Supervisor candidates list goals, qualifications

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

Bethlehem Supervisor Theresa Egan is up for her second term at the helm, and she is running on the strength of accomplishing her 2003 campaign promise of a "Blueprint for Bethlehem." That blueprint included a moratorium on residential development, adopting a comprehensive plan and new zoning code; open space protection and soliciting clean and environmentally sound businesses in town.

With many of those goals accomplished, Egan is creating another "Blueprint for Bethlehem," which outlines her plans for Bethlehem's future.

Egan plans to continue to modify the comprehensive plan implemented this summer. Its main goals are to attract businesses and evaluate traffic patterns to reduce congestion. Promoting an extension of Route 85 behind Price Chopper, a study of Route 9W and a possible new Thruway interchange could improve transportation conflicts in those areas.

"It's a three-fold plan," said Egan. "It would be resolving traffic issues in the area, it would provide access to allow economic development, and would also step up safety."

Exploring new hamlets and expanding the design criteria in the zoning for those areas is also a goal. To keep Bethlehem a pedestrian-safe and friendly community, Egan is promoting new hamlets in the Cherry Avenue Extension area and supporting existing hamlets by improving pedestrian accommodations.

Preserving open space and recreational opportunities is also a major goal. With the comprehensive plan in place, Egan's goal is to work with the community by appointing a citizens advisory committee on conservation to work with willing landowners to identify opportunities for open space, as well as trails and promoting connectivity. Also in the next two years, Egan wants to assign a committee to work with town officials on the local waterfront revitalization plan, which would study the area of the Hudson River to help define the waterfront.

"We'll be soliciting input from the community about what they want there," said Egan.

Bethlehem school board discusses ELC options

By JIM CUOZZO

Opinions among members of the Bethlehem school board remain varied as they continue to discuss elementary school options. As part of the $93 million bond issue approved in 2003, the board has the funding to build a new elementary school. The board is currently deciding whether to relocate the early learning center — the all-kindergarten addition to Slingerlands Elementary School — or build a new school on Van Dyke Road, near the high school.

"My thoughts on this have changed at times, but right now I am thinking to go ahead and build as planned," said board member James Derring, who favors building a new school and adding on to Slingerlands to accommodate need there.

"This decision is no different than others we have to make," said board member Warren Stoker. "It's about how programs are affected. I am leaning toward the early learning center staying where it is."

Stoker said he is in favor of a new option that Superintendent Les Loomis presented to the board. The new plan would build a new school on Van Dyke Road with 16 classrooms instead of 12 and keep Slingerlands and all the other elementary schools smaller in classroom size. This would add close to $900,000 more in construction costs to the new elementary school, which was originally estimated at $6.98 million. The district would see an equal amount of savings by not adding on to Slingerlands. Operational costs for a new school with more classrooms would stay the same at an additional $450,000 annually, resulting in about a 1 percent tax increase to Bethlehem taxpayers.

Helen Smith, president of the high school parent group BCCO, spoke out about the added operating costs of a new school, referring to the district's space needs at the middle and high schools.

"I think this is a really tough decision, and I am quite concerned how you handle costs and staffing needs in 2007 and 2008," said Smith. "I've been through a lot of budgets here, and I wonder how were going to handle all that and not have an exorbitant tax increase."

Board member James Lytle's comments centered on the possibility of a new early learning center.

"The case for the early learning center may be the most efficient way to

All-day benefits clear for some students

Children in New York state are not required to attend kindergarten. In fact, they aren't required to attend school at all until age 6. That may change in the near future if the New York state Board of Regents adopts the draft version of a policy statement on early education currently under discussion.

The Board of Regents released its policy statement, "Early Education for Student Achievement in a Global Community" in July. It has 12 components geared to closing the achievement gap of students earlier in their academic careers and ensuring that the state's children are prepared to function productively in a global community.

"This is policy catching up with practice," said Cindy Gallagher, coordinator for the state Department of Education's office of early education and reading initiatives. Gallagher noted the Board of Regents' existing policy statement on early education was adopted in 1992 and research since then has created the need for a re examination of the policy.

Parents and educators alike have long been debating the benefits of full-day versus half-day kindergarten. The research that is currently taking place may end it.

While not finding disadvantages to attending half-day programs, research has found a lot of good reasons for districts to have full-day programs, said Carol Rasowsky, assistant professor in the teacher education department early childhood education program at The College of Saint Rose.

How long is a day?

A lot more research has been done over the last decade,"

Rasowsky said regarding what can be done in all-day kindergarten.

Much of the research focused on economically disadvantaged children or children deemed to be "at risk."

"Achievement is better, at least through second grade," Rasowsky said. "Those kids do have better outcomes. There is much more time for instruction in early language and literacy skills as

Kindergarten has traditionally been a half-day class, a way for children to prepare for entering the full-day world of grade school and their role as students.

As the state Board of Regents considers whether to mandate full-day kindergarten, it is addressing an issue that has been recurring in some school districts for a while.

"There was a huge formal study in 1989," said Diane McIver, principal of Bratt Primary School in the Mohonasen district, regarding full-day kindergarten. "A significant number of parents were against it."

Bratt has 211 kindergarten students. There are 12 sections of kindergarten and two sec-

State, Albany, town police involved in three-county car chase

On Oct. 17, police arrested Shallon Parker, age 28, of Midland Court, Waterford, for reckless endangerment on Route 443. A call came to assist Albany police with a car that would not stop, police said. The vehicle went down Euclid Avenue from Delaware Avenue and police had to take evasive action to avoid being hit. The vehicle led police on a chase onto Elm Avenue and then on to Route 32, where the vehicle accelerated to 80 miles per hour, police said. The vehicle started to go to Elm Avenue Park, and state police in Catskill and Greene Counties were advised later. Catskill police did pick up the vehicle and followed it to Route 9W in the town of Saugerties, where the vehicle turned onto a dead end road and drove across a residential lawn, into a backyard and down an embankment, police said.

Parker admitted to smoking crack cocaine before driving in Albany. Officer Scott Anson issued Parker an appearance ticket.

Police said Parker did the same thing in September in Schenectady, and also admitted to taking drugs and driving in Indiana and Iowa in the past. Police said Parker admitted that each time she was unaware that police were behind her attempting stop her, and said she was very sorry.

Parker was taken to the hospital for drug and alcohol testing. She was arrested for reckless driving, speeding, failure to stop, passing in a no passing zone, and aggravated unlicensed operation. She is scheduled to appear in court Nov. 1 at 4 p.m.

On Oct. 18, police arrested Christopher Catello, age 20, of Orchard Avenue in Ravena on a warrant for forgery in the second degree a felony, and petit larceny and conspiracy in the fifth degree at Wal-Mart in Glenmont, police said. He was also arrested from an incident in September for criminal mischief and trespass at 681 Bridge Street in Selkirk. He is due to return to court Dec. 20, and returned to Albany County Correctional Facility.

On Oct. 14, police arrested Lesli Sipperly, 31, of Smith Avenue in Selkirk. While Sipperly was at Applebees on Route 9W in Glenmont, police received a call from the manager, who reported that Sipperly appeared drunk and had two children in the car. Police found the vehicle in a side lot, running with the lights on. Officer David Harrington detected a strong odor of alcohol, and the manager of Applebees said Sipperly left with a mug in her hand. Police found in the car

Student suspended for streaking

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

Bethlehem High School had quite a shock, and reportedly, quite a laugh at its Oct. 8 Homecoming Game as a streaker crossed the fields.

The streaker, whose name has not been released, was not of the traditional form, i.e. completely naked. He was reportedly wearing thong underwear.

Bethlehem Superintendent Les Loomis confirmed that the student was suspended, but would not confirm rumors that he was suspended for five days.

"This has never happened here before," Loomis said. "The reason he was suspended is because what he did was a disruption to a school event and inappropriate."

Rumors that charges that may have been filed with police have also been unconfirmed by both police and by Loomis, who said it is the school's practice to inform police of any issues involving the law occurring on school grounds.

"I can't comment on possible legal issues, but what I can say is that he is a good student who used bad judgement," said Loomis.

Woman returns from Katrina animal rescue efforts

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

Bonnie Cerasaro is back, and she is a changed woman.

The Selkirk native and branch manager of the Pioneer Savings Bank in Glenmont spent 10 days in Slidell, La., just outside of New Orleans, helping to place and care for lost animals in the wake of Hurricane Katrina.

Slidell was completely wiped out by the hurricane. Cerasaro and other volunteers for Noah's Wish, a nonprofit animal welfare organization, were given accommodations in the ballroom of an old hotel. Luxurious sounding, maybe, but not for all 60 of the volunteers, with only one shower for the group.

Cerasaro was not there for the accommodations, though. From 6:30 a.m. to 11 p.m., she was on the go, feeding, walking dogs, and cleaning animal cages. A pretty tall order for 500 dogs, 400 cats, assorted birds, ferrets, rabbits, chickens and one tarantula. Most of the animals were sick from malnutrition and drinking contaminated water. Some had broken bones and severe scrapes from run-ins with other animals. All were stressed.

"It was overwhelming," Cerasaro said. "You look at them all and think, 'how am I going to get it all done?' But somehow we did it."

She and the other volunteers, from all walks of life, have at least one thing in common: they would do it again in a heartbeat.

"We would get on each other's nerves, of course, but we all worked well together," Cerasaro said. "No one was afraid to work and get dirty. We would joke that we could always tell the new people because they still looked good."

Cerasaro herself saved the makeup and superficial grooming for the day she arrived and the day she left. In between, she dedicated herself not just to caring for the animals but to helping find their owners.

They were very careful. First, someone looking for a pet had to sign in and describe the pet. Then, searchers had to look at pictures to try and identify the pet. If there was a match, workers checked the books to see where that particular animal had been picked up to see if it was near the owner's home. Then, the owner was transported by golf cart to where the animals were held.

"We were very careful so that the animals would be returned to their rightful owners," she said.

One of the saddest parts of her work was seeing how few of the owners came back for their pets, Cerasaro said. Circumstances may have prevented many people from claiming their pets, and it was heartening for her to see the ones who made every attempt to claim their animals.

"One lady had 18 cats and found them all," she said. "We thought, 'what are the chances she'll actually find all of her cats?' But she came in, looked around, and pointed them out one by one."

Cerasaro said the lady came back later that day with two pick-up trucks she hired, and packed all 18 cats — 9 cages in the bed of each truck — and left happy.

"I was a little worried they'd fall out and spill onto the road," Cerasaro said.

Not all the endings were happy, though. One dog was found with both paws chewed so badly they became infected and had to be amputated. The veterinarians figured the dog tried to dig its way out of the house, and had been digging for five weeks.

In one case, it was both the owner and the animal who were homeless. Cerasaro met Buddy, an 82-year-old man who had literally nothing left except for his Chihuahua, Dirty Harry.

"Like Clint Eastwood, Dirty Harry was real cool," she said. "He would sass the bigger dogs."

Cerasaro was moved to tears to hear that Buddy didn't have a home, and even tried to convince him to move to back here and stay with her. Buddy is a widower and has been living in a shelter since the hurricane.

"He came and walked Dirty Harry twice a day," she said. "When I offered to let him come home with me he said, 'This is where I was born, I've lived here all my life and I can't leave. I'll be OK. There are people who need homes worse than me.'"

