

Both anchor stores folded when each company filed for bankruptcy at different times. Lennar Partners took over for the original owner a short time later.

"The original owner was never able to get the plaza refilled because of the state of the market," said John MacAffer, of CB Richard Ellis/Albany, who brokered the sale.

Lennar held onto the approximately 138,000-square-foot property for about a year, MacAffer said, noting that after the two anchor stores left, the original owner had trouble paying his share.

Benderson beat out several offers, before closing the deal on Feb. 15, MacAffer said.

"By the time it hit the market, there were several interested parties," he said. "There was a lot of discussion prior to it just because of what's going on there."

V'ville board hears energy saving plan

By MARTIN J. BANNAN

In their ongoing effort to save money, Voorheesville school district officials are considering a plan to reduce energy costs, painlessly. At its monthly board meeting on Feb. 14, Charles D. Fasnacht of Energy Education presented his firm's method of, "Using your brain to save energy."

The program promises a 15 to 30 percent savings or, for Voorheesville, a $60,000 net savings in its first year.

"Our company guarantees that savings will offset investment. There is no risk," Fasnacht said. "The school pays monthly, but if there is no savings in energy costs we will write a check to make up the difference." comfort is not affected."

This deer and several of his cohorts enjoyed frolicking at Bethlehem Central High School Saturday.

Instead, the savings, he said would come from measures taken at night, weekends, holidays and transition periods at the beginning and ending of the day.

One of the key methods includes maintaining optimum use of equipment so, for example, a steam table or hot plate will be at the right temperature, at the right time, but not before or after.

"There are 1,200 things we look at," Fasnacht added.

Based in Wichita Falls, Texas, Energy Education is no stranger to the Capital Region. In the past, they have provided services to Bethlehem, South Colonie and Schenectady has saved more than $500,000 in 10 months.

Jim Franco

Currentlyly, the district spends $430,000 on energy costs according to estimates, Satita Winchell told the board. "I would budget the savings to pay for the program rather than add it in a line item."

The board decided to review the proposal and continue discussion at their March 7 meeting.

In other business, music department chair, Lydia Tobler outlined plans to replace the school's aging musical instruments.

As Voorheesville's music program grew, the school bought instruments to keep up with the expansion but has had no plan to rotate them after they wear out. Many are now unserviceable or costing needless expense for repairs. During the meeting she displayed a French horn that had been soldered several times

> A Bethlehem Central School District policy could be a sign of things to come in school districts across New York state.

The policy to ban school buses and private vehicles from idling on school grounds sprang up from a group of concerned parents, that, about a year ago, sent the district a package that detailed health concerns in children who were exposed to diesel exhaust fumes, leading to meeticgsage and brainstorming sessions between The program entails meetings with consultants who inspect the school in search of energy wasting inefficiencies. The school will select an energy manager who would serve as a point person for the consultants. The energy manager could be any teacher or staff member. The main qualification is that they have a passion to save energy. The energy manager would receive a salary that would be made available from savings resulting from the program. Their job afterward will be to make everyone want to be part of this energy ethic."

"Our 23 consultants will work with your energy manager and train them on energy saving techniques," Fasnacht said. "This is not a repeat of the late 1970s when we turned out lights and wore extra sweaters. The student's Schenectady schools. Presently, they are working with the Guilderland School District.

School Superintendent Alan McCartney said he looked into this program three years ago but found it cost prohibitive. At the time, no other school in the area participated leaving one school district to pay for consultants' travel expenses.

According to Fasnacht, those costs would be lower as long as consultants are still working in the area. "There is now a small window of opportunity while we are . in Guilderland," he said.

Should the school agree to contract with Energy Education, their cost would include a $61,000 investment the first year. Fasnacht projects that the first year will provide a $100,000 savings for a net figure of $39,500.

"Our experience is we exceed our projections," Fasnacht said, adding that "There are still a lot of good instruments," Tobler said. "But, it's not cost effective maintaining these tired and worn out instruments."

Board President Robert Baron told Tobler that she needed to get a program together so she would not get into this  $\Box$  ENERGY/page 31

Class rep ousted for drinking

Bethlehem Central School Superintendent Les Loomis confirmed Friday that a student class officer at the high school was found to be under the influence (of alcohol) at a recent dance at the school.

The board of education invoked its policy of a five-day suspension and offered counseling for the student if the family chooses to avail themselves of it.

Loomis said that the student has also been removed from holding a position of a class officer.

He declined to identify the student or discuss any other details of the incident.

"Our expectation is that all students will act responsibly during the school day and at all school activities," Loomis said. "Students who represent the school on athletic teams or as class officers are expected to demonstrate responsible behavior."

Updated comp plan is available for review

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

The most up-to-date of the draft of the town's comprehensive plan was made available yesterday, on the town's Web site and also at Mail Boxes Etc., which has agreed to sell copies of the document.

