'Wonderful Life' at Russell Sage

As we are comforted by the rituals of the holiday season, so are we enlivened by revisiting their lessons anew.

The New York State Theatre Institute is offering one of those lessons in its holiday offering of "It's a Wonderful Life" through Saturday, Dec. 16.

Girls basketball

The last time the Bethlehem girls basketball team played a true home game, it was at the tail end of the 2004-05 season.

Until last weekend's Bethlehem Tip-Off Tournament, the Lady Eagles spent a year playing "home" games at Sage College of Albany because the high school gym floor was damaged by a flood.

Porco sentencing date nears

Defense seeks to block sister's statement

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Battle lines are being drawn in the sand between the defense team for convicted murderer Christopher Porco and the Albany County District Attorney's office.

As the Tuesday, Dec. 12 sentencing nears for the guilty verdict in the November 2004 attack that left Porco's father, Peter, dead and his mother, Joan, severely disfigured, Defense Attorney Terence Kindlon has filed a motion to stop a victim impact statement by Peter Porco's sister, Patty Szostak.

In a letter to Judge Jeffrey Barry, who will preside over the sentencing in Albany County Court, Kindlon wrote that Szostak celebrated her nephew's guilty verdict in August by drinking in a bar and said her conduct is not that of a victim.

"That would definitely not be in her character," said Assistant District Attorney David Rossi who, along with former ADA

Michael McDermott, presented the people's case against Porco.

"I have never see a motion to preclude a victim impact statement," Rossi said.

Szostak said she is surprised Kindlon's actions appear to be condoned by the legal system.

"I am perplexed why he repeatedly goes after innocent people with these baseless and far-fetched accusations," Szostak

No class for V'ville teacher

Crandall, suspended in September, will work on curriculum

By ROB IRWIN
irwin@spotlightnews.com

Following a 60-day suspension handed down by the Voorheesville school district for charges of misconduct, high school physical education teacher Robert Crandall will resume work with the district at the end of January, but not in a classroom capacity.

Crandall, 54, was suspended for four charges of misconduct, insubordination and conduct unbecoming a teacher that occurred in the 2002-2003 and 2003-2004 school years. Crandall's suspension began on Oct. 21 and came after a recommendation by an objective hearing officer in the case. Crandall has been with the district since 1978.

According to Superintendent Linda Langevin, after his return Crandall will be placed in a temporary appointment until the conclusion of this school year. Crandall will be designated to write curriculum for the district's PE programs.

Crandall will be appointed to complete the district's kindergarten through 12th grade curriculum for PE and to complete a PE curriculum for students with special needs. Both tasks are in line with the district's recent institution of curriculum mapping.

Weather doesn't dampen WinterFest revelers' spirits

By JIM CUOZZO

cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

It didn't snow, but summerlike temperatures Friday turned to a brisk winter chill by Saturday for the eighth annual Old Fashioned Four Corners, Holiday Open House and Winterfest, Dec. 1 and Dec. 2.

"Santa stopped and told me there had been crowds every hour," said Marlene Brookins, owner of Little Country Store on the second day of the event.

Strong thunderstorms arrived Friday evening in the Capital District at the very same time Santa appeared with his elves on a fire truck.

"Right exactly when Santa got there the rain ended," said Brookins.

The rain ended, but the storm kept many people home on Friday. The sign promoting the Little Country Store in front of Kenwood Avenue was a casualty of the intense overnight winds that turned 65-degree weather into 30-degree weather by Saturday.

"The wind took down our sign," said Brookins. It was propped back up by Saturday morning as shoppers arrived to browse in her store.

"We have had a busy day with lots of happy people," said Brookins, who keeps her store open seven days a week during the holiday season.

On Saturday, however, everyone was happy, and the Four Corners area was bustling with a festive family atmosphere.

load of happy holiday revelers for three solid hours into the late morning and early afternoon hours.

"We've been very busy all day," said Ladd, who has been offering the carriage rides for Winterfest the past six years.

"I love it, everyone is in a good mood," Ladd said.

Several stores offered special sales during the Holiday Open House, and the hot chocolate and cookies were going fast at the Delmar Marketplace on Saturday as temperatures dipped below freezing.

"The Winterfest offers people an opportunity to get out, and it reminds them we do have shops here," said Judy Tocker, owner of Judy's Tiny Shop, which sells dollhouses and miniatures.

"You don't always have to go running to the mall," said Tocker, who has had a shop at the Four Corners for six years. "You don't have to buy, just come in and take a look."

A group of hardy St. Thomas the Apostle School moms and their daughters and school friends waved down motorists to take a chance on winning a new Ford Explorer. Proceeds from the $100-a-ticket raffle will support the construction of a playground at the school.

"We sold about five tickets, so it's been good," said Emily Sprague. "We're trying to get the community involved."

Santa could be seen strolling in and out of stores with his elves, taking pictures with local children, and riding on the horse-drawn carriage being pulled by Charlie and Jake.

"Santa just got off two trips ago," said Ladd. "He was kind of chilly."

Used books get around at new store in Glenmont

Tea and Tattered Pages is an extension of owner's love of reading

By JIM CUOZZO

One person's recently read book is another person's hard-to-find gem.

Michele Friedman, owner of the recently opened Tea and Tattered Pages bookstore, said she hopes her dream of owning a store will become Bethlehem's next business success story.

"I want people to come in here and see the books they want to read on the shelves," said Friedman.

The one-time, mid-level management health-care worker and lobbyist left the hustle and bustle of Washington, D.C., to return to her roots in the Capital District. She opened Tea and Tattered Pages about three months ago in the Town Squire shopping center in Glenmont, where the former Hallmark store used to be.

"I was going to take Washington by storm," said Friedman about her plans to work in the nation's capital.

"The best-laid plans ...," she jokes. "Politics wasn't for me."

She said the idea of opening a bookstore is an extension of a passion for reading that began at an early age.

"I've been reading obsessively since I was 4," said Friedman. "What you see on the shelves is basically what I read."

The shelves in the store are lined with more than 6,000 books, ranging from romance novels and westerns to mysteries and sci-fi.