Time is running out for pet owners to claim their lost animals. Nov. 4 is the cutoff date for people to claim their animals, after which they will be put up for adoption or given to foster homes.

Cerasaro is concerned about all the animals still left. After Noah's Wish leaves the area, the city of Slidell will take over.

"It's just a mess down there," she said. "How do you find people after there's been a mass exodus?"

Cerasaro is still working hard, though. The account set up by Pioneer Savings Bank has collected about $3,000 toward the fund, and Cerasaro plans to hold a fund-raiser in the spring. The fund-raiser will likely be a flea market or a spaghetti dinner at the Bethlehem Grange in Selkirk. Donations to the fund will continue to be sent on to Noah's Wish. Contributions can be dropped off or mailed to Pioneer Savings Bank, 329 Glenmont Road, Glenmont 12077.

Local merchant helping earthquake victim

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

For Slingerlands resident Faiza Warsim, the tragic earthquake which rocked Pakistan on Oct. 8 has literally hit home: she grew up in the town of Rawalpindi, one of the two major cities hardest hit.

Warsim owns the Getty station at 308 Delaware Ave. in Delmar with her husband, Amir Salman.

The couple has a jar near the cash register at the gas station and so far, they've collected a few hundred dollars in relief funds. Warsim said that every little bit counts: one American dollar can feed a Pakistani family of five for a whole day.

It's not just food that concerns Warsim. Freezing temperatures in the Himalayas will require homeless families to be equipped with supplies other than food. Warm clothing and tents to accommodate large families are needed to ensure survival. Warsim recalled her school days, when the temperatures were so biting that any exposed body part would freeze.

Already the death toll is up to more than 90,000, and it's still rising.

"You can't get over it," Warsim said. "It hurts a lot. My husband doesn't have many people there, but I do. Those are my memories, those roads, those people. That was the tourist area. People went there to see the beauty, but now it has gone from heaven to hell."

She had been planning to visit Rawalpindi this year, since she hasn't been to her homeland in over 10 years. Since the quake, she thinks her money is better spent trying to help those ravaged by the earthquake.

The $1,000 it costs to travel to Pakistan can be exchanged for 60,000 rupees, the Pakistani form of currency, which can in turn help with survival and reconstruction efforts.

This is the first earthquake the area has ever seen, and the traditional environment is gone. Warsim and her husband have been tuning in to Pakistani television every night via satellite. American coverage is censored compared to what she sees on the Pakistani broadcasts. Stark and horrifying images are shown daily, and it robs her of sleep.

Warsim is encouraging donations in any amount.

"Pakistan is a developing country, meaning that there is no welfare, Social Security, or disability funds," she said. "We are so privileged here, and so blessed. You just can't believe how much the smallest donation will buy—food, medicine, tents, kids formula—it's beyond imagination."

Ramadan, a traditional fasting period in the Muslim religion, takes place in October, which Warsim said helps to keep each person connected to the suffering of others and to deepen understanding of people less fortunate. She and her husband have four children, three of whom are school age. Although children are not supposed to fast, hers have elected to do so because they want to understand what the earthquake victims are going through. Warsim's oldest son, a fifth grader at Slingerlands, is trying to set up a penny drive to help.

"The children need to be good humans before they can be doctors and engineers," Warsim said.

Warsim is hoping to collect as much money as she can this week, because Price Chopper, along with the Islamic Mosque in Schenectady, will be shipping donations to Pakistan for free.

"The biggest connection we have is that we are all human," said Warsim. "If you give, you get back. There are no boundaries, no religion. We give to God and we get enough interest back. One dollar can save a life."

Boo or boo-hoo? Ghostly times coming to an end

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Faster than you can wonder what's really fun about fun-sized candy bars, the time is coming when we'll no longer have Halloween-ers in our house. This will probably be Cormac's last year trick-or-treating, which leaves me pondering the age-old parental question: where has the time gone?

Our first couple of Halloweens with the children were in New York City, where we joined other families to tramp up and down the stairs in our apartment building, getting hot and sweaty. The lights in the hallways and the sound of children's feet on linoleum flooring just didn't compare with the moonlit evenings and the rustle of wind through fallen leaves that I always associated with Halloween.

For every repeated event of my boys' childhoods, one clear memory seems to represent the day. When Christopher was 4 and we trick-or-treated through 530 E. 20 St. in Manhattan, he was at the head of the pack, the first to ring the doorbell, the first to holler "trick or treat." At one corner apartment, he stumbled back through his friends, terror etched on his face, threw his arms around my waist and burrowed his head into my belly, pointing repeatedly at what was behind him. It was a boy, probably not trick-or-treating for the first time in his life, bare-chested with red paint to look like blood, wearing a horrible mask and wielding one of those huge plastic tridents that my now 13- and 15-year-old boys still love. Ever since then, Christopher has adopted a "last shall be first" policy around trick-or-treating, happy to let the rest of his group get the full impact of whatever Halloween horror awaits. My first Halloween memory involving Cormac is a sweet one.

Commentary:

Mom's The Word

When he was 3, we lived in the rented house in the Capital District that we referred to as "the little red house," and Christopher had drawn a map of the Halloween route he wished to follow. Cormac picked up steam as the night wore on, delighted by the generosity of his fellow man. He pushed up the cardboard mask of his white Power Ranger costume to grin at me every time we left somebody's house. "Wasn't he nice?" he asked after the third house we left, where a senior citizen had asked him lots of questions about his costume and told him to help himself to extra candy. "What a nice lady!" he'd say, bouncing down driveways, his pillowcase clutched tight in his hand.

On the Halloweens I draw door duty, I love to see the shining faces on my porch, eager for the free sugar that I know their parents will hide as soon as possible, to dole out in doses that the dentist would be able to tolerate.

Halloween becomes one of those days when kids claim the rights that go with what they see as advanced age. When Christopher was in eighth grade, he and his friends were determined to trick-or-treat alone.

Who really thinks this is a good idea? I thought, but gave in to the silent peer pressure of the other parents who apparently were fine with it. Cormac and I trick-or-treated with one of his friends and his friend's father, who had two older sons also making the rounds in those packs of teenagers that make mothers draw their tiny witches and Sponge Bobs just a little bit closer.

"You gotta let 'em go," he advised me, when we ran into Christopher and his friends, bounding from house to house, making enough noise to raise any Halloween spirits that might still be resting. My biggest panic came when they planned to cross a major road. So here's my plea to any of you who have to drive on Halloween night: please go slowly; those big, hulking teenagers are somebody's children... even if one of them is wearing the most terrifying costume imaginable, that of an IRS worker.

Cormac doesn't seem so eager to trick-or-treat on his own, which suits me just fine. The key for him is to be with at least one friend, and I'm happy to hang back and remind them to say thank you when they get their treats.

It's funny how my definition of childhood has changed as my children get older. It was only last year — his first in high school — that I actively discouraged Christopher from making the Halloween rounds. Some of his friends got the thumbs-down on the event, and after about half an hour, Christopher was home again. My guess: somebody asked them if they didn't think they were a little old to be trick-or-treating.

It feels like we cheat our children out of childhood sometimes, with all the scheduled activities, programs, and dangers of the world. Razor blades in candy started when I was about Cormac's age, and my parents threw out a lot of miniature Hershey bars, and any apples that well-meaning health advocates put in our bags went right out the door. I'm glad to live someplace where Halloween feels safe; where we know most of the people whose doors we knock on; and where one neighbor always tells me he lights his fireplace for the first time every Halloween because his now-grown son always associates Halloween with a fire. It's a perfect accompaniment to my Halloween stroll, that smell of wood smoke edged with the excitement of the children trolling the neighborhood for free treats.

We are behind on our Halloween planning this autumn, which I mostly blame on the rain, but could also be a function of my children getting too old to truly put their whole hearts into the holiday.

It's also a question of time — of which there is never, ever enough. We can make notations in our PDAs, BlackBerrys and Franklin Planners, but at the end of every day, what we really need are about four more hours.

Whenever I think I can skip or change a tradition, though, one of my children reminds me just how important it is. Last week, I asked Cormac what this year's Halloween costume would be. Cormac has great faith in me. Despite my annual reminders and solid proof that I am not Martha Stewart able to concoct a cool costume in a few days, he always comes up with something elaborate and obscure that leaves us frowning at the goods in Jo-Ann Fabrics and Michael's arts and crafts store. We have learned that sweat pants and a bottle of RIT dye can produce a serviceable costume at a moment's notice.

"Oh, I don't plan my Halloween costume until you put up the decorations," he said, which sent me scurrying to the basement for the plastic pumpkins over strings of orange light to hang on the outdoor shrubs. We're ahead of the game on pumpkins, although the squirrels are treating them like hors d'oeuvres, nibbling away at them, bit by bit.

I wish those furry rodents could chew the pumpkins so they produced lovely jack-o'-lanterns.

Somebody once said that we live on the "Halloween street" and proof that time marches onward came when our resident witch put her house up for sale — but may do one last swan song this year.

Every Halloween, Kristy Reynolds has donned a witch's costume and explained that kids need to perform a trick, tell a joke, do a dance — anything — before getting their treat at her house.

My kids were nonplussed nine years ago, when they trick-or-treated at Kristy's house for the first time, but came up with jokes to tell. After that, planning tricks became as important as planning their costumes.

"What a great year," Kristy said a couple of years ago when Cormac, his friends and I stopped by her house on Halloween. "I had a kid in a toga say trick-or-treat in Latin."

"That was my kid," I was able to tell her proudly.

While Cormac thinks up his act and his costume, I'll put out our lights and spider webs. When my children have children, they'll be able to relive some childhood moments relaying the story of the years he had to do a trick to get a treat.

Seems like a fair trade. Thanks, Kristy.

We are behind on our Halloween planning this autumn, which I mostly blame on the rain, but could also be a function of my children getting too old to truly put their whole hearts into the holiday.

Bogus propositions

Here we go again. New York taxpayers are the highest-taxed citizens in the country in most categories. Two questions on the Nov. 8 ballot may further secure this dubious distinction.

The first is the constitutional amendment that is touted as budget reform. The real question is — reform of what? The proposal states that if a budget were not passed on time, the Legislature would then have constitutional power to control the budget process.

This is another way to guarantee a late budget each year. Why would the Legislature pass a budget submitted from the governor, when it could stall the process, create its own spending bills and override any vetoes from the executive branch?

Another folly in this flawed proposal is that it removes the penalty of delayed legislative pay in the case of a late budget. What was already a weak penalty, only delaying the pay rather than eliminating it, enables the already dysfunctional government.

This will permanently change our constitution to further line the pockets of our legislative leaders and their pet projects.

We are being asked to trust the Legislature with all this new power. What has it done to gain our trust? Nothing.

A few suggestions for real budget reform:

- 1) Eliminate the three men in a room. This gives three men power to spend billions of taxpayer money with no public debate.
- 2) Initiate a budget that reverts to last year's spending after the deadline is missed. No budget, no problem. This would also cap spending if no agreement was made.
- 3) Keep an executive veto on all spending bills. If the Legislature does not like a veto, it can vote to override it.

The second ballot concern is the Transportation Bond Act. This act proposes that the state borrow $2.9 billion for projects in New York, half of which would be for the Metropolitan Transportation Authority in and around New York City. Isn't it interesting that with less than two weeks until Election Day, we still don't know all of the projects to be funded with this bond. Why do you think that is?

