Celebrate spring in Delmar

Spring is a time to put away the heavy clothes, to enjoy the warm sunshine and sit out on the outdoor patio and look at all the bright colors around you. It's also a good time to see your old friends again and meet some new ones at this year's Springfest at the Four Corners in Delmar.

Higher technology means less distance for airlines

By GRAHAM S. PARKER

The air trip from New York to Los Angeles is marked by a series of accelerations, decelerations, changes in altitude and direction.

From the perspective of the airline passenger, the glaciers remain in the north and the deserts to the south. But from the ground, the aircraft's route is cluttered and inefficient. It often shifts miles off course. Yet, all pilots must follow these flight paths.

It's not so much about the shortest distance between two points, but the safest.

Over the last five years, the Federal Aviation Administration has been developing a system to do away with the 1940's era technology that is to blame for these peculiar routes. And in doing so, to fly the safest and most efficient routes possible.

Creating a new system has Middle school teacher makes a difference

By JIM CUOZZO

He sends his students off to the Middle Ages to learn about Vikings, Holy Wars, Byzantine empires and Egyptian tombs while at the same time creating a "global coalition" to help poor children in far away lands.

He is archeologist, Web master and Bethlehem Central Middle School Teacher Bill Reilly, who has been chosen from more than 75,000 nominees as one of 44 teachers across the nation to be honored with the Disney Teacher Award.

"You get 140 kids every year to teach, and if you can inspire them, maybe our world will be better," said Reilly, who will receive $10,000 from Disney and get to spend a week at Disneyland Resort in Anaheim, Calif., for his achievements. Reilly's role in creating a "global coalition" that connects more than 300 students in 20 schools representing every region of the world is the project that is turning heads in the classroom.

"My students use classroom computers to talk with children in Russia and Argentina and exchange packages of letters, holiday cards and peace banners with schools across the world to express our cultural views," said Reilly.

Seventh grade students Eirinn Norrie and Emily Borst nominated Reilly for the Disney distinction last year after hearing an announcement over the school's public address system about the Police veteran dies

Detective Arduini suffers aneurysm outside home

By JIM CUOZZO

Detective Anthony Arduini, a 30-year veteran of the Bethlehem Police Department died Thursday, May 11, at Albany Medical Center after suffering a major brain bleed or aneurysm. He was taking a walk outside his home after work when he was stricken.

The news of Arduini's death is hitting the police department hard. He is the second detective who has succumbed to illness in the last several weeks. Detective John R. Cox Sr. died at the end of March following a long battle with cancer.

"It's bad enough to suffer one loss but the department has suffered two losses in a very short period of time," said Supervisor Theresa Egan. "The loss and suddenness of this is what everyone is trying to deal with."

Arduini was known as an officer who was very dedicated to his profession and someone who was well known in the law enforcement community, according to Bethlehem Police Chief Lou Corsi. He had served as detective for the past five years.

"He was an old-fashioned cop who loved to go out and knock on doors and shake hands and talk to people," Corsi said. "You don't see that too much anymore." Arduini was forever making friends according to the chief, and was a decent, proud

Drug bust yields several arrests in Ravena and Selkirk

A four month investigation by the Albany County Sheriff's Department Drug Interdiction Unit and the Coxsackie Police Department has resulted in the arrests of nine people from the Ravena, Coeymans and Selkirk area of Albany County and the Coxsackie area of Green County on drug sale and possession charges.

Jamar Perez, 21 and his brother James Perez, 22, of 13 Church Street, Coeymans were charged with criminal sale of controlled substance. Robert Hughes, 18, of 8 Willowbrook Avenue Selkirk, Rowland Hollins, 26, of Coxsackie, and Brendin Tucker, 21 of Ravena were charged with criminal sale of controlled substance. Joseph Hunter, 47 and Patrick Quinlivan, 33, both of 286 Copeland Hill Road, Coeymans Hollow were charged with felony possession and criminal sale of controlled substance.

Officer's were alerted to the drug trafficking from a group of concerned citizens in the Ravena, Coeymans, Selkirk region who noticed a constant flow of traffic from the individual's residence along 13 Church Street and 108 Main Street in Coeymans. Officers discovered in excess of 36 grams of crack cocaine and more than 100 marijuana plants. Street value of drugs seized was valued at $30,000. All were arraigned and sent to Albany County jail without bail.

DWI blanket patrol nabs 28 in Albany County

A DWI Blanket Patrol conducted by several Albany County Police Agencies stopped over 600 motorists with 28 of them being charged with drunk driving. The Blanket Patrol was conducted between the hours of 8 p.m. Friday, May 5, and 5 a.m., Sunday, May 7. It was the 52nd countywide DWI Blanket Patrol conducted throughout Albany County and eleven municipal police departments along with the Albany County Sheriff's Department and the New York State Police participated.

Overall there were 637 traffic stops, 28 DWI's, 4 people charged with driving while ability impaired, 54 designated drivers, and 19 charged with aggravated unlicensed operation. The average blood alcohol content for DWI arrests was .12%.

The previous patrol on March 17-19, resulted in 29 individuals being arrested for drugged or drunk driving. The Albany County STOP-DWI Blanket Patrols began in 1989.

Bethlehem Police charge teen following hit-and-run accident in Glenmont

*Craig James Vrooman, 18, of 19 Oakwood Road, Glenmont was charged with leaving the scene of a personal injury accident, DWI, and driving with more than .08 blood alcohol content.

Bethlehem Police report that on Friday, May 5, Vrooman was involved in a hit-and-run accident along Route 9W near Route 294. Officers received a description of the suspect from eyewitnesses at the scene then contacted the owner of the vehicle. The owner stated his son had the car. When officers found Vrooman he had a strong odor of alcohol on his breath. He also failed a sobriety test and was charged. He will appear in Town Court May 16.

*Henry V. Voorhees, 76, of 49 Union Ave., Slingerlands, was charged with leaving the scene of an accident, DWI, and driving with more than .08 blood alcohol content. Bethlehem Police report that Voorhees was leaving the Delmar Marketplace around 5 p.m., May 5 when the vehicle he was driving struck a parked car. When police arrived at Voorhees home he told authorities he left the scene because he did not believe there was any damage to the vehicle. Officers then noted a strong odor of alcohol and subsequently charged him with DWI. He will appear in Town Court May 16, to respond to the charges.

*David Jeldseth Nelson, 37, of 471 Second St. in Albany, was charged with burglary and criminal mischief. Police report Nelson tried to break into a residence along Herber Avenue on the afternoon of May 10. A person inside the home stated she heard the doorbell ring but did not answer. Shortly afterwards she went into the kitchen and noticed a man in her yard. She then told police the next thing she heard was a loud banging on her garage door. The victim then exited the home and contacted police. Nelson was observed along Elsmere Avenue and the witness identified Nelson as the burglar. Nelson was charged and sent to Albany County jail without bail.

*Christopher Schell, 18, of Pine Tree Drive, Delmar was charged with operating a motor vehicle impaired by drugs, operating a motor vehicle intoxicated and unsafe start. Police report that Schell was stopped along Feura Bush Road on May 7, when his vehicle began to stop and start suddenly screeching tires causing the engine to smoke. Police noticed drug paraphernalia inside the vehicle. Schell will appear in Town Court at a later date.

NY deli finds home in market

Price Chopper opens Ben and Bill's New York Deli in Slingerlands store

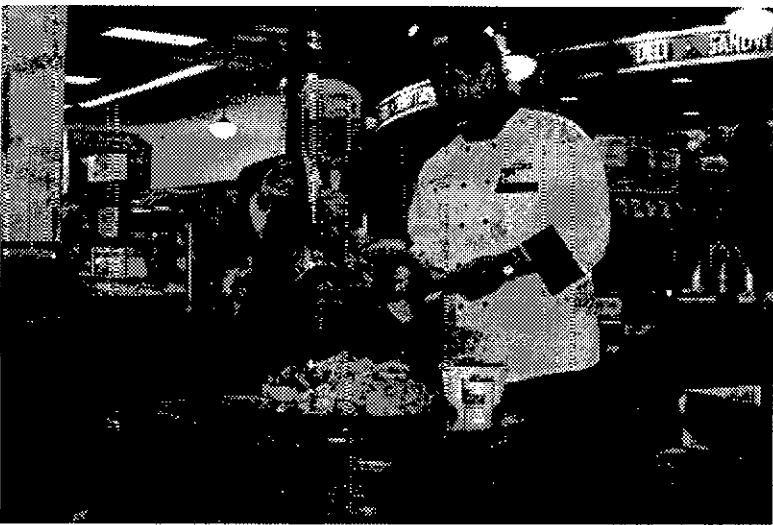

By JIM CUOZZO

The triple-decker sandwich is back and has found a home inside the 10,000 square foot addition of the Slingerlands Price Chopper.

The grand opening of Ben and Bill's New York Deli, a classic throwback to the days of Joe's deli in Albany, is a tribute to brothers Ben and Bill Golub. In 1932, the brothers created Central Markets from Golub's Wholesale food warehouse. In 1973, Central Markets became Price Chopper and is now a chain of 114 stores.

"This is our way of recognizing them for what they did," said Neil Golub, president and CEO who unveiled Ben and Bill's Deli along with Mona Golub, vice president of public relations and consumer services and Dave Hamlin, corporation executive chef. "Joe's was home to the triple-decker sandwiches," said Neil Golub. "We wanted to bring back to the area something that was really very special."

Every sandwich is made from scratch, including the rye bread, the pastrami, the roast beef and the pickle. The menu includes Joe's famous "Londoner" with roast beef, fresh horseradish, lettuce, tomato and Russian dressing; the "Vincentian" with corned beef, swiss cheese and the trimmings, along with 17 other triple deckers. There's potato knish and pancakes, plus an array of whitefish salads and Carnegie Deli cheesecakes and more. The deli is also home to the home-baked "Slingerlands Potato Chip" to go with your sandwich and the "Woody Allen," a monster sandwich of hot corned beef and pastrami.

"This is done from scratch and everything you do has to be the best," said Golub. Hamlin has been working on the sandwich creations for over a year. "We are trying to bring back the deli and the quality product of the famous New York delis," Hamlin said. The deli will be open seven days a week and deli hours are Monday through Thursday, 10:30 a.m. to 8 p.m., Friday, 10:30 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday, 7:30 a.m. to 9 p.m.

"The staff is very excited, and many of them have come to us with a great deal of deli experience," said Mona Golub. Although the Slingerlands Price Chopper is the only store with a New York style deli, store officials said more Ben and Bill's could be on the way.

BCHS students spread depression awareness

Create artwork, literature to mark Mental Health Awareness Week

By JIM CUOZZO

More than 22 percent of children who attend middle schools across the country think about suicide.

The percentages are nearly the same for high school students.

The week of May 7 to 13 was Mental Health Awareness Week. A creative and proactive program to mark the week involved students at Bethlehem Central High School who designed posters and bookmarks to help their friends learn the first signs of depression.

"When you see the posters, they are powerful," said Rita Levay, director of pupil personnel for the district.

The posters and bookmarks explain what to do when a friend is depressed, what depression is, and why people need to get help. "Students are helping other students, and friends are sharing with friends," said Levay. "Getting help means things will be better for their friends." The message and artwork is so powerful that RPI wants to use the bookmarks and posters campus-wide.

"The posters are eye catching and creative," said Dr. Joseph Albert, director of the RPI Counseling Center. "They are wonderful bookmarks, and we are going to use them with our own efforts here at RPI."

Rensselaer is one of 22 colleges and universities across the land awarded a federal grant to reduce suicide risk on campus. "Part of our grant money will be used to reproduce the bookmarks for our staff and student population," said Albert.

Suicide risk is actually greater at the middle and high school level than at the college level, said Albert.

"Kids react differently to depression than adults do," Levay said. "The depressed student has a different body chemistry and can often look angry," she said.

Many depressed students compound the problem by self medicating or using drugs and alcohol. "That's a further depression," said Levay.

Posters and bookmarks designed by students of Bethlehem High School indicate where students can go for help from depression. Students created literature to mark Mental Health Awareness Week.

Once a student is diagnosed with depression an off campus intervention program begins.

"The difference between the Bethlehem School District and others is that we work together on this issue," said Levay. The school may face the need for increased work following the recent death of a student, about which district officials had no comment.

The Bethlehem Mental Health Task Force is another excellent vehicle for help, said Levay and Albert.

Parents are usually stunned their son or daughter has ever contemplated suicide.

"Very often you get a couple of different reactions," said Levay. "They may not have had any warning."

Throughout the month of May, the district will continue the Mental Health Awareness program with guest speakers and peer helpers wearing green ribbons in recognition of the issue. The next presentation on this issue will take place May 18, at the high school's library media center at 7 p.m. "We had a presentation two years ago on the subject of depression and 250 people showed up," Levay said. "Parents really want to know what the signs and symptoms are."

"The work Rita and her group are doing is very impressive," said Albert. "They are reaching so many kids now."

sunshine and sit out on the outdoor patio and look at all the bright colors around you. It's also a good time to see your old friends again and meet some new ones at this year's Springfest at the Four Corners in Delmar.

