Boat charter and rental companies let you get to know every inch of the way

BY JIM CUOZZO

How would you like to explore the unique history of the Erie Canal from Albany to Buffalo or the Champlain Canal from Troy north to Glens Falls? Several experienced boat operators are offering day- and week-long excursions along the 338 miles of what was formerly known as Clinton's Ditch. You can select from yachts to floating houses with accommodations either on the boat or at hotels during your stops from Scotia to Seneca Falls.

Sara Wiles, co-owner of Mid Lakes Navigation of Skaneateles in Onondaga County, has been taking tourists from as far as Alaska and Hawaii along the canal's historic byways since 1968.

"My brother Peter is the president, Dan, another brother, is the Captain of Emta II, my sister helps book the charters, and I am the marketing director," said Wiles.

Emta II is a 65-foot long, 22-foot wide, 40-passenger vessel that makes runs from Buffalo, Syracuse, Albany and Troy each summer. The three-day excursion from Albany to Syracuse stops in Amsterdam and Little Falls before ending up on the west side of Oneida Lake near Brewerton.

"This canal route and our Champlain canal cruise, are the most scenic with lovely country and hills, in a really good area of Revolutionary War history," Wiles said. Although the Wiles family is quite knowledgeable about the history of the Erie Canal, so are many of the tourists who sign up for the journey.

"Some people are canal buffs and know everything about the history of the canal and that is fun for them," said Wiles. The Emta II makes 20 departures on average each summer, with a total of 700 guests signing up for the journey. About 15 percent of the people who take the three-day journey are repeat customers. Wiles said the interest in the Erie Canal is increasing.

Judge's ruling due regarding admissible evidence in Porco case

By JIM CUOZZO

Orange County Judge Jeffrey Berry is expected to release his ruling this week regarding what evidence presented in the pre-trial hearing on the Christopher Porco murder trial will be allowed during the trial. Porco is accused of killing his father Peter Porco and severely wounding his mother Joan Porco inside their former Brockley Drive, Delmar, home on Nov. 15, 2004.

Prosecutors believe Christopher Porco was not at the University of Rochester the night of the crime as he told authorities from the Bethlehem police department who questioned him the night following the murder.

Evidence submitted by Albany County prosecutors in the case against Christopher Porco includes a six-and-a-half hour videotape of Bethlehem detectives interrogating Porco inside the squad room of the station house on Delaware Avenue the night following the crime. Portions of the videotape revealed in pre-trial hearings show Porco

School budget rally begins

By JIM CUOZZO

The reinforcements for a "yes" vote in the Bethlehem School District budget revote June 20 have arrived. The combined Bethlehem School District PTAs are calling on the community to join the 'Bethlehem Families March' for the school budget Thursday, June 15, at 4:30 p.m. rain or shine. The rally will begin at the Middle School on Kenwood Avenue and continue to the Four Corners.

"We are really trying to get the word out to vote 'YES' for the school budget," said Slingerlands PTA co-president Angie Randles. "I was really disheartened by the first vote, and I know there is a strong group of people who were angry because they just didn't take the time to get out and vote," said Randles.

Bomb threat at high school

A report of a bomb threat received Tuesday May 30, at Bethlehem Central High School forced the temporary evacuation of students.

Communications director for the district Jessica Sheckton said the bomb threat report came in at 8:40 a.m. "School resource officers and police then began the investigation sweeping safe zone including the gym and auditorium," Sheckton said. Once those areas were deemed safe the student population waited there until the rest of the premises was swept.

"There were no bombs, and no explosive devices were found," Sheckton said. Students returned to their classes around midday.

They also were given a letter for their parents about the incident when they arrived home. School officials continue to investigate the incident. No arrests have been reported.

A bomb threat at Bethlehem Central Middle School was reported May 24. In that incident, school officials received a written warning saying a bomb was found in the school bathroom. No bomb was found, however school officials are aware of the individual who perpetrated the threat and disciplinary action is under way in that case.

Rec department prepares for busy summer season

By JIM CUOZZO

With seven different parks, three swimming pools, several athletic fields, basketball and tennis courts, along with a new spray park for children, summer 2006 is expected to be a busy one for the town of Bethlehem recreation department.

"The swimming pool will be open June 10, and our spray park should be open in July," said town parks and recreation Administrator Nan Lanahan.

The town spray park is the most exciting and costly venture. The spray park which includes water fountains, water spinners and buckets that spill water comes with one section for toddlers ages 2 to 4 years old and another section for children ages 5 to 12.

"It's been quite a long process but a lot of fun, and it's going to pay off," Lanahan said. The spray park was paid out of the town's capital reserves, however extra safety features mandated by the state forced the price tag to balloon about $150,000 over the estimated cost. A cryptosporidium outbreak at a spray park in Western New York last summer caused many people to come down with cramps and other stomach ailments. Lanahan said because of the problem all spray parks were forced to temporarily shut down until the state found the cause of the problem and put in new safety requirements.

"The new sanitary codes for spray grounds includes an ultraviolet light that acts as a disinfectant," Lanahan said. When recycled water from the fountains flows back through the pipes the ultra-violet light kills any bacteria present. "This was the reason for the added costs," according to Lanahan. There will also be programs including new projects and keeping up with what we currently have," said Lanahan.

Other parks maintained by the town include Selkirk Park, North and South Bethlehem Park, Henry Hudson Park and the town's newest park at Maple Ridge. June 10 will be a big day for Maple Ridge. "A lot of volunteers will be on hand to help put a park together in a day," said Lanahan. "There are 375 homes near the park so it will serve a lot of families there," Lanahan said.

Skateboarding has cropped up again as an issue to consider. A recent letter to the editor in The Spotlight addressed the issue of kids skateboarding around the Four Corners in Delmar and up and down the steps of a local church. Some residents want to see the town construct a skateboard park.

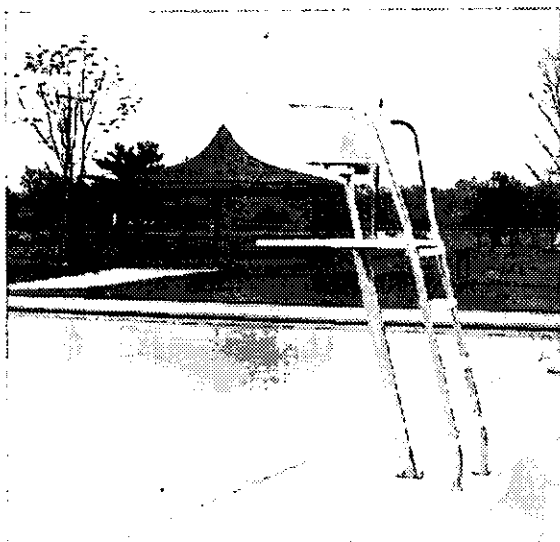

"There have been some concerns and I understand that," said Lanahan, "but financially it is just not a big enough priority to build a skate park." What the town could use in the future according to Lanahan is a community center. "That is my dream," Lanahan said. "A place where we have our own gym, our own aerobics room and a place that could benefit seniors as well." For information on the many summer programs offered by the town of Bethlehem Parks and Recreation Department, contact 439-4141 or visit the town's Web site, www.townofbethlehem.org fencing around the spray parks, and it will be supervised by staff when in operation.

Elm Avenue Park will also host several special events including family day on July 4, a late night swim July 14 with Hair of the Dog performing and "Dive-in" movie at the pool day scheduled for July 21.

Jason Gallo, assistant administrator is in charge of programs and special events for the department. Currently, Bethlehem's recreation department has 10 full-time staff with four part-timers hired annually and another 125 youth who work in the summer.

Camera captures images of survival

By JIM CUOZZO

Exposed Gallery of Art Photography, 318 Delaware Ave., in Delmar is extending its exhibit called "Recognition Beyond Burned: Portraits of Survival, Rebirth and Hope" through June 20.

"This is the first true public exhibit of my work, and it is very gratifying," said Slingerlands resident Steve Lobel, who has spent the past 40 years experimenting with the art of photography. After owning Cowan and Lobel for many years, Lobel is spending more time with his photography and an experience last summer in Baltimore at the Phoenix Society's World Burn Congress has changed his life.

Steve Lobel

"They are OK with themselves and proud of themselves, as well they should be," Lobel said. Kelly said the exhibit is stirring up emotions, and people are coming from everywhere to see this exhibit which will be moved upstairs and stay on display through the 21st.

"This exhibit is about the art of living, the permission to start to look deeper and the emotional healing for those who have been burned," said Lobel.

Over 400 people attended the Gallery opening of Lobel's exhibit. The exhibition will hit the road this summer for stops in Sacramento, Boston and Pittsburgh. An independent documentary film is also in production dealing with the subject matter. A book of the same title as the exhibit is on sale at Exposed Gallery of Art Photography. Proceeds from the book will go to support the Phoenix Society for Burn Survivors founded in 1972 by Alan Breslau. Breslau's portrait is also on display at the gallery. Breslau was severely burned in a 1963 airplane crash in Rochester.

"What I learned is that the inner human spirit comes through strong through the lens," Lobel said about his exhibit. "I felt an incredible sense of responsibility to get it right."

Lobel was fortunate to be able to capture 50 burn survivors with his camera lens, 32 of those portraits that currently hang in the Exposed Art Gallery run by Mark Joseph Kelly, also a burn survivor.

"I was burned as a 10-year-old on my leg when a kerosene heater exploded in a clubhouse," Kelly said. The story of each burn survivor captured by Lobel in this exhibit is similar. Autumn Burton was burned when an experiment by her chemistry teacher using petri dishes and methanol blew up. Joe Kinan, who attended the Board of education selects English supervisor for post at Glenmont Elementary

By JIM CUOZZO

Laura Heffernan, Bethlehem Central's elementary English language arts supervisor, has been named principal of Glenmont Elementary School. Heffernan was selected by the board of education following an interview process and will begin her new duties July 1.

"I'm very honored to be selected," said Heffernan. "Glenmont is a wonderful school, and I am looking forward to working there." The student population at Glenmont is 430 in grades one through five.

Heffernan believes her role will be challenging but very exciting. "As a principal you get to develop relations with the faculty, the students, the entire staff," said Heffernan. "Everybody has already been very supportive, all of the principals, Dr. (Les) Loomis, Mr. Tebbano, they have all been giving me advice," she said.

Heffernan replaces Betty Ahearn, who is leaving the district at the end of the school year. Ahearn has been principal at Glenmont since 2003. Heffernan has been teaching in the Bethlehem School District since 2000. As for the current issue of the school district budget being defeated in May Heffernan said "I am hopeful the new budget will pass on June 20."

Heffernan was selected from more than 100 people who applied for the Glenmont job. Nine candidates were interviewed overall, and Superintendent Les Loomis said Heffernan was the clear choice.

"I'm confident that her teaching and administrative experience, along with her commitment to Bethlehem's children, are the right match for Glenmont," said Loomis.

Heffernan lives in Niskayuna and is the parent of two children, ages 5 and 8.

"I've always loved working with students on the elementary level," said Heffernan. "I look forward to collaborating with the parents, faculty and staff to provide our children with the very best education experience possible," Heffernan said.

Barbecues are an 'eggsellent' way to have fun

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR

Commentary:

From
Robin's Nest

When I see deviled eggs at a party, I swoop in and grab one. I try not to be greedy, but I will go back for seconds once the other guests have had at least one pass by the buffet table.

So when I decided to make deviled eggs for a barbecue at my house, I was worried that I might lack the willpower to refrain from eating several of the appetizers before the guests arrived. And I didn't want to invest the time and not end up with enough to serve.

It had been many years since I deviled an egg. It's not as simple as you may think. And it was way more time-consuming than my regular appetizer recipes, which include steps such as "Open bag, pour pretzels into a bowl and serve."

With deviled eggs, you need time for boiling, cooling, shell peeling, lengthwise slicing, yolk removal, yolk mashing, yolk-mixture replacement and paprika sprinkling.

To avoid complete exhaustion, it's a good idea to boil the eggs the day before the party. This allows for sufficient chilling time for the eggs and a good night's rest for the cook before the real dirty work begins. As you spoon the mayonnaise into the yolk, don't be surprised if you suddenly realize that the "devil" in the dish comes in the form of fat and cholesterol.

It's simply more fun to eat deviled eggs than to make them.

Similarly, it's often more fun to go to a party than to host one.

Still, I love to have people over. I enjoy watching kids (and adults) play in my yard. I like to socialize.

But sometimes I forget to have fun at my own party.

Naturally, I blame my husband for this. I blame him and I also resent him because he makes a point of enjoying himself when we entertain.

It was his idea to host a Memorial Weekend barbecue. He mentioned this idea a good two weeks before the holiday.

