Anniversary of attacks will stir painful memories for some, but closure is possible

By GRAHAM S. PARKER

As the five-year anniversary of the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, draws near, the images and memories of that day will most certainly weigh heavily on the minds of many.

Some will remember where they were when American Airlines Flight 11 struck the north tower of the World Trade Center or who they were with when the south tower collapsed. Some will recall the ensuing exodus from Manhattan. And others will recall President George W. Bush's address to the nation that night declaring that America would make no distinction between the terrorists who committed the acts and those who harbor them.

For some spiritual leaders and psychologists, this anniversary marks a milestone in how we as New Yorkers and Americans have come to terms, if any, with the events that transpired in September 2001. Those leaders, since that tragic day five years ago, have been working to resolve those feelings for many. On Monday, as municipal agencies and other organizations around the country remember the fallen, the images will stir pain, anger and fear in many.

"You can't un-do it. But you can encourage people to seek out the value in the experience. It can be a

Town's finances meet estimate

By JIM CUOZZO

Seven months into the 2006 fiscal year, the town of Bethlehem finances are meeting estimated budget projections.

Town Comptroller Judith Kehoe said water and sewer revenues are in line with expenditures. The general fund saw a deficit of $725,000 last year and will see another deficit this year of $800,000. However, Kehoe said a healthy $5 million balance in the general fund will be used to offset that deficit.

Town sales tax for the second quarter of 2006 totaled $2.33 million, just under sales tax revenue for the first quarter of the year. Sales tax figures overall in 2005 totaled $9.26 million and may increase this year.

"In a normal year, I would expect to see a $200,000 increase in overall sales tax, but this year I am unsure due to the cap on gasoline prices," said Kehoe.

Albany County's 4 percent collection of sales tax is split 60-40 with the municipalities, with the county keeping 60 percent of the total sales tax revenue and the towns receiving the remaining 40 percent. Kehoe said Bethlehem usually sees about 10 percent of the total county allocation of sales tax revenue each year. Mortgage tax receipts for the town are also leveling off in 2006.

Prescription drug program held up in Senate

By JIM CUOZZO

Passing a bulk prescription drug program in New York has become a struggle between some small lobby groups who support the bill and the heavy-hitting lobbyists that represent big pharmaceutical drug companies.

According to Mark Dunlea, associate director of Hunger Action Network, Senate bill S.5029A and corresponding Assembly bill A.6.336B would save New Yorkers billions of dollars by creating a comprehensive state program to purchase bulk prescription drugs.

The proposed legislation would allow the state to buy drugs in bulk and pass savings on in the form of discounts to New Yorkers who buy medicines out-of-pocket at full cost. A similar bill passed the state Assembly by a vote of 135 to 1. By the end of the state's legislative session in June, the bill did not get on the Senate floor for a vote.

"If it comes up to a vote it will pass," said Dunlea, who believes the biggest obstacle left is convincing state Sen. Majority Leader Joseph Bruno, R-Brunswick, to put it on the agenda.

"It took a long time to negotiate the bill," Dunlea said. Mark Hansen, spokesman in the state already has a very strong Elderly Pharmaceutical Insurance Coverage (EPIC) program, and the proposed Senate bill is being reviewed to make sure it doesn't confuse consumers or conflict with existing programs.

"There are 5 million New Yorkers who cannot meet their prescription drug needs because they are either uninsured or have insurance that does not provide adequate prescription drug coverage," Dunlea wrote in a letter to The Spotlight.

The Bethlehem Tomboys under-12 softball team had a successful season. The Tomboys won the Amateur Softball Association Hudson Mohawk League title with a perfect record, finished first at District 7 tournaments in Saratoga Springs and Colonie, placed second in two regional tournaments and tied for ninth place out of 63 teams at the PONY National Tournament. The team is, from left, (front) Gabby McNary, Katherine Race, McKenzie Pezze, Katharine Rice, Sara Morse and Cyndi Harder; and (back) coach Mike McNary, Cassie Smith, Sam Smaldone, Mary Beth Dombrowski, coach Jim Cerone, Meghan Burns, Jame Cerone, Kaitlyn Vishnowski and coach Dave Rice.

Driver pleads guilty in fatal accident

Jon Allin Guilbault, 36, of 217 Gardener Road, East Nassau, has pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the second degree, a Class C felony, and operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol, a misdemeanor.

According to Albany County District Attorney David Soares, Guilbault admitted that on March 23, at approximately 11 p.m., on Route 9W in the town of Bethlehem, he caused the death of Stacey A. Teidman by speeding and driving in an imprudent manner while attempting to elude police while he was intoxicated. Guilbault's actions caused his vehicle to veer off the roadway and strike two utility poles, causing the death of Teidman, who was his passenger.

Teidman, 44, of West Sand Lake, was a friend and co-worker of the defendant. She left behind a husband and a son.

"This death, like so many other alcohol-related deaths, was as tragic as it was senseless," said Soares.

"Tragic because we have parents losing a child, a husband losing a partner, and a son losing a mother," he said. "This was senseless, because there is access to taxis, buses and cell phones. Jon Allin Guilbault did not have to drive."

Sentencing is set for Oct. 31 in Albany County Criminal Court. Guilbault faces three to nine years in state prison.

The case was prosecuted by Assistant District Attorney Mary Tanner-Richter.

Town officials question higher election charges

By JIM CUOZZO

News that Albany County will charge the town of Bethlehem $267,424 for 2007 election costs, well above a previous estimate, has one town official calling for a better explanation of the costs.

In a recent letter, Albany County Executive Michael Breslin explained the charge, which is supposed to cover the town's share of the county-controlled election process.

"As I proposed for the 2006 fiscal year, my executive budget for 2007 will include this charge-back to municipalities in proportion to each municipality's taxable property as provided for in the HAVA (Help America Vote Act) legislation," wrote Breslin.

According to Bethlehem Supervisor Theresa Egan, the $267,424 price tag is $177,000 more than what the town originally anticipated.

"The proposed charge back will have a significant impact on the town's 2007 budget and increase the tax burden on our residents," wrote Egan in an Aug. 29 letter.

Breslin's office has since scheduled a meeting between municipal leaders and county commissioners for Thursday, Sept. 7, to discuss the new system and associated costs, said Kerri Battle, county spokeswoman.

The new figures, according to the county executive's office, are based on the amount of assessable property within each of the county's 10 towns and three cities.

Other towns also face steep charges. Colonie's costs will now rise to $680,000. Guilderland's election costs will be $275,000 in 2007, and the city of Albany's costs are estimated at $390,000.

News of the increased election costs did not sit well with many Bethlehem officials at a recent meeting of the town board.

"The formula for financing should change from property value to the number of enrolled voters as a fair way to distribute costs," said Kyle Kotary, member of the Bethlehem town board.

Theresa Egan

Battle said a charge back formula based on population for the county election costs would not be legal.

"It has to be based on taxable property," said Battle.

New federal HAVA laws require all counties in New York to purchase new electronic voting machines and pay for the costs of storing and maintaining those machines. All election inspectors statewide will be paid by the counties and no longer the individual municipalities.

"The purchase cost of the machines themselves will be covered by a federal HAVA grant," Breslin said. The rests of the expenses are county costs, with most of those costs being charged back to the individual towns.

Egan said she also wants to find out how Albany County will place the new voting machines in each of the election districts.

"If the county intends to reduce the number of voting machines in some of the election districts, the effect could result in disenfranchised voters, which is contrary to the intent of the Help America Vote Act," Egan said.

Young violinist competes in Ireland

By JIM CUOZZO

Fifteen-year-old Betsy Sullivan of Glenmont has just come back from the musical experience of a lifetime in Ireland.

Betsy initially competed and won the Mid-Atlantic Region Fleadh Cheoil for the Comhaltas Ceoiltoini Eireann that took place in Pearl River, Rockland County, earlier this summer. She placed first in the solo violin competition and second in the slow airs event. Comhaltas Ceoiltoini Eireann is an organization dedicated to preserving the music, culture and arts of Ireland.

"The slow airs competition are songs that are sad, slow pieces," Betsy said.