Springfest 2006 will take place Saturday, May 20, from noon to 6 p.m. with live music, sidewalk sales and many activities for the children including pony rides, face painting and clowns. Roberta Bastow, owner of Perfect Blend café said the idea of 'Springfest' began when Feestelijk, another Delmar community spring event, was no longer held.

"As a business person in the community and someone who appreciates music, I didn't want to see the event die," said Bastow. Since Perfect Blend holds numerous open mics and musical events throughout the year, Bastow drew upon her musician friends to bring Springfest to life. "I appreciate all the musicians that play here and help out along with the local business," Bastow said.

John Guastella, owner of Our Towne publications and a Springfest organizer, said the idea behind the event is two fold. "We want to welcome in spring to this great community, and we want to drive business to the Four Corners in Delmar to keep business in the town of Bethlehem," Guastella said.

This year's daytime musical venues will be held at two locations, First United Methodist Church and Delmar Reformed Church. Entertainment will continue through the evening as well after Springfest hours are over, with Perfect Blend, Beff's, Four Corners Luncheonette and My Place and Co., offering entertainment.

Bastow lives in Glenmont and has owned Perfect Blend for three years. Her children are enrolled in the Bethlehem School District and after working for many years in the banking industry, the café and events like Springfest give her a greater sense of community.

"Community is very important to me," Bastow said. "I like being a part of the community, relaxing, and enjoying music and meeting with friends," she said.

Their will be plenty of parking for visitors and Bethlehem Police will assist with pedestrian and traffic patrol. It is Bastow's hope that Springfest and other seasonal events will continue in the Delmar community.

"We normally hold three events a year, in the spring, fall and Christmas," Bastow said. The next event at the Four Corners will be held in October.

Clutter is the monster that surrounds my world

Clutter is keeping me up at night. I can't sleep because it is closing in on me.

Even in the dark I see it. I know it's there.

There's a pile of papers under the bed.

Did I remember to put the papers inside the under-bed storage box my husband bought for me? I reach down and find that I did not.

The papers are still there, loose, messy, and disorganized, and so close that I barely have to reach past the dust ruffle to touch them. The empty storage box is down there too.

Clutter is the monster under my bed. Clutter is also the monster on my dresser, my kitchen counters, my dining room table, and the half-wall behind the family room couch.

During the day I cannot get motivated to address the problem. But at night, when I'm too tired to clean, I think about the mess, and it keeps me from drifting off to sleep.

Several years ago I was on my way to a "de-clutter and de-stress your life" class. I stopped first to return a purchase at a department store and I kept the empty plastic bags.

I realized the bags would just add to my clutter, but they were extra-large, strong plastic bags that would be great for storing comforters or laying out in the trunk to protect other items from getting dirty. I knew the sales clerk would just throw the bags away and they still had so much functional life left. So I folded up the bags and put them in my trunk.

I'll give up saving plastic bags after the de-clutter instructor teaches me how, I thought to myself.

During the class the participants took turns asking for guidance on their clutter weaknesses. The instructor was unsympathetic. It was a tough-love type of session.

"What about keeping old socks for a potential rainy-day puppet-making project with your child and several of her friends?" I asked.

The instructor regarded me with disdain. She said socks are inexpensive. She told me she would buy clean, new socks for a puppet-making party.

But what about recycling, I thought to myself. And what about spur-of-the-moment crafts when you can't get to the store?

And isn't there a difference between old, worn socks that have been laundered and dirty socks newly removed from sweaty feet? Is there no middle ground?

Actually, she was right. Years have passed and the bag of old socks is still in residence. The socks wait patiently for the day they might be decorated with button eyes and yarn hair, slipped over a child's hand, and engaged in a conversation.

I kept the sock clutter, but I did implement some of the other tips I learned.

For example, when I got home that night, the first thing I did was throw out the sheet from class listing tips on how to de-clutter. I figured the instructor only provided the sheet as a test.

One of the tips I found most helpful was to deal with the mail right away. Sometimes I walk from the mailbox directly to the den. I toss all the junk mail into the paper-recycling box and put the bills on my husband's desk.

Immediate mail handling is relatively simple, but what about the next clutter-control tip: Every time you bring something new into your home, something of equal size has to go out. So, if you buy a new sweater, you need to give away or throw out an old sweater, or you must get rid of an item or group of items that are the same size as the new sweater. That way the net increase of items is zero.

Sounds good in theory, but this tip is flawed by its subjective nature. For example, if your child gets a new medium-sized toy, how many old Happy Meal prizes have to move out? Does the outgoing item have to belong to the person receiving the incoming item? How do you measure "size"? Is it surface area? Does the item's weight have to be factored in?

For this tip to work in my family, we'd need to apply the rule in reverse: Nothing new comes into the house until an existing item is removed.

The problem here is that hardly anything leaves this place.

It's my fault. Clutter genes were passed down to me by my parents. The tendency to be messy came from my father, whereas my mother gave me the inclination to save things "because you might someday need them."

Years ago I had a blow dryer that routinely gave off sparks while I was drying my hair. My husband deemed the appliance dangerous and bought me a new one. "I'm going to throw this old one out now," Jeff said, slowly backing out of the room.

"But it still works," I protested, "I might need it if the new one breaks down unexpectedly."

I ignored Jeff's response that my hair might catch on fire. "And I want to keep the box from the new dryer, too," I continued, "so just put the old dryer in the new box."

He humored me and kept the old dryer. He simply stored it in up in our condo's attic.

When we moved from the condo to our house we took tons of stuff from the attic. His stuff was all usable items - camping equipment, photography equipment, tools. My stuff was papers, papers and more papers, and the old hair dryer.

Papers are my main weakness. Well, papers and photographs. Make that, papers and photographs and sturdy plastic bags. And also receipts. Receipts are forever. Even when you return an item you get a receipt.

Some clutter is waiting for attention and action: the homework papers, the field-trip permission slips, picture order forms, camp registration packets, yearbook order forms, birthday party RSVP information, and film to be brought in for developing.

There are also coupons, catalogs, newspaper articles, Post-It notes with to-do lists, scraps of paper with jotted-down phone numbers, and recipes printed off the Internet.

Some clutter is just nostalgia: recital program booklets, science fair certificates, photographs of family, photographs of friends' kids, art projects, birthday cards, holiday cards, and even thank-you cards with hand-written words that touch our hearts.

"Do you have anything to say about clutter?" I asked my 9-year-old daughter. She paused and smiled broadly, replying, "Clutter is my mascot!"

Clearly, she's got my clutter gene.

"Don't throw that out," she yells when I touch anything in her room. That includes clean, unused tissues that have been fashioned into little pillows for tiny stuffed animals; clothing tags with interesting designs; rocks; and any piece of paper, no matter how small, folded, or crumpled, with or without writing or artwork.

Rachel gets overwhelmed when I tell her to clean her room. She saves everything and doesn't know where to store her belongings. I encourage her to figure out where to keep things and to put stuff away rather than let it pile up.

Unfortunately, I don't set a great example. The clutter gremlins take over my dresser within 24 hours of being cleaned off.

Clutter is difficult to eliminate, but it's easy to hide.

The fastest way to reduce clutter is to invite company over. Like magic, your clutter disappears, at least from the most visible parts of your home.

Unfortunately, after I "clean" for company, it's hard to get a good night's sleep. After all, the best place to hide clutter is under the bed.

From the tiniest hearts
to the young at heart

Last year, more than 9,000 children and adults were treated at Albany Medical Center for comprehensive heart care.

The hospital that knows how to mend a baby's heart can also keep grown-ups on the go. From open heart surgery for children to the most comprehensive adult heart care in the region, the physicians and professional staff at Albany Medical Center make a difference in the lives of so many.*

For experience, range of service and quality of care ... it matters which hospital you choose.

Killings not the answer

Disturb a twig in a wetland and you're almost certainly doomed to failure.

Just ask about any developer in the region and you'll hear about projects that were doomed from the start because a wetland was somewhere on the property.

Surely the intent of protecting wetlands is laudable, but determining anything larger than a puddle as a wetland is a stretch.

The wetland issue is yet another tool for Nimbys (not in my back yard) to fight against almost any kind of development.

The desire to protect undeveloped land is a positive, but reason and common sense should prevail.

The village of Scotia is defying reason and common sense with its board and supervisor's blessing to destroy almost 200 Canadian geese at Collins Park. This is despite the testimony of experts who say killing them won't solve and rather intensify the "problem."

The village has determined to capture and euthanize the birds by gassing them. The innocent creatures' carcasses will then be buried, leaving not a trace that they ever existed. This all-out slaughter is not a solution but a symptom of an inability to listen.

The "problem" stems from the E.coli the birds contribute to Collins Lake. Last year, E.coli levels were determined to be too high and swimming was banned for the season. What, in effect, that meant was an entire season went by and nothing was done to address the geese problem.

So the birds are now destined to die. We would hope that there is still time to reconsider this decision. It simply makes no sense to take such drastic action, when there are humane ways to get rid of the geese.

Environmental issues like global warming and preservation of open space are getting more attention of late. Should we really try to solve an environmental problem by such severe measures that some predict will have little or no effect on ridding the lake of the geese?

We hope not.

Let reason prevail and save these creatures from an unnecessary demise. Man has already destroyed too many of nature's treasures. All too soon children will have nothing but pictures to show wildlife species, and that is truly a shame.

We'd like to think we won't be remembered in history as terminators or eliminators of the natural world.

Let us rather be its champions for a change and protect our feathered friends.

Bikes, bananas and five boroughs

By TIM MULLIGAN

The writer is managing editor of Spotlight Newspapers.

Forty two miles.

A distance equivalent of a trip from Gunderland to Malta and back.

On a bike.

That's The Five Boro Bike Tour in New York City.

Held every year during the first week of May, the event is not a race. It's a 42-mile traffic-free go-at-your-own pace ride through the streets, highways and bridges of one of the greatest cities in the world.

More than 30,000 cyclists participated on May 7 this year, and I am proud to say I was one of them.

A few years ago, my brother and I were discussing a week I'd spent in New York City training for a job with the Bank of New York. My brother mentioned that he had just completed the Five Boro Bike Tour, a great way to see the city.

I believed him, so I said, "Yes. I'm in next year."

Three years later, I finally came through. I moved back to my hometown of Troy in October and was spending more time around family, and most important, my brother.

I am really more of a runner than a cyclist. I try to get outside and run three miles two to three times a week from early March to late November. But so far this year, the longest run I've completed was 3 miles in early April; the longest I'd ever ridden on a bike was 26 miles. That left me feeling worried about 42. Serious concern came after I went online to find the ratio of miles running to miles biking. I thought it had to be 10:1, or at the very least 7:1. Not even close. Final answer: 3:1. I asked myself, "How am I going to be able to bike 42 miles?"

A week before the tour, I went to the Mohawk-Hudson Bike-Hike trail with the family group slated for the tour: my aunt, uncle, brother and sister-in-law. Our plan for 20 miles ended up as 10 as my uncle's chain broke and I got a flat tire. Already signed up for the New York event, I told myself I'd just have to do it without much training.

On May 6, I put two new tires and a water bottle on the Trek Jazz Latitude mountain bike that a college friend gave me in '95, and was off to New York City. There is only one rule for the Five Boro Bike Tour: riders must wear helmets. I made sure I had mine.

Sunday morning, ride day, the Newark hotel alarm went off at 5:30 a.m. Decked out in a sporty cycling outfit, padded shorts and a tight bright yellow shirt, I felt a little awkward. I said to my aunt, "Wearing this cycling outfit makes me think of Halloween. It feels weird until you get to the party and then you fit right in."

The ride, America's largest recreational cycling event, takes cyclists through Manhattan, the Bronx, Queens, Brooklyn and Staten Island. The tour starts downtown in Battery Park and ends on the Staten Island ferry back to Manhattan. Sponsored by Bike New York, New York City Department of Transportation and Con Edison, the event runs from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. There are six rest areas, and riders can stop any time. Tour shortcuts — some mandatory, some optional — are built in and support and gear trucks are always ready to pick up riders.

We took the Staten Island ferry first to avoid waiting in line after the long trek. It was great to see the Statue of Liberty up close; add her to the list for the next trip.

In Manhattan, the massive amount of cyclists lined up to start on Church Street, in the shadow of Trinity Church.

There was a chill in the air as temperatures were still in the 50s. As cyclists waited, thunderous cheers of anticipation waved through the 30,000 riders like a fast-moving summer storm on a humid day.

As we started to pedal, bursts of sunlight popped out between the tall buildings and warmed us.

From Church Street, we turned onto the Avenue of the Americas toward Central Park. We passed Ground Zero, Radio City Music Hall and my Bank of New York building. I couldn't believe I was riding my bike through the streets of New York City. Picturesque Central Park bustled with runners and walkers as the trees swayed in the wind.

After Central Park, we headed to the Bronx via the Madison Avenue Bridge at 138th Street. The 1-mile stretch in the Bronx is the shortest portion of the tour.

