Man chides BC board for low bid rejection

By LINDA DeMATTIA

Local resident Tom Connors blasted the board of education at its meeting last week for rejecting the low bid for electrical work for the high school building project. Connors, reading from a letter written by Lawrence Spraragen, president of Schenectady Hardware and Electric, questioned the "sense behind this process."

"You are $3.7 million over budget, you throw out one of your largest contacts, you drive off your low bidder for the electric work by exposing their bid number," Connors read into the record. "How do you justify changing the scope of work after the bid?"

On the advice of architects Collins and Scoville and Sano-Rubin construction managers, the board accepted 10 bids and rejected three. All of the bids that were accepted were over the estimated budget amount. The three bids that were rejected were for fire protection, theater equipment and electrical, which was under budget.

Richard Peckham of Collins and Scoville told board members they could capture savings by changing the design of several areas, including the guidance area, earth science classrooms, technology room, field house and other incidental work. By changing the design, Peckham said, the electrical work and fire protection systems would also change.

"With the changes we are making, to get the best cost, we would recommend the rejection of the bids and re-bid," he said.

But Connors and Jeff Shapiro, the estimator who put together the bid for Schenectady Electric, didn't buy his argument.

"If you're taking out additions, I would expect you to take it out of all the bids - plumbing, HVAC, masonry," Shapiro said. "If you are going to re-bid the electric contract, you should re-bid them all."

Superintendent Les Loomis and board members tried to reassure the men that the recommendations were in order and that the board put its trust in both Collins and Scoville and Sano-Rubin.

"I can understand (Spraragen's) frustration, but the district as the owner (of the project) had the right to accept or reject any bid," Loomis said. We would hope (Schenectady Electric) would re-bid," he said.

Board member Stuart Lyman said board members went through an exhaustive process to find the best architects and construction managers and he would not second-guess their recommendations.

"Based on the selection process to select the architects and Sano-Rubin, I

Emergency response team quits

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

Citing an increase in health care insurance costs and issues with personnel, the Emergency Response Team at Ravena's Lafarge plant resigned Tuesday, Jan. 25, possibly leaving the village's own ambulance rescue squad shorthanded.

"It was not a decision we came to lightly," said the ERT's former leader

Gary Melius. "Some of the guys are still wondering 'did we do the right thing?'"

Members of the 12-man, all-employee squad served as first responders for the village on Thursdays. According to Lafarge's Community Relations Manager David Vahue, three men would drop everything if an emergency call ever came in Thursdays between 7 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. to respond to the village's call, in addition to serving the facility in a similar manner.

The decision was a unanimous one, Melius said, and stemmed from discussions about health insurance and what the team perceived as labor management problems.

According to Melius, a 12-year member of the ERT, a company-wide decision that the Ravena plant had no control over put

Verizon to upgrade network in town

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

Bethlehem will get its own piece of a multi-billion dollar initiative by Verizon to make crackling on the telephone line, slower-than-optimum Internet speeds and high maintenance costs things of a technological time capsule.

Verizon will bring to residents a fiber optic network, replacing copper wire connections. Beginning in April, the company will install fiber, though Verizon spokesman Cliff Lee said site evaluations and engineering plans are already under way, adding that residents will begin seeing Verizon trucks in their neighborhoods nearly daily soon.

Fiber-to-the-premises, or FTTP, links homes and businesses to the Verizon switch center with hair-thin fibers. The fiber optic links, which use light rather than an electrical impulse, mean that weather will not be a factor in determining the quality of telephone and Internet

Egan delivers State of Town address

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

Two days after President George Bush trumped regularly scheduled television programming to give his State of the Union address, Bethlehem Supervisor Theresa Egan eclipsed some regular work schedules to give the annual State of the Town address Friday morning.

Though the town is on pace with the national growth rate, it's the sixth-fastest growing community in the Capital District, perhaps best reflected in what Egan took as a directive by the constituency that elected her more than a year ago.

"A year ago, we had a very clear mandate to control residential Mental hospital escapee turns self in to Bethlehem P.D.

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

A mental hospital escapee missing from Vermont since Jan. 26 turned herself into the Bethlehem Police Friday after she sought refuge in a Delmar couple's home.

Bethlehem Police held her as a fugitive from justice in the Albany County Correctional Facility, where she was awaiting extradition back to Vermont.

Mary Ellen Gottlieb, 46, was committed to a state hospital when she escaped from custody during a doctor's appointment off of the hospital grounds.

"She has extreme mental health issues," said Vermont State Police Detective Sergeant Matthew Raymond. "In all likelihood, she will (probably be recommended to the hospital)."

Her disappearance was reported to the local police department in South Burlington, Vt., which conducted an investigation before turning the case over to Vermont State Police on Jan. 31.

"She had a six-day head start. We were able to make up that ground in about five days, tracking her from northern Vermont to the south and then west into New York," Raymond said.

Gottlieb, who police considered "a danger to herself and others" was wanted on stalking and disorderly conduct charges, both misdemeanors in Vermont state law. Raymond said she faces no new charges as a result of the escape. The couple Gottlieb was staying with, Raymond and Kimberly Feliciano of 1116 Delaware Turnpike in Delmar, obtained counsel before making arrangements with police for Gottlieb to turn herself in.

Ray Feliciano, who publishes The Informed Constituent with his wife, disputes reports that Gottlieb is dangerous to herself and others and was exploring hiring her as a sales rep.

"She seems pretty normal," Ray Feliciano said. "She is extremely intelligent, assuming what she told us of her employment history. She's a successful sales person. If you're good at sales, then you're good with people."

The Felicianos met her last Monday through a job fair-type booth at Union College. Ray Feliciano said Gottlieb was at Union College seeking advice from professors who could give her referrals to attorneys. By Wednesday, Gottlieb had come back to their Delmar home to stay.

"At that point, we had heard only part of her story. We didn't know she was wanted by police,"

Ray Feliciano said. "By Thursday we knew police were looking for her, and we heard her side of the story."

Ray Feliciano said that when Gottlieb told her side of the story, it sounded to him like a set-up.

"There was a good chance that it was a set-up, that there was a warrant against her because she was pressing charges against a police officer. Obviously, we couldn't corroborate that side of the story from here," Ray Feliciano said.

Bethlehem Police Lt. Thomas Heffernan Jr. said the couple was cooperative throughout the investigation and face no charges.