Next Thursday, March 3, town residents will sound off about the draft at a public hearing. The latest version will include updates, refinements, text changes and summaries of sections, said George Leveille, who sits on the Bethlehem Planning Advisory Committee.

"There will be some visible changes," Leveille said.

A recent workshop led town officials to debunk some myths that abounded at that workshop, namely in the form of a postcard that was distributed anonymously to rural landowners, that made note of a lands of conservation map and incorrect statements concerning special permits in rural districts and guiding principals. The ensuing BPAC meeting quelled a number of those fears, according to town officials. "Part of the process of the public hearing is to get people to understand what's in (the draft comprehensive plan)," Leveille said. "I think there are still many people out there who have never heard of the process, who have never been to a meeting. The hearing is a chance to work through some of those issues."

All tolled, the comprehensive planning process will be responsible for 40-plus public meetings on the subject, including focus group sessions on commercial district design, recreation and trailways and the riverfront. BPAC, the group tasked to develop the comprehensive plan, continues to hold monthly meetings. Surveys to town residents and rural landowners sprang up along the way. The town board recently addressed the possibility of an extension, as short as three months or as long as six months. "There is growing concern around the content of the plan," Leveille said. "There's a ton of interest."

The Spotlight received a letter that was also forwarded to a number of residents seeking signatures in support of adopting the comprehensive plan.

"At this time, we seek your. support for this long awaited and much needed plan," the letter said. "As citizens, it is critical that we participate in this process." The letter also urged the recipients to share the information with their colleagues and friends.

The public hearing will take place at town hall auditorium from 7 p.m. until 9 on Thursday, March 3. Copies of the draft are available to print off the town's Web site at www.townofbethlehem.org or at Mail Boxes Etc. at 159 Delaware Ave. in Delmar for a cost.

25th reunion forces alum to look ahead

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

Here's the thing about answering machines: you never know what voice will speak out of the ether to suddenly surround you in the kitchen. That blinking light can be a promising sign or something to dread. Perfectly normal sunny afternoons can be darkened by a terse "call me back;" dreary winter mornings can be buoyed by a long-distance "Hey! The funniest thing happened, and I wanted you to hear it." And there are the calls that get erased before a voice with an outsourced-to-India accent can finish its latest offer.

One recent call was a reminder of the passing years and a promise of fun to come. The associate director of special gifts from Middlebury College called to announce that it was time to begin preparations for a watershed reunion next year. A number of friends received the same call, for soon the answering machine's light was blinking furiously.

"Hey — did Rick Greene call you? This will be fun! Call me." "Hey — did he really say 25th reunion? Holy --! Call me." So fellow Midd alum Kristen and I met with Rick Greene to be part of the people planning next year's big do. Our primary goal will be fund-raising and while few things are as onerous as hitting people up for money, adding to the endowment of a college my kids might want to go to someday is a chore I'll perform gladly.

The 25th reunion, Rick assured us, brings people back from far and wide, with relaxed attitudes about life, themselves and the world around them.

"People tend to be comfortable in their skin by then," he said. Lucky them! I'm most comfortable in my skin when I'm sacked out on the couch in sweatpants with a cotton blanket tossed over cycles of a bucolic campus: gray me, watching "Bend it Like stone buildings framed alter-Beckham" on HBO for the nately by green fields, flaming fall millionth time. Is it possible to return to college size in the next year and a half? Can I create the lithe, tawny skiier I always wanted to be to replace my AdvantEdge card-swiping self?

As life pushes us forward, it often doesn't feel like we have much time for assessing where we are; where we've been and where we're going. Here's guessing that we've all stood over an ironing board, spread peanut butter on a piece of bread for a child, finally tracked the source of that odor to underneath the stove, and fixed the screen door AGAIN, then sworn to the heavens above that this isn't what I meant to do with my life!

College is a great time of dreaming, of planning, of hoping, and in the naivete of those years, surrounded by people in exactly the same phase of life, we were able to believe we were kings and queens of the world. Everything seemed possible, and the world seemed totally conquerable in the foliage and snow-capped mountains. One of my favorite Middlebury moments came after dinner one spring day, when the trees were budding and we could smell the earth that nearby farmers were beginning to turn over with their tractors. We left the Student Dining Units to see people gathered at the rail of the building, watching the sun set over the Adirondack Mountains. The huge, fiery sun descended gracefully behind mountains it had blackened in its light. Rays of orange spread across the tops of the peaks and bled into the pale blue sky of the spring evening. Nobody spoke and when the last bit of sun dipped behind the hills, we all applauded.

Foreshadowing, an English major might have declared, had we even been able to imagine that sunsets might someday only become obstacles creating glare on the road as we hurried from work to home or to take a child to dance or basketball. Who among us hasn't snapped down a sun visor in irritation while trying to remember if there's anything in the freezer that might make a halfway-healthy dinner that evening?