Then, back to Manhattan via the Third Avenue Bridge. We rode another six miles via the FDR Drive and came to The Queensboro Bridge.

This was particularly significant for me because I have a fear of heights. To beat fears you have to face them head on is what I told myself when I signed up for the event.

The bridge was around mile 18. I suggested we make a quick stop as my left leg was starting to cramp up. I wanted to drink some water, eat a banana, but mostly, psych myself up for the big ride over the bridge.

Ascending the ramp of the bridge, I was relieved to see it was under construction with long lines of tubing just above the sidewalk blocking the line of sight over the edge of the bridge. That was just the comfort I needed to make it over the East River and into Queens.

As we came upon mile 21 — halfway to the finish line — we hit the first rest stop, the Con Edison Learning Center in Queens. We refueled with free bananas, oranges, and water. It was surreal to wait to use the port-a-potty, and see the Empire State and Chrysler buildings as the backdrop to 150 portable johns.

After 45 minutes, we cycled to Brooklyn via the Pulaski Bridge. At this point we all felt good. My cramping had disappeared, and I was ready for the most difficult part of the tour, according to my brother, the Brooklyn-Queens Expressway and the Verazanno-Narrows Bridge, a gradual incline over about 10 miles, and then a steep hill to get onto the 6,690-foot bridge.

My sister-in-law led the group — too fast for me. My brother was kind enough to stay with me at my own speed.

Still, my legs were burning and my arms and shoulders were getting tired. This stretch was exhausting. Just before the bridge, about mile 37, my legs were cramping up to a point where I wanted to collapse.

A stop, a banana, a Snickers bar and some vitamin flavored water diminished the cramping a bit and my uncle advised not to hang out too long or the cramping would get worse. Get back on that bike? I wanted to vomit.

To ease my pain, they told me once I was at the crest of the bridge, about another mile, I would be home free — it was all downhill from there.

A few very short minutes later, I reluctantly climbed back on my bike and at a very slow pace (remember it's not a race), and made it over the bridge. My brother and uncle were there to support me.

On the other side of the bridge was the 'unofficial' finish line and festival at Fort Wadsworth in Staten Island. We pulled in at 2:30 p.m. Here you can meet up with friends and family, enjoy live music, grab a bite to eat, get a massage, sign-up for other bike events or just relax. I chose the latter and picked up a T-shirt. We still had four miles to pedal to the finish line.

The final portion seemed like a Sunday ride in the park after the challenging Brooklyn portion of the tour. As we pulled up to our cars I joked and said, 'I've got to win this thing.' My uncle and I sprinted to the cars — he got there first. Oh well. Coming in second is not that bad after cycling 42 miles and seeing one of the greatest cities in the world.

I can't wait to do it again next year.

Parents of BCHS seniors are asked to stay away

Editor, The Spotlight:

For some unknown reason, graduating high school seniors prefer not to have their parents present at their all-night celebration that is held at the high school.

The seniors have, however, been allowing their parents to spend months in preparation for this fantastic event, but it is reported that they will not let them share in the actual festivities.

"How rude!" said one disappointed party volunteer.

A crack reporter uncovered what is rumored to possibly be the truth behind this outrageous affront of these wonderful, hard working and loving parents.

It seems that it all began many years ago when one senior parent, who was kindly chaperoning the celebration, actually had the audacity to ... gasp ... dance in front of everyone at the party ... including her grad!

The scandal was the talk of Bethlehem for weeks, and the grad had to endure college in Hawaii in order to escape the shame of it all.

Alas, ever since that unfortunate incident the parents of BCHS juniors have been asked to volunteer to staff the senior night celebration.

Another unfortunate side effect of that terrible night is that the people who recruit the volunteers have to endure extreme anxiety as they ask (beg) for people to work the early (or late) shifts. (Rumors say that the chairs of the volunteer committee often require years of therapy afterward, but it is kept very quiet so future parents aren't scared away from the post.) Miraculously, the parents of juniors always come through with flying colors!

This year, the kind people running the volunteer committee are requesting that they be spared the minty antacid tablets, and ask that junior parents step forward soon to sign up for the June 23 event.

The rewards are immeasurable and will be fully realized in 2007, as they get to sleep while their newly graduated cherub is safely celebrating...under the watchful (bloodshot) eyes of some wonderful junior parents.

For information — or to volunteer — call 439-4087! Thank you!

Audubon chief: Keep Colonial Acres golf course green

Editor, The Spotlight:

Colonial Acres Golf Course in the town of Bethlehem is on the maket. We hope this important green resource and leader in environmental stewardship can be preserved in this community, rather than developed into additional housing.

Last year, a local paper profiled Colonial Acres as an environmental gem in the golf industry — right in our own backyard. Audubon International has worked with the course for years and has recognized its environmental stewardship by certifying it as an Audubon Cooperative Sanctuary. Through our Audubon Cooperative Sanctuary Program for Golf Courses, Colonial Acres' superintendent Patrick Blum, has conducted a site assessment and prepared an environmental plan of the property and applies best practices in wildlife and habitat management, water conservation, water quality management, chemical use reduction and safety, and outreach and education.

A golf course like Colonial Acres, properly managed for good environmental stewardship, not only serves golfers, but offers a variety of habitat for birds and other wildlife. It could also provide other green space benefits to the surrounding community, such as hiking or exercise, snowshoeing or cross-country skiing in the winter, or nature walks and wildlife observation. This type of resource is especially valuable in suburban areas like the town of Bethlehem, where population expansion and development continue to diminish wildlife habitat and other open space.

Colonial Acres provides an oasis of just over 33 acres, with half forested. Under Pat Blum's leadership, it has improved wildlife habitat by converting six acres from managed turf to naturalized "no mow" areas, added berry-producing shrubs and bluebird nest boxes to increase food and cover sources for birds, built a half-acre naturalized area with fill from an irrigation pond project, and planted 50 native trees.

Colonial Acres also demonstrates that a golf course can be a good neighbor environmentally, by carefully protecting and using natural resources. Among other things, it has expanded its irrigation pond, fed entirely by rain and run-off, to provide 100 percent of its irrigation water needs; and follows a chemical use and reduction strategy that minimizes pesticides and fertilizers. Thus, the course uses much less in the way of water and chemicals than would be typical on agricultural land or residential developments of similar size.

Mr. Blum is also showing that practices protecting and enhancing the environment save resources and money, as he has stretched his shoestring maintenance budget by reducing equipment, chemical, labor and other costs. These efforts have won Colonial Acres and Mr. Blum recognition in New York and nationwide as a model for good environmental practices, garnering a Governor's Pollution Prevention Award in 2000. Chosen as the finest example of an environmentally responsible golf course in the U.S., Colonial Acres and Mr. Blum won the national Environmental Leaders in Golf Award in 2002. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency selected it as the first golf course to participate in the National Environmental Performance Track program, which recognizes top environmental performance, including preventing pollution at its source.

Audubon International urges the town of Bethlehem to do all it can to help save this model of good environmental stewardship from development and preserve Colonial Acres Golf Course's valuable green space benefits for the town and its citizens.

Thanks, community, for support

Editor, The Spotlight:

Once again, the generosity of Delmar's business people warms my heart.

On Sunday, May 7, Diane Kelly and Bea Higgins of Salon 282 at 282 Delaware Ave. opened their shop for haircuts and styling and donated all the proceeds to To Life! It is this kind of community spirit and generosity that make Delmar such a great place to be. The funds raised will directly support To Life's breast cancer education and support services available to anyone in the 10 counties of the Capital District.

Thank you, everyone who stopped by on Sunday and thank you, Diane and Bea. Good luck in your new shop!

Church seeks peaceful co-existence with skateboarders

Editor, The Spotlight:

We, the members of the Consistory (the leadership group) of the Delmar Reformed Church write this letter to address what we perceive is a growing problem in the town of Bethlehem.

Located as we are in the Four Corners area of our beautiful community, we have been inundated with skateboarders and other teens who "hang out" in our neighborhood in growing numbers. We have no complaint against youth who wish to enjoy the activities and camaraderie of skateboarding. In fact, we have tried to maintain a peaceful coexistence with them by allowing them to use our parking lot for their fun.

We have been alarmed, however, by a growing disrespect for our property, and for the people who use our facilities. Skateboarders have damaged our property (which they used without permission) and vandalized our buildings, fences and dumpsters with graffiti.

Our senior pastor recently had to break up a fistfight that broke out among the teens who gathered in our parking lot behind his parsonage (located next to our church building). Foul language and rude behavior have often greeted many of our members and guests who meet in our facilities. Our peaceful co-existence is not so peaceful.

We could prohibit them from coming on our property, but that runs contrary to our belief that a church should be a welcoming place for all people. Besides, if we prevent them from using our place, we know they will just move on to other locations in town; the problem will still exist and the animosity will only increase between the teens and our townspeople. We are searching for a more adequate solution to this "problem."

We encourage parents of these youth, our town and school leaders, local businesses, the police department, civic groups and other churches to come together to address this situation with a constructive spirit of cooperation. We offer our services and resources for the dialogue that we feel must take place in order to come up with a workable solution for all involved. Specifically, we advocate for our community's consideration:

- An enforced curfew for youth after 11 p.m.
- A "no-skateboarding" zone in the Four Corners area of Delmar.
- A skateboard park for the Bethlehem youth

We hope that in the future there will be a way in which our youth can take pleasure in each other's company, while we in the town can once again enjoy the charm of our wonderful community. Whatever Delmar Reformed Church can do to help us move toward such a solution is hereby offered to all as a starting point. Please contact us (439-9929) and be a creative part in the solution!

Town officials concerned about deficit Soap Box Derby returns to area

By JIM CUOZZO

Although Bethlehem's town fund balance is two times the state recommended figure, officials continue to prepare for potential future deficits. Town Comptroller Judith Kehoe outlined the town's 2005 end of year fiscal report to the board showing an end of year fund balance at $5 million in an overall $16.58 million budget. However, the report also shows a $747,000 end of year deficit in the town's general fund that has officials concerned.

"Last year was the first year we had to draw funds down," said supervisor Theresa Egan. "The fund balance is good, but a deficit is looming," she said.

The town's highway fund is another area of concern even though that fund ended with a surplus of $347,000. "The highway department took a significant drop when Niagara Mohawk pulled out," Egan said, referring to a $500,000 loss of revenue loss in real property taxes when the company left its Bethlehem location.

The town's water and sewer funds are in better shape with fund balances totaling $2.8 million between the two funds. "I think going forward we have the ability to keep ourselves in good fiscal health," said Kehoe.

"We are making sure we have a plan to stop drawing from our savings account or our fund balance."

Theresa Egan

Sales tax revenues in 2005 totaled $9.26 million, up close to 3 percent from the prior year. Expenses in the town however increased almost 8 percent forcing fund balance to be used.

"At some point in time you can calculate how many years you can do that before you run into a debt or raise taxes significantly," said Darryl Purinton, the town's independent auditor representing Marvin and Co. "It's a challenge and something that is not easily predicted," said Purinton. Mortgage tax revenues, which make up a large portion of the general fund is down.

"People should know we are not in a fiscal crisis," said board member Kyle Kotary. "We have major projects pending and a healthy surplus." The town board will receive a current year's budget report at the end of the month and continue to be on top of the town's fiscal condition. "We are making sure we have a plan to stop drawing from our savings account or our fund balance," said Egan.

Kehoe's analysis of Town expenditures is designed to help the board maintain control over tax levies. During the Town's 2006 budget review Kehoe stated departments were urged to rein in expenditures to the fullest extent possible.

Kehoe was commended by both Purinton and the town board for the work she continues to perform in respect to the town's finances.

Cinderella Project receives $2K grant

The Cinderella Project of the Capital Region recently received $2,000 from the Stewart's Holiday Match to help with operating expenses.

The Cinderella Project is a nonprofit organization that collects donated 'gently used' gowns and accessories then distributes them to young women who otherwise could not attend their prom because of financial burden. This spring the group helped nearly 200 girls attend their proms. The project helps junior and senior high school students from throughout the greater Capital Region area.

The funding will be used for storage costs, hangers and other supplies, and to purchase larger-sized dresses at wholesale from manufacturers. The Cinderella Project's next events will be Dress Drives this summer and fall to collect dresses from the public. Visit www.cinderellaproject.net for information.

To achieve success, eliminate fear and maintain a positive outlook

By JOYCE WEILER,
Vice President, KeyBank N.A.

When Lynn Donohue approached her first job site in New Bedford, Mass., she looked to the group of workers and construction equipment, the two city blocks of sidewalk that had been jackhammered out, and kept driving. "What," she wondered, "possessed me to think I could ever pull this off?" Then she found a parking spot and for the first of many times walked to a construction site where she would be the only woman.

For Lynn Donohue, author of the award-winning book Brick by Brick and founder of the multi-million dollar Argus Construction firm, her life is full of these moments at the crossroads of opportunity and fear. Having dropped out of junior high school at age 15, she readily admits she was passing through life without direction. Then she read an article about women in construction earning $17 an hour. It sounded good to her. So she took a class on masonry, struggled to get into the union and landed her first apprentice position. At every step she encountered one primary obstacle—she was a woman in a man's world. Or, as a skilled and respected mason once told her: "Kid, you've got three strikes against you. You're not strong enough, you're not tall enough and you're a woman?"