Those victories secured Betsy the right to perform in the 2006 All-Ireland World Championships held this summer at the 2006 All-Ireland Fleadh (a music festival) in Letterkenny, County Donegal, Ireland. Betsy competed against other regional winners from around the world.

"It was really fun being over there," said Betsy. "For six weeks I played with a youth group from Offaly." Offaly is another Irish county.

Betsy decided she wanted to learn how to play the violin when she was 4 years old.

"My great-grandfather immigrated here from Ireland, and he would always play traditional Irish music when we would go over to his house in Boston," Betsy said. "I started playing when I was 6."

Betsy is a freshman at Bethlehem Central High School and will be performing in the high school symphony orchestra this year. She said traditional Irish music is something she will continue to play throughout her lifetime.

"I think it would be hard to make a living off it, but I will hopefully teach music someday," Betsy said.

Her mother, Ann Sullivan, was able to see her daughter perform in Ireland for two weeks this August.

"It's amazing to be over there," said Sullivan. "She is a changed young woman now, for all the right reasons."

Fifteen-year-old Betsy Sullivan performed this summer in the 2006 All-Ireland Fleadh in Letterkenny, County Donegal, Ireland.

Betsy performed with other young musicians from Scotland, Ireland, Australia and other parts of the world.

"I made lots of friends over there," Betsy said. "My cell phone kept ringing the night before I left."

As school begins, parents prepare to pester

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR

It's the final stretch of the back-to-school countdown. Some parents are doing a summer survival victory dance. In our house I'm bracing for the back-nagging mode.

We only took one trip out of town, but the entire summer was a vacation from those countless activities and deadlines that fill the school year. We still had the early-morning challenge of getting off to camp and the office, but the evening pressures were limited.

Now it all begins again. All those routines, the homework, the sports, the school activities, the permission slips, the parent-teacher conferences, open house night, Scholastic book-order forms, the fundraisers, more homework, remember the instrument, the concerts.

Do we have poster board? Did we save 2-liter bottles for a science project? Why don't they wear smocks in art class? Where is your lunch box?

I'm ready, really I am. And I'm more prepared than ever.

Over the years I've employed various organizational methods. Success has been marginal, but even slow progress is progress.

I started with a basic chart. In the very early years the chart had a short list: get dressed, make the bed, and brush teeth. Once I mastered that list I was ready to make a chart for my daughter's activities.

When Rachel was in second grade I made my husband a chart. This is because I was tired of being the only one who knew when homework was due and what day library occurs.

I do not like to be the sole nagger. This means someone else needs to be aware that the spelling QUIZ is on Friday, but the spelling ACTIVITY is due on Thursday. And that there is a choice of spelling activities, but none can be repeated in a single month.

The chart has columns for all seven days of the week. There is a row for activities that happen at school (library, gym, art, music, etc.). There is another row for what needs to be in the backpack and/or brought to school (library books, spelling homework, lunch/snack, instrument, etc.)

Next there is a section for what homework should be done or started that day. This section is useful for tracking standard items that are due on the same schedule, such daily or weekly math sheets and/or spelling sentences.

For example, Monday might say, "Review/begin math problems." This means to at least look at them. Thursday might say, "Finish math problems." This means they are due on Friday.

After-school activities such as dance lessons, soccer practice or religion classes are also recorded on the chart.

My chart is a masterpiece. Anyone who sees it will surely want to copy the format and set up personalized versions to use in their own homes.

The trouble is I am the only one who ever sees the chart. Well, others might see it, but they don't refer to it. It's just another item cluttering the bulletin board.

Yes, the chart used to sit on the kitchen counter with many other papers. But then we got a bulletin board. Now we've got clutter on both horizontal and vertical surfaces.

The bulletin board seemed like such a good idea. We didn't get the standard corkboard. Instead, we got an upgraded model, with a rounded frame and light-gray covered middle. A real piece of "furniture."

Unfortunately, the spiffy bulletin board got clogged up immediately. Also, as with the chart, no one ever looks at the bulletin board. Apparently what we need is a computerized marquee directly affixed to the door. As we prepare to leave the house we'd be faced with a list of information in bright lights. We'd have to press some buttons to acknowledge we had read the list and taken appropriate action. Only then would the door open.

Right now we are free to leave the house unprepared, even with oodles of helpful information hanging just a few feet away from the door.

Close to the door, in the opposite direction from the bulletin board, is a large shoebox where we store library books. I keep meaning to get a decorative basket for this purpose, but I keep forgetting to add "basket" to the shopping list that no one will remember to look at.

Library books should not be mingled with books you own. Otherwise the library books end up lost under beds, in the car, or behind the couch. Some might even get put on a bedroom bookshelf. Those will be lost forever.

If you keep the library books in the shoebox then you will know exactly where to direct your child put restaurant menus, coupons, scissors and all those twisty-ties from bread bags?

Not too long ago we acquired a file cabinet. This was an upgrade from our cardboard box system. Actually, the file cabinet supplements the cardboard boxes and the plastic storage containers strategically located everywhere you walk in our home.

The boxes and cabinet, while bulging, have actually been quite useful tools. In my system, one set of folders is labeled "classroom" and the other "newsletters." The classroom folders are for homework, spelling lists, math sheets, and other papers my

Apparently what we need is a computerized marquee directly affixed to the door. As we prepare to leave the house we'd be faced with a list of information in bright lights. when the school library sends home an overdue notice. In theory, your child will avoid overdue books by remembering which day library falls and by taking the books to school on that day. This involves having a good memory, caring, and/or using the chart.

Tracking library books is a heck of a lot simpler than managing the volumes of paper that children bring home from school.

There are two main philosophies on handling the paperwork. Some parents need to keep every scrap of paper their precious child has touched. You find paper on the refrigerator, the counter, even the washing machine. There are drawings taped to the walls. The other parents have orderly, clutter-free homes.

I once asked an orderly friend how she manages the paperwork. She said that most of the stuff, like worksheets filled out in class, gets tossed. Other papers that need to be reviewed or completed get put in a kitchen drawer.

I was in awe. She has room for school papers in a kitchen drawer. My kitchen only has space for the silverware drawer, the large kitchen-tools drawer (for spatulas, whisks, ladles, etc.) and three junk drawers. If I used a kitchen drawer for school papers, where would I daughter completes in class. The newsletters folders are for information to which I need to refer back, respond, or know the date. This would include the school newsletters, teacher conference papers, report cards, stuff addressed "to the parents of . . .", book-order forms, the names of the room parents, and the PTA phone directory.

This year I'm going to concentrate on reminding my fifth grader to track her work on her own. She's old enough to use the shoebox, the file cabinet and the bulletin board. Plus I'm more prepared than ever to let her know that it's her responsibility to remember to bring her books to school on library day and a water bottle to soccer practice. I'll depend on her to look over the materials that come home and remind me about book club order due dates and deadlines for signing-up for special after-school classes.

I hope my daughter understands that I make charts, save papers, and nag, remind, and cajole about homework because I love her and I want her to succeed. Maybe I'll hang this article on our bulletin board and see what her reaction is.

Or maybe I'll just go out and buy some new back-to-nagging clothes.

Cartwheels for Kids opens in Delmar IN BRIEF

Cartwheels for Kids celebrated its grand opening in Delmar on Aug. 30 with a ribbon-cutting ceremony, tours and demonstrations at its 333 Delaware Ave. location. Free play time, refreshments and door prizes were also offered.

The studio provides educational, artistic and activity classes to children younger than 5.

Founded in 2004, Cartwheels for Kids also operates a studio in East Greenbush. Programs offered at both locations allow children, from newborn to preschool, to grow and learn through encouragement, exploration and discovery.

Martie Ripson, the company's owner, said the Delmar festivities mark the company's debut in one of the Capital District's growing markets. "As Cartwheels for Kids enters its third year serving families in the Capital Region, we are pleased that we can share our classes with our friends and neighbors in the Delmar area. We look forward to helping the kids continue to grow and learn," said Ripson.

"Kids attending classes are experiencing a developmental evolution in language skills, literacy, listening, problem solving, social skills, self-esteem and a love of music,"

A bittersweet farewell

The Capital District has a long history of supporting private schools: Albany Academy, Albany Academy for Girls, Emma Willard and LaSalle Institute all boast 200-plus-year roots in the area.

