations.

In past years, the district bought buses outright to avoid paying debt service. According to Winchell, it was possible to do this because the state would reimburse the district for the total cost of the bus the following year so each year they had revenue to offset bus purchases.

revised its school aid policy and will now amortize the cost of buses and pay districts partial reimbursement over a five-year period. Without an annual reimbursement of its total new bus expenditure, the district is forced to bond for upcoming purchases, Winchell said.

According to Superintendent Alan McCartney, the new policy saves the state money but ends up costing school districts more money in debt service. As a result, taxpayers in New York end up paying more so the state appears like it's spending less.

As for upgrades and repairs to the air. buildings, Maintenance Super-Last year, though, the state intendent Michael Gover outlined projects in need of attention in the upcoming years.

Among his highest priorities is replacing asbestos tiles still in the elementary school.

"We have 20 classrooms in need of floor tile replacement," he said. "Some tiles are as old as the school."

According McCartney, the tiles in no way present a health hazard. "I want to stress that the asbestos is not a danger to anyome's health," he said. "There is no asbestos flying around in the classroom." Goyer added that it would take a power sander to disperse asbestos particles into

Also high on Goyer's to do list are upgrades to the elementary school's antiquated vents.

The vents, installed 40 to 50 years ago, circulate outside air into the classrooms heating it as it enters they system. He said five of the 47 vents are broken and cannot be repaired because spare parts are unavailable. "The units are obsolete and are a drain on our energy costs," he said.

Other repairs include new ceiling tiles, locker and bathroom refurbishing, parking lot paving and a new roof over the library.

"We need to look into a plan and be proactive rather than wait for something to happen," Goyer said. "We organize, prioritize and synchronize.'

Winchell said she, along with Goyer and McCartney, plan to meet with architects to devise a schedule to complete these projects. "I have a plan in mind to minimize the cost of these projects to the taxpayers, but, until I see the hard numbers, I cannot elaborate," Winchell said.

In other news, the board discuss devising a code of ethics with a nepotism policy for hiring employees.

Interest in a nepotism policy arose in September after the board hired Deborah Baron, wife of board president Robert Baron to a position as tax collector for the district. Complaints aired at that meeting stemmed from Baron's participation in the vote that broke a 3-3 stalemate and cleared the way for his wife to be hired.

State education policy, however, mandates that any such code of ethics may not violate state or federal hiring laws.

"The commissioner education prohibits school boards from not hiring on the basis of family or marital relations nor can individual members be barred from voting," McCartney said. "Any new code of ethics must meet all requirements of municipal law.'

According to McCartney the only hiring limitation available to school districts is one restricting an employee from working directly for a relative. School districts may also adopt a discloser policy by which job applicants must disclose any relatives they have working in the school district.

Board members agreed to further discuss the matter and vote on it at next month's meeting.

In other business, board member Tom McKenna, president of the Voorheesville Community and School Foundation, announced that the honoree for this year's spring gala and auction is McCartney, who after serving as superintendent since 1989, retires this spring.

Funds raised through the auction go toward paying for a needed project of the honoree's choice. Last year's honoree, retired elementary school Principal Ed Deigel, chose that the proceeds to go toward an art welcome center in the elementary

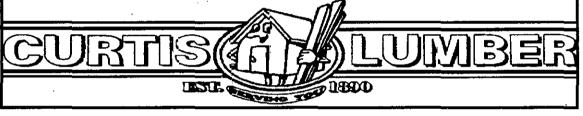

McCartney is expected to make his recommendation to the foundation soon.

The gala and auction takes place June. 4th at the Albany Country Club.

Gearing up for demanding winter workouts sidetracked in the cold, dark days of winter. Weather, injury and lack of motivation can all keep you from performing at your best.

To avoid problems before they start, lay a solid foundation with the right equipment.

From the ground up

While runners need very little equipment for their sport, the right shoes makes all the difference.

That's why seasoned runners recommend buying shoes at a store that specializes athletic wear, rather than a department or discount store.

Footwear experts at specialty stores determine can special features you may need based on your foot type and running conditions.

Remember, your feet will be hitting the ground with a lot of force, and that force will expand your foot during the run.