Nearly 30 years later, Donohue has proven all of her doubters wrong. From becoming the first female apprentice bricklayer to win the Massachusetts state masonry competition to founding Argus Construction, she has come to command the respect of everyone in the industry. Along the way she has made herself a millionaire and provided opportunities for people to pursue their own dreams through the Brick by Brick Foundation.

The theme of your presentation is "Be Unstoppable." Can you put into words what this means to you?

It means to be a success against all the odds. For me, it was a matter of finding a passion, and as unlikely as bricklaying might have seemed, I felt in my skin. What I realize now that I did not when I was younger and beginning my career is that I was not taking things as day to day as I thought. I actually had a system for handling the series of situations I encountered, and I had specific goals. I had a focus.

How important is focus to achieving goals?

You have to focus on creating the most of your opportunities. Some people will focus on vacation and not spend a lot of time and directed effort on improving their lives. So you have to focus on the right things. I like to say you should make a to-do list for life.

I think it would be safe to say you've accomplished many of your goals and that to do so you've overcome many obstacles. But as determined as you were, you did not do it alone. You asked for and received help. How important is reaching out for help?

This is where being a woman was a gift for me. In a trade dominated by men, I wasn't too proud to ask for help. Sure, there were many people who didn't want to help, but I found that I could always search someone out who wanted to share. You can also learn a lot by picking up a book. Two important books to me were Relax and Win by Lloyd Winter and Think and Be Rich by Napoleon Hill. I read them at important times in my life.

Reading your book, Brick by Brick, the theme of wanting to turn back and being overwhelmed by fear repeats itself. How did you find the strength to keep going?

I didn't have an option to stop. I loved my work. It's like an artist, a portrait painter, being told they can't paint. So day by day I had to keep doing it, and I found myself in situations where I never would have put myself. But these obstacles I faced are also the reason for my success. They made me stronger and more skilled. And while there were definitely times when I felt like I couldn't keep going, I finally got to the point where I could say: "I can do this and I am fortunate that I can." Still, everyday had its challenges.

Does everyday still have its challenges?

You always encounter obstacles, and I don't think you can ever fully feel comfortable. But knowing that you are going to encounter obstacles makes them easier to deal with.

Early in your book you write: "It's these random events that change our lives—we go a different route, we bump into somebody, we read something and this small, unlikely event propels us into a whole new universe." What is your advice to women for identifying and taking advantage of such random events or opportunities?

You really need a positive outlook to take hold of opportunities. It's too easy to say I can't do that or it's too hard. And that's too bad.

Many people don't ever give themselves the opportunity to succeed because they are too afraid to fail.

Another theme in your book is self-improvement. How important is this to being unstoppable?

I think it is very important to make a commitment to living a life of learning.

We should always be trying to learn something. In many ways, I feel disadvantaged because of my background. I am a junior high school dropout and have worked in construction. But learning makes me feel vibrant and young. This was really true when starting my story. I had started from nothing, and there I was, writing a book. Not that I thought anyone would read it.

Not only have people read your book, you have earned the Ben Franklin Award for best autobiography for your efforts. But the Ben Franklin Award is just one of many accomplishments for you. What is the one accomplishment you are most proud of?

Winning the apprentice contest. I felt like I had done so many things so poorly for so long that holding that trophy was like the culmination of a long struggle.

What are you doing now?

I'm back in school. I just earned my bachelor's degree in management from Leslie University in Cambridge and I'm now working on my master's in women's studies. I enjoy teaching, and not having my master's has limited my opportunities. With my master's I can be an adjunct professor. I'm also president of the Brick by Brick Foundation. And I still love building. So I devote the rest of my time to masonry consulting and my two children.

You seem to juggle a lot. Do you have any advice to women about finding balance in their lives?

Keep moving, pursue what you love and learn some relaxation techniques. I like to try get out for a run first thing in the morning.

Staff shortage in Police Department

By JIM CUOZZO

Bethlehem Police Det. Bruce Oliver, in a strong but emotional statement to the Bethlehem town board, asked for more police officers in the department.

"I don't complain a lot, but we have a major crisis in staffing," said Oliver.

The force is currently down eight officers for a variety of reasons. "I apologize if I am gruff, but guys are working their butts off," Oliver said. "We need less talk and more action."

Oliver's remarks to the board came just days after Police Detective Anthony Arduini died as a result of an aneurysm. The Bethlehem Police detective division is down three employees due to the retirement of one detective in April and the death in March of John Cox, another longtime member of the detective division and police department.

"Bruce was expressing emotion because of the circumstances," said Supervisor Theresa Egan. "This is the third vacancy in the detectives bureau in the past 60 days." Egan said a request for two full-time officers was included in the proposed 2006 department budget, and since that request was made, both positions have now been filled.

"I'm worse off now that I was a year ago," said Bethlehem Police Chief Lou Corsi, who will present the town board with an official staffing proposal at the next meeting.

"We're going through a difficult transition, and it is very difficult to maintain services," said Corsi.

The department's request comes on the heels of a $34,000 contract awarded by the town to the Center for Technology in Government, which will work with Corsi and the police department to assist in developing a set of recommendations that will help maximize management efficiencies. Full-time officers are currently working several overtime hours because of the staffing shortage. "You don't manage a police department on an overtime budget," said Corsi.

Egan said it became very clear in the 2005 budget process that the town needs to review department by department the different efficiencies. "I think we have a very well trained police force," Egan said, "but it is difficult to measure safety."

Teresa Prado, deputy director for the CTG at the University of Albany, gave a presentation of the information sharing that will take place with the police department in several workshop sessions to be held over a four-to-six month period.

"There is an increasing emphasis on performance measurement in government," Prado said.

"Our information will show how information can be used differently in the department and town so it can be used in a more proactive way," said Prado.

The vote to approve the study was not unanimous, with board member Daniel Plummer voting no.

"I am uncomfortable voting for this now," Plummer said. "My concern is our comptroller has outlined a very serious budget problem for this year and for the future." Plummer was commenting on Comptroller Judy Kehoe's 2005 completed audit report warning future town deficits are looming.

"I intend to support this study," said board member Sam Messina. "It is worthwhile and should be implemented."

Egan said the CTG will provide the board with a formal presentation of its information gathering after several meetings and workshops over the spring and summer.

and humble man. "It has been a big hit to the agency and the guys are hurt, but we are really close and we'll pull through," said Corsi. Egan said the police department's solidarity of support and brotherhood, along with the communities support has been amazing. "The department is there for one another and for Tony's family," Egan said.

"We lost a good one, a real good one," said Corsi.

Arduini is survived by his wife Kathy and three children.

teacher award nominations.

"When I heard the announcement on the PA, I said I know a great teacher," said Norrie, who also is the president of the school's builders club. "He's an awesome teacher."

Other students in Reilly's current sixth grade class feel the same, saying Reilly makes social studies fun to learn. "It's not boring," said student Kelsey Chase. "Mr. Reilly makes it cool."

Les Loomis, superintendent of Bethlehem schools, said Reilly is an outstanding teacher and an example of the quality of people at Bethlehem Central.

"I am constantly impressed with the level of innovation and commitment Bill brings to his classroom," Loomis said.

Students are currently working on a series of projects in Reilly's class including writing, producing and editing a commercial about the Middle Ages and working to raise money for an International Children's Art Auction to be held June 7 at the middle school.

"We are receiving artwork from students all over the world to put in the auction to raise money," Reilly said. Block prints from Japan, watercolors from Russian students and wood carvings from Bali are just some of the items that will be up for sale.

"By communicating with all the different countries around the world, it shows us how we are all different but all the same," said student Lindsay Lee. Proceeds from the auction will go to fund a high school education in Belize.

Reilly said teaching and life in general has changed for him since 9/11. He was sailing on the "Haelve Maen," an educational sailing ship that tracks the voyage of Henry Hudson along the river from Albany to New York City. Reilly and 12 students, four from Bethlehem, were in New York's harbor the day terrorists crashed planes into the World Trade Center.

"I still have a hard time talking about it," said Reilly, "but it made me try and do something more, something better as a teacher."

Last year Reilly challenged his students to come up with a way to make the world a better place for one month. "Students cleaned parks, schools, one even put together an educational project on saving the monarch butterfly," Reilly said. "It does make me feel like something we do here is working," Reilly said he has found his niche in life teaching. Parents and the community can check out the work Reilly and his students are accomplishing by going to <http://bcsd.k12.ny.us/middle/global/global.htm>.

Businesses, consumers network at Chamber expo

By JIM CUOZZO

More than 35 businesses took part in the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce Spring Business Expo held at the Nathaniel Adams American Legion Post on W. Poplar Drive.

"This is the second year we have been holding the business exposition," said Marty DeLaney, Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce president. "A lot of people in the community do not know what some of the businesses do and it is good to have this number of business representatives under prizes," Delaney said. This year's door prizes included airline tickets, gift baskets and a DVD player. "The people of this community are very generous," DeLaney said.

Bill Alston, chairman of the Bethlehem Chamber, said it is good for the community to see area business representatives and talk to them one on one in an informal setting because it allows for more trust between the local businessperson and the consumer.

"This is all about networking and talking to business people, and meeting with the public," Alston said. "It's a win-win situation."

Austin said there has been a marked increase in business participants to the expo since the first year they were held. "I would say we have a 20 percent increase in business participation since the expo's inception," Alston said.

Bethlehem business expos are held in the spring and fall. Last week's marked the third chamber expo overall. Other business participants included Time Warner Cable, Northeast Orthopedics, and Realty USA.

"This is all about networking and talking to business people, and meeting with the public. It's a win-win situation."

one roof," DeLaney said. "We make it very affordable for our members".

The Spotlight was on hand for the expo along with businesses including Four Corners Pharmacy, Tangora Technologies, Aflac, Verizon and the Holiday Inn Express. Berkshire Bank had a large display with representatives on hand. Officials from Berkshire Bank said a grand opening for its new Delmar location in the Hanaford Delaware Avenue Plaza will take place this month.

DeLaney said about 250 people showed up for last spring's business expo. "The nice thing about these gatherings is that it is free, there is no commitment and we have unbelievable door

Delmar resident named 'Best Lawyer'

Amelia (Amy) M. Klein, of Delmar, has been included in the latest edition of The Best Lawyers in America, in the employee benefits law category.

Klein is a partner in the law firm of Bond, Schoeneck & King, PLLC and is resident in the firm's Albany office.

She practices in all areas of employee benefits law, including design and implementation of qualified and non-qualified pension, health and welfare benefits plans and incentive compensation arrangements.

Sloane joins Weichert sales team

New sales associate Jaron M. Sloane has joined the team at the Delmar office of Weichert, Realtors — Northeast Group. Specializing in residential sales, with emphasis on first-time homebuyers and those seeking to relocate, he will serve clients in the Capital District.

A native of Albany, Sloane worked as a manager at a local restaurant prior to entering the field of real estate sales.

AAA announces employee of the year

Laurie Prividera, automotive safety specialist and certified child passenger safety technician for AAA Hudson Valley, has been named employee of the year for 2005.

Prividera's tireless dedication, loyalty, work ethic and commitment have earned her this top spot among her peers.

"AAA Hudson Valley has long been a place where friendly, helpful service is not just a slogan, but a commitment," said Robert C. Seroka, president & CEO of AAA Hudson Valley. "When we think of those who truly personify the positive and dynamic spirit of this association, we immediately think of Laurie Prividera. Laurie goes out of her way to help everyone. She always goes the extra mile in all she does. We are proud to have Laurie on our team!"

Prividera resides in Loudonville with her husband Salvatore and her son Dominic, 12. A son Jason, 24, lives in Georgia.

OUTSIDE CHANCES

70% of home buyers get their first impression of a house from a picture on the Internet. This makes the at-a-glance attractiveness of a home, referred to as "curb appeal", more important than ever. To increase the curb appeal of your home, apply a fresh coat of asphalt sealer to the driveway to make it (and the whole house) look new. Prune back any severely overgrown shrubs to make them look better cared for. Also, consider refinishing the deck if it looks worn and weathered. While you are at it, paint or power wash the exterior of your home.

Small improvements like a fresh coat of sealer on the driveway, freshened landscaping, deck maintenance and all exterior care will always increase "curb appeal" and enhance Internet exposure.

Remember, I know what buyers are looking for in a home and can professionally prepare your home for sale. If you are thinking of selling, please contact me. When it comes to listings, I use my knowledge of the area and experience to insure that your home looks the best so you will receive the maximum full market value of your property.

'Memory' reflects artist's heritage; 'Passage' seeks sanctuary

"Memory," a mixed media exploration by artist Michiko Kubotera, is on display in the southwest hallway this month. Born in Hokkaido, Japan, she emigrated to Ann Arbor, MI, as an adult, and settled in Delmar in 1996. Her art draws from her Japanese heritage.