We already pay taxes for transportation projects each time we pull up to the pump or register our vehicles. This new borrowing would give the state government more money to spend on pork projects. With an annual budget of more than $90 billion, there is already plenty of money to fund transportation. If the will of the people is to fund a particular project, the Legislature and governor should make that happen without borrowing more.

New York deserves better than this.

Editorial

Caring enough to send the very best

By ROB JONAS

The writer is sports editor of Spotlight Newspapers and a big music fan.

Many rock bands do special things for milestone anniversaries. They'll put out huge box sets of previously released albums with an extra disc of unreleased tracks. They'll mount anniversary tours. They'll record TV specials where they invite other artists to play with them.

How many bands get anniversary cards signed by a group of their most loyal fans? I know of one who will be getting one come January because I recently had the privilege of signing it.

Yes folks, I'm talking about Blue Rodeo yet again. It's really not a personal crusade to get you to buy their albums (although I won't stop you — I'll even encourage you). It's just that this is a unique project that I wanted to share with you, so permit me this one self-indulgent column and I promise to not mention the band again in a column for a year.

The card idea was born out of an event on the official Blue Rodeo Web site's message board back in February. To mark the 20th anniversary of the band's first performance, someone organized a night when they tried to set the record for the most people on the message board at the same time. The event began with a post toasting the band's anniversary and then evolved into people trading posts (and in some cases instant messages) late into the night.

(In the interest of full disclosure, I signed on late into the proceedings because I was covering the Section II, Class A wrestling finals that evening and added my own message of congratulations to the band).

Following the online party, one of the board members suggested that we use the evening as a starting point for an anniversary card. First, a board member printed out the page from the night when the online toast took place and sent it to another member, who then bought a folder and placed the page — along with a personal message on another page — in it. From there, the card began its journey.

To be included in the chain, you had to either have been on the message board that night or get your online name and e-mail address in before the sign-in period ended (the list reached 50 people before it was capped). I managed to get in at No. 27, so I knew the card would get to me at some point.

The card's travels and travails between its point of origin (Harrison, just north of New York City) to my place in the Capital District in September, was more interesting than the concept itself. It crisscrossed North America several times, landing in such places as Vancouver, Portland, Cleveland and Winnipeg — not to mention several smaller cities and towns in Canada (I received the card from a woman who lives in rural Ontario). It even got lost at one point, but was thankfully found and ultimately reached its destination.

Twice, the card arrived at a destination to coincide with a significant event in the life of the recipient. It arrived in Vancouver on the same day the woman it was sent to gave birth to a child. Several weeks later, it arrived on the day when the person suffered the loss of a relative. So, it's been an unofficial witness to someone coming into the world and someone else leaving the world.

Along the way, people have added their own personal messages to the band — some congratulating them for staying together for 20 years, and some telling them about how their music has been part of their lives. And to document where the card has been, people have been clipping the postmarks off the envelopes and taping them to pages in the back. There were two pages of postmarks when I got the card, and I'm sure it's grown to three since then.

There will be plenty more postmarks to come. The card still has to make its way back to Vancouver — its third trip to Canada's west coast, by my count — not to mention stops in Alberta, Texas, Long Island and Montreal before winding up in Toronto — hopefully in time for it to be presented to the band at its annual weekend concerts in January in Stratford, Ont.

That might seem like a stretch, but Blue Rodeo fans are resourceful. Whenever geography permits, the card is now being hand-delivered from one person on the list to another to get signed. Since I mailed it out Oct. 6, six people on the list have signed it.

That leaves 16 people left to sign it over the next two months — a manageable amount, if the post office doesn't lose the card again.

Personally, I'm surprised the project has worked out as well as Personally, I'm surprised the project has worked out as well as it has. Between the geography and delays associated with mailing a package across the United States-Canadian border, it's amazing that it hasn't gotten bogged down to the point where the presentation has to be put off until Blue Rodeo's 21st anniversary.

it has. Between the geography and delays associated with mailing a package across the United States-Canadian border (I think border crossings add about three or four days to the amount of time it takes for the card to reach its next destination), it's amazing that it hasn't gotten bogged down to the point where the presentation has to be put off until Blue Rodeo's 21st anniversary. And everyone on the list seems to be supportive of doing whatever it takes to get it done on time.

My only regret is that the one thing that I wanted to include in the anniversary card can't be — namely, this column. It was my intention on putting the published column in the card along with a personal note, but there was some "Bad Timing" involved (a Blue Rodeo title). So, after making the realization that the column wouldn't be ready, I added something else and sent it on its way.

Still, to be part of this card is an honor. I'm sure when the members of Blue Rodeo open this card and see all the messages, they are going to be impressed — possibly even touched. They've always been personable with their fans (I don't think there's been a concert I've been to where I haven't talked to at least one of the guys), and it's that personal connection that drives the fans' devotion to the band. Heck, it's driven me to travel hundreds of miles over the last three years to see them; everywhere from Buffalo and New York City to Montreal and Burlington, Vt. Their brand of roots rock and their live performances also have a lot to do with it.

So here's to Blue Rodeo — a band that has withstood the test of time and has created a fan base that feels so connected that they treat them like they're part of the family.

Independence Party members like Kotary, Egan & Messina

Editor, The Spotlight:

As Independence Party members, we are writing in support of Kyle Kotary, a well-qualified, energetic and dynamic candidate for Bethlehem town board. Kyle has 15 years of relevant experience working with federal, state and local governments and has a thorough understanding of the issues important to Bethlehem residents.

Kyle Kotary is an enrolled Democrat and is running on the Independence and Democratic lines. He has received the endorsement and backing of the county and town Independence parties and has really connected with Independence and independent-thinking voters like us.

We also think Supervisor Terri Egan has done a tremendous job for the Town of Bethlehem and support her re-election effort. Both Supervisor Egan and Sam Messina (the other Democrat and Independence town board candidate) are running as a team with Kyle and have endorsed him because they know that Kyle will be a tremendous asset to the board, the town and Supervisor Egan's team as she continues to make improvements to our great town.

Time and again Kyle has shown his leadership ability and a work ethic that would benefit this town greatly. He's a father of three young children and really relates to the needs of growing families like ours.

We want Kyle representing us on the Town Board. As other town residents meet Kyle, we know they will want Kyle working hard for them too.

Please vote for Kyle Kotary for town board on Nov. 8th and support the Egan-Kotary-Messina team.

Lenhardt is proven leader

Editor, The Spotlight:

Six years ago, I met George Lenhardt as I was beginning a new job. Impressed by the energy, intelligence, ethics and optimism that he brought to the workplace, I concluded that the town of Bethlehem was fortunate to have such a person serving on its town board.

Three years ago, my family and I began to search for a new home in the Capital District, and we ultimately settled on Delmar. Many factors go into the making of such an important decision, but I can report that the fact that Bethlehem was the sort of place that put people like George Lenhardt in positions of leadership was among those factors.

I hope that the voters of the town persevere in their good judgment and return George for another term in November.

Milano deserves re-election

Editor, The Spotlight:

My name is Ruth Milano, and my husband Frank Milano was elected Bethlehem town judge four years ago. I can certainly confirm from personal experience how hard Frank has worked as judge, and I am also happy to say that many people have told me how fair and courteous Frank is to all who come to court, and his willingness to hear both sides.

Having raised, with Frank, two children who have lived their entire lives in Bethlehem, I know one of the main reasons Frank sought the position of town judge was to make a positive contribution to Bethlehem, and particularly to its young people. From his community service to his eight years as a baseball manager and soccer coach to his strong support of the town Youth Court program, Frank has made the interests of our town's young people one of his primary concerns.

I think Frank's contributions have made Bethlehem a better community generally and a better place to raise a family, particularly.

Both Frank and I would appreciate your support on Nov. 8 for his re-election.

Ex-board member supports Messina

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am supportive of Sam Messina as a candidate for Bethlehem town board. Having served as a town board member for 10 years (from Jan. 1994 through 2003), I am somewhat familiar with what that position involves.

I have known Sam for many years and am consistently impressed by his commitment to the community; his judgment and character; and his approach to solving problems and working with others in an articulate and soft-spoken manner.

Because he has held responsible positions for several administrations at the state government level, Sam understands the government process. He has also held demanding positions in Bethlehem as a volunteer member of LUMAC, the town's Land Use Management Advisory Committee, and more recently as a member of Bethlehem's IDA.

I am confident Sam Messina will be an excellent representative if elected to our town board. He will listen, he will be accessible and he will not let us down. I will vote for him on Nov. 8, and I hope that Bethlehem's residents will vote for him as well.

Lenhardt has earned right to re-election

Editor, The Spotlight:

This is a letter to urge the re-election of George Lenhardt to the Bethlehem town board.

We've known George and his family for more than 30 years. Our kids grew up together.

During that time, we've seen him dedicate his time and himself to innumerable kids sports programs, school functions, from elementary through high school; the Slingerlands Fire Department, the town board and most important, his family.

George Lenhardt not only grew up in this town, but also chose to raise his family here. He knows what Bethlehem is all about, and he knows the people who live here want to preserve and continue it as a great place to live. That's why George has been at the forefront of efforts to curb uncontrolled development while at the same time fostering an atmosphere conducive to the sensible and safe business and industrial growth necessary to keep real property taxes under control.

His level-headed and common sense approach to issues before the town board serve as a stable and reliable voice for the residents he has been elected to represent.

It's exactly for all of the above reasons it's important to keep George Lenhardt on the town board. He has a proven record. He has a sense of community. And he cares about Bethlehem.

We need more people like George in politics and in government. Please join us in giving him your support.

Longtime resident likes Lenhardt

Editor, The Spotlight:

I've been a resident of Bethlehem for more than 70 years.

I've watched it grow from basically a farming community to the wonderful place it is today.

That's not to say that I've been happy with all the changes that have occurred, but then again, I realize change is inevitable and for the most part, good.

Certainly, that has been true here.

At the same time, I want to be comfortable that when change is being proposed, it's looked at carefully and its impact weighed in relation to how it will affect me, as well as Bethlehem overall.

That's why I'm writing to urge the voters to re-elect George Lenhardt to the Bethlehem town board. Mr. Lenhardt has demonstrated a true ability to look at the issues that come before the board and determine them based on the facts and the effect his decision will have not only now, but in the future.

All of us need a representative who has an eye toward the future with some roots in the past. George Lenhardt, a Bethlehem resident for all of his life, is that kind of representative.

Please vote for George Lenhardt because by doing so, you are also voting for a continuation of the type of leadership that has made Bethlehem the great place it is and for a person willing to stand up and keep it that way.

Longtime GOP member supporting Kotary for board

Editor, The Spotlight:

My name is Marty Kerins Jr. I'm a lifelong Republican who is supporting Kyle Kotary for Bethlehem town board. Actually, I'm one of many Republicans who have placed their support behind Kyle, who is running on both the Independence line and the Democratic line.

I've had the pleasure to get to know Kyle through the Albany Colonie Regional Chamber of Commerce's Capital Leadership program. During the year long program, Kyle Kotary demonstrated his leadership skills on a continuous basis. I am one of many in our class of 2005 who recognized his logically innovative brand of thinking. Rarely do we, as a community, have an opportunity to elect a person with Kyle's character and credentials to a position that will help guide the town of Bethlehem into the future. He has worked for Republican Congresswoman Sherry Boehlert and the universally respected Democratic U.S. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, to name just a couple of the great minds that Kyle has had the opportunity to learn from. My respect for Kyle Kotary has been compounded in the last few months as I've seen the kind of father he is to his three children, as well as the husband he is to his wife. I've grown to admire Kyle for the passion he has for his community, and the environment he wants his children to grow up in.

