ELC would save district money, Loomis says

"I think we are just too big and a new early learning center would probably be in our best interests."

Voters had approved an elementary school

By JAMES CUOZZO

Parents and teachers of the Bethlehem school district offered the school board input on whether a new elementary school or new early learning center (to house only kindergarten students) should be Superintendent Les Loomis presented two options to the public at the most recent school board meeting. Many parents, including Jennifer Kusak, questioned the decision behind using the property on Van Dyke Road, across the street from the high school, for either option.

"I came to the board so you wouldn't forget us again," Kusak said. "Our kids are being shipped to Clarksville and they're missing out. When I voted for the bond act my expectation was I could getasy kids in a different school."

The 2003 bond act approved the construction that is currently taking place throughout the district. When voters approved the $92.9 million act, it included construction of a new elementary school on Van Dyke Road.

Resident Jim Booker had the same concern as Kusak.

"What is brought up is one of the fundamental problems," he said. "We don't have enough schools for where our children live.'

> Mary Jane Hughes, orchestra teacher in all five elementary schools, took exception to any statements that one school is better or worse than another.

"Clarksville is a really wonderful place just like all the other schools," she said. "You would be hard pressed to find schools with more caring, understanding teachers regardless of the 8-mile ride to Clarks-

House assessment process will begin in 2006

"In a large number of cases, there may not be any difference at all."

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

About 60 residents gathered at last Wednesday's meeting to hear Town Assessor David Leafer explain how Bethlehem's 2006 property revaluation will affect them as well as how the process will work.

New businesses have added to the town's tax base in recent years, Leafer said, but property taxes are still the primary revenue source for schools and local government. Timely revaluations preserve home value equity, Leafer said, and when revaluations are done regularly, impacts can be a lot less than if revaluations are never done.

"Adjustments should reflect recent market activity," said Leafer. Sales adjustments have risen about 11 percent per year, according to sales data from 2002 to 2005. Leafer said the market was stable and steady up until 2000, and by 2002, there was a 10 to 12 percent increase in market values.

"The market will continue to increase," Leafer said. "Since the last reval in 1998, the town is at about 68 percent equity. We need it to be 100 percent."

Many residents had questions about the process. Leafer explained that the assessor maintains an inventory of homes and their characteristics, looks at the sales of > similar homes in the area and homes that have similar comparisons, like number of bathrooms, bedrooms, and improvements. Older homes with similar construction will also be time-adjusted to determine the current market value.

David Leafer

We always want to compare apples to apples," Leafer said.

The tax rate is calculated by dividing the total taxable assessment base, which is all property assessments in town, and dividing it by that year's budget. The result is the tax rate per $1,000 of assessed value. Taxes are figured by taking the assessed value of a home less any exemptions, and multiplying it by the cost per thousand rate.

Leafer said there will likely be lmost as vibrant and various as the leaves of fall are the visitors who make their way through the nooks and crannies that long-ago glaciers carved throughout the state of New York.

By train, car, boat, bus, plane, and even horse and balloon, "leaf peepers" from across the nation and around the world flock to New York to gaze upon the summer-to-autumn changing of the seasonal guard. The spectacular sight isn't limited to the Empire State, but a certain quality and brilliance you wouldn't find anywhere else is, and state tourist representatives have been capitalizing on this for years.

"It's a big industry. People plan their vacation around the foliage," said Eric Scheffel, I Love NY's senior public information specialist of media and ears of science and 55 volunteers throughout the state to coordinate an up-to-date leaf peeping network. That network extends from Staten Island to Franklin and Niagara counties, and posts weekly updates for po-

Approximately 55 volunteer leaf-peepers throughout the state predict and run percentages daily to pass to Scheffel so he can let the public know where the most vibrant displays of reds, purples, oranges and even brown are. Every Wednesday, Scheffel publishes detailed accounts of those findings on the I Love NY Web site along with information about accompanying activities on upcoming weekends.

There are even reports about the leaves that are remaining stubbornly green, which so far this fall is still too much the case.

"We are running up to two weeks behind the av-roughly two weeks, moving summer that has extended into the autumn has fooled trees into not donning their autumn coats, meaning peepers aren't getting their usual array of color.

"It's a quasi-Indian summer. Cooler temperatures really accelerate the leaf change," said Susan Beebe, agricultural issue leader for Cornell Cooperative Extension's Saratoga County

> Cooler temperatures are just one of the dynamics that makes leaves change color.

Frost is the key to ideal autumn color, and that frost has yet to hit many areas of New York. Many upstate trees don't take kindly to the Fahrenheit 80-degree

Selkirk house to be subject of archaeology presentation

Floyd Brewer and his archaeological team conducted excavations around 1720 Parker-Winne House at 28 Creble Road in Selkirk, in 2000-2001. Now, Brewer is speaking at Delmar Place, 467 Delaware Ave. on Oct. 19 at 10:15 a.m.

The house, said to be the oldest house in Bethlehem, is now undergoing an extensive and authentic renovation by owner Brian Parker. It has had the support of key groups and history-minded citizens since its antiquity was recognized by former town historian, Allison Bennett, who featured the house in a slide program as early as 1958. The speech covers a story of a community coming together to save an unusual Dutch house, which was later determined to be the oldest home in Bethlehem. Further, it is the story of how early Winne families and their relatives lived over many decades, and a review of some limited evidence of Owasco Indian occupation of this land between 1100 and 1300 A.D. Some artifacts recovered at the site will be passed around for a close-up look.

THE HEART OF IT ALL

Local 4-H rider goes to nationals

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

Like many young girls, when Abby Gentner was a child, she wanted to own a horse.

Unlike many young girls, Abby's family had experience with horses. Her grandfather had racehorses, and her mother rode horses all through childhood. Abby's mother, Liz, knew the kind of commitment that came with owning, riding and training a horse, and tried to discourage her daughter.

"I gave in to the lessons after awhile," said Liz Gentner. "The only reason I discouraged it is because I know it can be difficult and it's a real commitment. Owning horses is not a hobby, it's a lifestyle."

Abby has grasped this concept well enough. As a member of 4-H for over five years and a student of horse judging, much of her free time is spent tending to her horse, Adonis, an eight-year old Haflinger.