Oh, sure, there he goes planning on having fun again, I thought to myself. Does he remember that our daughter's dance recital is taking place the Friday of that weekend? And that she is also marching in the parade on Monday?

Jeff tells me he is thinking Sunday would be a good day. I was thinking the same thing, because of our other obligations. I credit his pick as a lucky guess.

The day of the barbecue, I'm at the kitchen sink by 7:30 a.m. peeling the hard-boiled eggs. I want to have those deviled eggs arranged on a platter and waiting in the refrigerator. I don't want to spend the whole morning running around and tiring myself out. I want to be prepared.

My 9-year-old is on the couch watching TV. My husband is eating breakfast and reading the newspaper.

The party hasn't started and they're already relaxing!

Rachel announces that there are no good shows on. I suspect that she's dying to put on a video or DVD and float into couch potato mode before most of the town has even woken up.

I suggest that if she is bored she should take a shower, get dressed and eat breakfast. And then do some dusting, I add under my breath.

Two hours later I pass by her bedroom and she's still in her pajamas. She's sitting beside the dresser spreading stickers all over the floor.

My eyes grow wide as I exclaim: "You just cleaned your room yesterday, why are you dumping stuff out of drawers now? Please get into the bathroom."

I skulk off to my bedroom and relay the sticker atrocity to my husband. He suggests that I shower first rather than argue with our daughter. I realize this is an excellent idea. I sing meditative chants while standing under the running water. I decide I will go for a walk.

While I am drying my hair, Rachel knocks on the bathroom door. I open the door and see that she is dressed. First I just stare, thinking it's odd that she's decided to put on a sweatshirt when the weather is so warm. Then I register the two ponytails. She's not only dressed, but she did something with her hair.

Why did you get dressed when you need to take a shower? I ask. I feel my nostrils flaring. She looks at me blankly and says, "I forgot about the shower."

She forgot about the shower. Sure, that's possible, because I haven't mentioned it for the last 20 minutes.

First it's the mess of stickers, now the shower avoidance. It's more than I can bear. I go into parental tirade mode.

My husband tries to put an end to the chaos.

"GET INTO THE SHOWER NOW!" Jeff yells to Rachel, his manly voice booming through the neighborhood. I slam the front door shut and scream up the stairs about not wanting the neighbors to listen to us yell at each other.

Then I put on my sneakers, grab my cell phone, and head out for my walk.

I call my girlfriend, Donna, to relay the agony of the morning. As I describe the events I realize the trivial nature of my complaints and I can't believe I even got upset.

"So what you're telling me is that your child was occupying herself," Donna says.

This was true. Rachel had not been underfoot.

"You're just stressed because you've got company coming and she can sense that," my friend explains.

Somehow my stress causes people to not want to shower. It always comes back to being my fault.

"And she's going to be running around in the sun getting dirty and sweaty, so she won't stay clean from a morning shower too long anyway," my friend continues.

What about the yelling that the entire world could hear? I ask my confidante. She replies, "Just because your neighbors are smart enough to keep their windows and doors shut when they yell doesn't make them better than you."

I laugh at her wise words and my mood is lightened.

It's a beautiful sunny day, the deviled eggs are made, and I am going to spend the afternoon with friends. What's there to worry about?

Several hours pass and the guests arrive. One group of kids starts a softball game, another bunch busies themselves with hide-and-go seek. The adults are relaxing and chatting.

The barbecue is in full swing. I go into the house to get a serving spoon for one of the side dishes.

"Some ketchup got on the carpet," says one of the children who were indoors cooling off.

"There's no eating in the family room," I announce calmly with the intent of warding off additional spills. "But don't worry about it. Just go outside and I'll clean it up," I say merrily, arming myself with a paper towel.

Apparently, one kid's hot dog, generously covered in ketchup, had broken free from its roll and escaped into my family room. Either that, or a roll, generously covered in ketchup, had escaped from the hot dog. It's also possible that the only roll involved was the method the hot dog used to leave the plate.

"Some ketchup" turns out to be one rather large red glob and another smallish one, separated by several inches. Knowing the power of tomatoes, I pause momentarily at the realization that my carpet will likely bear a permanent stain.

Meanwhile, my friend Ruth sets to work doing damage control with damp paper towels and some baking soda. I have little resolve and no Resolve (carpet cleaner) to handle the task. Ruth is amazingly dedicated to the cleanup even though her kids weren't involved.

My husband is outside minding the grill, oblivious to the condiment incident. He is still enjoying himself.

I join him on the deck, make myself a plate of food and actually sit down to enjoy the company of friends and family!

Then the day, like the platter of deviled eggs, is gone in a flash.

County plans gas tax cap; some doubt actual savings

By GRAHAM S. PARKER

County legislators are looking to piggyback on a state sales tax cap on gasoline by the July 4 weekend.

On June 1, an 8 cents per gallon state sales tax cap went into effect. With it, state legislators approved a measure to allow local governments to follow suit.

Albany County legislators held a public hearing on Tuesday to gauge public comment on a proposed county sales tax cap of 8 cents per gallon, identical to the state cap.

The move is to keep gas tax revenues in check, said Majority Leader Frank J. Commisso.

"In fairness to the residents of Albany County, when we did our budget, it (the tax) was prepared at $2 per gallon. We came up with a number, but after seeing a 33 percent increase (in gas prices), it's (that number) not the right thing to do to taxpayers," he said.

Both state and county leaders have estimated that the cap will drop prices at the pump by 4 cents per gallon.

However, the New York Association of Convenience Stores (NYACS) has placed the savings more in the 2.5 to 3-cent range.

State and local sales tax on gas is set at 4 four percent of the price per gallon. The state's cap limits the tax to 8 cents per gallon once prices reach $2 per gallon.

What state and county leaders have done to ease prices at the pump is move the tax rate away from a percentage per gallon rate to a fixed rate, said NYACAS president James Calvin. The move passes saving down to consumers and keeps the state and counties from reaping large windfall profits as gas prices climb.

Supporters of the gas cap theorized that under the current 4 percent rate, consumers were paying 12 cents in state sales tax on a $3 gallon of gas. The idea being that if the tax is capped at 8 cents, it would save consumers 4 cents, he said.

"It was an erroneous assumption," said Calvin. "The assumption that you were paying 12 cents is not true, it is more like 10.8 cents per gallon."

Calvin plotted the course of state and local taxes as the track from a wholesaler's purchase at the Port of Albany that is in turn sold to retailers and then consumers. The formula is much more complex than it needs to be, said Calvin.

Retailers of gasoline do not apply the 4 percent tax rate to the selling price of a gallon of gas. Instead, they apply the tax only after various state and local taxes have been prepaid by wholesalers. In the case of a $3 gallon of gas, the retailer would be applying a 4 percent tax rate to $2.70 per gallon. If the tax were capped at 8 cents, the savings comes back at 2.8 cents, not 4, said Calvin.

Calvin praised state and county officials' efforts to stabilize prices for consumers. But, he warned of other factors that impact retail prices, such as gas prices retailers pay to wholesalers, which have been fluctuating in recent weeks, he said. These increases could wipe out the savings to consumers through the tax cap.

On Tuesday, May 30 — two days before the state's cap went into effect — those prices increased by 4.1 cents, according to Albany County Comptroller Michael F. Conners II.

If that does happen, the county can drop the tax cap at any time and readjust the tax to decreases and increases in fuel costs, said Commisso. The county is putting $4 million in tax revenue on the line to ease costs at the pump. The county tax is split 60 percent to the county and 40 percent to local municipalities.

Savings is savings, according to Conners, but leaders are not looking in the right place to see real results.

"It's an emotional issue and this is one of those feel-good measures," he said. "You have to nip it at the trading end of the line and look at the wholesale prices."

Conners suggested that the state empower the Consumer Affairs Department to track the wholesale prices and dealer delivered prices versus the price at the pump.

Although the math may be fuzzy — which is the product of a complicated and intricate taxing system — the bottom line is that the county is releasing its hold on more than $4.5 million in tax revenue in addition to the state's $450 million in gas tax revenue and that is saving taxpayers money.

Even if your air conditioner was tuned-up last year, it still needs a tune-up this year. ## Stay safe this summer

You always know it's the growing season in the Northeast as there are lawnmowers humming throughout the neighborhood at all times of day. Add to that hedge clippers, edgers and any number of motorized gadgets all purring away in your back yard. Since June is National Safety Month, it's a good time to bone up on how to avoid accidents.

And since many of the operators of these gadgets and gizmos are our kids, mostly trying to earn a few bucks, it's a perfect time to remind kids of dos and don'ts of working outdoors.

The National Medical Safety Societies have a few rules we can review with our kids.

Kids under age 12 should not be allowed to use a power mower and kids under 16 should never use a ride-on.

Sturdy shoes, not sandals, should be worn when mowing.

Mowers should be started and refueled outdoors, not in the garage. Make sure the motor is off when refueling. Keep pets inside or in an enclosed area.

Small children should be kept a safe distance from the work area.

With less than a month of school before vacation, it's also the perfect time to discuss bike safety rules with kids. First and foremost, kids should wear safety helmets. Helmets can help to prevent serious head injury.

Bicyclists should ride with the flow of traffic and use hand signals when making turns. Many communities offer bike safety courses during the spring to reinforce the importance of following the rules.

Kids riding together should ride single file. Bikes, like motorized mowers and tools, should also have a safety overhaul before taking them out on the road or the lawn.

Adult and teenage drivers need to exercise greater vigilance on the roadways since more younger kids will be taking advantage of the nice weather.

Many suburban streets do not have sidewalks, and smaller kids may be used to playing on the road shoulder. It is extremely important to not speed in these neighborhoods. It only takes a split second to have an accident, but it can take a whole lifetime to live with the consequences of one.

Let's get in the habit of making safety a priority. Have a safe and happy summer.

Father 'nose' best in nation's capital

By PETER CRUMMEY

The writer is a Colonie town justice and a practicing attorney.

You know that one does not have to be an attorney in order to serve on the Supreme Court of the United States?

That is what I was told recently by a Supreme Court tour guide during our family's annual pilgrimage to Washington, D.C.

The tour guide went on to note that the only requirements to serve on the Supreme Court are that one be nominated by the president and confirmed by the Senate. The tour guide suggested that those requirements alone ensure proper qualification for service as a Supreme Court justice.

Our family trip to Washington, D.C. is always memorable. How will we ever forget the action inside the minivan during the 6-plus hour trip?

Movies help, but seven people inside the minivan get restless from time to time. My spouse purchased some movies before we left. One of the movies, Jerry McGuire, stars Tom Cruise. You remember, "Show me the money." Anyway, the video store cashier assured her these movies were appropriate for our group.

During the Cruise video, I realized a scene did not sound appropriate to me. I almost drove the van into the median of the Delaware Turnpike. The passengers had a great time laughing and marveling at what they might have seen in the split second before Dad terminated that video.

Point of View

Nonetheless, I am empowered during each of our visits to our nation's Capitol.

This year, in addition to the Supreme Court, we visited Arlington National Cemetery and the home of George Washington Custis, whose daughter married General Robert E. Lee. We also visited the National Zoo. We always go to the zoo. The children love the hippopotamus. Why does it open its mouth so unnecessarily wide? Maybe it is so the zookeeper can spray that hose into its mouth.

Visiting Arlington National Cemetery for our first time was a very moving experience. My aunt's fiancée, as well. Did you know the Supreme Court did not have its own Court House until 1935? Prior to that, the Court convened, when necessary, in the Capitol. An oversized statue of a seated former Chief Justice John Marshall has been moved from the Capitol lawn to the basement floor of the Supreme Court building. Chief Justice Marshall, who served from 1801-1835, is credited with clarifying and fortifying the power of the Supreme Court in his decision of Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch 137, 5 US 137, 2 L.Ed.60 (1803). The history behind this landmark decision has been addressed by many authors more decorated than this writer, but the tour guide told us that politics play no role in the workings of the Supreme Court.

While we took photographs of ourselves around Chief Justice Marshall, the woman at the nearby information desk engaged us in conversation. She remarked about our family resemblance wherein I responded, "Thank God the children all look like their mother." The woman agreed and stated that while my eyes were OK, my nose was larger than she thought it should be. My children roared with laughter and have quoted her ever since. I sheepishly walked away from the Chief Justice's statue checking out his nose. I guess because justice is blind, judges require an enhanced proboscis.

I always learn something on our family trip to our nation's Capitol. This time, I learned, among other things, that while one does not need to be an attorney to be a justice, it may be important for a justice to possess a keen sense of smell.

The tour guide went on to note that the only requirements to serve on the Supreme Court are that one be nominated by the president and confirmed by the Senate. The tour guide suggested that those requirements alone ensure proper qualification for service as a Supreme Court justice.

who died in a flight-training mission in California during World War II, is buried there. My aunt never married. Many well known people have their final resting place there also.