I would like to take this time and ask all my fellow Republicans to vote for Kyle Kotary for Bethlehem town board. He is the best candidate for our community.

Support Lenhardt

Editor, The Spotlight:

I support the re-election of George Lenhardt.

Having served with George on the town board and also for 40 years in the town fire service, I am well aware of his dedication to the town of Bethlehem. I feel his knowledge and efforts in support of the new town planning and code changes will be an important factor as we proceed with its implementation.

I ask for the same support you have given George in the past and that you once again support him in his quest for another term.

Milano is multi-talented

Editor, The Spotlight:

My name is Merideth Bastiani. I am a lifelong resident of Bethlehem, a member of the Delmar Fire Department and actively involved in many other community activities.

I am writing to share my experience of having known Frank Milano for the past four years. I first met Frank when he was running for the position of town justice. Among the things that impressed me most was his willingness to stop and truly listen to everyone he met along the campaign trail.

The telltale sign of Milano cookies on countertops and in cupboards throughout town was testimony to his perseverance and good-natured personality.

Since then, I have learned many other fine things about Frank Milano.

As the first deputy secretary of state, Frank oversees the Office of fire prevention and control (OFPC). OFPC provides prevention services to the state through public education, fire safety inspections and safety standards programs.

Frank has always been a strong advocate for enhanced training opportunities for local firefighters throughout our state.

In addition, OFPC provides response training and equipment for weapons of mass destruction to County first response teams. OFPC also provides support and training for one of the two urban search and rescue (USAR) teams in the state. This USAR team, which includes a number of firefighters from Bethlehem was at ground zero for 16 days starting the afternoon of 9/11.

Frank brings additional valuable experience back to our community as he has served on the campus fire safety, weapons of mass destruction, emergency 911, disaster preparedness and emergency services council task forces.

I have heard Frank is an excellent judge. Someone once said to me that Frank is the kind of judge who can deliver justice alongside compassion. I know this is true of Frank as a person, and I have no doubt that he carries that along with his many talents into the courtroom each time he takes the bench. For that and the other reasons I have shared, I strongly urge Bethlehem voters to re-elect Frank Milano to the position of town judge on Nov. 8.

Streaker suspension is unfair for harmless prank

Editor, The Spotlight:

When I first heard that Bethlehem's streaker had been suspended, I wasn't shocked. I wasn't in total dismay that someone would call his acts deplorable, disgusting, rude, crude and finally representative of Bethlehem teenagers as a whole.

I knew it would happen. I knew somehow, some way, someone would find something about it offensive.

But I disagree. I strongly disagree. I feel that Bethlehem's resident streaker should not get suspended, should not be arrested and furthermore, should be a representation of what our town should want its teen-age residents to be.

With the birth of sporting events came the birth of streaking. Besides the original Olympics, people have been running onto sports fields without clothes on as a symbol of pride, a demonstration of love, compassion and great dedication to a sports team. And that too, is what fueled Bethlehem's streaker. Not some strong desire to fight the man, screw the system and show off his body in some sick form of exhibitionism, but true, passionate love for the Bethlehem Eagles. Such pride and passion should not be viewed as evil, punishable or despicable, but rather as a model of what we want school pride to be.

When Kevin Seymour, the Eagles kicker, heard of the streaking, he called it inspiring. He said it's what motivated him to kick the second half field goal.

Imagine if everyone in Bethlehem was so full of all-encompassing love; our town would be a better place. Not some suburban world filled with vandals, but a truly great community with the unique bonding spirit of Eagle pride.

Even if you don't feel that Eagles pride should join our town in unity, think about the pressures on the average high school senior at this time. They're forced to apply to college, tend to their school work and take the SATs the next day.

In addition, there was a massive rainstorm combined with low temperatures, threatening hypothermia. And rather than turn to sex, drugs and alcohol, our streaker turned to streaking, a much more healthy escape than illegal, harmful activities. Our streaker enabled everyone in the crowd to forget the imminent SATs, forget their troubles and see their fellow classmate run across the field in a thong and a carnival mask.

Even the police officers found it funny, laughing with the crowd at the harmless fun on the field.

So why would our school system suspend our streaker? And even more so, why would they threaten legal action? Do they truly hate their students that much? Do they hate lighthearted humor, which does and should be prominent in our high school community? For the good of our town, I hope not.

Yet what legal action can be taken?

Public indecency? Certainly not. His private areas were covered, leaving only two cheeks, a sight one could see on TV that's not even HBO. I always believed indecency to be the exposure of genitalia. But Bethlehem's streaker was not indecent, he was wearing a thong. His indecency was no worse than a giggling baby getting its diaper changed.

I read The Spotlight every week, I read about vandalism I read about curfews, I read "Mom's the Word".

And yet I never read the views of Bethlehem's youth. I never see anyone writing about some injustice done, not by a teenager, but against one.

Bethlehem's streaker should not be in trouble, should not be suspended, should not have legal action taken against him. Half naked streaking is not a crime. It's harmless fun, offensive only to those who are simply too uptight. I beg you, I plead to you, for the sake of our town and community, lighten up.

Student may get seat on V'ville school board

42-page audit comes back positive

By JIM CUOZZO

The Voorheesville school district got a good grade on its finances in a 42-page independent audit that Neil Lamere of Washburn, Ellingwood, Sheeler, Thaisz, and Pinsley conducted.

"My overall impression is that your business office is very professional, very prepared," said Lamere after his firm performed the work now being mandated by the state of New York. "These are tough times; tensions are high, expectations elevated. The state wants more internal controls and risk assessments from school districts."

Board member Thomas McKenna asked Lamere how the district compares with other districts financially.

"I would say slightly above average," Lamere said. "Your fund balance is certainly not excessive by any means but above average and you do have a capacity to generate additional fund balance to put away for a rainy day." Lamere, who conducted the audit himself, noted eight areas that should receive attention. One is in the area of the district's school lunch fund, which has been running a deficit.

"We know this is a deficit situation but how much of a deficit it runs for the district is the issue," said board member C. James Coffin. Sarita Winchell, assistant superintendent and school business officer, said the district has been running a much more nutritious lunch program in its schools and more students are buying school lunches than in the past.

"We need to analyze further the school lunch program," Winchell said. "I will give the board a written response next month on this and all other items in the audit."

Voorheesville's now 44-year-old elementary school will see major renovations over the next few years. The school board hired Integrated Building Systems Engineering Consultants and Dodge, Chamberlin, Luzine, & Weber Architects at a cost not to exceed $18,000. The firms will provide the district with referendum services that include a recommended plan of action and construction costs for upgrades to the school's heating and ventilation system and groundwater and flooding issues around school grounds.

"I thought it was a good proposal. It appeared you had given it some thought and have some solutions," said Coffin, who serves on the board's building and grounds committee.

"We know what the problem is and we believe we have both short- and long-term solution options in our proposal," said Joel Bianchi, a member of the engineering firm.

The board will review the firm's initial cost estimates for the project and discuss the options at future meetings.

The board may increase from seven to eight next May, since Superintendent Linda Langevin has requested that a student government representative from Voorheesville High School be placed on the election ballot as an ex-officio member allowed under a new law signed by Gov. George E. Pataki.

"The students are very excited about this; to be able to voice their opinion on the board of education because the ex-officio member could truly be a voice for the students," said student government representative Kelly McKenna.

"These are the prominent stakeholders affected by our decisions, and I think they deserve a voice," agreed board member Paige McDonald.

Board member David Gibson asked Kelly McKenna and other student government representatives present if they would be willing to take the responsibility that goes with the position, including attending monthly meetings that sometimes last well into the night.

"We realize it is a big responsibility; however, I do believe a student who is chosen to serve on the school board would be willing to come to every single meeting. They know that is a part of the job when they put their name on that ballot," Kelly McKenna said.

If the school board gives the go-ahead for a student government representative on the ballot, voters will ultimately have the final say with a yes-no referendum vote next spring.

Koburger elected to library board

The Bethlehem Public Library welcomes Penelope Koburger to the board as its newest elected member.

Koburger has lived in Delmar for two years. A retired psychologist and former Vermont resident, she helped found and run the South Burlington Family Center and served as a PTO president in Essex Junction.

She offers her expertise as a listener, problem-solver and team player to her tenure on the board.

Koburger believes an important challenge for today's libraries is helping people sort through the overwhelming amount of information in the world — much of it now online.

"We have an explosion of materials out there. People need help finding out where the best, most reliable information is and how to get it. Libraries are in a prime position to help their patrons become comfortable with rapid changes in information technology," said Koburger.

As the information universe is expanding at light speed, librarians are constantly challenged to decide what to purchase, what to keep, what to update, what to offer in print and what to offer via the Internet.

"Our library has an excellent selection of fiction, reference books and magazines. The information desk staff is knowledgeable and helpful in finding materials or navigating the reference system, whether on the shelves or online," said Koburger.

Technology aside, Koburger believes that "a library best serves its community by encouraging young readers to love literature."

Despite the gathering speed and efficiency of the Information Age, a library should remain a place for young and old to browse, discover, and feel welcome.

"Our library is a hub of information and culture in Bethlehem. Helping to maintain and build this vital institution is a role I'm looking forward to," said Koburger.

'Tree-trimming' kickoff planned

After a tremendous response to the "mitten tree" last year, we are hoping this year to be even better.

We'd like to overload the tree with mittens, scarves, and hats for the children at the Philip J. Schuyler Achievement Academy, an elementary school in the Albany City School District. Their needs are great.

To kick off the "tree trimming," all ages are invited to a project day with members of the Voorheesville Public Library's Nimblefingers, Saturday, Nov. 5, from 1 to 3 p.m. The library will supply polar fleece and instructions on how to create simple mittens, headwear and scarves from this fuzzy, easy-to-use material.

Young people who want to learn to knit, sew, or start an easy quilt are also invited and will receive individual instruction. Kids, parents and grandparents are all welcome.

Young children must be accompanied by an adult.

Things to bring: pins, sharp scissors, and large-eyed embroidery needles to work with polar fleece; miscellaneous trims, beads, yarn, ribbon and buttons for trimming headbands or mittens; knitting needles and yarn if you want to learn to knit.

Voorheesville Public Library

Donations of cold weather accessories to hang on the tree are being accepted anytime before Dec. 16.

Lapsit

Stories, music and fun are on the agenda for Thursday, Nov. 3, at 10:15 a.m. for children younger than 2 years of age with their caregivers. Sign up is requested for this special story hour for the youngest members of the library community.

Top Dollar Suggestions

The better your home looks while it's on the market, the more likely it is to sell quickly, and for top dollar. When you have a listing appointment with a real estate professional, the agent will provide a detailed market analysis along with the advantages of listing with his or her company. He or she will then go through your home with you and make suggestions that will help to present your home at its best.

These recommendations can make some sellers uncomfortable because they are reminders of the "little" projects they have postponed. Most sellers need suggestions about modifications that will make their home show well, and providing this kind of feedback is an important part of a real estate agent's job. The ideas given to the seller aren't necessarily a reflection of the agent's personal preferences, or a criticism of the homeowner's taste! The proposed improvements are based on the real estate professional's hands-on experience with what homebuyers really want.

