A trial's silent witness: the yellow Jeep

By JIM CUOZZO

A yellow Jeep Wrangler owned by Christopher Porco was spotted by neighbors racing through the Brockley Drive neighborhood months before a brutal ax attack left Peter Porco dead and his wife, Joan, severely injured.

The same yellow Jeep was observed by toll collectors before and after the Nov. 15, 2004 crime, and a neighbor said he saw it in the family driveway the morning of the attacks.

Was the yellow Jeep that Porco purchased in the spring of 2004 the beginning of his undoing?

"It sure didn't help," said detective Christopher Bowdish, one of the first Bethlehem police officers at the scene of the Brockley Drive attacks.

Porco purchased the yellow Jeep Wrangler after he electronically forged his father's signature on a $17,000 loan. Even after his father discovered his deception in purchasing the vehicle, and even after he fell behind on payments, Porco continued to drive the conspicuous vehicle. He drove it the night of the crime right up until Aug. 10, when a jury found him guilty of murdering his father and attempting to murder his mother.

"This is my car, why should I stop driving it," were the words Bethlehem Police Chief Lou Corsi said describing Porco's attitude about the car.

During Porco's murder trial, Thruway toll collectors John Fallon and Karen Russell both testified they remembered a yellow Jeep for completely different reasons.

"I remember a yellow Jeep that came through at 10:45 p.m. right before quitting time," said Fallon, who worked the exit 46 Henrietta tolls the night of Nov. 14, 2004. Fallon told jurors he purchased Jeeps for both his wife and son, and he is a fan of the unique looking vehicles.

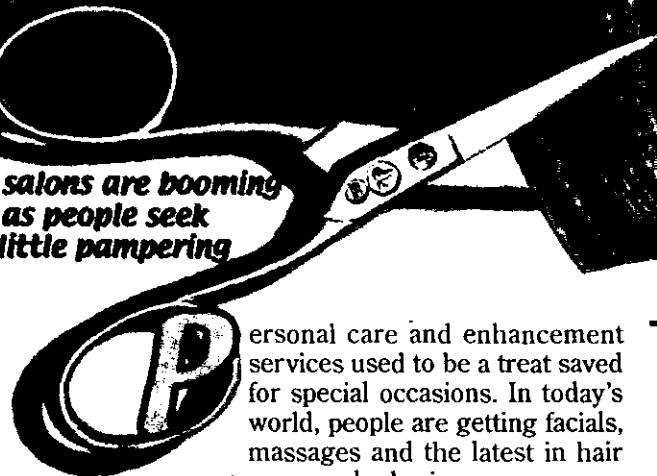

"As the vehicle got closer, I thought it would be a good vehicle for my son," Fallon testified on July 10.

The business of beauty

Local salons are booming as people seek a little pampering

Personal care and enhancement services used to be a treat saved for special occasions. In today's world, people are getting facials, massages and the latest in hair care on a regular basis.

Nationally, there are more than 400,000 beauty salons and day spas that make up a $10 million-a-year industry, according to a 2004 U.S. Census Bureau report on small businesses.

Capital District beauty salons and spa owners say they have seen a significant increase in business over the past five years, and that consumers are reporting a connection between how they look and how they feel.

"People are willing to spend money (at spas), and not just for a special occasion. They are making it a part of their life," said Patricia Adams, owner of Vitoria Adamo Day Spa in Rotterdam.

Adams said a popular anti-aging treatment at her spa uses an ultrasonic device to minimize fine lines and wrinkles.

Anti-aging facial treatments are growing in popularity with not only women, but men as well.

"Thirty percent of our clientele is male. They are taking care of their hair, nails and skin," said Adams.

Like Vitoria Adamo, Jean Paul Salon and Spa has seen an increase in male customers. Owner Jean Claude Simile says men make up about 20 percent of his business. But, he says, the heart of his business is women between the ages of 30 and 55, many of whom are professionals.

Added Simile, "We do a wonderful business during prom season, and, of course, during wedding season, as well."

Town Justice race

Already on ballot, pair vie for Independence Party approval

By JIM CUOZZO

In the September primary, Independence Party voters in Bethlehem will get an early chance to vote for the candidate of their choice in the race for town justice.

Democrat Ryan Donovan and Republican Brian Murphy are the major party candidates on the ballot this November. Both candidates are also trying to win the Independence Party nod Sept. 12.

Donovan was appointed to the town justice seat in June, replacing Frank Milano, who was appointed to the State Court of Claims by Gov. George Pataki.

"It was a great honor to be appointed town justice," said Donovan, who calls his new job "fascinating." "You truly have a chance to make a difference in a person's life," said Donovan.

After hearing more than 100 criminal cases in one day as Town Justice, Donovan hit the campaign trail for a few door-to-door visits with voters.

"I won't lose for a lack of trying," Donovan added.

Milano defeated Donovan in the last election for the justice seat. The town board appointment for Donovan was not unani-

National Grid encourages college students — completing summer studies or returning for the fall semester within its service area — to start or stop electricity and natural gas service through the company's website.

To save time on service requests, students should go to www.nationalgridus.com/ moving and select "New York" from the drop down menu under "Start New Service" or "Stop Service." This will automatically link to a brief electronic form to be completed by the customer. Once finished, customers simply click on "submit" and the process is complete.

By clicking on "Stop Service," customers are linked to a secure account access area where they can request that service be discontinued. Once the request has been submitted, the company will schedule a final meter reading and arrange service disconnection and final billing.

Five business days are needed to process both types of requests.

This online service allows customers to make requests to stop or start service at their convenience, from their own computers, 24 hours a day, seven days a week without ever having to pick up the phone. Using this web-based feature helps National Grid process these service

Bomb hoax investigation continues

By JIM CUOZZO

Terrorism hoaxes against the federal government can carry heavy consequences for perpetrators, and a recent bomb scare at a Delmar post office brought attention to the amount of money and manpower that goes into investigating such a crime.

Bethlehem police called in

"This is a federal charge, and the person could potentially face federal time."

Paul Holstein

a felony for anyone to perpetrate a hoax relating to biological, chemical, nuclear and weapons of mass destruction.

"This is a federal charge, and the person could potentially face federal time," said Paul Holstein, media coordinator for the Albany Division of the FBI.

Hoaxes, such as the one in Delmar, can cost local and federal governments hundreds of thousands of dollars to investigate. One case in Los Angeles recently cost $600,000 to investigate.

The use of specialized gear adds to the cost of these investigations. Special clothing, such as respirators and protective jumpsuits, and sealed containers are used in the decontamination and evacuation of areas under investigation and the transportation of potentially hazardous packages.

State police K-9 officers, Delmar fire officials, the Capital Region Forensics/Hazardous Materials Unit were all called to the scene Aug. 11, along with the FBI and Bethlehem police.

According to Holstein, the investigation of the hoax continues with assistance from the FBI Joint Terrorism Task Force, state and local police, and the Saratoga County forensics team.

The incident occurred just two days after British authorities arrested several people on terrorism charges for an alleged plot against the United States, and one day after the guilty verdict in the Christopher Porco murder trial.

Candidates swarm to fill 108th district seat

BY JIM CUOZZO

A host of new candidates from Averill Park to Slingerlands will be squaring off in both the September primary and the November general election for the 108th District Assembly seat being vacated by Pat Casale, R-Troy.

Kenneth Preston, Tim Gordon, William Reinhardt, Keith Hammond, Ronald Coalts and Martin Reid are all vying for the seat. Except for Reid, who will be on the November ballot as a Republican, all six candidates are attempting to gain other major and minor party victories next month.

In the Democratic primary, Hammond, Reinhardt, Gordon and Preston will be squaring off. Reid and Reinhardt are both running on Conservative lines and Reid and Gordon will be running on the Independence line. Coalts and Hammond will try for the Working Party line meaning at least three candidates will be on the November ballot.

Gordon is currently a member of the Bethlehem town board, and he believes reforms on the state level are needed.

"We can't allow reform to sputter out; we need to see it through," said Gordon. "Every legislator wants to be a hero with

Developers pitch housing proposal for Slingerlands

BY JIM CUOZZO

Bethlehem's new reassessments are having little effect on new housing development in the town.

Ed Kleinke of Kleinke Associates met with the town's development and planning committee last week to update the group on an application for 19 new single-family homes near Couse Lane and Stockbridge Road in the Slingerlands Fire District. The homes will be in the Bethlehem school district and will use the town water and sewer services.

The new home lots, if constructed, will be an average of two acres each spread out over 64 acres of land. Kleinke said much of the overall acreage is unusable.

"Some of our struggles include limited access, a lot of topography, a significant ravine and limited access to Couse Lane," said Kleinke.

Thirteen acres are considered wetlands, and about 10 acres are on a steep slope, leaving a total of 38 usable acres for development. There will be a 50-foot buffer setback for any proposed subdivision to keep the new properties away from wetlands.

"We have been looking at different ways to approach this subdivision," said Kleinke.

One of the options the group is considering is a "clustered conservation approach."

Another concern brought out at the committee meeting was emergency access for police and fire vehicles to the new proposed site.

"Full access for emergency response should be considered for everything," said Slingerlands Fire Chief Jason Tice. "It's important not to have any type of limitations in there."

"Some of our struggles include limited access, a lot of topography, a significant ravine and limited access to Couse Lane."

Ed Kleinke

One of the main concerns is to avoid the use of Couse Lane for direct access to the new proposed development.

The property is currently owned by Rose Watkins. The next step for the developers will be to move into the formal review process.

"We'd like to keep moving ahead with this," said Kleinke.

Many permit approvals are still necessary, including formal town approval for the project, before any construction can occur.

"We're a couple of years away from development," said Kleinke.

everybody's tax dollars, and that's why the state debt is growing," said Gordon.

Reid, a Rensselaer County legislator, said state government is in need of reform.

"I would start with the Medicaid system and address fraud in the system," said Reid.

Reid currently represents the towns of Sand Lake, Schodak and introducing a Right to Farm Law to encourage local farming.

William Reinhardt has been campaigning and putting signs up throughout the district the past several weeks. He is currently a member of the Averill Park school board. Reinhardt said seeing the state budget process and how it affects his school district back home is one of the main reasons he decided to run for the Assembly seat.

"I've watched people in the legislature mandate we spend more, and then choke us by not giving us any more money," said Reinhardt. "This puts districts in a bad spot."

Reinhardt said area state legislators are also to blame for the district's woes.

"(Sen. Joseph) Bruno (R-Brunswick), hasn't been an advocate for us, and Casale hasn't been an advocate for us," Reinhardt said.

The other candidates for the 108th district include Hammond, an Averill Park resident; Preston, who resides in Slingerlands; and Coalts, who lives in Troy.