We paid our respects at the burial site of President John F. Kennedy and his family. Nearby, we visited the area set aside for New York's U.S. Sen. Robert Kennedy. My 12-year-old daughter and I briefly stood behind a father and son, as we all paid our respects to Senator Kennedy. The father told his son that Senator Kennedy died in a car crash five years after his brother, the president, was assassinated. Who has ever seen Jay Leno's sidewalk civic lesson interviews on "The Tonight Show?" All of us could learn more about the history of our great nation. Institutional knowledge often is a great educator for future generations.

Our evening visits to the lighted Jefferson and Lincoln memorials were powerful. I love the Jefferson quotes chiseled into the walls of his memorial. His observations, regarding the need for flexibility in institutions and laws, are timeless.

Our visit to the Supreme Court taught me other facts,

Take a trek through some of the area's best gardens

Editor, The Spotlight:

Last June my husband and I had the honor and pleasure of hosting one of Bethlehem Garden Club's display gardens.

It was a rewarding experience both for us and for the hundreds of folks who walked through our and the four other gardens on the tour. We all, amateur and expert alike, learned gardening tips from each other: what grows well here (and what doesn't), all about shade gardens, wild flower gardens, garden ponds and waterfalls, and so forth.

Once again this year on June 14, the Bethlehem Garden Club is hosting another garden tour. Everyone is welcome to participate in the tour. Tickets for the tour will be on sale the day of the event from 4 to 8 p.m. at the Price Chopper parking lots in Slingerlands and Glenmont for $12. The tour itself can be taken from either location, and maps with driving instructions and garden descriptions will be provided.

This year, the gardens featured will be in Glenmont, Delmar and Slingerlands.

If you decide to participate, and I hope you do, here are some helpful hints to increase your touring pleasure:

Wear clothing appropriate to the weather. Shoes should be appropriate to lawn and garden trekking.

Bring a camera and notebook, but ask permission to take photos.

It's fine to ask questions of the hosts or garden club docents, but do not take cuttings, seed heads, fruits or berries.

Note sun gardens, shade gardens, how the garden fits in with the house, landscape and neighborhood, color schemes, etc.

In addition to participating in the tour, you may also be interested in the plant sale, which will be held in conjunction with the tour. The plant sale is open to all and will be held at an area adjacent to one of the gardens. Iced tea and lemonade will also be provided for tour guests.

All proceeds from the garden tour are returned to the community in the form of the various gardens sponsored and maintained by the Bethlehem Garden Club. These gardens are seen on Route 32 on Delaware Avenue, at the Bethlehem Public Library, on Cherry and Kenwood avenues and in Ravena. Check out the newest garden at town hall.

Come join us for the tour. You won't be disappointed.

Officials from Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk schools hold a mock DWI crash for students in front of the high school on Route 9W in Ravena.

Jim Cuozzo

Mock DWI crash teaches 'real life' lessons

BY JIM CUOZZO

Prom nights for most high school students can be one of the best moments of their young adult lives. Unfortunately, when a lethal combination of alcohol and driving enters the picture, the night can turn ugly, even deadly.

That is why Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk school sponsored a mock DWI crash in front of the high school on Route 9W the Wednesday before prom night. The event is designed to provide students with a "real life" look at the consequences of bad decision-making before their prom night.

"The object with young people is that they need to see the visual," said Lenny Crouch, senior investigator with the Albany County Sheriff's Department. "It's like reality TV, you can tell them a thousand times but they have to see it for themselves."

The DWI simulation is complete with a wrecked car, fire department trucks, personnel and paramedics all the way down to a mock Town Court setting similar to one a person would see if arrested after a DWI crash.

During last week's re-enactment, RCS High School Senior Anna Brooks played the part of a high school student on prom night, all decked out in a blue prom dress, enjoying her evening out when she takes the wheel with her date in the passenger seat only to end up in an accident because of alcohol.

"We see car crashes like this at least six times a year," said Town of Ravena Justice Virginia Person.

"Unfortunately, DWI accidents still happen every weekend," said Crouch.

Students asked what the ramifications are when a person is arrested for driving drunk.

"We don't care if you're young, your middle age or you're a senior," said Town Justice George Dardani. "If you drive with more than .08 percent blood alcohol content, we are going to take your license from you." Dardani said.

Brooks said she planned on attending her prom, and definitely wouldn't drink and drive.

Crouch said this is the 10th Mock DWI the Albany County Sheriff's Department has conducted this season.

Ravena-Coeymans police along with local fire and rescue squads were present at the drill.

St. Thomas students go the distance

The faculty and student body of St. Thomas the Apostle School in Delmar has come to the aid of an employee and a friend in need.

School cleaner Joseph Marro was diagnosed with cancer last fall. After a few weeks of brainstorming and looking for the best way for everyone in the school to get involved, three major fundraising events were held, and to date have raised over $14,500 to defray the cost of Marro's medical treatment.

"We are a community who does as much as possible for people in need," said St. Thomas the Apostle school Principal Thomas Kane.

The three events held included a "caring for coins" bucket that was placed in the front of the school. Students and faculty dropped change in the bucket as they came and went to and from class each day. "Caring for coins" raised $2,000.

Boy Scouts held a car wash fundraiser in the spring, which brought in another $2,500. The main fundraising event was held last week. "Miles for Marro," a walk-a-thon raising $10,000 with the entire 249 student population consisting of preschool and grade K-8 involved.

"It was a true community effort and it shows a lot about who we are here at the school," said Kane. Marro has been employed with the school for the past four years, and even though he is undergoing treatments for his illness, he still finds the time to stop by every month, said Kane.

"The children are also helping to keep the school clean in Mr. Marro's absence by picking up after themselves and keeping items orderly," said Kane.

V'Ville residents will have to clean up or pay up

Village adopts law requiring residents to remove snow

By ART STEIN

It may be spring, but the Voorheesville village board is already looking ahead to winter. At its May 23 meeting, the board held a public hearing regarding the amendment and supplementation of a 1958 ordinance concerning snow and ice removal from sidewalks that are adjacent to property owners in the village. The amended law requires that property owners be responsible for maintaining clean sidewalks on their property. In addition to snow and ice removal, Local Law No. 2 of 2006 requires that the owner and occupants shall keep the sidewalk area in good and safe repair and free from defects, weeds, litter, garbage and obstructions of any kind. Owners and occupants are also responsible for trimming hedges and shrubbery so as to not obstruct the free use of the public right-of-way. The law requires that within 12 hours of any snow or ice precipitation, the property owner or occupant remove the snow and ice and keep it free from additional accumulation. The law further states that the village shall not be held liable for the failure of any property owner to adhere to the revised regulations.

Should property owners not comply with the laws, the village can remove the snow, ice or debris, and add that resident's cost to his or her next village tax bill. Any violation of the law may also be liable to a penalty in an amount not to exceed $100.

The board is also in the process of conforming to United States

Environmental Protection Agency and state Department of Environmental Conservation Storm Water Phase II requirements by implementing a new storm water management program. The purpose of the program is to revise regulations and establish guidelines that will clean up and protect the streams, rivers, ponds and lakes of New York. The program will include the passage of new local laws that will prevent certain improper discharges to the village's storm water system as well as control runoff from construction sites.

"We will conduct outreach and education programs to help the residents of our community comply with the regulations," said Superintendent of Public Works Will Smith.

The board also reported that the water interconnect with the town of Guilderland is expected to be completed this summer.

"The interconnect represents the final phase of the village's water system project and will provide an alternate supply of water in the event of an emergency," said Mayor Robert Conway. The board declared that the water interconnect will have no significant environmental impact under the State's Environmental Quality Review Act (SEQRA).

Village Attorney Anne-Jo McTague proposed a resolution that the board adopted, establishing the village as the lead agency under SEQRA for resident access to village water.

Smith also reported on the purchase of pedestrian crosswalk signs, in an effort to slow down traffic in the village. The board agreed to purchase three new crosswalk signs pending approval from the state Department of Transportation. Smith estimated that each sign will cost approximately $250 to $300.

Rich Reilly, intra-municipal liaison for the town of New Scotland, discussed some of the issues surrounding the Outdoor Music Fest Saturday, July 22 from 4 to 9 p.m. at the Elementary School. Reilly discussed the possibility of selling food and inviting a number of craft vendors to participate in the festivities. The next scheduled event at the Village Gazebo will take place on July 5 at 7 p.m. when Albany rock combo the Lustre Kings will perform.

The next board meeting is scheduled for June 27 at 7 p.m.

Volunteers needed for playground installation

The Town of Bethlehem and the Friends of Maple Ridge Park are pleased to announce that the playground equipment for Maple Ridge Park is scheduled to be installed on Saturday, June 10. However, to make the playground a reality in time for summer we need the community's help and are looking for at least 30 volunteers to work with a crew from the playground manufacturer to install the equipment.

Leading up to June 10, the town will begin the preliminary work on the playground area. The playground will include two distinct play areas. One for children ages 2-5 years and the other for children 6-12, both will include slides, various climbers, tubes as well as swings.

"We would like to thank the Friends of Maple Ridge Park for their ongoing fundraising efforts and let everyone know that their hard work has already paid off," said Nan Lanahan administrator of Bethlehem's department of Parks and Recreation "When I informed the committee that the final plan had come in approximately $2,000 over budget and that we needed to remove some equipment they simply told me don't change a thing we've already raised over $2,000. This volunteer effort will make this new playground a reality," Lanahan said.

To date the Friends of Maple Ridge Park have raised over $5,500 from community residents and local businesses. Thanks to the generosity of nearly 100 residents The Friends of Maple Ridge Park were able to provide $2,000 toward the purchase of the playground equipment. Among the items included, because of the additional $2,000, were overhead climbers and additional swings. The committee will continue its fundraising efforts toward either a pavilion or additional playground equipment. For information or if you wish to contribute visit our Web site at www.mapleridgepark.org.

The event is on Saturday, June 10 rain or shine, from 8 a.m. until the job gets done. The Park is located on Elm Ave. East between the entrances of Dutch Mills and the Enclave.

If you and/or your organization would like to volunteer on Saturday, June 10, please contact Lanahan from Parks and Recreation via e-mail at Nlanahan@townofbethlehem.org or call her at 439-4131. Food and beverages will be provided. All you need to bring is your enthusiasm and good cheer.

we are doing it on a shoestring already," said Edwards.

If the June 20 revote is again defeated, the district will have to go to a contingency budget with a total of $1.4 million in cuts. "That means more teachers will be cut, more athletics will be cut and more teaching staff will be eliminated," said Randles.

People who support the school district are asked to bring signs and support for passing the revised budget.

"Bethlehem is a town that is supportive of education, and this is an opportunity to express that concern," said Edwards.

Elimination of field trips, extracurricular activities and cuts in teaching positions and clerical staff are just some of the proposed reductions up for a revote. The overall district tax increase has also been reduced from 5.45 percent to 3.75 percent with the proposed changes. A public hearing on the revised Bethlehem School District budget will be held at the board of education June 7 meeting at the district offices on Adams Place.

hearing was held, and the student has been suspended until February of next year," said Superintendent Les Loomis. The district is also pressing charges against the middle school student who called in the threat.

Officials want parents to know that issuing a false bomb threat toward a school is a Class E felony in New York. Individuals convicted of a bomb threat could face felony criminal prosecution, as well as a one-year suspension of their driver's license.

"Calling in a bomb threat is the wrong thing to do, and it is disruptive," Loomis said. "I don't think students realize they will be suspended for a semester and receive a felony charge if they are caught," said Loomis.

being asked by police to take a lie detector test to prove his innocence, but Porco refused.

Prosecutors are setting up a case to show that Christopher Porco was having serious family problems and financial issues prior to the time the crime was committed. Prosecutors believe Porco may have faked a burglary at his family's home the night of the attacks. Items previously stolen from the Porco family home were sold online and traced back to Christopher Porco, according to authorities. Prosecutors also believe Christopher's mother, Joan Porco, tried to tell police who her assailant was the morning after the attacks. As paramedics worked to keep her alive, police asked if Christopher Porco committed the crime. Four different people present in the Porco bedroom that night all testified that Joan Porco nodded "yes" when asked if Christopher Porco committed the crime. Joan Porco could not speak because her wounds were so severe and she now has no recollection of that night whatsoever.

The defense, led by attorneys Terrence Kindlon and Laurie Shanks, believe police violated their client's constitutional rights the night Porco was questioned by authorities. "My sense is we really made a very persuasive case for exclusion of the videotape and all the information that was extracted during that interrogation," said Kindlon.

John Polster, a lawyer and close friend of the Porco family, was at the Bethlehem Police station the night Porco was questioned, but was not allowed inside the squad room. According to sworn testimony given at the pre-trial hearings, Porco stated that Polster was a family friend and not his lawyer.

