Land divisions possible thanks to comp plan

By STEPHANIE LUBIS Simple residential land divisions, which were not allowed under Bethlehem's previous zoning code, are now a reality thanks to the town's comprehensive plan, which was passed last summer.

Under the old zoning code, a land owner wishing to sell part of his land would have to bring the proposal to the planning board for approval, a process that could take months. Now, with the revisions in zoning, a landowner only has to go through a process that would take just a few weeks.

"The new code recognizes the difference between a lot split and a major subdivision," said Mike Morelli, assistant director of economic development and planning for the town.

So far, the town has completed two lot splits, one in North Bethlehem and one in Selkirk. In both instances, the owners wanted simply to sell part of their lands as a way to augment their income. Morelli said there are several more applications pending at the moment.

We get lots of inquiries from people about it," said town Supervisor Theresa Egan. "There was concern before that the town wasn't accommodating individual residents' needs to provide for their children or other family

Highs and lows of heating costs

Natural gas costs highest in five years

By DAMIAN PAGANO

John Brooks is building a new house in Glenville, and for the first time in 40 years he will heat his home with something other than oil. He's decided to use propane.

Brooks said a friend convinced him to install the new propane furnace because, he said, the fuel burns cleaner. The total cost is about the same, but propane could be slightly less expensive. He said the system could also be installed faster, and he wanted it in the house as soon as possible.

"I had to get it in as fast as I could," he said on Dec. 15, his house still under construction. "We'll see how it works out."

DECEMBER 21,

This winter is a winter of choices for many people when it comes to heating their homes. With fuel prices at a record high, some people are trying to save money by heating with a different type of fuel. Others are asking for assistance with heating bills that can average more than $1,900 annually.

According to the New York state Energy Research and Development Authority, which tracks energy use for state government, most New Yorkers heat their homes with natural gas; followed closely by petroleum products such as heating oil, propane and kerosene. Bio-fuel, including wood and wood pellets, is a distant third, according to data

St. Thomas the Apostle students build house, create ornaments for Ronald McDonald House

For students at St. Thomas the Apostle Catholic school in Delmar, it's never too early to learn about community service.

Kindergarten students at the school recently made a gingerbread house and door ornaments for children at the Ronald McDonald House in Albany, something the house appreciates.

"It was so precious to get a chance to speak to the class this year," said Debbie Ross, resident house manager. "We explain to the children what the house does in simplistic terms, asking to imagine what it would be like to have a brother or sister who needed the Ronald McDonald House."

The gingerbread house and the decorations are inspiring to the residents of Ronald McDonald House Ross said.

"A lot of parents comment on the 'little surprises," said Ross.

Volunteer work at the Ronald McDonald House began for students of St. Thomas the Apostle a few years ago; said Maureen Bernstein, vice president of community affairs at the school.

"One of the teachers decided that this was an appropriate place to do volunteer work," she said. "The kids started meeting the staff at the Ronald McDonald House and learned about what it does."

Eoth Ross and Bernstein said the kids really enjoyed the experience.

"The kids love doing the projects because it's fun," said Bernstein. "The baking is fun, and the teacher's make sure to stress that community service is not supposed to be drudgery. Service for others is something to be enjoyed, and these kids have really gotten it. They understand " integral part of the curriculum at St. Thomas.

Students in all grades volunteer for many community service organizations throughout the year, and usually do a wrap-up project at the end of the year. Each grade level takes on a different population in need and becomes educated about different area service organizations. Bernstein has been running the program for five years.

"It gets bigger and bigger for the kids, because it's progressive," she said. "We incorporate the ideas of service into the curriculum, and it's been successful. Sometimes kids come with me to do volunteer work after school, even after a long day of classes. It just becomes part of what you do."

The Ronald McDonald House Community service is an of Albany is the only house in the area, and it serves families in 26 counties across the state. The house serves families with sick children and provides comfort, support and respite in a beautiful, homelike atmosphere. The house needs about 200 volunteers each month, 100 for the house and 100 for the Ronald McDonald House Family Room at Albany Medical Center.

New homes proposed for Tall Timbers site

Developer seeks to build 282 residential units; public hearing planned

By JIM CUOZZO

A plan by a developer to allow 267 acres of land in New Scotland to be home to residential units and the proposed rezoning of the same northeast corridor by the town board has many residents wondering what the future will bring.

Engineer Scott Lansing presented a proposal from Louis Masullo of Masullo Brothers Builders to construct 282 residential units of varying size from 9,000 square feet 40,000 square feet in the northeast quadrant of town. The units would be called Kensington Woods and would use the Vly Creek aquifer as its water source for twofamily lots, carriage homes and executive lots to be built in the area formerly known as Tall Timbers, the site of a one-time private golf club.

"We are excited about this project and are looking forward to working with the town board and the planning board," Lansing said.

Town officials spent over an hour trying to determine the best first step before deciding on a public scoping session to be held Tuesday, Jan. 10 at 6:30 p.m. at town hall to present the project to the community.

"My concern is that there is ample opportunity for people to suggest better or more pleasing ways to do this project," said Supervisor Ed Clark.

"Over $150 million of proposed assessed value is attached to this project," Masullo said. "We look forward to putting together a dynamic plan we can all be proud of."

But the Kensington Woods project could be over before it begins. In October, over 170 residents presented a petition to the planning board requesting consistent 2-acre zoning be approved for parts of Font Grove and Hilton roads. Clark and many residents in attendance agreed that would drastically affect the Kensington Woods project.

"What goes on in this project will affect everyone in this town, not just 170 people who signed a petition," said resident Jim Finnegan.

The planning board recommended against a 2-acre rezoning at a meeting this month without input from the petitioners living in that area.

"My concern is that there was no opportunity for public input from the people who submitted the rezone issue " said Clark.

The town board will ultimately decide the rezoning issue.

"The planning board made its recommendation," Clark said. "We can either accept it, ignore it, or reject it.

'If you want to move forward with the proposal I have to draft a local law amending the town zoning law to create a new zone," said town Attorney Mike Mackey. A draft of the new proposed zoning change will be in the hands of the town board before the end of the month and a public hearing will be scheduled in January.

A third Empire Zone designation in Albany County is under consideration for parts of Bethlehem and New Scotland on Lagrange Road behind the Slingerlands Price Chopper, proposed site of the Vista Technology Park. Sean McGuire, representing Albany Counties Economic Development Staff, said the tech park could attract software jobs to the region.

"Our Empire Zone isn't a program that brings big buck developments. It is targeting high-tech," McGuire said.

"Study after study has shown these empire zones are failures and the jobs don't materialize," said resident Edie Abrams.

The town board, however, unanimously endorsed the project, which will allow for incentives and tax breaks for participating businesses, which locate in the designated Empire Zone corridor.

Two board members leave

Outgoing board members Andrea Gleason and Scott Houghtaling received proclamations for their years of service to the town board. Gleason spent eight years and Houghtaling served for twelve years on the board.

The new tools in the zoning code just give the boards other things to consider.' Egan said few complaints or other feedback have been received so far, but the board plans to revisit the comprehensive plan every six months regardless. Most suggestions so far have come from the town's planning and zoning departments, who most often utilize the plan. After the meeting in January, any proposed changes to the plan will go before a public hearing in May or June, Egan said. The public meeting has not been scheduled yet, but will board, and one of those things is hopefully be in January, Egan said.

Because the comprehensive plan is a practical guide to decision making, it streamlines the process, but also makes decisions more difficult because each decision must be in line with the plan.

guidelines. Now, with new zoning in place, there is a legal need for boards to be consistent with the comprehensive plan.

Recently, the town planning board granted a parking space waiver to developers at the old Ames shopping plaza, which caused some disagreement among members of that board. The comprehensive plan had recommended that the Panera Bread proposed for that location have a certain number of parking spaces, and the waiver was the first time that board had the opportunity to use this discretion.

Cards keep us connected to those we

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

They sit there on top of the microwave, in their lovely white boxes, calling to me.

