History, bound

It was your typical Northeast fall day in October of 1995 when Raymond Houghton traveled to Schuylerville to visit the Saratoga monument in what would become a trip that in many ways changed his life and began his career as a historical travel writer.

Autumn is a sensory season. There's crisp air to inhale, the blaze of red and orange leaves to view, and the taste of tart McIntosh apples fresh from the tree. The State Museum's newest exhibit might just throw our already heightened senses into overdrive, as it draws us into the history and economics of chocolate.

Small repair shops say car dealerships are keeping vital equipment to themselves

✓ Diagnostic ✓ Dilemma

By JIM FRANCO

Diagnosing a broken-down vehicle used to be an art that involved getting your hands dirty, a process of elimination and a degree of experience and know-how.

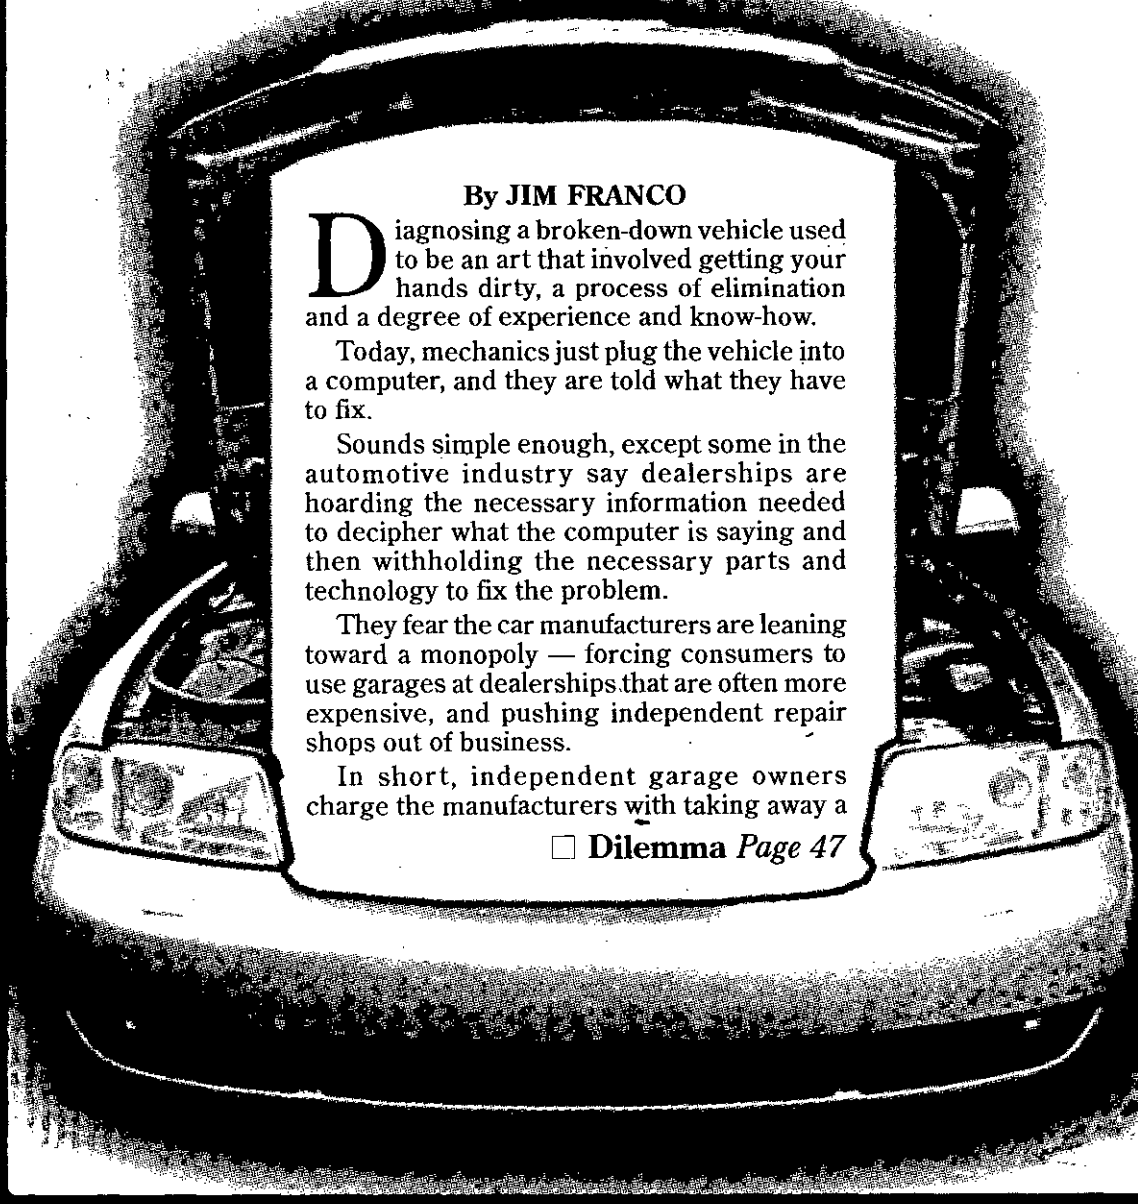

Today, mechanics just plug the vehicle into a computer, and they are told what they have to fix.

Sounds simple enough, except some in the automotive industry say dealerships are hoarding the necessary information needed to decipher what the computer is saying and then withholding the necessary parts and technology to fix the problem.

They fear the car manufacturers are leaning toward a monopoly — forcing consumers to use garages at dealerships that are often more expensive, and pushing independent repair shops out of business.

In short, independent garage owners charge the manufacturers with taking away a

Upcoming '48 Hours' program to focus on Porco trial

By JIM CUOZZO

Producers from "48 Hours Mystery" were in Delmar on Friday, Sept. 15, shooting footage and interviewing local officials in advance of a one-hour special on the Christopher Porco murder trial that will premiere on CBS Oct. 28. "They were at 36 Brockley Drive on Saturday filming inside the house," said Det. Christopher Bowdish, the lead detective on the Porco murder case for the Bethlehem Police Department.

The production crew also brought in a special effects team from Oklahoma to use high-tech equipment and even fog effects to recreate the scene of the crime the night of Nov. 15, 2004. The Brockley Drive home is no longer owned by the Porco family.

Brockley Drive was closed to traffic for a brief period of time on Saturday evening while production crews worked through the night and neighbors watched. Scheduled guests for the news show include Bowdish, the defense

Group discusses hamlet proposal

Developers, residents unite to design Slingerlands community

By JIM CUOZZO

Bethlehem town hall hosted three Stakeholder Input Sessions regarding a proposed Slingerlands hamlet project with the hope of designing a new neighborhood community off New Scotland Road.

A group of about 40 property owners, developers, residents and town officials attended each session called a charette.

Charettes are intense multi-day meetings with developers, residents, and local officials designed to provide solutions to urban-planning problems.

"About 100 different folks participated in all three sessions," said George Leveille, director of economic development. "By Saturday, an illustrator had some visual images on how properties might look in the defined area."

Professional consultants cultivated ideas to take over 70 acres of land behind the Price Chopper Plaza all the way to the Normans Kill and create a pedestrian-friendly place to work, visit, shop and live.

images behind it," said Jim Segedy, landscape architect and professor at Ball State, one of the facilitators at Friday's Charette session.

"Our job is to turn those ideas and words into something more tangible," Segedy added.

Developing a pedestrian town center that shares Bethlehem's unique characteristics with plenty of green space were the main ideas generated by the residents from the first input session.

"The Slingerlands hamlet project meetings are incredibly productive," said Kyle Kotary, town council member. "This innovative,

County DWI patrol nets several offenders Police charge 3 with drug possession

By ROB IRWIN

All Albany County police agencies participated in a DWI blanket patrol from 10 p.m. Friday, Sept. 8, to 5 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 10.

This was the 54th time the county has conducted the patrols, which resulted in 24 drunk driving arrests over 797 traffic stops.

"It is a little below what we did before," said Albany County Sheriff James Campbell, who said he hoped the numbers indicate that fewer people are drinking and driving. "It's a sign of things to come."

Campbell said that each department in the county had officers on patrol looking for the signs that a driver may have had too much to drink: running red lights, crossing the center line, making illegal turns, or ignoring stop signs.

Officers also looked for other problems, including unsafe tires, burned-out headlights, and inspection and registration violations.

In addition to the 24 DWI arrests, officers issued 281 summonses to drivers for various violations.

Departments also held countywide driver checkpoints over the weekend.

Traffic stops and checkpoints resulted in the verbal confirmation of 75 designated drivers, 37 of which were in the city of Albany.

Albany also led the way with the most DWI's — eight — in addition to four DWI arrests made by the sheriff's department.

Campbell said that the county holds four or five of the blanket patrols each year, and last weekend's was intended to send a specific message.

"We always have it after the first weekend, when all of the new kids are attending college in Albany County," said Campbell. The intent, he said, was to tell students, especially those from out of town, that local agencies take drinking and driving, as well as underage drinking, seriously, and that it will be strictly enforced.

Three DWI arrests were made by SUNY police.

Four DWI arrests each were made by New York state troopers, and two each by police in Colonie and Watervliet. One arrest was made in Menands.

Altamont, Bethlehem, Coeymans, Cohoes, Green Island and Guilderland made no DWI arrests over the weekend.

Eighty-three officers were on duty in the 14 different agencies.

The blood alcohol content of the 24 drivers was also compiled, the average of which was .13 percent.

"It's a little lower than before," said Campbell, who said in the past it has been in the .14 to .15 percent range.

The busiest time of year for the DWI blanket patrol is the holiday season, conducted over Christmas weekend.

"The arrests, usually increase then," said Campbell, attributing it to the fact that many people that time of year "let their hair down," and drink more than they usually would.

Currently, Campbell said agencies are discussing conducting the next blanket patrol during the Halloween weekend.

Bethlehem Police arrested three men on criminal possession of a controlled substance after the vehicle they were driving was found in a ditch.

Juan Rivera, 34, of 1400-15th St. Troy, Edward Salvi of Bank Street, Troy, and Scott Archambeau also of Troy were charged with felony criminal possession of a controlled substance third degree. Police patrolling on Creble Road in Selkirk noticed a car being pulled out of a ditch. The report states the plates on the vehicle at the time of the stop did not match the vehicle. Police found drugs inside the vehicle following a search. All three were arraigned and will appear in Town Court to answer the charge.

Other arrests

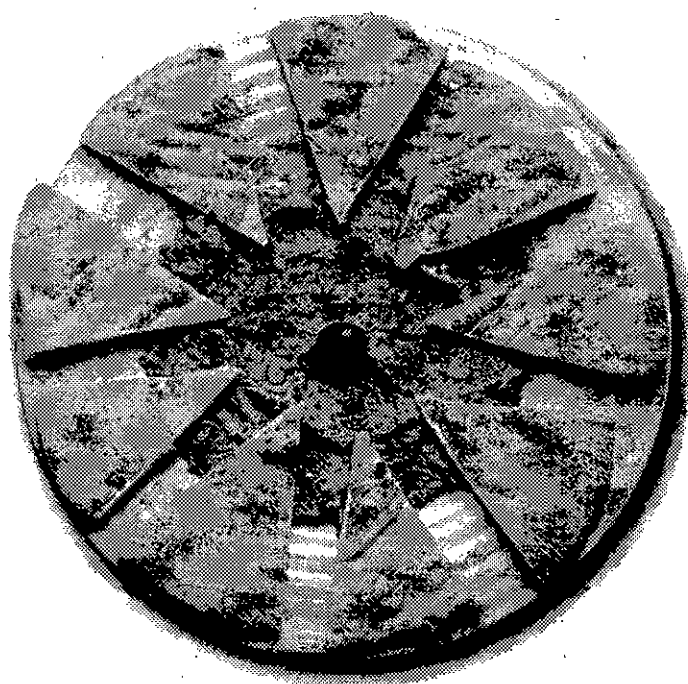

Police charged Julie Lynn Fiato, 33, of 227 South Swan Street in Albany with felony grand larceny fourth degree. Police received a call from the Glenmont Wal-Mart of a shoplifter in custody by Wal-Mart store security. When police arrived they were told Fiato was allegedly observed pushing a cart full of merchandise out the store through the garden center register. The cart had various electronic equipment and other items inside. Fiato told store security another individual loaded the items in the cart and she then pulled the description provided by Fiato. Fiato was processed and arraigned before Town Justice Paul Dwyer and a hearing is set for this week.

Lucas B. Turner, 22, of 80 Washington Ave. Albany was charged with DWI, and operating a vehicle with more than .08 percent blood alcohol content. Turner was driving along Corning Hill Road in Glenmont when he was observed by police driving with no taillights. Police then observed Turner was allegedly intoxicated and then charged him with DWI. Turner will appear in Town Court Sept. 19 to answer to the charges.

Town enacts 6 month moratorium

By ROB IRWIN

In the face of unprecedented development, the New Scotland town board passed a new local law that would suspend building in the northeast area of town for six months while the area's zoning was re-evaluated.

The law was passed in a three to two vote at a town board meeting on Sept. 13. Prior to the meeting, at a public hearing for the law, town officials debated for 45 minutes and called into question the law's effectiveness, scope and specifics.

The law, titled the 2006 Development Suspension Law, suspends development in areas zoned MDR (Medium Density Residential) and R-2, which both support large-scale residential development.

According to a draft of the law, the town board is studying changes to the zoning area in question. While that study is under way, that law's draft explains, "the town's rural character, historic features, and many other valuable features, and many other valuable resources are threatened by rapid development."