Make sure your shoes will fit properly at the end of a run by shopping for shoes late in the day, as there will be a slight increase in foot size from the morning. Experts agree that running shoes should be replaced every 400 miles or so, even sooner for heavy runners. It's important to use shoes with proper cushioning, so begin to monitor the wear at around the 300-mile mark.

If your winter workouts include training on icy or wet terrain, make sure you have a shoe with the proper tread to help slips and falls.

Pump up the volume

Music is a great motivator, but runners like to be aware and track their pace and distance as well. New tools such as the Nike + Philips MP3RUN combine the best of both worlds. The MP3RUN is a small, lightweight MP3 player (with built-in FM radio) that straps to your arm

Even if you take your workouts while a small wireless Bluetoothenabled sensor attaches to your shoe, becoming the workout ultimate companion.

The sensor collects speed, pace and distance information and transmits it to the runner with ondemand audible feedback over the headphones.

The unit features a strobe light for the low-light conditions of short winter days, a backlit LCD display and the 256MB memory can store up to 60 MP3 or 125 WMA music tracks.

The unit also stores workouts in its memory, so you can track your progress over time by > downloading the data to your computer or uploading it nikerunning.com.

> Runners can also set MP3RUN to announce time, speed and pace at regular intervals, to ensure you stay on track for your fitness goals.

SSC announces Healthier Aging

By Edward Neary

olonie Senior Service Centers has announced that it we will be initiating a "Taking Steps to Healthier Aging Campaign.'

Diet & rituess Many individuals are living longer than any time in the history, but still far too many people need to improve their outlook on health and disease prevention.

Colonie Senior Services believes that together with our members we can do more, and our best weapons are literally in our own hands: the foods we choose to eat, the activities that get us moving, > and the knowledge we have on the prevention and treatment of such diseases as osteoporosis, arthritis, diabetes, cancer, heart disease, depression and bladder health issues.

Our "Taking Steps to Healthier Aging Campaign" will have an outreach and programmatic component designed to increase the number of older persons who stay active and healthy both mentally and physically.

A unique aspect of the new program will be to create public awareness for those persons not yet reaching retirement age so that they may make healthier lifestyle choices.

. As we age, the increase in chronic illness and decrease in mental and physical activity creates a vicious cycle in which many adults are trapped, losing their ability to remain independent and active.

The program will be modeled on our very successful Osteoporosis Exercise & Wellness Program run by Marion T. Lamar. The characteristics of success from that program to be replicated include:

1. A comprehensive approach to promoting lifestyle changes in diet, exercise, education and attitude.

2. A social or club-like environment, with groups limited to 12 to 15 plus two cotrainers.

3. Leadership opportunities to learn to be a trainer or develop program-related special activities.

4. Incentives to commit to an on-going program, not a just a one-time class.

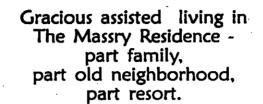

"Taking Steps to Healthier Aging" is based on the premise that one must respond to the needs of the whole person - mind, body and spirit.

This new series of health and wellness programs, aimed at the most prevalent, chronic, agerelated diseases, will be developed through "Taking Steps to Healthier Aging Campaign."

Colonie Senior Service Centers also will afford community partners the opportunity to join the campaign to help maintain, or even improve, the health and vitality of seniors and soon-to-be seniors in our community.

Second half struggles plague Lady Eagles

By ROB JONAS

Just when it seemed the Bethlehem girls basketball team had hit its stride, it ran into two of the top teams in the Suburban Council.

The Lady Eagles couldn't keep up with Columbia down the stretch in a 57-44 loss last Tuesday, and then they were dealt a 52-27 setback Friday by a Colonie Central squad that was smarting after back-to-back losses against Shenendehowa and Averill Park.

'Colonie is definitely an uppertier team," Bethlehem coach Mark Nealon said. "I give my girls credit. They came out hard, but they just didn't get their shots to Unlike their first meeting — a 55-16 loss at the Bethlehem Tipoff Tournament in which Colonie iumped out to a 30-0 lead Bethlehem challenged Colonie in the first half. The Lady Eagles (2-7 league, 3-10 overall) limited the Lady Raiders to five points in the first quarter and trailed 21-13 at halftime.