"Send us out!" they cry. "You know you want to!"

One complaint seems to get a little louder each December: "Christmas just snuck up on me this year." The timing of Christmas cards attests to that, and each year I defer to a later and later date one of the pleasures I love about Christmas - writing Christmas cards.

I know that this puts me in a solid minority, since lots of people groan about the cards yet to send, but I move into total fantasy land, playing CDs of Bing Crosby and Nat King Cole crooning Christmas tunes, pouring myself a big old glass of Bailey's, and pulling out the cards and pens to stay in touch with all the people who have touched our family's lives.

I love sending cards because I love getting them. It's great to watch people's children grow up, and even better when the adults send pictures of themselves along too.

Whether or not to include the parents in the holiday photo is one of those topics that draws differing and sometimes strong opinions. For years, we always sent out pictures of just the children. Particularly in their first belief, so why would we mess up a picture of bright-eyed, smiling towheads with sooty-eyed, palefaced, sleep-deprived and slightly grumpy parents? On top of which, in the first few years of children's lives, one parent usually falls into the role of picture-taker, which means that it often looks like the young children only have one parent. It always seemed a little vain to send the picture of grownups, or like we have trouble sharing the limelight with our offspring. Our friends, after all, know what we look like; surely, they're more interested in seeing what the future of our civilization looks like.

As we've gotten older, though, I love to see what our friends look like, too. OK, mostly what I love to see is how they're holding up in the face of the aging process. Who's as heavy as me? Whose face is more 'lined? Who, darn them, looks exactly the same? Who, double darn them, looks even better?

My sister-in-law pointed out that while she loves to see people's children, those changes to her peers are what she really likes to see.

I had avoided it up till that years, they were cute beyond point, but realizing that I also love to see my friends on the cards, and the fact that we compare OK not great, but OK - to our peers made me take the plunge. Plus, for a couple of years in a row, we got great family shots on vacation, where Chris and I looked rested, tanned and happy.

Those vacation photos are key. About 75 percent of our family pictures are taken during vacation, when we can put our children against beautiful backdrops and when we're all rested, looking good, and doing things new and different. Inevitably.

a vacation shot ends up on the Christmas card.

We're not alone; our wall of Christmas photos would make a good travel poster.

"Bring your family to Florida, Cape Cod, Italy, Ireland, the Great Escape," it could read. "You will be compelled to put your arm around the spouse who never puts his laundry in the hamper; your teenage children will stand close to you and your spouse because you are the only other English-speaking people they know; and your skin will glow because you will finally get enough sleep at night.'

Cormac's been a big proponent of real-life photos anything to not have to abandon his comfy T-shirts for more formal clothing. When our church offered the chance to have family photos taken as they put together the parish directory, we all cleaned ourselves up and put on good clothes.

The definition of "good clothes" for our sons has evolved into "a shirt with a collar." For Christopher, this is no problem, because he wears a Hawaiian shirt every day of his life. While this has begun to worry me just a little (do you think you could wear a different kind of shirt if you had to? I regularly ask him), it does mean he generally looks neat and kempt - if slightly like a stereoptypical American man on vacation.

So while Christopher pulled get the pictures they put on their the cotton button-down Hawaiian shirt from his drawer, we began magic we try to make at this time the negotiations with Cormac. Cormac was born with his umbilical cord around his neck. and my mother the nurse insists that children born that way hate anything around their necks. Cormac has latched on to this, and while I think he hates anything around his neck because, like his dad, his head looks like it goes directly into his shoulders without benefit of neck,

I know that this puts me in a solid minority, since lots of people groan about the cards yet to send, but I move into total fantasy land. playing CDs of Bing Crosby and Nat King Cole crooning Christmas tunes, pouring myself a big old glass of Bailey's, and pulling out the cards and pens to stay in touch with all the people who have touched our family's lives.

he flees when he sees a tie.

On the occasions that he's had to wear a tie, he makes acking and gacking noises and thrashes around like a landed fish. So for the family picture, we didn't even bring up the idea of a tie and we let Cormac leave his dress shirt ("Itchy! It's so itchy!") untucked.

If Cormac grows up to be a politician, he'll be king of the filibusters, for in the 100 steps between our home and the church, he advocated tirelessly for pictures of us in our normal clothes.

"We never dress like this," he contended. "Why do we want a picture of the way we never look? Shouldn't we have a picture that will remind us what our life was like, of how we really are?' Heaven forfend. I'd be in the kitchen, in ratty jeans and a polo shirt with spots all over it; Chris would be in his sweats and the banded-bottom fleece he bought five years ago and rarely takes off; Christopher would be hunched over his Dungeons and Dragons books, albeit in a Hawaiian shirt; and Cormac would be in a red Tshirt, video game controller in his midwestern hand and a glazed look in his eyes. No wonder people go away to Christmas memories.

Christmas cards! It's part of the of year.

Some of that magic comes in the words that people write in their cards. Mine start out with great ambition, and the people in my address book from A-C get four whole paragraphs. C-E get three; E-F get two and everybody else gets wishes for all the best in years to come and let's try to get together. I toy with the idea of a Christmas letter each year, but Chris is adamantly opposed to them.

I love getting them, though. Some make me laugh, some make me cry and some make me gaze out the deck door to my snow-covered backyard and remember times past.

I'm not greedy, though, and even a card with "Love" or "Best Wishes" suits me. It's nice to be thought of, particularly in a world that rushes past us far too quickly.

Christmas cards make me wonder why I don't pick up the phone and call these people who take a minute in the craziest time of the year to be in touch with us. The world of e-mail has been a blessing in that it keeps me in touch with people at great distances. Sometimes, making a phone call can mean just calling an answering machine, and phone tag, while amusing, gets old fast. I also get shy on the phone, or worry that I'm interrupting dinner, homework, bath, bedtime, or a friend's chance to finally sit down and watch ER uninterrupted.

But you can read a card on your time, even if that's in the 10 seconds between coming home from work and starting dinner. It's something you can hold in your hand, a tangible connection to the people who helped get us where we are now. We hang them around doorframes in our house, as if to keep the past all around us as we create this year's

Not such a holly jolly season at Wal-Mart

Police recently arrested several people for shoplifting at Wal-Mart in Glenmont. On Tuesday, Dec. 6, Kimberly Jones, 22, of 631 South Pearl St. in Albany was arrested on charges of petty larceny.

Loss prevention associates reported seeing Jones attempting to leave without paying for items in her possession, and she was detained, police said. The merchandise total was $291.67. She was arrested by Officer David Caputo, and was brought back to the Bethlehem Police Station for processing and is due in Town Court on Tuesday, Jan. 3 at 4 p.m.

Whitman, 22, of 69 Livingston Station for processing. Ave. in Albany, was arrested on charges of petty larceny at Wal-Mart. The assistant manager reported the incident to Officer Adam Cobb. Loss prevention associates stopped Whitman from leaving store after two store associates witnessed her stealing, police said. Whitman had a valid receipt for groceries, but in two of her bags, cosmetics and toiletries totaling $128.66 were found and no receipt could be produced, police said. Cobb arrested her and brought her Here it is the first day of winter, even though it feels as if we've already been immersed in the season for months. The calendar defies our feelings as nothing but the onset of cabin fever. Still the New Year beckons and will be heralded by local First Night festivities.

Winter woes

So for a modest fee, regional revelers can enjoy a number of entertainment venues and fireworks in Albany and Saratoga Springs.

Old Man Winter, however, will have the last say as he tightens his grip on the Northeast in earnest in January and February.

Some find respite by vacationing in warmer climes, but most of us grimace and bear it, hanging on to the notion that spring will really return.

But until then, we must look for color in gardening brochures with photos of picture-perfect landscaping with vibrant displays of all colors of the rainbow. Looking out the window is like being in a black and white B-movie that never seems to end. Mother Nature's favorite winter color appears to be gray.

To ease the added financial burden of winter, be sure to make sure your residence is not spewing forth heat through leaky windows and doors. Caulking up cracks can save a lot over the course of the typically oil and natural gas-guzzling months of January and February.