The area under scrutiny is a triangle in the northeast corner of the town, bordered on the west by Voorheesville and the Bethlehem line to the east. Guilderland's town line forms the northernmost point and the railroad tracks form the southern border.

The law's sponsor, councilman Richard Reilly, said the law was drafted in response to a residential petition stating that current zoning "didn't sufficiently protect their area to development pressure."

The six month moratorium would occur during the non-building season and would prevent consideration by any New Scotland officials or boards of any applications for subdivision approval, site plan approval, special use permits or for planned unit developments.

Some focus of debate revolved around the length of the moratorium.

"Are we in agreement that six months is a sufficient amount of time," said councilwoman Peg Neri, who, along with Reilly and councilwoman Deborah Baron, voted in favor of the law.

"If it turns out that isn't enough we could extend it, that's my understanding," said Reilly.

Councilman Doug LaGrange, said that he believed a moratorium needed to be more directly linked to some sort of specific accomplishment, such as a revision or development of a comprehensive plan. In that case, board would first need to decide a review of the current comprehensive plan was needed.

"We'd be putting the cart before the horse in this situation," said LaGrange, who said he was also not in favor of completing a lengthy, 18 month process of reviewing the comprehensive plan but said of the local law: "If we're going to do it, it should have some teeth and do it as a town wide effort."

LaGrange said he was unclear on the selectiveness of the law, applicable only to MDR and R-2 zoning, when the potential exists for development in adjacent areas. It was explained that these areas were singled out because water and sewer are available while other areas of potential development lacked similar resources Supervisor Ed Clark agreed with LaGrange's contention, citing the development potential of the town's hamlets.

"If water is made available they'll be just as subject to pressure as anyone else," said Clark. "There's a lot of vacant land there and if water is made available it's a prime New Scotland property."

Clark cited the development potential of Feura Bush, Clarksville, Unionville and New Salem.

"If Unionville got water," said Clark, "it's all over." Reilly and Neri both supported the law as a starting point for re-evaluation of zoning.

"I'm simply suggesting we prioritize and look at other areas in the future," said Reilly, who said he believed that a moratorium should be as limited in scope as possible, and that if anything, the law "puts everyone on notice that in the next six months we're in the process of changing the zoning."

Exempt from the law's restrictions are the maintenance, repair, replacement, modification of existing commercial or industrial structures as long as the structure doesn't increase by more than 50 percent. Any applications or permits pending before the passage of the law are exempt as well as any residential subdivision involving the creation of not more than 10 lots.

Anyone found to be in violation of the law would be fined $100 each day the violation exists.

Committee undergoes final review of open space plan

By JIM CUOZZO

The term "willing landowner" was repeated several times during discussions Monday, Sept. 11, about open space funding initiatives by the Citizens Advisory Committee on Conservation.

The committee has been meeting since the first of the year, following its formation by the Bethlehem town board as part of a recommendation of the updated Comprehensive Plan.

An integrated pedestrian trail network in Slingerlands and possible funding methods and strategies for open space are the committee's main agenda items.

A finalized plan will be brought before the town board in October.

Advisory committee member Valerie Newell said she felt the committee was beginning to overstep its bounds after reading a revised draft of an open space funding report.

"When I look at this, we are getting way into this Open Space Protection Plan, which is not what the town board told us to do," Newell said.

Committee chairman John Smolinski said Newell is basing her opinion on the executive summary, which is only part of the Comprehensive Plan.

Town economic development director George Leveille, who wrote most of the draft report, said he understands the committee's concern.

"This report is not a recommendation; it is to provide information," said Leveille. "It is not making a statement, but I understand the concern because it could be misconstrued."

The purpose of the document, according to Leveille, is to search for program funding to foster the town's Open Space Protection Plan.

Board member John Mead said when the public reads the final document, it should be one that invites the public to participate.

"This should be a friendly document and not a confrontational document," said Mead. "This looks like a confrontational document."

To take an inventory of all town land that may have historic and cultural features, the committee must first decide how to access the potential property, which could be owned by a developer or resident.

"We need to be sure this process starts with willing landowners," said Newell.

"We need to inform the public the town goal is to create a cultural,

"We need to inform the public the town goal is to create a cultural, rural, historic legacy for the future of the town and inviting landowners to participate."

Michael DiPaolo

rural, historic legacy for the future of the town and inviting landowners to participate," said advisory committee member Michael DiPaolo.

No official town map exists in Bethlehem, and one of the Comprehensive Plan recommendations was for the committee to discuss the idea of creating one.

"Mapping can work to describe generally where things may be," said board member Nancy Heinzen.

Board members in the end decided every section of the draft document will be reviewed to see how it relates to the town's overall Comprehensive Plan.

Leveille updated the committee on the development of an integrated Slingerlands Pedestrian Network Plan. A consultant hired to work with the economic development department will be at the October committee meeting to give a report.

"The consultant has performed an initial review of existing conditions, including the quality of roads and pedestrian safety, and is participating in Slingerlands hamlet design meetings," said Leveille. "We should have some good direction by the end of the week."

Brushing up on dental health coverage can be a grind

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR

Tracking your family's dental benefits and claims can feel like a full-time job. The best strategy is to grin and bear it, because if you grit your teeth, you'll wind up needing additional dental services, which will lead to more claims-tracking and possibly more aggravation.

Many people have no dental health insurance. Compared to those people I am a very lucky person who whines a lot. Still, when you are paying insurance premiums, it's important to make sure you get proper reimbursement.

To get all you are entitled to, you need to learn the lingo. You need to know the primary insurer, the secondary insurer, the dates of service, the subscriber, the provider, the employee, the patient, the group number, the deductible, the lifetime maximum, and the three numbers from the combination lock you used in ninth grade.

If you are informed about all of the above, you will have no problems reading the Explanation of Benefits (EOB) statements sent by the insurance companies. The EOB statement generally includes fairly obvious information that you recognize to be true. For example, you may see your own name and the name of your dentist. Both are spelled correctly and so you feel confident that the more cryptic pieces of information are also true.

Commentary:

From

The EOB statements often contain asterisks. When you see a lot of asterisks, it means the insurer is only paying for a fraction of what the dentist charged. Some EOB statements use code numbers instead of asterisks. Either way, you need to look toward the bottom of the statement for the actual explanation of the Explanation of Benefits. That sounds sort of redundant, doesn't it?

If you are lucky, the words next to the asterisk will form a sentence that conveys a useful message. However, if the EOB is generated by a computer system which limits explanations to 25 characters per sentence per asterisk, it's likely that all you'll see is "U R Not Gtng N E $ Benfts." You'll need to call the company to get the actual reason.

Check the EOB statement for the toll-free telephone number for customer service. When you call the number don't be surprised if the recorded voice asks you to "please listen to the menu because it has recently changed." These companies must be changing their menus constantly because I get that message every time I call.

There's also the possibility that making each caller listen to the entire menu is a way of stalling the people who want to speak to a live customer service representative. It's a roundabout way of making people wait without officially putting a caller "on hold."

Lately I've found it increasingly difficult to get to a live customer service representative. Many of the main menu options on these automated systems don't offer the caller the option to speak to anyone. You have to go deep into the various layers of the menu system or repeatedly press invalid options until they feel sorry for you and understand you are not happy navigating the automated system.

When I hear menu options "1 through 5" and none of them include "speak to a person," I press number 6. I get a message that says, "Invalid Option" and the voice reads the menu choices again. If you keep selecting invalid options, the recorded voice will eventually say, "Please hold while we transfer you to the next available representative." Either that or the system will hang up on you.

The recorded messages also include information about the company Web site. These companies prefer you to use their Web sites because then you won't tie up their telephone lines and they won't have to talk to you. If you don't like the Web site menu choices you may be given the option of sending an e-mail note, which is not the same as talking to an actual person. Actual people can take follow-up questions.

Every time I get to speak to an actual person my questions are answered, although not necessarily in my favor. For example, there was the time I asked an insurance company to take another look at a claim because I thought the full benefit had not been paid. Three telephone calls and four customer service representatives later, the insurer determined that they had overpaid, not underpaid the claim. They said they forgot to apply the deductible. This meant I owed them money, which they were kind enough to take as a reduction against the next claim.

Most other times I have been more successful in getting claims reviewed and receiving additional payments due, although compared to the time and aggravation spent I'm not sure if I came out ahead.

Before you call the toll-free telephone number it's a good idea to look over your dental benefits packet so you understand your coverage. Put the EOB and the dental packet side-by-side on the kitchen table and try to find words, phrases, dollar amounts and percentages that appear in both documents. This analysis will help you understand the EOB.

The insurer's EOB has a column showing what the dentist charged for your visit. That column will also include a Smiley Face graphic. This means the insurer is happy that the dentist wants to make a good living, especially since the insurer won't be paying for all of it.

The insurer takes the amount charged by the dentist and makes several adjustments. First the insurer must deduct for the dentist being an out-of-network provider. Then another 20 percent of that reduced number becomes the new base charge, following by an assessment related to the Tooth Fairy's pension and a reduction based on the number of times they estimate you have chewed gum or forgotten to floss. These final estimates are calculated based on a survey of college students attending a Monday morning class.

Once the insurance company determines the payment they send it somewhere. It may go directly to The Provider (aka the dentist) or it may come to you or it may go to a Swiss bank account. The bottom line is that The Provider bills you immediately, but it takes a while to get reimbursement from the insurance company.

Insurance companies have gazillions of claims to review, most of which are incomplete and submitted on behalf of uninsured gum chewers. It also takes a while to get reimbursed because the insurance company has to have a good laugh over what codes and notes and numbers to put on your EOB.

Most dental claims contain the word "prophylaxis," which makes a lot of people giggle or uncomfortable or both. The term means "protective treatment for prevention of disease" and it's used by the dentist to describe the service known to you and me as "teeth cleaning."

Dental health is important. If you don't believe me, ask the people who put their teeth in a dish at night.

Think about it. You need your teeth to chew food and you need food to stay alive. This means your dentist is prolonging your life. Providing dental care is important, worthwhile work. It's not just about the fun of administering Novocain needles and performing root canals.

Really, dealing with the insurance companies is not so hard. If your provider always remembers to submit a copy of the EOB from your primary insurer along with the claim to your secondary insurer, the EOB from the latter will be accompanied by a reimbursement check instead of reasons for nonpayment. Chew on that thought.

Town's bill for emergency service goes up

By JIM CUOZZO

The Albany County co-ordinator of Advanced Life Support Services told the Bethlehem town board its share of the program's cost will increase by more than $200,000 in the next budget year.

Brian Wood, representing the Albany County Sheriff's Department, told the board that six of every 10 calls received by their paramedics come from Bethlehem residents, and the new contract's proposed cost of $584,000 annually for these services better reflects the increase in calls since the program's inception in 1996.

"There has been a huge jump in call volume since the program began, and we took a look at call volume and population," said Wood.

A team of five paramedics work daily shifts from 6 a.m.-6 p.m. for the town of Bethlehem and three surrounding hill towns, according to Wood. Four more paramedics work the same territory from 6 p.m.-6 a.m. Proposed costs will be broken down according to each region's population and the latest Census figures.

"The figures will be adjusted with each Census," said Wood. "We've run the numbers by Terri (Supervisor Theresa Egan) to make sure it is as accurate as possible."

Egan asked where emergency vehicles will be located once the new contract is in place.

"Right now there is one paramedic in Coeymans and one in the hill towns," Egan said.

Wood said a vehicle and paramedics will be in Bethlehem every day of the week beginning in 2007.

"We are going to relocate one car to Bethlehem with three paramedics working round the clock," Wood said.

Town council member Daniel Plummer asked how other Albany County towns handle ALS services.

Wood replied that similar contracts exist in other communities. The town of Colonie was mentioned as one exception. Colonie has its own town department for ALS service.

"They (Colonie) have a big multi-million dollar operation," said Wood.

Delmar Ambulance, Bethlehem Emergency Volunteers and Western Turnpike also provide specific emergency services to the town.

Wood said the new rate increase will stay the same until the next Census update.

Town comptroller Judith Kehoe said the increased costs for ALS service to the town will translate to an estimated increase of $34 annually for a homeowner with a $200,000 home.

Other town news

Egan updated the board on the status of election charge backs to the town from Albany County. A meeting was held last week between Albany County election officials and town officials to better explain the election cost increases.

"We had a lively discussion on the county level," said Egan.

Bethlehem will see costs for elections jump from $70,000 to $267,000 in the next fiscal year.

"We are trying to engage our county legislators from the town to get involved locally and quickly in this matter," said Egan.

The new county election cost charges are based on a municipality's taxable property rather than population or any other mechanism.

Egan and other town officials feel this is unfair.

The charge represents a 20 percent increase to the town general fund to cover expenses.

"This is a very significant matter, and I urge residents to contact their legislator," Egan said.

Death Notices

Spotlight Newspapers will print paid Death Notices for relatives and friends who do not or have not lived in the coverage area for each of our weeklies. The charge for a paid death notice is $25.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

Make elections count

It's unofficially official. For Capital District residents that means campaign '06 is under way. Traditionally, Labor Day marks the time when politicians put their campaigns in high gear, and that certainly seems to be the case this season.

Things even started a little early with a half dozen candidates jockeying for a primary win on Sept. 12. Numerous signs dotted the landscape throughout the region, most seeking an opportunity to run for the state Assembly seat being vacated by longtime politician Pat Casale, R-Schaghticoke.

In the next two months, political hopefuls will pound the pavement seeking various positions. The grassroots door-to-door approach is often very effective in our suburban towns, since most people appreciate the personal touch.

Even before Labor Day, Spotlight Newspapers began receiving letters supporting local candidates throughout the region.

We encourage that, and accept letters until the last week before the election.