"(Gottlieb) faces no new charges in New York. We held her on the fugitive from justice charge so we could lodge her in the Albany County Correctional Facility. It's more of a formality," Heffernan said. "Vermont State Police wanted to come and get her Friday night, but given the time and that it was the weekend, nothing really would've happened (in the court system until Monday)."

Heffernan said there "was a lot of communication back and forth" between Vermont State Police and the Bethlehem Police Department, before the Bethlehem Police received information as to her whereabouts and conducted an around-the-clock investigation to find Gottlieb. The Felicianos were concerned for themselves and with getting legal counsel for Gottlieb, Ray Feliciano said.

"Her story was consistent, which made it seem plausible," Ray Feliciano said. "Mental hospitals are used when the government doesn't really want to deal with you anymore. We wanted to make sure she could get legal counsel and we didn't want to face charges of harboring and aiding a felon or any felony charges ourselves."

The case is now in the Vermont and New York district attorneys' hands. "If she waives extradition, it will make things easier," Heffernan said.

Ray Feliciano said he intends to keep in touch with Gottlieb.

Youth fund-raisers to support project

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

Schools haven't hit February yet, but at least one group of high school students is already looking forward to April vacation.

The RPM Youth Group, which makes an annual trip to help areas in need, prepares each year for the trip by conducting fund-raisers. This year, the group has added a new fund-raiser to its repertoire in the form of a folk-acoustic concert next Wednesday night, before holding the popular coffeehouse fund-raiser in March.

Thirty-two members of the group, made up of kids from the Delmar Reformed Church, First United Methodist Church and the Presbyterian Church, will head to Charlotte County in Florida to help rebuild parts of the area that were devastated by a riotous hurricane season.

According to the group's director Barbara Hoffman, 35,000 homes in the area are considered uninhabitable; 50,000 homes remain damaged or destroyed; and blue tarps are serving as makeshift roofs.

"It's going to be a several-yearlong effort just to make a dent," Hoffman said.

A local connection will bring the North Carolina-based group Molasses Creek to perform at Delmar Reformed Church at 386 Delaware Ave. on Wednesday, Feb. 16 at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets for the event cost $10 for adults and $8 for children. That afternoon, the group will host a free workshop for students at 4:30 p.m. The group will discuss what life is like on the road and in a band, from writing and arranging music to recording it.

"Every high school has kids available to be the next big whatever," Hoffman said. "This band is willing to work with them and some kids will be chosen to play on stage with them."

Hoffman hopes this fund-raiser will be just one stop in a series of successful ones, and perhaps could become the next big annual event the community looks forward to, though it's hard to say for sure, she said, because of the group's rigorous touring schedule.

Already this year, the youth group has held successful fund-raisers, Hoffman said, at a Rock-and-Bowl at Del Lanes; a wreath sale; and a church-to-church canvas where the students went to six church services to ask for donations.

In two weeks, Hoffman said, the group has received $2,500 from various church members.

"We have a very generous community," Hoffman said.

Last year, the group traveled to Mexico to lay tile and paint churches, among other things. That trip cost $850 total, $350 of which the kids had to pay themselves. Hoffman doesn't know exactly how much this year's trip will cost per person, but she believes it will be a bit less than last year's.

Members of the Delmar Reformed Church are heading to the same area in March, Hoffman said.

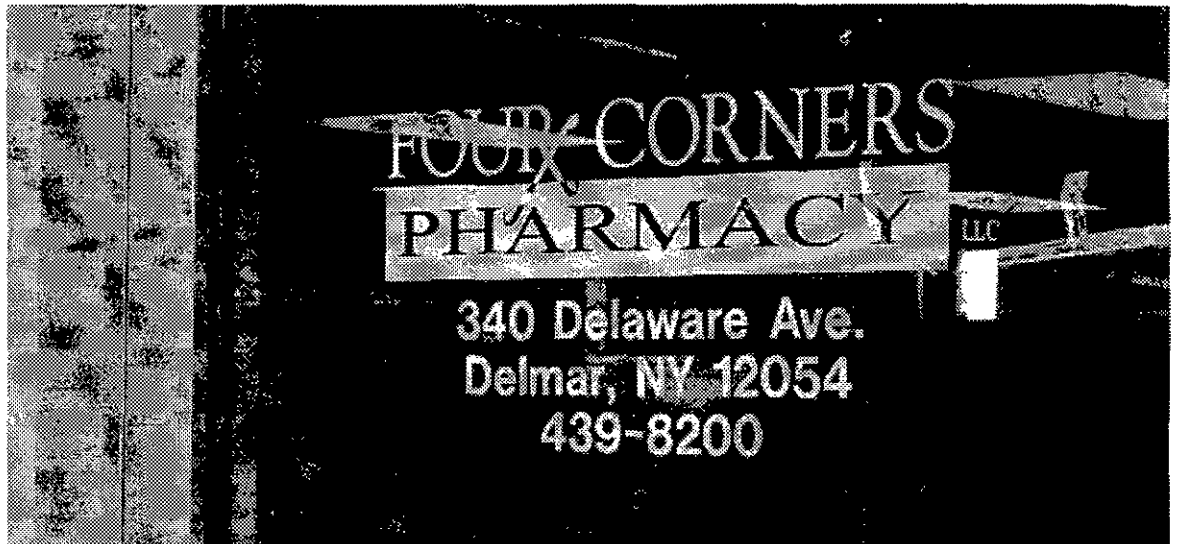

"That's kind of a nice connection," Hoffman said. "When we go down, we'll sort of be picking up where they left off."

Hoffman said the annual trips, and the people they meet, make a lasting impression on the kids who go.

"They want to help out, and make something easier. They are willing to do whatever it takes. They realize they have so much more than the people in these areas."

Misunderstanding solved at meeting

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

Despite 40-plus public meetings regarding the subject, town officials last week examined misinformation surrounding the comprehensive plan, with less than two full months before the yearlong residential moratorium is due to expire, pending an extension by the town board.

Monday's Bethlehem Meeting Advisory Committee meeting cleared up some confusion, said Supervisor Theresa Egan.

"We've made a lot of headway in the last three or four days," Egan said Tuesday morning.

Egan had noted Friday morning at the State of the Town meeting some "misinformation" disseminated regarding the comprehensive plan, which came to a head at last Thursday's comprehensive plan workshop.

A reminder card, issued via mail to rural landowners, made statements that the town saw appropriate to refute. The source of the card remains unknown.