Another common-sense thing to do is keep the thermostat down and layer up with extra clothing to keep warm. Nightcaps might have seemed like a silly old-fashioned notion, but they actually make sense if you think about it. Since we lose most of our body heat from our heads, it's a good idea to wear some type of head covering inside. Who's the wiser? And perhaps you'll end up being a trendsetter even at the risk of being a little bit Scroogy.

On sub-zero days, it's best to stay inside if possible. Seniors especially should protect themselves against extreme temperatures.

Drivers should make sure their vehicles' heating systems are in good working order and check the antifreeze from time to time.

Be sure to make sure the holidays are safe in your home — do not leave candles unattended and keep sharp ornaments away from young children and pets. (We've already had several serious local fires because of candles). Be sure to turn off holiday lights before retiring.

We wish everyone happy and safe holidays.

Selkirk fire heroes save man's life

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am writing this letter to commend the heroic efforts of the Selkirk Fire District, whose members put their lives on the line rescuing an individual, trapped in a burning car.

On Nov. 13 the Selkirk fire District responded to a one-car motor vehicle accident in the vicinity of Route 144 in Glenmont. The initial call was for a vehicle off the road and unknown injuries. As luck would have it a class was in progress at Selkirk Station No. 1 and the station was fully manned. A heavy rescue vehicle was immediately dispatched with a full crew.

Police at the scene of the wreck subsequently reported that the situation had escalated with the vehicle now on fire and the driver trapped inside. At this point the rescue truck was less than a mile away but was significantly handicapped by the fact that it carried no water. The nearest Pumper, Engine 41 was several minutes behind the rescue truck.

As the rescue truck arrived, everyone at the scene had backed away from the vehicle which was now fully engulfed in flames. Without hesitation, members grabbed fire extinguishers along with rescue tools and ran to the fire. Those with extinguishers knocked the fire back while other members began cutting the roof of the vehicle with cutters and hydraulic tools.

As the extinguishers ran dry, the fire roared back. Members continued cutting even though they could feel the heat of the advancing flames. Firefighter Thomas Neri recalled being told to move away from the fire but later stated, "we realized the guy inside was alive, and we couldn't back off.'

Just as the situation seemed hopeless, engine 41 arrived and additional members attacked the fire with fully charged lines. In a combined effort, members were able to remove the roof of the vehicle, roll the dashboard forward and push the fire back. The driver, Jesse M. Bradford of Melrose, was subsequently cut from the mangled vehicle just as the final flames from the fire were extinguished. Bradford was alive, but had suffered serious burns and lacerations. He was immediately transported to Albany Medical Center and then air lifted to Westchester Medical Center.

Albany Fire Department Assistant Chief Robert Mengle, who was at the scene stated that in 35 years of fire fighting, he had never seen such a valiant effort, These guys put their lives on the line and there is no question that they saved a life today.'

The Selkirk Fire District answers more than 300 calls a year, at all hours and in all types of weather. During this holiday season, I would like to take this opportunity to say thank you to the members of this department, who truly are the town's unsung heroes.

Thanks to student volunteers

Editor, The Spotlight:

During this season of thanksgiving and reflection, To Life would like to let Bethlehem residents know about some of the wonderful and dedicated young volunteers in our community. Some of them come to us through Bethlehem Central High's Participation in Government class and continue to volunteer even after they have finished their 20 hour requirement. All have given their time and energy ito help us help women with breast cancer.

By helping with fund-raising and community education events, keeping the building and the grounds clean, doing endlessly repetitive tasks such as stuffing envelopes, photocopying and collating educational packets, these young people have been reliable and truly indispensable. Janyl Slater, Amanda and Josh Perez, Erica Danz, Rachael McCormick, Elana Krischer, Emily Caracandas, and Hannah and Lindsay Derbyshire spent days making favors and assisting with a recent fund-raiser. Ryan Long, Matt Schmit, Jon Pratt and Ben Finkle have raked, trimmed, weeded, painted and cleaned. Alesia Hall, Jamie Eberle and Kelsey Heenan, our newest high volunteers, school have cheerfully done whatever was asked of them. Sisters Emily and Hannah Meckler call nearly every week to see if they can help.

Youthful pranks and problems make headlines but these kids quietly do a great job and deserve recognition for their good deeds. Ann Krischer, MSW

Relax and enjoy the holiday season

Editor, The Spotlight:

Please thank Art Stein for the delightful memoir in this week's issue. And thank you for publishing it. Here is my reaction to the flap over "Happy Holidays". vs. "Merry Christmas":

It's amusing to read letters from irate Christians who get all worked up because some people (and stores) acknowledge that the Christian Christmas is not the only holiday happening toward the end of the year, and choose not to cede exclusive ownership of seasonal wishes to one group. We hear the assertion that, since the word "holiday" may have been derived from "holy day," it must still carry that sacred now that are "holy," in one degree meaning and, moreover, must refer exclusively to Christmas.

1. If it really does mean "holy day," then what's the complaint? Who's to say that "Happy holy day" can't refer to Christmas? The Christian thing to do would be to accept the greeting and say "thank you."

2. There are other days around or another, to others besides Christians. Why should they be slighted?

3. But actually, of course, the word "holiday" long ago lost its halo. I don't think those insisting on its "holy" connotation object to getting a day off on such secular 'holidays" as Presidents Day, Labor Day, Veterans Day, etc. (And Across The Pond; of course, any day you're at the shore you are "on holiday.")

4. For many people and many purposes, "the holiday season" begins with the Thanksgiving "holiday" and extends through the New Year's Day "holiday," with some more-or-less "holy days" in between.

The Bill of Rights defines America. Why don't we celebrate it?

The Constitution of the United States would never have become the law of the land without the Bill of Rights. Several states refused to join the Union unless there was a Bill of Rights to limit the federal power and protect individual rights. Why don't we celebrate it?

The Bill of Rights guarantees fundamental civil and human rights: the freedoms of speech, press, assembly, religion; protections against unreasonable searches and coerced confessions; rights to counsel and a jury trial. For these rights and freedoms people have struggled for centuries. The Bill of Rights remains a beacon to freedomloving people worldwide. Why don't we celebrate it?

The Bill of Rights does more: it defines the limits of government power. More directly than any other single document of law, the It's the holiday season. Relax Bill of Rights stands between tyranny and liberty. Refugees flee to the United States, not for its "three separate branches of government," not for its arrangement of senators and representatives, but for its liberty. The foundation of that liberty is the Bill of Rights. Why don't we celebrate it?

> We have special days for the birthdays of great leaders, to remember special events, and to honor our military services. But all of these remarkable people and events aimed to advance the cause of liberty - the cause of the Bill of Rights.

Let's celebrate it! Every town, city, and state should designate one day as Bill of Rights Day. The logical date would be Dec. 15, because on that date in 1791 the Bill of Rights was ratified. Just one day per year, let us fly the flag, put up a poster, and most important of all: read the Bill of Rights. And read it to our kids, in libraries, in schools, in homes.

Let's make Dec 15 Bill of Rights Day, and declare our support for all of the Bill of Rights for all citizens. We owe it to our forefathers, and we owe it to our kids.

Professor honored with English award

B STEPHANIE LUBIS

Thanksgiving was extra. special this year for Dr. Margaret Malone of Glenmont.

The pharmacist, who is a professor at Albany College of Pharmacy, was designated a Fellow of the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain.

"Thanksgiving is not a holiday over there, and that's when I found out," said Malone, a native of South Yorkshire, about 150 miles north of London.

Malone was one of only four this year. In the last 40 years, only about 500 pharmacists have been awarded fellowships, and very few are women.

One thing that surprised me is that there are so few women fellows," said Malone. "This profession is about 50 percent female, so I'm surprised that there are so few women as fellows."

Malone originally moved to Glenmont in 1992 to accept an associate professor position at the Albany College of Pharmacy. In pharmacists to receive the award 1995, she became a full professor, and while she originally planned to stay for two or three years, she has been here ever since.