Spotlight will also cover local candidates in profiles to help people reach an understanding of who's running and what issues the candidates will focus on.

Though Spotlight Newspapers doesn't endorse candidates, we try to encourage voters to make informed choices before casting their ballot.

Happily, there is usually little mudslinging in most of our local contests.

Citizens want to know for the most part that they are listened to and their opinions taken into consideration. Listening is clearly a skill that all political hopefuls should bone up on. Finger pointing and name-calling should have no place in serious campaigns.

Election season provides a wonderful opportunity to help our children understand the political process. Bring it right down to the local level. Talk about what offices are up for election and what those jobs really entail.

Find out what the kids are doing in school to follow the local contests. Encourage teachers to be involved. Many candidates would love the opportunity to visit a classroom. If kids grow up with a sense of ownership, they are more likely to stay involved throughout their lives.

Election time is also a great time to focus on debate and how that is used to present both sides of the story.

The sad reality is that voter turnout in the U.S. is becoming more abysmal with every election that passes.

We need to rekindle our spirit of democracy and work to become part of the process.

Vote Nov. 7.

Editorial

How will you pay for a long life?

By BRIAN JOHNSON

The writer holds his certification in long-term care designation and is registered with the Partnership for Long-Term Care. He is a senior account executive with New York Long-Term Care Brokers, Ltd., in Clifton Park.

Did you know that one in four families in the United States is providing care for someone over the age of 50? That fact, from a survey conducted by the National Alliance for Caregiving and AARP, is one that Sandra Timmerman, Ed.D. quoted in an article in The Journal Of Financial Services Professionals.

The study showed that providing care for a loved one often takes a surprising and exacting toll on the caregiver. Caregiving had a direct impact on the caregiver's job growth opportunities, a significant impact on lifetime wages, caused lost retirement income, and negatively impacted the caregiver's own wealth accumulation opportunities.

Twenty percent of the caregivers surveyed reported serious health problems. Some of the stress that caregivers experience include denial, anger, social withdrawal, anxiety, depression, exhaustion, sleeplessness, irritability, lack of concentration and health problems.

These statistics should not surprise us. Turn on the television or pick up a newspaper and there's sure to be a story about how our nation is aging and how long-term care continues to be a serious social and financial concern.

How does all of this apply to your own decision-making about long-term care insurance?

There are three main issues to consider. The first is understanding and accepting the potential risk of needing care. The second is the cost of these policies. The third is gaining an understanding about how the policies work and when benefits might become payable.

If only there were a crystal ball to tell you if you are ever going to need care, when you will need it, how long you will need it and exactly what it will cost. This is the age-old question about the known versus the unknown.

Many times potential buyers of long-term care insurance will try to make the unknown into the known. Many rationalize that they will never need long-term care because no one in their family ever needed it, nor did any friends. Making a decision about long-term care insurance based upon a hunch that you will not need care can be a very dangerous and costly financial planning decision, especially if you have not done this in other areas of your financial life.

You are probably more aware of whether you are going to need care than whether you are not. You know your health history and the kind of attention you have given to your health over your lifetime. You can probably tell if your lifestyle has either increased or decreased your risk of needing care over the years, but not with complete certainty.

Many of the people who want to buy insurance have serious health problems already, and sometimes insurance professionals cannot find a company to insure them.

When evaluating whether or not you need long-term care insurance, consider that you're insuring an unknown risk. Then, truly evaluate who would provide your care. If it's your spouse or children, consider what kind of impact becoming a caregiver will have on them, and what kind of impact you are willing for it to have.

The average stay in a nursing home today (two to three years) is going to cost somewhere between $175,000 and $210,000. In 10 years, the same average stay — if costs continue to rise at about 5 percent compounded each year — will be between $271,000 and $325,000. If you feel that you can or are willing to self-insure this kind of risk with after tax dollars, then you do not need long-term care insurance.

Let's look at some of the issues relating to self-insurance. The first is to be sure that you understand the true cost of self-insuring. Many people think that they can pay the cost of any potential care from both their income and their investment income, or by earmarking other certain investments to pay for care. But there are two serious factors to take into consideration. Many people had fixed retirement incomes, and could not expect any kind of inflation increase from their monthly pension. This means that as the cost of care continues to rise, more money would be required from other sources like savings and retirement plans to offset inflation.

Also, looking at the required amount needed from other investments to create more income, the additional taxes that would have to be paid in order to "net" the amount needed to pay for care was not worth it. Usually the money would have to come from either qualified savings plans such as IRA accounts, where all of the money withdrawn is taxable, or from mutual fund or stock savings plans where a long-term capital gain tax would be levied.

In either case, the end result was that every dollar withdrawn for the cost of care would equal the need to withdraw anywhere from $1.28 to $1.40 to pay the taxes. Realizing that self-insuring is the most costly and potentially devastating way to plan, other options are likely to be considered.

Long-term care policies generally cost a fraction each year of what even one month or less in a nursing home costs today. Generally, one can expect to recover 10 to 20 years of premium payments within a few months of needing care. For example, let's assume someone buys a policy today, which pays $200 per day for care in a nursing home. With 5 percent compound inflation benefit and an annual premium of $2,500, this person will pay $50,000 in premiums over a 20-year period. Assume that this same person needs nursing home care in 20 years. Because of the inflation protection benefit, the policy will be paying $530 per day in benefits in 20 years. After receiving policy benefits for only 95 days, the person will have recovered all of the premiums paid in the form of benefit payments.

Some may say that's a lot of premiums for something you may never use. That's true, but you have it because you never know for sure. And I doubt that if someone dies so quickly so as to never make a claim on the long-term care policy, that they will leave the world wishing they had not bought their policy!

Another telling statistic is that the average caregiver did not expect the caregiving situation to last as long as it did. The average caregiving responsibility was eight years, with a range from three to 15 years. If you need care, someone is going to have to provide it, and someone is going to have to pay for it.

Your Opinion in the Spotlight

Mom sends off son with words of wisdom

Editor, The Spotlight:

Dear Son,

I wanted you to read this on your first night at college. Your life on your own starts now. Of course, while Dad and I feel like you've left us, we'll never really leave you. You can always come home, wherever we make that home, and we're always there to support you and love you.

At the same time that I'm miserable in certain ways that you're leaving, I am thrilled for you to be where you are. You are finally somewhere that people love learning, somewhere you can let ideas soar, somewhere dedicated to what you like best and do so well — learning about everything. You are finally among students who think, in many ways, the way you do, and who, in spite of very different backgrounds, have had many similar experiences and want what you want.

You get to be master of your own fate, now. You can be a slob or not, you can be organized and calm, or disorganized and anxious. You can eat healthy and exercise, or be unhealthy and miserable. You can do your work and feel confident, or not and fail. You have no baggage. You can be whoever you want to be, with no chip on your shoulder. You are as smart, as funny, as creative and, yes, as handsome, as anyone there. You're a good, kind, affectionate person. Girls (and male friends) will like you as well as anyone else, if you show some self-confidence (without arrogance), and smell nice, and look people in the eye.

You can look around your room and say, I need such and such to be comfortable, and go buy it. You can keep track of your finances or not, but if you don't, you'll end up in a hole. You have the option to be a responsible adult, with money, with people, with your car, and you have the responsibility to be that adult. Living on your own in the environment you are in is a privilege.

You can have fun. Most of the time. You'll have new friends around 24/7 and interesting things to do — after you get your work done. Don't overdo! Remember to look for friends not only in your dorm, but through activities and classes.

Do what you love. It won't all be perfect, so roll with the punches.

You are paying a massive amount of money to be taught, which necessarily involves criticism, so when a professor gives you that critique, use it and grow from it, don't get annoyed.

When you were born, you were lying next to me in the hospital bed, and I thought it was the most natural thing in the world. The fact that you are going to start living your life apart from me is also natural, even though it's hard for me to think about. You are ready to do this and do it with gusto. Jump. Dance. Play. Learn. Find out who you are and what you want. Don't sweat the small stuff. Don't worry about what other people are doing or not doing. Make your own way. Ask for help when you need it. Always do the best you can — don't settle for mediocrity or just getting by.

It's your life, now — always make it an adventure and not a dentist appointment. Oh, I forgot, you like the dentist. How about make it an adventure and not a hike in the mud or monster under the bed? It's a roller coaster — you have the guts to get on, you go up, you come down, you go around, and you feel thrilled when it's over.

Love, Mom

Thanks for support in primary

Editor, The Spotlight:

I write to thank the Bethlehem Independence Party voters for selecting me as their candidate for Bethlehem Town Justice in last week's primary.

I would also like to thank the growing number of volunteers that have helped raise awareness of my campaign.

I am grateful for the trust that you have demonstrated in me and my candidacy. Serving as your town justice has been an extremely rewarding experience.

It has been an honor to give back to the community, which has given me and my family so much. I look forward to the next seven weeks of walking door-to-door and getting to know more of the citizens who make this such a nice place to live.

Again, thank you for the opportunity to serve in this great community. I look forward to the challenges and rewards of helping to protect our quality of life.

Town historian traces Revolutionary roads in travel books

By JIM CUOZZO

It was your typical Northeast fall day in October of 1995 when Raymond Houghton traveled to Schuylerville to visit the Saratoga monument in what would become a trip that in many ways changed his life and began his career as a historical travel writer.

"It was a fairly nice fall afternoon day, and I was the only person visiting," said Houghton.

The monument commemorates the surrender of the British Army to American forces during the Revolutionary War. Houghton, who was teaching computer science at Skidmore College at the time, had been at the monument many years before with his dad, who always enjoyed the Revolutionary history of the region.

"My dad took me to Lake George, and we saw Fort Ticonderoga, Fort William Henry and many other sites," Houghton said. "We have these great sites in New York state that no one seems to know about."

Not long after the Schuylerville visit, Houghton decided to put his computer skills to use creating an Internet site that would show people the many Revolutionary War sites around the portion of U.S. Route 4 that travels through Saratoga County.

"As I researched the subject, I began to see how Route 4 parallels Gen. (John) Burgoyne's invasion from Canada along River Road," Houghton said.

The response Houghton received from visitors to his Web site prompted him to complete a second Revolutionary War Internet travelogue on Route 9, tracing the British attempts to control the Hudson River. From there came more historic travel routes and then the publishing of books with the same information.

"U.S. Route 9 is my most popular book," Houghton said. "I have sold more copies of that book than any other."

Route 9 takes you from Kings Ferry, the southernmost crossing point on the Hudson for American personnel and supplies, through Kinderhook past the Benedict Arnold House and the Gen. John Burgoyne house, ending with the monument in Schuylerville.

"U.S. 9 is a beautiful route," said Houghton, who has written about all eight U.S. routes in New York state plus state Route 5, which runs from the Utica area through the Mohawk River valley, ending in Schenectady. He has also written about the history of the Champlain Canal.

One of Houghton's books garnered him a national award from the 2006 Independent Publishers Book Awards.

"A Revolutionary War Road Trip on U.S. Route 60 from Charlottesville to Yorktown, tracking the end of the British southern campaign across Virginia, won honorable mention," said Houghton.

Each travel book is more than 150 pages long and includes driving directions to sites, photos and maps. The books also include recommendations for places to eat and stay along the way.

When he is not writing Revolutionary War travel books, Houghton works as historian for the town of Bethlehem.

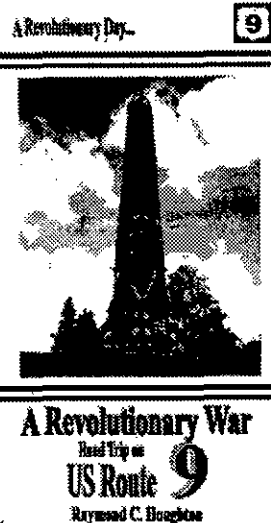

The Bethlehem House and the 1723 Winne House are two local areas of Revolutionary War historical significance according to Houghton.

"The Bethlehem House, or Nicoll House, on Cedar Hill in Selkirk was the home of Col. Francis Nicoll who was active in the first skirmishes that took place in New York state at Battery Park by the Patriot militia to obtain cannons at the park," said Houghton.

Houghton is now as busy as ever writing a book tracing Gen. (Charles) Cornwallis's invasion of the South.

"The book goes from Camden, S.C., an ends up at the Guilford Courthouse," Houghton said. "Unfortunately, most sites were losses for the Americans."

Houghton's historical road trip books are published by Cyber Haus of Delmar and available at local bookstores and Amazon.com. You can also check out Houghton's Web site at www.revolutionaryday.com.

Primary results narrow field of Assembly candidates

By JIM CUOZZO

The field of Assembly candidates in the 108th District has narrowed from six to three, with Martin Reid, Tim Gordon and Keith Hammond set to square off on Election Day.

Martin Reid now has control of the Republican and Conservative lines after his Tuesday, Sept. 12, primary victory over William Reinhardt.

"I'm very happy with the turnout I received from the results," said Reid.

Tim Gordon won both the Democratic and Independence party lines, defeating three other candidates in the Democratic primary.

"It means we're going to get there, and we'll have a seat in the Assembly on Jan. 1," said Gordon.

Bethlehem and Coeymans voters came out in force for Gordon.

"We saw results coming in a very opposite way as the TV stations," said Gordon.

Rensselaer County results were the first to be televised on primary night, indicating Gordon was behind. Gordon, however, was seeing Bethlehem results first, showing him with a large plurality.

"We came out of Bethlehem and Coeymans with 1,000 votes and a 500-vote advantage," said Gordon.

Reid is a Rensselaer County legislator and Gordon is on the Bethlehem town board.

"It's a classic race of this particular district where the Republican candidate is on one side of the river and the Democratic candidate is in Bethlehem," said Reid.