"I sell a lot of James Patterson and Nora Roberts," Friedman said.

Books from famous authors such as Harlan Coben, Michael Connelly, Stephen King, Robert

Parker and Jonathan Kellerman can also be found on the shelves. Right now mysteries and romance novels are well-stocked, but Friedman said she is on the lookout for other widely read genres.

"I am looking to grow my non-fiction and children's section," Friedman said.

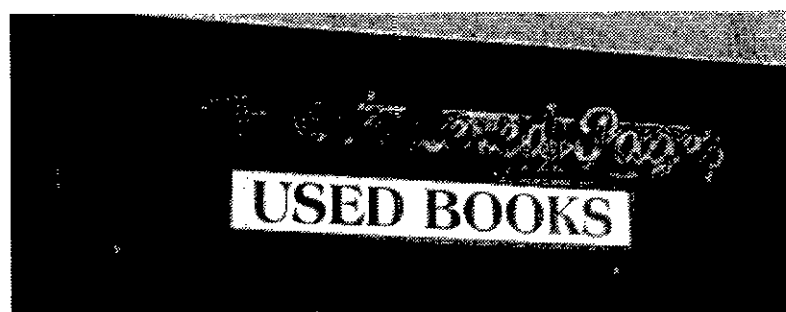

The spacious store offers a cozy sitting area, where patrons can enjoy a hot tea and turn the pages of their recent purchases.

"It's a warm and friendly place," said Marty DeLaney, Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce president. "I want to see it do well."

Starting in January, Friedman is lining up a series of events, including Saturday children's story times featuring local authors.

"One parent said, 'I am really glad you are having this,'" Friedman said.

On Jan. 27, children's author Janet Tanguay will be reading from her book BeBee. In February, area resident Tom Denham will be reading from his unpublished book he wrote with his daughter about their Adirondack hiking adventures.

Bethlehem residents have a new store where they can browse for books. Tea and Tattered Pages in the Town Squire Shopping Center in Glenmont is now open, offering a wide variety of used books for sale.

"I will try and have a local author here once a month," Friedman said.

More plans for the store include making space available for local artists to display their talents and holding Sunday afternoon knitting and crocheting for charitable organizations.

"I want this to be a community space where people can meet and interact with each other," Friedman said.

Owning a used book store can often include working late hours and worrying about paying the bills, but Friedman said it also has its satisfying moments.

"The best part about this is seeing the young kids come in and be excited about reading," said Friedman. "They beg their parents to buy them a book and then begin opening the pages and reading the book as they leave the store."

Bernice Friedman, Michele's mom, said she was the first one to approach her daughter with the idea of owning a bookstore.

"I was the one who suggested it," said Bernice. "It's exciting."

Tea and Tattered pages is open Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m.-8 p.m. and Sunday 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Friedman said she hopes to open a second store soon in Guilderland, where she currently lives. In the meantime she said the community is welcome to stop in, look around and make suggestions on the kind of books they would like to see.

"I can always put a book on reserve if it is not on the shelves," said Friedman.

Hold the milk, computer cookies aren't edible

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR

I found out recently that my laptop was two-timing me with another computer. My husband was an accomplice to the ongoing affair.

I became suspicious early on. We'd be sitting alone in the family room, my laptop and I. I'd start up the computer and a message box would appear informing me that my security features may be out of date.

"I don't understand why I'm getting pop-up messages when my laptop is not connected to the Internet," I told my husband. "I'm not even plugged into an outlet. I'm running on battery power."

Jeff explained that Microsoft probably has pre-set messages that fire off at certain intervals as reminders.

He also reminded me that he could configure the laptop to connect to the Internet.

"It's got an internal modem," he let me know.

That's certainly swell, but I just want to use my laptop to write. I get too distracted on the home computer that does have an Internet connection. If I have the slightest trouble coming up with an idea, I say to myself, "I should be writing, but I think I'll just read some e-mail or check the weather in various zip codes instead."

I think the Internet is cool and creepy at the same time. It's neat because the variety and amount of information available is practically limitless, if not necessarily correct. It's creepy because of the opportunities for access to your own personal computer by those varied and often anonymous sources.

I learned the hard way that being logged into your e-mail account while searching the Internet is not a good idea. I was once researching a medicine prescribed to one of my parents. Shortly thereafter I started receiving all sorts of bizarre spam-type e-mail messages, each one offering "great deals" on various drugs.

It could have been a coincidence, but I didn't think so.

"Someone planted cookies on the computer!" I anxiously reported to my husband.

Other than knowing that these cookies are not chocolate chip, sugar, or peanut butter, I'm not sure what's involved. I just know that they are not edible and they invade my privacy.

"It's OK," my husband told me, "Every once in a while I clear the cookies."

And to think I used to teach computer classes! How quickly my knowledge became obsolete.

Computers were larger and yet simpler when I was young. I knew what the DOS prompt was and how to use it. I could talk a Help Desk caller through a WordPerfect mail merge with my eyes closed.

Now the tables have turned, and I'm the "challenged" user calling the Help Desk. Or, more often, I just make do with the existing functionality, especially if I can't quickly figure out the solution on my own.

For example, my current challenge is a "You have a new message" pop-up box. Every time I get an e-mail at work, which is once every 10 seconds, the message box pops up and demands attention. The message box won't go away unless I click on the close button or click "open inbox." This makes it difficult to compose an outgoing e-mail note.

Unfortunately, I don't know how to turn off the darn feature. And I don't want to take the time to go through the menu options to figure it out, and I don't want to wait on hold with the Help Desk.

I don't like calling the computer Help Desk because I know the staff there is thinking, "This is user-error."

I know, because I spent years answering first-level help desk calls.

I take steps to correct the problem before calling.

"I've already logged off and back on. I've done a soft boot and a hard boot," I'll explain. Then the help desk representative is thinking, "Oh goody, I've got a caller on the line that THINKS she knows what she's TALKING about."

"I've got screen shots of the error message," I'll tell them.

The other day my in-basket information said I had 5,962 unread messages. I'm not making that up. I knew I was a bit behind, but that number was clearly unreasonable. I didn't want to log off before calling the help desk just in case they could "see" something.