Kindlon also tried to have Assistant District Attorneys Michael McDermott and David Rossi disqualified from handling the case because they were inside the Bethlehem police station the night Porco was being questioned. Kindlon believes Porco was never read his Miranda Rights. Porco signed a statement informing him of his rights, but was never orally read his entire Miranda Rights.

"A lot of issues will require extensive search to determine what is and isn't admissible," said Judge Berry during the pre-trial.

The defense will also file a motion to move the trial out of

Terrence Kindlon

Albany County because of all the pre-trial publicity since the attacks.

"There is a real danger that it is virtually impossible for Christopher Porco to receive a fair trial, at least in Albany County," Kindlon said.

Meanwhile, Christopher Porco is out on bail and living at the home of Elaine LaForte and her family in Glenmont. Porco is also working at LaForte's business, Bethlehem Veterinary Hospital in Glenmont. He has worked there since 2000.

The trial is expected to start next week after jury selection is complete. Berry will allow up to 10 days for the jury to be picked. Joan Porco was present every day of the pre-trial hearings and is expected to be present when the trial begins. Peter Porco worked as a law clerk for the state Appellate Division in Albany County at the time of his murder.

defeat in more than 20 years. The original $73.3 million plan has been trimmed by more than $800,000 by the school board in two separate budget workshops following the 'No' vote.

Michelle Simard, co-president of Elmsmere's PTA said it was her mom, a longtime resident of the town who came up with the idea behind the rally.

"She feels we need to send a message to the town and to the school district that we do care about children's education and yes it is important to vote 'Yes'. Simard understand the burden of property taxpayers but added "if we don't fund our children's education, there is no one else around to do it."

"As bad as the cuts are, we cannot go to a contingency budget," said Hamagrael PTA co-president Christine Edwards. "Our school district is one of the best in the Capital District and

Keep that hometown paper around the house

Community newspapers' circulation is, in general, on the increase.

While we have, as a society begun to be more and more hungry for immediate gratification, i.e., gathering international, national and regional news from the Internet almost as it is unfolding, thus causing a decline in daily newspaper readership, as a community we hunger for the hometown news that community papers deliver so well.

Papers like The Spotlight fill a growing need to supply readers with hometown information, high school sports scores, town meeting results and school board meeting debates. This is information that is supplied on a hyper-local level that dailies simply by their coverage areas, or the Internet due to its vastness are unable to supply. As a result, while people sit at their computers at work and have national news links running throughout the day, they come home at night and pick up the hometown paper to see what happened at Johnny's school last week, or the who won the 4H Club latest contest.

The great thing about community papers is they have a shelf life.

If a reader misses the Tuesday daily paper, chances are he or she will not read it on Wednesday. If you happen to have advertised in the Tuesday paper, your message has been missed by that reader and a potential sale is lost.

If, on the other hand, said reader happens to not get to the community paper on Wednesday, he or she might very well read the paper on Thursday or even over the weekend. Community papers do stay in the home from issue until the next issue.

Well, I'd best get to the notes on my desk.

LOW STRESS REAL ESTATE SALES

Making a housing move gets high marks on the stress scale, whether you are buying or selling a home. In addition to the fact that there is a great deal of money involved, there are many factors that can complicate or delay a real estate transaction.

A professional real estate agent works to minimize the stress involved in the process and to make your settlement as a problem-free as possible. Your Realtor will facilitate the transaction by monitoring the loan, coordinating inspections and repairs, facilitating relocation issues, and working to solve any unforeseen difficulties that arise during the whole process. The negotiation process often involves pressure and uncertainty, as all parties try to reach an agreement on the details of the sale. Once the complex range of issues have been appropriately handled, the Realtor will also help ensure a smooth transition by reminding the sellers to arrange for final utility readings and the buyers to set up new utility accounts.

For professional advice on all aspects of buying and selling real estate, call me at Coldwell Banker Prime Properties, 518-640-4444 or email me at abbey@cbpp.com

Cool ideas for saving energy this summer

Electricity demand in New York State continues to grow. Once again this summer, when hot weather places even greater demand on New York's electric grid, supplies may be tight, especially in New York City and Long Island. Statewide, the New York Independent System Operator (ISO) forecasts that we should have enough electricity to meet demand. It projects that New York's 2006 peak demand will be 33,295 megawatts (MW), 1,220 MW higher than last summer. Add another 5,993 MW for the required cushion, and the total need for 2006 is 39,288 MW.

In the past few years, new generating plants have come on line, improvements to older plants have been made, and demand reduction programs have been implemented that are helping meet the need. But if we have a prolonged heat wave, the margin between peak demand and available supply could be tight.

What to expect

This summer, you may be asked to help ensure system reliability and the availability of electricity by conserving energy. Your efforts can make a big contribution to the plans of utilities, large-use customers and New York State that go into effect during a heat wave. If everyone reduces the amount of electricity they use just a little, it can make a big difference.

Adequate supply and reliability

On an extremely hot day, New York's electric utilities may take steps to maintain system reliability. Utilities may:

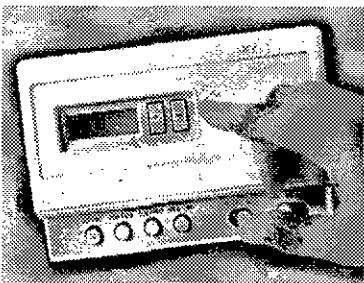

- Issue public appeals to residential customers on the radio and TV.
- Ask large customers to reduce their consumption.
- Ask customers to voluntarily reduce consumption.

What you should do

Using less electricity or shifting usage to off-peak hours will help ensure that there will be an adequate supply for everyone and can help lower your bills.

- Use major appliances early or late in the day.
- Turn off your air conditioner when you leave home or set the thermostat at 78 degrees or higher.

- Use an electric fan to bring in cool air from outside during morning or evening.

- Close curtains or blinds during the day to block out heat from the sunlight.

- Shop for the ENERGY STAR® symbol for energy efficiency when you're in the market for a new air conditioner or major appliances.

Protect your appliances

Using dedicated surge protectors can help protect your appliances from power surges. In the event of a power outage or voltage reduction:

- Disconnect your personal computer, VCR, DVD, TV, microwave and stereo.
- Turn off other appliances that were on to prevent blowing fuses or tripping circuit breakers when power is restored.

Protect yourself

To protect your health and safety if your electricity goes out:

- Check to see if your neighbors have power.
- Notify your utility of the outage.
- Keep a battery-powered radio, flashlight and batteries on hand.
- Have at least one phone in your house that does not require household electricity.
- Have a list of emergency numbers available.
- Keep refrigerator and freezer doors closed as much as possible.

- Register special needs customers (blind, elderly, disabled) with their utility so they receive priority attention.
- Follow all safety precautions for operating portable generators.

During an energy alert, your actions can help maintain the system. If an energy alert is announced, make every effort to reduce your electricity use. Turn off all non-essential electrical devices, lights and appliances.

Registration is necessary. There is a materials fee of $8 for one adult and one child and $3.50 for each additional child. The materials fee for Friends of Five Rivers members is $6 for one

Keeping inside air clean fights allergies

Many products claim to clean your indoor air, but there are a few reference points that can tell you which ones work best.

During summer allergy season, many of us start thinking about the quality of the air we breathe outdoors. But are we considering indoor air quality as well? According to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), indoor air may be four to five times more polluted than outdoor air. And with Americans spending nearly 90 percent of our time inside, we often take indoor air quality for granted.

The average home has 72 trillion allergens floating in the air.

"No matter how hard or how often you clean, those tiny little particles can get into your loved ones' lungs, triggering allergies, asthma and a variety of other respiratory ailments. Fortunately, an indoor air cleaner can be an effective part of the solution in making the air inside your home better for everyone, including allergy and asthma sufferers," said John Spengler, professor of environmental health and human habitation at Harvard's School of Public Health.

You can reduce allergy and asthma triggers in your home by repairing insulation and cracks to reduce dampness, using mold-proof shower curtains to discourage mold growth, covering your mattresses and pillows with allergen-proof covers, and washing bedding weekly in hot (130 degree) water to minimize dust mites. Indoor air cleaners can enhance these efforts by removing invisible airborne particles and allergens that you don't want in your air. But with several different options, how do you know which indoor air cleaner to choose?

TRANE CleanEffects tucks neatly out of sight as an attachment to your home's central heating or cooling system delivering more clean air throughout your home than any other air cleaning system.

How to evaluate indoor air cleaners

Many products claim to clean your indoor air, but there are a few reference points that can tell you which ones work best. A good place to start is by comparing the clean air delivery rates of various air cleaner systems. Clean air delivery rate refers to the amount of clean air that a filtration system can deliver to your home. This national standard recognized by the EPA reflects not only the effectiveness of the filter, but also the amount of air going through the filter. The higher the clean air delivery rate, the more effectively the room or home can be cleaned of airborne particles.

Clean air delivery rates vary widely depending on the type of air cleaner you choose. For example, a typical ionic in-room device has a clean air delivery rate of 10, meaning that it successfully cleans only 10 cubic feet of air per minute. By comparison, standard 1-inch filters, which attach to a furnace, are rated at 12. Typical room HEPA appliances are rated at 150, while electronic whole-house air cleaning systems can be rated anywhere from 660 to more than 1,000.

Whole-house systems, in addition to offering the highest clean air delivery rate, can offer substantial benefits over in-room devices. Unlike portable devices, which clean only a small area at a time, a whole-house system ensures clean and comfortable air throughout the house. Plus, it tucks neatly out of sight as an attachment to your central heating and cooling system.

Technologies are also changing the way whole-house air cleaners work inside your home. The most advanced is Trane CleanEffects, with a clean air delivery rate of 1,200. This system cleans the air by removing more undesired particles and allergens - including bacteria, mold spores, smoke, dust mites, pollen and pet dander - than any other home air cleaning system.

"Using a high-efficiency filtration system, which treats all the air inside a home, will fundamentally alter the quality of air in a home because it is substantially more effective at removing microscopic particles," said Spengler.

When comparing air cleaners, be sure to ask your dealer or retailer to provide the clean air delivery rate for various models. Other factors to consider when making your decision include the cleaner's operating and maintenance costs and the average energy consumed for the amount of air cleaned.

Beach body basics

As the weather starts to heat up, so does the desire to get in shape. Anticipating outdoor activities, skimpy beach wear and upcoming vacations, many people panic and resort to quick weight loss tricks and crash diets to get their bodies beach — or pool or lake or swimming hole — ready. "Hollywood's Favorite Nutritionist" and author of the book Eating by Design, Carrie Latt Wiatt has helped celebrity clients like Salma Hayek and Matt Damon shape up and lose weight quickly for roles. But, Wiatt said, the best way to get ready for summer is to take a healthful approach that provides both nutrition and enjoyment.

"The best way to break the cycle of crash diets and seasonal quick fixes is to consistently make smart food choices," said Wiatt. "Establishing an eating plan and adding variety to meals can make healthful eating more enjoyable and successful."

Wiatt recommends the following tips to make smart eating simple and easy to maintain throughout the year:

- Choose a wide variety of powerful foods. A diverse diet is not only best for your health, but most satisfying to your taste buds. Emphasize foods that naturally boost energy while helping to protect against diet-related diseases.

- Powerful food fix: Choose 100 percent orange juice as a flavorful pick-me-up that provides essential nutrients including vitamin C, folate and potassium that may help boost your immunity and protect against some forms of cancer and heart disease when part of a high-fiber, low-fat diet rich in fruits and vegetables.

- Establish interval eating. Timing is everything. Regularly spacing out meals and snacks can stimulate metabolism, boost energy and improve your mood. Start with a healthy breakfast, then eat several smaller meals throughout the day so you can enjoy the benefits of a steady fuel supply and a satisfied palate.

Interval eating idea: Snack on healthy foods such as fresh fruit, snap peas and carrots with hummus and whole grain crackers between meals to keep your metabolism going, blood sugar stable and satisfy hunger.

- Maximize flavor, minimize saturated fat. Believe it or not, foods with lower fat and cholesterol can taste fantastic and feed a fit body. Lighter preparations unmask natural flavors and excite the taste buds.

Maximum flavor factor: Grill or steam white fish instead of frying or sauteeing to bring out natural flavors and nutrients while minimizing fat intake.

- Enjoy yourself! Happiness is your birthright, and smart eating focuses on the positive. Every meal is an opportunity to enjoy delicious foods while doing something good for your body. Relax and savor the moment!

Enjoyment mantra: Make healthful meals tasty and easy. Look for nutritious recipes that strike your fancy and don't intimidate you, or experiment with your own combinations of your favorite power foods.

According to Wiatt, developing good eating habits while preparing for summer can help you continue to look and feel great throughout the year. A balanced diet that incorporates variety, power foods and healthy snacking can make developing and maintaining good eating habits easier.