This year, Abby has earned a great honor. She and her three teammates from Albany County's 4-H group were selected to represent New York state at the Eastern National 4-H Competition in Louisville, Ky., this November.

"Competing in the nationals is the ultimate goal in 4-H," said Liz Gentner. "It's a great opportunity to go up against the best of the best from other states."

Abby and her three teammates, two from Jefferson County and one from Madison County, will be competing in the horse judging competition, which is much more complicated than it seems.

"It's a life skill," said Liz Gentner. "You're looking at all the defining characteristics of the horse."

Learning the specifics of different horse breeds, and transferring this knowledge into a certain vocabulary, is part of the criteria for horse judging. Knowing how to judge a horse's body, its movements, looks, the riders and vast general knowledge of horses is important to succeed. In the competitions, aspiring judges attempt to match their judgments with professional horse judges as closely as possible.

Because judging can be subjective, competitors do have some wiggle room.

"If you are persuasive [enough, you can. convince judge why you chose to judge a horse diff-erently," said Liz Gentner. "But you need to be able to explain your decision using correct vocabulary and reasoning. You can't just say you gave a certain horse points because it had a nice face. You have to show your reasoning through your knowledge." ~

This week, Abby and her teammates are heading to Columbus, Ohio to the American Quarter Horse Congress to help prepare for the National Competition.

Abby teaches young people to ride horses at Double V Stables in Delmar and is a member of the Caps-n-Chaps 4-H club.

Holding out is harder than it looks

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

The silence on the other end of the phone was deafening. Internally, I winced, for I knew what was coming next, as I clarified with the mother of one of Cormac's friends that I was, indeed, ferrying a few 12- and of Proctor's Chinese film festival. Since I never like to be blindsided, I had to tell her the ugly truth: that night's movie, "Kung Fu Hustle," was rated R.

Hence her silence before she put the kibosh on her son's attendance.

I felt guilty for taking my sons and friends to this movie. and really horrible because when I was still a good parent and said no to a lot more things than I do now, a firestorm always followed.

When Christopher was in third grade, it was the movie Force One" that I squelched. He has since seen the movie, but will never forget that he was denied what others were not. I held off for a really long time on buying video games for my kids, and now that they have all of the major gaming systems, my thought is that really. I didn't hold out long enough.

But here's the thing that parenting books and articles never tell you. They always make children out to be reasonable people who will be grateful to their parents for having the wisdom they don't yet possess. Wrong, wrong, wrong. In a best-case scenario, kids told "no" will filibuster their parents in a way that would make members of the U.S. Congress proud. In a worst case scenario, well...just hope it doesn't happen in public, and now I never go to the video store without laying out a whole bunch of really clear ground rules first. I can walk away from an in-home filibuster and lock myself in my room (where I

 $oldsymbol{\mathcal{M}}$ om's //Oord

13-year-olds to the final movie usually unblock the HBO channels and try to lose myself in a melee of inappropriate onscreen sex and violence, in spite of the voice on the other side of the door); in public, I try to stand taller and look serene, as if I would never actually turn around and throttle the child hectoring me relentlessly.

I'm not sure exactly when I reduced my standards. It's probably been a gradual thing. Some of it's been based in logic and some decisions have been arrived at after consulting with my partner in this great adventure of parenting. Some of the relaxation has come out of sheer exhaustion and in some instances, it's come from peer pressure - when I get overwhelmed by my kids'

Sometimes it's a matter of picking my battles, and I remember the first time I held firm on a matter another child's had relaxed on. Christopher was 3 and had a 4year-old friend whose mother had given up on making her son wear his parka when he was outside running around and wanted to take it off.

She had warned us of this. and used as her defense the fact that he had not caught a cold in made sense in theory; if you've ever seen preschoolers on a playground, you know that they are generating so much heat that in reality nobody within a 5-mile radius really needs to wear a jacket. In actuality, it was nuts, and on a clear, blue-skied 10-degree winter day, it looked dangerous.

"But Andrew isn't wearing his jacket." Christopher insisted as he peeled his off. Andrew's mom got a very guilty look on her face. Sorry," she said.

We ended up going home because Christopher and I both dug our heels in on this issue. If he'd gone without his jacket, would he have gotten sick? Probably not. Would he have asked for his parka if he'd gotten cold? Probably. Why did I insist on it? Good Lord, it was 10 degrees out and he was 3! What sort of craziness would result from that? Going outside in winter with a WET HEAD? Leaving splinters to fester?? It would be the end of the world as we know it!!

> As an aside, my nowteenage sons wear shorts sandals Halloween, sometimes longer. So far, no colds and no pneumonia, although every mother who sees them shivers to see their exposed skin. Maybe my boys stored up enough heat from all those years of wearing ski pants and parkas in the winter when they were toddlers.

I'm hoping that a similar thing happened with the G rating we kept on movies and TV shows for a very long time. Maybe my kids stored up enough moral good to combat the junk that they now see on TV and in the movies.

We also follow some of the other parental advice out there, which is to watch the stuff with them: When "South Park" became a big battle, Chris and I decided Christopher could watch it. He was in sixth grade; according to him, ALL of his years and why did I persist in treating him like a baby? So I watched it with him, and it was the episode when they said one particular word for the first time on TV. As they ran the little counter at the bottom of the screen, I had to hold back my laughter. That is a hilarious show that pokes fun at everybody. I'm not sure, though, that all kids have the ability to sort through the sarcasm and see the irony in the show and who's spoofing whom. In fact, I'm not sure that all adults get it.

At any rate, though, watching 'South Park" with your mother can be a pretty embarrassing thing and the request faded away. I'm not stupid – I know that when there are a bunch of kids in the house, when our boys sleep over at other kids' houses, or when they are home alone, they're watching all sorts of stuff I couldn't countenance.

I like to think that the number of things I can't countenance will decrease as they mature, but I worry that there's a whole lot of stuff out there I just don't know about. I also worry about the nature of what I do know about.

I'm not in favor of censorship, but let's face it: there's a lot of spite of not wearing a jacket. It friends had been watching it for objectionable junk on television and in the movies.