"There is no doubt in my mind that a majority of the complaints were instigated by that card," Egan said Friday. "There was some good discussion regarding density issues. The purpose of the workshops is to air these concerns. But a lot of it was directed by angry landowners who got that card at the last minute, without the benefit of knowing the history of how we got here, which is fine. It's an educational process that the town is happy to engage in."

Egan estimated 95 percent of the residents at Monday's meeting were rural landowners.

The card contained statements that the town, in the comprehensive plan, was calling for the creation of a lands of conservation map.

"That's absolutely an untrue statement," Egan had said Friday.

Two other statements were posted on the card, concerning special permits in rural districts and guiding principals.

Some town board members had believed that in reading the draft of the comprehensive plan, misunderstandings would have been negligible. However, George Leveille, who sits on BPAC, said he understood how some of the conclusions listed on the card were reached.

"In all fairness, after reading the document, I see how you could interpret some of the information," Leveille said. "I wouldn't characterize it as misinformation as much as mininterpretation."

Some slight revisions have been made to the plan, which Egan said BPAC members and rural landowners were all on board with.

Copies of the comprehensive plan are for sale at town hall. Egan said more than 100 copies have been sold.

Father Toole bids farewell to parish

BY MARTIN J. BANNAN

A packed congregation gathered for Mass at St. Matthew's Church in Voorheesville on Jan. 30 to bid farewell to retiring pastor the Rev. Arthur Toole.

A native of Fort Edward, Toole came to Voorheesville in 1976 after serving as a pastor in Cobleskill. With his departure, he concludes 28 years of growth, memories and friendships, but promises not to be a stranger to his long-time flock.

"We have been together for 1,500 weekends, which comes out to nearly 5,000 Masses. That's a lot of sermons," he said. "The party is not over. Only the venue is changing, but the party continues."

According to Toole, it was the influence of an older brother that first prompted him to become a priest.

"After finishing high school, I worked as an underwriter for the Glens Falls Insurance Company," he said. "I didn't feel fulfilled, so I thought about entering the seminary."

Toole attended St. Andrew's Seminary in Rochester and St. Joseph's Seminary in Yonkers and was ordained a priest in 1958.

As pastor of St. Matthew's, Toole witnessed a rapid growth of his congregation. During the 1980s the church expanded. In the 1990s, a classroom and office space were added and then a parish community center. In 1995, Toole supervised the renovation of the church's sanctuary.

The biggest change in the past 28 years, he said, was the increased participation of the laity in sacraments and church affairs.

"I wanted to make this parish a welcoming place," he said. "My goal was to be a source of unity to people with different ideas and attitudes."

During his time in Voorheesville, Toole grew fond of his little village. "Voorheesville feels like home to me," he said. "I've lived here longer than any other place. It's rural, yet still close to the city. It's a great community."

During the Mass, Madge Devine, director of the parish music ministry, led the congregation in a Gaelic blessing. They all sang, "Peace of the earth and the running winds. Deep peace of flowing air to you."

Devine said she will miss working with Toole. "He's an easygoing man, and the best boss I ever had."

Rebecca Kiegle, faith formation secretary, agreed. "He thinks of himself last and puts everyone else ahead of himself," she said, adding that Toole never lost his composure, even during funerals for close friends.

The 75-year-old priest said he will most miss the friends he made while serving as pastor.

After Mass, those friends gathered for a farewell reception in the parish center where they presented going away gifts and mementos for Toole to carry with him in his retirement.

As for the future, Toole said he plans to vacation in Florida and, upon his return, help out at churches that need him on weekends.

"He will be dearly missed," said Voorheesville Mayor Jack Stevens. "He's an excellent leader and friend. His successor has some large shoes to fill."

That successor will be the Rev. Thomas Chevalier of St. Margaret Mary's Church in Albany. He is expected to arrive in time for the 5 p.m. Mass on Saturday, Feb. 12.

Delmar Fire Co. installs officers

The Delmar Volunteer Fire Department held its installation banquet on last month.

Officers were elected during the monthly membership meeting in December.

The following fire officers were installed: Chief James Kerr; First Assistant Chief David Bastiani; Second Assistant Chief Greg Could; Fire Captain Dan Ryan; First Fire Lt. Joe Normandin; Second Fire Lt. David Rice; Third

Fire Lt. Steve Kellogg; Fourth Fire Lt. Steve Kroll; Second Rescue Squad Lt. Joseph Myers; Third Rescue Squad Lt. Ian Grovenger; Quartermaster Fred Chamberlain; Assistant Quartermaster Eric Kerr; Fire Police Captain Paul Spagnola; and Fire Police Lt. Lars Allanson.

Also installed were President George Williams; Vice President Brent Meredith; Treasurer Elwin McNamara; Secretary Merideth Bastiani; Chaplain Mike Roberts; Delegate Gerald Day; and Delegate LeRoy Cooke.

The department is always looking for volunteers and the department has kicked off its 2005 membership drive.

Forty-five minutes at the Red Flame Coffee House

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

If it's February in the Capital District, we're all deep in a snow-filled rut. With the turning of the calendar to this short but excruciating month come the frantic phone calls and e-mails.

"I'm so housebound!"
 "I can't bear the cold!"
 "I'm craving warmer climes!"
 Even as the weather gets more temperate (look - 10 degrees at 6

COMMENTARY:

Mom's the Word

a.m.: a heat wave!), cars idle in driveways all over town as we combat the chill that will freeze our cilia as we move through the frigid air from our cozy homes to our hopefully toasty automobiles.

When 2004's excessive chill set a new record and closed school for a day, I vowed that before another winter's snow yielded to early spring's crocuses and daffodil shoots, I'd spend part of February in a place warm enough to not need insulating layers just to take out the trash.

But, sigh, lingering Christmas bills in spite of increased contributions to a Christmas club (sorry, Grandma, less fruitcake for you next Christmas) and the dream of our annual summer vacation to Ireland bumped Florida from the agenda.

South is south, though, and an overnight trip to New York City meant that Grandma can still have her Christmas fruitcake, and I could keep from going crazy in these days that are slowly giving up their fascination with early darkness.

Breakfast at the Red Flame Coffee House on West 44th Street gave me a whole new perspective on life. I had brought my book as a foil against flying solo, but had forgotten that nobody in New York thinks less of people who have breakfast alone. Also, a big picture window that looks out onto a New York City street is infinitely more interesting than any piece of fiction could ever be.