I used to wake up, pull the covers tighter around me and ponder what the day might bring. Nowadays, I'm just as likely to wake up, dive back under the covers and wish it were bedtime again. Eventually, my attitude disgusts me, and I rise, telling myself that my life is good and full and I just need a cup of coffee to jump-start me and my attitude.

As adults, it often doesn't feel like we have choices, let alone dreams. It can get hard to step outside of our own lives to assess where we are and where we want to be next. When life feels like life is a flume ride at an amusement park, sometimes the best we can do is hang on for dear life. But rides stop and we do have some choice over the next one we take.

I spend most of my time thinking about what my children will do next and trying to help them without smothering them to get there next. Thinking about my 25th college reunion, I realized with a start that I have only a handful of years - literally before both of my children are off on their own college adventures. Even as I delight in the milestones they reach, I am saddened about the time that will never come again. It's great to talk with them about the direction our nation is taking, but how I miss the days when I could hold both their little bodies on my lap and read The Little Red Lighthouse to them.

When the sun set on Middlebury's campus all those years ago, we applauded and moved on to the next adventure. Maybe we need to stop and applaud all of our current adventures --- even if they are just serving the family the number of vegetables they should eat --- and realize that another sun will rise tomorrow.

/Matters of

Teachers breath a sigh of relief. Kids are in a state of euphoria. Parents may dread it or enjoy it. That's because it's Presidents Week, which means winter break for school children throughout the Capital District.

As a bonus for regular folk, it means less traffic for those of us who work throughout the week. That's because many parents take the week off to spend with their kids and are not on the roads during rushhour traffic.

If Monday's weather Editorial is any indication of what Mother Nature might have in store, kids will be able to enjoy what we hope is the last of the season. It's a good bet that children will be sleding, tubing, boarding and ice skating. Others will take advantage of winter break programs in theater and the arts.

The kids deserve a break from their everyday routine of school and the myriad of lessons they take outside of school.

Still others will enjoy a trip usually south to catch a little sunshine.

Most kids and adults need some time to recharge their batteries during the year and simply take a break from normal routines. We hope the kids find time away from the computer and TV to catch up on some pleasure reading.

We hope they also have some time for reflection time to flex the muscles that fuel their imaginations.

Too many children today have commitments that tend to dominate their young lives as parents worry about their middle school youngsters getting into the right colleges. Maybe we need to lighten up some and give our kids time to be just what they are - kids.

Many pre-school and elementary teachers have the right idea. They tell us that play is a part of the learning process. Children learn to discover ways to solve problems on their own through play and even through games and exercise.

We should allow them to explore their world using their own judgment, rather than having adults take charge of every challenge and situations kids face.

Kids need room to grow and room to fail; it's part of life — a big part of life. These are lessons they may not get in school but important life lessons nonetheless. Kids won't just be able to make decisions unless they have the opportunity to experience what making decisions involve early on.

We think they're up to the challenge.

Black History Month: What it should be

February Is Black History Month

Month and is now celebrated all over North America. What remained was Dr. Woodson's original goal of achieving an understanding of Black history and the equal treatment of Blacks in America.

Next year will mark the 80th Anniversary of Negro History Week and the 30th Anniversary of Black History Month. Now is a good time to assess the impact of the celebrations. What have we accomplished through them? Is there a greater understanding and appreciation of the true contributions of Blacks to this country? And, most importantly, I believe, has the Celebration led to a greater understanding of the historical basis of the significant social, economic and political problems that still plague African Americans in this country? After all, history should not only tell us where we have been, but where we are and where we are headed.

There seems to be little doubt that Black History Month has served to educate, lift and enlighten this country over the past 80 years. All across America. children and adults engage in worthwhile explorations, discovery and expressions major concern is profit. related to the valuable contributions of Blacks to this not be scrapped, but it should be country. Yet, we have failed in refocused and used as a major several respects to accomplish what Dr. Woodson envisioned and to advance a needed dialogue about what we need to do now. Our annual celebrations now appear forced, uninspired and narrow. We seem to have settled on a select number of Black historical figures and cultural icons to dwell upon each year. Great as they may be, they have been defined as the "acceptable" personalities and include heroes action, racism, segregation, such as botanist, George Washington Carver; athlete, Michael Jordan; and a "sanitized" version of Dr. Martin Luther King voting rights is ripe for serious Jr. We choose to ignore King's stand against the Vietnamese War marks the 40th Anniversary of the and strong criticism of American Voting Rights Act of 1965, yet few social policy. Usually missing from the "list" are the more controversial heroes such as Marcus Garvey, Jack Johnson, Nat Turner, Malcolm X, and the thousands of lesser known "regular" people who led or participated in heroic struggles for freedom in America and made significant contributions to this country in a variety of ways.