Reid is running on a message of reforming state government, including education funding reform and term limits of eight years for statewide office holders such as the governor and U.S. senators from New York.

Gordon said property tax relief and state reform are both fundamental issues of his campaign. Each man is working the entire district door-to-door.

"My door-to-door response in Bethlehem and Coeymans has been outstanding," said Reid.

Gordon believes having the same two lines as Eliot Spitzer has for governor is an advantage.

"We're certainly delighted to be on the ticket with Eliot Spitzer on both the Democrat and Independence lines," said Gordon.

Reid said he understands getting Republicans to come out and vote this November might be a difficult task because of the commanding lead Spitzer has over his opponent John Faso in all the polls.

"I think it has been difficult on both sides to get out the vote," said Reid. "There has been a steady across-the-board decline in participation."

Reid believes his obstacles are no different than those of the current Assemblyman representing the 108th District, Pat Casale.

"He was victorious in 2002, and I thought my results were very good last night," said Reid.

Gordon said he has spent around $15,000 so far securing a primary victory.

"The fundraising process should get easier now that I have secured two lines," said Gordon.

Keith Hammond, the runner-up in the Democratic primary was able to secure the Working Family line over Ronald Coalts. The 108th Assembly District is composed of parts of Rensselaer, Columbia, Greene and Albany counties, including six towns in Rensselaer, and Bethlehem and Coeymans in Albany County.

In the race for Bethlehem Town Justice, newly appointed justice Ryan Donovan defeated Brian Murphy for a spot on the Independence line on Election Day. The vote count was Donovan with 244 votes and Murphy with 106 votes. Murphy is already on both the Republican and Conservative lines in November, and Donovan now holds the Democrat and Independence lines.

Busing issues on agenda

By ROB IRWIN

Getting students to where they need to go at the end of each school day has raised a concern from at least one staff member in the Voorheesville Central School District.

"From what I'm seeing, it's getting worse and worse each year," said Michael Goyer, the district's transportation supervisor, during the Sept. 11 school board meeting.

With the growing number of after-school activities, single-parent homes, and parents' varying work schedules, more kids have multiple destinations each afternoon.

According to Goyer, who spends the summer planning bus routes, Bus Route Two initially was expected to carry 58 students, but as school approached the number of students on the route jumped into the 70s, forcing Goyer to re-evaluate the routing.

"It gets to be confusing," said Goyer, who has been with the school district since 1996.

Goyer said the multiple pick-up and drop-off points for elementary school students causes problems in timing bus routes as well as staying under each bus' 59 person capacity.

"It causes an instability with the number of students on a bus on any given day," said Goyer. "In the whole realm of things my biggest concern, of course, is the children."

Superintendent Linda Langevin said she was unaware until the concern was raised at the board meeting that a problem may exist at all. After some discussion, board president David Gibson asked Langevin to further investigate the issue.

"We are looking into it," said Langevin, who added that one thing that needs to be addressed is whether there is a problem in the first place. "It's too early (to know)."

Voorheesville Elementary School Principal Kenneth Lein agreed that the school's students are making more multiple stops but said he thought any problem would resolve itself.

"I don't see it as a major issue," said Lein. "Many of the kids will fall into a routine."

The problem arises, said Lein, when students wait too long to hand over notes from parents informing the school that a different bus is going to be needed, but said it could be attributable to the beginning of the new school year.

"It makes the daily life at the end of the day very difficult," said Lein, who said that sometimes the challenge is finding out if the student is "going to mom's, or grandma's or the babysitter's."

"Once things shake out," said Lein, "it'll probably be just a few students."

According to Lein, the students who have a consistent weekly schedule are not at fault.

"Most people let us know, right up front and put it in writing," said Lein. "Parents are doing a good job in getting it spelled out for us."

At the board meeting, vice president C. James Coffin worried about the situation becoming unmanageable.

"I see it becoming a tremendous management issue," said Coffin. "This sets up a situation where it's easy to lose kids."

Langevin said that she would meet with Goyer to discuss the existence of a problem and work out possible resolutions, if needed. Lein seemed confident the issue would be addressed properly by the administration.

"We'll make sure we'll come up with plans to get everyone where they're supposed to go," he said.

The truth about women and money

By Ruth H. Mahoney
Senior Vice President
KeyBank

Over the course of a lifetime, women earn less money than men. How much less? According to the U.S. Department of Labor, nearly 30 percent less. And the traditional reason why—a disparity in wages—no longer applies. In fact, the primary reason why is much more subtle but equally revealing. Historically, women have taken 11 years more time off of work during their careers than men.

This information is important because women live longer than men yet earn less money than men. Thereby, women have less saving and investing power than men and are not as well prepared for retirement or sudden financial responsibility—whether through death or a divorce—as men.

However, the tide is changing. More and more women are taking control of their financial lives, and more and more women are accumulating wealth. They are even taking the entrepreneurial plunge at twice the rate of men, and their ventures (there are more than 10 million women-owned businesses in the United States) generate more than $2.5 trillion in annual revenue. While this is exciting and encouraging, it does not necessarily translate into responsible money management and long-term investment practices. Too many women are still behind when it comes to their financial health, and this doesn't have to be the case. Women should not be afraid of money.

Overcoming fear

Some men jokingly may ask, "Women, afraid of money?" There's nothing funny about it, and it is a very real barrier that has been culturally reinforced for many years by not teaching girls about financial responsibility at a young age and by encouraging young women to defer to men when making financial decisions. As a result, many women, particularly baby boomer's and the generation before them, are scared of making financial decisions. They don't feel knowledgeable and, according to a study by the National Center for Women and Retirement Research, they "avoid making decisions out of fear of making a mistake."

Therefore, removing fear and helping women gain a better understanding of how they can more effectively manage their money—from savings to basic investing strategies—is the first step toward financial independence. This begins with getting involved and getting started.

Getting involved means starting to invest as early as possible and as aggressively as possible. Most women begin investing at a later age than men and are overly conservative in their planning.

Getting started means finding and working with a financial planner. Get referrals from professional and personal contacts, and attend local financial planning seminars. It is important to select a professional who respects your values and can help you achieve your short- and long-term goals. Professional financial advisors will also help you understand the risk/reward potential of your investments, which is critical when developing your financial plan.

Developing a Plan

Every financial plan begins with two fundamental things: (1) setting goals and objectives, and (2) managing or eliminating debt and creating a realistic budget. This is true whether you make a little or a lot of money.

Managing or eliminating debt (the strategic use of "debt" can be an effective money management and tax tool if done correctly) for most women means managing / paying off credit card balances and parting ways with plastic spending power. It's hard to invest in your future when you are paying upwards of 10 percent in interest on purchases made on credit.

Budgets, on the other hand, mean different things to different people. For those women who think budgets are overwhelming and painful, consider this: a budget is a spending plan, with the end result being that you can buy things for both today and tomorrow. In addition, budgets can help individuals and families choose a long-term course of action that accelerates the realization of financial goals, such as buying a house (or second house), providing children with a college education and retiring early. More important, budgets are the safety net that sets the foundation for aggressive investing, so that when a woman becomes responsible for her own financial well being—because nine out of ten women will be at some point in their lives—she can be in control. And control begins with planning.

- 401 (k) plans. Among the best retirement vehicles, employer 401(k) plans not only allow individuals an opportunity to make pretax contributions, but they also allow earnings to grow tax-deferred until retirement. Even better, some companies match a portion of their employees' contributions. So regardless how you look at it, not participating in a 401(k) program if one is available to you is equivalent of walking away from free money.

- Individual retirement accounts (IRAs). A traditional IRA, like 401(k) plans, allows pretax contributions to grow tax deferred. This means that what you would otherwise pay in taxes on an annual basis is a source of additional income. The Roth IRA, on the other hand, allows after-tax contributions to grow tax free, provided you wait until the age of 59 to withdraw the money.

Still, because women earn only 68 cents for every dollar men earn in similar professions, women are at a high risk of outliving their earnings. Traditional retirement plans are often not enough, which is why developing a solid investment plan is so important. So what does a solid investment plan look like?

A solid investment plan includes the following:

- Regular contributions, which drives the compounding of earnings. For example, an individual in their mid-20s who invests $2,000 a year for only eight years (a $16,000 total contribution) will earn more money by the age of 65 than an individual in their mid-30s who begins investing $2,000 a year for 30 years (a $60,000 total contribution).

- An assessment of risk tolerance, translated into a targeted return rate that also accounts for the rate of inflation and taxes

- Defined financial objectives, encompassing short-term, mid-term and long-term goals.

- A diversified portfolio. Women tend to place their assets in low-yield, safe investment vehicles as opposed to higher-growth potential stocks. A sound investment plan balances both, tilting either toward conservative or aggressive based upon individual risk tolerance.

- A targeted return rate that accounts for the rate of inflation and taxes.

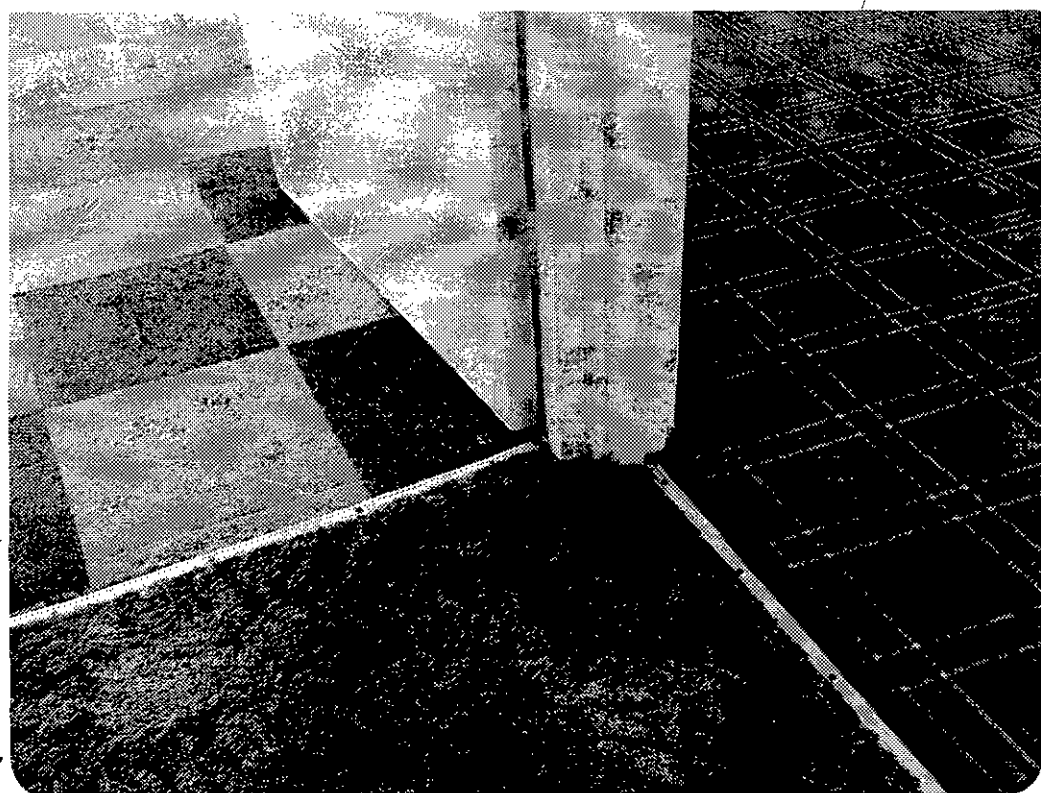

Achieving Financial Independence...and Beyond

It is not an overstatement to say that people, both men and women, work hard so that they can provide better lives for themselves and the ones they love. Additionally, women tend to be philanthropic in nature with a strong desire to be charitable to those not so well-off. The goal is to accumulate or attain wealth, to achieve financial freedom. Along the way, women must not overlook the need for protecting their capacity to build wealth as well as the wealth that has already been created. Therefore, insurance and estate planning should be a part of every financial plan. And an experienced financial advisor, a skilled professional that a woman can trust with her hopes and dreams, can ensure that this happens. Because if we, as women, are going to live longer than men, we may as well do it as comfortably and financially secure as we can. Not only will it be good for us, but it also sends a message to the generations of women that will follow us: you can have it all and live well doing it.

Board vote puts senior housing project one step forward

By ROB IRWIN

A proposed senior housing development in New Scotland is one step closer to breaking ground after a town board meeting last week.

Charles M. Carrow, Sr., the chief executive officer and president of Carrow Real Estate Services, presented a submission to the New Scotland town-board on Wednesday, Sept. 13, to begin the formal application for the proposed senior housing development along New Scotland Road.

The New Scotland Town Board voted 4-0, with one abstention from councilwoman Deborah Baron, in favor of approving the project to go before the planning board for consideration.

The development would consist of 30 one-story units that would be occupied by residents 55 and older. Carrow said the houses would likely be sold in the range of $300,000.

"Looking at the overall need of not only New Scotland, but the region, there's a need for market-rate housing," said Carrow, who said that in the next 30 years, more than 70 million baby boomers are headed into retirement.

"We thought this was an opportunity to meet the tremendous need of the baby boomers moving forward," said Carrow.

At the meeting, the project's architect, Chris Dennis, said each unit would have two bedrooms, and the units would be built to accommodate the needs of retirees.

"Basically, they'll be accessible," said Dennis. "That's the key."

On the outside, the units would be designed to match other buildings in the area.

"Conceptually, we'll make sure it fits in very nicely with the rest of the community," said Carrow.

According to Carrow, when the units are completed they would be easily filled.

"We have honestly received a tremendous amount of calls from people who are very interested," said Carrow. "We're very excited."