Her parents still live in Japan, where her father suffers from Alzheimer's disease. "I try to think, what the world is like for my father and what thoughts and images go through his head. I want to capture my memories of him in my work."

"Passages," a collection of acrylics by Joan Krathaus, is on display in the northwest hallway. She describes painting as "a tremendous inside-out experience," with which she hopes to achieve "a temporary sanctuary in this world of frightful givens." Krathaus is a past co-president of the Bethlehem Art Association. Her award-winning work is displayed in galleries from Massachusetts to California.

The Center reports that there are more than 90,000 Americans on the waiting list for an organ transplant. The quilt highlights the generosity of donors and their families.

Adamsville Ancients

The Adamsville Ancients Fife and Drum Corps has assembled an informational display in the library's exhibit case. The Corps was established in 1988 and bears Delmar's 19th-century moniker; Nathaniel Adams was one of the original landowners in the area now known as Delmar.

The Corps marches in local and regional events around New York and New England. It is open to folks 16 years and older who are interested in early American music and history. No musical experience is necessary; lessons on fife and drum are given at the group's weekly rehearsals.

Sonny and Perley

Husband-and-wife duo Sonny Daye and Perley Rousseau perform songs by Porter, Rogers, Bacharach, Piaf, Jobim and others about the many faces of love in "I'll Take Romance" at the library Tuesday, May 23 at 7 p.m.

Co-sponsored by Bethlehem Senior Projects.

Book talk

• BookChat, Bethlehem Public Library's discussion group for boys and girls in grades 6-8, will talk about "Eldest," by Christopher Paolini, on Thursday, June 1, at 7 p.m. In this sequel to "Eragon," our hero is sent to finish his training as Dragon Rider so he can further help the Varden in their struggle against the Empire. New members welcome; no pre-registration necessary.

• Saturday by Ian McEwan is the topic of the library's next DayBooks meeting Monday, June 5 at 1:30 p.m. Copies available at the information desk. New members welcome; no pre-registration necessary.

Children's writing workshop

Registration will begin on Monday, June 5 for the library's annual writing workshop for children entering grade 3 and up. Registration is ongoing during library hours.

The workshop meets on five consecutive Friday mornings beginning July 7.

Participants will write, illustrate and bind their own books. Sessions will feature talks by guest authors. Adult volunteers welcome. Call 439-9314 for information.

A Gold Mine in Bedroom Drawers

Newswire: People are selling their old scrap gold that is gathering dust for its cash value because gold prices are so high. With the price of gold at a 25 year high (over $650.00 per ounce), it makes sense. GoldKit.com, a gold recycler, offers free insured recycle kits so people may cash in their scrap with 24 hour service and guarantee satisfaction. They accept broken and outdated items like chains, charms, rings and more. "Everyone has bits of gold just lying around which can be turned into cash" says Richard Zakroff, VP of marketing. "Even old dental gold has value." GoldKit.com processes over 10,000 recycle Kits per month. People can get a free GoldKit at 1-800-283-4700 or GoldKit.com.

Photography workshop

Thacher Nature Center will be holding a wildlife photography workshop Saturday, May 20, from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The workshop will primarily be held indoors. Weather permitting; participants will go outdoors to explore options, possibilities and outdoor opportunities for nature and wildlife photos.

The emphasis of the workshop will be on how, when and where to look for and find wildlife photograph possibilities and opportunities. Learn about equipment, film, useful techniques and tips for obtaining great nature and wildlife photographs. Technical information will be geared toward 35mm cameras.

To register, for information or for directions, call the Thacher Park office at 872-1237. For information about state parks, visit www.nysparks.com.

Summer recreation programs

The Village of Voorheesville will be holding its summer recreation program again this year. The program will be under the direction of Michael Guerette and his recreation staff.

The program is geared for students in grades K-8. Information about specific program dates, locations and age requirements for each summer activity is available on the registration form or from the village office.

Completed registration forms and payment must be returned to the village office, 29 Voorheesville Ave., by Friday, June 23. The form to register your child for programs will go home with the children from school or you can pick one up at the village office.

The program now has a $5 fee for all children who are residents of the village of Voorheesville, and the fee for those outside the village has increased to $10 a child. The fee helps defray program expenses and covers participation in all summer recreation programs.

For information, call the village office at 765-2692.

31st annual race

The 31st annual Voorheesville Memorial Day race will be held on Saturday, May 27, beginning at noon. The day's event begin with a parade at 10 a.m. and children's races will be held at 11 a.m. The 15K (9.3 mile) race takes off at noon with the 3.2 K (2 mile) race and fun walk at 12:10 p.m.

The entry fee is $5 before May 20, sent to Herb Reilly, 22 Voorheesville Ave., Voorheesville 12186 and $6 day of the race. Refreshments for all distance runners will be available at the Voorheesville American Legion.

For information, call the village office at 765-2692.

Camping trip

There will be a planning meeting for family camping at Pyramid Life Center Sunday, May 21 from 9:30 to 10:15 a.m. At the meeting, each family be asked to confirm its arrival/departure dates and provide a $50 deposit.

Additional information about lodging, menus and food preparation, camp amenities and etiquette, leisure-time options, planned events, etc. will be provided. The attendance of one adult from each family is recommended: first time families are strongly encouraged to attend. For information, call 861-7105 or e-mail cgorkal@nycap.rr.com.

Kiwanis Club serving pancake breakfast

The Kiwanis Club of Delmar will hold its annual Spring Pancake Breakfast Saturday, May 20, from 8 a.m. to noon at the Delmar Presbyterian Church at 585 Delaware Ave., Delmar.

The event is all-you-can-eat featuring orange juice, pancakes, the Kiwanis very famous sausages and coffee, tea or milk. The cost is $5 for adults, $4 for seniors, children younger than 12 is $3.50 and pre-school children are free.

All proceeds go to fund Kiwanis Projects for Youth, including projects for K-Kids, Builder's Club at the Middle School, Key Club at the high school and Circle K at University of Albany.

In addition, money raised through these fundraisers benefits community groups such as Little League and Babe Ruth. Each year, Kiwanis sends at least one child with disabilities to Kamp Kiwanis for a week. The club awards scholarships to students who have demonstrated a commitment to community service.

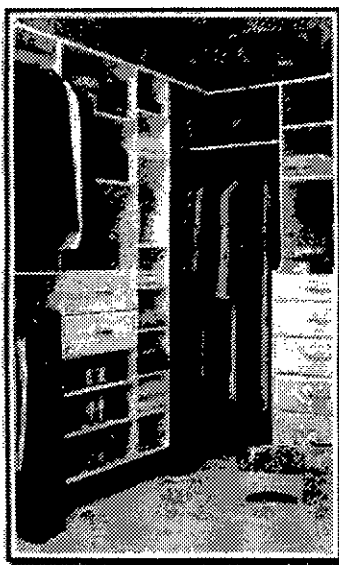

The motto of Kiwanis is "Serving Children of the World," and we meet this goal by supporting projects to reduce Iodine Deficiency Syndrome.

Kiwanis, along with UNICEF has almost eradicated disease which causes mental retardation in children. Its major local project is support for the Pediatric Trauma Unit at the Children's Hospital at Albany Medical Center.

To date, the club has received almost $400,000 for this worthy project. The Delmar Club alone gives almost $10,000 each year for pediatric trauma. Kiwanis counts on community support for these fundraisers in order to continue to serve the children of our community and the world.

The fair committee is in search of crafters who would like to showcase their talents during this event and coming holiday season.

Table fees for the show vary. For information, call 756-1344 or 756-3732.

Student earns college award

Emily Miller of Feura Bush received an Outstanding Fourth-Year Student Award at a honors ceremony in April at Champlain College in Burlington, Vermont.

Miller is enrolled in the professional studies program at the college, a private, baccalaureate institution that offers career-oriented programs in business, technology and human services balanced by a liberal arts foundation.

Miller is the daughter of Edward Miller of Albany, and Barbara Miller of Feura Bush.

Resident earns top award at college

Laura B. Curtis of Delmar has received one of the highest student honors bestowed by Green Mountain College. At the school's annual awards convocation April 23, Curtis received the student award for exceptional service and dedication to the greater community. Curtis graduated with honors May 13 with a degree in therapeutic recreation.

Curtis has played an active role in many campus organizations including serving as a peer tutor, a mentor to school children, and orientation leader. She has worked at an assisted living facility for people with Alzheimer's and developmental disabilities. This past semester, she is completing an internship at a rehabilitation center, where she works closely with trauma victims in a clinical setting.

Cemetery elects 2006 officers

At the annual meeting of the Onesquethaw Union Cemetery Association, Inc., the following officers for 2006 were elected: Elwood Vanderbilt, president; Ethie Moak, vice-president; Robert Felter, secretary and Frederick Crounse, treasurer.

Local church to send volunteers to aid in hurricane relief

Volunteers from area United Methodist Churches are heading to the Gulf Coast later this year.

The volunteers will travel to Mississippi from Nov. 10 through Nov. 30 to aid in the long road to recovery for those still left homeless by the devastation of last summer's hurricanes.

A kick-off meeting is scheduled for May 25 at 7 p.m. at the Community Methodist Church, 1499 New Scotland Ave. in Slingerlands.

The program will consist of a team leader quoting personal experiences on previous work trips to the Gulf Coast and a planning session.

The public is invited to participate.

Minimum age for the project team is 16 years old. Contact Cherie Lasher through the church office at 439-1766 for information about the Building Hope Project.

Use Your Power To Choose.

In New York's new competitive energy marketplace, you no longer have to buy your electricity and natural gas only from your local utility. Instead, you can shop among the new Energy Service Companies (ESCOs) that are competing for your business. This change should bring efficiencies and innovations that will give you better value for your energy dollar.

The combined services once offered by your utility have been split into two parts — supply and delivery, with the supply portion open to competition. You can choose to switch to an ESCO or continue buying your energy supply from your utility.

Regardless of where you buy your supply, your utility will still deliver energy to you through their existing wires and pipes. The safety and reliability you depend on won't change, and you'll still call your utility during emergencies or service interruptions.

A new choice for your energy supply

When you shop for electricity, you can now consider selecting Green Power providers for some or all of your supply.

Green Power providers supply environmentally friendly electricity generated from renewable fuel sources such as solar, wind, biomass, geothermal and low-impact or small hydro. For only a few pennies more a day, you can choose Green Power and make a world of difference for generations to come.

The Environmental Disclosure Label

Another benefit of New York's competitive market is that you now have access to information that lets you assess the environmental impacts of the energy you buy. Twice a year in your electric bill you receive an Environmental Disclosure Label showing the mix of fuels used to generate your electricity and the related air emissions. Knowing about electricity generation, fuel sources and their environmental impacts will help you make informed choices. You can also receive this information by visiting www.PowerToChooseNY.com and entering your zip code.

Strength in numbers

Purchasing electricity and gas with others, called "aggregation," gives your group greater buying power and may save you money. For example, the Municipal Electric and Gas Alliance (MEGA) members (municipalities and school districts in Central New York) saved approximately $2.7 million on their electric bills last year, which translates into average savings of 12%. The Council of Industry's Electricity Aggregation Group, representing more than 40 members, saved approximately $1 million in 2005, representing a savings of 10%. You may belong to a community or business association that can coordinate with ESCOs for the best package of prices and services. For a sample of a Request for Proposal for Bids for your group's use, go to www.PowerToChooseNY.com and click on Contact Us and send us an e-mail, or call us at 518-474-1540.

Choosing a supplier

To shop for an ESCO, evaluate their offerings, compare them with your utility's offering, and decide which is best for you. You should:

1. Call your utility or the Public Service Commission at 1-888-Ask-PSC1 (1-888-275-7721) for ESCOs serving your area. Or go to www.PowerToChooseNY.com or your utility's Web site for a list, and then call the companies. The ESCOs and their offers do change, so continue to check periodically.

2. Compare prices, services and terms offered.
3. Consider customer services such as toll-free numbers, Web sites and complaint handling.
4. Check out billing and payment options.
5. Confirm the details of the agreement.
6. Choose your supplier and monitor your bills and service. If you are not satisfied, you can switch back to your utility or to another ESCO, subject to any applicable contract terms.

For a list of ESCOs and more information, visit the Public Service Commission Web site at www.PowerToChooseNY.com, call 1-888-Ask-PSC1 (1-888-275-7721) or contact your local utility listed below:

Use Your Power To Choose your energy supplier.

In the past, you had no choice of who provided you with your natural gas and electricity supply – it was your local utility.

Well, things have changed.

In New York State, companies other than your local utility, called Energy Service Companies (ESCOs), are competing to provide you with electricity and natural gas. No matter which supplier you choose, your utility will still deliver your energy safely and reliably, and respond to emergencies.

Why Choose an ESCO?

Competition gives you greater choice and better value for your energy dollar in purchasing energy products and services, including:

Fixed Pricing – Some ESCOs offer a fixed price for your natural gas or electricity supply.

Variable or Capped Pricing – You may see a variety of offers from ESCOs, including a variable price and capped pricing mechanisms tailored to meet your individual needs.