Primary day is Sept. 12. The 108th Assembly District comprises 14 towns and parts of four counties including Albany, Columbia, Rensselaer and Greene. The towns of Bethlehem and Coeymans in Albany County are in this district.

Candidates Preston, Hammond and Coalts could not be reached in time for this story.

Nassua, all of which are a part of the 108th Assembly District.

Registered Republicans outnumber Democrats in the district by a 5,000-vote margin, and Reid said he feels he has an edge because he worked as an aide to former Assemblymen John Faso, who represented much of the district.

"This district fits me very well," said Reid.

Keith Hammond is another Rensselaer County Legislator running for Assembly. Hammond operates a 103-acre farm in Poestenkill and is serving his second term in the legislature. His list of accomplishments include calling for a repeal of the sales tax on gasoline and

Don't let shoe troubles 'de-feet' you

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR

A funny thing happened on the way to my friends' daughter's Bat Mitzvah.

Well, several funny things, actually. Only I didn't start laughing until much later. After I finished sweating.

It all began the day before the event when I remembered that I did not have proper shoes to pair with my dress. At least not shoes I could dance in. All I had was a pair of extremely uncomfortable high-heel strappy sandals.

Long ago, those dyed-purple shoes made their debut as part of a bridesmaid's ensemble. They have only appeared on my feet a handful of times. The shoes look great with this particular dress, but I can't really walk in them, let alone dance.

Luckily, in the back of my closet I found a shoebox with a pair of classic navy pumps. I had only worn the shoes once or twice. They were also a perfect match for my purple and blue dress and not nearly as dangerous as the purple sandals. Problem solved.

Then my 10-year-old daughter informed me her dress shoes didn't fit.

"They are too tight," she said.

I thought about convincing her to wear the shoes anyway. I wondered just what she meant

Commentary:

From

by "too tight." Were the shoes mildly uncomfortable or were they excruciatingly painful? Were they too tight to just sit in for a few hours during the service at the synagogue? Wasn't she going to end up taking off her shoes at the reception anyway?

At the shoe store we were faced with a selection of high-heeled sandals.

"I don't really see myself ever wearing these shoes," Rachel said as she teetered around on one pair.

I was glad to hear her say so, though I bet in a few years she'll be considering similar styles.

Luckily, the kindly store clerk helped us locate a pair of pretty black flats, almost like ballet slippers. Perfect for walking and dancing.

And so, I thought my footwear troubles were over. Not so.

In the morning I found that my only pair of nude-shade pantyhose had a run.

"Do you have to wear stockings?" inquired my husband, "you know, because your legs are already so tan."

"I know my legs are tan," I barked, "I need pantyhose because these shoes are pumps, not sandals. It wouldn't look right or feel comfortable."

I continued, "We will just stop at the store and I'll finish getting dressed in the ladies room at the synagogue." I slipped on a pair of casual, comfortable low-heel black sandals and went to the car carrying my navy pumps in a bag.

We were running late and I didn't want to miss any part of the ceremony.

"Change of plans," I told my husband, "Go straight to the synagogue. We will stop for pantyhose later on the way to the reception, and I will change in the restroom at the hotel."

"Whatever you say, dear," he replied.

Shortly after arriving at the synagogue I started feeling unusually sweaty.

"I think I forgot to put on deodorant," I whispered to Jeff. "How nice," he whispered back.

I kept my sweater on over my sleeveless dress in order to maintain a barrier between my moistening armpits and the people sitting near us. Every so often, I'd lean my head down and sniff.

"Stop smelling your armpits," my husband admonished.

On the way to the reception we stopped at a drug store. My usual brand of roll-on antiperspirant was not on the shelf, but I found something similar. "I hope this dries clear," I said to my husband, "I've got on a sleeveless dress, for goodness sake!"

He said, "Just go find the pantyhose."

I spotted the L'eggs cartons down the aisle. Of course, they had no reinforced-toe style in my size, only sheer toe. Oh man, these babies are going to rip as soon as I put them on, I lamented. I picked up two pair.

In the hotel parking garage, I removed my comfortable sandals and crammed my bare feet into the navy pumps. I picked up my purse and one pair of the hose, and we headed toward the building.

We were barely away from the car when I saw a wide piece of grassy twig sticking to the bottom of my shoe. I couldn't pull it off and when I turned the shoe over I saw that the sole was covered with pebbles and a tar-like substance.

So, I had pantyhose, but my shoes were falling apart. I was standing barefoot in a hotel lobby and my armpits stank. The ideal party guest!

I pulled a pebble out and part of the sole came with it. I took off the other shoe and saw that whatever I had stepped in had damaged both shoes.

So, I had pantyhose, but my shoes were falling apart. I was standing barefoot in a hotel lobby and my armpits stank. The ideal party guest!

First order of business was to get washed up.

The family of the bat-mitzvah girl had booked a hotel suite, so I headed up to their room hoping they would still be there changing for the reception. They were already there and gone, but a maid was still cleaning the room so the door was open.

"Hi, I'm with the so-in-so family," I said, "And, well, I'm sorry to get in your way, but I need to use the bathroom." She looked perplexed, but said she was finished in the bathroom.

My husband walked in a minute later, carrying the casual sandals I had left in the car. He found me standing anxiously near the sink, which was outside the bathroom. Only the toilet and shower were behind a closed door.

With the maid and my husband in the room I was beginning to wonder why I didn't just use the public restroom in the lobby.

I was nearly finished freshening up, when the bathroom door started to open. I held the door closed and said, "I'll be out in second." I thought I was addressing my husband.

"Oh, I'm sorry," said a man's voice that I did not recognize.

When I emerged from the bathroom my husband reappeared. "Where were you?" I asked him. "I was fixing my tie," he said. "Who was that man who came to the bathroom door?" demanded. "There was nobody else in the room," he insisted.

Then we both looked over at the unlocked connecting door that led to the room next door.

Doesn't this only happen in TV sitcoms?

No longer smelly, proceeded to the front desk to register a complaint about the tar in the parking garage. The young man behind the desk took off his own shoe, showed me the bottom and said, "Mine look like that too. That's just regular wear and tear."

His shoes were scuffed. My shoes were falling apart.

I was incensed. I told the guy, "So you think I made this up. You think I got dressed up in formal clothes and came to this hotel with an old beat-up pair of shoes to try to scam this establishment into providing restitution!"

As it turns out, the hotel is not liable for anything that happens in their parking garage, even if you slip on ice. "We have a clause for that," explained the front desk staff.

Following that exchange, I went to the restroom in the lobby and almost began to cry from frustration. But instead, I began to laugh. After all, I was dressed up, wearing comfortable shoes, odor-free and on my way to celebrate with good friends.

I headed toward the banquet room where I kicked up my low-heels, worked up a new sweat and danced the day away.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

An admirable job

We, in the media, are quick to point out public wrongdoings, but sometimes we are a little remiss when it comes to giving praise where and when it is due.

In the Christopher Porco murder trial, one of the defense tactics was to attempt to malign the Bethlehem Police Department for the way the agency collected evidence and generally "mismanaged" the investigation.

That attempt obviously failed when the guilty verdict was read in just six short hours.

To add insult to injury, the defense included two late officers, John Cox and Anthony Arduini, in its diatribe against the department.

These were two hardworking, honest men that spent a lifetime serving the Bethlehem community and its residents. Their families never deserved to be forced to endure what must have been a horrible ordeal to have their loved ones attacked or even mentioned without being able to defend themselves.

The Bethlehem Police Department, especially detective Christopher Bowdish, who led the local investigation, deserve our thanks for remaining calm and cool under pressure. The outcome of the trial vindicated the police department and gave credence to how it conducted the extensive and difficult investigation.

In today's world, police agencies in our 11-paper coverage area do an admirable job of protecting and serving our communities.

We would also like to commend assistant district attorneys Chief Prosecutor Michael McDermott and David Rossi for a well-reasoned prosecution, without any courtroom theatrics or grandstanding.

They were both very professional in their courtroom demeanor, treating every witness with respect.

Our sympathy goes out to both the Arduini and Cox families. We would also offer sympathy to Joan Porco and her elder son, Johnathan. We sincerely hope they will now be able to rebuild their lives.

We also hope Christopher Porco is able to receive some help during his prison stay, which could be up to 50 years to life, when he is sentenced Oct. 25.

The Porco case rocked this sleepy suburban community to the core. No one likes to believe that patricide and potential matricide would happen in a community like this.

Peter Porco was a highly respected law clerk for Judge Anthony Cardona, and Joan Porco was a speech therapist for the Scotia school district. Both Porcos had strong ties to the community and were highly regarded in turn.

Castro's failing health sparks memory

By JERRY McLAUGHLIN

The writer is a former Associated Press newsman, a press secretary to the late Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and current press secretary to state Sen. John Marchi of New York City. He lives in Slingerlands.

When he walked into a room in 1959 New York, Fidel Castro looked like, well, Fidel Castro.

Bearded, tall, dressed in combat fatigues and sporting a Havana cigar, he looked like a successful athlete who had just thrown a 20-game season.

In the Pulitzer room, with its stained-glass ceiling, he wore the authority of a guerrilla leader who had won his war and taken over.

It would be terrific to say that I had met the man and smoked a cheroot with him. Makes a great anecdote, but it's not true.

There were about 80 of us, students at Columbia journalism school, and we gathered to ask questions, many of which had already been asked.

He kept the field hat on for a while as he told us about his fight against Fulgencio Batista and how "12 men with 12 rifles" had formed the core of the revolution, which he led from the Sierra Maestra.

He also told the world and us that he was the leader of a socialist movement and a socialist government. He spoke to us in Spanish and one of his uniformed staff translated into English.

He promised free elections, the desire for good relations with America and the rest of the world.

Fidel had come to New York to speak at the United Nations, talk to the world and the New York press, and, at the behest of his New York Times friend, reporter Herb Matthews, speak to a class at Columbia.

He sat erect in his chair at the seminar table. His voice, in retrospect, sounded like Robert DeNiro's when he played young Vito Corleone in "Godfather II."

He was a dark-haired presence, his eyes focusing intently on his student interrogators. Many of the women found him attractive. But, of course, he was preaching to the choir — a then self-styled liberal and socialist, delivering his message in one of the bastions of academic liberalism in America.

At that time, still wearing his socialist halo atop his military fatigue heat, he said he wanted to walk up New York's west side, home to many Hispanics, and talk to the people.

That's when Herb Matthews of the New York Times, who had gone up into the mountains when Fidel was a wanted man and reported on his determination to defeat Batista, called a halt to the proceedings. Herb was one of the many New York editorial writers and reporters who had bought into Castro's idealist, messiah act. For a brief time, he enjoyed journalistic admiration because he had an inside relationship with Castro.