> Malone submitted her materials for consideration for the award last February, and was then nominated by another fellow. Letters of recommendation, which Malone was not allowed to see, were also sent for consideration.

> "Then the panel decides if I'm worthy," she said. "It's a conservative process and an honor to receive the award, but there is no difference as far as my actual practice. There is no responsibility attached to the position, but it is another source of recognition."

A pharmacist deals with all aspects of managing medication for patients. Malone's work also includes research in obesity management, including diet and exercise regimens, patients in clinics, and medication that is issued to control obesity.

She was awarded the fellowship for her contributions to science and pharmacy practice. she said, but the fellowship can also be awarded for contributions to literature and science, or other kinds of contributions.

Malone received her U.K. Pharmacist's license in 1981, after graduating from Manchester University in 1980. She earned her bachelor's and master's degrees inclinical pharmacy as well as her Ph.D. in clinical pharmacy.

In addition to the Royal Fellowship, Malone is also a Fellow of the American College of Clinical Pharmacy, an award she earned in 2000. She is planning to attend the award ceremony for the Royal Fellowship in London next May.

Whitney Young receives $180,000 grant for outreach

Following an Associated Press announcement that five areas in the Capital Region are among the worst in the nation for air quality, Whitney M. Young Jr. Health Services has announced that they will significantly increase asthma outreach and implementation of their asthma chronic care model in 2006.

Supported by a $180,000 NYS Department of Health grant, Whitney Young will expand their highly successful asthma chronic care model in coordination with medical providers and community organizations in Albany, Saratoga and Schenectady counties.

Whitney Young providers plan to specifically target children and young adults up to age 17 with a poor socio-economic status.

Outreach efforts to providers and organizations will focus on the cities of Albany and Schenectady, with additional outreach to surrounding and rural areas.

Features of the expanded Whitney Young asthma program, "A System's Approach for Reducing the Burden of Asthma in New York State," include:

· Outreach to area medical providers and related community organizations to provide education on implementation of the asthma chronic care model.

 Creation of a Pediatric Asthma Coalition of the Capital Region.

 Providing formal asthma management training for health care and school staff for 8-12 schools in the Capital Region beginning in the 2006-2007 school year.

Resolution defines eminent domain in town

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

A recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling in favor of granting municipalities the power of eminent domain to take private property to convert into private businesses will not be a threat in the town of Bethlehem, thanks to a resolution passed by the town board at its meeting last Wednesday.

The power of eminent domain was previously limited to the installation of sidewalks and roads, but this June, the U.S. Supreme Court, in the case of Kelo vs. New London, expanded the government's power to take private land and use it for private ` businesses.

Library to expand digital book offerings next month

The library will soon be adding to its downloadable audiobook capability with an additional service called OverDrive. Purchased by the Upper Hudson Library System, the OverDrive collection will be available to anyone with a UHLS library card.

OverDrive will offer an expanded array of audiobooks downloadable to a home computer, including many fiction genres, biographies and autobiographies, career and health resources, language study, and children's books. The collection will feature some special digital bookshelves — "hot titles," "recently added," and even "lost in the virtual stacks."

OverDrive will allow patrons to regulate their reading pace and bookmark their place. Because books can be downloaded in parts, OverDrive is workable with high-speed or dial-up connection.

A third of OverDrive's collection is available as e-books, readable as PDF files on a computer screen. In the case of e-books, special Adobe Reader software will allow users to increase type size, and in some cases, hear the book read by the computer — valuable features for sight-impaired patrons.

OverDrive differs from the library's current NetLibrary subscription in that digital rights to individual titles are purchased and distributed by the Upper Hudson Library System. Like a traditional library, OverDrive offers a finite number of copies of each downloadable book; a copy can be placed on reserve, if not immediately available. Our NetLibrary subscription offers unlimited copies of downloadables, but only to Bethlehem Public Library cardholders.

OverDrive, like NetLibrary, is accessible through our catalog. Clicking on an OverDrive title will provide links to a description of the book, reviews, and information on digital rights and restrictions — for example, whether or not a book can be copied to an MP-3 player or burned to a CD.

Bruno grant creates master's program at Albany Law

State Senate Majority Leader Joseph L. Bruno recently announced that he has secured $120,000 from the 2005-06 state budget to develop a new master's degree program at Albany Law School's Science and Technology Law Center. The master's degree in legal studies, the first degree of its kind to be offered at an academic institution nationwide, will focus on the technical, legal and business components related to technology transfer. The grant will fund the development of the degree's curriculum, including the hiring of support staff. Albany Law School will also collaborate with RPI, The University at Albany, Union College and the Capital Region business community to generate core aspects of the program in an effort to have the program ready for student enrollment by January 2007.

service will be available to its patrons in early January.

Downloadable service tours scheduled

Librarian-guided tours of our downloadable book service are scheduled in the next couple of months. Come to one of our demonstration sessions and see how easy it is. Demos will be offered Thursday, Jan. 26, at 9:30 a.m., Wednesday, Feb. 1, at 2:30 p.m., and Wednesday, Feb. 22, at 7 p.m. Help is also available anytime at the information desk.

Egan said residential land divisions are an example of how the town is looking to streamline its administrative processes. Landowners who meet the criteria for a residential land division no longer have to bring the proposal before the planning board, which in turn allows planning board members more time to devote to other projects.

For a land division, a committee reviews the request and them makes a recommendation to George Leveille. director of economic development and planning in town. The last land division took three weeks to approve.

"This is another tool the town can use," said Morelli.

Planning board chairman Parker Mathusa said requests for residential land divisions will go in chronological order.

"That way, there are no favorites, and we can give consideration to everyone who applies," he said.

Mathusa said also that water and sewer on the land are keys to residential development, and those who do have water and sewer on their property and who file a complete application will get a review more quickly.

of our schools," Loomis' letter said.

The district is implementing better monitoring of restrooms, more hall monitors and further security measures.

"We are examining the feasibility and the cost of locating security cameras at not just the high school but throughout the district," said Loomis.

Loomis stressed the incidents of sexual contact inside the high school are isolated to these two incidents only and the school board is fully aware of the district measures to contain it.

"The school board has been notified on each phase of the investigation , and is fully supportive of actions the district took," said Loomis.

Lambert said. Bethlehem Superintendent Les Loomis said that two separate incidents of sexual contact between Lambert and the 14-yearold female student occurred in two different boys bathrooms in October and November. When district officials learned of the incidents, they called Bethlehem police to investigate.

"This is obviously of great concern to us, and both students have been suspended at this time," said Loomis. The students disciplined were cooperative with district officials after the administration received a complaint.

"I spoke with the assistant high school principal - who is also a parent — and she told me what she heard from her daughter about the incident," said Loomis. Officials immediately contacted Bethlehem police. The department's investigation revealed similar alleged sexual misconduct on Lambert's part with another underage girl.

Prior to his arrest. Lambert had been living at his aunt's home on New Scotland Road since leaving Houston a few months ago. Lambert could face up to 25 years in jail if convicted. Lambert is currently in the Albany County iail with bail set at $15,000. The misdemeanor charges are scheduled to be heard in Bethlehem Town Court this week.

Rumors have swirled in the school community about the case, prompting Loomis to send a letter to all parents in the district.

SNAP DECISIONS

You have only been looking for two weekends and have found a house that looks perfect! You want to buy it, but you are reluctant to make an offer without looking at more properties.

Whether you are in a buyer's or seller's market, the best homes usually get snapped up quickly. When you find a great home that you like, you may not have much time to think it over. But it is difficult to make such an enormous purchasing decision without at least "sleeping on it". If you hesitate, you could lose the house to another buyer. If you go rushing forward, you may spend some time nursing a case of "Buyer's Remorse". Working with a real estate professional can help ease your concerns. Your agent can provide information about recent sales of homes in the area and answer any questions you may have. Keep in mind that a real estate agent's job is to find you a property that you want to buy, not to show you a lot of houses that won't interest you! For professional advice on all aspects of buying and selling real estate, call me at Coldwell Banker Prime Properties, 518-640-4444 or email me at abbey@cbpp.com in a 2003 report available on the authority's Web site, NYSERDA.org.