The next step for the project is to go before the planning board for review. According to Town Supervisor Ed Clark, the planning board would then evaluate what is needed to make the project viable.

Clark said they would be looking at "whether it has what is needed to make it a satisfactory part of the community."

The project has raised some concerns.

"There's a little ambivalence about the it because it is in a commercial district," said Clark, adding that the development would occupy one more piece of land that won't contribute to the town's commercial tax base.

On the flip side, Clark said the town does have a need for senior housing.

The development has an additional benefit. At the August meeting of the town board, Carrow estimated the school tax generated from the development's residents would be approximately $167,000, with no impact on the school district.

In order to speed along the process, Carrow said he hoped to move forward with the planning process while the town took the required steps to approve the project.

"In a perfect world," said Carrow, "we would like to commence construction in the spring."

NYSTI to audition young actors

The New York State Theatre Institute will hold auditions on Thursday, Sept. 28 to fill the role of Zuzu in this season's holiday production of A Wonderful Life, with book and lyrics by Sheldon Harnick and music by Joe Raposo. The production is directed by Patricia Di Benedetto Snyder.

Zuzu is the youngest daughter of George and Mary Bailey. NYSTI is seeking performers between 5 and 7 years old and not taller than 4 feet.

NYSTI is also looking for performers to play Zuzu's sisters and brother. The sisters should be between 9 and 10 years old and no taller than 5 feet. The brother should be between 10 and 11 years old and no taller than 5 feet.

Each auditioner must have a memorized monologue of one minute or less, as well as one song and sheet music. An accompanist will be provided. Each also should bring a photograph and resume.

During rehearsals, Nov. 6 - 22, performers must be available weekdays after school and all day Sundays. Rehearsals will be full time during the technical and dress rehearsal period, Nov. 26 - 30. Performances run Dec. 1 - 16, Tuesday through Friday mornings, Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons, with Mondays off.

Auditions will take place Sept. 28 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Little Theatre on the Russell Sage College campus in Troy. No appointment is necessary. Auditions are open call, in order of sign-in. For information, call 274-3200.

Is Curtain Call's 'The Foreigner' as American as apple pie?

By W.K. AARON

The setting is a backwoods lodge in Georgia. A lovable but boring professional proofreader, there on vacation, outwits a scheming preacher and his accomplice with the Ku Klux Klan, to keep the lodge property in the family. To do so, he must pretend, for an act and a half, to speak no English at all. That is the convoluted premise of the late Larry Shue's play, "The Foreigner," opening the seventh season at Curtain Call Theatre in Latham.

The show combines humor and drama to present an interesting look at the human condition, still very accurate nearly 25 years after its 1983 premier. The show centers on Charlie Baker, who is dragged to the lodge to relax for a few days. Shy and uncomfortable speaking to strangers, or in fact speaking to anyone at all, his friend, Froggy, concocts a cover story that Charlie is a foreigner who understands no English. Amazing how people react or act when they think the person in the room has no idea what they are saying. We watch the other characters interact with Charlie, using him as sounding board, the brunt of jokes, hatred, and even the pure affection one has for a child learning new things every day in the world around him.

Jack Fallon and Ian LaChance conspire for the good of mankind in "The Foreigner."

The two-act show is lengthy at two hours and 40 minutes. Curtain Call's director Marna Lawrence has kept the script intact. The show's pacing might have been well served by a bit of director's editing of some of the more extraneous parts. Cutting 15 or 20 minutes would have treated the audience to a tight, funny and moving production. As it is, the show can be prodigiously slow, particularly in the lengthy opening scene. Once the play gets on its feet, it begins to move along.

Perhaps the funniest section is a wordless game of Mirror — a ballet for two men, a breakfast table, and two empty juice glasses. Or perhaps it's the story of Little Red Riding Hood told in Eastern European gibberish.

The cast is well chosen for this opening production. Dan Kelly as Charlie is a pure delight. He captures wide-eyed innocence and knowing intellect with the look of an eye or lift of an eyebrow. Ian LaChance makes his Curtain Call debut in the role of the Rev. David Lee, the preacher who is going to bring back the pure white Christian race to America with the help of the Ku Klux Klan. LaChance takes firm control of the stage as we watch his unerring ability to twist things enough to almost convince the audience what he is doing is for the common good.

Chris Cook is Ellard; the simpleton who, much like the Scarecrow in "The Wizard of Oz," proves that what's inside is what makes us smart, not what we learn in books. Cook's rendition is most believable. Rie Lee and Aubrey Tighe are perfectly cast in their respective roles as Betty, the old woman who owns the family lodge, and Catherine, the Georgia debutante who fears her life may be for naught. Both women shine in their roles, particularly Tighe whose character grows and matures the most throughout the play.

Area regular Ted Zeltner and Jack Fallon round out the ensemble. Though on opening night both men seemed to have some trouble with misspoken and dropped lines, they were able to carry off their parts in fine form.

Zeltner in particular has some wonderful comedic moments and makes the most of the smallest part in the show, proving the old adage that there are no small parts, only small actors. His looks, sneers and bottled-up frustration spew forth.

Michael Blau's set design proves once again what ingenuity and a good eye can do with a small acting space. Denise Dygert's costumes beautifully round out the feeling of the play. In all, "The Foreigner" gives one pause to think about the way we look at ourselves and the way we look at others. The audience is given the opportunity to laugh while at the same time being forced to look at the mirror being presented on stage to see what parts reflect back their images. As we commemorate the fifth anniversary of 9-11, "The Foreigner" makes some very interesting statements on humankind.

The play runs Wednesday and Thursday evenings at 7:30, Friday and Saturday nights at 8, and Sunday matinees at 2. Ticket are $20. For information, call the box office at 877-7529 or visit the Web at www.curtaincalltheatre.com.

College admissions is the topic at the library this season

College. Choosing one, getting in and paying the bill is a complicated proposition for students and parents. Mark your calendars for two helpful library programs this fall.

If you are concerned about the high cost of education, how to save for college, and how the financial aid system really works, come to "The College Funding Dilemma" next Tuesday, Sept. 26 at 7 p.m.

Steven Piccolino, financial advisor for The Affinity Group in Albany, will provide valuable guidelines and strategies. The program is designed for parents of children of all ages, and is a must for parents with children in high school.

Next month, on Wednesday Oct. 11 at 7 p.m., Jill Rifkin of College Options in Delmar returns to guide high school students and parents through each step of the college admissions process.

In "Navigate the college admissions maze: strategies that work," learn how to highlight personal strengths, write com-PELLING essays and applications, prepare for interviews, solicit recommendations, and select appropriate high school courses and extracurricular activities.

Merits and drawbacks of early-decision application will also be discussed. The program will include mock college interviews and a question-and-answer session.

A member of the Independent Educational Consultants Association, Rifkin has headed College Options for 12 years. She has visited more than 380 colleges in 27 states and guided hundreds of students through the college admissions process.

Our library shelves hold several current publications for parents and students asking questions about college, financial aid, and careers. Topics include SAT test preparation, college financing, College Board scholarships, and available internships.

You'll also find profiles for two- and four-year colleges in the U.S., a multivolume encyclopedia of careers and vocational guidance, and copies of the current FAFSA, "Free Application for Federal Student Aid."

You can go online at www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org, click on the Search tab at the top of the page, then on "adult education and college," the first item on the topics list. You'll find information and links for financial aid and scholarships, area colleges, test preparation and the FAFSA application form. Don't hesitate to ask a librarian if you need help locating and using these excellent resources.

State Senate passes parity bill called 'Timothy's Law'

The state Senate passed "Timothy's Law," sponsored by Sen. Tom Libous, R-Binghamton, to provide parity in insurance coverage for mental illnesses. The legislation would require insurance companies to cover most mental illnesses and would require coverage for a broad range of mental illnesses and conditions specifically related to children. The bill reflects an agreement with the state Assembly that was reached at the end of the regular legislative session.

State Senate Majority Leader Joseph L. Bruno, R-Brunswick and Libous were joined by Tom O'Clair of Rotterdam, whose 12-year-old son Timothy took his own life in 2001 after repeated bouts of depression.

"I'm very pleased that we've been able to work together to craft this bill that we're passing today in remembrance of Timothy, and to help other individuals affected by mental illness," said Libous. "Not only is this legislation providing access to mental health coverage, but it also has built in safeguards to protect small businesses and their employees."

"Mental illness can result in tragedy if it is not properly treated.

This legislation would provide parity in coverage and help people get the treatment they need," said Bruno.

"Today is a landmark day for New Yorkers suffering with mental illness and disorders," said Tom O'Clair. "It's a wonderful testament to what the Legislature can accomplish when they work together, and a heartfelt tribute to Timothy. I thank the Senate and look forward to the Assembly's return so they can pass it as well."

The bill now goes to the state Assembly.

IN BRIEF

Name that school

The Bethlehem Central School District is now accepting entries for its contest to name the district's new elementary school to be located on Van Dyke Road across the street from the high school. All district residents are encouraged to enter.

Entries may be submitted individually or as a group (for example, students by grade, house, class, etc.) and must include an explanation for the suggested name.

"We are extremely excited about getting the entire community involved in this initiative," said Superintendent Les Loomis. "We're looking forward to receiving a variety of entries with creative and innovative names."

Entries must be submitted by Tuesday, October 10. Entries will be accepted in writing via mail, fax or e-mail to Bethlehem Central's Communications Office at 90 Adams Place, Delmar 12054. Fax: 518-475-0352, E-mail: webadmin@bcsd.neric.org.

The board of education will review entries and select three finalists during its October 18 board meeting. Students in grades kindergarten through 12 throughout the district will vote on the finalists in school during the last week of October to determine the winning name. The new name will be announced at the board of education meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 1.

Construction of the new elementary school is planned as part of the district's $93 million building project, approved by voters in 2003. The new sixth elementary school will create space for future enrollment growth and relieve current overcrowding at all of the district's elementary schools. The project is expected to break ground in the spring of 2007 and the school is expected to be ready for the 2008-09 school year.

For an entry form contact Bethlehem Central's communications office at 439-3650 or webadmin@bcsd.neric.org.

Vendors wanted for Ravena craft fair

Vendors are sought for an Oct. 14 craft fair at Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk middle school. The craft fair will run from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the middle school, located at 2025 Route 9W in Ravena.

The event supports the school's Holiday Program, which provides gifts for middle school students and their families who are experiencing difficult financial times during the holiday season.

Middle school faculty and staff, as well as the Natural Helpers Club, run the holiday program, which last year provided assistance to more than 30 students and their families. Officials hope to expand the program this year.

Vendor space costs $15. Anyone interested in selling wares at the event should call 756-5200 ext. 3016 or 928-3979.

McNulty wins primary with overwhelming majority

By JIM CUOZZO

After 38 years of serving as everything from town supervisor to Congressman, U.S. Rep. Michael McNulty, D-Green Island, takes no victory for granted. McNulty received overwhelming support from his constituents with a victory of more than 70 percent against his Democratic primary rival Thomas Raleigh in the Tuesday, Sept. 12 primary race for the 21st District seat.

"I am absolutely ecstatic," said McNulty from his Washington office the day after his victory. "I never expected in my wildest dreams to receive over 85 percent of the vote."

The unofficial vote count from last week's primary showed McNulty receiving 24,106 votes and Raleigh receiving 4,080 votes.

McNulty will face Republican Warren Redlich of Guiderland in November.

McNulty has served in the House of Representatives for 18 years, and if he wins in January, it will be his 10th victory in a Congressional race.

Michael McNulty

"A good representative in Congress needs to generally reflect the views of his constituency," said McNulty.

McNulty said lobbying for federal funding for many district needs is one of his strengths.

"I have obtained funding for the Albany Airport, Rensselaer train station, Albany Medical Center, RPI and a whole range of organizations," said McNulty.

According to the Congressman, Democrats appear to be poised to gain control over state government and possibly the House of Representatives.

"The Senate is a steeper climb, where six seats are needed, but I speculate Democrats will pick up five seats," he said.

McNulty said a Democratic wave is sweeping the nation and the state, and he speculated about what a Democratic majority in the House of Representatives could mean.

"It would mean Charlie Rangel, D-N.Y., would be chair of ways and means; Louise Slaughter, D-N.Y., would chair the rules committee; and I would be sub-committee chair," said McNulty.

McNulty said the importance behind these moves would mean Democrats would get to set the agenda and determine what bills hit the floor.

"It is an exciting time," McNulty said. "I have been in the majority, and I have been in the minority. It's a hell of a lot more fun to be in the majority."

Iraq has been the major issue in Washington since the war on terror began after the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11, 2001. McNulty said President George W. Bush has wasted time and money and has cost many American lives by spending the military's time in Iraq instead of hunting down terrorist Osama Bin Laden, the man behind the 9/11 attacks.

"He (President Bush) hardly even mentions Osama bin Laden," said McNulty. "He took our resources out of Afghanistan and put them in Iraq."

McNulty said he believes bin Laden continues to hide in the rugged terrain along the vast Afghanistan-Pakistan border.

"If we had devoted $300 billion and 150,000 American troops to go after Bin Laden, does anybody think he would be alive today?" McNulty asked.

Sunday workshops focus on the art of collecting

Whether you are interested in old clothes, quilts or buttons, farm tools, first editions or kitchen kitsch, there may be a Voorheesville Public Library program coming up for you. The Library Friends are beginning a series of Sunday afternoon workshops designed to acquaint you with the art of collecting by experts in different fields.

The first guest speaker will be John Rudzinski, member of the Capital Region Antique Bottle and Insulator Club, who will talk about bottle collecting on Sunday, Sept. 24 at 2 p.m. You are encouraged to bring your own bottles to show and ask questions about. No signup is necessary. Suggestions for future programs may be directed to Melissa Biggé at 765-7284.