Sharing the road safely

If it seems like bicycles are everywhere these days, it's not your imagination. More bicyclists hit the roads between May and September than any other time of the year, so it should come as no surprise that most accidents involving riders happen during the summer and fall.

According to federal government statistics, 660 bicyclists died in crashes with motor vehicles in 2002, the most recent year for which fatality data are available. Fifty-four percent of the deaths happened between May and September.

"What the statistics don't tell you is that a lot of those accidents were avoidable," said Jeff Beyer, senior vice president and chief communications officer of Farmers Insurance Group. "Driver distraction, or failure to use due care, was probably to blame in a lot of the cases."

It's pretty easy to get caught up in the world within our motor vehicles. The radio or CD player is on, people are talking in the backseat, and you're on the cell phone. There are often more distractions inside the car than on the road, but Beyer says that's no excuse for being inattentive and causing an accident.

Here are some tips Farmers encourages drivers to keep in mind — particularly about bicycles and motorcycles — during the upcoming warmer months, and any time of year for that matter.

- When you come to an intersection, make a complete scan. Look not only at traffic around you, but for what's ahead on the road. There may be kids on bikes a few yards behind an oncoming car, about to enter the intersection.

- Make a habit of looking for the unusual. Broaden your spectrum of where to look and what you might see. Many seemingly unavoidable accidents might be prevented through better surveillance.

- Try to drive with an open space in the adjacent lane, as opposed to right next to another vehicle. This will improve your ability to react to potential trouble ahead.

- Don't be shortsighted. Get into the habit of looking down the road at what's ahead. Don't think in terms of distance, but time. Always think of where you will be in 10 seconds.

- Keep your eyes moving. Every now and then, sneak a glance off into the distance, and don't forget to check your mirrors.

Gardening tasks should bring satisfaction, not pain

Aches and pains do not have to be a natural part of gardening. The following tips and guidelines are designed to turn a potentially painful chore into outdoor enjoyment.

When it comes to tools, gardeners today have more options than ever before. With all the choices in colors, shapes and sizes, it's easy to overlook one of the most important gardening tools — your body.

Many people, despite exercising proper care and maintenance with their other garden tools, do not spend the time or effort properly caring for their most valuable tool. And for many of the hundreds of thousands who make gardening America's No. 1 outdoor hobby, common aches and pains associated with repetitive gardening tasks can detract from an otherwise enjoyable experience.

Aches and pains do not have to be a natural part of gardening. The following tips and guidelines are designed to turn a potentially painful chore into outdoor enjoyment:

Prepare your body properly

Regardless of your age, it's important to take precautions before jumping into gardening chores. Start by spending a few minutes stretching to help minimize muscle soreness and the risk of tendonitis. In particular, stretch your arms and back. Also, be certain to have plenty of water on hand to avoid dehydrating while you're gardening. Here are a few other key suggestions regarding body positioning:

- Keep elbows partially bent, especially when doing resistive activities.
- Hold objects with a light grasp or pinch, avoiding a tight, sustained grip.
- Whenever possible, work with the forearms in a neutral position (i.e. thumbs up).
- Watch your posture. Don't slouch or rest your weight on one arm or leg while you work.
- Use wheelbarrows and carts to transport heavy objects or tools to save your back.

Carefully choose the right tools

Garden tools developed for proper body mechanics (known as ergonomic tools) are no longer just for seniors. Today's ergonomic gardening tools are designed to appeal to people of all ages who have either suffered from or want to prevent repetitive strain injuries, or for those who just desire a more comfortable, enjoyable gardening experience. The right tools created in the right size and weight can save the back, knees and hips, and mean the difference between enjoying a day in the garden and ending the evening with cramped hands and an aching back or elbow.

One tool that can make a big difference is the combination kneeler/bench with foam pad, which helps remove weight from otherwise sore joints as it allows gardeners to work from a more comfortable sitting or kneeling position. Simply flip over to convert from a durable bench (capable of holding up to 250 pounds) into a convenient kneeler. Of special interest to gardeners who have difficulty raising themselves up from the ground are the sturdy long handles on the sides.

Another strain-free tool set that features T-handles on longer shafts provides greater leverage for digging into even the hardest soil and helps keep the wrist in a more neutral position. The long-handled shafts not only limit the need to bend over, but also provide greater leverage so that everyone can effectively complete strenuous gardening tasks. Sports medicine specialists estimate that women possess about 40 to 60 percent of the upper-body strength of men due to their smaller arm girth. This creates a greater need for women to compensate with longer handles.

The weight of the tool also affects stamina and energy levels.

tighter spaces without straining.

Proper care of tools can also facilitate gardening tasks. Keep tools with moving parts in good working order and oiled so there is little resistance during use. Also keep hand tools sharp to ensure smooth, easy movement.

Garden gloves not only protect hands from hazardous chemicals, sharp items and blisters, but they also help minimize the effects of vibration. Gloves should ideally be form-fitting and cover the smallest area of the hand possible, without being restrictive.

Avoid repetition, variety is critical

Repetitive movements can wreak havoc on any part of the body. Enthusiastic gardeners who are driven to whip their gardens back into shape in a matter of a day are prone to injury from hours of repetitive movements resulting from weeding, digging and stooping. That's why it's important to rotate gardening tasks frequently (at least every 30 minutes) so you don't wake up with stiffness in the arms, legs and back.

Rest

Above all, don't forget to rest frequently. Even if you don't feel fatigued, take a break for a few minutes each hour. Your body will thank you later on. And you'll feel more productive and actually get more done, so at the end of the day you'll feel a deep sense of satisfaction rather than a hard-earned aching back.

And, of course, when the produce is ready, its health benefits will feel even greater to you!

In addition to local garden shops, check www.gardenway.com for information about new tools.

SUMMER HEALTH

Look for tools that are heavy enough to be durable, but not so heavy they are fatiguing to use. Strain-free tools measure only 23 inches in length, which makes them shorter and lighter than traditional long-handle tools. Not only will they fit smaller hands, they allow the user to access

Leaving the kids home alone this summer

"If you have concerns, it means you probably should have concerns."

James Longhurst

Here comes summer and if you're the parent of a pre-teen, you can bet this question is coming, too: "Why can't I stay home by myself this summer?"

How do you know when they're ready to be on their own at home while you're at work? "Part of successful parenting lies in the ability to accurately assess your child's level of maturity," said James Longhurst, a licensed psychologist for Starr Commonwealth, a child and family services organization founded nearly a century ago. "The foundation for how they will handle themselves was established at day one. If you've been in tune with your child over the years, you'll know when they're ready."

Certainly you'll want to check to see if there are state regulations governing at what age a child can stay home alone, said Longhurst, but your best indicator will be that little voice inside.

"If you have concerns, it means you probably should have concerns," he said. "One of a child's developmental stages involves responsibility. Sensitivity to where your child is on the developmental continuum can help you make wise accommodations."

One child may need no guidance at all about using the oven on her own, for example, while another may be safer just making sandwiches for himself at lunch. A child who will end up in front of the television all day needs more direction than one who's more productive with his time.

The point is that exhaustive lists of dos and don'ts aren't nearly as helpful as rules that take a child's particular situation into account.

"Situational parenting means you offer more or less direction, depending on the situation," said Longhurst. "This kind of flexibility shows your child that you understand who he is and that, in turn, builds confidence and trust."

Emergency procedures, whether or not to allow friends in the house when you're gone, household tasks that need to be accomplished — these are just a few of the issues you and your child should discuss and settle together. Longhurst's highly successful work with troubled youth at Starr Commonwealth has shown him that when kids have an opportunity to help set the rules for their own behavior, they end up embracing those rules and living up to the trust placed in them.

"Identify the areas up for discussion and then really discuss them. Let kids know you want them to be part of the process," he said.

Longhurst suggested other activities that can help your child have a summer "alone" that helps build family bonds and personal confidence:

- Check with your child's school to find out what subject areas they'll be studying in the coming year. Then, get creative. Rent movies that pertain to the subject, for example. "Make activities like watching TV productive rather than consumptive," said Longhurst.

- Help them discover a new hobby. If your child is interested, photography can be a good choice. There's plenty of subject matter around the house or in the neighborhood. A simple camera, even a disposable one, allows them to see the familiar with new eyes. "Many communities have classes or camps with a focus on a particular hobby," said Longhurst. "This can help break up the summer a bit and offer some new opportunities for your child."

- Love tomatoes? Enjoy flowers? Plant a small garden together and let your child tend it during the week. It's a great family activity, too, one you can enjoy together in the evenings or on the weekends.

- Look for volunteer opportunities in your community. There are plenty of activities a child can do for a favorite organization without leaving the house. Charities always need people to address envelopes, design fliers, even bake items for bake sales.

"Service learning is important to healthy development," said Longhurst. "It teaches us that we're a part of something bigger than just ourselves."

Rehab treats dizziness, balance disorders

More than 90 million American adults and teenagers have experienced problems with dizziness or balance at some point in their lives. Vestibular deficits — or balance disorders — are caused by malfunctions in the inner ear and can be debilitating. Patients may suffer symptoms like vertigo, nausea, spinning, problems with posture, difficulty walking, motion sickness or falls.

The vestibular system is part of the inner ear which helps regulate balance. Patients who have damage to this system may benefit from vestibular rehabilitation, an exercise-based therapy program used to treat disorders of balance and dizziness.

The human body has a natural ability to compensate for balance disorders. Vestibular rehabilitation consists of special exercises, which enhance these natural abilities. The exercise routines help patients increase balance and decrease dizziness.

Diagnostic tests evaluate functional limitations, sensory integration, gaze stability, static and dynamic balance and position. The information gathered from these tests is used to create individualized treatment plans. Treatment plans often include elements such as balance retraining, balance strategies, sensory organization techniques, gaze stabilization strategies, habituation exercises, ADL retraining, aerobic conditioning and more.

The vestibular rehabilitation program at Seton Health is designed to help people stay active and meet their daily physical challenges more safely. With more than a decade of experience treating balance and dizziness disorders, patients can rely on our professional team to provide the highest quality of care. Our staff uses state-of-the-art equipment and treatment techniques to care for a wide variety of conditions, including labyrinthitis, benign paroxysmal positional vertigo, perilymph fistula, drug-induced ototoxicity, acoustic neuroma, and Meniere's Disease.

Seton Health Physical Rehabilitation's vestibular rehabilitation program is available in our Clifton Park, Troy and Rensselaer offices. You will need a physician referral for this therapy. Most physician referrals are covered by most insurance plans. However, since health plans vary, our office staff will gladly assist you in determining your coverage.

How to make sure your body is getting what it needs

It seems in today's society, people have so much going on, they forget, or don't have time to eat right.

Are you always on the run? Do you often skip breakfast and turn to fast food for lunch? If so, your body probably isn't getting the nutrients it needs.

The USDA just updated its food guidelines to recommend 9 servings of fruits and vegetables a day. The food guidelines are designed to help Americans get adequate levels of vitamins, nutrients and minerals. They call for the average adult, with a 2,000 calorie per day diet, to eat 6 ounces of grains, 2-and-a-half cups of vegetables, 2 cups of fruits, 5-and-a-half ounces of meat and beans, 3 cups of milk and 6 tablespoons of oils every day (mypyramid.com).

For most people, the advice is hard to follow. It seems in today's society, people have so much going on, they forget, or don't have time to eat right. So what can you do? These days, more and more people are adding nutritional supplements to their diet to get the vitamins and minerals their bodies need.

In recent years, thousands of supplements have come on the market, so how do you know you're choosing the nutrient and level that's right for you? Do your research or turn to the experts that do the research for you. One brand that's been getting a lot of positive attention lately is Isomers, available through Shop NBC.

Isomers Laboratories president and chemist Manuela Marcheggiani and her husband created a full line of skincare products and nutritional supplements that not only nurture the skin, but the body and mind as well. The Science of Total-Beauty.

The supplement line starts with the daily multivitamin tablet products, called the Core. Unique to Isomers is a drinkable Effervescent Multivitamin, a refreshing way to get your daily dose of vitamins, minerals and antioxidants. They come in single serving packets you can take with you on the go.

"A lot of people avoid taking vitamins because they don't like swallowing pills. This supplement comes in powder form that quickly dissolves in water, and has a great tasting fruit punch flavor," says Marcheggiani. In addition to being rich in vitamins and minerals, the Effervescent Multivitamins also contain antioxidants and standardized phytonutrients (plant-derived components that are intimately involved in helping fight free-radical damage).

Isomers also offers a healthy alternative to coffee and soda for people in need of a little pick-me-up during the day. The Berry Blast Energy Drink helps you revitalize your body and mind with B vitamins, amino acids and caffeine. The drink also awakens the senses, revitalizes the body and mind and activates metabolism.