New York's elegant restaurants and cutting-edge cuisine may get the lion's share of recognition, but coffee shops are like an extension of the average New Yorker's apartment or office. They're also a wonderful refuge for tourists looking to shave a few bucks off their vacation bill while filling up for the next round of sight-seeing.

If there are a million tales in the naked city, there are half a million in any coffee shop, and the rest are walking by the big windows.

What stories do the waiters, waitresses and bus boys, all wearing white shirts and black pants or skirts and chattering 19 to the dozen with each other in Spanish, have? Do Spanish speakers chatter 19 to the dozen? Maybe it's 30 to the dozen; maybe it's only a half dozen. Are they immigrants? From where? Are they second or third generation, but still speak Spanish at home and with each other? What is the middle-aged pretty waitress mouthing to the heavy-set man standing outside the window, grinning at her?

There are two young businessmen in the front booth, looking like professionals in their 20s have looked for a long time in New York: short hair, clean-shaven, white shirts, red ties, jackets hung carefully over the back of the booth while they drink coffee and talk in enthusiastic tones.

A young silent Asian couple sits across the divider from me; were they chattering in their language's equivalent of 19 to the dozen before I inadvertently entered their space? Thin women speaking French nibble at fruit cups; a solid American woman enters and orders half a grapefruit - and a muffin. A middle-aged couple with maps plots their day over a second cup of coffee; at another table of five men, an earnest man with a beard touts the wonders of the public library and adjacent Bryant Park.

A slight man pushing a hand truck full of computer boxes draws me out to the street without having to leave the coffee shop. What lucky upstairs business is getting new Dells? Are they going to one of the street's hotels or university clubs?

A garbage truck pulls up and a small crowd gathers to watch an old copying machine get crunched up. That doesn't seem so great for the environment.

There must be a modeling agency near the Red Flame, for many of the passing girls are tall and willowy with shiny, carefully-coiffed hair and more make-up than is usual on a Friday morning. But perhaps I am too kind - are they girls from an escort service, finally packing it in after a long night?

There are two accoutrements that nearly every New Yorker seems to have and constantly use. With white iPod cords stretching from their ears to their pockets, they look like Bono in recent print ads as they move through New York's streets to their own destinations. With cell phones pressed perpetually to their ears - or, more strangely, wearing headsets that don't show under hats - New Yorkers seem to be having conversations with people we can't see.

Women aren't wearing sneakers on their jaunt to work anymore - which is a shame, for their pointy-toed shoes and boots look like they hurt and aren't very useful for getting through the piles of now-blackened snow left by the most recent storm.

In 45 minutes, I eat two scrambled eggs and wheat toast and feel guilty for not eating fruit when the thin, sharp-faced Frenchwomen leave. I slowly savor three cups of coffee and though I haven't said more than six words to anybody, I feel completely connected to the world, and that I've gathered enough material to write three novels.

How I wish that the rest of America had grown with more of an urban model. Instead of giving in to the convenience of large office parks with huge parking lots and interior company cafeterias, I wish every town and village still had a vibrant center with a plethora of coffee shops and pedestrian traffic.

Maybe the winter blues are less about the cold and more about feeling disconnected and isolated from one another as we wait out the cold.

I thought I'd been craving a vista this winter, either balmy ocean waters or pristine snow-covered fields bordered by snow-capped mountains.

Turns out I'd been craving a crowd, a reassurance in the depths of winter that there are other people out there, hundreds and hundreds of them.

Thank goodness I found them.

Assessment meeting slated

The town of New Scotland Assessor Julie Nooney has announced a public information meeting to discuss the assessment update on the 2006 assessment roll.

The meeting is intended to provide information to New Scotland property owners about the on-going reassessment and to provide an opportunity for property owners to ask questions they may have about the assessment process.

A meeting is scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 17 at 7 p.m. at Voorheesville Village Hall. Nooney will be on hand at both meetings, as well as a real property appraisal technician, the project consultant and a representative of the Office of Real Property Services. Informational materials will be available at both meetings.

For information, call 439-9020.

Matters of Opinion

In the homestretch

Here we are in early February, with an unexpected gift — double digit temperatures. This provides us with some respite from the frigid cold spell that drives many of us to the brink.

Another way of putting it is that we are suffering from a typical bout of Cabin Fever.

We become prisoners in our own homes, breathing in dry air and falling victim to blindly watching the boob tube to distract us. Local merchants tell us this is a slow time of year, every year. After all, who relishes venturing out to even start a cold car? Many of us opt for warmth and go out only when it's absolutely necessary. Work, of course, and procuring sustenance are practically our only activities.

Adding insult to injury is the fact that this is the time of year when many of us fall prey to mostly minor, but nasty, physical ailments. Some try to stave off sickness with a Lady Macbeth-like washing of the hands to ward off disease, which can make us sick prisoners in our own homes.

This year's dose of doom turned out not so much as the flu, but hacking coughs or violent stomach upheavals.

Perhaps that's why Valentine's Day is one of the holidays we enjoy indulging ourselves or someone else with chocolate or other tokens of affection, like flowers or even diamonds. It's one day when we have a chance to lighten up and forget about gloomy winter days and begin rather to think of spring when things begin to actually grow.

Sweet spring is made even sweeter by the horrendous season that precedes it. Somehow the tiny delicate blooms begin to push through the earth and give color back to the outside.

Is there any yellow as beautiful as the color of forsythia or daffodils or any shades of purple as lovely as the hyacinth's?

Of course, the crowning achievement of spring is the leaves that announce their arrival as tiny, lacy ornaments on trees of all varieties.

The young leaves turn the region into a fairyland of color and beauty. It's a fleeting time lasting only a few days but one worth waiting for.

It's about this time that we are freed from our prison homes and head outdoors to help our young bloomers along. In a little more than a month, we will begin to see signs of growth and rebirth, right in our own back yards.

Editorial

Coping with giving and getting gifts

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR

The writer lives in Delmar.

I can see the personal ad now. "Highly-emotional, overly-analytical woman with mediocre table manners seeks relationship. Would-be suitor must tolerate incessant talking (particularly at bedtime), clutter and an unmade bed. Likely to produce offspring with similar personality."

My husband reads this and laughs. "What are you laughing about?" I tease him. "This is the ad you unknowingly responded to all those years ago." "Yeah, I know," he says. "Ah, if you knew then what you know now," I start to tell him. But wait, he did know then. It wasn't really written in an ad, but certainly there were ample signs.