Homework help for parents

Learn research sources (besides Google!) for your kids in grades 4-9 to get reliable information from a home computer on current events and more. At 7 p.m. on Wednesday,

Voorheesville Public Library

Sept. 27, VPL librarians will take you on a virtual tour and give you a chance to do your own hands-on practice searching the databases. Space is limited. Call the reference desk to register.

Nimblefingers 14th anniversary party

This party will celebrate the group, their love of needlework and the library that has supported the program since it began in 1992 under the guidance of librarian Dorothy Colvin. Please join us for good food and good company on Tuesday, Sept. 26 at 1 p.m.

Nimblefingers has a new blog! Check the library Web site under adult programs to find out what's going on or what's coming up in Nimblefingers. We'll keep you posted on the latest pictures, projects, etc. from our crafty ladies.

Book chatters

This group for middle schoolers who love fantasy will discuss Stravaganza: City of Masks by Mary Hoffman on Saturday, Sept. 30 at 10:30 a.m. This novel is about a teen stricken with brain cancer who travels between two worlds; the present and an enchanted 16th century city called Bellezza. Sign up at the reference desk and pick up a copy of the book.

Grades 2-3 can sign up now and receive a copy of Jake Drake: Teacher's Pet by Andrew Clements for a discussion on Oct. 6.

College planning

Sally Ten Eyck will present a working session on college applications and essays for high school seniors on Tuesday, Sept. 26 at 7 p.m. Sign-up is required. Call the library at 765-2791.

Disaster preparedness

Jack Fenimore, author of Surviving Terrorism: A Basic Family Guide, will be at VPL on Wednesday, Sept. 20 at 7 p.m. to outline basic steps that prepare ordinary people for the consequences of disasters.

In conjunction with this program, on Tuesday, Oct. 3 at 7 p.m. Brian Nussbaum will talk about Counter-Terrorism Issues; Major Cities at Risk. No signup is required for either program.

Wishes for our world

Add your wish to the collection appearing in Nichols Market window! VPL is providing people an opportunity to reflect on their hopes for our world by writing their own personal Wish for Our World on a (free) star. Our goal is to have wishes on 3,000 colored stars—one for every person who died on Sept. 11, 2001. Stars are also on display at the library.

Ongoing programs

Sign up now and receive a copy of the book, Saturday by Ian McEwan, for the Wednesday, Oct. 4, adult fiction book discussion.

Lifelines prose writers meet Sept. 21 at 7 p.m. The Thursday Poets meet again on Thursday, Sept. 28. Neither group requires signup. You may call the library for information at 765-2791.

Art and display

Gina Keith invites you to an artist's reception at VPL on Saturday, Sept. 23 from 12:30 p.m.-2:30 p.m.

'Model Citizens' exhibit explores life in miniature

By GRAHAM S. PARKER

The Albany International Airport Gallery held the reception for its latest collection of works Friday, Sept. 15.

The exhibit "Model Citizens: Giant Size," is an exhibition and documentary video by Troy artist Michael Oatman.

For nearly a year, Oatman documented the work of artists, model makers and hobbyists in three states, including those in his native Capital District. After compiling and showing his footage of what are often thought of as obsessive and complex works, many wanted to see the results in person, said Oatman.

The installment at Albany International will be the largest and last stop of an exhibit that shows both the peculiar and pragmatic sides of model making.

"The show goes from the innocent and playful to things that are astute and shrewd in their thinking. It's the proverbial something for everyone," said Oatman, the curator for the exhibit at the airport.

The works include video segments of miniature toy soldiers posed in action, incomplete car models on blocks, and mock model kits poking at post-World War II concepts of male sexuality.

The American Precision Museum of Windsor, Vt., offered a collection of working miniaturized mechanic and machinist tools. The exhibit also includes the works of Delmar artist Danny Goodwin.

Goodwin's 12 mock surveillance systems are suspended by large helium balloons above unsuspecting airport patrons below. Inside the exhibit, Goodwin displays 12 videos playing in a continuous loop of models he made of the homes and properties of other Daniel Goodwins around the world.

Other models include replicas of Jerry Seinfeld's apartment, as shown in the early years of the comedy series "Seinfeld." The model includes every detail from the miniature can of JIF in the cupboard to the Porsche posters and suspended mountain bike in the background. Behind the model, or backstage as it would appear, are the tools and materials the artist used to make the models.

"We think it is an intriguing group of hobbyists," said Sharon Bates, Airport Gallery curator. "It is a type of exhibit that has broad appeal. That's what we like to do up here in the gallery."

"Model Citizens" began last February when Oatman was asked to submit work as part of an upcoming event in Cambridge, Mass. Once into the initial planning of his installment, Oatman turned to the artists and model makers themselves.

After putting out posters calling for model makers and hobbyists, he toiled through many artists' works before settling on the 21 featured at the Albany gallery. After filming for several months, The final product shows the creativity, commitment and stories that spend their days as giants, said Oatman.

All the featured works push the boundaries of conventional model making, he said.

The film that inspired the "Model Citizens" show will be shown at the airport's observation area overlooking the tarmac Tuesday, Sept. 26, at 7 p.m.

"Model Citizens: Giant Size," opened to the public Aug. 11, and will run until Sunday, Oct. 22.

"It's the proverbial something for everyone."

Economic Development Director George Leveille (shirt and tie) reviews aerial map of a hamlet off Route 35 near New Scotland Road with Slingerland residents and design consultants during a three day scooping session at town hall. The sessions are designed to create a community friendly atmosphere of new planned development.

forward-thinking process is making Bethlehem one of the best places to live in the Capital Region."

Todd Fabozzi, program manager and geographic information specialist from the Capital District Regional Planning Commission, presented a slide show of four different locations in Westminster, Stapleton, and Belmar, Colo., along with one in Portland, Ore., that changed the look of their communities through a public/private partnership beginning with the Charette design process.

"These are four examples of new towns built, two of them reusing existing sites and three of them in suburban areas," said Fabozzi.

A characteristic "hamlet" features retail, recreational and housing uses, along with entertainment uses for theater and the arts.

A resident of Slingerlands asked if the town is going to use eminent domain proceedings to develop the hamlet site.

"There is no eminent domain here," said assistant economic developer for the town, Michael Morelli. "This plan is for willing property owners to participate; there is no plan to take people's property."

According to supporters, advantages to a hamlet-style development include pedestrian access to stores, a common environment for people to work and play, and a physically attractive neighborhood. Disadvantages can include pedestrian safety, uncontrolled congestion and a day-only destination with no nighttime draw.

Consultant Burt Wolf facilitated the three meetings. Developers representing Peacock Development and Vista Technology Park were at the sessions.

"We refined and concluded the session with a couple of different looks on how this might unfold," said Leveille. Officials are looking at making the proposed site a traditional village with a variety of retail, recreational and other community uses.

team of Terence Kindlon and Laurie Shanks, and Michael McDermott and David Rossi from the Albany County District Attorney's office. Christopher Porco was interviewed by CBS show producers at the Albany County jail on Aug. 30, at 9 a.m. for 45 minutes.

"We received a letter from Mr. Kindlon on Aug. 28 confirming the 48 Hours show interview," said Albany County Sheriff James Campbell. "The letter read please be advised this is the only interview we are approving," Campbell said.

The only people allowed in the room with Porco were a correction officer, attorney Laurie Shanks, and the CBS TV crew. Producers would not reveal what Christopher Porco had to say during the 30-minute interview. Porco reportedly requested to be allowed to wear a suit jacket and even asked for hair gel for the interview but was denied both requests. Instead, he was interviewed in his yellow jailhouse clothes. Elaine LaForte of Bethlehem Veterinary Hospital was also interviewed for the show. Porco, who was an employee at the veterinary hospital, stayed at the home of John Kearney and LaForte after his indictment and throughout the trial proceedings. In August, Christopher Porco was convicted by an Orange County jury of murdering his father Peter Porco with an ax and attempting to murder his mother Joan Porco during the overnight hours of Nov. 14 and 15, 2004, at their Brockley Drive home.

Sentencing is scheduled for Oct. 25, three days before the CBS show's air date. Christopher Porco faces a maximum of 50 years in a state maximum correctional facility. Authorities believe Christopher Porco drove from the University of Rochester campus to Delmar the night of Nov. 14, 2004, and attacked his parents while they were asleep in the early-morning hours of Nov. 15, before driving back to the University of Rochester campus, where he was seen around 8:30 a.m. the next morning. News of the murder shocked the community, and a year after the attacks, the Albany County District Attorney's office handed an indictment against the Porcos' younger son, Christopher, who was 22 at the time of the attacks.

Pre-trial hearings were held in May, and the trial began in June and lasted eight weeks until a conviction has handed down in a little over six hours by a jury of eight women and four men. Porco's attorney Kindlon is in the process of filing an appeal on the murder conviction. Peter Porco was the chief law clerk for 3rd Division State Appellate Court Judge Anthony Cardona in Albany when he was murdered. Joan Porco was working as a speech therapist at Schalmont School prior to the attack.

Campbell said Porco has been a quiet prisoner so far.

"He mostly reads and keeps to himself," said Campbell. "He gets a lot of mail from young females from the Delmar area."

Local dance school stays in step for 5 decades

By GRAHAM S. PARKER

Eleanor Leonardi hung up her signature red dancing shoes long ago.

On occasion, the 71-year-old dance instructor and founder of Eleanor's School of Dance may take them out to fill in for someone when needed. The shoes are typically met with a range of remarks from students, instructors and her children.

Red shoes, and the remarks they may bring, aside, one thing is certain: When Leonardi walks across any one of the stages of her regional dance studios, she is met with the respect of a dancer with more than 60 years of experience.

Since its meager beginnings in Albany five decades ago, the school has expanded to include studios in Clifton Park, Colonie, Delmar and East Greenbush.

This year Eleanor's School of Dance marks its 50th year in business.

"Long time, huh?" said Leonardi, before she reported to the main studio on Central Avenue in Colonie. "I don't think you ever look to the long term when you first start out."

In those days, one didn't need the money they would now to open their own successful dance studio, she said. It was simple back then.

As a 20-something, Leonardi would make her way around to several Albany locations with a box of records, shoes (not the red ones) and a phonograph to teach dance. She opened her first studio in 1956 at 204 Lark St. in Albany.

Dancing came at an early age for Leonardi. As a student at the since-demolished Albany PS4 at the corner of Madison Avenue and Ontario Street, Leonardi took dancing as part of after-school activities. The classes were once a week at 40 cents a lesson.

Her love for dancing kept her coming back each week. Eventually, Leonardi enrolled in a local private studio on North Pearl Street and began dancing with local producers.

In high school, her dancing was elevated to a new level when she worked with Tommy Sternfeld, the producer of WRGB's "The Teenage Barn."

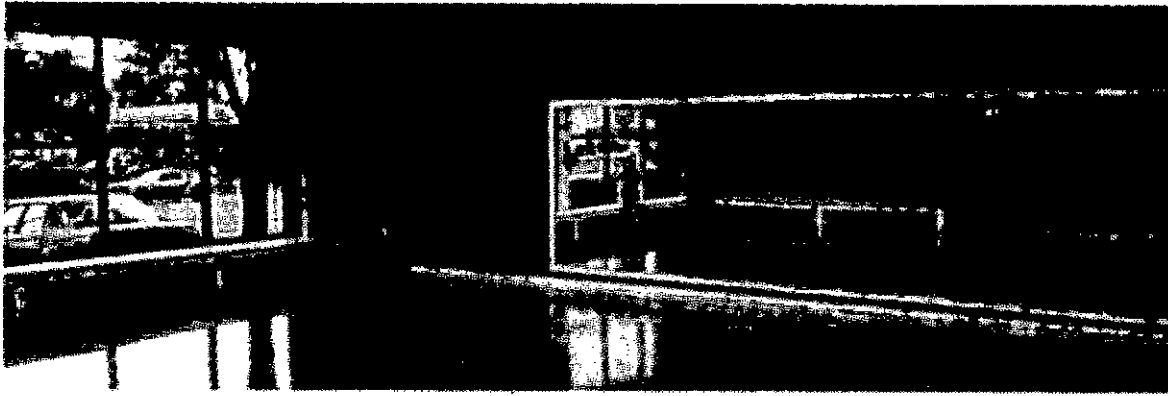

The show first aired in April 1948 and was telecast for 17 years. The program's last air date was Jan. 29, 1965, when it was third in the time period, right behind "Meet the Press" and "The Ed Sullivan Show," according to WRGB's Web site.

The show featured talented student performers from the area. As many as 40 young people appeared on each show on Thursdays at 7 p.m. for a half-hour segment.

Leonardi taught at Sternfeld's studio and continued her lessons at local schools, teaching classes similar to ones she took as a child.

"I worked all through high school with Tommy Sternfeld. It eventually led to me owning my own studio," she said. "I was lucky because I taught in the school systems. What happened was that the kids wanted more."

As in her case, Leonardi's students weren't satisfied with the half-hour classes. Like she had done, they enrolled at private studios. By that time, Leonardi Eleanor Leonardi surveys her dance studio on Central Avenue in Albany.

Graham Parker/Spotlight

became known for her instruction, and many began flocking to her Lark Street school of dance.

The rest is history.

Dancing is in Leonardi's blood. Although she hasn't performed in some time and hasn't been a regular teacher in 18 years, Leonardi's children and grand-children have gone on to fill her red shoes.

"Every once in a while, we make her break out the red shoes," said Christie Pantalone, 42, Leonardi's daughter.