Many find the notion repugnant that Black history can be embodied in a few people and condensed to fit into one month, a short one at that. Some argue that there exists an underlying assumption that a month is all that America is willing to tolerate. Others maintain that to be relevant, Black history must be corrected, rewritten, expanded and incorporated into a more accurate history of America. They would probably agree with the recent "Boondocks" cartoon devoted to the idea that Black history should be celebrated all year round.

Maybe it was inevitable, but Black History Month is now heavily marketed and exploited by those wishing to profit from books, films, foods and a host of cultural icons. In an effort to "sell" Black history, there exists the real danger that the history will become even more distorted and defined primarily by those whose Black History Month should opportunity to promote meaningful examination and discourse on the history behind vital social, economic, and political issues and problems that continue to plague Black Americans and deny them equal access to American democracy. As a nation we have left undone the work of engaging in real honest discussions about issues like reparations, affirmative incarceration and disenfranchisement.

For example, the issue of discussion and action. This year (including George W. Bush who situation to the "three fifths" recently admitted his ignorance) know the history behind the Act, its provisions, and its impact on America.

Even fewer know that nearly 5 million Americans are currently denied the right to vote, more . than a third of whom are African-American.

The situation has led to a serious dilution of Black voting strength and political power. How can so many be denied the right to participate in the decisions that affect their lives in light of the 15th Amendment to the United States Constitution which was ratified in 1870 giving Blacks the right to vote?

The answer to the denial of this fundamental democratic right is deeply rooted in American history and the enslavement of Black people.

Felony disenfranchisement statutes were enacted in both the North and South after emancipation with the intent of denying African Americans access to the political process. Under those and newer statutes, persons with a felony conviction are still denied the right to vote while incarcerated and/or on probation or parole in 48 of the United States.

At least 12 states permanently disenfranchise citizens. In either case, the average disenfranchisement rate is nearly five times higher for Blacks than for nonblacks.

Although not allowed to vote, these same people are counted in the United States Census, for districting and reimbursement purposes, as part of the population of the Jurisdiction in which they are incarcerated.

Many liken the current clause in the United States Constitution which allowed Blacks to be counted as 3/5 's of a person for representation purposes but not at all for voting purposes during enslavement.

New York state's felon disenfranchisement law is being seriously challenged by organized civil rights advocates and through strong litigation and legislative efforts. Campaigns waged by Unlock the Block and my organization the Center for Law and Justice are actively working to educate communities about the undemocratic denial of the right to vote that disproportionately affects African Americans and to mobilize the vote of people with felony convictions.

It is also important to note that many of those denied the vote are also barred from life from receiving welfare benefits, will lose access to student loans for higher education, and may be barred from living in public housing.

All of these have serious implications for the quality of life of African American communities and ultimately all Americans.

Discussions about these and other critical issues could be initiated during Black History Month and would lead, hopefully, to new understanding and commitments to social change.

In turn, this might move us closer toward the fulfillment of Dr. Woodson's dream for America.

Recently at Clarksville School. we celebrated the efforts of one small community in making a difference for the world.

To begin with, our fourth and fifth graders already knew that the basic human needs are food, water, shelter and space. But learning that for "full development" (a term not previously used by us, as teachers), children need education, play and a host of other necessities, it became clear that the cry for help after the tsunami in Southeast Asia would be heeded by our children.

Since Jan. 3, our first day back together, children have

Advertizing plays an enormous role in kids obesity factor

Editor, The Spotlight:

Thank you for a strong editorial in support of healthful food choices and school policies that promote them. Thanks also for the letter from Bonnie Goldsmith calling for Bethlehem Central School District to adopt a sensible nutrition policy.

I'd like to clarify a common misconception about the obesity epidemic. Your editorial suggested that, years ago, children balanced poor nutrition habits with physical activity and thus did not add pounds as a result of poor food choices.

Without a doubt, physical activity is a key factor in the obesity equation, but dietary changes have occurred, and they play an important role. From about 1975 to 1995, caloric intake has actually increased by 100 calories per day for men and women. Children increased their daily intake by 100 calories over the short period from 1990 to 1995. An additional 100 calories a day quickly translates into added pounds - up to 10 a year. if physical activity is not increased dramatically, as well.

Contrary to your assertion, our consumption of high sugar, high fat, low nutrition food has increased over time, as well. For example, per capita consumption of regular (non-diet) soft drinks increased from 25 gallons in 1975 to 40 gallons in 1995. Over the same time period, milk consumption declined from 30 gallons per capita to 25.

A soft drink is non-alcoholic beverage that consists of 12 ounces of carbonated water and 1.5 ounces of sugar. It provides 160 calories and nothing else worth mentioning. Medical research has shown that the addition of one soft drink a day to a child's diet increases (by 60 percent) the likelihood that the child will become obese.