For professional advice on all aspects of buying and selling real estate, call me at Coldwell Banker Prime Properties, 518-640-4444 or e-mail me at abbey@cbpp.com.

How do you spell relief? Homemade cookies

By JIM CUOZZO

When Delmar resident Kathleen Barada and her mother Melissa watched news reports of Hurricane Katrina's devastation, each knew they had to help. The result was "Cookies for Crisis," an idea that 12-year-old Kathleen came up with just two days after the hurricane hit New Orleans.

"I went on our computer and made up several hundred fliers and then went door to door to distribute them," said Kathleen. The fliers let people in her neighborhood know she was baking cookies to try to raise money for the victims of Katrina.

"I baked sugar cookies, chocolate chip cookies, peanut butter cookies, peanut butter with M&M cookies, and oatmeal cookies, all at $3 a dozen," said Kathleen.

After five weeks of baking and going to 34 houses in the neighborhood to drop off orders, Kathleen raised $200 for the victims of Hurricane Katrina.

"One of my neighbors bought 10 batches of cookies and gave me $50," said Kathleen. "I got one order from some boys on bikes who saw me in the neighborhood with the cookies."

Once Kathleen raised the money, she deliberated about how best to donate the proceeds to the hurricane victims. She and her mother got in touch with neighbor and close family friend Beth McCarthy, who was also working to raise money for the people of New Orleans, in particular with her confirmation class at St. Thomas the Apostle School in Delmar.

"The confirmation class of 14 students was working on a project to put together toiletry bags to deliver to the victims of Hurricane Katrina," McCarthy said. "The project meant a lot of work and close to $1,000 we had to raise."

Kathleen's brother, 10th grader Andrew, is a student in McCarthy's confirmation class. That helped Kathleen realize how she could help.

"I offered to give the money I raised to my brother's class only if I could help," said Kathleen.

So off they went, Kathleen, Andrew, their third grade sister Mary

Grace, Melissa Barada, Beth McCarthy and the rest of the students in McCarthy's confirmation class, including Meg McCarthy. They put toothbrushes and toothpaste, soap, deodorant, brushes, shaving cream and other items in the relief supply bags. Overall, 150 toiletry supplies were made and then delivered to the Family Life Ministry office in Houston.

"She raised a lot of money on her own through hard work and her own initiative," McCarthy said of Kathleen Barada's efforts. "My students needed a push to get there. Kathleen found that push in her heart. Her hard work really made our effort a success."

Chris Rubio, director of Family Life Ministry in Houston, said that the relief supplies made it safely to his headquarters.

"We have been receiving supplies for the last month," Rubio said. "People are looking for ways to help and Kathleen's story and many others along with it remind us that people are good. A lot of people are still unable to go back to their homes. Fifty-five thousand people are still living in hotels and motels. It's been overwhelming. The relief effort is going to take a long time."

"It makes me feel really good that I was able to help," said Kathleen, although she admitted that the cookie baking got tiring after a while.

"I don't want to make cookies for a while," she said.

Winter cold relief.

Simple steps to help manage your heating bills.

Prices for natural gas and other fuels like oil and propane have increased dramatically. As a result, across the United States home heating costs are expected to be much higher this winter than last year. The United States Department of Energy anticipates that nationally, homes could see a 35-45% increase in their total winter heating bills compared with last winter's bills.

Understanding your natural gas bill

Your gas bill has two main parts: Supply (the cost of the gas itself) and Delivery (the cost of delivering the gas throughout your utility's system). On average, supply costs make up about 60-75% of your bill, depending on your utility.

The supply price of gas is set by national and international markets and is not controlled by utilities or the NYS Public Service Commission. The delivery price is set by the Commission.

About 98% of the natural gas we use in New York comes from the Gulf of Mexico and Canada. The Commission works hard to keep delivery prices as low as possible and help you deal with changes in the market.

Factors affecting the price of natural gas

The price for natural gas (not including delivery) is expected to be considerably higher than last winter. The price varies based on many factors including weather, demand, the amount and cost of natural gas in storage, and exploration and drilling.

• Supply and Demand — Natural gas suppliers serving New York State are entering the heating season with higher than average inventories. However, the gas going into storage has been more costly this year, and the higher price is passed on to consumers. Production losses due to Hurricane Katrina have also tightened the gas market.

Meanwhile, demand continues to grow as more people use natural gas for their energy needs, and more factories and power generation facilities use gas because it produces fewer emissions than other fossil fuels.

• Weather — Weather plays a significant role in determining the cost of natural gas. Colder weather means an increase in the amount of natural gas used by the average household. However, it is impossible to know what this winter's temperatures or natural gas prices will be over time.

Controlling your heating costs

Your heating costs are made up of the cost of your fuel and the amount you use. No matter where prices go or what the heating season is like, you can take basic steps to lower your costs.

What you should do

Have an energy smart winter

- Make sure the attic, walls and foundation in your house are well-insulated.
- Seal gaps around doors, windows and foundations.
- Have your furnace or boiler inspected and insulate your hot water heater and pipes.
- Set thermostats back — for every one degree you lower your thermostat, you could save 3% or more on your heating costs. Consider installing a programmable thermostat; it will make saving even easier.

Consider bill payment options and financial assistance programs

- Budget Plans provide equal monthly payments based on past energy usage.
- Deferred Payment Agreements may be available if you have fallen behind on your bill and cannot pay in full. You may qualify to pay the past due amount over time.
- Financial assistance and energy efficiency programs can also help you with your heating costs
- NYS Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP)
- NYSEDA's Assisted Home Performance with ENERGY STAR® Program

• NYSEDA's EmPower New York Program

- Utility-sponsored assistance programs
- Community-based energy services programs

Use your power to choose

- You can buy electricity and natural gas from companies other than your utility. These Energy Service Companies (ESCOs) are competing to sell you your energy supply. This means new products and services, and better value for your dollar.
- For a list of energy suppliers, and a comparison chart, visit www.AskPSC.com and click on the "Power To Choose" link or call 1-888-Ask-PSC1.
- Your utility will still deliver your energy safely and reliably, and will respond to emergencies.

The New York State Energy Research and Development Authority's (NYSEDA) Home Performance with ENERGY STAR® program can save you money by making your home more energy efficient.

For a change, a welcome 'Unwelcome Guest'

By W.K. Aaron

Of late, our country has been inundated with unwelcome guests of the nasty variety...Katrina, Rita and more recently, Wilma. The Capital District is fortunate to have a more pleasant unwelcome guest in Agatha Christie's "The Unwelcome Guest" settling into its most recent incarnation at the New York State Theater Institute through Thursday, Nov. 3. NYSTI inaugurated its 30th season with the 13th production of the 11th Christie title to be performed by the group. The popularity of the show is apparent, since this is the third production in the Capital District just this season.

Christie's mysteries are famous, and this one begins on a densely foggy night at a large country house in Wales. A man has accidentally driven off the road in the fog and comes to a house for assistance. Upon entering, he discovers a man in a wheelchair, shot to death. Standing nearby is the victim's wife holding a revolver. An open-and-shut case? Not with Agatha Christie. In this show, about the only person not under suspicion is the police detective... an interesting twist actually, for Christie fans.

This is the first time that NYSTI has presented "Unwelcome Guest," according to Ed. Lange, NYSTI associate artistic director. "Guest" is one of Dame Agatha's later plays.

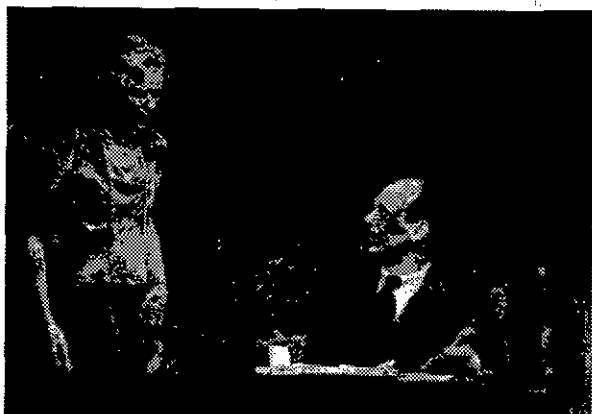

"It's much more modern, more fun and has more stylish people," Lange said. "The characters are more identifiable and there is a bit more humor in the show."

For this production, NYSTI's Artistic Director Patricia Di Benedetto Snyder has moved the setting to the 1920s, just after World War I, and before the Great Depression. This gives the play a different feel and look. Set Designer Richard Finkelstein has returned to NYSTI along with two-time Emmy award-winning costume designer, Robert Anton, to give this production a fresh and exciting ambience.

NYSTI is well known for the educational component it brings to classrooms throughout the area via the theater. Educating is key; the theater affords students the opportunity to learn while enjoying themselves, said Lange. This production of "Guest" will expose students to Wales, a place not explored too often in depth in U.S. classrooms; the milieu of the Roaring '20s and as with all

Mary Jane Hansen as Laura Warwick and David Bunce as the unexpected guest, Michael Starkwedder, in NYSTI's presentation of The Unwelcome Guest.

Clenching & Grinding

There are many reasons behind the habit of clenching and grinding, some of which we do not know. Studies have shown that you actually apply 60-80lbs of force when you are awake and while sleeping it can be as much as 1,000 lbs of force applied tooth to tooth in occlusion (when upper and lower teeth contact each other).

The pressure applied to your teeth can cause sore jaws, headache, sensitivity, loosening teeth or breakage of teeth and sleep disturbances. However, most people don't even realize they are "bruxing" in their sleep.

Nightguards are custom made to fit the individual. By working closely with your dentist, they can monitor the fit and help relieve the symptoms most often associated with bruxing. Do not ignore headaches, sore jaws or neck pain, visit your dentist and they may be able to provide relief.

Voorheesville students keep things in check

By JIM CUOZZO

When you think of after-school activities, you may think of kids riding bikes, playing football or soccer, jumping in leaves, or picking apples. An indoor activity may consist of video games or listening to music. But would you believe kids playing chess?

Chess is the choice of more than 100 children currently part of a group of Voorheesville Elementary students in kindergarten through grade five called Checkmates. Joe Maloney and Kay Peavey are parents who coordinated the Checkmates Chess Club at the school.

"My son and I started to play a few years ago after he received a chess set for the holidays," said Maloney. "Then he and his friends began to play, and then my wife and I decided to try and start the club."

The first Checkmates Club began with 24 students and has expanded to three rooms of beginner, intermediate and advanced players. The kids are quick learners, Maloney said.

"We started with basic skills; how to set up pieces and moving pawn against pawn," he said. "Then we advanced to the whole board set-up and concepts of checkmate and stalemate. The kids are quick learners."

Checkmates has been in existence since the spring of 2004 and has quadrupled in size. Over 15 percent of the school's students participate.