It costs an average of $2,100 to heat a home with natural gas; $1,920 to heat a home with oil; and slightly less than that to heat with propane, according to NYSERDA spokesman Tom Collins. The average prices were determined by factoring an average home size of 1,700 square feet, although actual costs vary depending on energy efficiency of a house and its size.

Those costs have increased dramatically and to record amounts during the past year, according to NYSERDA's analysis. In September, the last month for which data is available, the price of natural gas was more than $20 per thousand cubic feet. That amount is two-thirds more than the January 2005 price of about $12 per thousand

it is the highest price recorded in the past five years.

The cost of propane has similarly increased. The current average price of $2.39 per gallon is about $.25 per gallon more than it was in December 2004 and about $.80 per gallon more than December 2003. The price of propane is almost double what it was five years ago, when it cost about $1.20 per gallon.

"I'd like to see it go down," John Brooks said.

The cost of heating oil is also at record level. The current price of about $2.46 per gallon is about 46 cents more expensive than it was last year and about $1.11 more expensive per gallon than it was five years ago, according to NYSERDA's data.

The increase is due to an increase in the trading price of petroleum products, according to industry insiders. Although the United States has more oil in reserve now than it ever had, the price is at a record high, according Joel Fingerman, an analyst with Oil Analytics, an industry analyst.

"It's too high," he said.

The price of crude oil and petroleum commodities has risen on the New York Mercantile Exchange during the past year. Buoyed in part by increased demand for petroleum products in China and India, the natural disasters in the Gulf of Mexico and speculation on behalf of market players, the price spiked this summer and hit record highs during the fall.

The price has come down in the past few weeks, but is still unnaturally high, Fingerman said.

'We've got an inflated price that is out of line with the fundamentals of economics," he said. "Eventually, the system won't be able to keep up with it."

Despite a comparatively mild autumn and winter so far this year, social service agencies around the region are already seeing increases in the amount of heating assistance. County federal Home Energy Assistance Program, which in New York state last year distributed $236 million to almost 970,000 households in New York.

In Saratoga County, the Department of Social Services has rećeived 2,997 applications for assistance so far this year. That is about 15 percent higher than the total number of aid requests (2,053) that the department received last year, according to Commissioner Robert Christopher.

"People are utilizing the program because of the higher cost of fuel," Christopher said.

to get new windows, because I like the way the old ones look, but the old-fashioned stuff really does work.'

However, for those who don't want to spend money on upgrades. there are a few simple things that can be done.

"You can pick and choose," said Danz. "You can seal up an older home, airtight, with some of the newer things on the market, and you can also change your lifestyle. Keep the thermostat as low as you can stand, and wear a sweater. Sometimes if you want to keep what you already have, you have to sacrifice."

Danz said many of the new and more efficient heating appliances would pay for themselves after awhile. Most of the newer heating technologies run at least 90 percent efficiently, as opposed to some older systems which run at only 50 percent efficiency, he said.

"Many people have oversized furnaces," he said. "And most people don't replace their home furnace until it breaks down completely. But now, with some towns going through a reval process, people are looking for ways to cut down on energy costs and raise the value of their home."

Another inexpensive way to increase heat efficiency in an older home is buying a humidifier. Larry Mack, service manager for Tangora Technologies in Delmar, said newer homes while more energy efficient, also may have the problem of being so airtight that no fresh air gets in the house, increasing indoor pollution. In those cases, a fresh air heat exchange is attached to the furnace, which brings in air from the outside to warm the fresh air.

Older homes usually have many more cracks in the infrastructure, which decrease indoor pollution, but add to heating costs in the home. A humidifier is a simple way to make the home feel warmer with less heat.

"Heat from radiators can dry the air out, and it may not feel as warm. A humidifier can make the air feel warmer and less dry," said Mack. "Humidifiers car: also be installed right on to the furnace.'

Finding and plugging the cracks in an old home is essential, he said.

"Cracks are usually around windows and doors, but it's hard to get every one of them," he said.

Heating for newer homes is less expensive, not surprisingly, due to higher quality insulation and more efficient systems, Mack said. For people who do not want to invest in a complete energy makeover for their home, Mack recommends a heating tuneup. At Tangora Technologies, the tuneup would cost about $95 and would ensure efficient heating throughout the season. The home would have to be tuned up each vear.

"I definitely recommend a new system if you can afford it," he

Adviser: Board must be more fiscally responsible

By JIM CUOZZO

Voorheesville school board members came face to face with the future at last week's meeting.

"It's a new day, and you are not just policy makers anymore," said Betty Cure, a representative of the New York State School Board Association advisory solutions council. "You have to pay attention to the finances and develop an understanding of financial reports."

Cure presented each board member with a detailed report of their new roles based on legislation designed to provide more fiscal accountability to districts across New York.

Establishing a board audit and finance committee is one of the top priorities.

School board president Joseph Pofit along with members C. James Coffin and David Gibson were selected to serve on the committee. Cure said school boards need to be trained to understand and read detailed accounting and auditing reports.

Festival of Lights holiday begins Sunday

By MARTY BANNAN

bannanm@spotlightnews

Although not the most important or holiest of holidays miracle during the darkest in the Hebrew calendar, Hanukkah, a festival of light and rededication, is perhaps the best known of Jewish holidays, mainly because it falls close to Christmas.

According to Jewish tradition, the story of Hanukkah goes back more than 2,000 years when Israel fell under the regime of Antiochus IV and the Hellenistic Empire.

Antiochus oppressed the Jews through mass slaughter and by defiling their temple. Jews living under the regime were prohibited from practicing their religion.

In time, a nationalistic group led by Mattathias the Hasmonean and his son Judah religious traditionalist group known as the Chasidim to oppose Antiochus forces and preserve Israel and Judaism.

when it came time to rededicate the temple after the Greeks defiled it there was only enough oil left to burn the candelabrum called a menorah for one night. Jewish customs required that the menorah in the temple burn every night, but their enemies had wasted most of the oil. Miraculously, the oil burned eight days and nights, the time needed to prepare a new batch of fresh oil.

Rejoicing for the miracle, Jews since then have celebrated Hanukkah.

during one of the darkest times eight are lit on the final night. in Jewish history," said Rabbi Robert Kasman of Congregation Agudat Achim in Schenectady. "We celebrate the week of the year to show that even during the darkest of time there is always hope."

The eight-day festival begins on the 25th day of the Jewish month of Kislev, in which this year happens to fall on the 25th of December, Christmas. -

"This is the only time in a 19year cycle where Hanukkah falls after Christmas," said Kasman. "That makes shopping for presents a little easier because people can shop after the rush has died down."

The reason Hanukkah isn't a strict religious holiday is because the celebration doesn't appear in Hebrew scripture and thus was not commanded by God, as opposed to Passover Maccabee teamed up with a and the High Holy Days, according to Linda Woodward Stein, chair of the interfaith committee at the temple,

"Jews can work and carry The revolt triumphed, but money during these days," she said.

> Stein added there is deeper meaning and interpretation to the festival depending on whom vary as each family defines its own traditions.

The most important and religious tradition is lighting the menorah. The menorah holds nine candles, one for each of the eight nights of the festival, and a shamus candle used to light each of them. On the first night, one candle is lit and placed at the far right. The second night "The miracle occurred two are lit, and so forth, until all his blessings. The shamus candle, also called the servant candle, is easily recognized as it stands elevated from the other candles. By tradition, the eight Hanukkah candles serve only for pleasure, but the shamus candle may be used for any practical purpose.

Gift giving is a newer tradition that was adopted in countries where Jews have a lot of contact with Christians. It came into being so children would not feel deprived of fun after seeing Christian children receive gifts. Most gift exchanging is done among immediate family members and in many cases gifts are only given to children.