Many schools throughout the country have exclusive contracts with Coca Cola to market its products on school grounds, a real disservice to strengthen child nutrition in the schools.

Advertising — the omission from your editorial - influences all our behaviors, including our food choices. Each year the soft drink industry spends $600 million advertising their products. Each year, children see some 10,000 commercials, the vast majority of which are for soft and celebrations are never drinks, candy and sugar-loaded without a big helping of health breakfast cereals. They do not compromising "food.

McDonalds Corp. has made it a strategic goal that no American lives more than four minutes from one of its restaurants. And every American, according to Coca Cola, should be within arm's reach of a soft drink. Pizza Hut supports our early childhood reading programs in some public elementary schools (right here in BCSD) by offering a free pizza for each set of readings a child completes.

In some schools, fast food restaurants are providing lunches. At the same time, teachers hand out candy as a reward and punish misbehavior by holding children in during recess. Children can bring healthful messages home from school to their families, who influence and change communities. Setting the right example and choosing the right priorities in our schools is absolutelyessential in our efforts to promote healthful lifestyles.

leading to meetings and brainstorming sessions between parents, staff and administrators, and, eventually, the policy, adopted at the Jan. 19 board of education meeting, and which is the first of its kind in the state.

New York state law bans idling to a degree, but according to administrators, Bethlehem's policy expounds on the law.

"The policy reaffirms the law." said Transportation Director Al Karam, noting both "wiggle room" in the law and that the law bans only buses from idling. (The health of the students) is a concern we all share."

Dr. Eric Carson

Under the policy, buses will be shut off while loading or unloading passengers while on school grounds. Parents who drop their kids off or waiting to pick them up are now expected to turn their cars off if they are waiting for more than 30 seconds.

Signs are up now, warning drivers of the policy. State Sen. Neil Breslin (D-Delmar) secured the $2,500 grant for the signs.

The timing of Bethlehem's policy, for which Bethlehem Central received an award from the American Lung Association, is uncanny, considering the other school district in town, Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk, had to send students and faculty home after a slew of people complained of dizziness and nausea when bus fumes were trapped in an air vent and distributed through school.

Karam noted the district spends money to keep the bus fleet on a constant rotation. replacing older buses with newer ones, equipped with the latest technology and that give off fewer emissions. Karam also noted an Development Authority that equipped 57 buses with diesel oxidation catalysts that reduce tailpipe emissions.

And though Karam noted a tightly-run ship in terms of bus schedules, the method of thought seems to be that every little bit counts.

"We're pretty tight in terms of times, nobody's waiting more than five or six minutes," Karam said. "But those times they are, the motors will be turned off. It affects the drivers as well as the they are idling than if they are kids, and they've taken to the message in a positive way."

According to the American Lung Association, diesel exhaust. particles are linked to allergic reactions, asthma attacks, lung cancer, second heart attacks in those diagnosed with cardiovascular disease and premature death.

Superintendent Les Loomis said BC's approach is a proactive one that will ensure the health of the students and environment.

"It's not in response to any $89,000 grant form New York complaints," Loomis said. "It's an State Energy and Research environmental issue. The two go hand-in-hand. Air pollution affects respiratory health in students and adults."

The policy should have a number of other benefits, too, Karam said.

For every hour a bus idles, a half-gallon of fuel is dispersed into the air, Karam said.

"When they haven't idled in 10 months, there will be a significant cut back (in that cost)," Karam said.

Buses cool off quicker while shut off or driving around.

"They're better off driving," Karam said. "The heaters don't put out as much heat if they are idling. We had to educate the drivers in that respect."

Loomis said there is no enforcement code in place, other than to gently remind any drivers in violation of the policy, why the policy is in place.

According to the American Lung Association, Albany County air quality is less-than-stellar, having been found by the Environmental Protection Agency as being "out of compliance with federal health standards. This means that the air can be so bad that the mere act of breathing can put more than 20,000 county residents at risk for health complications. Vehicle emissions are a major contributor to this problem," according to a press release.

"This is of no cost to anybody." Karam said. "It takes one second of our time to turn that key back."

New On the Market

One of the best strategies for successfully marketing your home is to make the most of that golden period of time when your property is "new on the market" – the first thirty days after your home is listed for sale.

New listings receive the most exposure during the first thirty days, when the chances of making a sale are much higher. What selling strategy will position your home to compete successfully with other comparable properties for sale in your neighborhood? Set your asking price in the lower range of available properties of equal size, age and condition. Most buyers who are screening homes will start with the least expensive desirable properties, then work up, and you want your ports Blackbirds ease past Johnstown in quarterfinals

By ROB JONAS

The Voorheesville boys basketball team may have one of the biggest lineups in the class B ranks, but that doesn't mean the Blackbirds can't shoot the ball from long distance.