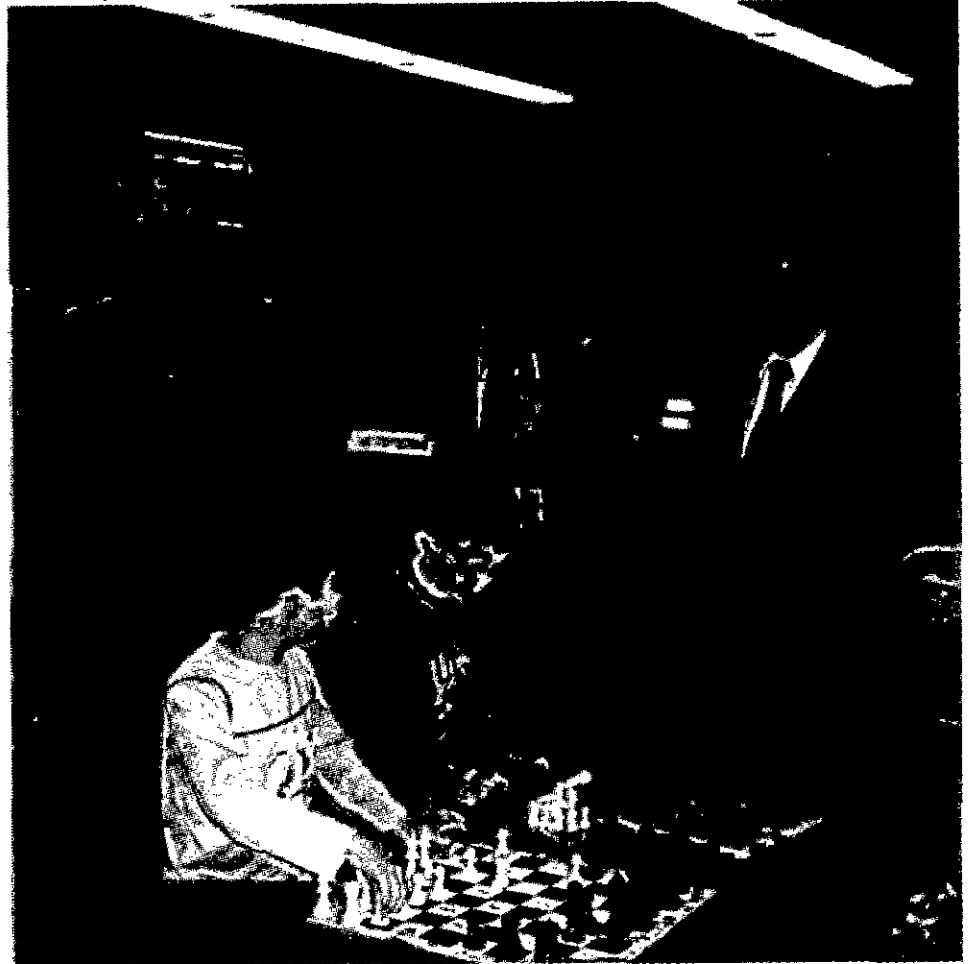

The Voorheesville Community and School Foundation gave the Checkmates a grant of $1,000.

"It's great to see these kids so enthused about chess. They're excited about this game and educationally it's a great opportunity to help build critical thinking skills," said Thomas McKenna, president of the foundation. The money will go to purchase new scholastic triple-class of Checkmates with a few tips students remember from last year.

"Remember bottom right always white," Morrison said.

Parents like Stu Morrison and Renee Van Kuren serve as club volunteers and monitors.

"My son James, who is in the fourth grade, has been playing for a couple of years and he likes it," Van Kuren said.

Morrison's son Braeden is a third grader who has been playing for three years. Morrison begins the first fall advanced

"What do you do before and after every game?" he asked, and the students replied, "shake hands."

"Then play ball," shouted Morrison.

"It's play chess, not play ball," one of the students called back.

The Checkmates Chess Club is already a member of the U.S. Chess Federation and Maloney's goal is to have the students

Honesty in images is goal of new art gallery

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

The town of Bethlehem has become a gathering place for photographers, according to Mark Kelly, owner of the new photographic art gallery Exposed in Main Square. The gallery has only been open for two months, but already Kelly is realizing his vision of an artistic venue to help give voice for both photographic art and the artists themselves.

"It's a home," he said.

Photography has always been acknowledged as an art form, Kelly said, but there are no exclusive photographic galleries — until now. Most of the 24 photographic images, which are part of Leif Zurmyuhlen's show, which opened Saturday, are from local photographers.

This month's exhibit, Nudes, opened with hundreds of people attending. Although the gallery is new, Kelly is not new to the area. He has sustained a marketing and management business in Main Square for 15 years, in which he came across many gifted photographers who have done commercial photography which Kelly found inspiring.

"I've been in advertising for 30 years, and I've worked not only with some great talent, but with great people," he said. "The idea behind this gallery is to reach out to all the people I've worked with over the years. They are all artists apart from their commercial work."

Kelly's enthusiasm was clear as he explained the history behind each photograph. His vision, he said, is to expand the net wider, and to fund more growth for the art.

"There are so many perspectives," he said. "You can really illuminate and educate people."

Kelly said many have asked him what the criteria are for having photographic work shown in his gallery. The answer is simple: honesty. "You can take a beautiful picture of a lake, or you can take a horrifying picture of children in a war-torn country. As long as there is honesty in the work, it can be valuable and it can be beautiful," he said.

Another part of Kelly's vision for the gallery is to help people. Every quarter, the gallery donates money sold from photographs to a different cause; this time it's to the Alzheimer's Fund of Northeastern New York, which has personal meaning for Kelly, as his mother is suffering from the disease. Kelly has on display some photographs of people with Alzheimer's — an example of real life's harsh beauty.

Soon, Kelly will be involved with the Phoenix Society, which helps burn survivors. It is another cause personal to him, since he is a burn survivor. A friend, Steve Lobel, is getting involved by helping with a book and a documentary film about burn survivors, and Kelly said it will be challenging. "That exhibit will show horrific moments, but those spirits have risen, like the spirit of the phoenix," he said. "There is beauty in truth. The camera lens is a vessel for that."

Some of the upcoming exhibits will show challenging images, but he believes that art should sometimes be challenging.

Similar to that philosophy is the name of the gallery. Exposed means to show the world a creation. It means to communicate. Kelly said the photographs which get sold communicate to the buyer, and then that photograph goes to another home, where it communicates in another environment, to other people.

Kelly is most satisfied when a photographer shows him a piece of work and says, "This is my favorite work and it means so much to me."

"It's a great feeling," said Kelly.

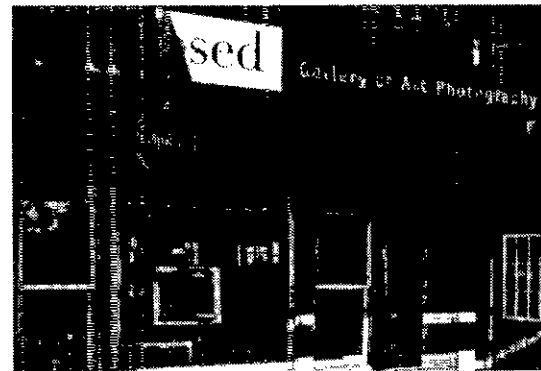

Kelly's personal philosophy is captured best, he said, by the sign on the door of the gallery: "Life — one frame at a time."

Exposed is located in Main Square Shops at 318 Delaware

Ave. in Delmar.

The gallery is open Thursday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturdays 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays, noon to 4 p.m. For information, call 475-1853 or visit the Web site,

Entertainment in the Spotlight

by MARTY BANNAN

There is no dilemma so daunting yet sweet as choosing what food to sample at Albany's annual Festival of Nations. Perhaps the best thing to do is try a few things, make a mental note of the rest and come back each year for more.

The festival is now in its 34th year and brings the best of food, entertainment and crafts to the Empire State Plaza Convention Center. This year the event will take place Sunday, Oct. 30, from noon to 5 p.m.

"We are proud and flattered that thousands of people make our event an annual part of their schedules," said Manoj Ajmera, chairman of the event for the past 20 years. "We've seen many familiar faces through the years, and each and every festival brings more new friends. As always, families will be entertained by the music and dance on stage, and will be able to sample the cuisines and arts and crafts of about 24 different countries."

Since 1972, the festival has showcased representatives from countries in Latin America, the Caribbean, western and eastern Europe, the Middle East, East Asia and South Asia, in an effort to help the general public appreciate the many diverse cultures that make the Capital District home.

Festivities kick off with the parade of nations at noon, in which members of each nation represented march into the convention center dressed in traditional costumes. From then on, it's music and dance from around the world.

"It's great for families to experience so many cultures under one roof," said Maria Ginter, treasurer of the event. "Children especially like seeing the different styles of dress from all over the world."

There will be Irish step dancing, Middle Eastern belly dancing, South American tangos and Hungarian czardas, as well as folk dancing from Greece, Lithuania, Poland and Africa.

This year's dance ensembles include the Chinese Community Center Youth Dance Group; Ritmos Colombianos; St. Adalbert's Polkabration Dancers; Eva's Tulip Dancers; the Zorepad Ukrainian Dance Ensemble; the Unity Dancers of Liberia; St. Basil's Youth Dance Group; the Boland School of Irish Dance; the Borinquen Puerto Rican folk group and many more.

While you may choose from a number of routes to get to the festival, the best way to arrive is hungry.

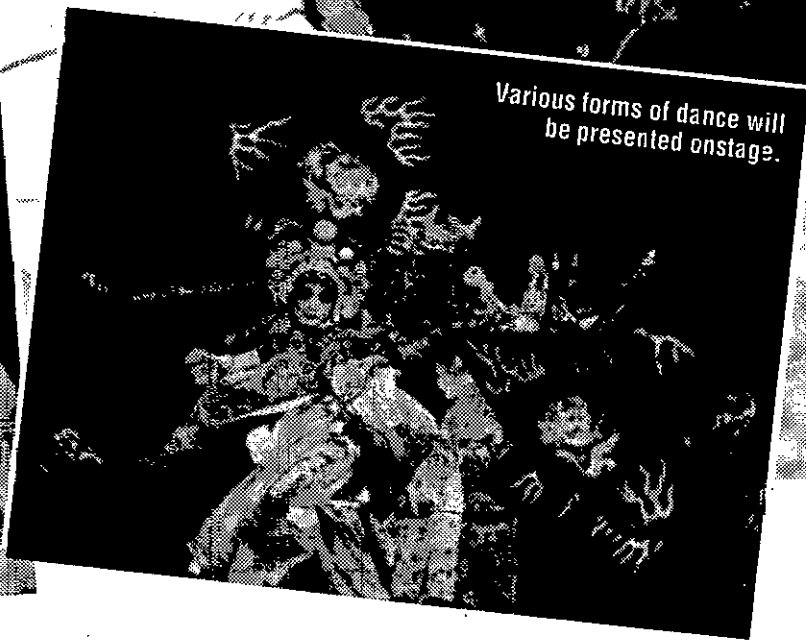

Aromas from all corners of the world fill the center as each country

A day filled with the food and culture of 24 different countries is topped off with the crowning of the 2005 Miss Festival of Nations.

Members of the Hungarian dance troupe are regular participants.

Various forms of dance will be presented onstage.

International Delights

Albany's 34th annual Festival of Nations serves up a world of food, music & culture will tantalize the public with international favorites like gyros, Italian sausage, Hungarian goulash, numerous pastries and a few exotic treats you may never have heard of.

After feasting, don't forget to stay for the big event, the crowning of the 2005 Miss Festival of Nations.

This year, 19 young women, ages 14 through 18, each representing a different country, will compete for the crown.

Finalist judging, Ajmera said, takes place prior to the festival, but isn't announced until the day of the event. The finalists then take turns answering questions given by a panel of judges, after which a winner is chosen. Last year's winner was Leticia Mahserjian, representing Brazil.