And there are other smaller institutions with a niche for students to get their start in the academic world.

One school — Doane Stuart — did big things on a small scale, where every student could shine. The school was a product of a merger of the former St. Agnes School and Kenwood Academy, a kind of noble experiment that will likely be just a memory due to another kind of merger planned with the two academies. If the three boards approve the merger, Doane Stuart students will be absorbed into the two academies. And even though it will never be quite the same, the kids will have a place to go that will be somewhat similar to what they've grown accustomed to in a school environment.

It will probably be a good thing in the long run, but sad nonetheless, especially for its graduates, faculty and parents who fondly remember their times at Doane Stuart.

The grounds and buildings are spectacular, serene yet inviting with plenty of room for children to grow and learn. It's also a place where kids can participate in sports and actually get a chance to play, which is a definite advantage at smaller schools.

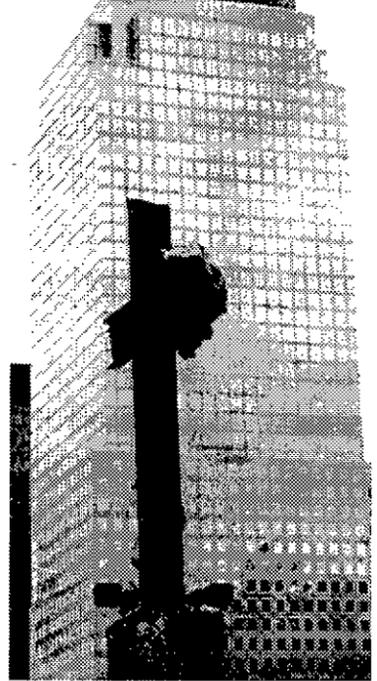

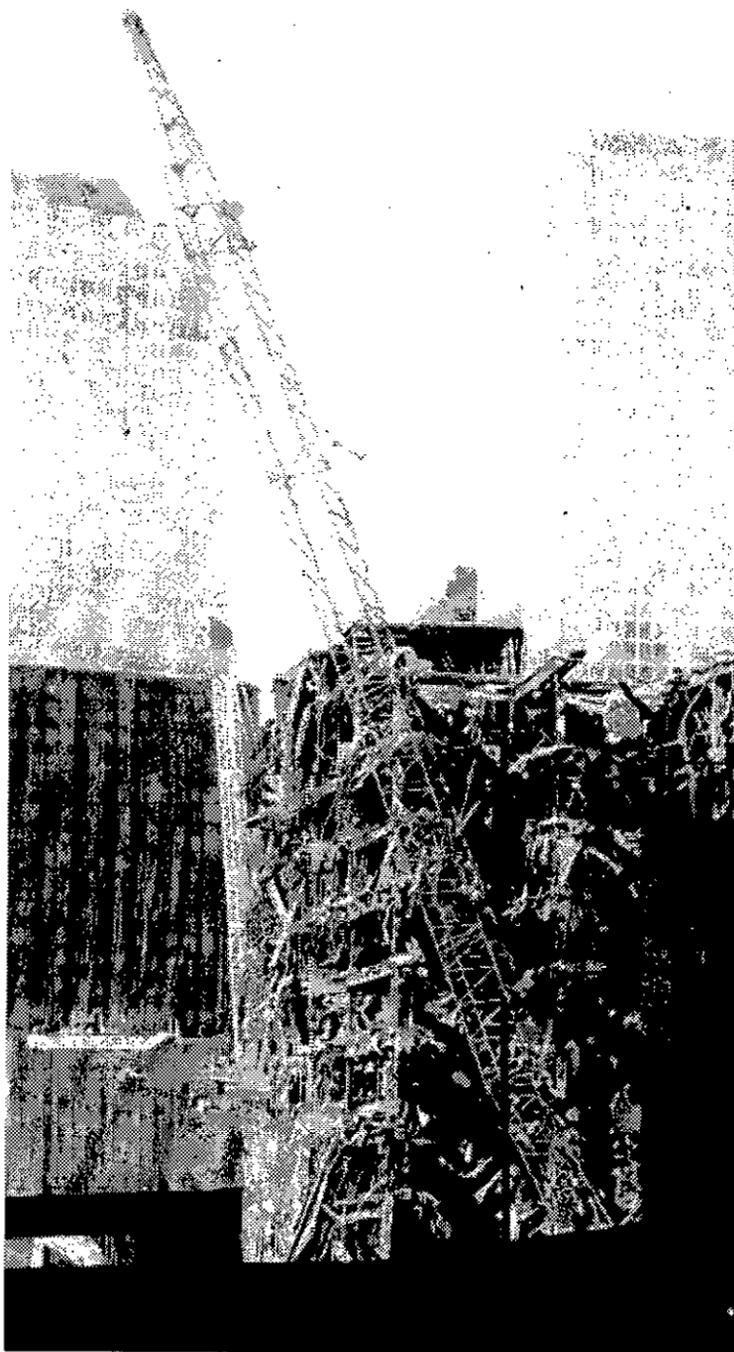

Students also easily become immersed in academics in the caring environment. Being at Doane Stuart is like making the past a reality, and the future exciting at the same time. The furniture and slightly worn oriental rugs lend a sense of stability to the huge old rooms. But the atmosphere is alive with squeals of delight from the children who feel so comfortable there.

Some students grew so attached to Doane Stuart they return to marry in the beautiful chapel or have their children baptized there.

It's a Herculean task to sustain a private school environment. There's a lot of competition for tuition dollars and a lot of work to maintain a healthy endowment so the school can continue to offer the very best.

So it is with mixed emotions that we bid farewell to Doane Stuart, sad because of the loss of a unique environment, but confident the students will move on to more opportunity in their new schools.

Numbness

By SUE GERSTEN

The writer is a local professional photographer, author and lecturer, and has a five-year photo retrospective of the World Trade Center at Niskayuna Town Hall, Nott Street East, through Sept. 30.

With a seriousness of purpose, there I stood at Ground Zero on Sept. 18, 2001, trying to comprehend the reason behind the horrendous event that had occurred only one week prior. Feeling nothing but numbness, I decided to put my camera to work to permanently preserve the memory of all those who perished as well as to record the aftermath of this unforgettable moment.

These images, along with those of many others will serve as lifelong reminders of the unending grief of our citizens, and the undaunting courage, faith and unbelievable bravery of those who participated in the cleanup and recovery efforts, for memories such as these need to be documented, if only to illustrate the impenetrable strength of our nation, our national pride and our determination to remain forever as the land of the free.

If ethanol is the future, where are the stations?

Editor, Spotlight:

In Rob Irwin's interesting article on the new E85 ethanol/gasoline mixture (Spotlight, Aug. 17) he states, "The renewable fuel provides a 10 to 15 percent reduction in gallons used per mile." This is incorrect. It should read, "The renewable fuel provides a 10 to 15 percent reduction in miles obtained per gallon." The heating value of ethanol is less than that of gasoline so more fuel is used.

This statement is true for today's FFV cars. However if the compression ratio of a car engine was to be increased to make use of the higher octane rating of the E85 fuel, then the miles per gallon could probably be increased. However such an engine would not be able to run on conventional gasoline. As such, today's FFV car engines are a compromise simply because they have to be designed to run on two types of fuel.

Incidentally, a Google search indicates that E85 fuel cannot yet be purchased within 100 miles of Schenectady. Hopefully that will change when this new state legislation starts to be implemented.

Get the students back on the buses

Editor, The Spotlight:

Recently, we Bethlehem residents have complained about our rising school taxes and the price of gasoline. We also claim to be concerned about the environment. Well, as the new school year begins, some of us are in a position to do something constructive about these concerns. One simple step would be to reduce a rather wasteful practice: high school students driving their own vehicles to school instead of using existing bus transportation.

This year, more than 200 vehicles are expected to be driven daily by students to the high school. While a portion of those cars are needed for work purposes, most simply serve as convenient alternatives to bus transportation.