The help desk told me to log off and back on. That solved the problem. I could have tried logging off and on before I called, but I wanted the phenomenon recorded in a Help Desk ticket. I bet the description reads, "Caller hallucinates that every e-mail message she ever sent or received is now highlighted in red in her mailbox. Spoke in calm, friendly tone to caller for a few minutes while she logged off and back on. Ticket closed."

I guess I'm at a point in my life where I don't care if people think I'm technologically behind the times. I mean, I've never even IM'd. I know what it is, but I've never done it. Go ahead, LOL, it won't bother me at all. Translation: LOL is "laugh out loud" in IM speak. IM stands for "instant messaging."

I don't want to IM. I don't even want to e-mail as much as I do. Outgoing e-mail is OK, but I don't want ongoing conversations. I've sent e-mail from a computer to a pager, but I've never sent a text message via my cell phone.

"Why did you sign your note with a colon and the letter D?" I once called and asked my husband. "That's a BIG smile," he informed me. Gotcha. I was only familiar with the basic smile, symbolized by the colon and the close parentheses.

I also don't know how to work the on-screen menu system on my VCR. I don't want to learn it. I miss the old VCR, which had actual buttons with words on them. It was like setting the time on a clock. There were up and down arrows and a button to scroll through the names of the days of the week that would light up, in turn, along the display panel. Start times and end times. It all made sense.

Now I have to pick a language in order to record a TV show. Or worse. I get trapped in a menu area, toggling back and forth between options, none of which I'm interested in, with no possibility to escape back to the main menu. So in the end I'm watching some random show, close-captioned in Spanish.

Actually, I don't watch that much TV. Usually I'm writing.

One evening, when I walked into the den to get my laptop, I saw the unthinkable: my husband, my laptop, and our home computer all huddled together.

"What going on in here?" I demanded.

He was updating my laptop. He said he did it every so often.

"You've been connecting my innocent laptop to the Internet?"

Apparently that's how you get "Windows updates" such as "patches" and current "virus scan security features."

"Just make sure you don't leave any cookies on there," I told him.

CLEAR AS MUD

Home buyers have traditionally focused on kitchens and baths when they evaluate properties to purchase. However, in recent years, buyers have also turned their attention to mudrooms. Positioned as a buffer zone between the outdoors and the kitchen or garage, mudrooms serve as laundry rooms, changing rooms, storage areas and shoe repositories. Most recently, these utility areas have grown into sophisticated rooms with lovely built-in cabinetry. It is also common for each family member to have their own designated cubbie to stow brief cases, lunchboxes, back packs and diaper bags. Sellers should cash in on this trend by retrofitting back halls and old mudrooms with upgraded cabinetry, lighting and even a new utility sink. This enhancement will definitely boost their homes' appeal.

Remember, Mudrooms or backhalls can be turned into appealing rooms. I have the resources and personal contacts to help you achieve this goal and maximize every room in your home to achieve the highest interest in your property for prospective buyers. ## Seeking superheroes

What with scandal and alleged wrongdoing by public officials, including a former superintendent of the Voorheesville school district and the re-elected state comptroller, it gets easier and easier to understand the reason for superheroes.

Ordinary heroes seem few and far between of late, even in our own Capital District, and truth, justice and the American way seem remote, forgotten concepts from a time of long ago.

At this time of year, many of us take stock of where we are and where we're going or would like to go, and the sorry state of things so close to home makes it difficult to envision a world without glaring headlines and sound bites touting the latest scandal or crime.

Police in Rotterdam and Albany are having difficulties, while at the same time a criminal flaunts his ego in the courts, even after admitting to murder one state policeman and seriously wounding another. Ralph Phillips allegedly entered the guilty pleas to spare his daughter and ex-girlfriend from doing jail time.

What we have apparently lost is the integrity needed to always try to do the right thing. What we need to do now is try to restore integrity to its rightful place in our society.

Easier said than done.

Integrity is most often instilled in children by role models who live their lives trying to do the right thing, despite temptation to do otherwise. Nowadays, our kids often have to turn to fantasy to find suitable role models. Who would have ever thought that comic book characters could have risen to this level?

Perhaps kids are smarter than we give them credit for. At least they know to look up to the good guys and gals. Kids tend to emulate their heroes, and that's one good sign for the future.

Even children themselves have become super heroes. Think of the millions worldwide who idolize Harry Potter, a whiz of a wizard if ever there was.

With all the world's bad apples, we need to keep in mind the evil of greed and losing sight of right and wrong. It's less than a month now until the New Year, and we hope more adults make a decision to be positive role models to counter or at least offset the deeds of the dastardly.

A child's memory of the day that lives in infamy

By JERRY MCLAUGHLIN

The writer is a former Associated Press newsman and press secretary to the late Gov. Nelson Rockefeller. He is press secretary to state Sen. John Marchi of New York City, and lives in Slingerlands.

Radio, in 1941, was something to which most 5-year-olds were oblivious.

If we paid attention at all, it was pretty much to hear how "Little Orphan Annie" was faring or how "The Green Hornet" was dealing out swift justice to wrongdoers. (Note to history buffs: Before Dec. 7, 1941, the chauffeur who drove "The Green Hornet" to confront the gangsters and muggers, was a man named Kato, a Japanese native. After Dec. 7, as if by magic, the show's writers morphed Kato into a native of the Philippines, with no connection to the sons of Nippon.)

That's why on Dec. 7, 1941, I wasn't listening to the radio. I was trying to make a top spin on my mother's linoleum floor in a Cape Cod cottage at 13 Vernon St. in Rutland, Vt., when I saw my father stand up from a living room chair at shortly after 2 p.m., and say, "Why, the yellow bastards!"

He had been listening to a Brooklyn Dodgers football game. (Brooklyn did have a professional football team in the early 1940s.) His loud outcry was in reaction to an interruption in the legendary "Red" Barber's play-by-play of the game.

The voice of the news announcer belonged to John Daly, later to become more famous as a panelist on the long-gone television show, "What's My Line?"