"Judging is decided based on the contestant's poise, expression, costume and involvement in the community," he said, emphasizing, "This is not a beauty contest." The crowning takes place at 3 p.m.

"For more than three decades, we have brought the world to the Capital Region," Ajmera said. "I am happy to say that as our region's diversity continues to grow, we will continue to reflect what the area's ethnic communities have to offer."

Ticket prices are $4 for adults, and $1 for children ages 3 to 12. For information, call 371-3737.

Shaffer, Eagles rested for Suburban Council meet

By ROB JONAS

The Bethlehem girls cross country team won last Friday's Albany County Meet, but its boys team did not run.

The Eagles were resting for a more important competition — Saturday's Suburban Council Championships at Saratoga Spa State Park.

"We took the day off to rest up the kids for the upcoming (league and Section II) meets," said Bethlehem coach Dave Banas.

Banas said he is hoping the rest will help Matt Shaffer in his quest for an individual league title. The senior is going up against some stiff competition including Guilderland's Brian Rhodes-Devey, Shenendehowa's Dan McManamon and Saratoga's Steve Murdock.

"It wouldn't surprise me to see all four guys finish under 15 minutes," Banas said. "If they run together and they all have a good day, there will be at least one guy under 15, and it wouldn't surprise me if all four were under 15."

Shaffer has come the longest way out of the four contenders. He had shown promise as a sophomore and as a junior, but he had not been able to beat Rhodes-Devey or McManamon in an invitational until last month's Queensbury Invitational.

"He did a lot of good prep work over the summer," Banas said of Shaffer. "He didn't do too much and did all the right things. So, he came into the season well prepared."

This will be the first time Shaffer has run against Rhodes-Devey, McManamon and Murdock in the same race, but it won't be his last chance. All four are likely to contend for the class AA individual title at next weekend's Section II meet at Queensbury High School.

"Whoever wins Suburbans individually will have a mental edge at Sectionals," Banas said.

Bethlehem's team goals are more modest than Shaffer's individual goal: The Eagles will have one of the younger teams at the league meet, and Banas said they're looking to stay in the top half of the 12-team field.

"Realistically, we're looking at a top six or a top five finish. I'll be happy with that," he said.

in the rain, you have to have a good snap and a good hold, and you have to kick a wet ball."

Miller's leg was warmed up well for the field goal attempt. He played for Voorheesville's boys soccer team earlier in the day before donning his football uniform at halftime of the Sectional quarterfinal.

"He's been a key to several of our games this year," Sapienza said of Miller.

Granville built a 22-6 lead before Voorheesville made its comeback. First, Andy Catellier threw a 10-yard touchdown pass to Nick Duncan late in the second quarter — their second scoring connection of the game — and added a two-point conversion pass to Tim Robinson to pull the Blackbirds within eight points.

to lead the Lady Eagles to the county meet title last Friday.

Peck completed the Colonie Town Park course in a time of 18:37, six seconds behind champion Rachel Ohm from Holy Names. Kenney followed with a third-place time of 18:45.

Shannon McCartney added a ninth-place finish for the Lady Eagles. McCartney completed the course in a time of 19:19.

Bethlehem finished with 50 points, 16 ahead of Shaker and Academy of Holy Names.

Saturday's Suburban Council meet starts at 1 p.m. at Saratoga Spa State Park.

Then Catellier scored on a 5-yard run in the third quarter, but his conversion pass attempt fell short, which left Voorheesville with a 22-20 deficit.

All the while, Voorheesville's defense shut the door on a Granville offense that started the game with three scoring drives.

"We didn't talk about any adjustments (at halftime)," Sapienza said. "We just talked about coming out in the first half not ready to play. We talked about what we had to do physically and emotionally to come out ready to play in the second half."

Catellier threw for 178 yards to lead the Blackbirds, who host defending Sectional champion Schuylerville in Saturday's semifinal game.

"For us, I like the match-up better than Granville because they're more comparable to teams in our division," Sapienza said of Schuylerville, which finished second to Hoosick Falls in the class C North Division. "We match up better with speed teams than power teams."

Indians advance in class B

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk football team is back in the class B semifinals following a 35-7 quarterfinal victory over Broadalbin-Perth last Friday.

The Indians (8-0) host Cobleskill-Richmondville in Friday's semifinal contest, and coach Gary VanDerzee will have seniors Tim Jordan and Ryan Cross at his disposal again. Jordan and Cross served a 30-day suspension for violating team rules.

"They haven't not been part of the team. They've been on the team all along. They just haven't been able to play," VanDerzee said.

How much playing time Jordan and Cross receive remains to be seen. Their replacements, Justin Bullis and Pat Filkins, have played well in keeping Ravena's record spotless.

"We'll put the best 11 players out on the field," VanDerzee said.

Bullis led Ravena's offense with touchdown passes of 64 yards (to Dillon Ruxton) and 35 yards (to Colin King) and added a scoring run. Filkins scored on an 18-yard run, and Keith Geraldson added a 45-yard punt return for a touchdown for the Indians.

VanDerzee said he expects a stiff challenge from Cobleskill in Friday's semifinal game.

"They're a very talented team. They're big, strong, fast and hostile," he said. "We've got to stop their running game, and we have to contain their quarterback."

school championship meet last year. They ran the event at a horse racing course outside Portland, Ore., and had video scoreboards to show up-close shots of the runners as they navigated the man-made obstacles (horse racing tracks are invariably flat, while cross country courses have at least some hills).

Unless Section II comes into a lot of money or someone donates all the necessary equipment, video scoreboards aren't going to be used at any cross country races around here anytime soon. But that doesn't mean that the sport should be ignored by casual sports fans. If you're willing to put up with missing several minutes of action to see who crosses the finish line first, you should be richly rewarded over the next couple of weeks.

COMMUNITY SPORTS NEWS Blackbirds roll past Tigers

The Voorheesville boys soccer team needed a win against Cobleskill-Richmondville Monday to win the Colonial Council title outright.

The Blackbirds closed in on title Schalmon with a 5-0 victory over Cohoes last Saturday in Voorheesville.

Greg Klopfer recorded a hat trick to lead the Blackbirds. Dom Venditti and Gerret Simpson also scored goals.

Voorheesville began the weekend with a 5-1 victory over Lansingburgh. Klopfer put the Blackbirds on the scoreboard with a first-half goal and then was part of a four-goal burst with Kevin Vanderwende and Joey Klembcheck in the second half that put the game away.

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk split its two weekend games. The Indians lost to Cobleskill 2-1 last Friday, but they bounced back to shut out Broadalbin-Perth 3-0 last Saturday.

Bobby Hummel scored a goal in each of the two games, and Tom Mauro tallied twice against Broadalbin-Perth to lead the Indians.

BC, BH-BL play to 1-1 tie

The Bethlehem girls soccer team wrapped up the regular season last Friday with a 1-1 tie against Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake in a Suburban Council Blue Division game.

Laura Boucher had the Lady Eagles' lone goal, while Christina Boni tallied for the Lady Spartans off a pass from Heather Hahn. Both goals came in the second half.

Bethlehem finished second to defending Sectional champion Shenendehowa in the Blue Division standings, but will likely have the No. 2 seed when the class AA playoffs begin later this week.

Eagles secure league title

The Bethlehem boys soccer team wrapped up the Suburban Council Blue Division title and the No. 1 seed for the Section II Class AA playoffs with last Saturday's 1-0 victory over Shaker.

Ross Stanton scored off Kevin Cassidy's corner kick in the second half to give the Eagles the lead. Kyle Dunlavey stopped eight shots.

Second time isn't the charm for BC

LaSalle beats Eagles in class AA quarterfinals again

By ROB JONAS

Lightning struck twice when Bethlehem football team visited LaSalle. It didn't strike as hard as the first time, but it still knocked the Eagles out of the Section II, Class AA playoffs.

Bill Charron ran for two touchdowns, and LaSalle's defense did the rest to defeat Bethlehem 19-0 in last Friday's quarterfinal game in Troy.

It was the second consecutive year that the Cadets dismissed the Eagles in the Sectional quarterfinals. LaSalle downed Bethlehem 42-14 last year behind a 279-yard rushing performance from Dave McCarty, who graduated.

"Their (running) backs ran hard," said Bethlehem coach Ron Smith of this year's game. "We underestimated their team speed. We scouted them against Albany (one week earlier), and Albany is a fast team too. So, it was a bit deceptive" to judge LaSalle's speed.

LaSalle (6-2) was content to keep the ball on the ground against Bethlehem, and the strategy worked. The Cadets had more than twice the number of offensive plays that the Eagles (5-3) had, primarily because Bethlehem couldn't stop Charron, who finished with 109 yards.

"They did a really good job of controlling the game and not making any mistakes," Smith said.

With limited opportunities to touch the ball, Bethlehem couldn't do much against LaSalle's defense. Brian Nicholson rushed for less than 70 yards, and quarterback David Plummer threw two interceptions.

"On four drives, we dropped three passes that would have been first down," Smith said. "That was a major thing for us."

Bethlehem closes its season Friday by hosting Albany in a crossover game. The Falcons (4-4) enter the game on a three-game winning streak including victories over LaSalle and Troy.

"They probably underachieved a bit, but they've got some good players," Smith said.

Miller's kick helps 'Birds fend off Horde

The Voorheesville football team advanced to the Sectional semifinals in dramatic fashion by edging Granville 23-22 in last Saturday's quarterfinal game.

Matt Miller kicked a 28-yard field goal midway through the fourth quarter to give the Blackbirds (6-2) their first lead. The Golden Horde had a chance to win the game, but their last-second field goal fell short.

"Mostly, I was relieved (when Miller hit the field goal) because the way we played the first half, things didn't look good for us," said Voorheesville coach Joe Sapienza. "And when you're kicking under that much pressure

Best x-c meets happen before states

By ROB JONAS

Cross country running isn't exactly the world's best spectator sport, but if you're not at either Saturday's Suburban Council Championships in Saratoga Springs or next Friday's Section II meet in Queensbury, you're going to be missing out on something special.

There simply isn't a more competitive cross country race at the high school varsity level in the state than when the 12 Suburban Council teams are clashing for the league and section titles.

It could even be argued that there isn't a more competitive cross country race in the United States.

Oh sure, the Saratoga girls cross country team will win both the league and the section's class AA championships. Anything less would be a shock for the nation's No. 1 ranked squad. But that doesn't make the league meet and Sectionals any less fun to watch.

The battle for being No. 2 is important to teams such as Bethlehem, Shenendehowa and Shaker because finishing second — especially at Sectionals — can earn them an invitation to the prestigious Federation meet in late November. And those invites are coveted because the Federation meet is often the only place where a team like Bethlehem or Shen can prove it's one of the best in the state (only Sectional champions are allowed to run in the state meet).

You can also appreciate the work of Saratoga coaches Art and Linda Kranick for creating a group of elite runners who put the team ahead of individual accomplishments but still are strong enough to all place in the top 10. Seeing all those blue-and-white jerseys come toward the finish line in a row is impressive, even if you disagree with the Kranicks' coaching methods.

The real excitement, though, will be in the boys division of both the league meet and Sectionals. The battles between Guilderland's Brian Rhodes-Devey, Shen's Dan McManamon, Saratoga's Steve Murdock and Bethlehem's Matt Shaffer may prove to be epic, especially if the courses are dry. What will win out — the start-fast-and-stay-fast method Rhodes-Devey and Murdock employ, or the start-slow-and-finish-strong method McManamon and Shaffer use?