Green Power – Some ESCOs offer products from renewable energy sources that are environmentally friendly such as solar, wind, biomass, and hydropower. New York State and the Public Service Commission have made a commitment to promote the use of Green Power and foster the development of renewable energy generation resources. Purchasing Green Power helps the environment and encourages alternative power generation.

Other Value Added Benefits – Ask about other options including appliance repair, service contracts, and other benefits.

Join the over one million New Yorkers who have already made the choice to switch to an ESCO!

Forever wild, or foxes on the run?

By JIM CUOZZO

Delmar wildlife is beginning to encroach on homeowners land, or is it the other way around? Rick Rudofsky of Brookside Avenue walked outside his door last week to find two small animals sleeping in the sun next to the front wheel of his car.

"I tried to move them away because I thought they were someone's pets," said Rudofsky. "Then I thought they were baby foxes." After a visit by Bethlehem animal control officers, the little red animals were identified as foxes.

"Red foxes have a tendency to be right around houses," said Ward Stone, state Department of Environmental Conservation wildlife pathologist, whose offices are at Five Rivers Conservation Center.

"Red foxes hang around the library because of the wooded area behind the building and along Kenwood Avenue," Stone said. "You'll find deer, coyotes, red foxes, raccoons, possums, wood-chucks — the wildlife population is peaking in spring." Stone said most likely the foxes were babies looking for food and they tend to find an abundance of it in people's yards. Rudofsky said the foxes he saw were in poor condition and since then one of them has died.

"My neighbor found a hole dug under his shed where they most likely were staying," Rudofsky said. "They don't appear to have a mother."

Stone said we are seeing more and more encounters of wildlife and people coming together because of the many new homes now being built on what was once all agricultural land in the town.

"The world is changing rapidly," said Stone. "There are large homes in rural settings where wildlife once was, and now we want to remove them."

Two fox kits turned up in a Delmar driveway recently.

Delmar woman to be ordained as rabbi

On Sunday evening, June 4, Congregation Ohav Shalom will host a tribute to Rena Kieval in recognition of her numerous contributions to the synagogue and community. Kieval, currently Ohav's rabbinic associate, will receive her rabbinic ordination this May from The Academy of Jewish Religion.

The June 4 event will include a rabbinic installation ceremony followed by a dinner. Tickets must be purchased by May 22.

Kieval has been the spiritual, educational and pastoral leader at Ohav Shalom as well as the Jewish chaplain on staff at Albany Medical Center.

Kieval has been very involved in the pioneering field of Jewish family education. She has also developed a Shabbat Learners' Service for adults and the Nitzamin preschool service, both of which assist in making participants feel at home and comfortable at services.

Kieval has been a board member and active lay leader at both Hebrew Academy and Ohav Shalom for many years. She helped establish Ohav Shalom's Yad Yonatan committee in memory of her son, Jonathan. Dozens of community members have participated in the work of this group, which supports individuals and families facing illness and bereavement. Yad Yonatan also conducts a women's chevra kadisha, which prepares the deceased for burial.

At Wildwood Programs, Kieval and another parent developed and led a workshop program which included a presentation for medical residents about the parents' perspective on raising a child with special needs. In addition, she has published articles in "Sh'ma" and in the Journal for Pastoral Care and Counseling, and has co-written an article with Rabbi Daniel Ornstein for a book about clergy-congregant relationships that is soon to be published.

For ticket information for the June 4 event, call Congregation Ohav Shalom at 489-4706.

Minister celebrates 50th anniversary

On Saturday, May 21, at 9:30 a.m., the First United Methodist Church at 428 Kenwood Avenue in Delmar, will celebrate the ministry of the Reverend Sherwood "Woody" Carver. The public is invited, especially those from his former parishes and others touched by Carver's service.

At the service, Pastor Carver's message will be "The Seed took Root and Grew."

The Anniversary Celebration will continue with recognitions, displays and a light buffet luncheon.

For information, call 439-9976 or go to www.delmarmethodist.org.

"It has been a very special 50 years of involvement with many church communities and I am truly honored by this event," Carver remarked.

County Comptroller looks at nursing home costs

Legislators stress importance of facility

By GRAHAM S. PARKER

If Albany County needs to build a new nursing facility it needs to be done right.

But just because you build one doesn't mean the people will come to it.

That was the message to county legislators in Comptroller Michael F. Conners' "State of the Fisc" address last week.

What raised eyebrows was Conners' portrayal of the county's current nursing facilities as a burden to taxpayers. According to Conners, the county's 2005 fiscal year was the tip of a $57 million iceberg of general fund transfers to cover increasing debts incurred by the two county-run nursing homes, the Albany County Nursing Home and the Ann Lee Infirmary.

"It is a tremendous expenditure. It is almost the entire amount of the last property tax rate increase," said Conners.

Since 2003, county property tax has increased 83 percent, he said. In 2005 that levy increased by 24 percent. According to Conners, the largest single source of revenue in 2005 was taxes. It amounted to nearly $18 million. The same year, the county's greatest expenditure, $17.2 million, was for county nursing homes.

For years, legislators have been eyeing parcels, such as Heritage Park, as potential sites for a new 450-room nursing home to meet demand.

Taking into consideration the financial performances of nursing homes — coupled with national studies showing a decrease in the need for such facilities — it doesn't make sense right now for the Legislature to continue subsidizing the failing facilities.

However, legislators contend that despite their recent ill performance, nursing homes aren't about keeping the beds full, but rather, maintaining an important service.

"It's kind of saying a county road is a burden on taxpayers. Well, we need a county road," said County Legislator Timothy Nichols, D-Latham. "We need to have a safety net, that's the role of a county-run nursing facility."

Nichols is well aware of the facility's ongoing revenue problems. But, until the county can work out the bugs in funding the operation of its nursing facilities, legislators can't afford to put their replacement on hold as the bureaucracy works itself out.

That shouldn't be the case, said Conners.

"What I have been talking about is that we need to make the commitment to a better-run facility," said Conners.

Currently, both facilities are experiencing declining occupancy rates, are outsourcing jobs to temp agencies and are losing tenants to more people remaining in their homes or selecting other privately run nursing homes, said Conners.

The county has based its need of a new facility on a 100 percent occupancy rate, he added. The mentality seems to be "if you build, they will come," he warned legislators.

In both facilities, 88 percent of occupants are covered under Medicaid, which means on average the homes receive less reimbursement per room than they would with Medicare, other insurance providers or private pay tenants.

In other nursing homes throughout the state, on average 75 percent of their tenants are covered under Medicaid, he said. Even with the higher paying private tenants — 15 percent in other Albany County homes, or tenants through other insurance carriers — new facilities in Saratoga and Rensselaer counties are experiencing deficits in the $4 to $6 million range, he said.

The goal of the Ann Lee and ACNH replacement facility is not to generate revenue, said Nichols. It is to provide services for those Medicaid recipients or other seniors that can't, or choose not to, live at home.

The county has already received a certificate of need from the state Department of Health for a new facility, said Nichols. And, state legislators have approved measures in the year's state budget to re-base Medicaid payout. Right now the county is in good shape to move on the construction of a new 450-room nursing home, despite what national trends show, and how neighboring county facilities are performing, he said.

Expert IRA advice.

The strategies you need and want to know about.

Tap the knowledge of financial advisor John Gigliello as he provides the answers to the big questions in IRA distribution today. He has been trained by Ed Slott, CPA, America's #1 IRA distribution expert and author of the book, The Retirement Savings Time Bomb and How to Defuse It.

Question: Who will get my IRA when I die?

Answer: Many people don't know or can't remember, but they figure it's covered in their will. After all, isn't that what a will is for? Actually, most property today passes outside the will. This is true of any property that passes by beneficiary designation, such as an IRA. Therefore, your IRA will pass to whoever is named on the beneficiary form, not your will! That form controls the distribution of money you worked and saved for all your life. Do YOU know where it is?

These and other complex questions can be made easy in the hands of a pro. Please call for an appointment.

Robert F. Bellizzi

Robert F. Bellizzi, 57, of Delmar, died Sunday May 7, at Albany Medical Center.

Born in New York City, he moved to Delmar in 1958 and was the founder of the baseball program at The College of Saint Rose. Under his guidance the team won its first ever NCAA II Northeast Regional Championship advancing to the NCAA Division II World Series. Saint Rose also made several tournament appearances and won many district and regional baseball titles under Bellizzi as coach. He earned five Central Atlantic Collegiate Conference Coach of the Year awards and several other honors. He was twice honored the Area 8 Coach of the Year. He taught social science at Albany High School for 25 years. He was inducted into the Saint Rose Athletics Hall of Fame three years ago. He was a member of the Schenectady Baseball Club Hall of Fame, the president of the Amsterdam Mohawks of the N.Y. Collegiate Baseball League.

His club also captured the 1988 league title. He was past president of the N.U. Collegiate Baseball League. He was recently honored with the president's award by the Albany Twilight League.

Survivors include his wife, Kimberly Gorday Bellizzi, two daughters; Kara Donohue of Wapwallopen, Pa; and Rachel Bellizzi of Delmar, three sons; Robert, Michael and Alexander Bellizzi, all of Delmar, a brother John Bellizzi Jr., of Delmar, and parents John and Celeste Bellizzi of Glenmont.

Services were from the Durant Funeral Home, Glenmont. Contributions can be made to a youth sports foundation to be named.

Donna P. Jackson

Donna P. Jackson, 89 of Delmar, died May 10.

She was a teacher in the Hart Central School District in Hart,

Mich., until her retirement in 1981. In Michigan, she was a member of the Order of the Eastern Star, and Hart Congregational Church of Christ.

Survivors include a son; Eric W. Jackson of Juneau, Alaska, a daughter Lynne King of Delmar, four grandchildren.

Services were from Durant Funeral Home, Glenmont. A graveside memorial service in Michigan will be held at a later date. Contributions may be made to the Hart Congregational United Church of Christ, Hart, Michigan 49420.

Helen Langenbach

Helen G. Langenbach, 90, of Altamont, died Wednesday, May 10, at the Guilderland Center Nursing Home.

She worked with the Voorheesville schools as a cook for many years. She was a longtime communicant of St. Matthew's Church in Voorheesville. She was the widow of Edgar Langenbach, who died in 1991.

Survivors include four daughters; Helen Walsh and Dorothy Schoonmaker both of Altamont, Edna May Mercer of Colonie, Eve Bidosky of Atlanta, Ga., four sons; John Szesnat of Lake Worth, Fla., Joseph Szesnat of Freehold, Benjamin Salvo of Guilderland and Paul Lewis of Middletown, a sister, Elizabeth Aviza of Albany. She is also survived by 18 grandchildren, 14 great-grandchildren and a great-great-grandchild.

Services were from the Fredendall Funeral Home, Altamont. Contributions may be made to Community Hospice of Schenectady, 1411 Union St., Schenectady 12308.

Marjorie Zahn

Marjorie H. Zahn, 91, of Slingerlands, died May 9.

She was the widow of John Zahn.

Survivors include a son; John W. Zahn of Marblehead, Mass., a daughter; Christina Williams of Pine, Colo., four grandchildren; one great-grandchild, sisters, Josephine M. SeBast and Kathryn M. DeMase of Albany.

Services were from the Hans Funeral Home, Albany. Contributions may be made to the charity of your choice.

Anthony S. Arduini

Anthony S. Arduini, 53, of Selkirk, died Thursday, May 11.

Born in Albany, he was a dedicated member of the Bethlehem Police Department. He served the Bethlehem community for over 31 years, the past five years as a detective. He was a hard-working and compassionate man, known to all in the community through his work and many activities.

Survivors include his wife, Kathy and beloved children, Courtney, Lucas and Chelsea. He is also survived by several aunts, uncles and cousins and many friends, in particular Peter Bukowski of Glenmont, who was like a brother to him. The family would like to thank the doctors, medical staff and hospital administration at the Albany Medical Center, SICU and especially thank the members of the Bethlehem Police Department and surrounding law enforcement agencies for their support during this time of need.

Services were from the Applebee Funeral Home, Delmar. Contributions in his memory can be made to the Bethlehem Central Endowment Fund, c/o Anthony S. Arduini Memorial Fund, 90 Adams Place, Delmar 12054.

Kaloos orisate!

St. Sophia's welcomes you to its 36th annual Greek Festival

You can travel to a foreign country without even leaving the Capital District this weekend. On Friday, Saturday and Sunday, head for St. Sophia Greek Orthodox Church in Albany for the 36th annual Greek festival, and visit the agora, taste some souvlaki, and take home a box of baklava. You can also listen to live Greek music, watch Greek-American dancers or cooking demonstrations, and taste some Greek wine. There are rides for the kids, and a sit-down restaurant where you can enjoy a more formal Greek meal.

"The festival started in 1970," George Sokaris, the chairman of this weekend's event said. "A group of people went to a Greek festival in Connecticut, where a church had people make their favorite food.

described the appetite for Greek food, wine and culture as "insatiable," it is quantifiable.