For example, there was The Dining Room Table Incident. We had been dating for quite some time, had even declared our love for one another, when shortly before Valentine's Day, I learned that he had purchased a dining room table.

A dining room table is an investment. So, as he sat there nonchalantly describing the furniture, the tears of sorrow welled in my eyes.

"You bought a dining room table without me? I thought we had a future together. Obviously, you do not envision me at your side hosting family Thanksgiving dinners!"

He replied in the only manner possible: "Huh?" This well-timed, short response is a lifesaver for men. It is a method of buying time and seeking clarification. And it's much nicer than "Are you crazy? I have no idea what you are talking about!"

As it turns out, his only vision for the table involved playing poker with his buddies.

Just on the heels of my ranting performance as the jilted Ghost of Thanksgiving Future was the equally baffling Unmade Bed Incident. The day before Valentine's Day Jeff arrived at my place with a present. It was wrapped in silver foil paper covered with tiny hearts. I knew for certain it was the framed print I had admired at the mall. The one of the black-and-white photo-graph of an unmade bed with two pillows and rumpled sheets, mostly in shadow, but dotted by sunlight coming in through a window

Point of View

Instead of being delighted (he remembered), I was disappointed because it was "only" the day before Valentine's Day. "I've got my bowling league tomorrow night, and it ends late," he explained, "so I wanted to see you today."

What? Bowling ends too late in the evening to see me on Valentine's Day? This couldn't be. I want to be fit in. I must be fit in. I want you to want to fit me in. I don't want to have to tell you to fit me in. I have to see you on the actual holiday. Not one day early. One day early doesn't count! Come see me before bowling or stop by after (I was only 23 and could stay up late on work nights).

Do you want your partner to pull out all the stops on just a few designated Hallmark holidays or would you rather have simple kindness spread throughout the year? Of course the answer is: BOTH, we want BOTH! Just kidding, sort of.

Lest you think our courtship was all romance and unmade beds, I must let you know that the first birthday presents he bought me were a set of kitchen knives, a block in which to store them, and a cutting board.

"I can't chop everything with a butter knife," said my practical boyfriend. (In my defense, I also had steak knives).

The man bought me knives. Not a particularly romantic gift on the surface, but one that intimated "I plan to be in your kitchen a lot." And at least he knew enough to get me a present.

For our first wedding anniversary I made a homemade tape of songs that chronicled our relationship. This involved hours selecting the right music, waiting for opportunities to record the songs, and making sure I reshuffled his CDs in the correct location so the process would not be discovered.

We celebrated by spending a long weekend in Montreal. At the fancy French restaurant on Saturday night I waited for him to initiate the exchange of presents. I waited and waited, but dinner, dessert and the check came without any cards or small boxes sliding over to my side of the table.

Our actual anniversary was on Monday, so I rationalized that he was waiting until then to give me something. Maybe he had remembered that Valentine's Day when he tried to celebrate too early.

On Monday, I produced my card and gift. He accepted them a bit sheepishly, saying, "But you said no presents! You said this trip to Montreal would be our gift to each other." Ah, a common mistake. He didn't realize that "You don't need to give me a present" means "Surprise me with a present." I had to fill in the blanks: I want you to want to give me a present. I don't want to have to tell you that I want a present. And I certainly don't want to have to tell you what the present should be.

A present doesn't have to be expensive or even purchased. It could be a poem, or a single flower or just a card with a heartfelt, original paragraph. This advice is for my husband only. I don't want any guy out there to get in hot water by penning a love poem when his beloved wants jewelry. The trick is in knowing what your woman wants.

Good luck on that.

There is so much hype around holidays and relationship milestones that it's easy to lose sight of the fact that those are only single moments in time. If your guy makes you a lunch to take to work, starts your car on cold mornings and barely winces when he finds stray used tissues in the couch, well, you need to realize the value of that ongoing consideration.

Do you want your partner to pull out all the stops on just a few designated Hallmark holidays or would you rather have simple kindness spread throughout the year? Of course the answer is: BOTH, we want BOTH! Just kidding, sort of.

It's been 17 years since Jeff and I met. Although I'm still exasperating on most counts, I have loosened up on the gift demands and the timing of celebrations.

This takes the pressure off both of us. I don't expect a gift and I don't have to agonize about what to get him. This past year I even went to my book club meeting on our wedding anniversary.

We still have that birthday knife set in our kitchen. And I have served many holiday dinners on that famous dining room table. I wish he had purchased six matching chairs and not just four, but we supplement with folding chairs, so it all worked out just fine.

If there had been a personal ad, it would have said: "Intense, compassionate, T-shirt-and-jeans-wearing woman with a sense of humor who loves theater, reading books, watching movies, dancing and sleeping late on weekends seeks an intelligent, kind-hearted man to share life's ups and downs. Would-be suitor must keep a stash of Reese's peanut butter cups in the freezer."

P.S. Don't forget to get me a card for Valentine's Day.

Your Opinion Matters

BCUEA wants respect & its fair share

Editor, The Spotlight:

Imagine, if you will, that your child is standing and waiting for his or her school bus. After a long wait, the bus never comes so you drive your child to school.

When you arrive at school, the office is empty so you bring your child to the classroom. The teacher is there but seems to be scurrying to accomplish many things.

The aide is not there to help you so you leave your child behind, assuming that all will be well. You remind your child that his lunch money is in his backpack.

After you leave, your child becomes agitated because the aide who usually helps the child stay on task and keep anxiety at bay is not there.

Later in the morning, there is no heat in the room, and the custodian is not there to figure out what is wrong.

The building principal calls the maintenance department, but no one answers. The teacher asks the children to bundle up until the situation is fixed, and they are lined up to go to the cafeteria for a hot lunch.

Upon arrival, they find the kitchen is closed. No hot lunch today. There is nothing to eat or drink.

No noon hour aides to watch the children play and give the teacher a well-deserved break. At this point, the teachers are very overwhelmed.

Parents must be called. There is no transportation to bring the children home and no support staff to help make the phone calls. Administrators come to offer assistance, but there are so many buildings and so many parents to be called.

Imagine what the day would be like if the support staff of Bethlehem Central were not there.

This would never happen of course because we are dedicated people who love what we do and always go above and beyond our duties.

Right now we are negotiating with the district for a fair contract. We are not asking for large raises.