Given the energy and environmental realities of today's world, this is a luxury that we can ill afford. As even a small proportion of every dollar spent on gasoline ultimately goes into the coffers of Ahmadinejad in Iran, Vladimir Putin in Russia, and Hugo Chavez in Venezuela — not to mention 'big oil' — we need to realize that we are unwittingly helping subsidize our own opponents on the world scene.

Even more significant is the impact that this and all unnecessary vehicle use has on our environment. In terms of air quality, the most damaging portion of the automotive engine-use cycle occurs during the so-called "cold start," the time when an engine that has been sitting for several hours is ignited. As a cold engine block operates inefficiently, the seconds involved in warming it releases the highest concentration of airborne toxins, including carcinogens. Our early morning joggers may wish to consider the cumulative effect on local air quality of 200 additional cars starting up each morning during the school year.

Finally, there is the additional impact of student vehicles to the school district in the form of having to add extra parking, lighting, administration, insurance, etc. While some of these costs are recovered by a parking fee, some are inevitably passed on to the taxpayer.

For everyone's benefit, we need to help our high school kids get out of their cars and back on the buses for the school commute.

Grand piano campaign a success

Editor, The Spotlight:
It is with great excitement that the Bethlehem Music Association (BMA) announces the completion of the Grand Campaign, our project to raise $60,000 for a Steinway grand piano for the Bethlehem Central School District. Through the generous donations of over 200 individuals, businesses and school organizations, plus a very large gift from an anonymous donor, we have reached our goal.

Because of the ongoing construction at the high school, we will not take possession of the piano until January. At some point after that, we hope to have an inaugural recital, featuring some of Bethlehem's young pianists. This will be announced at a later date.

We would like to thank the many community members who contributed to the campaign and who believe that the Bethlehem Central music program deserves this fine instrument. It speaks well of our community that even in these fiscally difficult times, the arts remain a priority in Bethlehem.

Keep the tax issue alive in Bethlehem

Editor, The Spotlight;

In a very short while we will have all been billed by the school districts for our 2006-2007 school year taxes. This will actually be based on the town of Bethlehem's new tax (AKA revaluation). In our case, this will result in almost a $300/month jump in our monthly budget! The talking, the town meetings, the protests are over, and now we must pay. One has the feeling that the old refrain, "You can't fight City Hall," is true. Despite the outcry from the electorate, the town of Bethlehem plowed full steam ahead with a Marie Antoinette attitude of "let them eat cake."

Well, it is not over. Next year, two posts on the town board will be open, and next year the town will hear from its citizens in no uncertain terms how we feel about their actions. But, November 2007 is a long way away. What can be done now? The answer is simple: Keep the tax issue alive; keep it on the front burner. Follow the budgets of both the school and town, which are being developed now for 2007. Make the school and make the town justify every new expense. No one is against educating our children. What we are for is reasoned containment of costs that balance the need to educate, plow the roads, police the streets against the reality of what voters can afford. I don't believe such a balance exists now based on town deeds.

The Bethlehem Tea Party formed this past summer to protest the reassessment. We are now a small but energetic group of 17-20 neighbors who are committed to help you keep informed and make our school and town officials accountable with our dollars. We already met with one town board member, Dan Plummer, in August on his views of fiscal policy. We further plan on inviting town and school officials to a public forum, on a date to be announced, on the subject "Can We Afford Bethlehem?" So look out for The Bethlehem Tea Party's bright pink flyers that will announce the public forum and urge our elected town and school officials to participate.

For information or interest in joining the Bethlehem Tea Party please contact Brendan Mooney at 767-9549 or e-mail bethlehemteaparty@yahoo.com.

Schools try to keep spending fair

Editor, The Spotlight:

Recently a letter appeared suggesting that the confusion about tax rates is somehow connected to school spending. The school system determines how much money to spend with community approval. The towns decide how much each landowner must pay.

The budget of the Bethlehem Central School system is the product of extensive planning and public discussion. The community is asked to approve that spending and accept the burden of paying the amount not covered by government school aid. This year the community rejected the first and supported a second reduced budget.

Tax bills are the result of dividing the local share of spending by the value of real estate that the towns of Bethlehem and New Scotland determine individual residents own. Revaluation has produced a confusing process making the changes to individual tax bills difficult to predict.

The spending that our schools do is very deliberate. I know the board values the input from organizations and individuals about appropriate spending. At the same time, we are ready to help everyone understand the spending proposals we make to our community for our community's schools.

Soccer club kicks off a round of thanks

Editor, The Spotlight;

This past 2005-2006 soccer season saw many great things happen to the Bethlehem Soccer Club. Well over 2,400 Bethlehem children participated in one or more of the club's programs. The three programs continue to be superbly administrated by IntraClub (recreational) Committee, supervised by Joel Rosenberg, Jim Clyne (the travel coordinator), and Mary Ann and Dave Schubmehl (the premier coordinators).

The club also bids farewell to several long-term board members, including Bill Lee (past president), Dave Jukins, John Reese (past secretary), Marilyn Kucica, Joe Govani and Willie Sanchez. Their particular professional expertise helped guide the club to fulfill its mission: to provide soccer opportunities to children of all ages and all skill levels. The club also welcomes new board members Brian Whitman, Mark Sweeney (Secretary), Art Kaplan, Nancy Kearney, John Biszick, Anne Marie Masters and Chris Martin, who already have made a positive impact.

Special thanks must also go to Joann Kessler and Matt Downey and their committee that organized the club's inaugural Give 'n' Go Tournament for travel teams. Almost 50 teams competed. Also, the Club's facility, the Soccerplex, was selected as a host site for the first ever CDYSL Empire Tournament for all premier level teams. Mary Ann and Dave Schubmehl, Heather Ford, Nancy Kearney, and Brian Whitman and many other board members worked very hard to ensure that tournament was successful.

The club was committed this year to improving the quality of its facilities. The success of these projects was attributable to significant corporate donations and private contributions. The projects (and those responsible) included installing a new drainage system for one of the fields at the Soccerplex (GE Plastics Selkirk, Flach Industries, Inc., and Clough Harbour Associates); constructing a concession stand at the Soccerplex (Backyard Sheds, CHA Technical Services, Industrial Process Design, Inc. and Dan Ehring, Esq.); installing gates at the Soccerplex (Gould Erectors & Riggers, Inc., - Hank Digeser, Jr.); and bringing in electrical service to the Soccerplex (FPI Electrical -Bob Synder and Terry Ambrosino), Indian Fields Equipment and National Grid - Jim Kelly).

Without the generous support of these businesses and individuals, the club's dreams would never have been realized.

The club also wants to recognize the continued support of several local businesses, including Robert Wright Disposal, My Place & Company, Subway, Perfect Blend, Dunkin Donuts, Price Chopper, Delmar Beverage and Cart-Away, who provided services and donations during the year to enable the club's programs to run smoothly. Finally, the club recognizes BBL Development Group, LLC, Cart Away, Sharon Patalino, and Brown, McMahon and Weinraub, who sponsored several travel and premier teams this season. If any business or individual is moved to get involved with the club please contact us at www.bsc-online.org.

Finally, the club thanks the players, parents and coaches who participated in the club's programs this year. We hope to see you participate again and, perhaps step forward to volunteer in the club next year.

AAA reminds motorists to be on alert when schools are open

Editor, The Spotlight:

As thousands of Capital District students return to school, AAA Hudson Valley reminds motorists to slow down and watch out for school-age pedestrians.

Children get caught up in the excitement of back-to-school season and forget to look out for cars. Many youngsters are trouble making accurate judgments about traffic speed and distance, so drivers have to be particularly aware.

One-fifth of all children 14 years of age and younger who die in motor vehicle crashes are pedestrians, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. These pedestrian fatalities are more likely to happen in the afternoon hours, when school is letting out.

AAA's School's Open - Drive

Carefully campaign encourages motorists to stay alert in areas where children are present, paying special attention during the morning and afternoon hours while children are coming to and from school. Drivers should look out for children who may dart out into the street near school zones, playgrounds, bus stops, and in neighborhoods. School-age children can be especially vulnerable in areas with heavy traffic volume, parked vehicles on the street, higher posted speed limits, and few pedestrian-controlled devices.