My dad and millions of other Americans heard John Daly say something like this: "We have just received a report from the Associated Press that Japanese navy and air forces have attacked American naval forces at Oahu, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii." My mother emerged from the kitchen, drying her hands with a towel, asking if she had heard what she thought she had heard.

Point of View

My father confirmed it for her. She shook her head and asked again if she had heard it right.

My memory of their conversation is a blank. I do know that my father, who was due in at work as a newspaperman, gave her a hug and began dressing to go into work long before his normal 7 p.m. arrival.

My mother, thinking immediately (I say from hindsight) about her three brothers, picked up the phone and called her mother, my grandmother, Jane Fallon Scanlon, who lived across town.

From speaking with my surviving aunts, I learned that they talked about the Scanlon family's three brothers and my uncles James, Francis and John. Those three were workers on the old Rutland Railroad, and they ranged in age from about 19 to 27.

Like a lot of other young men across America, they were already making plans. Uncle Frank's railroad pal, Dick Shanahan, came to the house near the railroad that Sunday afternoon and said, "Let's go to the post office. I heard they're opening up."

They trudged across the bridge over the tracks, marched to the post office and found the Army Air Cops recruiter already open for business. They enlisted that day, beginning an odyssey that lasted until 1945.

My Uncle James was a member of the National Guard and was called up within a month. He served in the middle eastern and European theaters in World War II.

My Uncle John, then a scrawny teenager, walked with a limp and did not look like infantry material. But after serving two years with the Amery Coast Artillery in Maine, he was summoned to infantry duty in the immediate aftermath of the Battle of the Bulge, a bloody horror in the snows of Belgium.

My father was considered too old for service and edited the paper in Rutland until 1949.

People gathered on their lawns after John Daly began adding to the first bulletin about the attack at Oahu. Those were Depression-era men and women. They already knew what hardship was. And they quickly bent to the hardship of seeing sons and fathers and boyfriends prepare for battle.

A lot of them, and most of the neighborhood children, did not know where Hawaii was, or, for that matter, Japan.

Discussing it as an adult with my late mother's sisters, I learned that the broadcast of the football game continued. They said that, before the announcement of the Japanese attack, during breaks in the action when "Red" Barber wasn't calling the game, they could hear the stadium announcer saying: "Will Col. Donovan please call home?" "Donovan" was "Wild Bill" Donovan, a Wall Street lawyer and friend of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the president, who headed the then-new office of strategic services, a spy organization and forerunner of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Those requests were followed by others directing colonels, generals and admirals, many of whom were at the football game, to call home or report to their offices.

My Aunt Loretta recalls that "Red" Barber, perhaps the best baseball sportscaster ever, was so upset by the nature of the attack that he could not continue to call the game. Someone else, unremembered here, took over.

In the weeks after Pearl Harbor, retired coaches all over Vermont put their sweatshirts on and honored appeals from young men a few years out of high school to help them. The young fellows knew that basic training for the military would put them to severe physical tests and they wanted to start shaking off the civilian fat immediately.

The next day, Dec. 8, I showed up at Miss Phillips' kindergarten class. It was the first time I was asked to pledge allegiance to the United States of America. With atheism very much out of fashion in predominantly Catholic Rutland in 1941, we stumbled, with Miss Phillips' help, through the "Our Father," asking him to protect our soldiers, sailors and Marines.

My surviving family members told me recently that the lines of young men reporting to enlist in the various armed services reached out of the post office and extended hundreds of yards up the street to the railroad station.

That embodied patriotism and presaged their departure on trains across American for duty.

The Rutland Herald carried many a picture of young Vermonters kissing their loved ones goodbye — some of them forever.

Many years later, I worked for the Associated Press and befriended a retired AP man and ex-Marine who lived in Bethlehem. His name was Jim Hackett. Jim, on Dec. 7, 1941, occupied the main seat at the general desk of the AP Reserve Center in New York. He was sipping coffee and half listening to the football game when he heard the Pacific wire, connecting Honolulu to New York, sound a four-bell alert. The four bells signified a "flash," really important news.

He bent over the automatic printer and read: "Japs attack Pearl Harbor."

Six-foot-two-inch Jim Hackett rose from his desk, called his mother in Brooklyn, and told her he was putting his wire service career on hold. "Jerry," he told me 30 years ago, "the bastards had attacked my country and my family. It was time to go."

Jim Hackett waded through the surf at Tarawa when the Marines went ashore there in 1943. He suffered wounds in that terrible battle, but survived to see his fellow Marines take Iwo Jima and give the B-29s an emergency landing field.

Two of those B-29s carried the A-bombs to Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Five Rivers Friends say Show gratitude where it's due thanks to volunteers

Editor, The Spotlight:

Friends of Five Rivers is a nonprofit citizens group which supports and complements the NYSDEC programs at the Five Rivers Environmental Education Center. Friends of Five Rivers is supported by strong membership, donations, grants, and fund-raising activities such as the 2006 annual birdseed sale.

This letter of appreciation is not about Five Rivers or FFR; it is about the volunteers that helped lift and load 43,000 pounds of bird seed (that is a very full tractor-trailer load), those who fed the volunteers on Oct. 21, and those who helped again on Oct. 28. As in many of the past years, GE Plastics provided a large forklift and a skilled (and much appreciated) operator to unload the heavy pallets from the truck in the early morning hours of pickup day. DEC's Five Rivers' staff helped us prepare for pickup day.

Among the volunteers were dedicated FFR board members, as well as many general — and always willing — members and families, and students from the Participation in Government class at BCHS, all working toward the goal of a successful fundraiser. This dedicated mix of volunteers provides the living, working definition of community service, teamwork and volunteerism.

On a sunny but windy day, we all had fun and accomplished our goal. FFR is proud and thankful that the volunteers felt our cause was important enough to give up a Saturday to lift and load bags of birdseed into cars and trucks.

While each volunteer will receive our personal thanks, they also deserve public recognition for their contribution. If you happen to be fortunate enough to know any of the volunteers or you are a parent, a friend, a spouse, a teacher or a leader of any of the volunteers, you are entitled to a bit of special pride in that person or group.