"Of course women want to look and feel great, but we're busy. My goal was to create a line of supplements that combined health and convenience," said Marcheggiani. "Your face tells the world your story. Whether you have been getting enough sleep and good nutrition is there to see. Good nutrient supplements can help you and your body look and feel your best."

Isomers nutritional supplements are sold exclusively through Shop NBC. To learn more about their health benefits, log on to www.shopnbc.com and click on the link at the top that says "Health and Fitness."

Keep safe when on the road this summer

With the summer travel season right around the corner, families are gearing up for road trips and vacations. You may spend weeks making sure the trip is organized and that your vehicle is road-ready. However, you may overlook important safety needs, such as having a fire extinguisher in your car.

Many Americans are unaware of the highway vehicle fire problem that exists in the United States. In 2004, more than 266,000 highway vehicle fires were reported and caused nearly $1 billion in property loss. More highway vehicle fires occur in June, July and August than during any other time of year.

Statistics show that more than 49 million motorists have joined a roadside assistance club and have purchased an emergency car safety kit that contains jumper cables, flares and flashlights. Yet, few drivers think of a fire extinguisher as a critical component of that kit. Consumer experts recommend including a fire extinguisher, such as Kidde's Automobile Fire Extinguisher, in the car for extra security. As with jumper cables, the Kidde Auto fire extinguisher could help protect your family in an emergency or provide assistance to a fellow motorist in distress.

"Studies show that most drivers spend nine days a year commuting to and from work; that doesn't include extra time in the car running errands, or road trips for summer vacations," said Chris Rovenstine, vice president of marketing for Kidde. "Add the peak travel season to the amount of time families spend in their cars today, and it makes sense to have a Kidde auto fire extinguisher in your car's emergency kit."

Experts say mechanical or electrical failures cause a majority of these fires, which often begin in the engine, running gear or wheel area. By having a fire

Safe boating equals smart boating

Summer is just around the corner and the country's 70 million recreational boaters are preparing to launch their boats and relax on the water with family and friends. The start of boating season is also the perfect time for boaters to review important safety tips to make their on-water adventures more enjoyable.

"Just as we all learned the rules of the road before getting behind the wheel of our cars, there are basic safety tips that everyone should know before taking the helm or shoving off," says Thom Dammrich, president of the National Marine Manufacturers Association (NMMA). "One of the most important things you can do is always wear a lifejacket on the water and make sure others in your boat do too. After all, lifejackets only work if you wear them."

Today's lifejackets or life vests — also known as personal flotation devices or PFDs — are now available in a variety of shapes, colors and materials for user comfort and convenience. Some lifejackets are even tailor-made for specific activities such as sailing, paddle sports or fishing, but all are designed to keep boaters safe and afloat in case of emergencies.

The NMMA and U.S. Coast Guard (USCG) offer the following lifejacket-related tips and safety reminders for boaters and their passengers:

- Find the Right Lifejacket. Lifejackets aren't one-size-fits-all. Select one that fits properly and is designed for the appropriate on-water activities and water conditions. All lifejackets are clearly labeled with the appropriate weight range for the product. Test their buoyancy in shallow water by relaxing your body and tilting back your head. With proper buoyancy and fit, your chin should stay above water and you should feel relaxed, comfortable and able to breathe easily. Always look for the U.S. Coast Guard approval label before purchasing a lifejacket.

- Conduct a Safety Check. Ensure all lifejacket seams, fabric and hardware are intact. Test all lifejackets at the start of the season and replace any that don't pass the test.

- Outfit Everyone Aboard. Before shoving off, all on board should be wearing a properly fitted lifejacket with straps, zippers and ties fastened. The U.S. Coast Guard requires USCG-approved lifejackets on all recreational boats. The number and type depend on the number of passengers, size and type of boat, and boating activities.

- Keep Kids Afloat. Boating is a great way to spend time with family and friends. Make sure children wear lifejackets with a collar that turns their faces up in the water. Their jackets should also be equipped with sturdy straps and a collar handle, and preferably be bright yellow or orange in color for good visibility. Check for a good fit on children by picking up the child by the shoulders of the lifejacket — a proper fit will not allow the child's chin and ears to slip through. Never buy a lifejacket that a child will "grow into," as proper fit is essential.

- Educate Yourself. Boating education courses are offered in nearly every community through the U.S. Power Squadron and Coast Guard Auxiliaries. Many reputable boat dealers also provide an orientation session with the purchase of a new boat. Some states require powerboat operators to take a boater's education course and carry a license or certificate showing successful course completion. Check out the safety regulations and requirements for the state you are boating in.

extinguisher within reach, you could increase your chances of quickly putting out a small, smoldering fire.

Safety experts recommend that your family exit a burning vehicle as quickly as possible. Keep in mind that some individuals, such as young children, older adults, or others with limited mobility, may have difficulty exiting on their own and could require extra assistance.

When using an automobile fire extinguisher, keep these tips in mind:

- Make sure that everyone has exited the vehicle.

- If you have a cell phone, notify the fire department before attempting to extinguish the fire.

- Use your extinguisher only to extinguish or contain a small, smoldering, fire or to create a safe pathway from the vehicle.

- Read the instructions and become familiar with your fire extinguisher's parts and operation before a fire breaks out.

- Remember the "Pass" system: Pull the pin, hold unit upright; Aim at the base of the fire; Squeeze lever; Sweep from side to side.

Experts recommend choosing an automobile fire extinguisher that safely mounts inside the car, so that it is easily accessible during an emergency. Look for a UL-listed and UL-rated unit that contains a non-toxic extinguishing agent and has an easy-to-pull safety pin.

Rubin Dialysis Center offers portable hemodialysis system for home use

System can be used by trained patients for daily dialysis treatments that offer health and quality of life benefits

The Hortense and Louis Rubin Dialysis Center is the first center in the Capital District and one of the first dialysis centers across the United States to offer an innovative dialysis system with significant potential benefits for chronic kidney failure patients. The NxStage® System OneT hemodialysis system gives physicians and nurses improved user-friendly flexibility to offer patients the benefits of home daily dialysis. Daily home hemodialysis with the NxStage System One can give patients greater independence and control over the lifelong management of their kidney disease.

Chronic kidney failure (also called end-stage renal disease or ESRD) is a life-threatening failure of the kidneys to process the body's wastes and excess fluids. To survive, ESRD patients require some form of kidney replacement therapy for the rest of their lives. Over 450,000 patients in the United States suffer from ESRD, and total annual U.S. healthcare system costs from ESRD are over $ 20 billion. These costs are expected to increase in the foreseeable future, as the number of ESRD patients in the U.S. is expected to double in the next 10-15 years.

"Rubin Dialysis is excited to be among the first in the area to offer this new treatment option to patients needing dialysis. The fact that System One is portable and designed for simplicity makes it more convenient and accessible for patients, thereby improving their quality of life," said Wayne Evancoe, CEO, Rubin Dialysis Center. "Being able to prescribe treatment for patients that they can do on their own, even while on vacation or traveling for work, opens up a new chapter in dialysis care."

Patients on home daily dialysis have also reported meaningful improvements in their quality of life, including the ability to continue to work or to go back to work, and the flexibility to do treatments at the time and place that works for them, rather than what was dictated by their dialysis center's schedule. Cleared for home use by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) in June 2005, the NxStage System One is designed to help ESRD patients realize the clinical promise of daily home dialysis.

Rubin Dialysis Center has been training patients on the system since September 2005.

"Undergoing dialysis this way allows me to filter my blood more often – six days a week instead of every other day," said Ronald Crowl, 55, of Argyle, Washington County. "This treatment doesn't zap my energy like the traditional dialysis did, and I can do it whenever it is convenient, which gives me back some quality of life I thought I'd lost."

The system is about the size of a 13" TV., and weighs just over 70 pounds. The System One is different from conventional dialysis equipment in that it is powered by a standard household outlet and uses pre-packaged sterile dialysis fluids. These changes eliminate the need for electrical and plumbing changes to the home, which were previous challenges to using conventional dialysis machines in the home. The System One's portability and flexibility mean that it can be easily moved to the location that suits a patient's needs and lifestyle, based on a physician's prescription. Many patients using the NxStage a week for treatments lasting around four hours. Although this treatment method has been effective for many ESRD patients, research has shown that significant benefits can be attained from both more frequent, or "daily" dialysis, performed at home. Reported benefits include reduced blood pressure, improved anemia status, reduced left ventricular hypertrophy (LVH), and improved nutritional status, among others.

Patients interested in learning more can contact Shari Meola, RN, CNN, clinical services coordinator in the Clifton Park center, 831-6700 or Saratoga Springs, 587-1919. Patients should consult with their physician to discuss the potential benefits, risks and responsibilities associated with home hemo-dialysis using the NxStage System One.

About Rubin Dialysis Center:

The Hortense and Louis Rubin Dialysis Center, Inc. operates dialysis centers in Troy, Clifton Park and Saratoga Springs. It is an independent, nonprofit care system which focuses on the human side of caring and the innovations in technology that enable us to offer higher quality of life to ESRD patients in different settings. Our emphasis on home dialysis therapies such as daily nocturnal, peritoneal, and short-daily via NxStage, allow our Home Training Team to partner with our Nephrologists to help ESRD patients "set the pace and place of their own home treatments". The Rubin Dialysis center Web site is www.rubin-dialysis.org.

SUMMER HEALTH

System One have benefited from the ability to travel with the system, attaining a level of freedom and independence they couldn't achieve with conventional in-center dialysis. Disposable cartridges containing the needed filter and tubing, and easy-to-use controls simplify the training and use of the system. The device's operating simplicity allows therapy to be delivered by an appropriately trained patient or family member, keeping in mind that patients should not dialyze alone.

Hemodialysis, the cycling of the patient's blood through a filter (the artificial kidney) and back to the patient, is the most common form of kidney replacement therapy. For the majority of hemodialysis patients today, this means going to an outpatient hemodialysis center three times

Yummy summer fruit could tempt kids

Children can learn that they can satisfy their hunger in a natural way

Fruit offers a rainbow of gorgeous colors, from blueberry blue to apple red and grape green. And, with their kid-friendly flavors, it's easy to prepare fruit in ways that are nearly irresistible. Is that true only in the summer? No way! Fruit is available every day of the year, whether it's fresh, frozen, canned, dried or juice.

When you provide fruit, such as blueberries, for your children, they get colorful, flavorful food with relatively few calories, nearly no fat, and a boost of antioxidants and other nutrients that have been shown to protect against disease.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's "MyPyramid" dietary guidelines recommend that children, ages 4 to 8, consume about 1 to 1 1/2 cups of fruit a day. For ages 9 to 13, 1 1/2 cups is the recommended amount. According to a National Health and Nutrition Examination Study, however, American children's fruit consumption falls short of the recommendations.

By simply replacing higher-calorie snacks with fruit, children can learn that they can satisfy their hunger — and cravings for something sweet — in a natural way and without breaking the "calorie bank."

There are many ways to make fruit appealing to children. Blue banana boats, for example, include the whimsy children adore and, when they dig in, they'll enjoy a variety of delicious fruit.

For another easy way to make fruit appealing, whirl blueberry fruit shake in the blender. It's so easy, and tastes so good, you can serve it for breakfast, a snack or dessert.

In addition to ranking No. 1 in antioxidant activity, a cup of blueberries has just 80 calories with virtually no fat. Fresh, frozen, canned and dried blueberries are always recipe-ready or to enjoy just as they are.

Get all the details about the USDA dietary recommendations at www.MyPyramid.gov.

Blue Banana Boats

- 2 fruit roll-ups, any flavor
  - 4 thin, 4-inch long pretzel sticks
  - 1 1/2 cups fresh, frozen or drained canned blueberries
  - 1/2 cup grape juice, or juice from canned blueberries
  - 2 bananas, cut in quarters
  - 4 small scoops frozen yogurt or fruit sorbet
  - 1/2 cup fruit cut in pieces, such as mandarin oranges or grapes
- To make "sails:" Unroll fruit rolls and cut into four triangles, about 3 inches on all sides, with a sharp knife. Make three small cuts along one edge of each triangle; thread onto pretzel sticks. In four soup or cereal bowls, divide blueberries evenly. Pour two tablespoons juice into each bowl. To form a "boat:" Place two banana quarters on opposite sides of bowl. Between the bananas, place a scoop of frozen yogurt. Scatter fruit over all and push a pretzel "sail" into yogurt. Serve immediately.

Make sure it's only joy and fun in the summer sun

Everyone has heard about proper sun protection for the skin, but don't forget about protecting your eyes during the summer months. Since Americans spend a considerable amount of time outdoors, whether at the beach or simply catching some rays while exercising or doing errands, their health may pay a price. Too much sun exposure can increase your chances for serious eye damage.