As part of the School's Open - Drive Carefully campaign, AAA Hudson Valley offers drivers tips to keep school children safe:

• Studies show that more than one-third of motorists in school zones or neighborhoods just "roll through" intersections with a stop sign. Slow down in or near school and residential areas, and be sure to come to a complete stop in all intersections.

• Drive with your headlights on - even during the day - so children and other drivers can see you.

• Look for clues such as AAA School Safety Patrol members, crossing guards, bicycles and playgrounds, which indicate children, could be in the area.

• Scan between parked cars and other objects for signs that children could dart into the road.

• Practice extra caution in adverse weather conditions.

• Pay particular attention near schools during the morning and afternoon hours.

• Always stop for school buses that are loading and unloading students.

Drivers should always be aware of their surroundings, but especially around children. Remember: school's open - drive carefully.

Learn about Bethlehem's organizations during Community Day

The library's 22nd annual Community Day will take place this Sunday, Sept. 10, from 1 to 4 p.m. in the library lobby.

The primary goal of this event is to honor the craft and service organizations that enrich the town.

At press time, nine groups had registered to participate this year. Their representatives will be on hand with information, demonstrations and displays.

Meet members from the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce, Bethlehem Recycling, Community Caregivers, Delmar Community Orchestra, Delmar Progress Club, Embroiderers Guild of America, Friends of Bethlehem Public Library, Q.U.I.L.T., and Village Volunteers Fife and Drum Corps.

Many of these groups have held meetings at the library, or contributed to its monthly lobby exhibits.

Community Day coincides with our annual update of Community Contacts, a directory of service and interest groups in the Delmar area. This publication will be available in the library and online.

Find out what your town has to offer; come to Community Day this Sunday.

phone or in person on Friday, Sept. 15, and thereafter during library hours.

Story times will run Monday, Sept. 18 to Wednesday, Nov. 22. Session schedules can be found in the September/October issue of footnotes, the library newsletter. Schedules are also available in the library and online at www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org.

Fresh Air Fund visitors leave Delmar

This summer, 10 children visited volunteer host families in and around Delmar through The Fresh Air Fund's Friendly Town program. As the summer winds down, local host families reflected on their Fresh Air experiences.

"It's changed our lives. It's fabulous for my children to welcome a stranger into our home and form a friendship and a relationship with a child. Our Fresh Air visitor adds a little more spark to the household," explained one host.

Next year, you can give a New York City child the gift of summer.

To find out more about becoming a host family in 2007, contact Petra DeSalvo at 478-7847 or The Fresh Air Fund at (800)

Creating something new in Hudson

By W.K. AARON

In an old industrial building on Cross Street in Hudson is the relatively new home of the Max and Lillian Katzman Theater, residence for Stageworks/Hudson. In 2004, after nine years as an itinerant theater company, Stageworks landed in its permanent home, a 40,000-foot former candle factory. According to Executive Artistic Director Laura Margolis, director of the current production, "Dog Stories," Stageworks is "moving towards the development of full length plays...promoting works of new and emerging playwrights."

Certainly a noble calling and worthwhile effort. If new playwrights are not allowed to hone their craft in these local professional companies, where else will the next Millers, Mamets and the like, cut their teeth?

"Dog Stories" is the bizarre tale of recently widowed Ira Cadwalder and his dog Sebastian, recently diagnosed as terminally ill, who travel cross country from New York City to "the happiest place on earth," Disneyland, in search of, I suppose, happiness. Along the way the two meet what have to be the oddest collection of humanity in the country, each with a story to tell about a dog of their own.

Playwright Keith Huff has a great premise to work with, heartwarming tales of man and his dog. They seem like they'd be warm fuzzy stories guaranteed to wrap themselves around the audience. Rather, the audience hears vile tales of abuse, neglect, torture, and the deepest, cruelest graphic stories that leave you running from the theater for a gasp of fresh air. If it is Huff's intention to only show the dark side of humanity, then he has succeeded admirably. The show is profoundly disturbing.

As this is an opportunity for the playwright to learn and grow and edit, then so be it. Mr. Huff needs to get out the red pencil; he definitely has his work cut out for him.

There are many redeeming features about the production, notably the performances. Miller Lide's portrayal of Ira Cadwalder is luminescent as is the soap opera "Guiding Light" writer David Smilow who plays Sebastian the dog. He adds more nuance to his portrayal with a look, a nod or a nuzzle without ever uttering a word than many actors do with pages of dialogue. The remaining three performers, Frank Liotti, Maggie Surovell and Pauline Boyd take on a multitude of roles throughout the show. All do their jobs admirably, particularly Liotti who has to dig the deepest to create a number of truly demented personas. While the two leading characters never utter a word, oops have I let the cat, or the dog out of the bag on that one, the remaining characters are then forced into running lengthy monologues that leave you longing for a pause. Herein lies the other problem with the show itself: Huff has written too many words. In an overly anxious zeal to get it all out there, he has neglected to leave anything to chance or to the audience's imagination. What might have been done with a pause, has been filled in with an abundance of rhetoric.

If it is Huff's intention to only show the dark side of humanity, then he has succeeded admirably. The show is profoundly disturbing.

Margolis has done the best she can in terms of directing the troupe. She tries to keep the pace moving and the action ongoing, no small task given the material she has to work with. The simple set by John Pollard works to focus your attention on the performers. Conversely, the prop design of Emily Fulop is incredibly annoying ... two-dimensional cell phones, coffee cups, beer cans, keys, bagels and pancakes are utterly ridiculous and serve no more than to act as a distraction to the action on stage. One spends time wondering why these items are items flat rather than listening to the play.

On the plus side, Stageworks needs to be commended on its commitment to offering a place for emerging playwrights to get their works mounted in a professional setting with professional performers and technicians. A short drive from the Capital District, particularly as the fall season sets in, makes the trip worthwhile. Theaters such as these need to be supported and experienced. Even a bad show here might eventually be reworked and retooled to become an award-winning production tomorrow.

"Dog Stories" runs through Sunday, Sept. 10. Performances will take place on Wednesday and Thursday at 7:30 p.m., Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m., matinees Sunday at 2 p.m. Ticket prices range from $22 to $27. For information, contact the box office at 822-9667, or visit the Web at www.stageworkshudson.org.

Senate

buy these drugs because prices are through the roof," he added.

Similar bills have already been approved in Maine, Hawaii and Vermont according to Bill Ferris, legislative representative for the 2.5 million member state AARP.

"AARP was very disappointed the Senate didn't take this up before they left in June," said Ferris. "Thirteen percent of our membership in New York pays full retail for their drugs."

Ferris believes many AARP members receive their prescription drugs through the Federal Government's Medicare Part (D) drug program, where there are many gaps in the program's coverage.

"Under Medicare Part (D) you are covered for up to $2,250 in expenditures," said Ferris. "Then the coverage stops until a person reaches $5,000 in expenses."

The proposed bill, according to Ferris, would set up a buying pool to purchase prescription drugs in bulk, saving money and allowing for a discount card to be offered to all New Yorkers for their prescription drug purchases.

"Pharmaceutical companies have opposed this bill at every turn in the Legislature, and it is unfortunate," said Ferris.

Between 2003 and 2005, pharmaceutical companies and their allies spent more than $8 million lobbying in opposition to the preferred drug list for New York, according to information released from the government watchdog group Common Cause. The preferred drug list was designed to save money by allowing the state to negotiate discounts from drug manufacturers who want their drugs listed among those that doctors are able to prescribe to Medicaid patients without preauthorization.

According to Common Cause, those same pharmaceutical companies lobbying against the preferred drug list gave millions of dollars in campaign contributions, with Senate Republicans being the largest beneficiaries with $850,000 in campaign contributions since 1999. The Republican party, including senators, Assembly members, the state party, and Gov. George Pataki, received a total of 59 percent of pharmaceutical industry contributions. These came from companies such as Bayer, Bristol Meyers Squibb, Ely Lilly and Co., Johnson and Johnson, 3M, and Allergan.