"In my family my parents and exchanged small but imaginyou talk to, and celebrations ative gifts," Stein said. "We stopped exchanging after I got married, but other families continue to exchange gifts after their children grow up.'

Food is also an important family played for matchsticks. As the candles are lit, prayers part of the festivities. Most are recited offering gratitude to commonly served are latkes.

"The potato the miracle during the pancake is an darkest week of the year eastern to show that even during European tradition popthe darkest of time there ular here in is always hope." America, Stein said. "In Rabbi Robert Kasman Israel people enjoy a type of a doughnut cooked in oil." _

Latkes don't necessarily always have to be made from potatoes. Vegetables and grains are commonly used as well.

Hanukkah gelt symbolizes the prizes won in dreidel games. Stein added that as a child her

A favorite tradition of children, playing dreidel is a game in which players spin a top for toys or treats. The game symbolizes the means by which oppressed Jews living in captivity or occupation concealed their Torah studies.

A dreidel is marked with four Hebrew letters: Nun, Gimmel, Heh and Shin. These letters stand for the Hebrew phrase "Nes Gadol Hayah Sham," a great miracle happened there, referring to the miracle of the oil.

"It's a festival about games, food, song, family gatherings and sharing happiness with each other, but it is also about renewal as the oil that burned for eight days was used to rededicate the temple, " Said Ann Zonderman.

"Most important it's a way we celebrate a joyful moment in Jewish history."

Latham, New York, December 2005

In an unprecedented event, Concord Pools has been selected by POOL AND SPA NEWS magazine as the "2005 Pool Dealer of the Year" in North America awarded in recognition for their lifetime achievement, innovations and contributions back to the swimming pool industry.

Pool and Spa News magazine, the largest publication in the swimming pool and spa industry, selected one pool dealer from North America and presented this award during the International Pool and Spa Expo in Orlando, FL on November 2, 2005. Mike Giovanone, President of Latham based Concord Pools, Ltd., who was attending the expo to be recognized among Pool and Spa News' 2005 "Top 50 Builders" in the USA and a "Master of Design" award recipient, was surprised and honored to be selected for this most prestigious individual award.

Additionally that evening at the APSP (Association of Pool and Spa Professionals) awards dinner. Giovanone was again called upon to receive the "APSP International Award of Excellence" Gold Medal Award on behalf of " Concord Pools Ltd. and Latham based Pacific Industries for their entry of a custom pool constructed locally this past year.

"This entire experience has been very humbling and I am truly honored in receiving these awards. I accept them on behalf of my industry peers, who were just as deserving as I," says Michael Giovanone, President, Concord Pools, Ltd. "And for the privilege of working with the men and women of Concord Pools and Latham Plastics, without whom these awards would not be possible."

Psych prof's therapy helps people get through the holidays

By STEPHEN PAUSE

With four days to go until Christmas, the time for holiday joy often turns into holiday jitters in those last frantic moments of preparation. John Forsyth, a professor of psychology at the University at Albany, has spent a decade working to help people cope with stress related anxiety. and has a unique method for conquering holiday stress.

Known as acceptance and commitment therapy (ACT), Forsyth has been researching a treatment that helps cure diseases such as obsessive compulsive disorder or panic attacks, but also has practical applications for those people who tend to get a little too caught up in the anticipation of the holiday.

Forsyth, the director of the university's Anxiety Disorders Research Program, said that many times people become so caught up in realizing that they have anxiety or fear about something that they allow it to dominate their psyche. This can lead to a downward spiral that only gets worse as time goes on. Focusing on the anxiety, he said, only leads to more anxiety.

The main thing that happens is that there's a lot of things that go on in a short period of time, so in addition to normal life obligations and stress, there's so many other things that have to be done," he said.

People become so focused on wanting to be happy, he said, that it actually prevents them from achieving that goal. There are so many expectations about what a time of year that it creates a realistically achieved. burden of stress counterintuitive to what they really want.

"The research is based in clinical psychology. When you struggle with thoughts that you don't want, you're going to get more of the same thing," Forsyth said. "When you struggle with unpleasant thoughts and feelings you end up having more of them. Lives are built around efforts to not have anxiety, which causes anxiety."

Forsyth's ACT method is based on a relatively simple concept that helps a person realize that this stress is part of life, and in coming to terms with what is unavoidable, a person is able to move on.

"The truth of it is that these are perfectly normal types of feelings, and thoughts, and even worries can be helpful if they help you to plan and get things done," he said.

He used the metaphor of a chessboard to make his point more clear. He likened the internal battle over stress to the opposing pieces on the board, and said that if people view their lives in such an opposing fashion, there will always be a loser. Instead of choosing a side, he said, people should look at stress from the perspective of the board, which observes the game, but doesn't have a stake in who wins or loses.

In order to accept and conquer the stress that may prevent people from being happy during the holidays, Forsyth offered a few simple tips.

One tied in closely with the acceptance of anxiety and stress is to abandon any commitment to perfection, because it will set up person should be feeling at this expectations that cannot be

You can go to a party with friends or family for the sake of it, not for it to be good," he said.

Another is to practice random acts of kindness. Doing something that will not receive any thanks, Forsyth said, will help people to understand that they have choices in what they can do, and in turn will help them to realize they have power over events.

Other tips Forsyth offered are simpler, such as making time for yourself, something as easy as making a cup of your favorite tea or taking a deep breath. Likewise, avoiding over-scheduling will help a person to decide which events are truly important to them.

By asking, "Is this really what I care about?" people can prioritize based on what they want, not what they think others want them to do, he said. Choosing not to go to that third Christmas party may save some energy that in the long run will lead to a more enjoyable season.

Another is to focus on the process, not just the outcome.

"If you're in the checkout line and people are going slow in front of you, step back and focus on why you're there - the gift, the big picture, the process, not the outcome," he said.

Most importantly, Forsyth emphasized that people should realize the stress of the holidays is unavoidable.

"Stress is 100 percent prevalent in all human beings, and accepting that will help them to move on," he said. "Most of us believe that they have to be gotten out of the way, but that's not true. If you want to have a life that's well lived, pain is a part of it.'

Automated postal machine helps stamp out holiday stress

By STEPHEN PAUSE

Waiting in line at the post to take. office has become an unavoidable ritual for some people over the years, but a new service aims to relieve some of the time wasted waiting to send gifts to loved ones.

(APCs) offer many of the to be affixed to the parcel. The services that a clerk behind a machine is fast enough that it counter can, but with a shorter can serve a number of people wait and faster results.

machines, which work in a Like an ATM at a bank, the human for security reasons. postal machines are available 24 hours a day. This allows people to completely avoid high traffic periods and to mail letters and packages even in the middle of the night.

> Despite touting all of the APCs benefits, Ryan Morrell, a customer service supervisor for the United States Postal Service, doesn't think the machines will ever completely replace people at the post office.

> "It's just an alternate access that will better serve the public. There are things that the machine can't do," he said.

Although an APC can mail' an international letter, any letters over an ounce still have to go through the hands of a

Likewise, the machines cannot accept international packages:

Packages too large to fit into the collection kiosk also have to go through the window.

Another drawback to the machines is an inability to accept cash. Only customers with a credit or debit card are allowed to use the machine, and must keep their costs to $50. The spending ceiling, along with a 10-parcel limit, acts as a security measure.

Marie Lemma, who owns a business at Crossgates Mall, said she uses the machine because it is fast and convenient, not to avoid the postal clerks.

As seen

"The employees are great, they're nice and helpful when you get there, so it's not that," she said.

Lemma, who had used the machine several times before, said she was slow to catch on at first, but using the machines gets easier each time.

The first APC was unveiled in Pittsfield, Mass. in November 2004, and since then they have spread throughout the area. In addition the Stuyvesant Plaza post office, there are APCs at Karner Road, Colonie Center, and Latham.

The Albany postal district, which includes places as far away as Syracuse and Utica, has a total of 12 APCs.