Colonie firmly established control in the third quarter, though. The Lady Raiders outscored Bethlehem 22-7 in the period to break the game open.

"We were in the game at halftime. The only problem when we have to work so hard defensively to stay in the game is something has to give, and in this case it was our shooting," Nealon

Leah Gillham led all scorers with 13 points, but her Bethlehem teammates had trouble providing her with offensive support. Kristina Dolan was the next highest scorer for the Lady Eagles with six points, and nobody else had more than three points. By contrast, Colonie had a balanced attack, led by 12-point efforts from Ola Shajuyigbe and Kelly VanValkenburgh.

"It takes a while, and there are bumps in the road," Nealon said.
"It's tough, but the kids are sticking it out."

to Columbia. Katie Rowan scored contributed 12 points and Gillham and Liz Casline each added five points for the Lady Eagles, who trailed by one point at halftime before Columbia outscored them 36-24 in the second half.

The losses to Columbia and Colonie came after a stretch in which Bethlehem won three out of four games, including Suburban Council contests against Niskayuna and Mohonasen.

"I have no complaints about 14 points, Samantha Feinberg our work ethic. They come to the gym and work hard," Nealon said. 'But when it comes to those (top) teams, we're not at their level yet.'

> Following Tuesday's game at Ballston Spa, Bethlehem has four contests left on its schedule before the Suburban Council Tournament. The Lady Eagles travel to Gold Division leader Guilderland Friday, and then they get a week off before hosting Shaker Jan. 28.

Offense struggles in two league losses

Bethlehem's boys basketball team put forth two solid defensive efforts last week, but neither resulted in victories.

The Eagles (2-7, 2-11) were outscored in every quarter — but never by more than five points in a 57-47 loss to Columbia and a 46-36 loss to Colonie.

Kevin Stempsey was Bethlehem's top scorer in both games. He had 12 points to lead three land's holiday tournament.

Eagles in double figures against Columbia last Tuesday, and he scored a game-high 15 points in last Friday's contest with Colonie.

The Blackbirds (10-1, 14-1) downed Waterville 72-37 Saturday and then used a big first quarter to get by Oneida 46-30 in Sunday's championship game.

The two wins concluded a stretch of three games in four days for Voorheesville — one which couldn't end sooner for coach Don Catellier.

"We're worn down," Catellier ped away at Ravena's lead in the said. "It's a lot of games and a lot of sickness (going through the team). Hopefully, we can get through this week. Get through these next two games (with Schalmont and Cohoes), and then we have a week off before Watervliet (Jan. 28)."

> Waterville provided little resistance for Voorheesville in Saturday's opening round. The Blackbirds built a 40-23 halftime lead, and Catellier was able to substitute generously in second the half to give his starters a rest.

"Waterville is not a bad team. They had an 8-2 record coming in, and they were in first place in their league," Catellier said.

Reserve guard Rob Bareis led Voorheesville with 15 points. Nick Ravena played Watervliet Duncan and Mark Carson each chipped in 14 points, and Greg Jones added 10 points against Waterville.

Sunday's championship game against Oneida was ostensibly decided in the first quarter when Voorheesville jumped out to a 21-9 lead. The host school provided a mild challenge in the second quarter before the Blackbirds sealed the victory by outscoring Oneida 13-6 in the third quarter.

"The defense played well," Catellier said. "(Oneida has) a kid named Dan O'Neil. He had 26 points in the semifinal game (against Little Falls), and Duncan held him to four points."

Carson was named the tournament's most valuable player after scoring 15 points and hauling in 17 rebounds in the championship game.

"He had a great game. He did everything we asked of him," Catellier said.

Kelleher leads BC hockey

Andrew Kelleher's four-goal performance led the Bethlehem hockey team to a 9-4 victory over Mohonasen/Schalmont last Saturday in a Capital District High School Hockey League game.

Tim Moriarty tallied and assisted on three of Kelleher's four goals for the Eagles, who were coming off a 12-1 loss to Glens

"We made some changes, moved some guys around and it seems to be working," Bethlehem coach Tom Dugan said...