The same pharmaceutical companies are represented by a host of different lobbying firms including David Whitehead and Whiteman Osterman and Hanna LLP, who represent Bristol Meyers Squibb and Mercury Public Affairs representing Pfizer Inc. In 2005, Pfizer paid the firm of Mercury Public Affairs $120,000 to lobby the state on their behalf. The partners of Mercury Public Affairs include Michael McKeon, former communications director for Pataki and Kieran Mahoney, who managed several political campaigns including those of Pataki and former Republican U.S. Sen. Alphonse D'Amato from New York.

An intense lobbying effort is under way by AARP to encourage state senators to include the bill in the special one-day session of the house Sept. 15.

"Our members are meeting with every senator across the state and with their Albany staff," said Ferris who, like Dunlea, believes the measure would easily pass in the Senate if brought for a vote.

New Yorkers spent more than $16 billion in 2004 on prescription drugs, and the purchase price cost goes up 15 percent annually, according to figures released from AARP.

"Older people are cutting their prescription drugs in half to stretch out their allotment, and it defeats the purpose of taking the medication to better one's health," said Dunlea.

Estimate

"I expect we will be coming in at $1 million to $1.2 million, which is below what we had budgeted," Kehoe said.

A shortfall is expected in a line item cost for election expenses. Last year the town spent $70,000 in election expenses. New budget estimates have this year's cost to be $276,000. The extra election expense is due to the new Help America Vote Act.

Another town contract with Albany County for Advanced Life Support services is expected to increase from the current cost of $370,000 a year.

"Bethlehem represents 60 percent of the call volume," said Supervisor Theresa Egan, adding, "a new bill will be submitted at increases of $200,000 from the prior year."

"It's one of those things we don't have any control over," Egan said

Board approves subdivision regulations

New subdivision regulations have been approved by the town board. The changes pertain to the amount of developable space within the town, as well as any primary and secondary uses of new proposed construction.

"We have responded to all comments, and it has been a meaningful process," said Egan.

The work to complete the new zoning changes has been a year in the making, and economic development director George Leveille thanked staff for their efforts.

"We have definitely taken the code and made it better," Leveille said.

An application for a planned 220-unit senior housing project also received approval from the town board. A planned development district is being considered for the 91-acre VanDyke Spinney project. Developers would like to construct 1,100-square-foot senior housing apartments that will cost anywhere from $1,100 to $1,300 to rent. The complex may include walking trails and a community center if approved.

"I am very pleased to see affordable housing being created," said town board member Tim Gordon.

The project will now go back to the planning board for review or recommendation.

Mother's plight prompts marathon ambitions

By LAURIE LYNN STRASSER-FISCHER

Brain drain.

Figuratively, it's what students felt after Asta Roberts' toughest English exams.

Literally, it's a device that saved the retired Bethlehem Central High School teacher's mind from a fluid build-up that left her "out of it" for nearly four months last year.

In honor of her mother, 1981 Bethlehem graduate Tomi-Ann Roberts will attempt her first marathon this fall to raise money toward helping those with hydrocephalus — a medical condition that used to be called "water on the brain."

"My mom is gradually healing, but it has been the most difficult challenge my family has ever faced," said Tomi-Ann Roberts, who grew up on Brockley Drive in Delmar with her parents and younger sister, Lisen.

A native of Finland, her 65-year-old mother taught at Bethlehem high school from 1968 to 1995, before retiring to Chapel Hill, N.C., with her husband, Lowell.

Last summer, following routine overnight back surgery for herniated discs, an untreated infection spread through her whole body. She ran a fever and hallucinated. Fluid pressing on her brain sent her into a coma for a week, then into a semi-vegetative state for nearly four months. Finally, after intensive drugs and multiple operations cleared up her meningitis, neurosurgeons put a shunt in her head to drain the excess.

"The shunt was a kind of miracle," reflected Roberts. "Before that, she had no short-term memory, so she was living completely in the present, and never knew from one minute to the next what was up. She had to re-learn how to eat, speak — and mostly — how to walk."

Asta Roberts still suffers headaches and balance problems. She also needs special prism glasses.

However, her daughter said, "She is completely back, cognitively. We tell her stories of the hospital, but she doesn't remember any of it. A blessing, really. Now, it's just an adjustment to learn to live with the shunt."

While her mother was in and out of intensive care, Roberts used running as a way of dealing with the stress of flying back and forth between her Colorado home and the hospital in Durham, N.C.

"When I was back home, I hit the roads to kind of run off all the crazy emotions that being there would stir up," she said. "It was a good way to handle things. Then I just kind of kept going and thought I wanted to have more of a goal. Then I looked into the Hydro-cephalus Association to get more information about my mother's condition, and it made me think I'd like to raise money for them."

Roberts resolved to take on the Chicago Marathon, with ambitions of generating $5,000 for the cause. After years of jogging for fitness and pleasure, she plans to enter the 26-mile race on Oct.

22. She has been training over the past year on trails in the foothills of the Rocky Mountains, 6,000 feet above sea level.

Formerly a miler on the Eagles' track team, she hopes "very much" to make it to her 25th high school reunion this November. After high school, Roberts went on to earn an undergraduate degree from Smith College and a doctorate from Stanford.

Like her mother, she has pursued a teaching career. She is a psychology professor at Colorado College, a liberal arts institution in Colorado Springs. And like her mother, Tomi-Ann will have a husband and two flaxen-haired daughters pulling for her every step of the way.

The endurance racer hopes that those whose minds her mom molded during her 27-year teaching career at Bethlehem high school may help meet her fundraising goal.

"There are so many students who have been influenced by her," she reflected. "I think it's safe to say she was one of the absolute favorite English teachers of all time at Bethlehem."

Library speaker will offer gardening tips for the autumn

What to do before the frost gets on the pumpkin

Expert Phyllis Rosenblum, former Times Union columnist and 29 years a master gardener, will share her tips on winterizing your garden on Sunday, Sept. 17, from 1:30-3 p.m.

We'll talk about perennial care and fall division, winter care for tender shrubs, bulbs, composting, amending soils and choosing cuttings of annuals for winter houseplants.

Be ready to ask questions.

Also, for a $2 fee you may bring soil samples to get your pH tested.

Reading wrap-up

Readers win, as did the following young people who were awarded prizes for the most reading over the summer.

Our "Grand Prize Winners" were counted by books, not hours spent reading. For every five books, or 500 pages, they received a "golden ticket" which enabled them one chance to win a prize of their choice. Of course, the more they read, the more "golden tickets" they collected, and the more chances there were to win. The winners for the grand prize packages are:

Grade 1: Lauren Ward, Chesna Foster, Brian Hotopp, Jackson Lalor

Grade 2: Olivia Rowland, Kerry Anne O'Neill

Grade 3: Sam Weiss, Laura Patak, Tommy Minnick, Rachael Bogdany

Grade 4: Alex Relyea, Alex Minnick

Grade 5: Becky Bogart

Grade 6: Caroline Weiss

Grade 7: Ashley LaRock

Grade 9: Alexis Moore, Bruce Moore

The following young people were given prizes for the most hours read this summer; they read from 55 hours to over 250 hours: Alexis Moore (first place), Aniela Wilcenski,

Shawna Brown, Jackson Lalor, Caroline Weiss, Kerry Anne O'Neill, Sam Weiss, Keira Glasheen, Casey O'Neill, Boden Sundeen, Olivia Biggé.

Two hundred and fifty children participated in our summer reading program.

Congratulations to all!

L'Allegro Dance Club seeks new members

The L'Allegro Dance Club, which is entering its 52nd dance season this fall, is looking for new members and guests.

The club was formed in the mid 1950s by some General Electric executives who loved to dance. Couples would meet at one another's homes, have cocktails, and go to dinner and then dancing at the Shaughnessy Hall in Schenectady.

The club is more dance-oriented now, but socializing was and is a big part of the get-togethers. The dress code hasn't changed that much: Men wear ties and sports coats or suits, and women sport dressy skirts, pantsuits, dresses or gowns.

Dances are now held at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Ravena. There is ample parking, a full bar and kitchen, and a large ballroom dance floor. Dances include top-notch bands and demonstrations before each dance. The club also has a local dance teacher keeping them up-to-date on the latest ballroom and Latin dance steps.