It took about an hour, our meeting with Castro and the future "running dogs of capitalism," as Chinese communist dictator Mao Tse Tung termed the American and western press.

Like others, I shared the socialist hero perception of Castro.

But, as we were to learn, his commitment to true freedom for his country was an illusion.

It was only two months later, in July of 1959, according to news accounts, that Castro's chief intelligence officer, Ramon Valdes, contacted the KGB in Mexico City. This triggered the subsequent arrival of 100 Spanish-speaking "advisers" in Cuba.

We fast forward here: February 1960, "Cuba makes a deal to buy oil from USSR." "U.S. refuses to refine Russian crude oil." "U.S. severs relations with Castro government." "Cuba signs deal to get extensive economic and military aid from Soviets."

I was working in Rhode Island at the time, and reading the headlines in The Providence Journal, I shared the general surprise and disgust at Castro's surge to the far left.

June 1960: "Eisenhower cuts Cuban sugar import by $7 million." "Cuba seizes $850 million worth of U.S. properties and businesses."

Talking to Columbia classmates, we agreed that the socialist movement had indeed been a ruse and Castro was becoming everything he and we had despised: a Banana Republic dictator.

The metamorphosis continued, and the headlines told the story.

"Castro nationalizes industry and properties owned by Cubans and non-Cubans." "Castro collectivizes agriculture and enacts policies to 'benefit the people.'" "A million Cubans emigrate to Florida."

And, Jan. 3, 1961: "Eisenhower breaks all ties to Cuba."

And so it went. My ex-Marine and J-school buddy, Chuck Daly, told me, "To think I considered joining this guy in the mountains when he was fighting Batista!"

By 1961, President Kennedy's government was engaging in a semi-secret campaign to remove Castro from power. In April of that year, CIA-trained Cuban exiles invaded their homeland at the Bay of Pigs. Their expedition failed after Jack Kennedy changed his mind and withheld American air support. Four hundred of the exiles were killed in the fighting. One thousand were captured.

The "Bay of Pigs" invasion turned into a disaster, and Castro reveled in his triumph. He had stood up to "Yankee imperialism" and won.

His people cheered the victory and united behind him. We thought at the time that Kennedy had missed a big opportunity by calling off the American fighters and bombers.

Then the inevitable march to genuine Communist dictatorship culminated in a typically long speech by Castro.

On May 1 — May Day in Moscow and elsewhere in the Soviet bloc — Castro announced to thousands in Havana that Cuba was a socialist nation and abolished free elections. So much for the statements made to the United Nations, the world and a class at Broadway and 116th Street in New York City in 1959.

The following Dec. 2, Castro declared that Cuba was a Marxist-Leninist government and that his country was adopting Communism.

The reaction here was one of great sadness. The conservative editorial writers were crowing: "We told you so!"

I guess I felt more disappointed than betrayed.

The beautiful island country, with all of its tragic history, including colonization by the Spanish, the dominance of western sugar companies and brutalization by an unending series of tyrants like Batista, was still under the yoke, even though the people remaining after the middle-class exodus, still regarded Fidel as a hero.

I thought then of Jose Martí. He was the 19th-century Cuban patriot, journalist and poet known as the apostle. He gave his life in the struggles with the Spanish. I thought then that in some celestial place for poets and patriots, Martí must have suffered yet another disappointment because of the lost opportunity embodied in Fidel Castro's betrayal of a great cause.

Like others who watched the Cuban tragedy unfold, I had bought into the "socialist" hero perception experienced that day in 1959 in a classroom in New York and had come away impressed.

I remember thinking that day as Castro was leaving to walk up Broadway to shake hands with and light up occasional cigars for Latinos: "He is 10 years older than most of us. He's young, committed and cares about his people and their freedom. Sort of like Jesus in fatigues and combat boots."

You would think a guy from a sensible place like Vermont would have known better.

But I didn't. And neither did Herb Matthews, whose professional star plummeted as Castro became our enemy.

These things came to mind recently when Havana reported Castro as stepping down "temporarily" at age 80, to undergo surgery for a serious problem.

You know, I have always wanted to have a drink in Havana.

Maybe a Cuba libre.

Support a cure for juvenile diabetes

Editor, The Spotlight:

Where on earth could you possibly purchase a pair of sneakers for only $2 and help find a cure for a terrible disease at the same time?

Five local merchants are selling paper sneakers for only $1 each to benefit diabetes research. This great sneaker sale is part of the effort of our town-wide team, Bethlehem Cares, that will participate in the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation's Walk to Cure Diabetes Sept. 17 at Corporate Woods in Albany.

Bethlehem Cares would like to thank these businesses for supporting our quest to cure diabetes by selling paper sneakers for us: Nichols Market in Voorheesville; Delmar Marketplace and Mr. Subb, both in Delmar; and Roberta's Gift Shop and VanAllen Farms, both in Glenmont.

The next time that you visit one of these businesses, please consider making a $1 donation. You won't just be buying a paper sneaker, you'll be buying hope for a lot of people that a cure will be found for diabetes and its complications.

If you would like more information on participating in the Walk to Cure Diabetes, call Bethlehem Cares at 439-6894. If you can't participate but would like to make a donation to support diabetes research, you can mail your check (payable to Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation) to Bethlehem Cares at 65 Boylston Drive, Delmar 12054.

Voorheesville tackles the issue of growth

By ART STEIN

Voorheesville is a small semi-rural village sandwiched in-between sprawling suburbia. At a board meeting last Tuesday, residents came out in force to try to keep it that way.

Residents of Locust Drive and the adjoining Scotch Pine development voiced concern at the Aug. 15 session regarding the construction of the Colonie Country Club housing development.

"The concern is that the property lines for the proposed homes are directly on the property lines of the adjacent homes on Scotch Pine, and the plan shows absolutely no green space whatsoever," said resident Michael Canfora.

Early last month, the town of New Scotland had agreed to move toward a renewable water contract with the developers, which would allow them to buy up to 20,000 gallons a day. But at the meeting, a petition with 80 signatures was presented, calling for the village to not grant water to the proposed development unless the builder leaves a buffer between the new homes and the existing homes along the Locust Drive-Scotch Pine corridor.

The board said the village had no knowledge of being approached by the town to purchase water, but pointed out that an approximately $50,000 shortfall in revenues could be made up by the selling of water.

Many of the residents said they would rather pay higher water bills than have new development thrust upon them.

"I am also concerned that if you do that and open up or create a precedent where you're giving people outside of the village water, when will you stop giving water?" said Canfora, who said more residents would also put a bigger burden on local schools.

"I would rather have the water taxes increase than the school taxes because we know what direction that goes," said Canfora.

"This is the first time that any of us has heard anything about this," said Mayor Robert Conway. Conway said that when the developer came to the village requesting water, they were told then that they were expected to have at least a 50-foot buffer between their development and existing back yards.

Trustee John Stevens added, "They are talking over there, but they are not talking to us. This is your town not talking to your village."

Conway added that until the town comes to them with specific drawings and plans, they cannot initiate any action, but he said he appreciates the concerns of the petitioners.

"I understand many of you bought your houses because of the vistas and privacy that your homes afford. Although we can't guarantee that will always be the case, we certainly can do whatever we can to make sure that these things are not totally decimated."

Another petition, signed by many of the same residents as the first, stated concerns about a possible extension of Locust Drive, which currently ends in a cul-de-sac. The petition asks that the village not permit the extension because of concerns about safety and increased congestion.

A basketball court sits at the end of the cul-de-sac on a village-owned piece of property dedicated for recreational use and drainage.

David Moreau, who owns the land on the other side of the basketball court, has requested seven water taps for new-home construction. The village has told Moreau that he must go to the town of New Scotland, which will work with the village to establish a water district.

Moreau has an easement on the village property and is permitted to drive around the basketball court and on to the cul-de-sac at the end of Locust Drive. Some residents have voiced concern for the children who play at the end of the street.

"Everybody knows Locust Drive as a dead-end street, and nobody expects to see a car coming from the basketball court onto Locust Drive," said Canfora.

Stevens said that the construction of seven houses by Moreau is under the jurisdiction of the town of New Scotland, and it is the goal of the village is to maintain Locust Drive as a cul-de-sac. The village agreed to grant Moreau the water taps, if he agrees to keep his property landlocked.

In other business, Joe Tassone requested on behalf of Global Signal, formerly Sprint Communications, that the lease with the village for the cell tower be amended to include both Cingular and Verizon. Tassone told the board that the cell tower would need to grow 20 feet to add those services. The monthly revenues to the village would increase by approximately $3,600 per month.

"In my opinion the board is probably not opposed to increasing the size of the tower. What people don't want is a second tower being built," said Stevens.

Will Smith, director of public works, requested Global Signal show the village its plans for immediate land around the cell tower. It is expected that the lease will be amended sometime in September.

The next meeting of the Board is scheduled for Sept. 26 at 7 p.m.

Fuel of the future? Governor's legislation ushers in ethanol era

This is part one of a two-part series. Part two can be found on page 10. For a related story, see page 14.

By ROB IRWIN

With gas prices on the rise, all levels of government are searching for a means to limit dependency on foreign oil through legislation promoting the use, research and development of alternative fuels.

On July 31, Gov. George E. Pataki signed legislation that will make renewable fuels more available at gas stations across the state, placing New York at the forefront of a movement to get away from the United States' dependency on foreign oil.

The new law will exempt renewable fuels from the provisions of franchise agreements between fuel providers and retail service stations. Before the law, service stations were not allowed to purchase or sell fuels from sources other than their main distributor. Since most major fuel distributors do not offer E85 or other renewable fuels, the contracts the service stations entered into prohibited them from offering renewable fuels to their customers.

The bill will allow gas station owners such as Christian King, owner of three area Mobil stations, to sell alternative fuels, such as E85. E85 is the term for motor fuel that is made of 85 percent ethanol and 15 percent gasoline.

"It makes the business decision much easier for business owners like myself," said King.

Currently, there are about 6 million flex-fuel vehicles (FFV) in the country that can run on E85. According to Pataki, there are 100,000 such vehicles in New York.

"To have the distribution, you have to have gas stations that are able to sell (E85)," said Pataki, at an announcement at King's Mobil station on Western Avenue near the University at Albany campus. Hopefully, this fall, if you have one of the 200,000 flex-fuel vehicles, you can fill up right here.

A renewable fuel is one that can be replaced by a natural process at a rate that is equal to, or faster than, the rate at which it is consumed. Renewable fuels differ from fossil fuels in that a fossil fuel, such as crude oil, takes millions of years to develop and is depleted by consumers far faster than that.