The Eagles travel to the Albany County Hockey Facility to face Shaker/Colonie Friday.

Thanks to a caring community

For the past two years, I have been fortunate to serve as prevention coordinator with the Bethlehem Networks Project. Our caring community has many citizens and organizations actively working to protect our children from the dangers of underage alcohol and tobacco use, use of illegal drugs, school-based violence and bullying.

As I move on to a new job, I would like to thank all of you who offered your ideas, your encouragement and your assistance with the many programs supported and coordinated through Networks. In particular, thanks to the following organizations which continue to provide funding for prevention program expenses and administration: NYS Office of Alcoholism and Substance Abuse Services; Albany County Departments of Mental Health Division for Children, Youth and Families; Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited; Albany County Stop DWI; the Bethlehem Festival Fund; Families United Network; the Rotary Club of Delmar; the Bethlehem Central School District including many PTA groups, and GE/ Selkirk Cogen, which has so generously funded this Youth Network Column in Spotlight Newspapers every other week for several years.

In addition, thanks to all who gave of themselves and their time including the Bethlehem Community Partnership members and task force leaders Debbie Kopp, Lisa Faist-Stanton and Elissa Zwiebach; student interns Lilach Epstein, Evan Kalman, Andy and Mark Shawhan, Amy Downey and Brittany Worgan; the Bethlehem Police with School Resource Officers Vince Rinaldi, Bruce Oliver and Charles Radliff; BCSD administrators Superintendent Les Loomis, Assistant Superintendent John McGuire, Joyce Jones and students of the High School Ad Agency class, and student counselors Judy Fruiterman, MaryAlice Svare and Peggy Palagyi. Thanks also to Albany County Prevention Specialist Margaret Diggs; the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce; and the Bethlehem School Board Happily, the newly hired Bethlehem Networks Coordiator Connie Miller, will bring a wealth of prevention experience, successful grant writing and high energy to the position.

As a long-time resident of Delmar, I leave the position of Networks coordinator proud to be a member of such a caring community. Thank you so much. Elaine McVoy

Children and Adults make snow sculptures at Grafton Lakes State Park. afton Lake

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

ou can't change the weather, but you can enjoy it, and there's no better place to do it than at Grafton Lakes in Rensselaer County. This Saturday, Grafton Lakes State Park will be hosting its 20th annual Winter Festival.

"The park is on 2,357 acres," Park Naturalist Melissa Wright said. "The lakes are actually five ponds, and there are 25 miles of trails, all with different designations. You can cross-country ski, snowshoe, or hike. There are also horse trails.

The Winter Festival is a familyfriendly event, and kids will love participating in the snowballthrowing contest and making snow sculptures.

"We'll have bottles of dye so the kids can color their sculptures :f they want," Wright said.

Representatives from Eastern

A horse-drawn sleigh will be on hand for rides through the State Park.

Mountain Sports will be on hand to give snowshoe and cross-country skiing demonstrations, and if you like it enough to try it, they'll have equipment you can rent during the Winter Festival. EMS will also offer winter camping advice and demonstrations.

During the festival, you can also take a ride in a horse-drawn sleigh. or a dog sled.

The early bird will get the worm at the festival - or the fish, since there will be an ice fishing on all five of the park's ponds will begin at 5:30 a.m. Conroy's Bait Supply will be on hand to sell bait, but you'll need to bring your own fishing gear.

The fishing tournament lasts until 3 p.m., and prizes will be awarded at 3:30 p.m. You can register for the fishing competition at the park, and there is a small fee. People aged 16 and older pay $6 to participate; it's free for anyone under 15 years old.

"There are rainbow trout, brook trout, walleye, pickerel, bass and lots of sunfish in the ponds," Wright said.

Nearby at the Grafton Veterans of Foreign War, winter aficionados 10 years old and older can participate in a New York state certified snowmobile safety course from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. The course is free, but participants need to register with the park by calling 229-1155.

There are also plenty of indoor activities, with a number of exhibitors on hand. Five Rivers Environmental Education Center will offer winter animal identification and tree identification programs; the Rensselaer Taconic Land Conservancy will talk about some of its land grants; the Taconic Hiking Club will have information on its hikes, plus a falconer and a redtailed hawk; and there will be chainsaw wood carving demonstrations. There will be artists with nature crafts and facepainting for kids.