Right now we are negotiating for a take home salary that will not be less than what we are earning now.

The district does not want to reward us as they have others. We work hard and have to support our children and families.

We ask for your support.

Please ask the district administration why the BCUEA support staff are being treated like this.

Thanks to volunteers

Editor, The Spotlight:

The RCS board of education and administration would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank the members of the Ravena, Coeymans, Coeymans Hollow and New Baltimore fire companies as well as the rescue squad personnel from Ravena and Bethlehem and the members of the local police agencies.

Their continued dedication to the safety of the faculty, staff and students of the RCS Central School District is greatly appreciated. The dedication of these selfless volunteers was never more evident than on Wednesday, Feb. 2, when our middle and high schools were evacuated after bus fumes made their way into our ventilation systems.

Their professionalism and concern during their response was greatly appreciated by all present.

Our communities are truly blessed to be served by these volunteers.

Hats off to Mr. Buenau. Customer service is alive and well. Recently, my mother, Eve Murray, had called Mr. Buenau in regard to her eyes.

He suggested that she come in for a follow-up since she doesn't drive anymore. He took the time to pick her up, do the eye exam and drove her back home.

Draft plan needs more scrutiny

Editor, The Spotlight:

I write this letter following the public forum held on Feb 3 on the draft Comprehensive Plan.

One certainly gets the impression that the entire process is being propelled on a predetermined agenda.

The information gathering meetings held to build the "town's vision" have routinely been on topics, which play well to a certain crowds, while issues and concerns of others are ignored and pushed aside in the interest of time.

My wife and I have attended many of the forums, and we both felt the agendas were configured in a way to prejudice certain interests and limit discussions on others. Frequently, questions and concerns from some residents were ignored, and largely anytime the matter of zoning and restrictions on privately owned land came up, they were put aside as not relevant to that forum's topic.

Many of us left each meeting waiting for the forum where our concerns or at least the topic would be discussed.

Feb. 3, evidently was the time allotted for the entire draft Comprehensive Plan, and it was completely inadequate. It was apparent in every aspect of this meeting that questions and concerns of at least one interested group were handled in a unsatisfactory manner, while the other interest groups I am sure felt quite satisfied that their interests had been addressed.

Remember, this particular draft of the Comprehensive Plan was only available to the public less than two weeks prior to the Feb. 3 meeting.

That is not enough time to fully digest everything contained in this document including an overhaul and change in the way development occurs in this town, new topics to investigate like conservation easements, and most importantly how every section of the plan might impact a landowner, a proprietor and a taxpayer in this town.

It is a slap in the face to not allow adequate time for discussion, debate and to make revisions on the plan before it goes to the town board's public hearing.

services. "The speed will be tremendously higher, as will the reliability and quality," Lee said. "Fiber maintenance is less expensive. You find copper wire in huge bundles underground or aboveground. A lot of the time, the cables get wet, they can get knocked down, there can be a lot of maintenance. You don't get that with fiber. Maintenance will be considerably cheaper."

Residents will see a wider range of services, Lee said, including high speed, broadband Internet connections, good for small businesses or families with home offices that need the capability of transmitting large amounts of data. Further down the line, residents may be offered a full palate of video services, pending a franchise agreement, Lee said.

Verizon considered demand and facilities in place in the towns it chose. Construction costs are minimized, Lee said, by using towns with significant facilities in place.

"There's fiber in every community. It's just a matter of how much," Lee said. How much, nationwide, equals more than 10 million miles of fiber optic cable in place already.

Fiber will be run into the neighborhoods, and when orders are placed, workers will splice the cables to provide the service, Lee said. There will be no service fee for connection, with Lee calling it a service to existing Verizon customers.

Customers will be able to choose from three package options, including packages at $34.95, $44.95 and $199.95 per month, for 5, 15 and 30 megabits per second, respectively.

Bethlehem is one of six towns in upstate New York named in the most recent batch of participating towns. The initiative has already begun in parts of 12 states.

"We haven't discussed the numbers, but we will be spending billions of dollars over the course of the next few years in several states," Lee said of the initiative to set the network up across the country, which could result in the hiring of hundreds of Verizon employees in New York alone and thousands across the country.

Lee said Verizon expects the initiative to be popular in this area, judging from its reception in other parts of the country.

"Our experience in states where we offer this has been overwhelming. In Keller, Texas, within four months of its installation, we picked up 20 percent of the broadband market," Lee said. "That's a phenomenal figure."

am biased to go with their recommendations," he said. "The scope has changed enough that we have to re-bid and I find no fault with that."

Connors was not convinced.

"You aren't going to save the kind of money you are talking about," he said. "There is something going on here. This isn't going to end here."

Shaffer runs away with 3,200 title at meet

By ROB JONAS

Matt Shaffer is hitting his stride during the indoor track and field season.

The Bethlehem junior ran away with the 3,200-meter title in a time of 9:42.87 at Sunday's Suburban Council Championships at the University at Albany, less than one month after winning the same event at the Southern Tier Classic.

Shaffer's indoor success is in stark contrast to his cross country season this past fall, when he quickly dropped from being part of the Suburban Council's elite to the middle of the Bethlehem pack.

"I don't know what happened,"

Shaffer said. "I didn't have such a good cross country season, but I'm making up for it in indoor (track)."

Shaffer was at the front of the league pack Sunday. After settling into a comfortable pace behind Colonie's Kevin Treadway over the first six laps, Shaffer took the lead one-third of the way through and steadily pulled away to win by 14.26 seconds over Treadway.

Shaffer said he had hoped Bethlehem teammate Adam Hill — who was fourth through the first six laps — would be with him at the finish line. But Hill fell back to ninth place with a time of 10:20.42.

"I figured my teammate, Adam Hill, would come with me, but he wasn't feeling too well," Shaffer said.

Cody Germain also had a big day for Bethlehem. The senior took second place in the triple jump with a distance of 42 feet 11.25 inches and placed fourth in the long jump with a distance of 19-10.5.

The Bethlehem girls were led by Emily Coles, who won the 55-meter hurdles in a time of 8.95 seconds and took fourth place in the 55-meter dash in a time of 7.74 seconds.

Emily Malinowski proved to be the only challenger for Saratoga's Nicole Blood in the 3,000. Blood won with a time of 9:59.09, but Malinowski stayed within 50 meters of Blood the whole way and took second with a personal best time of 10:06.04.