Ethanol, the primary component of E85, is derived from the fermentation of plant sugars.

Ethanol can be made from corn, potatoes, wood, waste paper, wheat, brewery waste, and other agricultural products and food wastes. According to the Environmental Protection Agency, anything containing sugar, starch, or cellulose can be fermented and distilled into ethanol.

In the United States, 90 percent of ethanol is produced from corn.

The reasons to fill up the tank with E85 vary, but could include lower prices, higher efficiency and greater performance.

According to Michelle Koutz, director of communications with the National Ethanol Vehicle Coalition, the price of E85 is difficult to predict.

"It varies from station to station, to state to state," said Koutz. "The main factor is the type of agreement the retailer has with the distributor."

Koutz said the price for a gallon of E85 ranges from $1.99 to $3.75.

Price, however, is not the only factor a consumer might take into consideration when using E85. The renewable fuel provides a 10 to 15 percent reduction in gallons used per mile, as well as providing better performance through higher octane levels.

E85 has an octane of approximately 105, compared to regular unleaded fuel's octane level of 87. Octane ratings measure a fuel's ability to resist engine knock, a rattling or pinging sound that results from premature ignition of the compressed fuel-air mixture in one or more cylinders. Regular octane is recommended for most vehicles, though vehicles with higher compression engines may require higher octane levels to prevent knocking. Premature ignition that results in knocking may also result in diminished performance. Higher octane levels will only improve a vehicle's performance if that vehicle requires an octane above 87.

Lori O'Connell, a spokes-person for the State Department Environmental Conservation said that ethanol-fueled FFVs also provide a reduction in carbon monoxide emissions, and engines operate more cleanly than those fueled by gasoline.

An FFV has a single fuel tank, fuel system and engine. The vehicles are designed to run on unleaded gasoline and an alcohol-fuel in any mixture. The engines in an FFV are adapted slightly to run on ethanol fuel because it can be corrosive.

Newer model FFVs that are available include vehicles from Ford, GM and DaimlerChrysler. Models are also offered by Mazda, Mercedes Benz, Mercury and Nissan. A complete list of available FFVs are available at the National Vehicle Ethanol Coalition's Web site at www.E85fuel.com.

While vehicles are available that run on ethanol, and despite the potential benefits, for Ralph Bombardier, executive director of the New York State Association of Service Stations and Repair Shops, the future of E85 and other renewable fuel sources is not a certainty.

"In the short term, it's not going to take off," said Bombardier. "The current status is that there are no facilities in the Northeast that are developing the fuel."

Bombardier said he believes the push towards incorporating biofuels into vehicles should have come in 1974, the time of a dramatic spike in oil prices stemming from an oil embargo in the Middle East. Bombardier said as soon as gas prices went down, so too did the political and public concern.

"As long as it's politically attractive," said Bombardier, "everyone jumps on the bandwagon."

According to Bombardier, it is going to take more research, manufacturing and more flex-fuel vehicles for the production and consumption of E85 to be a successful venture.

"All of those things have to come into place for this to be attractive enough to be a viable alternative," he said.

Bombardier said that it takes the same amount of petroleum to produce a gallon of E85 as would typically be consumed per mile in a car. This can offset the conservation aspect of using ethanol-based fuels.

A study from the Argonne National Laboratory titled "The Energy Balance of Corn Ethanol: An Update," refutes Bombardier's claim.

The study, published in 2002 through the USDA's Office of Energy Policy and New Uses and

Farms to fuel: Ethanol plants could up demand for state crops

This is part two of a two-part series. Part one can be found on page 9. For a related story, see page 14.

By ROB IRWIN

With multiple ethanol-producing facilities planned throughout New York, the state's agricultural industry could be on the brink of an economic boom in the years to come.

The New York State Farm Bureau had been working to create an ethanol-producing industry in the state for more than a decade said Peter Gregg, spokesman for the farm bureau.

"And all of a sudden it's exploded over the past year," said Gregg, "thanks to $3-a-gallon gas."

Ethanol is a renewable biofuel produced by the fermentation of plant sugars, typically produced by corn and grain products. Ethanol can be mixed with gasoline to be used in specially adapted vehicles. About 200,000 vehicles in New York can run on E85, a fuel mixture of 85 percent ethanol and 15 percent gasoline.

Gregg said the ethanol "explosion" would increase demands for crop output, notably corn, statewide.

"This will have a huge economic impact on the rural economy as a whole," said Gregg. "They'll be buying a tremendous amount of corn and soybeans."

The "they" Gregg refers to are the four biofuel plants that have been slated to go online across the state in the coming years, beginning with a dry-mill ethanol plant in the western town of Shelby, being built by Western New York Energy. The $87.4 million facility will be built on 144 acres and is expected to begin production in December 2007.

"They're pledging to seek their raw materials from New York farmers first," said Gregg.

Gregg said the farm bureau had been lobbying to get tax credits and incentives for the production and research of ethanol.

Currently there are no ethanol-producing plants in the Northeast — the majority are found in the Midwest.

"With gas prices on the rise, the state is making a wise investment in encouraging technology that will decrease our dependence on fossil fuels ..."

Jim Wright

Gregg speculated that once an ethanol plant is completed, farmers could enter into contracts that would allow them to sell an amount of product to a local plant at set prices.

"We expect to purchase at least 30 percent of our corn locally," said Michael Sawyer, project manager of the Shelby plant, though, he added, "We will not be able to purchase all of our corn from western New York."

Sawyer said the local market would not be able to supply all 20 million bushels of corn the plant expects to process yearly. Additional corn will be shipped to the plant on rail cars from the Midwest. Once the ethanol is produced, Sawyer said it would be distributed throughout the Northeast. Sawyer said that the demand for ethanol fuel would far outweigh the 50 million gallons the Shelby plant would produce each year.

"Right now, the demand in New York and Connecticut alone is in excess of 500 million (gallons) a year," said Sawyer.

Along with producing corn-based ethanol, the Shelby plant would use remnants of the processed corn to produce stock feed, and would sell carbon dioxide, a byproduct of ethanol production, to facilities for the carbonation of soda and other beverages.

Sawyer estimated that the Shelby plant will create 50 direct jobs, at least 20 more jobs in the carbon-dioxide facility and a "significant number of spin-off jobs," including positions in transportation, maintenance, agriculture and the service industry.

The state of Minnesota, which has an ethanol program, currently has 16 ethanol plants. A 2003 study released by the Minnesota Department of Agriculture showed that the plants produced 300 million gallons of ethanol generating total sales of more than $380 million dollars per year. According to the study, the ethanol industry's total economic impact to the state was in excess of $580 million each year. As of 2005, according to the Minnesota Department of Agriculture, ethanol production's economic impact in the state has created $1.5 billion in output and has created 5,800 jobs.

Minnesota's ethanol market was endorsed by farmers in the state who were producing more corn than could be shipped and sold. Currently, ethanol facilities in Minnesota process a billion bushels of corn each year.

"It's had a tremendous impact," said Ralph Groschen, senior marketing specialist with the Minnesota Department of Agriculture. "It's been a big help to us not to have piles of corn standing in the street."

Recent New York legislation has been promoting the research, production and use of ethanol. Gov. George Pataki recently signed into legislation a bill that would allow service stations to purchase or sell fuels such as E85 from sources other than their main distributor. Since most major fuel distributors do not offer E85 or other re-newable fuels, the contracts the service stations enter into prohibit them from offering renewable fuels to their customers.

The legislature's 2006-07 budget included a $5 million tax credit for the production of biofuels by companies and also for $20 million in funding for the construction of a pilot cellulosic ethanol plant. As opposed to normal ethanol, produced from sugars and starches, cellulosic ethanol is derived from cellulose found in urban, agricultural and forestry waste.

Two Amsterdam businessman recently applied for a grant to fund the construction of a cellulosic ethanol plant in Montgomery County.

Along with the Shelby plant, plants planned for Fulton and Seneca Falls would be eligible for the tax credit based on the amount of biofuel they produce. The program would give companies a credit of 15 cents per gallon of biofuels produced after a 40,000-gallon threshold had been reached. The credit is capped at $2.5 million per company per year for four years.

"With gas prices on the rise, the state is making a wise investment in encouraging technology that will decrease our dependence on fossil fuels while providing an avenue for the private sector to invest in job growth," said Sen. Jim Wright, R-Watertown, in March.

Wright, the chairman of the senate committee on energy and telecommunications, has been at the forefront of pushing legislation encouraging tax incentives for production of biofuels.

"(Wright) understands that it's a reality that we need to have a diverse energy source," said Kim Ireland, director of the senate committee on energy and telecommunications. "He's been a long-time supporter of the utilization of alternative fuels."

the Office of the Chief Economist, said that the corn-to-ethanol process results in a 34 percent gain in the overall energy input/output equation.

For instance, if it took 100 BTU's of energy to plant, harvest, transport and distill the corn, the result would be 134 available BTU's in the resulting ethanol.

Currently, the majority of all ethanol-producing plants that exist in the United States are located in the Midwest. With recent announcements of the construction of at least four ethanol-producing plants throughout the state, an increase in both production and consumption in New York is on the horizon and could have an enormous impact on the state's agricultural market.

All play and no work makes for an unproductive summer

Ah, summer settles in, the weather has remained near perfect and no one really has his or her head into work. That can be played to your advantage as a salesperson. Regardless of what product you are selling, while everyone else is loitering at the track, grabbing rays at the Cape or the Jersey shore, traversing the countries of their ancestors with a Eurail pass or luxuriating at a spa in the Berkshires, you can go out and make a difference to the bottom line. Shopkeepers are gearing up for the fall and, dare I say it, yes, the holiday season already. Now's the time when it's relatively quiet to meet your clients. Let them know you've not abandoned them for the hedonistic lures of the summer sun.

While others are developing an envious case of sun poisoning and creating memories for years to come, you should be out pounding the pavement, albeit often times a bit gooey from the sun-melting blacktop. Stop in to see your clients with a surprise treat; everyone loves the unexpected. Fresh fruit, ice cream, even the old standby of donuts or a bag of bagels will let your customer know they are being thought of. What a wonderful thing to see the salesperson when he or she has no ulterior motive. Well, at least no obvious motive, other than when the person returns to sell something, the former may be a bit more receptive. Laying groundwork and solidifying relations is a major part of sales. You can choose the last golden days of summer to get a tan, go on vacation or work on building a future that will help pay for the next vacation, tan or fun times.