Voorheesville dropped 11 three-pointers on Johnstown and never looked back after building a 17-6 first quarter lead as the topseeded Blackbirds advanced to the Section II semifinals with a 56-34 victory Saturday at the University at Albany.

"Johnstown did a good job sagging down on us (defensively) and not letting us get the ball inside," Voorheesville coach Don Catellier said, "but other kids stepped up."

Greg Delaney became Voorheesville's go-to shooter when Nick Duncan and Mark Carson were tied up down low. Delaney poured in 23 points on seven three-pointers and a pair of free throws.

"I was feeling it well tonight (from behind the three-point line)," Delaney said. "I was throwing up shots, and they were falling.'

There was little Johnstown could do to answer Delaney's efforts. Other than a 17-point third quarter, the Sir Bills were quarter," Catellicr said. "Offensively, we were fine, but defensively, we struggled."

Voorheesville had some early success in the paint as Duncan and Carson combined for 11 of the team's first 14 points. As soon as Johnstown started locking down on the Blackbirds' post players, though, the threepointers started falling. Delaney drained a three from the corner late in the first quarter to give Voorheesville an 11-point advantage. Greg Klopfer and Rob Bareis then opened the second guarter with consecutive threepointers to open up a 23-6 lead.

Voorheesville went into a shooting funk after that, but Johnstown couldn't take advantage. The best the Sir Bills could do was a driving shot by Ben Zambri and two free throws from Alex Thomas to cut the Blackbirds' lead to 23-10. Delaney knocked down one more threepointer with 1:04 left to put Voorheesville ahead by 16 points at halftime.

Zambri and Thomas tried to light a fire under Johnstown in the third quarter. The duo sparked a 13-6 run to cut Voorheesville's forced to take bad shots against lead to nine points, but Delaney made a pair of free throws and hit from behind the three-point arc "I wasn't too pleased with our for the fifth time in the game to defensive play in the third right the Blackbirds' ship. A couple of layups and a threepointer from Klopfer later in the third quarter helped Voorheesville extend its lead to 49-27.

> Delaney hit two more threepointers early in the fourth quarter before both teams sent their bench players in to finish the game.

> "The first half was pretty sloppy, but it got better in the second half," Delaney said.

Klopfer contributed 10 points, and Carson added nine points for the Blackbirds, who meet Berkshire in the class B semifinals at .7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Glens Falls Civic Center.

"They're an athletic bunch, which is kind of scary, but this team can handle it," Delaney said.

Voorheesville girls The basketball team also reached the Sectional semifinals last week after beating Hudson 52-41 in a quarterfinal matchup at FondaFultonville High School. Brigit Feeney led three Blackbirds in double figures with 15 points as fourth-seeded Voorheesville sent Hudson home for the second year in a row.

Bethlehem, Guilderville send swimmers to states

By ROB JONAS

The Bethlehem boys swimming team's crazy season ended with an uncharacteristic finish last weekend at the Section II championships in Amsterdam.

The Eagles dropped out of the top three in class A for the first time in more than three decades as they fell to fourth place in the team standings with 253 points, seven points behind Saratoga. Shenendehowa claimed its third consecutive Section II title with #### 382 points.

Bethlehem coach Doug Gross said a disqualification in the 200yard freestyle relay in last Thursday's preliminary round for a bathing cap violation ultimately zapped the Eagles of their drive.

"Getting DQ'd in the 200 free relay really brought the kids down," he said. "Sitting there and knowing that their time Thursday would have won and got us to states, that was hard on the kids.' Bethlehem is sending a relay team to states. The 400 freestyle relay team of Larry Gloeckler, Tim DeGroff, Sean Kennedy and Aaron Brauner placed third in Saturday's finals with a qualifying time of 3:19.07.

Kennedy will also compete in individual events at the state meet March 4 and 5 on Long Island. Gloeckler swam a season-best time of 1:46.69 to place second in the 200 freestyle, and he finished third in the 500 freestyle with a time of 4:46.23.

"Those were good times, and he should make the top eight (at states)," Gross said.

Kennedy saved his best personal performance for last in Saturday's 100 breaststroke finals. The junior placed fourth with a time of 1:03.40, .02 seconds under the state meet qualifying standard.

"The only reason he swam that event was because (Craig) Alfred strained his groin and couldn't swim it all year," Gross said of Kennedy. "He came through for us."

in Thursday's preliminary heats, meeting the state standards in the 50 freestyle and the 100 backstroke.

The Section II meet marked Gloeckler, DeGroff and the end of a trying season for Bethlehem that included several problems with the high school pool that forced the Eagles to hold all of their dual meets on the road. Bethlehem finished the season with a 9-3 record.