Between 30 and 40 women have already baked the 22,000 Greek pastries that people will stand in line for, three deep, to purchase. In the tent, which will be twice as big as past years, 8,500 souvlaki and gyro sandwiches will be served. In the sit-down restaurant in the church hall ("decorated to look as if you were in Greece,"

Volunteers stand ready to serve you in the Greek taverna at the festival.

They did it here one weekend, and it worked out great.

Although Sokaris

Sokaris said), volunteers in black pants and white shirts will serve 3,000 full-service meals — think moussaka, spinach pie and pasticcio — while 135 Greek-American children will take turns performing traditional dances from different parts of their ancestors' homeland.

A five-piece band from Syracuse, the Aegeans, will provide traditional music.

There are some new numbers to count, too. For the first time ever, the Greek festival will offer octopus ... 1,000 pounds of it.

"It's been boiled and

Also new this year will be wine tastings provided by representatives from the Agros winery in Greece. There's a Santorini; an Aghiorgitiko, from Nemea, where Hercules is said to have killed the lion; and a dessert wine, Muscat of Patra of Rio NV, from the northwestern Peloponnese.

Between your delicious meal and the pastries you'll want to bring home, take a stroll through the agora — the marketplace, where you can find everything from jewelry to T-shirts to cookbooks. Be sure and tenderized," Sokaris said. "Now it's frozen, and when we thaw it for the festival, we'll marinate it in a nice oil, lemon and oregano, and serve it at $5 for a nice-sized plate."

Sokaris expects some 30,000 people to visit the festival, and for those who will go away wanting more, Shaw Ribadi of BFS Deli on Western Avenue in Gunderland will offer demonstrations of how to cook things like spanikopita (spinach pie) or shrimp saganaki, shrimp pan-cooked with vegetables.

go Friday; you may want to return once more before the weekend's over.

St. Sophia Greek Orthodox Church is located at 440 Whitehall Road in Albany. In addition to on-site parking, there are free shuttles that run every 15 minutes from the Center for the Disabled at 314 S. Manning Blvd. and 1251 New Scotland Road at Route 85. Admission to the festival is $3; $2 with a Price Chopper advantage card. Admission includes a raffle ticket. For information about the festival, call 489-4442 or visit www.stsophia.net.

Public Notice of Hearing The Town of New Scotland Zoning Board

Notice is hereby given that the Zoning Board of Town of New Scotland, New York will hold a public hearing pursuant to Chapter 190, Article IX, Section 190-73 of the Zoning Law on the following proposition: A Public Hearing for Variance Application # 349: Application submitted by Jeffrey Rosenberger on behalf of Theodore Pogoda, for relief from Article III, Section 190-30 (C) (2) (d) of the Zoning Law to be allowed to remodel and expand a non-conforming three family dwelling. The existing three family unit currently occupies 2400 +/- square feet of area. If approved, the proposed remodeling would encompass 4800 +/- square feet of area. Article III, Section 190-30 (C) (2) (d) limits the increase of area for a non conforming use to 25% with a Special Use Permit issued by the Planning Board, with any increase larger than that requiring an area variance. This application requires an area variance of 1600 +/- square feet. The site, owned by Theodore Pogoda, is located approximately 2000 feet from the intersection of State Route 85 and Thacher Park Road at 86 Thacher Park Road, lies within the Residential Forestry District and is identified as New Scotland tax parcel id# 82.-2-5. Said hearing will take place on May 22, 2006 at the New Scotland Town Hall beginning at 7:00 P.M.

Public Notice of Hearing The Town of New Scotland Zoning Board

Notice is hereby given that the Zoning Board of Town of New Scotland, New York will hold a public hearing pursuant to Chapter 190, Article IX, Section 190-73 of the Zoning Law on the following proposition: A Public Hearing for a Use Variance # 352: Variance Application # 352: Application submitted by David Moreau for a use variance to be allowed to subdivide a parcel owned by him into two lots. The parcel is located on Youmans Road, consists of 36.18 acres of land which are separated by Youmans Road. This separation provides for 33.77 acres of vacant land on the east side of Youmans Road and 2.41 acres of land on the west side of Youmans Road. The 2.41 acre area on the west side of Youmans Road currently houses a pre-existing, non-conforming "barn structure". The parcel lies within the commercial district and is identified as New Scotland tax parcel id # 84.-1-15.3. Applicant requests relief from Article II, Section 190-17 of the Zoning Law pertaining to permitted uses, to allow for a subdivision of lands to occur with a pre-existing, non-conforming structure being on one of the lots created. Said hearing will take place on May 22, 2006 at the New Scotland Town Hall beginning at 7:00 P.M.

NOTICE OF ADOPTION OF RESOLUTION Take notice that the Town Board of the Town of New Scotland on May 10, 2006 voted to create Extension #7 of the Clarksville Water District and to consolidate such Extension with the Clarksville Water District.

LEGAL NOTICE

The resolution, which is available for review by the public at New Scotland Town Hall, determined that it was in the public interest to assess all expenses of the Clarksville Water District and of the Extension as a charge against the entire area of the consolidated district. It was further determined that all future costs of operation, maintenance and improvements to the consolidated district will be financed on an ad valorem basis, which is the same basis on which such costs are currently financed for the Clarksville Water District. Please take further notice that this resolution is subject to a permissive referendum. Dated: May 10, 2006

Lady Eagles wrap up top seed for playoffs

By ROB JONAS

The Bethlehem girls lacrosse team enters this week's Section II, Division 1 playoffs as the team to beat, yet again.

The Lady Eagles wrapped up the No. 1 seed with last Wednesday's 14-7 Suburban Council victory over Saratoga. Bethlehem finished the Suburban Council season with a 12-1 record, one game ahead of Guilderland.

"I feel like we've earned our wins and earned our record by playing hard and focusing on each game," said Bethlehem coach Dawn Austin.

The Lady Eagles (15-2 overall) pulled out to a 6-2 halftime lead on Saratoga and never let the Blue Streaks back in.

"They're always tough to beat," said Austin. "We just made certain to prepare ourselves, and I thought our defense played great."

Halley Quillinan scored five goals and assisted on three others to lead Bethlehem's offense. Tee Ladouceur contributed four goals, and Cate Quinlan added two goals in the victory.

The win wrapped up a Suburban Council season that began on an inauspicious note for Bethlehem when Guilderland edged the Lady Eagles 12-11. Bethlehem remained one game behind Guilderland until it defeated the Lady Dutch 10-8 May 2. Bethlehem regained sole possession of first place two days later when Shenendehowa beat Guilderland 9-8.

"I don't think it brought anyone down after our first loss," said Austin. "It just made everyone work harder."

Bethlehem opens the playoffs Wednesday when it faces either Colonie or Schenectady in the quarterfinals.

Loose ball battle

years. Perhaps it's because they're still seen as Glenn Maz-zula's attempt to soothe Albany's hard feelings over his decision to move the Firebirds to Indianapolis in 2000 (a move that wound up killing that franchise). Perhaps it's because the Arena 2 league is seen as an inferior brand when compared to the Arena Football League (which it is, but only by a slim margin). Or perhaps it's because Capital District sports fans are still obsessed over major league sports that they can't get excited over a minor league team.

Whatever the cause is, area arena football fans need to get over it. This region isn't getting another Arena Football League team because that league wants to keep its franchises in major markets, and the Capital District isn't a major market. Besides, the Conquest have a good product this year — maybe not good enough right now to win the Arena 2 title, but good enough to contend for one. That's a step in the right direction for a team that finished below .500 the last two years.

Now, if the fans start bringing the energy level up at Pepsi Arena, that would be another step in the right direction.

• I'm amending last week's column and including Shenendehowa among the teams to watch in the upcoming Section II, Division 1 girls lacrosse playoffs.

Next to Bethlehem, Shen is the hottest team entering Sectionals. The Plainswomen have won their last six games, including victories over Guiderland and Saratoga — the two teams I said last week would challenge Bethlehem. They have an explosive attack led by Tara Akstull and Olivia Jarem, and their defense has improved as the season has gone on.

Depending on where they're seeded, the Plainswomen are a threat to reach the finals. If they face top-seeded Bethlehem in the semifinals, I would favor the Lady Eagles because of their experience in high-level competition. A semifinal matchup with Guiderland or Saratoga would be more favorable for Shen, given its recent success against those two teams.

• Without rehashing last month's column about the change in NHL affiliates for the Albany

River Rats, I was pleased to see Carolina knock New Jersey out of the Stanley Cup playoffs in five games. With the exception of game 4, the Hurricanes (Albany's new affiliate) made all the clutch plays and left the Devils (Albany's old affiliate) frustrated. With any luck, the River Rats will dominate Lowell next year the way Carolina dominated New Jersey during this year's NHL playoffs.

On a side note, does anybody around here care about the NHL playoffs now that Detroit, New Jersey, Colorado and the New York Rangers have been eliminated in the first two rounds? If it weren't for Carolina and Buffalo advancing to the Eastern Conference finals, I think the answer would be a resounding no.

The NHL is at its most interesting when either the most storied or most successful franchises are involved. A Stanley Cup final between Anaheim and Buffalo (which is my prediction) doesn't attract as much attention as one between Detroit and the Rangers or Colorado and New Jersey. Anaheim and Buffalo don't have the history behind them that any of those other teams have.

It doesn't mean that a Stanley Cup final between Anaheim and Buffalo wouldn't be entertaining. It means that casual sports fans wouldn't be interested in watching it on TV.

Delmar trio to participate in Pan-Massachusetts event

Three Delmar residents are among more than 4,500 cyclists who will participate in this year's Pan-Massachusetts Challenge Aug. 5 and 6.

Nathan and Emily Cohen and Beth Huntley will help raise money for the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund by cycling one of eight routes that range from 70 to 192 miles. The courses include the original two-day, 192-mile trek from Sturbridge to Provincetown and the 180-mile Sturbridge-Bourne-Wellesley route.

The goal of this year's Pan-Massachusetts Challenge is to raise $24 million for cancer research. The average participant raises $5,700.

To volunteer, become a virtual rider or make a pledge to a local rider, visit the event's Web site at www.pmc.org or call (800) WE-CYCLE.

schools and coaching one of the Capital District's top group of high school sprinters — the Colonie Central High School crew of Tyler Johnson, Colin Fredrickson, Jim Kehrer and Brien Lenge.

"I love working with those guys. They're like my brothers," said Harvey. "There's a lot of playing that goes on, but they're also serious."

Joining the Conquest has cut into some of Harvey's time with the Colonie track team, but he works with the Garnet Raiders as much as he can.

"Obviously, the Conquest wasn't going on (when I joined Colonie's coaching staff), so I started there full time," Harvey said. "But the Conquest is obviously full time, so that's what I have to concentrate on."

Harvey's students were out in full force for Saturday's home game. Some of Colonie's sprinters were in attendance, as were several Sand Creek Middle School students. Harvey's former high school football coach, Colonie's Mike Ambrosio, was also at Pepsi Arena.

"I feel a lot of love from the people here," Harvey said.

A stepping stone

Harvey is hoping to use his experience with the Conquest to restart a football career that had been put on hold following a medical scare after graduating from New Hampshire. A blood test detected a possible problem with his liver, but a subsequent biopsy turned up negative. Still, Harvey waited a while before looking for an avenue to a pro football career.

"I didn't think I could go to the (National Football League) combine and give it my best, so I took a year off to get healthy," he said.

Now that he has a jumping-off point with the Conquest, Harvey is hoping to use it to move to the next level. "I feel I can play with anyone," he said. "There aren't many guys my size (5 feet, 10 inches) that have my speed."

Until then, Harvey will continue leading his double life.

"It's good. I love it," he said.

McCarten sets meet record at Queensbury

Bethlehem's Shannon McCarten established a record in the 2,000-meter steeplechase at Saturday's Queensbury Invitational.

McCarten won the steeplechase in a time of 7:47.2 to lead a strong Bethlehem contingent in the event. Teammate Claire Luke placed second in a time of 7:55.4, and Molly Hassett finished seventh in a time of 8:40.8.

Lauren Mills and Jessica Venezia also won individual titles at Queensbury. Mills took first place in the 200-meter dash with a time of 27.7 seconds, while Venezia won the triple jump with a distance of 33 feet, 8 inches. Mills added a second-place performance in the 100 dash with a time of 13.2 seconds.

Bethlehem placed second to Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake in the girls team standings. Burnt Hills took the title with 131 points, while Bethlehem finished with 92.5 points.

Bethlehem participates in the Suburban Council Meet Wednesday.

Camp releases session schedule

The Bethlehem Lady Eagles Summer Basketball Camp has announced its schedule.

The first session takes place July 3-7 for girls in grades three through nine, and the second session takes place Aug. 14-18 for boys and girls in grades three through five. Both sessions will be held at the Sydney Albert Albany Jewish Community Center on Whitehall Road.

Each camper will be grouped by age and ability and will be taught individual skills through drills and games. Campers have equal playing time throughout the sessions.

The camp is taught by Bethlehem varsity girls basketball coach Mark Nealon and assistant coach John Hooper. Additional coaches and Bethlehem girls basketball alumni will be assisting Nealon and Hooper.

The cost is $100 per camper. Registration forms and checks should be sent to Mark Nealon, 6 Terrace Place, Troy 12180.