Pantalone has been with the school since she was 2 and has taught for 24 years. Her daughter, 6, dances with the school.

The list of family includes Leonardi's sister, Marilyn D'Amelia, daughters and granddaughters. It's the family owned feel and instruction that people like, said Pantalone.

"We have such a reputation in the area. People look it up in the phone book, and it's a name people recognize," she said.

Eleanor's School of Dance has produced many award-winning amateur and professional dancers. It recently remodeled its studios with new paint schemes and refinished hardwood floors.

The school offers classes at the beginner through competitive levels, beginning at age 2-1/2 through adult.

Dancing instruction provides vital skills to young dancers as they enter school, and they're fun to have around, said Leonardi.

"If it wasn't for the love of the kids ... that's the whole purpose. I really enjoy being around them," she said. "We are looking forward to a really good 50th year."

Albany ... host it here

Capital city an important meeting destination

Albany has hosted important meetings for close to 400 years and continues to be the site of statewide, regional, national and even international events and meetings.

These gatherings are important regional economic development tools. In 2005, the Albany County Convention and Visitors Bureau tracked close to 300 meetings with more than 197,000 delegates traveling to Albany. These delegates stayed in hotels, ate in restaurants, utilized local transportation and meeting space resources. In turn, all these businesses purchased the goods and services needed, most of them locally, which greatly enhanced the economic viability of Albany's meeting and convention business. Here's a brief look at Albany's meeting and event landscape.

Businesses that call Albany home, like MapInfo, are providing the region with opportunity to host their technical summits. New scientific research and development centers at the University at Albany and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute provided the right backdrop for the National Science Foundation to hold its 2005 Small Business Innovation Research Conference in Albany. The natural resources of the region were an attraction to the National Cave Association, which hosted a management symposium in Albany. Miss Wheelchair America held its national pageant in Albany and members were well pleased with the attention and care they received.

Veterans groups have discovered that Albany is a perfect location for annual reunions. With the USS Slater docked at our waterfront, guests can relive their naval days while enjoying the many military related attractions in the region.

Sports, whether youth, high school, collegiate or professional, all positively impact both the area's quality of life and economy. The Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) now makes Albany its home and hosts its post-season tournament here each year. The New York state Public High Schools Athletic Association holds many tournaments in Albany, including a very successful boys wrestling state tournament in 2005.

Other associations with local connections also meet in Albany, like the Eastern US Pipe Band Association, New York Public Transit Association and New York State Bureau of EMS, just to name a few. Regional citizens can participate in assuring future success of meetings, conventions and events by participating in the "Host it Here" Albany Ambassador program developed by the Albany County Convention and Visitors Bureau. The program encourages local volunteers to invite their business, fraternal, sports or any event to Albany. The Bureau provides support tools including a Resource Manual that covers all a meeting planner needs to know, and it's on disc. Bureau sales and services staff are at the ready to gather materials, manage site selection, offer creative solutions and provide personal attention.

With the prospects of a new meeting facility within the next few years, now is the perfect time to play a role in the economic wellbeing of Albany and the surrounding Capital District. Think about the things you do and how "Hosting it Here" will add to Albany's vitality.

Encounter a first-rate scare experience

This October the area's first world class haunted event is coming to the Altamont Fairgrounds.

"Ultimate Terrors at the Altamont Scaregrounds" is an indoor haunted attraction that features three uniquely themed haunted houses: Skull Manor, a traditional 16-room haunted house; Code Blue, a toxic-themed 14-room haunted house; and 3-D Chaos, a 3-D clown-themed 350-foot long twisting maze. All three attractions were designed and created in California by haunt designer Joe Manzo of Dark Attraction Productions.

General owner and operator Mike Maybee explained that the attraction is exclusive to the Albany area because it offers guests a first-rate scare experience indoors.

Maybee explained that the weather in October in the Northeast is often unpredictable, so guests can come rain or shine and enjoy an evening of full entertainment."

In addition to the three haunted houses, guests can

High-speed Internet at dial-up prices.

(Isn't it time you ditched dial-up?)

Get high-speed Verizon Online DSL (up to 768 Kbps) for just $17.99 a month when you sign up for a year. Now that's really something. Especially when you're probably paying about the same for your dial-up. And forget about cable — it's usually way more.

- Click and connect to the Web in an instant. No more waiting to dial in.
- Talk on the phone and surf the Net at the same time, on the same phone line.

- Download large files in the time it takes you to tie your shoes.

Finally, you'll be able to do everything you can't with dial-up — for about the same price. When can you do so much for so little, why wait?

Call 1-800-504-7668 to sign up. And you'll even get a modem at no charge if you sign up online. As you can see, there's never been a better time to get rid of dial-up.

Call today
1-800-504-7668

We never stop working for you.

Verizon reminds you to always download legally. Offer by Verizon Online. $17.99/mo. rate available for new residential DSL customers ordering 768 Kbps service. One-year commitment required. Learn to Manage Energy Costs at the New York Energy Fair

The summer air-conditioning season is rapidly winding down, and the winter heating season has not yet arrived. As consumers catch their breath, now may be the best time to investigate ways to better manage energy costs.

The Energy Fair lets consumers do just that!

On Thursday, Sept. 28 at the Holiday Inn Turf at 205 Wolf Road in Albany from 1 pm to 7 pm, electricity and natural gas users will be able to:

- talk with representatives from the sponsoring agencies, along with a dozen energy service companies (ESCOs) who provide service in the Albany area
- learn about the option to choose an ESCO while still receiving delivery of that energy and emergency service and repair from National Grid
- learn about energy efficiency improvements they can make in their homes and businesses, as well as options for buying energy from clean, renewable resources

The event is free, and no advance registration is required. More information about the event is available by calling 518.474.1540.

An interactive map at the State Museum shows how chocolate traveled from South America to Europe.

The start of something of sweet: A fabric cacao tree at the State Museum.

Loco for Cocoa

By
KATHERINE McCARTHY

Chocolate exhibit opens at the State Museum

Autumn is a sensory season. There's crisp air to inhale, the blaze of red and orange leaves to view, and the taste of tart McIntosh apples fresh from the tree. The New York State Museum's newest exhibit might just throw our already heightened senses into overdrive, as it draws us into the history and economics of chocolate.

"I didn't realize all I didn't know about chocolate," the museum's director, Cliff Siegfried, said about the exhibit that comes from Chicago's Field Museum. "Romance is associated with chocolate, chocolate is popular at the holidays, and of course, there are chocolates. The topics in the exhibit will appeal to a broad range of visitors. I hope they'll be blown away by the number of figures they find here."

Siegfried particularly liked the blend of natural science, history and economics in the exhibit, all presented through a number of techniques. There's a fabricated cacao tree, for instance, that shows how the nuts grow directly on the trunk and branches. There are interactive areas in each part of the exhibit, a number of artifacts from the Aztecs, and some information panels.

The exhibit will trace the origins of chocolate in the rainforest; explain how the Mayans turned the bitter seeds into a spicy drink; and an

Wednesday, when there will be complimentary chocolate for everyone with a ticket to the exhibit.

"We're hoping somebody will sponsor that," Siegfried said. "We always put together a team that programs events to draw people to our exhibits."

On Wednesday, Oct. 11 at 6:30 p.m., two biology professors, George Robinson and Ingrid Peter Robinson from the University at Albany will talk about the natural history and ethnobotany of cacao.

On Sunday, Nov. 19 from 1 to 2:30 p.m., the museum will present "Sundaes on Sunday" with all the goodies to make your own ice cream treat. The fee for that event is $1 for members; $2 for non-members.

On Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 2 and 3, from 1 to 4 p.m., Sarah Salerno-Thornas from the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston will present "The Singing, Ringing Cacao Tree," an interactive children's theater presentation.

On Sunday Dec. 3, Chef Armand Vanderstighel will demonstrate uses of chocolate in cooking. Vanderstighel is head chef at Stew Leonard's in New York City, author of several cookbooks, hosted a PBS-TV series, and appears regularly on television.

interactive Aztec marketplace shows how beans from a cacao tree were a powerful trading tool. A jump to the present day will let visitors learn about cocoa's value in today's trading markets. Between the Aztecs and the modern day, visitors to the state museum will see how Europeans came to love chocolate.

"I never stopped to think about development, how chocolate in Europe fueled the slave trade, since sugar was needed to sweeten it," Siegfried said.

An exhibit about chocolate without a taste of the sweet stuff would be unfairly tempting, so you may want to stop by on a

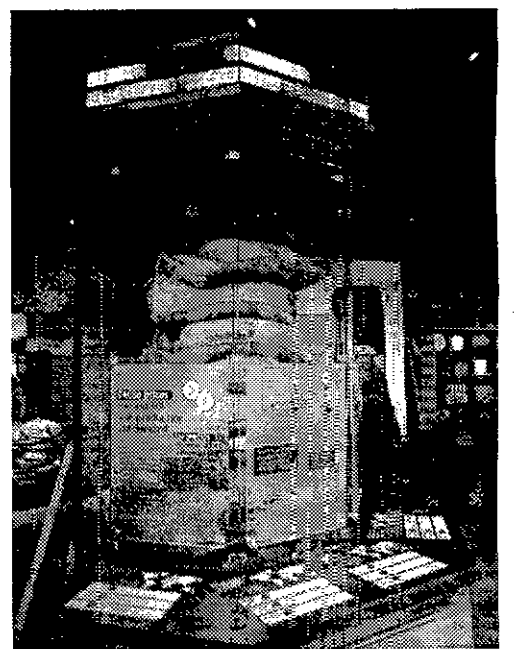

That day, chocolatier Kevin Tighe of Averill Park, will make chocolate truffles for tasting. Chocolate desserts and treats will also be available from Chocolate Springs in Lenox, Mass. And the Arlington House in West Sand Lake.

There will also be tours of the chocolate exhibit every Saturday at 1 and 2 p.m.

Admission to the exhibit is $4 for adults and $2 for children between the ages of 6 and 12. Museum members will receive complimentary tickets based on their level of membership. The exhibit will run until Jan. 7.

The New York State Museum is located on Madison Avenue in Albany, near the Empire State Plaza. It is open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Although there's a fee for the Chocolate exhibit, admission to the rest of the museum is free. For information, call 474-5877 or visit the museum's Web site at www.nysm.nysed.gov.

Blackbirds turn back Cannoneers at home

By MIKE CIOFFI

The Voorheesville football team will be heading into a tough contest this weekend in Chatham undefeated after beating Watervliet 39-18 last Saturday at home.

"Anytime that you can beat Watervliet, it's a plus for your program. I'm very pleased with a lot of things. We're playing physical with a lot of heart and we care, and that's something that I can't teach," said Voorheesville coach Joe Sapienza.

The Cannoneers (0-3) took an early 6-0 lead after Desean Kittell ran back the opening kickoff for a 93 yard touchdown. Voorheesville junior quarterback Jay Conde capped his team's first drive by calling his own number for an 18-yard touchdown run that tied the game at 6.

The Blackbirds (3-0) took lead for good when junior running back Pat Jones scored on a 10-yard run late in the first quarter. Tim Robinson added a two-point conversion run to create a 14-6 lead.

In the second quarter, Conde went deep and hit Jordan Murphy for a 66-yard touchdown pass to give Voorheesville a 20-6 lead. On the Cannoneers next possession, Murphy intercepted a Mike Cooney pass. Alex Zvinovsky capped the short series with a 27-yard touchdown run, and Matt Miller kicked the extra point to make the score 27-6.

Watervliet made things interesting before halftime. Cooney found wide receiver Tim Hughes in the corner of the end zone for a 22-yard touchdown pass that cut the deficit to 27-12.

The Blackbirds' offense sputtered for a bit in the third quarter, but their defensive corps was there to pick them up. The Cannoneers had three scoring chances inside the Voorheesville 20-yard line, but Voorheesville's defense didn't budge.

Watervliet closed the gap to 27-18 in the fourth quarter on Caleb Gleason's 5-yard touchdown run, but Voorheesville scored twice late to put the game away. The first Blackbird touchdown came on an 11-yard quarterback keeper by Conde, and the last came on a 37-yard scamper by Jones. The last touchdown was set up by Matt Henry's interception.

"I still feel that I want to get a little better offensively. I like the fact that we're spreading the ball around. We're passing, running and everybody's contributing," Sapienza said. "We're pretty balanced right now, and it's nice to have options."

"I liked the fact that we overcame a lot of mistakes, and we're going to come out next week (against Chatham) and make less mistakes," he added.

Indians continue impressive march

In other weekend football action, Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk remained unbeaten with a 37-6 victory over Taconic Hills, while Bethlehem suffered its first setback of the season with a 28-21 loss to Shaker last Friday.

RCS (3-0) got its first points courtesy of a Zach Deering interception return late in the first quarter. Quarterback Mike Fas-tert capped a second quarter drive with a 1-yard touchdown run, and Justin Tofinchino added a 37-yard field goal to give the Indians a 17-0 halftime lead.

Tailback Jared Fortier contributed two fourth quarter touchdown runs, and Pat Filkins added a 6-yard scoring run for RCS, which visits Hudson Friday.

In Latham, Bethlehem (2-1) fell behind 28-0 before rallying in the second half. Dan Unright had touchdown runs of 36 and 3 yards in the third quarter to trim the deficit to 14 points, and Dave Plummer threw a 37-yard scoring pass in the fourth quarter to make the score 28-21.

Bethlehem has a short week to recover from its first loss. The Eagles travel to Colonie Thursday due to the start of Rosh Hashanah Friday night.

Basketball club slates sign-ups

The Bethlehem Girls Basketball Club is holding a pre-registration session Sunday, Sept. 24, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the town park offices on Elm Avenue in Delmar.