More than 86 million adults over the age of 40 have vision problems, according to the Vision Council of America. Approximately 80 percent of lifetime sun exposure occurs before age 18, when the eyes are less developed and less able to block UV rays. Here are a few tips from Madeline L. Romeu, O.D., F.A.A.O. and optometric adviser for Transitions Optical, about how you can help protect your family's vision not only in the summer but year-round:

- Know when to move into the shade. After spending time in the sun, drink lots of water to keep both your skin and eyes hydrated. Watch for the warning signs of visual problems, including squinting and headaches. If possible, stay out of the sun from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. when temperatures and UV levels are at their peak.

- Remember proper eyewear. Certain lenses can safely block UV radiation and help protect the eyes from the sun's harmful rays. Dark sunglasses without UVA and UVB block cause the pupils to dilate and allow harmful UV rays into the eye, potentially causing major eye damage. Make an informed purchase, and be sure to buy lenses that clearly state that they offer both UVA and UVB protection.

- Consider photochromic lenses. Photochromic lenses are those that quickly change from clear indoors to as dark as sunglasses outdoors. They are the smart choice in everyday convenience because of their ability to block 100 percent of dangerous UVA/UVB rays, and reduce painful, uncomfortable glare.

- Cover up if you plan to snooze: Lying down with eyes closed can cause sunburned eyelids, so be sure to cover the face entirely if there's a chance you'll fall asleep in the sun. Along with your sunglasses, make sure to bring a towel or hat to cover the face.

- Check your UV index: Check daily UV levels in your area and plan accordingly. Wear proper eyewear, and also carry a hat and sunblock. According to a survey conducted by Transitions Optical, Inc., 36 percent of respondents wear a hat when they plan to be out in the sun for long periods of time, and only 18 percent wear eyewear with UV protection.

- Eye exams for overall health: Even though vision may be clear, exams can detect changes in the eye caused by underlying health problems. Some eye diseases have no symptoms in the early stages, so make annual eye exams part of your family's regular health routine.

Thinking of starting an exercise program?

By AUDREY CALVINO and KATESEL STRIMBECK

The writers are physical therapists with master's degree at St. Peter's Rehabilitation Services.

Regular, moderate-intensity physical activity can serve as a first line of defense against heart disease.

And don't forget some of the other benefits of exercise: it relieves stress, enhances your movement, assists in controlling blood sugar, decreases high blood pressure and can help with the treatment of depression, not to mention the "side effect" of losing weight.

According to the U.S. Surgeon General, weight loss, as modest as five to 15 percent of total body weight in a person who is overweight or obese, reduces the risk factors for some diseases, particularly heart disease.

Aim for 30 minutes of activity a day, even if you break it down to three, 10-minute segments. A walk at lunchtime, some yardwork and playing catch with the kids, and your 30 minutes are done. Take advantage of some of our area parks, bike paths and nature centers as an easy way to get outdoors, see something new when exercising.

- Wear supportive and comfortable sneakers. Ones that tie and are closed at the heel will offer more support for your activity.

- Don't overdo it! Going out gung-ho will have you sore, possibly injured and very discouraged. Start slowly, choose an activity you enjoy and one you will perform consistently. The best exercise program is one you can stick to.

- When you are ready for a total fitness program, it should include aerobic conditioning, muscle strengthening and flexibility training.

Because of their knowledge of aerobic conditioning, body mechanics, muscles and joints, and pre-existing conditions, physical therapists are able to develop personalized conditioning programs to help prevent injury and promote fitness. If you have any questions regarding fitness and starting an exercise program, contact the physical therapists at St. Peter's Rehabilitation Services, in Albany at 525-1372 or in Slingerlands at 475-1818.

The warm weather and long days are good reasons to get outside and enjoy!

Here are some helpful tips and reminders to consider before getting started:

- Check with your physician before starting any exercise program.

- Stay hydrated – drink water throughout the day and be sure to keep extra water on hand

Protect your family and pet from ticks

Summertime is tick time, as people and their pets take to the great outdoors, enjoying camping, hiking, parks or even their own backyards. After spending time outdoors, it's important to check both your family and your dog for ticks.

Ticks are known to spread Lyme disease, but are also capable of carrying multiple tick-borne diseases, including canine anaplasmosis, which is found in the black-legged tick. These diseases create a more dangerous outdoor environment for people and their four-legged friends.

Veterinarians are seeing more dogs suffering from coinfection, making a very troubling situation. As dogs suffer from symptoms brought on by more than one tick-borne disease, their immune systems may become weaker, making their recovery more difficult.

Dr. Matt Eberts, a veterinarian in Brainerd, Minn., said 40 percent of the dogs he examines test positive for Lyme disease. Even more troubling, though, is that 50 percent of dogs entering his clinic show signs of canine anaplasmosis. The symptoms of this disease are often arthritis-like with multiple painful joints, among other indicators. "There's really no way for pet owners to know what's wrong with their dogs without getting their dogs checked regularly," said Eberts.

Organizations such as the national Lyme Disease Association (LDA) have been educating people about the potential dangers of ticks for years and hope what is learned in the veterinary community opens some eyes.

"Lyme disease is a huge concern, but we want people to know there are several other tick-borne diseases out there that can be just as harmful," says Pat Smith, president of LDA.

Most tick-borne illnesses are difficult to diagnose based on symptoms alone, according to Dr. Stephen Levy, a Durham, Conn., veterinarian who has been on the forefront of tick-borne disease research for the past two decades. Many dogs exhibit no outward evidence of Lyme disease infection or the lesser-known tick-borne diseases.

"With the potential range of symptoms brought on by Lyme disease and other tick-borne infections, I encourage pet owners to make testing a standard part of their dogs' veterinary exams," said Levy. An in-clinic, diagnostic test is available so dog owners can learn if their pets have contracted a tick-borne disease such as Lyme disease or canine ehrlichiosis, yet another disease transmitted from ticks, prior to leaving the clinic. The test also screens for heartworm, a disease transmitted by mosquitoes.

While getting your dog tested is important for your pet's health, it can also be important for your family's health. Smith believes dogs can carry ticks to their owners.

"With their furry coats, proximity to the ground, and propensity to roll in leaves and other groundcover, dogs are many times more likely to come in contact with ticks than their owners," she noted.

For more information on tick-borne disease, visit dogsandticks.com or LymeDiseaseAssociation.org.

Common tick-borne diseases

The following examples are some of the most common tick-borne diseases that infect dogs.

- Lyme disease — transmitted by the deer ticks, the most common visible signs of Lyme disease infection are recurrent arthritis and lameness that lasts for three to four days, sometimes accompanied by loss of appetite and depression. Lyme disease signs may come and go. In many dogs, the signs are not apparent or may not appear for several months after infection.

- Canine ehrlichiosis — first appearing in dogs in the early 1970s, this disease is commonly transmitted by the brown dog tick. It has three phases of symptoms — acute, subclinical and chronic. Dogs experiencing the acute phase may demonstrate symptoms including fever, discharge from eyes and nose, lack of appetite, depression, weight loss or swollen lymph glands.

- Canine anaplasmosis — sometimes referred to as dog fever, or dog tick fever. It is transmitted by the deer tick, the same tick that transmits Lyme. Symptoms are often arthritis-like, with multiple painful joints. Other symptoms include high fever accompanied by lethargy, vomiting and diarrhea.

- Rocky Mountain spotted fever — is transmitted from the American dog tick or the wood tick. In most cases, the disease lasts about two weeks, but in severe cases can end in death. Symptoms include joint swelling and pain, as well as neurological abnormalities.

Question: I am the beneficiary of my father's Roth IRA. Do I need to take distributions when he dies?

Answer: Roth IRA owners are NOT subject to required minimum distributions (RMDs) but once they die, their children and grandchildren are. Contrary to popular belief, non-spouse beneficiaries of Roth IRAs ARE subject to RMDs. Only spouse beneficiaries of Roth IRAs do not have to take RMDs - provided they roll the account over or treat it as their own Roth IRA. When the designated beneficiary of a Roth IRA is a non-spouse, the post death RMD rules are the same as those for a traditional IRA.

By JENNIFER FARNSWORTH

The New York State Theater Institute is kicking off its summer season with a world premier musical, "The Cat, the Sun and the Mirror," based on the book by Robert Andersen. The production tells the tale of a spy cat who must look within himself to save a city of people searching for the sun. "Cool Cat" knows it is up to him to keep from letting these people down, or more importantly, not to let himself down. In this production for all ages, "Cool Cat" learns a few lessons along his journey, lessons that the audience will surely learn too.

"The first time I read the script and listened to the music by composer, Ed Sullivan, I loved it as a prospective show for school aged audiences. This new musical encourages kids to believe in the message of self-esteem that I think is so necessary," said the play's director and NYSTI's Associate Artistic Director Ed. Lange.

With a cat prowling a big city in search of the sun, there are bound to be some interesting encounters. The city residents are upset at the sun's absence and so they turn to "Cool Cat," to bring it back into their lives. On his way, "Cool Cat" investigates a gangster, a rich man's penthouse, the city park, and an ocean all before his chance meeting with a wise old dog who shows him the way.

Lange said he feels strongly about the way that the musical targets the audience, specifically children. The book is inspired by a Japanese myth but its delivery is contemporary and American. The music and songs range from touching to funny and will surely entertain the whole family.

Along with Lange, the creative team behind the scenes consists of composers Robert A. Anderson and Will Severin. The cast is a combination of both regional and guest performers. David Girard, a regional actor and singer, is playing the role of "Cool Cat." Sarah Farnam, a NYSTI regular, plays the sun.

"David Girard does a marvelous job of playing the role of 'Cool Cat,' the cat detective. He is a terrific actor and singer who is willing to try anything and brings great creativity to the role. Sarah Farnam, as the sun brings great creativity to the role. She brings her beautiful singing voice and vulnerability to the character and her song is simply thrilling," said Lange.

Other NYSTI company regulars in the production include John Romeo as Mr. Big, Joel Aroeste as the ocean, John McGuire as the grand visier, Michaela Reilly as the grand visieress, David Bunce as the bodyguard and Emma Dubin as the moll and the octopus.

"Our regulars contribute great characters to the show, along with some super character voices. The process of bringing this new musical to life on the stage for the first time has been a joy of creativity for the cast, crew and for me the director," said Lange.

The production runs from June 4 through June 16 with weekday and weekend performances. Ticket prices are $10 for children 12 and under and $20 for adults.

The musical will be held at the Schacht Fine Arts Center at Russell Sage College in Troy. Ticket and schedule information is available through the NYSTI Box office at 274-3256 or on line at www.nysti.org:

Lange says the show is under an hour long, but that every minute is filled with humor and adventure, and even with its poignancy the emphasis remains on fun.

"I'm delighted and excited about the work that everyone has contributed and the imagination they brought to the project," said Lange.

Athletic administrators association picks Bertrand

By ROB JONAS

Wayne Bertrand will be a busy man the next three years.

On top of being Guilderland High School's athletic director, Bertrand will be holding executive positions within the New York State Athletic Administrators Association (NYSAAA). Bertrand will be the organization's vice president in 2007, president-elect in 2008 and president in 2009.

"I'm excited because there's been some tremendous people that have held this position in the past," said Bertrand of his pending presidency.

The NYSAAA is a branch of the National Interscholastic Athletic Administrators Association. It offers high school athletic directors a resource to help them run their departments better and works with other athletic and educational organizations such as the New York State Public High School Athletic Association in creating new policies.

Bertrand will also help plan the annual NYSAAA conference, which he said is an integral part of the organization's mission.

"It offers outstanding educational opportunities for high school administrators," said Bertrand, who has been Guilderland's athletic director since 2001. "There's a number of well-regarded speakers that share their knowledge at the conference."

Bertrand was elected at a committee meeting earlier this year. "You're nominated by two past presidents," he said.

Before coming to Guilderland, Bertrand was Ballston Spa's varsity football coach from 1979 through 2000.

Dolphins offer morning swim program

The Delmar Dolphins swim club is offering its annual summer morning program at the Elm Avenue Park pool.

Sessions run from 6:45 to 8:45 a.m. Mondays through Fridays beginning June 26 and ending Aug. 4.

The program offers an opportunity for middle and high school swimmers to maintain their fitness levels and technique between scholastic seasons. It also gives college-age swimmers a chance to stay in shape and still have time for a summer job.

Bethlehem swim team alumni Josh Alfred and Chris Rooney will be coaching the program.

The summer morning swim program costs $160. There is an additional $32 insurance fee for those swimmers who have not joined USA Swimming.

For information, visit the Dolphins' Web site at www.delmardolphins.com or call 475-0441.

leave the executive office to take over for Stan Van Gundy two months into the season? Why else would he have loaded the Heat with a veteran supporting cast to go with his dynamic duo of Shaquille O'Neal and Dwayne Wade? The only logical explanation was Riley wanted to win the championship this year.