With everyone on vacation, the newsy portion of the column is a bit paltry. Not much of business nature appears to be happening this week. Apparently the track once again captures our sensibilities. Community Caregivers is preparing for their 12th Annual Gala on Friday, Nov. 17, at Albany Country Club, when they will be honoring Elaine Nichols of Nichols Market with the Community Service Award. ... Finally a special note on the impending retirement of Ed Lange, the associate artistic director and PR director of NYSTI (New York State Theatre Institute) after 25 years of service. Ed has not only run the media side of NYSTI, he also directs and has written shows for the institute. Lange will be pursuing life as a freelance writer, director and sailor. Ed has been a great friend to the Spotlight over the years and will mark his departure on Oct. 7, opening night of his final directorial duty with "Idiot's Delight." We all wish Ed many years of smooth sailing on calm seas...

And that just about clears my desk for another few weeks. As always, if you have anything you'd like to see in the column, feel free to e-mail me at: kellertw@spotlightnews.com. We can't guarantee they will all get in, but we'll give it our best shot.

Immunizations reminder issued

With the start of another school year just around the corner, the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central School District is asking all parents to make sure their children's immunization records are up-to-date.

State law requires students be immunized for the following: diphtheria, polio, measles, mumps and rubella (MMR), hepatitis B and varicella (chicken pox), for students born on or after Jan. 1, 1998, or those born on or after Jan. 1, 1994, and entering the sixth grade.

"Immunizations are the only way to effectively protect your loved ones from a number of potentially dangerous, debilitating, and even deadly diseases," said assistant superintendent Diane Albano.

People in Capital District make use of energy technologies

By JESSICA HARDING

Why pay $3.50 for diesel fuel at the gas station when you can make biodiesel at home for 80 cents a gallon? Why pay for electricity from National Grid, when you can become a mini-energy producer yourself?

These are the types of things that some local residents are doing to conserve energy and do their part to save the environment and cut costs.

Residents choose to become more energy conscious for a variety of reasons, including the rising cost of energy, a love for energy-saving technologies, or even anti-war sentiments. They are doing everything from switching to more efficient light bulbs and installing insulation to making biodiesel and using energy-producing solar panels.

Edward Stander lives in Delmar and teaches environmental technologies at SUNY Cobleskill. His dream is to live "off the grid" by creating his own power resources from things like wind generators and solar panels.

"There are alternate ways of doing things. I hate being a part of a large grid," he said.

Stander said he has successfully converted a lab room and office at SUNY Cobleskill to run totally off the grid.

Stander has been able to cut energy costs in his home by installing some unusual devices. He has a tankless water heater, which works by heating the water as it flows through the pipes. This way the water is not being constantly heated in a tank.

"It never leaks, it takes less energy to run and way less room," he said.

Stander also has an inverter in his home that charges large batteries, which could provide his home with electricity for three days in the event of a power outage. Eventually, he wants National Grid to allow him to run his home on batteries during peak hours to save money.

Stander said he has the most energy-efficient furnace and air conditioner in the world, he drives the first hybrid Toyota Prius sold in the Northeast, which gets 45 miles per gallon, rides an electric scooter that goes 23 mph and gets 30 miles on a charge, and uses an electric lawn mower.

Stander said he started doing these things not to save the environment, but to save money. "Turns out they go hand in hand," he said.

Stander doesn't think he is doing anything that weird. "My feeling is anyone who wants to can solve the energy crisis simply by doing the right thing."

Vischer Ferry resident Joanne Coons is also doing her part to help solve the energy crisis. Coons and her husband, Paul, make biodiesel in an old barn and are the owners of some very high-tech equipment.

Coons, who is an earth science and living environment teacher at Shenendahowa High School, has two sons and is against the war in the Middle East. She said she wanted to do something to decrease this country's dependence on foreign oil, so she bought an old diesel car for $350 and started making biodiesel.

"The first diesel engine in 1890 was made to run on peanut oil, so I'm not doing anything weird here," Coons said.

Coons and her husband go to Chinese restaurants every Sunday night to collect discarded oil. She then starts the process of making the fuel by filtering the oil and mixing it with methanol and lye and heating it.

Coons said it takes about three hours to make a batch of biodiesel, and it is a labor-intensive process. The jugs of ingredients are heavy and the chemicals are fairly unsafe.

"I want to stress that not just anyone can do this. Safety is very important. These chemicals shouldn't touch your skin or be extensively breathed in," Coons said.

The Coons have already made about 200 gallons of biodiesel. One problem with this type of fuel is that it congeals in the winter, so it can't be used in colder months.

Coons said it cost about $2,000 to set up their operation, but they never have to go to the gas station except in winter months, and their fuel costs about 80 cents per gallon.

Besides making her own fuel, Coons has solar panels on the roof of her barn that heat her water. There is a back-up tank in the basement that turns on when it senses when the water in the solar tank isn't hot enough.

Coons also has two huge photovoltaic panels built in the back of her 2-acre property. The panels are not visible from her home because of the trees.

The power company buys the excess energy created from the photovoltaic panels and gives users a credit. In essence the homeowner becomes a small power supplier, said Coons.

"Seventy-five percent of our power comes from these panels," Coons said.

The panels cost $20,000 to install and were paid for in part through tax rebates and a grant from the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority.

Spokesman for NYSEERDA Ray Hull said there are many programs that provide incentives for people looking to make their homes more energy efficient. Two of them are the Get Energy Smart program and the Power Naturally program.

The Power Naturally program is designed for people, like Coons, who are looking to install an alternative energy source. Hull said NYSEERDA would substantially cut the cost of those installations through this program.

Hull said the first step in the Get Energy Smart program is having licensed professionals conduct an energy audit on the home for about $400.

"Every bit of the home is looked at, from the foundation to the attic, and every mechanical device in between," Hull said.

The homeowner is presented with a list of recommendations such as more insulation, updating the HVAC system, and caulking places where air goes in and out of the home.

The homeowner can do everything or nothing on the list, and NYSEERDA helps with the financing. NYSEERDA has a loan program that gives homeowners a low rate and provides a 10 percent discount for people who are writing the check themselves. If the homeowner meets the state's low-income guidelines, NYSEERDA will pay for half of the cost.

Some people say little can be done about Alzheimer's disease.
Those people are WRONG.

A progressive disease like Alzheimer's requires a progressive commitment like ours. Nearly a decade ago, The Eddy pioneered Alzheimer's education and residential care with Marjorie Doyle Rockwell Center in Cohoes.

And, this September, The Eddy expands that commitment with the opening of Eddy Alzheimer's Center at Hawthorne Ridge in East Greenbush.

Find out more. Call the Eddy Alzheimer's Center at Hawthorne Ridge at 833-1111.

Alzheimer's can deprive a person of memories.

Jeep

said she remembered Porco's yellow Jeep driving fast into her lane at 1:51 a.m. Nov. 15, 2004.

"The speed he was coming into my lane was excessive," Russell testified Porco's Jeep was also identified by University of Rochester surveillance cameras leaving the campus the Sunday night before the crime and driving back through around 8:30 a.m. the next morning.

Jurors took special interest in the testimony of former Brockley Drive resident Marshall Gokey. Gokey was the prosecution's last witness, and he testified that he saw Porco's Jeep in the driveway of the Porco family's home at about 3:45 a.m., around the time the crime was suspected of being committed.

"I can see it pulling up in that driveway," Gokey said, "It's the same vehicle."

Many court observers wondered how someone could

"Gokey said that Jeep had been terrorizing the neighborhood."

Michael McDermott

remember seeing a car in the dark when driving to work.

"Gokey said that Jeep had been terrorizing the neighborhood," said chief prosecutor Michael McDermott.

Assistant District attorney David Rossi, who tried the case with McDermott, said Gokey came to authorities the day after the crime to tell them what he saw.

"At the time, he didn't know anything about the timeline," said Rossi.

McDermott first believed Porco's defense team of Terence Kindlon and Laurie Shanks would attack Gokey's testimony until jurors heard him testify.

"The defense, in mid-stream, changed strategy because they could see the jury liked this guy," said McDermott.

A few days later the jury came back with a guilty verdict, and the yellow Jeep was once again in the spotlight as photographers took pictures of it as it sat in an empty parking lot outside the Orange County Courthouse, taking in the last rays of Goshen sunlight.

Porco is now in the Albany County Jail awaiting sentencing.

Porco appeal is under way

BY JIM CUOZZO

Attorneys for convicted killer Christopher Porco expect to file an appeal to overturn his murder conviction by the beginning of next month.

"We are moving with deliberate speed here," said Terence Kindlon, Porco's attorney since his client was first investigated by Bethlehem police in 2004.

An Orange County jury delivered a guilty verdict, Aug. 10, against the 23-year-old for murdering his father, Peter Porco, and attempting to murder his mother, Joan, inside their 36 Brockley Drive home in Delmar on Nov. 15, 2004. The verdict was reached by jurors in less than six hours following a trial that stretched over more than seven weeks.

"We are assembling a motion to set aside the verdict," Kindlon said.

Although overturning murder convictions is quite rare, Kindlon said he first believed he had information from a reliable source that, if proven, would almost guarantee a granting of the motion.

"The silver bullet appears to be an illusion," said Kindlon. "It turned out that the information could not be confirmed."

Despite the setback, work toward an appeal continues, and preparations for pre-sentencing memorandums will be filed prior to Porco's sentencing date of Oct. 25.

Porco's attorneys are also poring over thousands of pages of trial transcripts to work on their client's appeal. Kindlon said he is planning to bill the county for the cost of the transcripts.

"Chris is an indigent," said Kindlon. "He has no money of his own."

Kindlon said he believes the cost of the transcripts will be close to $12,000.

Chip Dott, executive deputy comptroller in Albany County comptrollers office, said the cost to Albany taxpayers for prosecuting the Christopher Porco case is already at $71,000,

"The silver bullet appears to be an illusion. It turned out that the information could not be confirmed."

Terence Kindlon

which doesn't include the $12,000 bill to cover the cost of trial transcripts.

"We haven't seen those bills yet," said Dott.

The latest estimate also doesn't include the cost of hotel rooms in Goshen during the month of August for prosecution witnesses and members of the Albany County district attorney's staff.

Meanwhile, Kindlon's client is serving his time inside the county jail.

"I have other lawyers in the office who have been out to see him," said Kindlon. "He is doing well, as can be expected under the circumstances."

Porco could face anywhere from 50 years to life in prison, if given the maximum sentence by Orange County Supreme Court Judge Jeffrey Berry.

Justice

mous, with two members abstaining from the vote.

His new opponent is Brian Murphy of Glenmont. Murphy is currently the chief counsel in the bureau of professional medical conduct for the State Department of Health. Murphy who has also served as the former Republican chairman for the town of Bethlehem said the voters deserve a candidate with experience.