Although the recommended deadlines for most items have passed, there is still a chance for residents to get out those last minute pack-ages. The post office recom-mends that parcels shipped with priority mail service are addressed no later than Wednesday, Dec. 21 and that express mail be sent no later than Dec. 23.

Even with those deadlines, the post office recommends customers get their packages and letters out as soon as possible, because from now until Christmas, the post office will process about 900 million pieces of mail, up about 30 percent from a

Saratoga's track is closed, but virtual racing runs on

By DAMIAN PAGANO

The races go off every five minutes, 24 hours a day and seven days a week at Greenside Park, the virtual thoroughbred racecourse. There is no chance of a scratched entry and the weather is always good.

The interested public can wager real money on the not-soreal races at Greenside Park. Horses are assigned random numbers, and the odds are determined by how many of the given number each horse has. During the course of the race, a computer draws numbers and whatever number comes up most frequently makes the winning horse.

Greenside Park is one of several virtual horse races that take place online, and people around the world wager ± 320.000 — or about $600.000 - each week on races run there, according to Jennie Prest, a spokeswoman for English wagering company William Hill, which operates Greenside Park on its Website Willhill.com.

The site has been up since 2003, about the same amount of time that races have been run Digiturf.com. On those Web sites, players can buy, name, train and race virtual thoroughbreds for real prize money Players design their own silks, pay stable fees, buy new horseshoes and supply their horses with performanceenhancing vitamins. Horses get faster the more they are trained and the better they are cared for. Digiturf.com even features a stakes race called the Saratoga Sprint.

"It's very popular," Prest said of virtual racing, which is legal in England and can only be played by people with memberships to the Internet sites. "You don't get any jockeys falling off or horses refusing to run. You know you're always going to get a good run for your money."

Internet gambling, including wagers placed on virtual horse racing, is illegal in New York, according to Brad Maione, a spokesman for the state Attorney General's Office.

"It's against the law," he said. But enforcement of the law can be difficult. The physical plants for Internet gambling operations are usually located in countries where the activity

Raceclubs.com and is allowed, such as England. Anyone in the world can log on and, using their credit cards. pay to play. In the United States, Oregon, California and Louisiana allow wagers to be placed via the Internet.

> Maione said the New York attorney general's office has reached out to credit card companies and reached agreement with some of them whereby the companies block gambling transactions.

"That's how we've gone after it," Maione said.

But many people gamble online without penalty. It is not a crime for somebody to gamble on the Internet, according to Bennett Liebeman, coordinator of the Racing and Gaming Law program at Albany Law School. What is illegal, he said, is a company hosting gambling sites in states where the activity is prohibited. Players are not prosecuted, and it is estimated that of the $7 billion wagered online every year, about half of it is wagered in the United States.

"It's extraordinarily difficult to effectively regulate," Liebeman said.

According to Maureen for problems with virtual Corbett, director of the Center For Problem Gambling in Albany, 60 of their approximately 400 annual clients, or 15 percent, gamble online.

"That's the fastest growing segment of our clientele," she said. "About two years ago, we didn't have any.'

She said nobody has sought help from the center horse racing. Most of the people who gamble online play poker. She is concerned that virtual horse racing could catch on and become a problem for some people either wrapping them up in playing the game or causing them to gamble more at actual racecourses.

"I don't think it's too far down the road," she said.

Business Spotlight Start the new year with dinner and a mystery

By JOSEPHINE ORSINI

Plans for spending time with loved ones, chaotic last minute shopping trips to the mall and timing traditional holiday meals consume most people at this time of year.

But never fear, it will all end, and then it's time to make plans for New Year's Eve.

Unwinding with good food and lively entertainment can be the perfect fix after the stress of the season, and the Good Times Lakeview Inn restaurant in Ballston Lake keeps this in mind when getting ready for its dinnertheater performances.

Guests are served a full course meal and live entertainment from the Ballston Lake Mystery Players, where audience members can even participate in the show if they want.

"The improvisational type of theater makes for a one-of-a-kind experience," said Desiree Kelleigh, owner of the family restaurant for 18 years along with her husband Hugh. "The fun part is not knowing what is going to happen and how the audience will morph and change it."

Diners do not have to participate in the show, and those who choose to do so can participate from their seats or stand up and recite lines from a script provided.

"You never know what people will do with their lines," said Kathy O'Neill, executive director of the show, who develops a core set of actors and script for the production, and also gathers participants from the audience. "People can get really into it, and they have a lot of fun."

The restaurant hosts a dinner theater about once a month along with private parties. On New Year's Eve, the event is more formal, with a menu of shrimp and champagne enhancing the fun.

The dinner runs from 6 to 9 p.m., kicking off with the dinner and introduction to the actors in the first half and getting into the play toward the second half.

it then it would move forward,' said O'Neill. "We did a couple shows, and people liked them."

The shows are specifically written by O'Neill for her actors to include the audience as actors, and are about murder mysteries -but in no way try to create a seemingly realistic situation.

"Don't think along the lines of twists and turns and clues," said O'Neill, "Think of having a good time that's lighthearted with a mystery along the way."

O'Neill is a retired English and theater arts teacher who continues to work with various theater groups.

"We see people leave laughing and as they leave they will invariably stop and thank us for having fun," said O'Neill. "We make them laugh and that's important."

Reservations are required and can be made by calling 399-9976. The cost is $75 per person and that includes dinner, show and tax. Cost does not include gratuity. Dinner is a choice of stuffed shrimp, chicken cordon bleu or homemade manicotti.

Also served is a bruschetta appetizer, salad and dessert. The evening finishes with a champagne toast along with coffee, tea, party favors and door prizes.

"We want people to have their evening," said Kelleigh. "Those who do it have a fantastic memory for the rest of their life."

St. Thomas School seeks sponsors for charity auction

The P.T.O. of St. Thomas the Apostle School in Delmar is seeking sponsors for its first charitable auction, which will be held Saturday, Feb. 11, at Normanside Country Club. The event, which will include both live and silent auctions as well as a buffet dinner, will benefit the school and its library media center.

Businesses and individuals may sign on as event sponsors at one of four levels. The Angel sponsorship is $1,000. Sponsors at this level will be included in auction advertising and promotion, will be recognized in the event program, and will receive four admission tickets to the auction. The Guardian sponsor level is $500 and includes advertising, event and program recognition, plus two auction admission tickets. The Crystal sponsorship is $250 and includes event and program recognition, plus auction admission for two. The Friends of St. Thomas School sponsorship level is $125 and includes program recognition and auction admission for two. The deadline for sponsors is Monday, Jan. 2. To buy a sponsorship, contact Ginger Landu at 424-9204 or Ann Madeo at 253-0724. To donate auction items or to get information on tickets, contact Denise Grant at 861-5699.

inter means many things to different people.

Some see a radar image of a looming snow cloud on the morning weather report and think of the deplorable driving conditions. Others think skiing and snowboarding...and there are more of them than one might think.

In the last five years New York ski areas have seen their four best seasons. Last year alone, from November through April, the state saw more than 4 million people make their way to mountains to ski or snowboard, according to Ski Areas of New York (SANY).

The organization has represented the state's ski resorts through programs and public outreach since 1971.

With temperatures ideal for snowmaking and an early season blessing of the white stuff, mountains are reporting, that they are up and running strong.

Truthfully, everything is going very well," said SANY Executive Director Dirk Gouwens. "Most of the ski areas had a great opening weekend. Last year we had a very slow start but it came on really strong."

Despite the strong showing, Gouwens and other state agencies work overtime to keep attendance high.

"We try to let people know what is going on at the ski areas," said I Love NY spokesman Eric Scheffel. Scheffel and his staff publish a weekly ski report posted on iloveny.com.

Winter in New York is a time for recreation, he said, although both winter and summer are great for the winter months, ski areas offer a variety of activities, from tubing to cross-country skiing, to hiking and snowmobiling. However, SANY

Some of the state's success can be attributed to man's struggle against nature. In the fight to maintain thick snew bases and sufficient grooming, ski areas have but Mother Nature out of the equation. Many mountains have vast snowmaking capabilities and have mearly eliminated the need for natural snow, said Gouwens. They only require temperatures below freezing.