For information, contact Mark Nealon at 273-1184.

Harvey restarts football career while coaching sprinters

By ROB JONAS

R.J. Harvey isn't a secret agent, but he leads a double life.

By day, Harvey works at Sand Creek Middle School and coaches the sprinters on the Colonie boys track and field team.

At night, Harvey trades in his coach's whistle for a football helmet and pads as the newest wide receiver on the Albany Conquest.

For Harvey — a former standout running back for Colonie and the University at New Hampshire — the chance to play for Albany's Arena Football 2 franchise is one he couldn't pass up, even if he had to learn a new position to do so.

"You have to take things as they come, and I'm just glad to take this opportunity," he said.

Harvey signed with the Conquest a month into the season and has been trying to catch up with his teammates since then. He's caught four passes for 112 yards and three touchdowns in his first two games, but he's still learning his routes.

"I'm not where I need to be, and you can only get to where you need to be with experience," Harvey said.

Saturday's home game against Manchester is a prime example of Harvey's progress. After catching a seven-yard pass in the first quarter, Harvey couldn't catch up to several passes from quarterback Ryan Vena in the second and third quarters.

Harvey had a breakthrough in the fourth quarter, though. After Shawn Murray intercepted a D. Bryant pass at Albany's 14-yard line, Vena called Harvey's number for a deep pass. Harvey took off downfield and made three different cuts to elude a Manchester defender as Vena threw toward the left corner of the end zone. Harvey sprinted and caught the ball at the wall for a touchdown that gave the Conquest a 60-49 lead.

"I saw the wall, and I knew I was close to the wall," Harvey said. "That's one thing I've got to learn — when the ball is near the wall, concentrate on the ball, not on the wall."

Harvey's touchdown reception was critical. Manchester made a late comeback, but failed to tie the game on a two-point conversion with 33 seconds left, which gave Albany a 63-61 victory.

Harvey played a role in Manchester's missed conversion, too. He was one of three Albany defensive backs that covered Bryant's receivers on the play, which forced the former Conquest quarterback to throw an incomplete pass.

Coming home

Before Harvey even considered suiting up for the Conquest, he was already back in his hometown of Colonie working at one of South Colonie's two middle

Bellizzi's battle should serve as a lesson

By ROB JONAS

Some random observations this week:

• After Bob Bellizzi's death May 7, I went back into the archives and pulled out the feature I wrote about his battle with leukemia back in 2001. At that point, it had been nearly four years since he had received a bone marrow transplant, and he had made adjustments to how he approached coaching his Saint Rose baseball team.

"If there's something I have to take care of (on the field), I do it," Bellizzi said at the time. "Every move is calculated."

Bellizzi had to make more adjustments since then, including having an oxygen tank at his side this season. Yet, he continued to coach the Golden Knights as long as his health allowed him to be with the team.

"It's just perseverance and just caring for the kids. The guy's not a quitter," said Joe Altieri, a former player and assistant coach for Bellizzi.

The fact that Bellizzi kept going until his body could no longer allow him to should serve as an inspiration for everyone. If there is a way to battle a disease — either through medication or surgery — we must put up a fight. Disease may eventually claim our lives the way it claimed Bellizzi, but we can't allow disease to take our lives away.

Baseball was Bob Bellizzi's life, and he didn't allow leukemia to take baseball away from him. As he said back in 2001, "I wouldn't say that getting leukemia was good for me, but it has definitely given me a new perspective on things. It's kind of like sports in a way — you get knocked down, you have to get back up."

• Attending an Albany Conquest home game Saturday made me realize how much this region misses the Albany Firebirds.

It wasn't that the crowd of 5,156 at Pepsi Arena wasn't close to what the Firebirds used to draw (in fact, it was a good-sized crowd for the Conquest — or any Arena Football 2 team). It was that they were so subdued, as if they were still pinning for the days of "Touchdown" Eddie Brown. The public address announcer had to goad the fans into cheering loudly for the Conquest on their final two defensive series when they were protecting a slim lead over Manchester. When the Firebirds were around, all the P.A. announcer had to say was "Albany's on the defense!" and people would be on their feet — even if it was in the first quarter.

I'm not sure why local fans have been so reluctant to embrace the Conquest the last five

Consumers weigh cost of flights versus cost of driving

By JIM FRANCO

With gas prices hovering around $3 for a gallon of regular, it is often cheaper, and certainly quicker, to take a plane than a car.

"In my mind, air fare has always competed with car travel," said Hugo Burge, vice chairman of cheapflights.com, a Web site based in England and designed to find deals on plane tickets in the States and Europe. "Do the math and figure it out. Flying can be much cheaper than the automobile, especially if you are driving one of those big SUVs."

For example, if gas were $3 per gallon it would cost about $371 to drive a vehicle that gets 20 miles per gallon 2,478 miles round trip from Albany to Orlando, and take about 20 hours one way. A flight can cost between $108 and $325, depending on day and time. A direct flight can take a person from Albany to the Florida sun in about three hours.

Driving that same vehicle to Washington would take about six hours, and if gas were $3 per gallon, it would cost about $115. A flight takes just over an hour and a round-trip ticket can go for as little as $107.

On some flights, said Albany International Airport Director of Public Affairs Doug Myers, a person can travel for as little as 11 cents a mile.

One drawback to flying, however, is that once you get to your destination, you do not have an automobile. On the flip side, Myers said you do not put your automobile through the wear and tear.

"There is a certain amount of flexibility to having an automobile with you," Myers said. "We still want our automobile. That is why you see so many vehicles with one person in them. Gas prices have not caused us to make a real effort to car pool."

The family truckster is still a better bargain for a family of four, but when a person opts to fly, the cost of fuel is split among everyone on the plane, Burge said. Also, to keep costs down, many airlines are taking planes off line to increase the number of people on each flight. A plane with only 30 percent of its seats empty is more economical than one with 40 percent, Myers said.

Airlines are struggling with high fuel costs as well, but Southwest Airlines, said spokeswoman Whitney Eichinger, there's a fuel-hedging program that allows them to buy fuel at much lower costs. She said the airline is trying to increase company revenues other than increase fares like offering flights in different cities, implementing different marketing strategies and cutting costs.

"For 35 years we have been able to make a profit by offering low fares," she said. "It has been our business model since the beginning, and we have been in that niche forever."

Despite continued financial problems with the airline industry across the board, there was a record 11.5 million departures in 2005, with carriers transporting 738.6 million passengers, according to the federal Bureau of Transportation Statistics.

Emplanements in Albany, however, decreased by 5 percent from this time last year. Over the last five years, the number increased by 30 percent, and Myers contributes the recent decline to the high cost of driving a car and heating a home leaving little money for people to take trips.

"America's love affair with the automobile is starting to hit them where it hurts," Burge said.

been an all-out blitz to drive the country's air traffic into the digital information age and bring with it an efficiency that cuts down on travel time, resources and fuel costs.

"We have been running demonstrations in Alaska. It is the last great aviation frontier," said FAA spokesman James Peters. Today's system began as the Free Flight program some years ago, and has since boiled down to a series of operation acronyms and new digital systems. "Essentially (the programs) allow planes to fly point-to-point without ground-based points."

Planes fly on what are called "jet ways," said Peters.

Ground based navigational aids — aka radar — dot the U.S. landscape throughout a flight. From one check point to the next, around other airborne craft and weather cells, jets hit coordinates like a slalom skier making the 2,700 nautical mile trip to L.A. The car below, assuming it beelines for the city of angels, would have traveled 2,800 ground miles.

In its trip to L.A., the plane has flown over 400 miles, or 353 nautical miles, out of its way. According to plane manufacturer Boeing's Web site — the makers of the 747 jumbo jet — their craft burns 5 gallons of fuel per mile. In this hypothetical and roundabout path to Los Angeles, it has burned off an additional 2,035 gallons, not to mention additional carbon emissions and noise pollution.

At a recent Albany International Airport Authority meeting, Chief Executive Officer John O'Donnell reiterated a report from FAA Administrator Marion Blakely to board members and airport staff. In the report, the FAA estimated that when these new systems are fully integrated, carriers could save as much as 500 million gallons of fuel annually.

At $70 per barrel, rising oil prices are a great concern to air carriers, according to the report.

In January, low-fare airliner Independence Air shut down its operation, citing rising fuel prices, amongst others. It had been in business for less than two years as one of Albany's low-fare carriers.

The new systems won't drag airlines out of bankruptcy, but they are certain to cut costs.

The FAA has been working diligently over the last five years to bring new systems into ground-based operations and to pilots in the air. New Ground Positioning Systems are now aboard aircraft. And high-speed computers are at the hands of ground controllers across the country. Though they operate independently of each other, these systems when combined are reducing flight times and risk. Saving on fuel — even 500 million gallons annually — is only a fraction of the benefits.

The User Request Evaluation Tool (URET) is a recently unearthed relic of the original Free Flight program that will be completed in the coming months. It had taken nearly 30 years for the system to take hold. In 2003 it began showing up in air traffic control centers nationwide when Lockheed Martin improved upon the FAA prototype and implementation into ground-based systems spread across the country.

This month, the system was added to ground control centers in New York. By mid-summer, Miami will be the last center of 20 to have the system installed.

"URET is a tool that can look ahead for conflicts (in the air)," said Tom Spellenberg, project manager for development and deployment of URET for the FAA.

This year will mark the end of the current system, which left the job of predicting a conflict between craft in the air at the hands of ground controllers. Paper printouts were studied, and controllers made their best judgment on a particular route a pilot would request, said Spellenberg.

The new system can pick up potential air traffic conflicts 20 minutes into the future. In real time, each of the 20 URET stations nationwide compiles where the traffic is and where it's going; altitude, speed and weather in the flight path. Instead of last minute fuel-consuming corrections to evade potential danger, the end result is a smooth, conflict-free, fuel-efficient flight across the country.

"It helps save fuel because pilots are now able to ask controllers for a more direct route that takes less time and burns less fuel," said FAA spokeswoman Tammy L. Jones by phone from the Washington D.C. offices.

It's in a pilot's best interest, and the wallet of the craft's owner, to fly a direct route.

The MITRE Corporation, which manages several federally funded projects including aviation system development, estimated that when URET was first implemented in 2003, it was to save air carriers $190 million annually due to increased route efficiency. As it nears completion, FAA officials couldn't say just how much the new system could save carriers.

However, air carriers are taxiing into a win-win situation as technology develops within the cockpits of their fleets. Whatever benefits come of the URET system will certainly piggyback new GPS on-board controls now being developed and installed in new aircraft.

Last week Eclipse Aviation, a manufacturer of the Eclipse-500 very light jet (VLJ), landed the first of a fleet that will soon call Albany International Airport home. The $1 million executive jet has customer options such as the Automatic Dependent Surveillance-Broadcast (ADS-B) and other early-warning detection systems, said Andrew Broom, company spokesman.

The new systems incorporate satellite Ground Positioning Systems that link every plane equipped with an Automatic Dependent Surveillance-Broadcast (ADS-B). URET links 20 ground control stations nationwide, so planes equipped with ADS-B will essentially be talking to each other.

Instead of using radar data to keep aircraft on the straight and narrow, the new GPS system uses real-time information. The system instantly takes speed, direction, altitude, traffic and weather readings and displays the information on high-definition screens in the plane's cockpit. Rather than relying solely on radar and ground control, the plane is instructing the pilot and other planes as to its course and speed. It will allow many craft to get off the beaten — fuel-consuming — path and take more direct routes to their destinations safely, said Jones. Coupled with its efficient trouble-free path given by ground controllers, the on-board GPS systems help pilots best implement that path.

It was this system that underwent relentless testing in Alaska. Without visual aids, jet ways and controllers' "best judgments," the planes sorted out their best possible point-to-point routes.

In March 2003, a Cessna Seneca equipped with a prototype ADS-B system flew out of Juneau International Airport using only GPS satellite guidance. The new system featured real-time terrain modeling, airspeed, groundspeed and altitude that was coupled with weather and air traffic information.

Systems like the ADS-B opened 41,000 miles of air space over 1,521 nautical miles in lower altitudes that otherwise would have been unavailable to conventionally equipped craft.

The ADS-B system has yet to be incorporated into many planes in the air. Systems ranging in applications are beginning to turn up in personal and commercial aircraft like those of the Eclipse Aviation fleet. However, some larger carriers have moved toward the cutting edge technology to get the most cost-effective and efficient use out of their fleets.

Last month, the United Parcel Service announced that it would be equipping its fleet of Boeing 757s and 767s with Boeing-made on-board display systems that support the ADS-B system.

UPS' first order of business was to incorporate the SafeRoute ADS-B system manufactured by Aviation Communication & Surveillance Systems of Phoenix, Ariz.

According to the company's Web site, one of SafeRoute's functions allows aircraft to display information that guides merging maneuvers and spacing behind other aircraft during flight arrivals. The new system allows pilots to keep engines near idle during descent, which saves hundreds of pounds of fuel at each landing approach. The system also enabled reductions in ambient noise below 3,000 feet.