Annual membership is $150 per couple, which includes six dances, two of which are dinner dances (in December and May). Applications received after the season begins are pro-rated. For information, call 756-2390, or e-mail franbud@knick.net.

Immunizations reminder issued

With the start of another school year upon us, the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central School District is asking all parents to make sure their children's immunization records are up-to-date.

State law requires students be immunized for the following: diphtheria, polio, measles, mumps and rubella (MMR), hepatitis B and varicella (chicken pox), for students born on or after Jan. 1, 1998 or those born on or after Jan. 1, 1994 and entering the sixth grade.

"Immunizations are the only way to effectively protect your loved ones from a number of potentially dangerous, debilitating, and even deadly diseases," said Assistant Superintendent Diane Albano.

World Trade Center: Rescue Recovery Response

Among the artifacts on display at the New York State Museum are a 9-ton, 19-foot high floor-to-ceiling beam from one of the towers (left) and a damaged Engine No. 6 pumper, which was one of the first fire trucks to respond to the scene (above). The museum is open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

light at the end of tunnel.

"We can never forget that it was a human tragedy. This anniversary, the trauma will be relived. But, for some, it will bring closure for the first time," said Cook.

In the weeks after the attacks, Cook ran nondenominational services out of John Street United Methodist Church, in the heart of Manhattan's financial district, and two blocks from Ground Zero.

The first 60 days after the attacks felt like one long funeral, she said. Even after five years, the hurt, pain and fear are still very real. Like Forsyth, Cook urges mourners on Monday to acknowledge the pain but focus on the triumphs of so many people in the aftermath. People must remember the many heroes that gave their lives, she said. They also need to remember how Americans came together as a nation without regard to race and religion.

There is good to come from the tragedy of Sept. 11, 2001, and in some cases good already has, she said.

Heal

barrier, or it can be an opportunity for growth and change," said John P. Forsyth, associate professor of psychology at the University at Albany.

Forsyth is director of the department's anxiety disorder research program and the author of several anxiety self-help books.

The nervous system is additive, not subtractive, said Forsyth. Since the attacks, many people have gone through a series of emotional periods. After five years, whether or not time can heal all wounds will be put to the test this year.

It is never healthy to dwell in painful memories, said Forsyth, although he added that remembering on this anniversary and the next can be healthy step towards resolution.

Locally, people may travel to the Sept. 11 exhibit at the state museum. Others may head south to where the World Trade Center stood to reflect. Many will be faced with images or feelings they have not encountered in some time. Forsyth encourages people to focus on the value of what they do this anniversary. It's not so much about remembering, but how one remembers.

It's the foundation for a "new normalcy" that Americans are currently facing after the attacks and the subsequent chain of events that continue to follow. New normalcy is the latest mission for Dr. Suzan Johnson Cook, 49.

Cook is one of seven New York Police Department chaplains who were on duty on the day of the attacks. From the time the planes hit, the towers fell and clean-up efforts began, Cook was providing moral and spiritual support to police officers, 911 operators, firefighters, families and strangers.

For her work, Cook became known as the "city's pastor." But, that work is far from over, despite some "People feel they have to go forward and be strong. If we go in fear, the terrorists win."

Suzan Johnson Cook

"Now, people are more committed to find out what they are passionate about. People are making more time for their families. They are asking themselves, who are the people that really matter?" Cook said. "People feel they have to go forward and be strong. If we go in fear, the terrorists win."

There is no question that memorial services and media reports will bring that September day back for many, said Forsyth.

This Monday, he encourages people to see things differently and be open to emotion. This anniversary, meet grief with compassion and focus on "what you really want to be about," he said.

This anniversary people can learn a lot about themselves, and what Sept. 11 means to them.

Tragedy

second phase opened in January 2003. Since the museum's collection of artifacts is so vast, its pieces are refreshed every four to six months.

Among the artifacts on display are a 4-by-6-foot flag that was recovered by state police from the World Trade Center site, a 9-ton, 19-foot-high floor-to-ceiling beam from one of the towers that visitors are allowed to touch, an elevator floor sign, an airplane seat belt, an "In Case of Fire" sign, an Engine No. 6 fire helmet, and perhaps the most captivating feature in the collection — the visibly damaged Engine No. 6 pumper, which was one of the first fire trucks to respond to the scene. Also included is a 25-foot-wide exhibit case containing a portion of the memorial fence that stood near Ground Zero on Broadway at Liberty Street. The fence, a "spontaneous memorial," is covered with stuffed animals, bumper stickers, dried bouquets of flowers, candles, prayer cards and photos of victims.

Throughout the exhibit are facts, such as a timeline of the attack and general information about the World Trade Center.

In a corner beneath nine framed front pages of newspapers taken from different parts of the country announcing the attacks is a computer display labeled "Portraits of Grief," courtesy of the New York Times. The program allows users to search for 9/11 victims by their last names.

Much of the exhibit is dedicated to the relief efforts and public response, including sections devoted to the Fresh Kills Landfill Recovery operation on Staten Island and St. Paul's Chapel.

Museum Director Clifford A.

Clifford A. Siegfried

Siegfried said gathering pieces for the exhibit was a collaborative effort.

"Immediately after the events, one of the realizations was that the World Trade Center needed to be documented. A group of 30 organizations met in New York City. We established a trusting relationship with the FBI. Over time they became sort of adjunct curators," Siegfried said. "We asked them, 'What would you collect?'"

Decisions were made with reverence and caution during the creation of the display.

"We had to be careful. We went step by step," said Siegfried. "We didn't want it to look as though it were benefiting us, or glorify it in any way."

One visitor, Matt Reilly, said he believes curators achieved that goal.

"I think it's appropriately done.

It is not ghoulish or garish, but respectful. The scale is right," said Reilly.

The hushed atmosphere of the exhibit speaks of the surreal sentiments of that day five years ago, when planes flew into both towers of the World Trade Center and the Pentagon in Washington, D.C., killing thousands of people. A fourth plane crashed into the ground in Pennsylvania.

"I actually visited the site right after it happened. And it looked like that," said one museum visitor, emphatically pointing to photos of the wreckage at Ground Zero.

The authenticity of the exhibit has been known to inspire deep emotions in people.

"When we first opened, we had boxes of tissues out; and they were needed. Some people just cried and cried, it was still so fresh in their minds," Siegfried recalled.

Other visitors have found the exhibit therapeutic.

"Until they'd gone through the exhibit they hadn't faced it," said Siegfried. "Going through is sort of cathartic, allowing people to work through it."

He acknowledges that the timeline is especially helpful in this way because it shows exactly what happened and when.

The effect of the exhibit is apparent.

"Most visitors will give an exhibit 20 to 30 seconds of their time. The World Trade Center exhibit has had crowds of people coming in, standing in line, and viewing from beginning to end. To capture someone that way is rewarding," said Siegfried.

By TONY GRAY

Capital Repertory Theatre will commemorate the fifth anniversary of the terrorist attacks on New York City and Washington, D.C., with a reading of a play written by veteran journalist Anne Nelson titled "The Guys," followed by a reception.

Nelson wrote the play because she said she felt the experience of collaborating with a fire department captain in an effort to craft eulogies for services of fallen firefighters was too personal to be expressed in newsprint. "The Guys" debuted at the 80-seat Flea Theater three months after the attacks. The theater is just seven blocks from Ground Zero.

The destruction of the twin towers of the World Trade Center had a serious impact on the Flea Theater, described as one of New York's leading off-off-Broadway repertory companies.

Before the terrorists struck, the theater hosted a repertoire of five plays, two dance presentations and a concert; after the terrorist attack, all activity at the theater ceased. When the theater reopened almost three weeks later, attendance dropped from 90 percent to 5 percent of capacity.

Dust and ash continued to hang in the air for weeks around Ground Zero, and theater owners said audiences were unable or unwilling to venture into the area.

They hoped the initial production of "The Guys" would help generate foot traffic and drop-in business in the lower Manhattan area, and they were not disappointed. At most performances, every seat was occupied.

Free admission was granted to firefighters and their families.

The play centers on a fire department captain, Nick, and a writer, Joan, and their experience during an afternoon recalling the virtues and foibles of fallen firefighters, in order to fashion stories of their lives into fitting eulogies.