Rowdy, the Albany River Rats mascot, and Southpaw, the Tri-City Valleycats mascot, will add some local spirit to the outdoor fun. Park Manager Tom Conklin started the winter festival 20 years ago, and he's delighted to see it continue and

"We've always tried to promote first year, we had half a dozen exhibits, and between 200 and 300 people came out." Last year, Wright estimated, about 1500 people came to the winter festival, and buses transport people

"I really look forward to this," Conklin said. "We're about halfway through our winter by Winter to the different park areas.

Rowdy, the Albany Rives Rats mascot, and Southpaw, the Tri-City Valleycats mascot will be in attendance at the festival.

the park as a place to go for yearround activities," Conklin said. "The Festival. People also seem to enjoy winter more, and try to find ways to get out and enjoy it.' The festival will take place with or without snow, and Wright and Conklin are optimistic that this week's cooler temperatures will keep the lakes well frozen. "We've got excellent fishing," Conklin said. "Youngsters can skate on the lake, and their parents can drop a fishing line into the water.' The Grafton Lakes State Park Winter Festival will take place on Saturday, Jan. 22, from 5 a.m. to 4 p.m. The park is in the town of Grafton, on Route 2. For information, call 279-1155.

LEGAL NOTICE

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:

nificant Impact The Town of Bethlehem at 445 Delaware Avenue. Delmar, N.Y. 12054 gives notice that it has been determined that the project de-scribed below will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and ac-cordingly, the Town of Bethlehem has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (NEPA, 42 USC 4321). The Town of Bethlehem is assuming NEPA environmental review responsibilities for this project from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) according to HUD environmental review regulations at 24 CFR Page 58

Part 58. Program Title: South Albany Water and Sanitary Sewer

Improvements Location: Currey Avenue and Scott Boulevard, South Bethlehem, New York.

LEGAL NOTICE

Purpose of Project: To improve the existing water and ewer utilities in a small subdivision involving 24 homes. The proposed utilities will be located within the Town right-of-way. Estimated Cost: $318,010, funded through the New York State CDBG Small Cities

program. The reasons for the decision not to prepare such Statement are as follows: The project is not of sufficient size, scale or mass and does not exceed the threshold criteria established for the environment under NEPA. An Environmental Review

Record respecting the abovementioned project has been made by the Town of Bethlehem, which documents the environmental review of the project, and more fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review Record is on file and available for public inspection during normal busi-ness hours at the following location:

Town of Bethlehem Depart-ment of Public Works 445 Delaware Avenue

Delmar, N.Y. 12054 No further environmental review of this project is proposed to be conducted, prior to release of funds. The Town of Bethlehem will accept written comments on the substance or procedure of the environmental review until February 4, 2005 at the following address.

George Leveille 445 Delaware Avenue Delmar, N.Y. 12054

All such comments so re-ceived will be considered and the Town of Bethlehem will not request the release of Federal funds or take any administrative action on the abovementioned project prior to the expiration of the comment period as indicated

Note of Intent to Request

Release of Funds This notice allows for procedural objections to the New York State Governor's Office for Small Cities (GOSC) and is separate from the findings notice printed above. Town of Bethlehem must certify to GOSC that it has complied with all requirements of HUD environmental review regulations at 24 CFR Part 58, including receipt of public comments, before federal funds can be released for the project described above. Town of Bethlehem will submit a request for release of grant funds and an environ-mental certification to GOSC on or about February 7, 2005 Town of Bethlehem will undertake the program with CDBG funds from GOSC. Town of Bethlehem is certiing to GOSC that the Town of Bethlehem and Commis-sioner of Public Works George Leveille, Certify Officer consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental reviews, decision-making, and action; and that these re-sponsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon GOSC's approval, funds may be used for this program, and HUD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 and other related laws and authorities. GOSC will accept an objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the certification only if it is on one of the following bases: a) that the certification was not in fact executed by the chief executive officer or another officer of applicant approved by HUD; or b) that applicant's environmental review to the