Bruce Maki led Guilderville with two top-five finishes. The senior placed third in the 200 individual medley with a qualifying time of 2:02.03, and he took fifth place in a competitive 500 freestyle with a time of 4:51.80. The top four times were under 4:50.

"He set two school records, he Guilderland-Voorheesville bettered his 500 (freestyle) mark and he broke a 12-year-old school record in the (200) I.M. Fantastic, fantastic leap for him," Marshall said.

Lady Eagles struggle with Guilderland

The Bethlehem girls basketball team was outscored 31-8 by Guilderland over the middle two quarters in a 47-24 loss in last Wednesday's class AA first-round game.

The Lady Eagles trailed 8-7 after the first quarter, but Guilderland went on a 17-6 run in the second guarter and limited Bethlehem to two third-quarter points on its way to the victory.

Leah Gillham had six points, while Katie Rowan and Samantha Feinberg each added five points for the Lady Eagles. Jessica Tice had 14 points for Guilderland, the top Suburban Council seed in the class AA tournament.

Bethlehem made the main class AA field after surviving a play-in game against Niskayuna last Monday with a 52-50 victory. The Lady Eagles jumped out to a 30-17 halftime lead.

Gillham scored 18 points, and Liz Casline chipped in 17 points for Bethlehem.

Boys teams suffer first-round losses

Both the Bethlehem and Ravena boys basketball teams dropped out of Sectionals after one game.

Bethlehem was upended by Averill Park 52-44 in class AA last Monday, while Ravena fell to Hudson Falls 58-38 last Tuesday in a class A contest.

Kevin Stempsey scored 13 points, and Ethan Levine added 10 points for Bethlehem in its loss to Averill Park. Ryan Hennesy's 17 points led all scorers.

Eric Stott had 10 points to lead Ravena against Hudson Falls.

DeVoe, Persico qualify

Bethlehem's Joe DeVoe and Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk's Nicole Persico earned berths on the Section II bowling teams at last week's Sectional championshipsrat Bowler's Club in Latham.

DeVoe had the second-highest score among all boys with a total pinfall of 1,473 to help the Eagles place fourth in the class A team standings with 6,335. Shaker won the class A cham-pionship with 6,469 pins, while Bishop Gibbons took the overall title with 6,476 pins. RCS was second to Gibbons in class B with 6,276 pins.

Persico joined the Section II girls team after rolling a sixgame total of 1,280 pins. Persico's efforts helped the Indians finish second to Lansingburgh in the class B standings with 5,897 pins.

Well-noted as a young woman for her solo singing voice, she was Bridge; 13 grandchildren; and offered a rare opportunity to be a front singer in the Big Band era and to tour the country to entertain the troops but instead, throughout the Battle of Britain, she opted to work in a munitions factory, making bullets and bombs, in order to remain near her family as the caregiver for her mother.

During an air raid blackout, she met Irish-American serviceman. Michael Reynolds. They married in Newcastle before the end of the war. Mrs. Reynolds emigrated to the U.S. as a G.I. war bride, and they made their home in Manhattan.

Her work for a Fifth Avenue firm in the design and manufacture of greeting cards was interrupted by emergency surgery, due to toxic effects of the lethal bomb-making components, which left her unable to bear children. From hospitalization, she embarked on next-day passage to England with a plan to adopt. She used her status as a British subject to initiate adoption proceedings to obtain a child in need from a foundling home. She accepted the first child offered, despite documented birth defects. After granted temporary custody within the U.K., she learned British law did not allow for British-born children to be brought to non-commonwealth countries. By her public media efforts, letters, appeals, her grassroots effort paved the way for many others to later adopt with ease. After the successful adoption of son, she returned to adopt a daughter from the same orphanage. She worked to move the family from New York to the Hudson Valley. Her husband

In 1960, Mrs. Reynolds and he children became naturalized American citizens. She spent summers on Caroga

Lake. She made frequent voyage to Britain, affording her children the opportunity for education in both countries. She was ap proached by both authors and filmmakers for interviews of her earlier life experiences. She granted only limited interviews avoiding any spotlight.

She was the widow of Michae Reynolds.

ooking for a little spring in what's already been a long; long winter?

There is nothing that says spring more than flowers and this weekend visitors to the New York State Museum will have the opportunity to view more than 100 floral displays throughout the museum for "New York in Bloom," the Museum's annual celebration of flowers and fund-raiser for its after-school programs.

"New York in Bloom benefits our award-winning after school program for the Museum Club which is available for youth ages 8 to 13," said museumspokesperson Joanne Guilmette. "It's a program at the museum where kids work with the researchers and scientists to gain insight into careers they may be interested in pursing.'

"Swing Into Spring" is the theme of the event, which will be held from 9:30 m. to 5 p.m. from Friday, Feb. 25 to Sunday; Feb. 27. The event marks the only time during the year that admission is charged at the museum and the proceeds benefit the Museum Club and Discovery Squad programs.

planting, creating clay roses and tissue paper flowers.