On those rare occasions when I'm able to watch prime time network television in the early evening, I'm amazed at what I see and hear. My kids roll their eyes when I lecture them about what they're seeing and hearing; that really it's not a good idea to try to have sex with a different person all the time; that relationships need to be about more than physical attraction; that if you're going to have a baby with somebody you should go out on a limb and marry them; and while sarcasm is my favorite type of humor, it doesn't hurt to treat each other with a little bit of respect.

They see right through me; when they get up for another drink of water or to put one last thing in their backpacks for school tomorrow, they catch me curled up in front of ER, wondering which couple will pair up for a brief fling next.

So it goes back to the thing I said to them when they were little and they started watching TV, PBS-only: "you know it's not real,

Right, they always say and all I can do is watch and listen and talk to them about what they're seeing and hearing - even if I am the one allowing it.

Peeping time

Autumn is kicking in to high gear as more and more trees turn to a kaleidoscope of color.

This week Spotlight Newspapers has suggestions for finding the best leaf peeping routes and places to enjoy the delights of fall.

We prefer the back road sort of peeping tour, so you don't have to drive fast and lose some of the effect of the spectacular views in our own Empire State, in Vermont and other nearby states.

This year, fall weather has been beautiful, with the Editorial exception of last weekend's deluge, probably to make up for the endlessly humid summer that made us vow to never complain about the cold Northeast winters again.

Sometimes it's nice to pull over to experience the smell of the earth and leaves. Preserving a leaf or two to use as a bookmark in the dead of winter can be a reminder that there will once again be fresh new leaves when spring comes. The only problem with fall is that it is a too-short season and a certain reminder that winter is on its way. But for now kids are mostly looking ahead to Halloween, and many families have already decorated their porches and lawns with Halloween icons.

The long Columbus Day weekend is over, which means fewer numbers of people will be on the roads. It's a great time to pick out that perfect pumpkin or go apple picking as a family.

Our kids need to realize that apples and gourds don't grow in boxes at Price Chopper or Hannaford.

Many farms also carry freshly made baked goods, including cider and doughnuts.

Even as we enjoy the sweet fall scenario, it's a time to get our houses and vehicles in order.

This year with the seemingly constant gas price increases, it's especially important to have vehicles prepared for winter. Cars guzzle more gas when they are not properly tuned. Have fluids and tire pressure checked.

Getting a jump on these tasks will save time when the first snow falls and everyone wants their vehicles serviced yesterday.

Our homes, again because of higher heating cost predictions, also need some attention.

Changing furnace filters and having heating units cleaned should help to defray some of the added expense. Caulking cracks around windows helps to keep the heat inside and the cold out.

Enjoy the weekend and the near-end of this too short

Happy peeping.

My daughter makes me taller

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR

The writer lives in Delmar.

Many parents claim their kids give them gray hair. My father has taken that concept one step further. He refers to his new theory as "reverse heredity.

Dad called me the other day at work.

'Your brother gave me arthritis in my knee," he asked. "What are you giving me?"

My father is not senile. He's just looking for a humorous spin on a not-so-funny situation. I decided to play along, but without initially confessing to any aches or pains. If he thinks he can inherit non-contagious ailments from his children, then certainly their positive traits should transfer too.

"Well, dad, have you noticed any increased improvisational comedy skills?" I asked.

He said, "Yeah, I can improvise.'

'OK, you got that from me," I offered, "and if your neck aches, well, trace that to me

This got me thinking. My mother used to be taller than me, but not anymore. I used to believe her shrinkage was due to osteoporosis, but perhaps she "reverse inherited" my lack of height.

Gee, could I be getting a negative attitude from my own daughter? Nah, I know that is something she got from her dad and me. But did she get it from our behavior or our genes?

The Jewish High Holy Days are a time of deep reflection, beginning with the celebration of Rosh Hashanah and ending with the solemn observance of Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement. It is a time for contemplating how to be a better parent, spouse, child, neighbor, and friend. It is a time to consider our actions over the past year and to make amends with people whose feelings we have hurt, intentionally or unintentionally.

Point of View

This Wednesday, Oct. 12, is the start of Yom Kippur. As I have for many years, I will attend Kol Nidre services with my father. He will visit with community members he has known for decades, but sees only once or twice a year. We will sit side-by-side, praying, pondering, and occasionally exchanging a remark.

"Do you have your own tallisclips?" Dad asked last year. Decorative clips linked by a small chain are used to keep the tallis (prayer shawl) from sliding off one's shoulders. When I answered that I did not have tallis clips, thought he was going to say, "Go buy yourself a pair, my treat."

Instead, he unclipped his and own handed them to me.

Last year was a difficult year. The holidays came just six months after heart surgery. I bet we were both thinking the same thing: We may not have many more holidays together.

than go to the babysitting genetic. rooms set up for young children. To pass the time I'd read the parts of the prayer book written in English, count the number of ladies wearing hats, and run my fingers through the silky fringes of my father's tallis.

Tonight I will wear my father's tallis clips. Rabbi Dan will make his annual challenge for congregants to give up gossip during the 26-hour fasting period. I will reflect on ways to teach my daughter to be a mensch, a good person.

Rachel turned 9 this year. I've been trying since her birth to improve my disposition and light. It's been an uphill struggle to model that behavior.

"You tend to be negative," I told my daughter.

"No, I don't!" she retorted.

I relayed to her a story from a marketing class I took in college. The professor took a piece of chalk and made a small circular mark on the board. He then asked the students to identify what he had drawn. The college students gave a limited number of responses: "It's a dot" or "It's a period from a sentence." The professor described that the same exercise had been done in a kindergarten class. The 5-yearolds shouted lots of ideas, including "the eraser on the end of pencil."

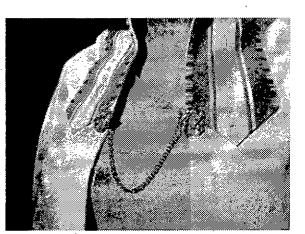

I explained to my daughter that for some reason people tend to become more literal and less imaginative as they grow Yet imagination, older. creativity and keeping an open mind are important. They help you come up with solutions for problems big and small.

A few days later she was in another disagreeable mood.

"You are being negative again," I said.

"No, I'm being imaginative," she countered.