"In that one afternoon, Nick and Joan discover the possibilities of friendship in each other and their shared love for the unconquerable spirit of the city, drawing on humor, tango and the enduring bonds of common humanity," said Capital Rep spokeswoman Nancy Laribee.

Richard Nagle, the academy director for the state office of fire prevention, will portray Nick. Before becoming the academy director, Nagle was a lieutenant in the New York City Fire Department.

His former company, Engine Company 26, in the maintain the memory of those 343 brave men who were lost that day."

Nagle played the part of the captain on the second anniversary of the terrorist attacks at the Newman Theater, in Westchester County. Since then, he has recreated the role at the national fire academy, in Emmitsburg, Md., and the state fire academy, in Montour Falls. He has also performed the play for the Massachusetts Association of Fire Chiefs, the Virginia State Fire Chiefs Association and at the Consalati Theater, in Sheffield, Mass.

Playing Joan will be WNYT news anchor and health reporter Benita Zahn. In addition to covering health issues for the local NBC affiliate, she has performed many times in theater productions at the Albany Civic Theater, Schenectady Civic Theater, Schenectady Light Opera, and the Park Playhouse.

The show will be performed at 7:30 p.m., Sept. 11, at the Capital Repertory Theatre, 111 N. Pearl St., Albany. Tickets are available on a first-come, first-served basis for $10.

Rep donors of $100 or more receive free admission. Seats are available by calling the box office at 445-7469.

"There was little I could do at the time, other than mourn their loss," Nagle said. "However, when Anne Nelson's play opened, I determined that by playing the captain, I could help to

Indians fend off hungry Tigers for first win

By ROB JONAS

It wasn't pretty, but it was a win.

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk defense allowed nearly 300 yards to Hudson Falls, but the Indians' offense racked up more than 500 yards to pull out a 35-33 victory over the Tigers in last Saturday's football game.

"We've got a lot of work to do (on defense)," said RCS coach

Gary VanDerzee. "They came up big when they needed to, but they need a lot of improvement."

Tailback Pat Filkins was responsible for a large chunk of RCS's offense. Filkins gained 289 yards and scored three touchdowns, the last of which — a 77-yard scoring run in the fourth quarter — proved to be the game clincher.

"A running back will gain as many yards as his offensive line will allow, and our offensive line opened up some huge holes for him," said VanDerzee.

Hudson Falls took a 7-0 lead on Joe McMurray's 5-yard touchdown run in the first quarter, but RCS responded with two scoring drives in the second quarter. Jared Fortier caught a 27-yard touchdown pass from Mike Fastert and added the extra point to tie the game, and Filkins capped another series with a 5-yard touchdown run to put the Indians ahead 14-7 at halftime.

McMurray scored on a 4-yard run in the third quarter to pull Hudson Falls within a point, but the Tigers missed a two-point conversion. That came back to haunt the Tigers, as they never caught RCS the rest of the game.

Filkins added a 45-yard touchdown run to his 77-yard scoring scamper in the second half, and Fastert rushed for a touchdown to help the Indians pull out the two-point victory.

RCS returns to action Friday night when it hosts Johnstown, which beat Taconic Hills 13-2 last Friday.

"They won their first game, so they'll be coming in pretty confident," said VanDerzee. "Their quarterback (Jase Kollar) is a very talented player, and they have a quick running back (Josh Schrum)."

New coach guides BC soccer

By ROB JONAS

There's a new man in charge of the Bethlehem boys soccer team.

Former junior varsity coach Phil Ridgway has taken over for Brett Miller, who left the school district to take an assistant principal's job at Ihabod Crane High School in Valatie.

"I'm excited to have the challenge," said Ridgway, who

Junior Pee Wee teams open with victories

Both Bethlehem Pop Warner junior pee wee division teams posted shutouts in their season openers last weekend.

The junior pee wee A team defeated Northern Columbia 21-0, while the B team pulled out a 13-0 victory over Scotia-Glenville.

Cameron Quinlan had a 60-yard touchdown run, and Ben Zonca added a 30-yard scoring run for the junior pee wee B team, which also recorded seven sacks and three fumbles.

The pee wee division Eagles suffered a 13-6 loss to South Glens Falls in its opener, while the junior midget team fell to North Colonie 31-14.

Michael McCler had a pair of 30-yard touchdown runs for the junior midget team against North Colonie. C.J. Shubert accounted for all of the pee wee division Eagles' points against South Glens Falls with a 4-yard touchdown run.

coached Bethlehem's JV team for the last three years. "I have a lot of returning seniors — a lot of veterans, a lot of experienced players — that helped in my transition."

Most of that experience is up front and in the midfield. The Eagles have several returning starters that have been big contributors to the offense in previous years, including striker Bryan White and midfielders Bill Barrowman, Darko Knesevic and Josh Wing.

"It's really great to have some veteran players and some speed up front," said Ridgway.

Where Bethlehem lacks experience is on defense and in goal, where Ridgway is breaking in several new players.

"We need to shore up defensively," said Ridgway.

Bethlehem tested itself against two of the better soccer programs in the state at last weekend's Shenendehowa Tournament in Clifton Park. The Eagles played Section IX power Pine Bush to a 1-1 tie last Saturday and was scheduled to play Section III's Liverpool Sunday at Shenendehowa High School.

White gave Bethlehem a 1-0 lead against Pine Bush midway through the first half with a goal, but Bryant Knibbs tied the game 10 minutes into the second half by eluding two Eagle defenders and shooting the ball by rookie goaltender Jason Daniels.

There was no report on Sunday's game between Bethlehem and Liverpool. The Eagles open their Suburban Council season Thursday against Shaker.

'Birds turn back Crusaders

The Voorheesville football team opened its season last Saturday with a 34-20 home victory over Catholic Central.

The Blackbirds took an early lead on Adam Duncan's 9-yard touchdown run. Catholic Central responded on NyQuan McGirt's 85-yard touchdown run, but Voorheesville quarterback Jay Conde capped a drive with an 11-yard scoring run to give the Blackbirds a 13-6 lead in the first quarter.

Conde added a 5-yard touchdown run and threw a 41-yard scoring pass to Curt Hoffart in the second quarter to help Voorheesville build a 26-12 halftime lead.

Conde finished with 161 passing yards and 64 rushing yards to lead the Blackbirds. Tailback Pat Jones rushed for 121 yards, and Duncan added a 2-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter to his first-quarter scoring scamper.

Voorheesville returns to action Friday night when it travels to Schuylerville.

Eagles soar to opening week victory over Patriots

By ROB JONAS

It might have been the first game of the season, but the Bethlehem football team looked like it was in midseason form.

The Eagles built a 27-0 lead and never looked back in beating Schenectady 33-20 in last Friday's season opener.

"It was probably one of the better Week 1 offensive executions I've seen in a while," said Bethlehem head coach Ron Smith.

The Eagles didn't need their offense to get their first touchdown. All they needed was a 62-yard punt return by Dan Unright to take a 7-0 lead two minutes into the game.

When Bethlehem's offense took the field later in the first quarter, it operated like a well-oiled machine. The Eagles marched down the field, and Joe Whitney capped the drive with a 6-yard touchdown run to put Bethlehem ahead 14-0.

Quarterback Dave Plummer connected with Scooby Dollard on a 14-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter, and Unright added a 28-yard scoring run early in the fourth quarter to put Bethlehem ahead by 27 points. Schenectady cut the deficit nearly in half with a pair of Darrin Earring touchdown passes, but Shane Myers added a 22-yard scoring run to give the Eagles some breathing room.

"They made some big plays when we started substituting (on defense), and they only had two or three first downs at that point," said Smith.

Unright gained 153 yards on 15 carries, and Plummer threw for more than 100 yards to lead the Bethlehem offense. Earring passed for 229 yards to lead Schenectady, with more than half of those yards coming in the fourth quarter.

The Eagles play their first divisional opponent Friday when Ballston Spa visits Delmar. The Scotties are coming off a 22-10 victory over Albany last Saturday.

"They are a tough group of guys," said Smith. "(Coach) John Bowen always has them well coached. I think it'll be a good match for us because they are almost a mirror image of our offense."