"This is the first time I have ever run for public office," said Murphy, who has practiced law in the area for 35 years. His work experience includes being chief counsel for former State Senator Kenneth LaValle along with 10 years as Bethlehem deputy town attorney. Murphy has also worked in both the district attorney's office and public defender's office.

"A candidate for justice should bring a great deal of experience to the position," Murphy said. "I would use the resources we have to ensure our young people are not going to be repeat offenders," said Murphy.

Donovan lives in Delmar with his wife and two children, and works in the private law firm of D'Agostino, Krackler, Baynes and Maguire. Before that, he worked two years in the county public defender's office.

"I have quite a bit of criminal experience," Donovan said.

Although Donovan and Murphy are vying for the Independence line, each will be on the ballot for November's general election. Murphy is the Republican and conservative candidate and Donovan as the Democratic candidate.

The Town of Bethlehem has two justices, each serving four-year terms. Paul Dwyer is the second Town of Bethlehem justice.

Q: My three single girlfriends and I are planning a weeklong fall getaway. We usually enjoy leaf-peeping in Vermont. This year we are thinking about doing something new. We also wouldn't mind meeting some men, but we are not into the bar scene. Any ideas?

A: Don't try to pack too much into a week, that adds too much stress on four people that aren't used to being together. Any chance you could change it to a few extended weekends by getting away early on a few Fridays. That way you and your friends can experience so much more and spend about the same amount.

• Weekend 1: Why not enjoy the fall colors of Vermont, but this time learn to play golf.

Try the Stratton Golf University, the hardest thing about this school is concentrating on golf. The golf staff at Stratton makes it so much fun, you almost forget what you are supposed to learn. The views are so spectacular it also distracts.

This beautiful spot is only about a little over an hour from Albany. They have great weekend golf packages, the accommodations at the Stratton lodge are spacious and comfortable, and you'll enjoy great food. It's a nice fun way to meet some guys and maybe learn how to play the game of golf.

Visit www.stratton.com for information.

• Weekend 2: Cooperstown is great in the fall.

Be sure to stop at the Farmers Museum and learn how hard our ancestors had it. Cooking without a microwave; can you imagine?

Cooperstown is a lot more than just the Baseball Hall of Fame, which does, incidentally, attract the guys.

In mid September, they have their annual Harvest Festival, followed in October by Pumpkinfest Weigh-off and Regatta. Both are lots of fun.

Just walking and exploring the streets of Cooperstown evokes America's rich heritage.

There are a number of charming B&B's, and for first-rate accommodations, stay at the Otesaga, which just finished a $34 million renovation. It also boasts the Leatherstocking Golf Course, heated pools, tennis and stunning views of Lake Otsego.

To learn more go online to www.cooperstowngetaway.org; www.otesaga.com; and www.farmersmuseum.org.

• Weekend 3: How about a wild weekend?

What happens at Turning Stone or Foxwood stays there.

Both are wonderful resorts with much more to offer than gambling. World-class entertainment, spas, pools and dining experiences are alone worth the trip.

Turning Stone Casino is a little more than an hour and a half west, and Foxwood Resort & Casino is a little farther east. Both have award-winning golf courses.

If your group is looking for some place to wear those new fall outfits, either of these spots is the place to be seen. Check them out online at www.foxwoods.com and www.turningstone.com

• Weekend 4: Just in case you and the girls decide to do the "safe thing" and go back to New England for the turning of the leaves, there may be some New England treats you haven't tried.

The spa at the Cliff House Resort offers "seashell therapy" and blueberry smoothie skin treatments, and the Hawk Inn & Mountain Resorts serves Vermont honey-maple syrup scrubs and chocolate body butter finishers. Do a couple chowder shots, go to a clam bar, try a nip from New England like Cold River Vodka, made from Maine potatoes, taste a cranberry cosmos or a blueberry martini.

If you are looking for really interesting things to do and a list of great places to stay in New England, go to www.newenglandinnresorts.com.

Even with great friends, it's better to take baby steps first when you travel. Try a weekend or two of fun and learn some new things before you commit to a long vacation and learn more about your friends than you ever wanted to know.

Library Friends give for flood relief

In the floods that plagued New York in July, many public libraries suffered damage.

For instance, Canajoharie Library and Art Gallery, a mere hour's distance west of Albany, suffered basement flooding and more than $1 million in damages to their new gallery addition.

About 2,000 books were lost, as well as newspaper originals, bank ledgers, paintings, prints, posters and frames.

At their July meeting, Friends of Bethlehem Public Library pledged a $500 donation to the New York State Library Association's fund for libraries damaged by the floods.

NYLA director Michael Borges expressed his appreciation to assistant director Jeanne Biggins, "Please convey my thanks to the Friends of Bethlehem Public Library for their generous donation. I hope more members of the library community step up to the plate and help libraries right here in their own back yard."

At the time, our Friends' donation had brought the NYLA Disaster Relief Fund to about $1,500. NYLA hopes to reach $7,000 by the end of this month.

You can send a personal donation to the NYLA Disaster Relief Fund, 252 Hudson Ave., Albany 12210 or by credit card online at www.nyla.org.

Friends projects

In the past year, generous Friends donations have supported several service projects, including the electronic message display at the checkout desk, plantings for the library gardens, the Riverway Storytelling Festival, an evening with best-selling author Chris Bohjalian, and our winter concert series, "A Little Sunday Music." Friends also hosted its third annual Friends on the Green picnic, organized bus trips to New York City and Boston, sold Friends tote bags, and sponsored a $500 community service scholarship for a deserving high school student. You can help support Friends projects for our library and the greater community by contributing to the Friends annual appeal. Several membership categories are available. The donation form can be found in the September/October issue of our footnotes newsletter and online at www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org/about.us/friends. Fill it out and send it c/o the library, with your check payable to Friends of Bethlehem Public Library. The Friends thank you for your support.

Book ends

Adult book talks resume
DayBooks at the library resumes Monday, Sept. 11, at 1:30 p.m. with Extremely Loud and Incredibly Close by Jonathan Safran Foer.

The novel centers on the 9-year-old son of a man killed in the World Trade Center attacks, who searches New York City for a lock that fits a key his father left behind.

• AfterDinner Books at the library resumes Wednesday, Sept. 20, at 7 p.m. with Year of Wonders: a Novel of the Plague by Geraldine Brooks. Based on a true story of the "plague village" of Eyam, England, this book explores the struggle of science and religion to interpret the world.

Copies of the books are available at the information desk. New members are welcome; no preregistration is necessary. Call 439-9314 for information.

Louise Grieco

• All library programming is free and open to the public. The Bethlehem Public Library is located at 451 Delaware Ave., Delmar. For information, call 439-9314.

INDIAN LADDER

Farmers Market held at Indian Ladder

Helderberg Farmers Market will be held every Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., now through October featuring locally grown produce, farm products and crafts. Indian Ladder Farms is located on Route 156 in Altamont. For information, call 765-2956.

Thacher summer walks

The last weekly walk in the woods Thacher Nature Center will be held Thursday, Aug. 24, from 9 to 11 a.m., and will meet at the Paint Mine Picnic area. The walk is easy to moderate and appropriate for ages 7 and older. Take a leisurely walk on one of the many trails in the park with Joy Scism. In the event of inclement weather, the walk will be meet the following day at 9 a.m.

For information, call 872-1237.

A geology walk will be held Saturday, Aug. 26, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Thacher Park. Limestone bedrock produces landscape features such as caves, sink holes and disappearing streams. This type of landscape is known as karst topography. Explore the park and learn about karst geology with Thom Engel. Meet at Carrick Road for this two to three hour walk. For information or to register, call 872-0800.

There will also be an amphibians and reptiles program Saturday, Aug. 26, at 2 p.m., at Thacher Park. Observe and learn about many local amphibians and reptiles up close with Dee Strnisa. For information, call 872-0800.

Panther Creek

performs at Thacher

The Cajun-influenced rock band, Panther Creek, will perform at Thacher State Park

Thursday, Aug. 24, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Pear Orchard Picnic shelter. Rain or shine, this concert is free and open to the public.

In case of inclement weather, patrons may wish to confirm the event with the park office at 872-1237.

Indian Ladder

to host Camp Wild Week

Indian Ladder Farms and Kaving Crow Awareness Center will be combining resources this summer to provide a Barn School with a new and exciting twist.

While investigating the lives of the native people who traveled and lived in our area before European influence, participants of Camp Wild Week will explore their abilities in primitive skills such as spear throwing and wigwam building.

The week will be led by Vince Walsh, owner of Kaving Crow Awareness Center.

Walsh is a licensed NYS guide and graduate of Paul Smith's College in the Adirondacks.

This camp will run Monday through Friday, Aug. 28 to Sept. 1, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Indian Ladder Farms.

Tuition is $200 per camper, and camper ages run from 9 to 13, or grades 5 through 9.

Space is limited to 12 campers. For information or to register, call 765-2956 or e-mail baileyliesle@yahoo.com.

Student attends summer leadership conference

Rebekah Coons of Voorheesville, a student at Clayton A. Bouton Jr./Sr. High School, attended a summer leadership conference for high school seniors at Wells College in Aurora.

The goal of the conference was to share with students an understanding of leadership. Workshops provided information and practice in areas important for leadership development, such as problem solving, goal setting, public speaking, communication and teamwork.

Students brought to the conference issues of concern from their communities and schools that they want to address. The conference is designed to give them time to explore and discuss ways to address these issues, as well as connect them to a community of people interested in promoting leadership. At the end of the conference, participants leave with an action plan that they can implement when they return home.

Past topics have included diversity, cliques, alcohol and drug issues, student apathy, and community building. In addition to the workshops, swimming, field trips and evening programs rounded out the event.

Reading club to end with celebration

The club will end this year with an event called "Treasure Trove of Magic" on Aug. 30 at 7 p.m. Families are invited to an evening of entertainment presented by magician Ron Cain. Prizes will be awarded, and great refreshments served. Wrap up summer with a grand finale of fun for all ages.

Back-to-school stories

School tales will put kids (ages 4 through grade 2) in the mood for the September routine. There will also be a short film and a craft to pack into school backpacks. Get ready for a fresh start, meeting new teachers and making new friends. It's excitement and fun on Friday, Sept. 1 at 10:30 a.m. No sign-up is necessary.

9/11 materials

Library director Gail Sacco has compiled a short list of recommended print, CD and Web materials available at VPL for people interested in making note of the anniversary of the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11, 2001. Here are her suggestions:

- The September 11 Digital Archive: The Center for History and New Media American Social History Project Web site at <http://www.911digitalarchive.org>. This site uses electronic media to collect, preserve and present the history of the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks in New York, Virginia and Pennsylvania and the public responses to them.