I had to chuckle. Well, I had just urged her to be creative and "think outside the box." How creative, announcing that imaginative is the opposite of

A timeless treasure: the writer will wear her father's tallis clips to Yom Kippur services this week

Some days I think I'm just hard-wired for pessimism. Still, I keep working toward improvement. I've accepted the When I was a little girl, I fact that I'm not getting any preferred to sit on my father's taller, but I refuse to believe that lap during the service, rather negativity is also irreversibly > Yom Kippur is a time to make amends with others and to seek forgiveness from oneself. Often we are our own worst critics. We need to forgive ourselves our shortcomings, both physical and emotional, and just concentrate on what can be done.

> For example, for many decades my mother prepared not only daily family meals, but also major holiday meals, multiple times a year. Now Mom expresses regret for "not helping enough." This, despite all those years of carrying the load single-handedly!

At some point we all deserve outlook. I'm hoping to teach her a break. I tell my mom it's OK to view the world in a positive to sit back and just enjoy the grandchildren and let the next generation do the bulk of the work.

Near the end of Yom Kippur services, the synagogue lights are dimmed and all the children parade down the aisle carrying glow-sticks. All eyes are on the children, our future, gathered at the front of the sanctuary. The entire congregation sings. The room is filled with positive energy and love.

It's easy to locate my tall Rachel in the crowd. I glimpse my parents watching her and my spirits are lifted. I feel great pride, and I stand tall. So perhaps I don't have to accept being short. It looks like I'm reverse inheriting height from my daughter.

Board needs Lenhardt to keep town on right track

Editor, The Spotlight:

I have lived in the town of Bethlehem since 1929, whe I was in second grade at Elsmere School.

I have known George Lendhardt for about 40 years. He graduated from BC in 1965 and has lived here longer than that.

He got married and raised his family here.

When I was secretary for the Republican Committee, he was an active, hard-working member of the committee.

He has done much to expand senior citizen services, the parks and recreation department and has endorsed the town comprehensive plan.

I think George is necessary on the board to continue to keep our great town on the right path for the future.

Sidewalks are welcome addition to town

Editor, The Spotlight:

I've lived in the town of Bethlehem for more than 50 years. For all that time I've been disappointed that there were very few sidewalks and those we did have were rutted with tree roots and too narrow to walk two abreast. Residents put yard waste in the street and with the population growing, a safe place to walk was really needed. I've traveled to countries where "rambles" are a way of life and bike/walk paths run alongside major highways.

Now we're not too far behind. Sidewalks are appearing in many places like Elsmere Avenue almost all the way from Feura Bush Road to the Bypass and all along Elsmere Avenue to the corner of Delaware Avenue.

What a wonderful way to connect Theresa Egan for making sure we neighborhoods. I've seen so many folks walking, pushing strollers, riding bikes. It's an absolutely wonderful way to save gas, get your exercise, and be connected. Divided highways keep people apart and sidewalks help them get together.

Now that there are more bicycles, skateboards, walkers, runners using the Bypass crosswalks, I hope that drivers will use a lot more caution than I've observed so far.

Please take care to look twice in all directions before turning left or right to make sure there's no one using the crosswalk.

I want to thank our supervisor, now have sidewalks, and that builders fronting on public roadways are required to build sidewalks. The Bethlehem Pedestrian Safety Committee pursued the building of side-walks and was also concerned about pedestrian safety. It was the Pedestrian Safety Committee which originally fought for crosswalks, and the "Walk Left Facing Traffic" signs.

There are many people to thank, and we should not forget the property owners who gave up part of their vards to allow the sidewalks to be built.

We hope that those who have not done so will reconsider.

Kotary is great candidate

Editor, The Spotlight:

On Nov. 8, residents of our town have the opportunity to cast their votes for candidates for town board.

The next few years will bring opportunity and challenge for our local leaders, as the comprehensive plan is implemented, and local leaders determine how to manage the needs of our growing population, attract clean businesses to our community to minimize our tax burden, and preserve the high quality of life we have in Bethlehem.

One candidate I know personally that is up to the task of successfully balancing the needs of our community and thinking creatively about solutions for the future is Kyle Kotary.

Kyle is running on the Independent and Democratic lines and is an excellent, top caliber candidate that will bring energy, competence and vision to our town board. I have known Kyle for many years, and he is exactly the kind of leader that we, as a community, would benefit greatly from. Kyle has a long history of working in public policy and advocacy, and knows and deeply cares about the issues that face our community. He is a bright and creative problem solver who will be very valuable for our community to have on the town board.

I hope that every Bethlehem resident will take the time to cast their votes on Nov. 8 to support Kyle Kotary. He deserves your vote!

Residents need to more carefully scrutinize BC decisions

Editor, The Spotlight:

The taxpayers in Bethlehem had no choice on Sept. 30. They paid their school taxes, including their share of the nearly $93 million bond issue that they approved in 2003.

While the significant increase been disturbing, it came as no surprise. However, a real surprise was contained in The Spotlight on Sept. 28, reporting "pending changes" in the original bond issue plans.

As I recall, residents were repeatedly bombarded with in their school taxes may have compelling reasons to approve possible decision within a few members, including the late the bond issue. We were cautioned about dire consequences to the educational program if the bond issue failed to pass.

> We were told that every aspect of the proposal was vital and that a key element was a new elementary school.

> Now we're told that we may not need a new elementary school, but that there may be a better use for the funds based upon the "new" projections of school enrollment.

According to the article, we should take the new proposal with a grain of salt. It would be more appropriate to state that the compelling language of the past should have been taken with a grain of salt.

In all fairness, the school board acted upon the information given to them. They now have the difficult task of making the best weeks based upon projections that they now know "may or may not be accurate."

Would the bond issue have passed on the basis of that 'compelling" information? The last thing the community needs to hear is any gratuitous pabulum regarding "concern about a violation of public trust."

That approach to damage control is heard from all levels of government and is typical of many bureaucratic and political office holders.

School board members are neither nor should they be bureaucrats or politicians. They are not paid for their services, and they are representatives of and for the school district. The decisions they make are based upon the advice and information provided to them by the school district administration.

The continued unchallenged acceptance of school budgets over the years has led to this "crisis management" decision making situation. I, along with other members of the community, should have been more vocal about misleading circumstances of the past. The complacency created by an unquestioning community engenders a sense of immunity from scrutiny and an increasingly automatic autocratic style of management.