The club has travel teams for girls in grades four through eight. If there is enough interest, it will also offer a non-travel house program.

Travel team tryouts take place Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 at the labor training center on Wemple Road in Glenmont. Fourth-grade team tryouts begin at 10 a.m. both days, with tryouts for fifth- and sixth-grade teams starting at 11 a.m. and seventh- and eighth-grade tryouts slated for 12:30 p.m.

Coaches are also needed. Contact Joe Murphy at jtm3@nycap.rr.com for information.

ther families for a night," said Weststrate.

"I love coming here because the billets (host families) are so nice. They give us anything we want," said senior Matt Leeder. And for the new kids, it's something they look forward to because it's like a vacation for them."

Leeder — one of Canada's top junior distance runners — stayed with Guilderland's lead runner, Brian Rhodes-Devey, the night before last Saturday's race. But when he tried to stay with Rhodes-Devey during the race, Rhodes-Devey turned on the afterburners and cruised to a 31.5-second victory.

"I tried to surge past him several times, but each time I did, he matched my surge," said Leeder, who finished second with a time of 14:07.33.

"I knew Matt Leeder was a hell of a runner," said Rhodes-Devey, who shattered his old Tawasentha course record with a winning time of 13:35.82. "He and I were just battling for the first 400 meters, so I knew I had to push things."

More than one Pirate was caught in the wake of a strong field in the boys large school division. Though three Thousand Islands runners finished in the top 5, the Pirates placed fifth in the team standings with 96 points. Danbury, Conn., took the team title with 57 points.

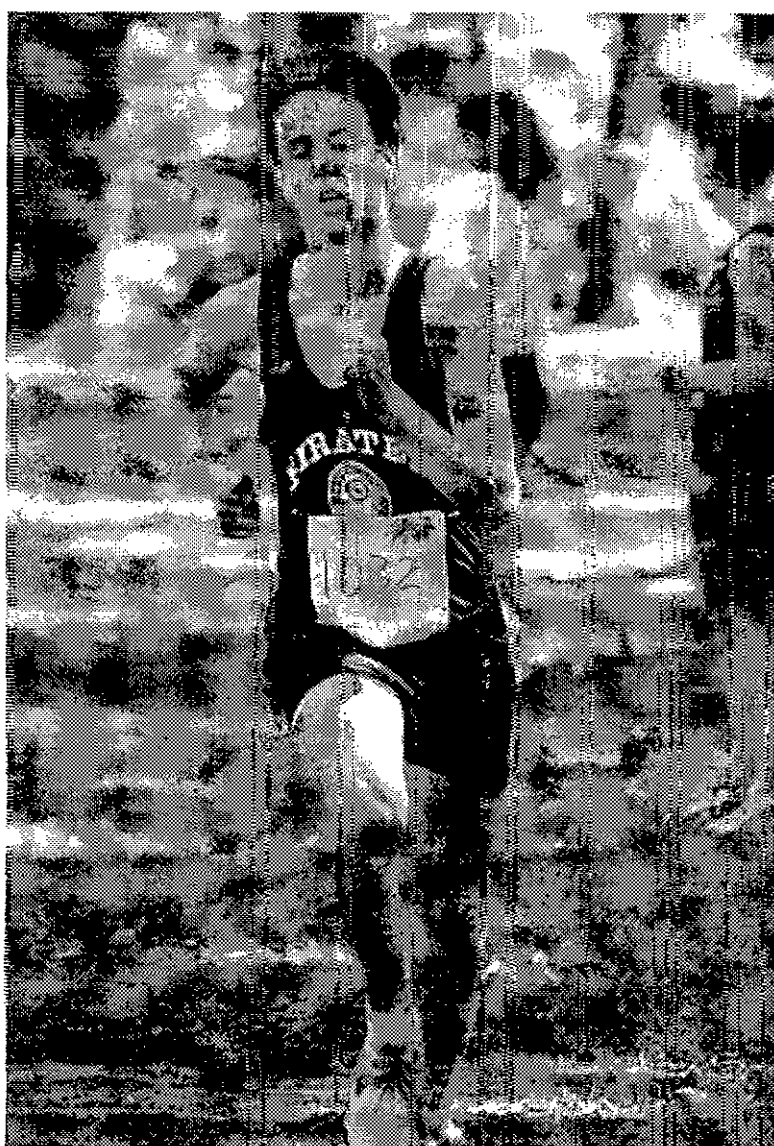

The fifth-place finish ended a string of three consecutive large school division championships for Weststrate's crew, but the veteran coach said before the race that being a defending champion at Guilderland was a big accomplishment.

"We started out with the small school races (20 years ago), and we slowly built ourselves up," said Weststrate. "In fact, I had to ask several years ago if we could go to the large schools division because I wasn't certain where we were in anymore."

Weststrate knows where his rates fit in with the rest of Ontario. Thousand Islands has won the last two provincial championships in boys cross country, and the Pirates will likely be favored again at this year's event in Gunder Bay. Leeder should also be favored to win the individual mile after claiming first place in the 1,500- and 3,000-meter races at Canada's national junior track and field championships.

But somewhere in all the Pirates' heads, there will be a fond memory of their first meet of the season in a typical American suburban town.

"I'll always remember coming down here," said Leeder.

Thousand Islands' Matt Leeder sprints toward the finish line at last Saturday's Guilderland Invitational. Leeder placed second in a time of 14:07.33.

Kenney leads Lady Eagles at Guilderland Invitational

By ROB JONAS

A banged-up Bethlehem girls cross country team put its best foot forward at last Saturday's Guilderland Invitational.

The Lady Eagles finished sixth in the 12-team large school division field with 174 points, 24 points out of placing in the top five. Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake won the team title with 53 points.

"I think if I put my good team together, we'll be up there with Colonie, Shaker, Guilderland and Columbia in the Suburban Council," said Bethlehem girls coach Jack Rightmyer. "Saratoga and Burnt Hills are the top teams in the league right now."

Two of Bethlehem's top runners are dealing with injuries. Kristin Peck ran at the invitational and placed 37th with a time of 19:14.60, while Shannon McCartan sat out the varsity race.

"I still think I'll get Kristin Peck back strong, and I think Shannon (McCartan) will be better," said Rightmyer.

Kristen Kenney led Bethlehem with a fifth-place finish in a time of 17:14.32.

"We're trying to bring her along slowly," said Rightmyer. "She had some injury problems at the end of last year, so we're trying to avoid that this year."

If everything falls into place, Rightmyer said his team has a chance to finish among the top five in the Suburban Council, which might earn the Lady Eagles a berth in the season-ending Federation meet at Bowdoin State Park.

Eagles fend off Raiders

Patrick Meany capped a Bethlehem comeback with a penalty kick goal to lift the Eagles to a 3-2 victory over Colonie last Friday in a Suburban Council boys soccer game.

Colonie led 2-1 with 14 minutes left in regulation when Darko Knezevic drilled home a 30-yard free kick to tie the game. Seven minutes later, Meany was tripped up in the Garnet Raider penalty box and capitalized with his goal.

Colonie grabbed a 1-0 lead early in the first half when Sean Bonanno chipped the ball to Dan Sofia, who kicked it into the empty net. Bethlehem's Josh Wing tied the game midway through the half by working his way past a Colonie defender on the left side of the penalty box and tucking a shot inside the right post.

Adrian Higersberger put the Garnet Raiders ahead again early in the second half before the Eagles rallied for the victory.

Bethlehem traveled to Shenendehowa Tuesday for a Suburban Council game. The Eagles return home Thursday to face Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake.

In other boys soccer action last weekend, defending Colonial Council champion Voorheesville earned a pair of shutouts, while Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk defeated Cohoes.

Voorheesville battled league rival Mechanicville to a scoreless tie last Friday and then beat Mayfield 3-0 in a non-league game last Saturday. Matt Miller and Garrett Simpson each had a goal and an assist in the victory over Mayfield.

Four RCS players notched goals, and Garrett Frueh added two assists in the Indians' 4-0 win against Cohoes last Friday. Sam Keller, Tom Mauro, Henry Ramberg and Richard White tallied for RCS.

In girls soccer, Bethlehem bounced back from a 5-1 loss to Shen last Thursday with a win and a tie at last weekend's Hall of Fame Tournament in Oneonta. The Lady Eagles tied Washingtonville 2-2 last Saturday and beat Queensbury 2-0 Sunday.

Bethlehem goaltender Jason Daniels grabs the ball away from Colonie's Phil Lorica during the first half of last Friday's Suburban Council game.

What a way to start a cross country season

By ROB JONAS

Picture this: You've just made the Thousand Islands Secondary School varsity cross country team, and you're about to run your first meet.

All you have to do is endure a 4 1/2-hour bus ride from your native Brockville, Ont., to Guiderland's Tawasentha Park to see what your first varsity course looks like. You note that the 2.7-mile distance is shorter than the 7-kilometer courses you'll run in your province, but then you see "Suicide Hill" for the first time, and you wonder how you're going to navigate the narrow, winding downhill section safely.

Welcome to the varsity level.

"For us, it's our first race of the year, and for the freshmen, it's quite an education for the first time on varsity," said Thousand Islands head coach Jack Weststrate.

Weststrate has been bringing his Pirates to Tawasentha Park for 20 years (give or take a year) to run in the Guiderland Invitational, where they get to compete against some of the top programs in New York.

"This is a great prep meet for us for the provincial qualifiers and then the provincial meet (in November)," said Weststrate. "Most of the meets we go to, there are only three or four teams there, but when you get to the provincial meet, there's about 20 teams. If you don't go to a meet like this, you can get blown away (by the size of the field)."

But the trip isn't all about running a race. The athletes spend a night with Guiderland cross country runners and their families before tackling Tawasentha's hills.

"It's a good little cultural thing because the kids get to stay with

Inspections costly for mechanics

By JIM FRANCO

The "check engine" light used to be just a nuisance, easily taken care of with a piece of electrical tape. But, all that changed about two years ago when New York state drastically changed the way vehicles are inspected.

Now, any shop licensed to inspect vehicles newer than 1995 has to plug the vehicle into a computer that sends information over the phone to the state Department of Motor Vehicles to get the emission system approved.

The state mandates a licensed shop buy a certified computer — which costs about $3,000 — that must be used exclusively for inspection purposes. And the shop owner has to get a dedicated phone line just for communication with the DMV, and pay for the calls to send the information back and forth.

In addition, the shop's mechanic has to perform the traditional safety inspection, and check the brakes, tires, windshield wipers, blinkers and so forth. And they have to buy the stickers from the state, all the while mandated to charge just $21 per inspection.

"To do an inspection the right way it takes a half hour to 45 minutes, and you can only charge $21. We charge $86 an hour for a mechanic to work on a car," said Doug Shanley, proprietor of Delmar Auto and Radiator, Inc.

"We lose money on inspections, but it is a service we have to provide," Shanley said.

The DMV emission check was introduced as the state's answer to the Federal Clean Air Act.

In addition to being a money loser for some shops, it opens a door for more unscrupulous shops to try to pass the cost on to the consumer.

"It causes a lot of people to be deceptive," said Mike Molocvnik, proprietor of Mike's Auto Service in Ballston Spa. "It will make some people to try up-selling the customer — like selling them a new headlight or a new tire so they will get inspected. ... Most honest garages don't and won't do that, and we certainly don't, but there are some out there who are doing it."

Dilemma

consumer's right to shop around for the best prices and taking away their choice of who they want to provide the service.

"They are keeping the information to themselves, which of course is hurting my business," said Mike Molocvnik, proprietor of Mike's Auto Service in Ballston Spa.

The Automotive After-market Industry Association (AAIA) is supporting a bill pending in Congress called the Motor Vehicle Owners Right to Repair Act of 2005. If passed, it would mandate car companies to make available the same information, tools, computers and software to anyone — including the buyer and the independent service and repair businesses — that they do to the dealerships.

"This act is about keeping the decision as to where vehicles are maintained and repaired with the consumer and not with the vehicle manufacturer," said Kathleen Schmatz, CEO of the AAIA.

Molocvnik said, as it stands now, dealerships have the right proprietary information for the first 48 months or so, but usually a new vehicle is under warranty during that time anyway, so the owner will generally take it back to the dealership for repairs.

However, he, like many others, says not having the same information dealership garages do does cut into their business. Doug Shanley, owner of Delmar Auto and Radiator, Inc., an auto repair business veteran of 30 years, said some of the diagnostic codes generated by the computers are dealer specific, but a well-equipped shop, with knowledgeable mechanics, can generally work around them and figure out what is wrong, regardless if they have a computer generated road map or not.

A well-equipped shop, however, does not come cheap. The latest piece of diagnostic equipment Shanley is looking at runs about $10,000. Furthermore, to keep it up to date, he will have to upgrade the software every two years at $900 a pop.

While Shanley said his staff

"They are keeping the information to themselves, which of course is hurting my business."

Mike Molocvnik

is knowledgeable enough to fix just about anything, when you have to start tinkering around rather than getting a road map, it takes time, and time is money.

He also said he pays $400 a month for subscriptions that provide basic information on the many different makes and models of vehicles. An expense a garage at a Honda dealership does not incur because they work mainly on Hondas.

"In Bethlehem, the parents may have a Mercedes in the driveway, but their son or daughter may drive a Honda Civic," Shanley said. "We want to be able to provide good solid service to the family, and we should be able to charge more than the dealerships but we don't."

According to a survey commissioned by the AAIS of 1,000 independent repair shop owners, they are losing $5.8 billion in service and part sales annually because they cannot get the information and tools from the manufacturers to diagnose vehicles. They turn away 1.2 million customers a year for the same reason, according to the survey by Opinion Research Corp.