The rest of the pack was at least one lap behind Blood and Malinowski. Saratoga's Hannah Davidson was third in a time of 10:39.38, and Bethlehem's Kristin Kenney placed fourth in a time of 10:42.73.

Other top-six individual performances for Bethlehem were turned in by Sara Turner in the high jump (fourth, 5 feet) and Claire Luke in the 1,500 (sixth, 5:04.07).

The Suburban Council Championships is one of the final tune-ups before the Section II class meets Feb. 20 at the University at Albany. Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute is hosting its annual Eringer Games this weekend.

Craven wins at Colonial meet

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk's Sam Craven had a good day at Saturday's Colonial Council Championships at Hudson Valley Community College.

Craven won the 600-meter race in a time of 1:31.16 and helped Ravena's 1,600-meter relay team take first place. The quartet of Craven, Jim Lutz, Josh Gibson and Stephen Rogers finished with a time of 3:59.41.

Tom Mauro and Matt Haker had multiple top-six finishes for the Indians. Mauro placed third in the 55-meter dash and fifth in the 300-meter dash, while Haker placed fourth in the 1,100 and the 55-meter hurdles.

Garrett McClusky (high jump), Max Smith (long jump) and Tim Sugrue (shot put) had third-place performances.

the cap on health insurance for retirees at $50,000, "which, if you know medical costs these days, could be wiped out in one visit," Melius said.

An absentee policy and a lack of appreciation for the team's efforts led to the resignation, but the company's reaction to the dissolution of the team is what may prevent it from regrouping, Melius said.

"(The announcement) didn't even phase them, which is one of our big concerns," Melius said.

In cases of multiple calls, Vahue said, the ERT would act as needed.

Referring to the Thursday shift, Vahue said, "The community needs to find a way to fill that gap."

He added that the ERT's ambulance would be donated to the Ravena Rescue Squad.

Six of the members of Lafarge's ERT are State Certified Emergency Medical Technicians. The other six are CPR certified. All volunteer with the Ravena Rescue Squad, however intermittently, Melius said, noting they respond to calls as they are available.

Melius said there were at least two instances in the last six years that the ERT's existence saved someone's life.

"A lot of serious injuries happen here," Melius said.

"As much as the company may not be happy with the decision, I think, deep down, they know we're not going to turn our backs and walk away," Melius later said. "I swore this team would never fold, and I kind of went back on my promise to myself."

The village was notified within minutes of the announcement, Village Mayor John Bruno said.

Bruno said he's offered the rescue squad any service the town can offer, mostly in the form of manpower. A village employee fills a gap on Tuesdays, much like the ERT did on Thursdays.

Members of the now-defunct team remain Lafarge employees. In a press release, Plant Manager Martin Turecky said: "While we are disappointed with the group's decision, we extend our thanks and appreciation to them."

growth and to expand the commercial tax base and diversify it," Egan said.

The process of answering that mandate, in the form of 40-plus public meetings and the formation of a Bethlehem Planning Advisory Committee, has been a time-consuming one.

Egan and other town officials eagerly await the conclusion of the planning process and the new design guidelines and zoning ordinances that it will produce.

Even with the residential moratorium, which affected 118 units, 1,004 units will be nearly set to go when the halt is lifted.

"That's a tremendous amount of dwelling units," Egan said, noting the town's annual average for building permits has been climbing steadily since the 1950s, peaking in the 1990s at an average of 227 before dropping to 95 in the fall of last year.

Republican town board member George Lenhardt said he believes two major issues face the town in the coming year.

"The comprehensive plan is dead center on the radar screen," Lenhardt said. "And the EPA dewatering facility right along with the comprehensive plan."

Egan, in her speech, noted some "misinformation" that's been disseminated regarding the comprehensive plan.

The town's three largest taxpayers — Selkirk Cogen, NiMo and PSEG — are all in the power sector, which concerns Egan.

Independent board member

Tim Gordon noted a goal to address energy concerns, particularly in increasing renewable energy sources around town.

"The Vista Tech Park (behind the Slingerlands Price Chopper) is a great place to initiate some of the newest forms of renewable energy," Gordon said. "I think we could be a leader."

Some goals for the coming year, Egan noted, include the $17.5 million upgrades to the New Salem Water Treatment Plant; getting involved in the Tech Valley initiative; a Route 85 expansion and development of the unoccupied Ames Plaza and the old BlueCross BlueShield building.

ESTATE

with Abbey Farbstein
COLDWELL BANKER PRIME PROPERTIES

Home Buyers of the New Millenium

You've decided to place your home on the market, and your real estate agent is scheduling showings to potential buyers. You're feeling sure of a quick sale because your asking price is competitive, and you're curious about what kind of family will move into your home. Be ready for surprises - today's home buying families don't always fit the time-honored standard of father, mother, and two plus children.

Buyers of 21st century are a diverse group with a "nontraditional" profile, and the homes they purchase often serve a nontraditional life-style. In the 1950's, a typical young couple wanted extra bedrooms for their future family, but today's first-time buyers might want an office and an exercise room instead. A growing number of singles, extended families and dual-income partners are looking for homes that fit their expanded definition of "family", and their needs will dictate the functionality of the house. Move-up buyers are choosing elegant, low maintenance designs, with dual masters, great rooms and state-of-the-art home offices.

While traditional single-family buyers still dominate the market and still want family rooms and access to good schools, the demographic of today's homebuyer is definitely undergoing a transformation.

For professional advice on all aspects of buying and selling real estate, call me at Coldwell Banker Prime Properties, 518-640-4444 or email me at abbey@cbpp.com.

Bethlehem Library's storytimes accommodate working parents

Time Out For Tales, Saturday story programs suited to working parents' schedules, will be held on March 26 and April 9 at 11 a.m. at Bethlehem Public Library.

Designed for children ages 2 to 6 with an attending adult, Time Out for Tales is being offered on a trial basis to determine level of interest.

No registration is necessary. Also with working parents in mind, the age range of our 10-week family storytime program has been expanded to include children age 2 to 6 and their families.

These sessions continue on Tuesdays at 7 p.m. and on Wednesdays at 1:30 p.m.

Storytimes — whether at the library or on a comfy couch at home — go a long way toward developing cognitive skills.

Group sessions at the library are especially effective in preparing children for a school environment. By learning to look and listen to an adult up front, children develop attention span and focus.

At the same time, children are exposed to the dynamics of a group, and learn to connect and interact with their peers — a valuable introduction to the classroom.