Thanks to those of you who bought birdseed from Friends of Five Rivers; thanks to the volunteers that made the 2006 sale a success. We hope to see you all next year at the birdseed sale and throughout the year at Five Rivers Environmental Education Center enjoying the environment and the excellent educational programs.

Editor, The Spotlight:

Having been a resident of the town of Bethlehem for 42 years, I am somewhat chagrined at the way gratitude is doled out by the administration and residents of the town.

Many citizens are quick to complain when leaves aren't picked up or roads plowed, but when credit is due, they all come up short. Projects, which bear the names of several philanthropic groups, are in reality finalized by the men and women of the Highway Department.

Beautification and decoration of parks and streets, planting of displays and shrubbery, tending these displays and keeping our town the garden place it always appears, should all be credited to their untiring efforts.

A little recognition and gratitude is long overdue. I, personally, would like to extend a well-deserved thank you to the Highway Department of the town of Bethlehem for all its work.

The next time you see a highway vehicle passing, please say "hi" and "thank you," and wave in recognition and gratitude.

Chairman leaves Public Service Commission for private firm

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Glenmont resident William Flynn said he was filled with mixed emotions on his last day of work Thursday, Nov. 30, as chairman of the state Public Service Commission. Flynn will be leaving the post for a position with the law firm of Harris Beach PLLC.

"A lot of good memories," said Flynn who has spent nearly four years ensuring New Yorkers receive reliable low-cost utility services.

"I look back at these past years being proud working with some of the best public servants in the country," said Flynn.

Before working with the PSC, Flynn served as president of the state Energy Research and Development Authority.

"Bill Flynn has been an important, hard-working member of my administration, and on behalf of the citizens of this state, I would like to thank him for all his leadership and commitment to New York state," said outgoing Gov. George Pataki.

"We are thrilled to have Bill join us," said Harris Beach Chief Executive Officer James A. Spitz Jr.

Spitz said Flynn will work with the Harris Beach energy and telecommunications team on regulatory counsel, legislative relations, environmental law and a host of other energy-related projects.

Flynn's government back-ground includes a stint as chief of staff and special counsel to former state Attorney General Dennis Vacco. Flynn is also active in the Bethlehem community, serving as chairman of the YMCA board of managers.

Pataki credits Flynn with playing a pivotal role in expanding the state's energy efficiency programs and in approving renewable energy standards.

"We in New York state deliver one of the most reliable systems in the country," Flynn said.

Flynn said one of his accomplishments is in securing the infrastructure in a post-9/11 era.

"It is paramount that we hire people with law enforcement backgrounds to run an effective security program at the utilities," said Flynn.

Flynn's new position in the private sector with Harris Beach will allow him to continue to live and work in the Capital District.

"I couldn't be happier joining such a prestigious law firm," said Flynn.

Harris Beach has been rated one of the country's top 250 law firms, with offices throughout the state.

YMCA expansion opens with fanfare

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

The Boy Scout Color Guard, Bethlehem High School student singers, and a balloon-drop ceremony inside the new Gov. George Pataki gymnasium and upper level running track were all a part of grand-opening ceremonies marking the completed $10 million capital construction project at the Bethlehem YMCA on Tuesday, Nov. 28.

"Today we open the 11th YMCA of the Capital District network that now totals 90,000 members," said John Flynn, president and chief executive officer of Capital District YMCA.

The Bethlehem YMCA on Delaware Avenue opened in 2004, and in two short years has become the largest YMCA facility in the area.

"Never in all of this time have I ever seen such a dramatic transition like I have seen in this wonderful YMCA facility," said Flynn.

The expanded building features two new swimming pools, an NHL-size hockey rink, spacious day-care rooms and a new computer center along with gymnasium, indoor track, and new weight-training room, Cybex equipment and a spinning room.

"Thanks to the people in this community for their support," said William Flynn, manager of the Bethlehem YMCA board, and no relation to John Flynn. "Everybody pulled together when I had this idea for a Y in Bethlehem."

Government and the private sector joined together with donations from corporate sponsors to fund the capital construction, including $500,000 of funding from the state; $250,000 from PSEG Power; and a gift of a new Verizon FiOS Broadband Center with high-speed Internet connection for member users.

"Fundraising is very much key if you want to have a successful campaign," said John Flynn.

Frank Slingerland, chairman of the board of trustees, and Donald Slingerland Jr., of the board of managers, were cited for their fundraising ability. Corporate sponsor signs such as the National Grid computer lab, Price Chopper and Golub family staff lounge, PSEG Power Arena and Gov. George Pataki gymnasium can be seen adorning the front of each new area of expansion and construction.

"We began with a loyal and small membership base," said Scott Lewis, executive director. "As we now move forward toward completion, we are now just beginning."

The Bethlehem YMCA began with a membership of about 4,000 and has grown to 6,500, with expectations of membership of more than 10,000 within the next several months.

"On behalf of the board of managers, I thank those 4,000 people who stuck with it the first two years," said William Flynn.

State Sen. Neil Breslin, D-Delmar, and County Executive Michael Breslin were in attendance along with several town officials, including George Leveille, economic development director.

"The town of Bethlehem has been a very close partner in the development of this YMCA," said John Flynn.

Leveille said the YMCA in Bethlehem is a good solution to a difficult real-estate problem going back to when the facility was once only a hockey rink.

"Clearly this is a quality-of-life improvement for our area and another great asset we have to offer in this town," said Leveille.

Ravena school launches charity drive

With Christmas less than a month away, student and faculty efforts are well under way at AW Becker Elementary School to ensure a happy holiday season for all.

The school's holiday assistance program will provide gifts to 35 families with approximately 100 youths, said Denise Mulligan, one of the coordinators of the annual effort.

Appeals for donations were sent out this week and faculty and staff are once again encouraging students and families to donate directly to the program.

Another charitable effort at the school is the Giving Tree.

Donations of new gloves, mittens, hats, scarves and socks will decorate the tree in the lobby of the school, and will be given throughout the season to the Albany County homeless program and to families in our community.