- One Nation: America

Voorheesville Public Library

Remembers September 11, 2001. In vivid, full-color photographs, One Nation celebrates the strength, unity and heroism of the firefighters, rescue workers, paramedics and more who so bravely risked or sacrificed their lives.

- Extremely Loud and Incredibly Close by Jonathan Safran Foer. After his father, whom he worshiped, perishes in the World Trade Center, 9-year-old Oskar Schell finds a key in his dad's closet mysteriously labeled "Black." So, he goes searching after the lock it opens, visiting (alphabetically) everyone listed in the phone book with the surname Black.

Windows on the World by Frédéric Beigbeder. This French novel about 9/11 is a brave, intriguing, emotionally resonant work.

What's new

Robert O'Malley

Robert James O'Malley, 88, of Delmar, died Monday, Aug. 14.

Born in 1918, he was a veteran of World War II. He served in the United States Army Corps of Engineers. He graduated from Saratoga Springs High School and the Pratt Institute School of Art. He was the advertising director for the former Albany Public Markets. While in that position, he designed the Westgate Shopping Center sign, which in 1957 was unique for its grand scale and large ring of moving lights that once encircled it. He was also the advertising manager for the old John G. Myers Department Store in downtown Albany. He taught commercial art classes at BOCES and later worked as a contract manager for the NYS Facilities Development Corporation. He was a member of the Aurania Club of Albany. He was predeceased by his wife, Elizabeth J. Riley, who died in 1990.

Survivors include daughters Elizabeth A. Andrews of Delmar and Mary Jane O'Malley of Troy; a sister, Mary O'Malley Kmen of Saratoga Springs; four grandchildren; and nieces and nephews.

Services were held by the Applebee Funeral Home of Delmar. Contributions in his memory can be made to Community Hospice of Albany, 445 New Karner Road, Albany, NY, 12205.

Alma F. Hunter

Alma F. Hunter, 89, of Delmar, died Tuesday Aug. 1.

Born in Long Island, she was a graduate of Southside High School. She was a star player on the girls basketball team, which set a state record at that time for consecutive victories. She graduated from Cortland State Teachers College in 1939 and began a teaching career at Van Antwerp Junior High School. She taught physical education at Saint Agnes School and for many years taught students in the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk district. She earned a master's degree from Russell Sage College.

She and her husband were active sportspeople who enjoyed bowling, bridge and golf. They were members of Colonial Acres Golf Club and the leagues "millennium eight" and the Tuesday League.

Survivors include her husband, Raymond Hunter; a son, William Hunter of Greenwich; a brother, Henry Floeting of Midlothian, Va.; two granddaughters and two great-grandchildren also survived.

Services were from the Meyers Funeral Home of Delmar. Contributions in her memory can be made to the Delmar Reformed Church.

AAA names America's most walkable cities

Americans are eager to travel, but with the average gas price in the Capital District topping $3 a gallon, travelers may be wondering if they can afford to take their hard-earned vacations.

To help vacationers enjoy their time away without worrying about paying an arm and a leg for fuel, AAA Hudson Valley has identified North America's top 10 most walkable cities, from Quebec City to St. Augustine, Fla.

"The top 10 cities include places for every type of traveler," said Tammy Melo, managing editor of AAA Hudson Valley's Going Places travel magazine.

The top 10 cities were chosen by AAA's travel editors and more details can be found in AAA's TourBook guides. To learn more about AAA go to www.aaa.com.

• Old Town Alexandria, Va.: Enjoy stepping back in time during a walking tour of George Washington's old stomping grounds.

• Boston, Mass.: Walk in the footsteps of America's founding fathers.

• New Orleans, La.: Hurricane Katrina did not destroy the beautiful architecture and great dining in the French Quarter, so New Orleans still is a great vacation option.

• Downtown Los Angeles, Calif.: If glamorous nightlife and high fashion is your cup of tea, visit downtown Los Angeles.

• Washington, D.C.: Explore numerous world-renowned museums and art galleries.

• Charleston, SC: Learn how the Civil War started.

• St. Augustine, Fla.: Visit the oldest ongoing settlement in the United States.

• Old Quebec City: Travel back in time to old-world Europe without leaving North America.

• Greenwich Village: New York City's Greenwich Village offers a vibrant mixture of cultures and lifestyles, creating a haven for artists and writers alike.

San Francisco, Calif.: The City by the Bay reels in her visitors with impressive hills and eclectic neighborhoods and markets.

For Massachusetts natives Terry and Michael Schmitz, a trip to the Latham Greens Family Fun Center seemed like a perfect way to pass the time while visiting the Capital District.

The Lee, Mass., natives were in town for a wedding and decided to check out the new hot spot and see the recent miniature golf course renovations first-hand.

"It's something we have never seen before. It was a cross between a show and golf," said Terry Schmitz. "The special effects made us feel like we were in the middle of a video game."

The indoor golf course has a fantasy theme complete with wizards, dragons and, of course, black knights. The game is challenging and a great bet for seasoned miniature golfers.

The owners had the indoor course designed to make participants feel as if they are underwater, traveling through space and even in the jungle.

The outside course has almost doubled in size and has improved lighting. The course carries through with the knights-and-castles theme with each hole. There are trees on the course that have been uniquely carved into knights and dragons.

"The locations for both the outdoor course and the indoor course are perfect. There is food nearby and, of course, Hoffman's Playland. It's a perfect summer set up," said Schmitz.

Anthony Fazzone, of New Loudon Road Associates, put more than $300,000 in renovations into what were formally the Hoffman's golf cashier area and the Pendleton Clothing Shop, according to the American City Business Journals. Fazzone said at a Colonie planning board meeting in March that, while he intends to eventually use the 37-acre property for a residential and retail area, the renovated course will serve as revenue for the next few years.

The Route 9 Knight's Tale Golf Course at Latham Greens Family Fun Center has been open daily since last month.

Sense

has been slow. Toscano and his family have yet to move back into their home because the inside has to be rebuilt.

"We had a lot of roof damage, so the rain got in. They had to gut the whole house," said Toscano.

Then, there was the Babe Ruth complex in Metarie. Katrina hit the fields hard, leaving the league officials with a large rebuilding task.

"All the fences were knocked down, (and) the light poles were broken," said Katz. "So, we had to use just basic open fields until our fields got back together, but they were back to normal around baseball season."

Having the fields ready for the spring season helped restore a small sense of normalcy to the players, many of whom were scattered because their homes were damaged.

"It brought all the kids back together, which was just like normal," said Katz.

Not all of the players on this year's 15-year-old team were part of the 2005 14-year-old division championship squad, but enough of them are back to give Jefferson Parish squad the advantage of having a veteran lineup in a field where most teams are playing in a national tournament for the first time.

"They didn't get out of pool play as 13s, but they won it as 14s," said Babin. "I think they learned as 13s what it takes to win, and I think they realize as 15s that everyone is gunning for us."

Already, this year's tournament has proven to be harder for Jefferson Parish than last year's run in the 14-year-old World Series. Jefferson Parish had to come from behind to edge South Colonie 4-3 last Friday and then lost to Kelso, Wash., 9-6 last Saturday. It had two games remaining in pool play — a Monday meeting with Youngstown, Ohio, and a Tuesday contest against Portland, Maine.

Despite the early setback, Jefferson Parish is maintaining the confidence level of a team that has been through the war before and won.

"We're not worried about (beating the target). We'll just keep playing the way we've played the last two years," said Katz.

"I think the kids are pretty resilient," said Babin. "I think they want to win this because no 14-year-old team has ever repeated as a 15-year-old champion, more than they want to do it for Katrina."

We have a lot of people back home that are really pulling for us, and I think for the people back home, it's a good diversion from the everyday Katrina misery that you have to face day in and day out in New Orleans. I know the kids want to win for them, but I think they want to win more for the repeat."

Altamont 5K slated for Aug. 26

The annual Weatherguard Altamont 5-kilometer race takes place Aug. 26.

The race begins at 9 a.m. at Bozenkill Park on Gun Club Road. Awards will be presented to the top male and female runners, plus the top three finishers in 15 age groups in both the men's and women's divisions.

There will also be the Altamont Mile run for children and other kids' races, as well as a health and fitness expo. Entertainment will be provided by Mike Gilman, and there will be more than 100 door prizes. T-shirts will be handed out to the first 300 people to register for the 5K race.

The pre-registration fee is $14 for adults, $13 for seniors 70 and older and $3 for the children's races. The day-of-race entry fee is $18 for the 5K race and $3 for the children's races.

Registration forms are available by visiting www.active.com. For information, call 861-6350 or e-mail Altamont5K@nycap.rr.com.

cided by more than three runs, and three teams had 1-1 records including pre-tournament favorite Jefferson Parish, La.

"There's no difference in the teams in our division," said South Colonie manager Jeal Sutherland, whose team was tied with Jefferson Parish and Youngstown, Ohio at 1-1 entering Monday's game against Portland, Maine. "A 3-1 record will win this division. If we can get to 3-1, we could win it because after head-to-head matchups, the next tie breaker is runs allowed. So far, we're in pretty good shape with that."

- It pays to play in tournaments. South Colonie played in both the district and state tournaments and has won two of its first three World Series games, while host team Clifton Park prepared with exhibition games and is 1-2 after three contests.

- There is a price to be paid for winning the home run hitting contest. South Colonie's Ron Notar edged Youngstown's Jamie Shepard for the crown last Thursday, and nobody's pitched inside to Notar since.

However, that may not matter the rest of the way. Notar has been working on hitting outside pitches in the batting cage, and he showed signs of progress with a double in Sunday's continuation of South Colonie's 3-2 victory over Youngstown. It was Notar's hardest-hit ball since the home run contest.

- Finally, the award for longest trip to get to Clifton Park goes to Torrance, Calif. The Southern California team left their homes around 3 a.m. Wednesday to get to the airport, endured a long wait through security and then followed a flight path from Los Angeles to San Francisco and Chicago before finally arriving in Albany Wednesday evening. In all, the trip took more than 12 hours. Good thing Torrance and Kelso, Wash., were given opening day byes to adjust from their jet lag.

News & Notes

Shaffer wins town park 5k race

Bethlehem Central High School graduate Matt Shaffer took first place at the Aug. 14 5-kilometer cross country race at Bethlehem Town Park.

Shaffer led 129 runners through the course and finished with a time of 16:40, the fastest time on the course so far during the annual Hudson Mohawk Road Runners Club cross country series.

Delanson's Ryan Walter finished second with a time of 16:55, and Endicott's Andy Allstadt placed third in a time of 17:10.