Overarching all of this is exposure to the best in children's literature and illustration, selected by experts in the field — our youth services librarians.

According to Emilie Buchwald, "Children are made readers on the laps of their parents."

Parents are still the foremost influence on a young child's interest in books, and eventually, in reading.

Here are some tips for storytime interactions at home:

- Encourage your child to recount his or her storytime experiences.
- If your child begins to talk about a story, listen attentively.
- Repeat storytime fingerplays, songs and rhymes with your child.
- Make time for one-on-one story reading.
- Make time at the library for your child to select at least one book.

• Ask youth services staff to help you find books of special interest to your child.

There are currently openings at all levels of the library's winter storytime schedule. For information, call 439-9314 and ask for a youth services librarian.

Festival volunteers needed

Friends of Bethlehem Public Library is sponsoring a Family Festival at Elm Avenue Town Park on Saturday, May 21.

Volunteers are needed to plan food, entertainment and activities. Festival volunteers will meet on Wednesday, Feb. 16 at 7 p.m. in the library board room.

Call Friends president David Cooper at 439-4250 for information.

Friends board of directors

Friends of Bethlehem Public Library is looking for board members to oversee a variety of projects and programs.

The Friends board meets bimonthly; meeting dates and minutes are posted on www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org or call Cooper for information.

Friends of Bethlehem Public Library is a nonprofit volunteer organization whose mission is to engage in library advocacy, develop fund-raising initiatives and plan and host cultural and educational activities.

Our Friends is part of a national network of Friends groups. To learn more, visit www.folusa.org.

Wednesday is now after school chess day at Ravena Library

Beginning on Feb. 16, Wednesday will be the Ravena Public Library's scheduled chess day.

Josh Meyer, president of the Ravena Coeymans Selkirk High School Chess Club, has agreed to demonstrate and teach chess for elementary- and middle-school players.

Each person will play at least one game and probably more every week. Meyer will work with the kids on chess puzzles and give a short lesson in the late afternoon.

If your children are interested, please call to register them. Tell us what time they will arrive at the library, so we can integrate our plans for the age range. Call Judy at 756-2053.

Storytime schedules

Storytimes, both Romp & Read and Stories & Crafts for Kids, are on the spring schedule. There has been one change of location: Tuesday morning Romp & Read is now at the Selkirk Firehouse, east of Route 9W on Route 396.

The Romp & Read schedule is: Tuesday, 10 a.m. at the Selkirk Firehouse; Tuesday, 6:30 p.m., at A.W. Becker School; Thursday, 6:30 p.m., at P. B. Coeymans School; Friday, 10 a.m., at RCS Community Library.

Stories & Crafts for Kids is Thursday at 11 a.m. at the library. No registration is necessary.

Call the library at 756-2053 for information.

Microfilm made easy

With the help of Assemblyman Pat Casale, the library received a Community Service Project grant in January.

This surprise windfall has allowed the library to purchase a new microfilm reader-printer that prints through our computer network. The machine loads easily, and the entire screen stays in focus.

Local historians can view the News Herald microfilm, 1873 to 1995, without fear of a blinding headache.

Children's Dental Health Month

The month of February is the time for parents and teachers to take the opportunity to inform children of the importance of dental health. During this month the dental community bands together behind the sole purpose of educating children about their teeth. Children must create value at a young age or they run the risk of neglecting their teeth and gums.

This time of year should be spent working with children on their brushing skills. Parents and teachers should review nutrition and the impact that food has on their teeth. Create a habit of brushing and flossing for your children and it will be much easier for them to sustain a healthy mouth through their lifetime.

Ask your dentist for helpful tips and educational aids, we are sure your dentist will be happy to help.

IRISH 2000 WINTERFEST

It may be another month until St. Patrick's Day, but you can get your Irish fix early this year at the 2nd Annual Irish 2000 Music & Arts Winterfest set for this Saturday, Feb. 12, at the convention center in the Empire State Plaza.

An offshoot of the Irish 2000 festival held each September at the Altamont Fairgrounds, the Winterfest was first organized in 2004 and was so successful that it's back for a repeat.

The show will be headlined by Eileen Ivers & Immigrant Soul, featuring the widely known fiery violinist in "Riverdance;" the McKrells, who bring their unique brand of acoustic music blending high, lonesome bluegrass heart with Celtic spirit; Danu, which features traditional Irish music played by Irish musicians; The Prodigals, one of the most successful bands to emerge from the East Coast Irish music scene; and Seamus Kennedy hailing from Belfast, who will perform his vast store of songs, sprinkled with jokes, stories and snappy repartee. It promises to be a non-stop celebration of Celtic music.

"This is the largest Irish music event of the winter season – other than the St. Patrick's Day Parade," said Irish 2000 President Matt Nelligan. "We have something for everyone who likes Irish Music."

In addition to the headliners, Irish 2000 Winterfest will feature The Michael Farrell School of Irish Dance, plus food, beverages and crafts.

"Winterfest features some of the top talent today including Eileen Ivers, a true master of the fiddle; and the Prodigals, one of the best Celtic rock band on the scene," Nelligan said. "Plus, Danu – twice voted the best traditional band of the year by Irish Music magazine – will be performing as will local favorites, The McKrells, and the ever-popular Seamus Kennedy."

The Winterfest, run's from 5 p.m. to 11 p.m. You can see The Michael Farrell School of Dance from 4: p.m.; The McKrells at 5 p.m.; Seamus Kennedy at 6 p.m., Danu at 7 p.m.; Eileen Ivers at 8:25 p.m.; and The Prodigals at 10 p.m.

You can purchase tickets online from TicketWeb, or call 1-888-414-3378. Tickets will be available at the door or through the following advance ticket outlets: Celtic Treasures in Saratoga Springs (583-9452); Tipperary Trading Co. in Troy (279-TARA), The Albany Irish American Center in Albany (438-8230); Schenectady AOH in Schenectady (374-9003) or Boscov's Customer Service in Colonie Center. Tickets are $25 for a general admission ticket which doesn't guarantee any particular seat and are located on all the upper tiers of the Convention Center, or $30 for a reserved ticket which guarantees a particular seat and table, are located on the floor level and includes waiter/waitress service for drinks and food.

Attendees may park underground in the areas designated for visitor parking at the Empire State Plaza. There is a $2 fee. Visitors must have a photo ID. For information visit www.irish2000fest.com.