Holiday Spending Survival Guide

How planning and budgeting early can save your bank account

By Anthony J. Lanzillo
Senior Vice President
Retail Banking, KeyBank

It's that time of year again — time to hit the malls and the keyboard in search of the perfect holiday gifts. But don't let those purchases come back to haunt you when the dreaded holiday credit card bills come knocking. Following a simple plan now can help you budget for, and spend wisely during, the holiday season.

Planning ahead of time for holiday spending is important. Before you start, make a list (and check it twice) of all anticipated holiday expenses including who you are going to buy for and how much you want to spend on each person. And don't forget other holiday costs including travel, entertainment, wrapping paper, shipping and postage and greeting cards. Think of gift ideas (and backups) and set spending limits for each person on your gift list. If you stick to your list, you are less likely to overspend and stray from a budget.

The next step is to begin setting money aside as early as possible to help defray holiday expenses. As always, starting early is helpful but even a month or two of consciously saving money will go a long way. Put a set amount of money aside each paycheck for the coming months. Even a few dollars each week can quickly add up.

If you plan to shop with plastic this season, keep in mind that most people spend more using credit cards than with debit cards or cash — up to one third more according to Consolidated Credit Counseling Services. To keep your holiday credit card debt at a minimum, treat your cards like cash. If the money for a purchase isn't in your bank account, don't buy it. Also, only use one or two credit cards for all of your holiday purchases. Using fewer credit cards will help you keep better track of your spending. And try to use the card that rewards you, like Continental Miles or L.L. Bean. If debt is unavoidable, set up a payment plan before you start shopping and set money aside for credit card bill payments. Aim for a maximum of 90 days to pay off debts and avoid costly interest accumulation.

Once you hit the mall remember these helpful tips:

- Avoid signing up for department store credit cards — they may offer immediate benefits, but often the high interest rates end up costing you more over time.
- Save all your receipts in a single location and add them up a few weeks before the holiday. This will give you a chance to cut back on purchases if you've overspent.
- Compare prices and shop for the best bargains. The Internet is a great resource for comparison shopping.
- Shopping lists aren't just for groceries. Take your gift list with you when you shop. Once you've purchased everything on the list, stop shopping and avoid impulse buys.
- Consider purchasing a prepaid gift card as a present. But be aware of expiration dates and dormancy fees which can begin as early as three months after you purchase the card. Also, instead of buying a gift card for a specific store, purchase a universal gift card issued by a major debit/credit card provider.
- Plan ahead and shop early. In addition to being stressful, last-minute shopping is also expensive. You won't have time to compare prices and may be tempted to spend more in order to finish your shopping.
- Balancing your checkbook is always important but it may be doubly so during the holidays. If you're shopping with cash, check or debit card, be sure to balance your checkbook frequently to ensure you don't overdraw your account.

- Look for good deals year-round to avoid markups right before the holidays. The earlier you buy, the more you save.

- Keep shopping after the holidays — take advantage of markdowns on cards, wrapping paper and seasonal decorations that occur right after the holiday season. Stock up on these items for next year.

Anthony J. Lanzillo

Online shopping is convenient, fast and allows for easier price comparison.

Keep the following in mind if you plan to shop online this holiday season:

- Check out sites like www.froogle.com, www.pricegrabber.com, www.shopping.com and www.shopzilla.com to compare prices from various online retailers before buying.
- Consider using online rebate sites like www.consumerclub.com and www.ebates.com when shopping on the Internet. Shopping through these sites can offer additional savings, sometimes up to 25 percent.
- Be sure your personal computer is protected with updated firewall and antivirus software.
- Always log off and close the browser window when you are finished checking email, shopping or banking online.
- Try to avoid shopping or banking online at public computers (identity thieves can install software to record your credit card numbers and passwords) and always make sure the site is secure and identified with the Verisign or Entrust seals of approval.
- Never use your debit card for shopping online. Instead use a separate credit card with a low balance in case of fraud.

The holidays are an expensive time of year. Planning and budgeting early can help make sure your season isn't dampened by financial stress and debt.

Bethlehem Central High School stages 'Twelfth Night'

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

If music be the food of love, play on!

Bethlehem Central High School's Theatre Without a Net acting troupe will perform Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" beginning Friday, Dec. 8, and concluding Sunday, Dec. 17, under the direction of James Yeara, Shakespeare theater advisor and English and drama teacher, and student director Ryan Rockmore.

"Shakespeare is a challenge," said Yeara, who schedules intense rehearsals which last about three hours and challenge the actors' intellectual and physical skills.

"It calls on a variety of different skills that may not show up in other plays," Yeara said. "These kids have been rehearsing since September."

This year's cast includes Tess Avitabile as Viola, Molly Moriarity in the role of Olivia, Bethany Karpowitz as Maria, Molly Gordon as Feste and Dylan Lewis as Malvolio.

"The play is witty, and there's so much mistaken identity," said Lewis. "It shows the flaws in a lot of people."

The cast is made up of several other characters, including priests, sea captains and wedding attendants.

"This play is like work in class, but when the students perform the play it becomes fun," said Yeara. "The kids really enjoy it and like the challenge."

The comedy revolves around a set of twins who are shipwrecked and separated and both believe the other has died, but, in fact, they are both alive.

"This is the third time I have directed it, and it's always fun," said Yeara.

Yeara said the students run the lights, design costumes and sets, and the play is underwritten by ticket sales.

"Shakespeare is very underground in the school, but we get a lot of support," said Lewis.

Rockmore said revenues from the performances sustain the troupe for another year.

Show times are Friday, Dec. 8, at 7 p.m.; Saturday, Dec. 9, at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m.; and Sunday, Dec. 10, at 2 p.m. The play will continue the following week with performances at 7 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 15 and 16, and 2 p.m. matinee shows on Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 16 and 17. Cost is $10, $6 for students and seniors. The performance will be held at Bethlehem Central High School's Studio 46 Theatre Space located in the back wing of the school.

"This is our last Shakespeare show," said Moriarity, referring to the seniors who will be graduating. "The fact that we get to do Shakespeare in high school is unbelievable."

Yeara has been the school's Shakespeare acting teacher for many years and always enjoys the work.