Under most circumstances, I would use that as personal fuel to root for the other team. But I can't root against Riley now. Whether he admits it publicly or not, he's still got to be hurting from his mother's death. And yet, he's been able to push aside his grief to guide the Heat to their first NBA Finals. That's an impressive feat, especially considering that Miami had to get by two-time defending conference champion Detroit to get there. Not many people outside of Miami were giving the Heat much of a chance to do that.

So, I'll be watching this year's NBA Finals wearing whatever clean white T-shirts I have in my dresser (as Miami fans have been doing for every home playoff game) and hoping that Shaq and his pals have enough left in the tank to defeat Dallas.

That way, there's a happy ending to Pat Riley's season.

Venezia, Peck lead BC at state qualifier

Bethlehem's Jessica Venezia and Kristin Peck each won events at last week's Section II Track and Field Championships in Johnstown.

Venezia broke her own school record in the triple jump by winning the large school division title with a distance of 36 feet, 8 inches. Venezia jumped 35 feet, 0.25 inches for a first-place finish at the class A Sectionals May 24.

Peck also advanced to this weekend's state meet by winning the 1,500-meter race with a time of 4:47.38.

Sara Turner will be joining her Bethlehem teammates at the state meet in Canton. Turner placed second in the high jump with a qualifying height of 5 feet, 4 inches. Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake's Brittany Dexter won with a height of 5 feet, 8 inches.

Lauren Lochinsli-Mills and Colleen Hart also had top-three performances at the state qualifier. Lochinsli-Mills finished second in the 200-meter dash finals with a time of 26.61 seconds, and Hart placed third in the pentathlon with 2,372 points.

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk's Bri Drexler qualified for states in two events. Drexler won the small school division 100-meter high hurdles with a time of 15.93 seconds and took first place in the long jump with a distance of 17 feet.

On the boys' side, RCS's Garrett McCluskey and Voorheesville's Kyle Jacobs earned state meet berths. McCluskey took first place in the small school division high jump by clearing 6 feet, while Jacobs won the 400-meter intermediate hurdles with a time of 56.38 seconds. Jacobs was also third in the pole vault with a cleared height of 12 feet, 6 inches.

Voorheesville's Mackey Lloyd placed second in the small school division 1,600 and 3,200, and Bethlehem's Matt Shaffer finished third in the large school division 800 and 1,600.

Sectional champions

The Bethlehem boys tennis team won its first Section II, Class A title since 2001 with a 6-3 victory over defending champion Guiderland May 25.

Yorktown ends Bethlehem's playoff run

For the first time in five years, the Bethlehem girls lacrosse team won't be playing in the state final four.

Yorktown built a four-goal lead late in the second half and held on for a 16-15 victory over the Lady Eagles in Saturday's regional class A final at John Jay Cross River High School.

The lead changed hands several times before Yorktown went on a run to build a 16-12 lead. Bethlehem closed the gap with three goals in a 35-second span, but Yorktown won a critical midfield draw and held on to the ball for the final minute to pull out the win.

Bethlehem advanced to the regional final by beating Pine Bush 20-3 last Wednesday at Dietz Stadium in Kingston.

The Lady Eagles jumped out to an 11-2 halftime lead and never looked back in dispatching the Section IX champions.

Halley Quillinan scored five goals and added two assists to lead a balanced Bethlehem attack. Cate Quinlan contributed a hat trick, and Tee Ladouceur added two goals and five assists. Libby LeRoy, Amanda Muncil, Megan O'Donnell and Lauren Wendth all scored two goals apiece.

Bethlehem finished the season with a 19-4 record and its eighth consecutive Section II, Class A championship.

Now is the time to be in Riley's corner

By ROB JONAS

I've always tried to pull for professional athletes and coaches who either call the Capital District their home or have spent time playing or coaching in the area. But, there was always one exception to that rule.

Pat Riley.

For some reason, I could never embrace the Schenectady native. Maybe it was because he coached the Los Angeles Lakers to four NBA titles at a time when I was a Boston Celtics fan. Maybe it was because players like Magic Johnson and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar could make any coach look good. Or maybe it was because his hair never seemed to move an inch underneath all that hair gel.

Whatever the case was, I couldn't root for Riley.

That is, until now.

See, Riley did something nearly two months ago that seemed to be natural and out of the blue all at once.

at his sick mother's bedside.

Granted, it wasn't crucial for Riley to be on Miami's bench at that point. The Heat were going to be the No. 2 seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs no matter what happened in the final week of the regular season.

But for Riley to leave the Heat behind so he could be in Schenectady with his mother showed me a side of him that I'd never seen before — a caring human being and, more important, a concerned son.

I probably shouldn't have been surprised. We are all children at some point in our lives, and when we are in danger of losing someone that helped raise us, it's tramatic. Given the circumstance we'd all drop what we were doing to be with a sick parent.

But it never registered in my mind that Pat Riley would do that. Especially when the NBA playoffs were right around the corner, and momentum means everything to a team. Yet, Riley took nearly a full week off to be at his mother's side before returning to the court. And he took more time off to return to Schenectady when his mother died shortly before Miami's first round playoff series with Chicago began.

And here I thought Riley's singular thought was winning a fifth NBA title. Why else would he Parks and Trails New York is organizing the eighth annual bike tour of the Erie Canal. The canal offers 400 miles of scenic and historic views, from Buffalo to Albany.

Take a ride down the Erie Canal

By ROB IRWIN

Jim Mitsche has been riding his bike across New York State each July for the past two years and plans on making it a third this year.

Mitsche will join approximately 500 other riders for the eighth annual bike tour from Buffalo to Albany along the Erie Canal.

The 400-mile ride takes riders through historic and scenic areas of the canal.

Mitsche, an engineer, said he enjoys the engineering feat that is the Erie Canal.

"It's just amazing something this big was all done by hand," said Mitsche. Besides that Mitsche said that the camaraderie and exercise, the reason he began biking in the first place were the reasons he keeps coming back.

"It's a lot of fun," said Mitsche. "You meet a lot of great people."

The ride is organized by Parks and Trails New York, a not-for-profit organization whose mission is "To create, protect, and promote a network of park and trails across the state," according to Robin Dropkin, the organization's executive director.

According to Martin Daley, the assistant ride director, the bike tour is one way PTNY creates awareness of what trails along the Erie Canal have to offer.

"The basic theme is the promotion of cultural heritage tourism," said Daley. "This is a great opportunity for each community to show off how they're related to the canal."

Right now, said Daley, the canal doesn't have a continuous trail connecting Albany and Buffalo and the bikers will ride about one-third of the way on roads. Though, he said, there has been a significant increase in the amount of trails since the event has started.

Mitsche, 53, said he rides 800 miles each year, starting in April, to prepare for the 8-day ride. Mitsche preparation is more than what is recommended by PTNY in their rider's handbook. The handbook recommends riding 400 miles to train, the equivalent of the bike tour, to be in excellent shape to ride each day.

"We do encourage people to prepare themselves for the ride," said Daley.

Daley said skill levels and ages of participants vary greatly.

Riders will meet in Buffalo on July 8 for registration day. The next eight days will be spent riding 30 to 60 miles a day to and from designated locations. The ride's brochure features highlights from each day's journey. Highlights include scenic and historic destinations that riders can explore at their own pace along the ride.

Daley said there is no pressure put on riders to complete each day's ride in an allotted amount of time and said that PTNY's goal is to make sure participants can get from one place to another comfortably.

"There's so much to see and do along the way," said Daley. "Sit for awhile and appreciate the beauty."

When each day's ride is done, PTNY will set riders up in a "tent city" to spend the night, if they so choose.

For Mitsche the ride doubles as his vacation so he chooses to spend the night in hotels that, he said, are often located close to each day's stopping point.

"After riding all day," said Mitsche, "it's nice to sleep in a bed."

This year Mitsche will be riding with his brother-in-law and two friends but he said that it's not necessary to travel with someone you know.

"You can strike up a conversation with anyone because you all have something in common," said Mitsche.

Something that all riders may have in common is working up an appetite. PTNY provides breakfast and dinner each day for the riders and Mitsche said that some days the food is better than others but then again, he said, how good the food is doesn't really matter.

"After riding 50 or 60 miles," he said, "You're ready to eat."

A general day on the tour for Mitsche is breakfast around 6:30 a.m. and hitting the road by 7 a.m. Riders will stop to eat between 10:30 and 11 a.m. and usually finish up for the day between 1 and 2 p.m. Mitsche then said riders will get cleaned up and take a nap.

"And by the time the sun goes down, you're ready to go to sleep," said Mitsche.

Daley, who won't be riding but is helping out along the way, said he is looking forward to being a part of the activities, not only as an employee but from a tourist aspect as well.

"There's all these little stories about how all the communities develop," said Daley. "It's a beautiful ride."

The ride costs $495 for each adult and $245 for youth between the ages of 3 and 18. Discounts are available for groups and for PTNY members. Weekend options are also available for those who can't find the time to make the whole eight-day ride. Prices for the weekend rides are $190 for adults and $95 for youth.

Other than the canal tour bike ride, PTNY also organizes the Great Hudson Valley Pedal, which runs from August 15 to August 20 and takes riders from Albany to Manhattan.

PTNY has been working with Canal Corporation for the past 10 years in finding ways to improve the trail and parks system along the canal, according to Dropkin.

PTNY hopes to link the remaining gaps in the trail by 2009.

PTNY works with the Department of Health on a program called "Healthy Trails, Healthy People" to create an infrastructure of trails more conducive to physical activity in an effort to fight America's growing obesity epidemic, said Dropkin.

For information on the ride and PTNY, visit the organization's Web site at www.PTNY.org or call 434-1583.

Past

coming from," said Wiles.

"Maybe it's the communities along the canal that have embraced tourism or maybe it's the marketing from the state Canal Corp."

Jennifer Meicht, spokesperson for the Canal Corp., said stepped-up promotion and marketing efforts are beginning to pay off. "Everyone's beginning to realize the Erie Canal has the tremendous potential, and we are starting to realize the full potential of this waterway as a revenue generator for Upstate New York," said Meicht.

Richard Powell operates the Erie-Champlain Canal Boat Company based out of Waterford. Powell's boat offers the old English design of an historic Erie Canal boat, which is narrow and easier to handle with its rugged steel hull, brass trimmings and rich color. Weekly charters depart every Saturday at 8 a.m. and return the following Friday by noon. You can also be the captain of your own boat and begin your cruise at One Tugboat Alley and journey west toward Schenectady, Amsterdam and Little Falls. By day four, you reach Utica and then return back east toward home.

For information on the different cruises offered along the canal by the Erie-Champlain Canal Boat Co., you call 432-6094 or visit the Web at www.eccboating.com.

If you want to captain another 42-foot canal boat a little different in design, then you can call Toni or Ron Trottiere, co-owners of Erie Canal Cruises out of Seneca Falls. You pick your boat up at the Seneca Falls docks, and then you're on your way westward to enjoy the sights along the canal. Your ship is equipped with room for six passengers including TV, microwave, large showers and air conditioners for each cabin.

"The customers do everything themselves," said Toni Trottiere. "We have three boats, and we pretty well sell out most of the year."

Rentals are most popular in July and August, according to Trottiere, with a seven-day trip costing around $2,000.

Wiles said the two reasons the job is enjoyable is working with family and satisfied customers.

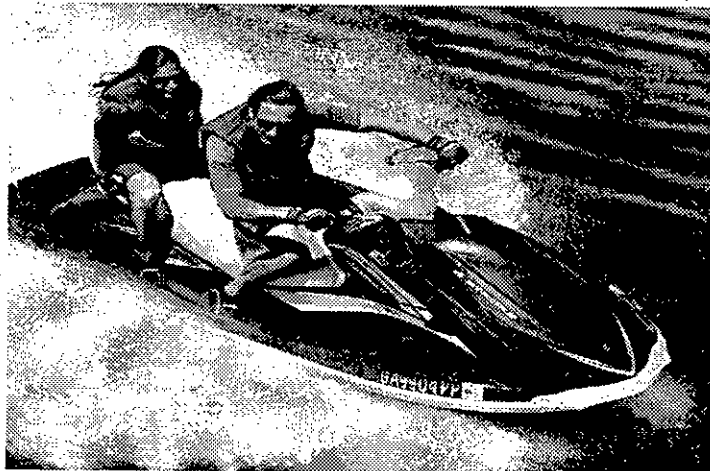

A boat approaches one of the 57 locks on the Erie Canal.

"Unlike a dentist or lawyer, people don't come unhappy when they see you," said Wiles. "The people who come to us are on vacation and very interested in the canal and ready to have a good time."