I recall with fondness the watchdog concern about taxpayer dollars that was exhibited by told that the public will have the some former school board opportunity for input. Input?

Bernie Harvith and, at an earlier time, John Clyne. I specifically recall a Spotlight article when a group of parents wanted a hockey program. They sought "sanction" of this program to compete against other schools. They received such sanction, with Mr. Harvith's admonition that this "sanction" would be lost upon the first request for any taxpayer dollars. That was a promise made to taxpavers, but as interest faded, members of the school board changed and this promise was not kept. While the understanding delivered by Mr. Harvith was clear, the eventual response to a small vocal group placed an added and continuing burden on the taxpayers.

This is but one example of an expensive item being added to the budget with ever-increasing costs, including recent negotiations with the YMCA for ice time. While I happen to enjoy hockey, I focus on this program to illustrate the ways in which the budgets grow in unintended ways and with the best of intentions.

Responses to special interests and to vocal groups are both a method to quiet the loudest voices, and to foster support for future school budgets from these self groups. The cost, however, is paid by all with each subsequent budget, while tax-payers are constantly told that all possible cuts have been made.

In the current situation, we are

Gour Opinion Matters

Based upon what information? Any opinion that I, or any other person may offer regarding an elementary school versus a new learning center would be a matter of personal preference or a vested interest not supported by accurate demographic data regarding enrollment. One news article mentioned a meeting with town officials to determine the number of single-family homes that are being constructed within the school district. While that information is needed, I suggest that an equally important indicator would be to determine the number of single family homes currently occupied by one or two individuals who are well into their 70s and 80s.

The area within a two-block radius of our home had approximately 20 such occupants a few years ago.

That number has been cut by 50 percent, and the streets are now alive with the sounds of children. These three or four bedroom homes meet the needs of young families with children and the sale of four or five homes in our immediate area is highly probable. Similar circumstances exist in many other neighborhoods and can alter enrollment projections in a dramatic way.

I believe the influx of young families with children will continue at a high level for the next one to two years. As part of my input, I also believe that it is fair to ask whether there are groups that supported a change in the original bond issue plans. If so, what is the basis for their position? Since accurate projections of student enrollment are not available, it is not fair to ask what future costs might be to build an elementary school if projections are understated?

The taxpayers' trough is not a bottomless pit. The uncertainty regarding changes in the bond issue plan should be but one factor of taxpayer concern.

The percentage increase in each successive BC budget is computed on an ever-increasing base, which translates into larger actual dollar amounts at the same time that homeowners' expenses are escalating with regard to heating costs, gasoline and other necessities.

It may be tome to put a shorter leash on budget increases and appeasing responses to special interest groups. The taxpayers of this community can and should expect a watchdog style for the use of their tax dollars. While they represent the largest group in our community, their voice does not seem to be heard.

Where does it end?

Messina is best qualified to serve on town board .

Editor, The Spotlight:

We are fortunate to have someone of Sam Messina's caliber running for a seat on the Bethlehem town board. Sam is imminently qualified for this position. He has worked at the executive level in government for many years, he was a permanent member of the LUMAC Committee (Land Use Management Advisory Committee), and has provided many hours of service to community residents.

Sam has a graduate degree in community development, which will be immensely valuable during a time when we are in the process of refining our comprehensive plan and rezoning. Also, his knowledge of administrative practices and government finance will allow him to participate in the workings of the board and town government.

I had the good fortune to wor with Sam at the state level an also as a member of LUMAC. H is a person of integrity, able compromise, but at the same time willing to stand up for the right of the majority, even in the face political pressure and intimidation by powerful interest groups.

When Sam was appointed the LUMAC committee by Ke Ringler, our former Republica town supervisor, he was not member of the Republican Part but he was known as a perso who has the ability, knowledg and integrity to represent all tow residents, as I'm sure he will, as town board member.

In November, I am voting for Sam, and I hope you will conside doing the same.

Road. The new facility would free up space and allow the conversion of several classrooms at Slingerlands, the location of the current Early Learning Center, which is now eight years old.

"I think we are just too big and a new early learning center would probably be in our best interests," said Kelly Ward, vice president of the Slingerlands Teachers Association.

Another factor weighing in the decision process is a potential mandate for full-day kindergarten from the New York state Department of Education.

"The decision by the state education department may not be made in December and it may only be a preliminary policy statement," Loomis said.

The Bethlehem school board will make its decision by Nov. 16. Two more meetings are scheduled, on Wednesday, Oct. 19 and Wednesday, Nov. 2 at the school district's Adams Street headquarters. A special informational meeting was scheduled for last night, Oct. 11, at Slingerlands Elementary School, at the request of the PTA.

cluding Stuart Lyman, had been against the idea of having public information meetings on this matter away from regular board sessions.

"I think we have a process — public board meetings in front of the community," Lyman said. "It should be kept within this forum."

Board members James Lytle and Jim Derring, however, planned to attend the Slingerlands session.

"We do go to these groups when we need them. I think it sends a very bad message if we don't cover these meetings," said Lytle.

District officials estimate that a new early learning center would save the district $296,000 annually in operating cost expenses and would resolve any future full-day kindergarten needs. A new school on Van Dyke Road would allow for more classrooms, smaller elementary schools and future elementary school expansion.

The reval will take place in mid-january, and there will be another public information meeting before the first of the year. The assessor will mail impact notices by March 1, 2006. Leafer encouraged residents to write down concerns they have with their property before this date, so when the property is assessed, they have the information on hand.

The assessor's office will not be reviewing properties at this time.

Winter cold relief.

Simple steps to help manage your heating bills.

Prices for natural gas and other fuels like oil and propane have increased dramatically. As a result, across the United States home heating costs are expected to be much higher this winter than last year. The United States Department of Energy anticipates that nationally, homes could see a 35-45% increase in their total winter heating bills compared with last winter's bills.

Understanding your natural gas bill

Your gas bill has two main parts: Supply (the cost of the gas itself) and Delivery (the cost of delivering the gas throughout your utility's system). On average, supply costs make up about 60-75% of your bill, depending on your utility.

The supply price of gas is set by national and international markets and is not controlled by utilities or the NYS Public Service Commission. The delivery price is set by the Commission.