Tess Avitabile and Molly Moriarity are part of Bethlehem Central High School's Theatre Without a Net acting troupe that will perform Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" beginning Friday, Dec. 8, and concluding Sunday, Dec. 17 at Bethlehem Central High School's Studio 46 Theatre Space in the back wing of the school.

"I get to see some fantastic kids in the district, and it is interesting to see what the students get out of it," Yeara said.

Many of the seniors performing in "Twelfth Night" said they will continue to pursue theater in college.

"I definitely will be involved in some theater," said Moriarity.

"Twelfth Night" will be performed on Friday, Dec. 8 at 7 p.m.; Saturday, Dec. 9 at 2 and 7 p.m.; Sunday, Dec. 10 at 2 p.m.; Friday, Dec. 15 at 7 p.m.; Saturday, Dec. 16 at 2 and 7 p.m.; and Sunday, Dec. 17 at 7 p.m. Tickets are $6 for students and seniors and $10 for the general public.

To purchase tickets online, go to www.theatrewitoutanet.org. Tickets will be available at the door.

Courtesy and gratitude are the best gifts of all

Winter weather seems to have taken hold of the area as I begin to write this column. With the blustery weather comes the sense that the seasons are finally changing, the last gasp of the mild fall has left the area, and we in the Northeast begin to feel the effects that winter weather brings. The holidays loom on the horizon; people are either becoming very friendly or incredibly grouchy, depending where on the Scrooge meter their disposition falls. I think most of us tend to get caught up in the "holiday spirit" regardless of our religious persuasion. There tends to be a feeling of goodwill that permeates the atmosphere.

That feeling has a tendency to fly out the window as we get closer to the end of the season and people get more tense and frantic about not completing the appointed holiday shopping, rounds of parties and in general the forced niceties that come with this time of year. The past few weeks my focus in this column has been on the retailer going the extra mile.

Today I would like to spend a moment talking to the consumer in us all. Customers need to realize that they are probably not the first person to walk into the toy store to find the elusive PlayStation III or Nintendo Wii.

In fact they could quite possibly be the 3,000th person to come pleadingly into the store begging for the one hidden console just waiting for them. As a shopper, you need to realize that there are others in line ahead of you. The lines are long, and if you have neither the time nor patience to wait your turn, you probably should have shopped in July and planned ahead or go sit in front of your computer and let your fingers do the walking through the Internet.

Pity the clerks and shopkeepers who are dealing with the likes of you for 10 and 12 hours a day, six or seven days a week. Keep the holidays in perspective ... whether it's Christmas, Chanukah or Kwanzaa, the basis of the holidays is not about the retail, it should be about the spiritual. I know that can be a tough thing to swallow with a gaggle of kids at home anxiously awaiting the arrival of the next sled full of goodies, but it deserves some thought. Perhaps an unexpected "Thank You" when you leave a store or a "I really appreciate your trying to help me" will make someone else's day a little brighter. When it comes down to it, isn't that the real meaning of the holidays?

As for the movement around town news, here's what's going on this week in the Capital District market. Capital Communications Federal Credit Union has announced the promotion of Melissa Volk to manager of accounting and Jennifer Dignum to operations training specialist ... SEFCU announces the promotion of Barbara R. Hess to chief administration officer ... First New York Federal Credit Union hired Patty Maguffin as their operations manager ... Saratoga Hospital has made several additions to its medical roster with the additions of John Coombes, M.D., Gastroenterologist. Dr. Coombes is in practice with the Gastroenterology Associates of Northeastern New York, Erick French, MD, and Cynthia Lawder, MD, are in practice with Saratoga Medical Emergency Physicians, and Radana Dooley, MD, specializing in Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation comes on board the medical staff ... Mary Anne Hess, an associate broker with Coldwell Banker Prime Properties, recently earned her senior real estate specialist and graduate Realtor institute designations ... Weichert Realtors Northeast Group have joined the staff of the Loudonville office and both have earned the designation of accredited seller representative ... Kristen Mann, Charlene Courtney and David Eldredge of Weichert have all earned the professional designation of broker ... Tough Traveler headquartered in Schenectady has just introduced a new accessory strap called add-it which allows folks to carry an extra laptop, handbag or perhaps shopping bag of holiday gifts to the top of their wheeled luggage ... Michael F. Petta has joined the Pierro Law Group ... Candor Productions of Delmar will be providing pro-bono public relations work for Bus Stop Club, an organization in the Capital District that provides free support to siblings of children with chronic or life-threatening diseases in the area. Finally, Albany's own Palace Theatre has been ranked 59th out of the top 100 theater venues internationally for ticket sales. They join an illustrious list that includes London's Royal Albert Hall and New York City's Radio City Music Hall.

And that just about clears my desk or at least my mind, for another few weeks. As always, if you have anything you'd like to see in the column, feel free to e-mail me at: kellertw@spotlightnews.com. We can't guarantee they will all get in, but we'll give it our best shot.

And following my own words ... thanks for taking some of your time to spend with me today.

Voorheesville Fire Department expansion moves forward

By ART STEIN
news@spotlightnews.com

The village of Voorheesville has awarded bids for the expansion of the village's fire department facility, including general construction, mechanical construction, plumbing and electrical.

Dutch Valley General Contractors were the low bidders for general construction with a bid of $526,642. Family Danz' bid of $90,459 will cover mechanical construction, and TLM Inc. won the plumbing contract with a bid of $43,900. Brunswick Electric received the electrical contract for $89,392.

"I anticipate the work beginning on Jan. 2 and construction taking approximately six to seven months," said trustee Richard Berger.

Also at the meeting, resident Dominick Campana asked about the status of a possible skate park and what role village residents could play in the decision.

"I'm here tonight on behalf of my son and a number of his friends and parents who are in support of the skate park, and I am interested in learning if there questioned the level of interest in the community for a skate park.

"We are just not sure what the level of interest is for a skate park, both for and against," said Conway. "We have received input from residents, both in support of a skate park, and some residents who have voiced concerns."

Board members asked Campana to put together an informal petition to gauge interest.

Village trustee David Cardona added: "As recreation liaison to the village, I would be more than happy to work with you and meet with a group of parents interested in this issue."