Amsterdam's Kimberly Miseno-Bowles won the women's title with a time of 20:01. Albany's Dana Peterson was second in a time of 20:10, and Altamont's Mary Buck placed third in a time of 20:33.

The final race of the HMRRC's cross country series took place Monday.

Booster club slates fund raiser

The Bethlehem Hockey Booster Association is holding a golf tournament Sept. 10 at the Sycamore Golf Course in Ravena to raise money for the varsity hockey team.

The event begins at 1 p.m. and has a four-person scramble format. The $75 entry fee includes golf fees, a cart and lunch.

In the event of rain, the tournament will be postponed to Sept. 17.

For information, contact Traci Mills at 439-1567 or e-mail tmills3@nycap.rr.com.

Bagel Run returns Sept. 17

The annual Bruegger's Bagel Run will take place Sunday, Sept. 17, in Albany.

The 5-kilometer race begins and ends at the Sidney Albert Albany Jewish Community Center on Whitehall Road. It doubles as the USA Track and Field Adirondack Region women's 5k championship.

There will also be a 1-mile kids race, where the top runners will receive iPods.

Special awards will be given to Ned Norton and Dan Geer, who have been regular participants in the event over the last 24 years.

A sense of normalcy

Jefferson Parish sees baseball field as a haven

By ROB JONAS

The Jefferson Parish, La., team was riding a high last year when it won the Babe Ruth 14-year-old division World Series in Quincy, Mass.

Two days later, their lives were turned upside down by Hurricane Katrina.

Now, many of those same players are in Clifton Park this week trying to become the first team to win both the 14- and 15-year-old division championships. And though their lives are still not what they once were, the players are happy to be back together.

"Katrina hasn't affected our baseball team in any way," said pitcher/infielder Harold Toscano. "We're not back in our houses, but baseball-wise, everything's fine. We're just back to normal."

Jefferson Parish had a lot of success last year. Not only did the 14-year-old team win the World Series, but the 15-year-old division team coached by Bill Babin also claimed the national title.

Babin's team was home from its championship run in Abbeyville when Katrina began bearing down on the Louisiana-Mississippi coastline. Meanwhile, the 14-year-old division team was making its run to the title.

"I was home pulling in all of my stuff that could blow away ... when the coach called me and told me they had won the 14-year-old World Series," said Babin.

As the hurricane drew closer, flights were no longer allowed to land at Louis Armstrong International Airport, which is located in Jefferson Parish. So, the 14-year-old All-Stars were diverted to Dallas, where they watched the destruction of New Orleans on TV.

"They were showing around Lake Ponchartrain, which we don't really live by," said catcher Mason Katz. "So, we really didn't think it was all that bad until we got home and realized that we couldn't go home."

Like most of the New Orleans metropolitan area, Jefferson Parish — located west of downtown

New Orleans — was heavily damaged by Katrina. However, it was spared the worst of the flooding because it was located far enough away from the levees that breached along the canals in the city. That allowed its residents to begin the cleanup process earlier than those in neighboring parishes.

"Jefferson Parish was the first one that was hit that was really back up and running," said Babin. "So most of the people were able to get into their homes, get FEMA trailers and put them in their front yards or live on the upstairs while they were trying to get their downstairs redone."

Still, the rebuilding process

Life's lessons are on a baseball diamond

By ROB JONAS

Don't tell Richard "Goose" Gossage that there isn't some value in a youth baseball tournament such as the Babe Ruth World Series.

To the former superstar relief pitcher, tournaments such as the one currently going on in Clifton Park are an invaluable learning experience for the young players.

"I always say this — every lesson in life is on that baseball field," said Gossage following his autograph session for the players last Thursday at the Shenendehowa Senior Center at Clifton Common. "Whatever you want to talk about — the perseverance that it takes, the teamwork, the hard work it takes to be a good player, (and dealing with the adversity (of) baseball. You fail seven out of 10 times, and you're a superstar in baseball. What other sport would you fail seven out of 10 times and be a star?"

Gossage — best remembered as the New York Yankees' closer during the Bronx Bombers' World Series championship teams in 1977 and 1978 — said that his playing days growing up in Colorado Springs were as memorable as anything he did during his 14-year Major League career.

"People might not believe that, but it is so true. I think that's what makes baseball the great game. Some of us (adults) never grow up," and the game keeps us young," said Gossage.

Gossage holds a special place in his heart for his Little League days when he and his teammates would go to games in his father's International Harvester truck.

"We had a team that was sponsored by a pretty wealthy family," said Gossage. "There were nicer cars to ride in, but everybody wanted to ride around in that old, beat-up truck. We just had a blast."

Most youth baseball players today probably don't arrive together for games like Gossage and his teammates did back then, but the same life lessons are involved.

"Dealing with failure is huge, and how you deal with failure says a lot about where you're going in life," said Gossage. "I know that baseball has made my life easier away from the field. Things that have happened, the adversity that daily life hands out, you deal with it a lot better later on — at least, that's been my experience."

Some more observations from the Babe Ruth World Series:

• The American Division — which includes South Colonie — might be the toughest from top to bottom. As of Sunday's action, there had yet to be a game de-

Beauty school makes grade for cosmetologists in training

by ANN MARIE FRENCH

The misconception that attending and graduating from beauty school isn't hard work is alive and well, but it appears those in the field of cosmetology have embraced their industry and know full well the benefits that come from having that 1,000 hours learning and perfecting their craft.

A lot of people look at cosmetology as not as hard as other fields," Meghan Philtotts, president at John Paul's Hair, Nails, and Skin Institute in Saratoga Springs. "There's a lot more to it than people realize. It's not easy," Philtotts said.

We still have a stigma regarding people who go," said Erica Cook, director of Jordan School for Appearance Enhancement. "That they aren't smart and there are no other options for them to go... like it's a resort."

Philotts, who had completed two years of college before enrolling in cosmetology school, said the idea of working in the cosmetology field was a way to express herself while interacting with people.

It allows me to make other people happy too," she said.

Many in the field are drawn to it because of the creativity of the job. The tasks being completed throughout the day are different, and most days are different from the one before it, said John Paul, owner of John Paul's Hair, Nails and Skin Institute. Paul noted that the field is suited to creative, artistic personalities.

commission, as $19,800 for hairstylists and cosmetologists, several school owners said that number was very low. Cosmetology is typically a cash-based business, and there may be a discrepancy between actual salaries earned and those reported.

Paul cited a New York publication from 1992 that said stylists earned $20,000-$30,000 a year, and said that figure has possibly doubled. Cook talks of a colleague who earns a six-figure pay-check. Both warn that, while there is money to be made in the field, dues must be paid and a steady clientele developed.

"There is no limit to what you can do. If you put in 100 percent, then that's what you'll get out of it," said Cook. "It is a lucrative business but not day one." She added that, to be successful, those working in the field need to be willing to put in the hours, hone their skills and stay abreast of the constant changes in the industry.

Similarly, Paul noted the high demand for skilled professionals in the growing beauty industry. He said, "We can't graduate enough people."

To be successful in the field,

Another major draw to the field is the potential income and the flexible nature of the schedules associated with it.

Barbers, cosmetologists and other personal appearance workers held about 790,000 jobs, according to the U.S. Department of Labor statistics from 2004, and 48 percent of those people were listed as self-employed, either owning their own salon or leasing booth space in a salon.

While the Bureau of Labor Statistics cite the median annual earnings, including tips and Chau Duong, nail technician at Vitoria Adamo Day Spa in Rotterdam, uses the latest in nail care while working on the hands of Rotterdam resident Kathy Kowalk.

Jennifer Farnsworth/Spotlight

Paul said, a cosmetologist needs only 250 steady customers.

The careers that develop from the training are also endless. While many may end up in the local salons or spas, Allison Provenzano, admissions officer for the Orlo School of Hair Design and Cosmetology, said careers can extend beyond the traditional.

"Some people want to be educators or work on movies. Others will get involved in stage theater or fashion," she said. "It's an exciting career. It's always changing."

Provenzano noted that a recent trend in the industry is the influx of salons geared specifically to men.

In addition to the technical skills required, Provenzano notes that a good personality is high on the list of qualities that make a student successful in the real world.

"You have to have people skills," she said.

New York requires cosmetologists to pass both a written and practical exam to obtain a license, following the completion of a state-approved, 1,000-hour course. The license is good for two years, at which point it can be renewed. While the average age of students tends to be somewhere in the early 20s a license can be obtained at the age of 17, given the applicant has met the other requirements.

That's not to say you won't find a wide age group in cosmetology classes. Paul, Cook, and Provenzano note that more people are opting to enter the field at a later stage in their life. Each have seen students over the age of 50 enroll in their classes.

"There are a lot of people who want a career change. They're just miserable in their job," said Provenzano. "People are seeing it as a real, valid career."

Cook agreed, adding that for many the seed is planted in their own visits to the salon as a customer. She said the customers look around and realize the people that work there are having fun.

While the Bureau of Statistics lists an increasing population and rising incomes as reasons job opportunities in the beauty industry will grow, Provenzano says the bottom line is, "everybody cares what they look like."

many spas and salons, Vitoria Adamo Day Spa in Rotterdam offers a complete line of personal care products.

Business

The beauty business is a big part of our culture, and we only want it to keep growing and thriving," said Simile. His own business has seen its share of changes since opening three decades ago. "We started in a two-room facility on State Street 30 years ago. Now we have a location in Pleasant Plaza that is 10,000 square feet. This spa is our newest addition," he said.

The beauty business has been a successful one. People in this region are taking the time out to take care of themselves like never before."

Simile said he feels that people are under more stress than ever before. He says spa services and products are a way for people to relax and help fight what stress does physically to the body.

"The industry for anti-aging services and products is only going to keep growing and will become more and more sophisticated," said Simile.

"People are willing to spend money (at spas), and not just for a special occasion. They are making it a part of their life."

Patricia Adams

ticated," said Simile.

Once known mainly for hair and nail treatments, many salons offer a wide range of services, including facials, electrolysis, chemical peels, massages, manicure, pedicures and even acupuncture.

Prices at salons and day spas vary, and can range from a $25 manicure to a $100 facial; it all depends on what customers are looking for. Most places still offer a haircut for about $30, along with hand treatments for as little as $10. Salons also make money by selling product lines exclusive to their store.

Some salons cultivate a vacation-like atmosphere, with refreshments, soft lighting and music to encourage patrons to relax, even if it is for only a little while.

"People want to be pampered, they want to look their best on both the inside and the outside, and now they have the means to do it without having to travel far. Even though we have a very laid-back, friendly atmosphere we still offer that oasis-like ambience that people are looking for in a salon," said Adams.