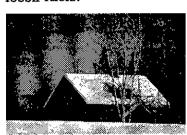

About 98% of the natural gas we use in New York comes from the Gulf of Mexico and Canada. The Commission works hard to keep delivery prices as low as possible and help you deal with changes in the market.

Factors affecting the price of natural gas

The price for natural gas (not including delivery) is expected to be considerably higher than last winter. The price varies based on many factors including weather, demand, the amount and cost of natural gas in storage, and exploration and drilling.

• Supply and Demand — Natural gas suppliers serving New York State are entering the heating season with higher than average inventories. However, the gas going into storage has been more costly this year, and the higher price is passed on to consumers. Production losses due to Hurricane Katrina have also tightened the gas market.

Meanwhile, demand continues to grow as more people use natural gas for their energy needs, and more factories and power generation facilities use gas because it produces fewer emissions than other fossil fuels.

• Weather — Weather plays a significant role in determining the cost of natural gas. Colder weather means an increase in the amount of natural gas used by the average household. However, it is impossible to know what this winter's temperatures or natural gas prices will be over time.

Controlling your heating costs

Your heating costs are made up of the cost of your fuel and the amount you use. No matter where prices go or what the heating season is like, you can take basic steps to lower your costs.

What you should do Have an energy smart winter

- Make sure the attic, walls and foundation in your house are well-insulated.
- Seal gaps around doors, windows and foundations.
- Have your furnace or boiler inspected and insulate your hot water heater and pipes.
- Set thermostats back for every one degree you lower your thermostat, you could save 3% or more on your heating costs. Consider installing a programmable thermostat; it will make saving even easier.

Consider bill payment options and financial assistance programs

- Budget Plans provide equal monthly payments based on past energy usage.
- Deferred Payment
 Agreements may be available if you have fallen behind on your bill and cannot pay in full. You may qualify to pay the past due amount over time.

Financial assistance and energy efficiency programs can also help you with your heating costs

- NYS Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP)
- NYSERDA's Assisted Home Performance with ENERGY STAR® Program

- NYSERDA's EmPower New York Program
- Utility-sponsored assistance programs
- Community-based energy services programs

Use your power to choose

- You can buy electricity and natural gas from companies other than your utility. These Energy Service Companies (ESCOs) are competing to sell you your energy supply. This means new products and services, and better value for your dollar.
- For a list of energy suppliers, and a comparison chart, visit www.AskPSC.com and click on the "Power To Choose" link or call 1-888-Ask-PSC1.
- Your utility will still deliver your energy safely and reliably, and will respond to emergencies.

The New York State Energy Research and Development Authority's (NYSERDA) Home Performance with ENERGY STAR® program can save you money by making your home more energy efficient.

Mentoring program brings ages together

The Across Ages Mentoring Program is planning a 2005 Retired and Senior Mentoring Recruitment Campaign, and the Hilltown Senior Citizens will have the opportunity to participate in this mentoring program. Across Ages is a mentoring program for the Hilltown youth ages 9 to 15. The program brings young people and older adults together to promote understanding across the generations and to help make communications better, stronger and safer. The goals of Across Ages are to help children succeed in schools, feel good about themselves, resist taking drugs, and learning to help others.

The success of the program, and more important, its ability to improve services for the youth of the Hilltowns will be dependent upon strong mentors. The Hilltown Senior Citizens expertise and life experiences are key components in the implementation of this mentoring program. This program protects the dignity of the child and the family and at the same time provides the retired and senior mentor with a positive and beautiful way to help. For information, call 432-0333.

WEDDING INFORMATION

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

here's a little bit of wilderness in the town of Colonie, and the good news is there's a bike the that runs right through it.

That's how John Razzano, a member the board of directors of the Johawk River Community Partners, ses the 10-mile stretch of land that uns along the Mohawk River in the land of Colonie.

To help others get to see it, the artners have organized a free, easy and fun bike tour called "Solve a lohawk Mystery" to take place this aturday, Oct. 15 from 1 to 4 p.m. olunteers from the community artners, joined by friends of the lohawk-Hudson Bike/Hike Trail and the New York Bicycling Coalition, will a positioned at nine different stations ong 3.5 miles of the Mohawk-Hudson ike/Hike Trail that stretches from the ty of Albany to Amsterdam.

receive a game piece, and stop at the nine stations to answer questions about the Mohawk River and the area adjoining it. When they answer correctly, they'll receive a stamp, and the first 200 people to submit completed game pieces will receive prizes donated by Eastern Mountain Sports and the partners themselves. The prizes will be things like T-shirts, water bottles, and discount coupons for bike tune-upş

If you've always suffered from test anxiety, have no fear - the questions are meant more as lessons than exams.

"Hints will be provided," Razzano said, explaining that the purpose of the mystery tour is to raise awareness of the waterfront in the town of Colonie.

"The bike path is a major public amenity, as is the town of Colonie park." Razzano said.

"The waterfront park has lost some attention as The Crossings has developed, but both are great amenities for people. Both are there for them and their enjoyment."

The Mohawk River Community Partners came into existence in January 2004, and is working to revitalize the Mohawk riverfront in Colonie, most of which is bordered by the Mohawk-Hudson bike path.

"One of our members came up with the idea for the bike tour," Razzano said. "We want the path to continue to be an excellent amenity, and we'd like to expand upon it." The free bike tour is beginning just east of the Lyon's Park train station, which is actually in the town of Niskayuna on River Road, close to the border of Colonie.

"People should park at Lyon's Park," Razzano said. "That's what we'd like to see in the town of Colonie. It has expanded parking, and new bathrooms. When you go a little bit east, you come to the western gateway of Colonie, and the first thing you see is an abandoned water treatment plant. One of our long-term goals is to turn it into an environmental center."

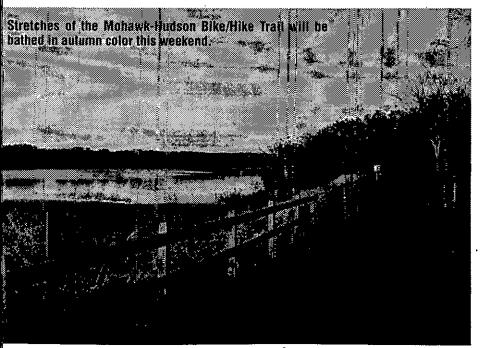

Cyclists on the mystery tour will see things far more beautiful than a water treatment plant, Razzano said.