In 1978, New York had 117 ski areas. That number has since decreased to 52. That's still a surprisingly high number, and makes New York one of the more competitive ski vacation states, Gouwens said.

However, Colorado draws a majority of its skiers from out of state, leaving New York and California to vie for the top two seats for highest per capita of skiers in their respective states. The Eagles defeated Saratoga been playing well defensively for Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake in a 54week to record their first two Suburban Council victories.

"We're happy with our offensive improvements, and we just played our best defensive game of the season against Burnt Hills,' said head coach Jeremy Klugman.

Guard Kevin Stempsey helped Bethlehem (2-1 league, 2-3 overall) pull out both wins, but he didn't have to carry the team by himself. Stempsey scored a season-high 34 points in last Tuesday's 72-63 victory over Saratoga and got help from Bill Yates and Craig Orner, who added 12 points each. In last Friday's 57-45 victory over Burnt Hills, Stempsey had 25 points and Yates added 10 points.

Klugman said he's pleased to see consistent contributions from Yates, a senior forward making his varsity basketball debut.

"He really stepped it up in practice, and we had no choice but to start him after his performance in the Averill Park game (a 53-41 loss Dec. 6)," Klugman said of Yates, who has scored at least 10 points in each of his first three Suburban Council games.

Klugman has also been happy with his other low-post players, Orner and John O'Brien-Carelli.

"John O'Brien-Carelli has really stepped it up with his lowpost scoring, and Craig Orner has Bethlehem has two tough games before entering the holiday break. After traveling to Niskayuna (3-0, 4-1) Tuesday, the Eagles host Colonie (3-0, 4-1) Thursday at their temporary home, the Junior College of Albany. Bethlehem's varsity basketball teams will be using the college's gym until the floor is fixed. at the high school's lower gym.

"We realize we're not the first Suburban Council team to go a year without a home floor, but we're fortunate that the Junior College of Albany has let us use their floor," Klugman said.

Spartans pull away

The Bethlehem girls basketball team couldn't keep up with 38 loss last Friday."

The Lady Eagles (1-2, 2-3) were within five points of the Spartans entering the fourth quarter. But the defending Section II, Class A champs from Burnt Hills outscored Bethlehem 20-8 in the fourth quarter to seal the victory.

Sarah Morton had 19 points to lead Burnt Hills, while Julie Hooper and Leah Gillham each scored eight points to pace Bethlehem.

"The key is Sarah Morton is a very good player, and their coach (George Dudas) is a very good coach. There's no shame in losing to them," said Bethlehem coach Mark Nealon.

The coach is different, but the results are the same

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk wrestling team keeps on winning.

The Indians had six individual champions and 13 wrestlers place in the top six of their weight classes to win last Saturday's Lee Van Slyke Memorial Tournament in Burnt Hills.

"We had all 13 guys place in the top six. What more can you ask for?" said Henry Mormile.

Middleweights Nate Graham and Dillon Ruxton each had bigvictories in the championship round. Graham shut out Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake's Trevor Flynn 4-0 to win the 160-pound division title, while Ruxton edged the Spartans' Casey Leahy 2-1 in the 171-pound finals.

Andy Lyman (96), Emmanuel Hernandez (112), Tyler Lane (130) and George LaMountain (135) also won their champion-who claimed the team title with a convincing 240-203 margin over runner-up Peru.

Saturday's victory is the latest in a string of strong performances for RCS. The Indians are undefeated in Colonial Council matches and finished with a 2-3 record at the Northeast Duals ---a tournament featuring powerful large-school teams from eastern New York and western Massachusetts.

Having Mormile take over the program from Matt Stein was a help for RCS. Mormile has been involved in the program for several years as an assistant for Stein and, prior to that, John Vishneowski.

"The kids have adapted very well," Mormile said. "I've been in the program and in the (training) room forever, and the kids knewthe philosophies would be the same (from what they were used to with Stein)."

The Indians are hoping to

Sullivan earns honor

Clayton A. Bouton High School graduate Erin Sullivan was recently named the National Soccer Coaches Association of America NCAA Division III New England Coach of the Year. Sullivan, a member of the 1990 state champion Voorheesville boys soccer team, guided Western New England College to a 21-3 record and the Great Northeast Athletic Conference regular season title. The Golden Bears reached the third round of the NCAA Division III tournament and was ranked 12th nationally. I am incredibly honored and humbled to receive this award," said Sullivan. "I owe sincere thanks to my peer coaches for this recognition and to my players for their character and performance this season. Most of all, I owe a debt of gratitude to my coaching mentors throughout the Northeast who have provided me with immeasurable guidance and support during my development.

Sullivan owns a 75-45-11 career record as a coach.

A river rat gets his game back

By ROB JONAS

I've been working on my rhymes for a while (songwriting will do that to a person), so I figured I'd try my hand at some holiday prose this week. I'm sure that within the first sentence, you will realize which Christmas clarity's sake, it's basically my version of "Twas the Night Before Christmas." Enjoy, and happy holidays.

It was Christmas Eve. and all rubber discs into his stick throughout Albany

Nobody was stirring except darted to the zone quick for a rat named Rowdy He'd spent the past hour lying and then a third in bed

With thoughts of hockey might have killed a bird dancing through his head team's faithful mascot Now he was wondering what in other talents he's got He began to think back to his at the empty net teen years in Fort Edward Playing river hockey and drinking hot chocolate at Stewart's this rusty moves he used to make play hockey?" opponents shudder in their someone laughing skates. He could move like Mario sound be coming? and score like Gretzky And fight like Bobby Clarke darkened stands if need be "I wonder if I still have it," the laughing man

Rowdy said aloud

There was only one way for him to find out

So he got dressed and crept into the arena at midnight When the ice was fresh and the guards were out of sight set up the goal and dumped them out slow Skated to the red line and

He made one cut, two cuts

Before launching a shot that "I saw the plight you're in,

Rowdy got another puck and So I found this hockey stick For years, he'd been the tried again But his shots weren't going glowing in, and he started to fret Rowdy started seeing the Why did I think I could still should have a helmet on your Rowdy finally decided it The ones that made his That's when he heard Rowdy touched the hockey Because he got what he Frantically trying to pick out eye

"Who's that?" he asked. "How curve — give it a try." long have you been here?" "Ho, ho, ho," was the only response Rowdy could hear As the laughing man drew closer, Rowdy began to shiver "If I'm discovered, I'll classic I'm ripping off here, but for He stepped onto the ice and probably be sent back up the river"

> Grabbed the bucket of pucks Finally, a shadow emerged from the Zamboni bay

> Rowdy gathered one of the He wore a red snowsuit and was woefully out of shape

"I'm sorry to intrude, but I thought you were asleep `

"I have more deliveries to make, so I'll be brief and I wanted to help you that I want to give you" But it came no closer to going The stranger reached into a large sack he was holding He kept shooting for an hour And pulled out a brand new Because he kept wondering "This should help you with "Man, I didn't think I'd be your accuracy," the man said "And by the way, you really head." stick — it felt like any other _ desired But from where could the So he asked, "Does this have He learned he could still play a magical power?" Rowdy looked around the The stranger laughed again And that meant more to him "Nah, the blade's got a better

So Rowdy skated back and tried a shot from the blue line Wouldn't you know, it went in for the first time

Rowdy tried a few more shots from different spots on the ice They all went in the goal with a "thwap" that sounded nice Rowdy beamed with delight, he knew he was on his way "This is perfect! Thanks pal," he wanted to say

But before Rowdy could get the words out, the stranger was gone

So he kept on shooting until it was almost dawn

When he was done, Rowdy walked back to his home

Placed the new stick beside the bed and laid down He still couldn't sleep, though he tried with all his might stick that seemed to be about the stranger he met that night How did he get past security And how did he know what he needed? didn't matter