Continuing the swing theme, the museum lobby will be decorated to reflect "A Night at the Waldorf Astoria." Decorators will use flowers and plants to create a hotel ballroom motif. Museum Club students will assist in creating the display as well as a separate exhibit elsewhere in the museum. Another special attraction will be a plant and flower display centered around a 1934 Ford three-window coupe. There also will be a fresh flower market, while supplies last, with flowers donated by Seagroatt Riccardi.

There is a bonus for visitors who come to see the flowers on Saturday and Sunday. The 12th Annual James Campbell Memorial Gem, Mineral and Fossil Show and Sale will also be on tap on the museum's 4th floor terrace from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The show helps fund new acquisitions for the museum's gem and mineral collections.

One of the highlights will be a case of erals that glow under fluorescent light The show also features over 20 vendors, who will display and sell gems, jewelry, minerals, fossils, books, videos, lapidary equipment and supplies, stone carvings, bookends and silver and goldsmithing tools. Dr. Dmitry Belakovskiy, curator of mineralogy at the Fersman Mineralogical Museum in Moscow will lecture Saturday at 1 p.m. in the Museum Theatre on "Russia's Mineral Heritage." On Sunday at 1 p.m. in the Museum Theatre, Dr. Ed Landing, the state paleontologist at the State Museum, will deliver a lecture, "Global Hyperwarming --- Evidence from New York's Rocks."

'There is so much for everyone to do and the museum is transformed by flowers which is great when people are tired of winter," Guilmette said.

In addition to seeing beautiful flower arrangements there also will be demonstrations all three days. Topics will include creating flowers with fibers; drying summer blooms; low maintenance, high impact perennial gardens; arranging everyday flowers; floral designs with driftwood, and more. Videos from the Federated Garden Clubs of New York State will also be shown in the Museum Theater Saturday and Sunday.

The kids will also be entertained with activities including flower drawing, seed

Other activities over the weekend will include:

A mineral dig for children, hosted by the Capital District Mineral Club.

A continuous presentation by John Skiba, the museum's senior cartographer, about map-making. Guided tours of the expanded Ancient Life of New York exhibition by Dr. Landing on Saturday at 2 p.m in the museum lobby.

Guided tours of the Minerals of New York gallery Saturday at noon and Sunday at 2 p.m. Meet in Museum lobby.

Identification by museum scientists of fossils and minerals brought in by the public.

"New York in Bloom" costs $3 for adults on Friday. On Saturday and Sunda the fee is $5, which also includes admissi to the "12th Annual James Campbell Memorial Gem, Mineral and Fossil Show and Sale." Admission is free for children and under, accompanied by an adult. Tickets may be purchased at the door. O Saturday and Sunday there will be free parking in the East Garage and in the Cathedral lot and Museum parking lot. For information call 474-5877 or visit th museum Web site at www.nysm.nysed.g

McCartney added: "We need to have a plan to rotate instruments like we do for buses and building maintenance. It should be easier to do this for instruments because they last much longer."

Tobler presented a two-part to make needed plan replacements in the next two to three years as well as a way to rotate instruments every 20 vears.

"I don't, as of yet, have figures at this time," Tobler added.

In other business, the board discussed a proposal by the school's site-based committee to eliminate reporting class rank to colleges. Proponents of the measure argue that reporting class rank gives an incomplete picture of a student's academic achievement. They said that by not reporting rank, colleges would be forced to look at SAT scores, overall grades, awards and teacher recommendations.

"We have so many bright students that one could earn a 95 percent grade average and still not make the top 10," said Carol Cillis, president of the site-based committee. "College admission staff would simply put that student's application in the 'below top 10' pile without looking at the big picture."

Others argued that class ranks

Most board members liked the proposal. However, board member John Cole said he does not favor doing away with reporting rank. "Measurement is a good thing," he said. "You can't tell how you are doing without goals and measurement. When we measure, somebody is going to be on top and somebody is going to be on the bottom.'

Cole added that students must be prepared to function in the real world and that world measures by ranking. "If we keep messing with the way we evaluate students we will hurt them in the long run."

Board member Richard Brackett recommended that the board take a couple weeks to review the proposal and defer discussion until the March 7 meeting. After further discussion the board is expected to vote on the measure

Finally, the board voted unanimously to amend the district's code of ethics to include guidance on nepotism.

The new guidelines will prohibit hirings where the candidate would work directly for a relative. Other restrictions, McCartney said, would violate state and federal laws that prohibit school boards from not

Interest in a nepotism policy arose in September after the board hired Deborah Baron, wife of Baron to a position as tax collector for the district. Complaints aired at that meeting from Baron's stemmed participation in the vote that broke a 3-3 stalemate and cleared the way for his wife to be hired.