No matter which method wins out, one thing is for certain — their times are going to be fast.

"It wouldn't surprise me to see all four guys finish under 15 minutes (at the Suburban Council meet)," said Bethlehem boys coach Dave Banas. "If they run together and they all have a good day, there will be at least one guy under 15, and it wouldn't surprise me if all four finished under 15."

The only problem is being able to see these fantastic runners as they glide through the course. Saratoga Spa State Park is more fan friendly than Queensbury's course (which will also be used for the state meet Nov. 12), but you still have to be agile to get to the various spots on the 5-kilometer course where you can get a good view of what's going on. And in the interim, you might miss a key moment.

In that regard, there is little that anybody can do to rectify the situation. Nike tried to make the sport more viewer friendly when they created a national high well as math. We've seen lots more flexibility in how teachers use it. Kids have the opportunity for self-selected activities. And young children take so much time to do the basic things like take off their coat."

The Regents' policy statement doesn't clearly define the term "full-day," and Rasowsky said it should.

"There is really a need for defining the terms," she said. "We have no real clear definition of what is a full day and what is a half day."

She noted that some districts consider a four- or five-hour day to be full-day while others end their school day at 2 p.m. Gallagher said 586 of the approximate 700 school districts in New York currently offer a full-day program.

Ready to learn

Gallagher and Rasowsky noted changing demographics — such as the fact that over 60 percent of children nationally are in full-time day care before entering kindergarten — as one reason for the push toward full-day kindergarten mandates.

Many of the arguments for half-day programming, such as a child's adjustment to the social situation and stress of transition, have not been supported by research, Rasowsky said. Similarly, there hasn't necessarily been a connection between full-day programming and improvement in social skills or the ability to focus on tasks and make friends.

"The most important caveat is that quality doesn't equate with quantity," Rasowsky said. "Just because they go more often does not mean it will be better. There needs to be a strong alignment of curriculum at the pre-kindergarten level and the kindergarten level."

Other components of the Regents draft policy address that issue and call for districts to provide an expansion of outreach programs between birth and age 2; availability in all districts for prekindergarten programming for 3- and 4-year-olds; improved pre-kindergarten through grade three programming to include assessment protocols; integrated settings for youngsters with mild to severe disabilities; and increased family involvement through grade three as well as expanded collaborative efforts among the various agencies and organizations which affect children between birth and age 8.

New York State United Teachers (NYSUT) strongly supports the continuum of curriculum between pre-kindergarten through elementary school. NYSUT is the union that represents about 95 percent of the state's teachers and has expressed its general support for the Regents' plan.

"Pre-kindergarten programs are successful in preparing kids to enter kindergarten ready to learn," said NYSUT spokesman Carl Korn. "That is sustained through the elementary years and the draft calls for an expansion of that. We want a clear continuum."

Costs

Korn said NYSUT is following the policy discussion closely and has been involved with the discussions. While adoption of the policy in some form seems imminent, a major issue will be funding.

"The goals in this plan are lofty," Korn said. "Everyone agrees that early education is beneficial. This can only be achieved with adequate funding. If it is an unfunded mandate it is doomed to fail."

Gallagher acknowledged "Many pieces of the policy will need legislation changes. It is a progressive kind of process."

She said the Board of Regents had been holding a series of public forums and discussions related to the policy. The comments and feedback that have been provided through those forums or by direct contact with the state BOE will be compiled in November and presented to the board for review.

Gallagher said the Regents could adopt the policy as early as December, and after that an action plan would be developed to determine how best to implement the new policy.

The action plan would evaluate funding needs; whether to change existing legislation or develop new legislation; and how to work with school districts to evaluate their needs. Gallagher said it would be unlikely the policy would be implemented immediately, but could take three to four years in staggered phases.

Districts already offering full-day programs may be ahead of the curve in that they have already addressed or are used to addressing concerns about facilities, classroom space, locations of schools, and having an adequate number of certified, qualified teachers.

Regardless of whether districts offer half-day or full-day kindergarten, all districts will be required to work toward the continuum of curriculum particularly between pre-kindergarten and grade five, said Gallagher. She said the Board of Regents intends to bring in national experts to facilitate a better alignment between the standards, curriculum and assessments currently in place.

"This is an issue whose time has come on a national scale," said Rasowsky.

tions of extended academic intervention service for students who need additional readiness skills.

The district currently has no immediate plans for full-day kindergarten.

"It's very busy and full, as standards and expectations increase," said McIver of the kindergarten sessions. "There's more to be accomplished during that half day."

Costs are an important factor in the debate about full-day kindergarten, since in Mohonasen, it would require twice as many rooms and would add significantly to the budget. For now, the district is staying as is — it has not decided against full-day kindergarten, but it is not predicted for the near future.

In the Shenendehowa school district, space issues keep full-day kindergarten off the table.

"The board has discussed it many times but can't do it because of space constraints," said Kelly DeFeciani, public spokesperson for the district.

The school has somewhere near 700 kindergarten students who attend half-day classes. The district has an extended day program for students who need extra help.

In the Bethlehem Central School District, full-day kinder-additional space in the elementary schools. With the kindergarten students in a separate wing, more space was allowed for the other grades, and the kindergarten program could be stronger.

"Because all of the kindergartners are there, it enables us to run a variety of programs for those who need full day," said Loomis. "To group the kindergartners together makes for a stronger kindergarten program."

As a result of a $93 million bond issue passed in 2003, the district has the funds to build an additional elementary school. It briefly considered building another all-day kindergarten facility.

"We need more space across all the elementary schools because of growing enrollment," said Loomis.

Like other districts, students who require extra assistance attend full-day kindergarten in Bethlehem. Fifty students of the district's 300 kindergarten students are full-day students.

garten isn't even a consideration.

"It is not a direction that this district is considering," said Les Loomis, the district superintendent.

Bethlehem is unique because all of its kindergartners attend the early learning center, a separate facility attached to Slingerlands Elementary School. The district's five grade schools are for students in grades one through five.

Goals

Preserving natural resources will be accomplished by enforcing zoning ordinances related to stream setbacks, drainage and other environmental concerns, and the town would also encourage developers to use existing buildings for proposed projects and assist them in finding previously developed space rather than developing open space.

Reliable water at affordable prices and quality services are also goals, as well as possibly utilizing crime analysis models to assess areas of crime growth.

Also running for supervisor on the Conservative ticket is Robert Jasinski, a 40-year resident of Bethlehem, and former purchasing agent for New York state.

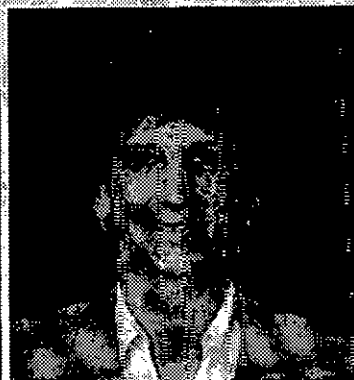

"I'm a conservative, and I'm just what the word means," he said. "I mean to cut unnecessary spending. We don't need so many consultants and lawyers. We should better utilize those who are already employed by the town. Consultants should only be used if they are needed. There are lots of town employees that can do the work we pay outside help for."

Jasinski said the steady 5 percent increase in taxes each year is too much, and is also concerned with how difficult he says it is to find information on spending in the town.

"How can you change things when you have to dig so hard for information?" he asked. "This government needs to be more open."

As a former purchasing agent, he said he would be more careful with purchasing necessities, such as fuel oil, and would also cut the salaries of top town employees.

"I would like it if all the town officials would refuse to take the 4 percent increase in their pay in the coming year," he said.

Also in the vein of conserving town funds, Jasinski said he will push for a referendum on every major purchase. He said the comprehensive plan, which cost the town $200,000, was just done without enough input from town residents.

"I intend to really listen to people, and I would try harder to make everyone in town aware of exactly what is going on, what money is being spent for," he said. "People should have more of a say."

Retired for 10 years, Jasinski believes the town of Bethlehem should create opportunities for seniors and youth. Utilizing property the town already owns and creating opportunities for the town's youth is something Jasinski feels would be a great addition to the town.

"We could set up a Youth Court type of thing, and see what it is the kids are looking for," he said. "Something in between organized activities and just running around loose. I believe there are many well-intentioned kids in town."

With seniors, Jasinski said he would try to promote more of an agenda, with perhaps an outreach program.

Write-in candidate Victor Rodriguez is running for supervisor on the newly formed Voter Rights Party ticket. Rodriguez, who was taken off the official ballot when it was determined earlier this fall by the county Board of Elections that many of his petitions were not valid, opted to be a write-in candidate.

Rodriguez's plan if elected would be to look at the per capita income in each part of town and adjust elected official salaries accordingly, to make them relative to the average salary of residents in that area. He would upgrade infrastructure in town by requiring developers to pay for costs of the upgrades. Attracting clean, environmentally sound businesses and finding what he calls "non fee or tax revenue" sources is also a goal.

"I would be working with the county to raise the percentage of sales tax we get from the county," he said.

He would also pursue grants to build a youth center in town.

"I would like a committee of younger teens to tell us what would be needed," he said.

Rodriguez has been busy writing campaign letters outlining his platform and explaining how to write in votes.

invest our funds. If we don't build a new early learning center, we will probably not be able to sustain the early learning center at its current location for very long," said Lytle.

Board member Lynn Lenhardt did not give any indication how she would vote except to say larger schools are not the answer.

"I don't even want to consider the possibility of any larger schools in our deliberations. I feel very strongly about that," Lenhardt said.

"Whatever space we build should be the most flexible it can be," said board member Robin Storey.

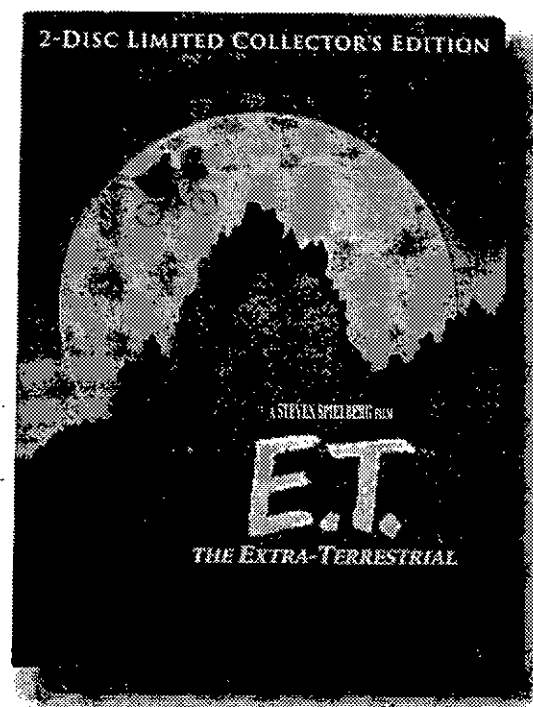

It was standing room only at the meeting, which prompted board president Richard Svenson to state that no matter which option the board chooses, the new school should have the potential for a larger meeting space.

The school board will hold one more meeting on the issue in November before a decision is made at the second meeting of the month, Nov. 16th. A final presentation to the PTAs was scheduled for last night, Oct. 25, at Hamagrael.