"They'll be biking along the beautiful Mohawk River in the town of Colonie," he said. "Typically, by the 15th of October, we're seeing the peak of fall color."

The bike tour is open to the public, whether they're from the town of Colonie or not, and is free. There will be information about the Mohawk River Community Partners, and there will be beverages for sale. Children under the ages of 14 must wear a bicycle helmet. Razzano estimated that the 7-mile round trip tour will take between 45 minutes and one hour. Participants can arrive any time between 1 and 4 p.m. this Saturday, October 15. Lyon's Park is located on River Road in Niskayuna.

Eagles, Indians know their seeding for Sectionals

By ROB JONAS

There is little suspense left for he Bethlehem and Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk football teams entering the final week of the egular season.Both teams know exactly where they will be seeded Bethlehem is the No. 3-seed out of class AA Division 1, while Ravena is the top seed for the class B playoffs after winning the South Division title.

Voorheesville's postseason

Blackbirds were looking to break a tie for first place in the class C South Division when they traveled to Canajoharie last Friday, but the power went out in the third quarter with Voorheesville leading 9-6. The game was scheduled to resume Monday afternoon.

Ravena wrapped up its second straight South Division title last Friday by beating Albany Academy 31-14. The Indians own a 6-0 record entering their regular season finale Friday at Taconic Hills and own the tiebreaker over second-place Lansingburgh.

Ravena coach Gary VanDerzee has some concerns about maintaining the team's perfect record, though. The Indians are down to their second string fullback after senior John Lynch tore an ACL two weeks ago against Hudson, and they're still without quarterback Tim Jordan in the middle of serving a 30-day suspension for undisclosed violations.

"He's a big loss on both sides of the ball (offense and defense) and as an inspiration in the locker room," Van Derzee said of Lynch, who will miss the rest of the season

Ravena's reserves have played well in place of the three missing seniors. Quarterback Justin Bullis rushed for two touchdowns and passed for a third, and tailback Pat Filkins surpassed the 100-yard mark for the second week in a row and added a touchdown run. Colin King, Lynch's replacement, had 66 yards on nine carries.

that's why the other kids have to step up."

Meanwhile, Bethlehem (3-2 division, 3-3 overall) locked up a third-place finish in class AA Division I with a 24-6 victory over Columbia last Friday. The Eagles improved their divisional record to 3-2 and own the tiebreaker over Colonie (3-3,3-3), which defeated Guilderland 21-0 in its final divisional game.

Gary VanDerzee

Brian Nicholson led Bethlehem's offense with 224 rushing yards, including touchdown runs of 69 and 47 yards. The senior tailback also returned a third quarter Columbia punt 70 yards for a touchdown.

Stauffer's struggles continued during the last month of the Pacific Coast League season in Portland, but he flashed some of his old dominance by tossing a shutout in his final start in late August.

"If you listen to his pitching coaches in Triple A, he was trying to be too perfect with his pitches," Rick Stauffer said. "They told him to relax, and I think you saw what happened when he finally relaxed (in his last start).'

Stauffer said he is hoping to take what he learned from this season and use it to help him make the Padres' opening day roster next year.

"I think I learned quite a bit. That's the only way to do it -

Spa Catholic grad gets jersey number retired by city

By ROB JONAS

As the San Diego Padres were preparing to play Game 2 of their National League Divisional Series in St. Louis last Thursday, one of the team's top pitching prospects was in Saratoga Springs to receive a special honor.

Tim Stauffer's No. 44 Spa Catholic baseball jersey was officially retired at a city hall ceremony. The number will be displayed on the outfield fence at two city ballfields, the West Side Recreational Field (where Stauffer played youth baseball) and Geyser Road, the Saints' home field.

"I'm 23, but it's definitely a great honor," he said. "Hopefully, know that they have a chance (to play in the major leagues). You just have to keep plugging away."

"It's a well-deserved honor," said Spa Catholic baseball coach Phonsey Lambert. "He's just a Cincinnati May 11. great example of what a studentathlete is all about.'

Stauffer's honor was partly because of pitching in the major. leagues for three months and partly for what he did for Spa Catholic. In Stauffer's senior season, he compiled a 13-0 record and helped the Saints reach the state finals.

"That year was phenomenal,"

Stauffer got his big break in mid May. An injury to Tim it helps other kids playing here to Redding (who wound up being traded to the New York Yankees) opened a spot in the pitching rotation for Stautfer. His first start turned into his first major league win — a 7-2 victory over

Stauffer's debut was shaky, though. Sports success brings out the kid in us

By ROB JONAS

Is there a correlation between a sports team's success and how that community or region feels Sports desk... about itself?

The point was brought up at my family's annual Columbus Day get-together at my sister's house in Brunswick. The Tamarac High. School football team hac just won its second consecutive game after enduring a three-year, 22-game losing streak, during which it had been shut out once nearly every two games and blown out nearly every week. And even though it has had success in other sports - most notably girls soccer the students' perception was altered by their football team's struggles.

While that line of thought may seem childish, it is also a truth. Whether the team is professional or amateur, if it is in a high-profile sport, communities pay attention to how they do, and how people

Look at a place like Cleveland. The city hasn't celebrated a champion in a major sport since the Browns won the National Football League title in 1964. And even though it has enjoyed somewhat of a renaissance, there are some I ving in Cleveland who feel like the city is still considered a joke because there hasn't been a champion since.

What about Chicago? Sure, the Bulls won six NBA titles and the Bears have won a Super Bowl in the last 25 years, but until the Cubs or White Sox win a World Series, it seems like no one in Chitown is going to be truly happy.

Meanwhile, look at a place like

Closer to home, we haven't had a lot of reasons to Fel good about our region — at least, not on the professional or collegiate sports front. We have a minor league hockey team that hasn't made the playoffs in five years, a highprofile mid-major collegiate men's basketball team that may struggle to match the six wins it had last year and two NCAA Division I hockey teams that can't get past the first two rounds of the conference tournament.

The funny thing is, we downplay this fact when we talk to each other. We make statements like, "Nobody cares about the Albany River Fats," or, "My life doesn't revolve around Siena feel about their cities and towns New York City. Thanks to the basketball." But the moment any thing.

Seems childish, right? But when you think about it, you may find that you've done the same

(From Page 1) temperatures the Capital District. had in the first week of October.

What peepers see as the beginning of a beautiful display of nature is no more than a tree going to sleep. The area's trees are ready to do just that, particularly after this year's hot, dry summer.

By the end of last week, temperatures were expected to decrease, setting the stage for a vibrant show of color.

Scheffel and his leaf-peeping platoon, 55-strong, was ready to make predictions about were peak foliage would be, and when.

Odds were on the Tupper Lake area and high peaks of the Adirondacks over the last weekend. With the cooler air literally ready to roll down the Adirondack peaks, Catskills and through the Hudson Valley, the leaves should be ready to blaze into the bright colors so many come to see.

Why New York?

New York has an advantage over its northeastern neighbors when it comes to the vibrance of foliage as its trees prepare for winter dormancy. It's a matter of numbers: thanks to the Adiondack Park, the Empire State has unprecedented contiguous acreage of broad-leaved trees. In addition to the ever-popular sugar maple, there's black walnut, American hornbeam, black cherry, flowering dogwood...and 14 other varieties that Iloveny.com lists as the pieces that are the kaleidoscope of autumn color. In fact, New York has as many acres of broadleaved trees as the rest of the entire Northeast combined.

Time for the harvest

Check out local orchards for festivals and family fun

By STEPHEN PAUSE

It's autumn again, and with the falling of the leaves comes the time for farmers markets and produce picking. For people in the mood for apples and pumpkins, there are a variety of events in Albany County to let them take advantage of pleasant autumn weather before winter's chill arrives.

One of the 'upcoming larger events will be the Pumpkin Fest at Indian Ladder Farms in Altamont. The two-day event, to be held this year on Oct. 22 and 23, will feature a number of events for children and adults.

On Saturday, Oct. 22, there will be the annual Fall Classic 5K Foot Race, a kids fun-run, Halloween crafts and pumpkin painting. The second day of the event will include contests for scarecrow making, jack-o'-lantern carving, and pumpkin pie baking.

Indian Ladder has a special phone number so people can find out what's good for picking that day. Laura Ten Eyck, whose family owns the farm, explained the convenience of the hotline.

"It's handy because it's one ring and the recording picks up," she said. "It's real easy to find out the picking schedule.'

The hotline number is (866) 640-PICK. The regular farm number is 765-2956.

just recently wrapped up its apple and pumpkin picking season, it isn't closed for the year. The orchard has a sprawling farm market that will continue to sell produce and goods throughout Joe Abbruzzi, one of the orchard owners, was quick to point out the bevy of goods the market has available.

'You name it, we've got it," he said. "Baked goods, jams, jellies, apples, cider, hay bales, corn

The farm market is open seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. For more information, call 861-

For residents of Colonie, there's always Yonder Farms, located on New Karner Road. The store, open year-round, gets its apples from a farm in Columbia County, and offers a variety of goods including pumpkins, fresh cider and doughnuts. Also included is a restaurant.

Marvann Chiaro, owner of Yonder Farms, touted the old adage of "an apple a day."

"People should eat apples year round," she said. "They're very good for you."

The Yonder Farms store is open Monday through Saturday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and from 8 phone number is 456-6823.

For people who think buying already picked pumpkins takes the fun out of making Jack-o'lantern's, then Lyman's Sleigh Bell Farm at 140 Meads Lane in Delmar might be an ideal farm. Open every day during daylight hours, Lyman's give people the opportunity to get out into the patches and choose the pumpkin that's right for them. Lyman's also features pick-your-own raspberries. The berries are more fickle than pumpkins, so people should call ahead before they go looking for them. The Lymans number is 439-0345.

Stanton's Feura Farm is another local farm where people can take advantage of the autumn weather and make their own decisions. Stanton's, located at 210 Onesquethaw Creek Road. about 1 mile off Route 32 in Feura Bush, features a pick-your-own pumpkin patch, where pumpkins cost 35 cents a pound. To make While Altamont Orchard has the trip easier, the farm offers a free hayride through the pumpkin patch. The farm also features a corn maze and petting zoo. The farm is open weekends in October from noon to 6 p.m., and the phone number is 768-2344.

> To get some fright before Halloween, there is Mortimer Blackstone's Haunted Mansion at the Altamont Fairgrounds. Despite the frightening name, the event is for a good cause - this year the proceeds will benefit the victims of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. The haunted mansion will be open the next two weekends, Oct. 15-17 and Oct. 21 - 23, Fridays from 5 to 9 p.m., Saturdays noon to 9 p.m. and Sundays from noon to 8 p.m. Information and discount coupons are available at clownsonrounds.com.

Why so many colors?

As winter winds descend on New York from the north, the temperature decrease spurs broad-leaved trees into action, or rather, out of action. The broad leaves in particular make better canvases for fall color than other deciduous trees because of their cellular and chemical make up.

The annual color change in a leaf is caused by three chemicals: chlorophyll, carotenoids and anthocyanins. As chill winds whisk through New York's broadleaved giants, cells within the leaf begin to disintegrate.

When that happens, the leaf's ple sugars and oxygen through photosynthesis is over. In case you've forgotten your science class, six molecules of water plus six molecules of carbon dioxide produce one molecule of sugar plus six molecules of oxygen. The tree keeps the sugar and we breathe the oxygen.

As the leaf cells decompose, the transmission of those sugars to the branches and leaves is blocked at the source and the chemicals contained in the leaf begin to decompose. Chlorophyll, the dominant chemical that gives letting the other pigments in the season a different show. leaves take center stage.

Depending on the preponderance of chemicals, the trees take on varieties of colors. Trees like beech, birch and willow have lots of carotenoids, and turn varying shades of yellow. Leaves of maple, dogwood and sumac trees contain larger portions of anthocyanins. This chemical is responsible for reds and purples, according to Scheffel's posting.

Varying external factors can cause each leaf to react differently. Concentration of a chemical, exposure to disease. injury or unusually wet or dry seasons can cause each leaf to leaves their green color, fades, react differently, making each