"The board is certainly receptive toward hearing all options," added Conway.

In other town news, Will Smith, director of public works, said the joint water interconnect project with the town of Guilderland is proceeding as planned. The interconnect project represents the final phase of the village's water system project.

"Construction is moving along quite nicely, and everything has been inspected and approved for operation by the state Department of Health," said Smith.

Board member Bill Hotaling reported that the construction of a sidewalk that traverses the CSX railroad right-of-way would be installed next year, probably in the spring.

is anything I can do to move this along," said Campana.

Mayor Robert Conway said the board welcomes input from the community.

"We are looking for someone to take charge of this," said Conway.

The board is considering acquiring equipment from a recently closed skate park in Croton-on-Hudson (neighboring Bethlehem is also looking at that park equipment), as well as looking into the Tony Hawk Foundation for potential grant money. Village Park is being considered as a possible location.

Conway echoed concerns of many board members when he

Sheriff, Center collect donations

The Hilltown Christmas Program is a nonprofit, charitable organization where all of the proceeds collected go toward the program. This is a joint effort between the members of the Albany County Sheriff's Department and the Hilltown Community Resource Center.

It provides assistance to families in the towns of New Scotland, Berne, Knox, Westerlo and Rensselaerville.

During the Christmas season, volunteers collect toys, food and cash donations for the sole purpose of redistribution back into the community.

Cash donations are utilized for purchasing new clothes and toys for identified families in need and converted into gift certificates for groceries (no tobacco or alcohol). For monetary donations, make checks payable to the ACSD Hilltown Christmas Fund and forward to: Albany County Sheriff's Hilltown Christmas, 390 New Salem Road, Voorheesville, N.Y. 12186. # Local grocer offers online shopping

irwinr@spotlightnews.com

If you have a computer, an Internet connection and some extra bucks, shopping for groceries may no longer have to include the headache of heavy bags, long lines and trying to make time for it in your day.

Since the summer, Nichols' Market in Voorheesville has been offering online ordering for most of its products. Orders can either be picked up or, for a few more dollars, an employee will deliver them.

According to general manager Jaret Nichols, people have been asking him for years to start an online shopping service for the grocery store.

Jordan True, the store's online shopping coordinator, said after an order is placed on the store's Web site — www.nicholsmarket.com — he pulls the items off the shelves and fills the order.

"I shop it for them, basically," said True.

True said he typically fills four to five orders a week, and the pick-up and delivery services are split about evenly.

"It's getting more popular," said True. "I get a lot of older people who can't go out that much and moms with kids who don't want to go to the grocery store with their kids. It's very beneficial for them."

This is the first winter the delivery/pickup service will be offered, and True said he expects a spike once the snow begins to fall.

Nichols also said he wants to see the service expand.

"It's something that's got to grow," he said. "We're slowly rolling it out and perfecting it still."

Nichols said he knows of cases where some grocery businesses that offer online shopping have seen more than one-third of their sales come from the Internet customers.

Locally, Price Chopper tried a similar service in the past, but Mona Golub, spokeswoman for grocery chain, said it ended once it began to lose money.

"The cost of taking the orders, filling the orders and delivering the orders, was cost-prohibitive," said Golub.

In the Capital District, Golub said, the demand was not there to keep the service available.

Additionally the customers of the Price Chopper service were not offered the store's sales prices, and Golub said many customers were not comfortable with being delivered perishable products, though they were guaranteed. Currently, Price Chopper offers the service only for pharmaceuticals.

"It's not for everybody. They were losing money on it. In order to make it successful, you have to cover the costs," said Nichols, citing the cost of travel and an employee's time spent doing the shopping as expenditures involved in offering such a service.

On a recent day, some shoppers at Nichols' said the service, although convenient, wouldn't be of much use to them.

"I shop at more than one place and live down the street, so I don't find it difficult," said Kathy Fiero of Voorheesville.

Guilderland resident Marianne Hurley said, "I wouldn't because I have the time to shop. I enjoy the shopping."

One shopper, who asked not to be named, said that the added money would be a deterrent, but she could see situations where Nichols' Market has been offering online ordering for most of its products, which can either be picked up or delivered.

she might use the service.

"I can't say absolutely not," she said.

The pickup service is offered for free to first-time users, and after that it costs $9 each time. Delivery service is offered for $15.

"If you don't like going to a grocery store, you can spend five minutes online or, what, like an hour in the grocery store," said True. "It's very convenient."

Use Your Power To Choose.

In New York's competitive energy marketplace, you no longer have to buy your electricity and natural gas only from your local utility. Instead, you can shop among the new Energy Service Companies (ESCOs) that are competing for your business. This change should bring efficiencies and innovations that will give you better value for your energy dollar.

The combined services once offered by your utility have been split into two parts — supply and delivery, with the supply portion open to competition. You can choose to switch to an ESCO or continue buying your energy supply from your utility.

Regardless of where you buy your supply, your utility will still deliver energy to you. The safety and reliability you depend on won't change, and you'll still call your utility during emergencies or service interruptions.

A new choice for your energy supply

When you shop for electricity, you can now consider selecting Green Power providers for some or all of your supply. Green Power providers supply environmentally friendly electricity generated from renewable sources such as solar, wind, biomass, geothermal and low-impact or small hydro. For only a few pennies more a day, you can make a world of difference for generations to come.

Strength in numbers

Purchasing electricity and gas with others, called "aggregation," gives your group greater buying power and may save you money. For example, the Municipal Electric and Gas Alliance (MEGA) members (municipalities and school districts in Central New York) saved approximately $2.7 million on their electric bills last year. You may belong to a community or business association that can coordinate with ESCOs for the best package of prices and services. For more information, go to www.PowerToChooseNY.com and click on Contact Us or call us at 518-474-1540.

Choosing a supplier

To shop for an ESCO, evaluate their offerings, compare them with your utility's offering, and decide which is best for you. You should:

1. Call your utility or the Public Service Commission at 1-888-Ask-PSC1 (1-888-275-7721) for ESCOs serving your area. Or go to www.PowerToChooseNY.com or your utility's Web site for a list, and then call the companies. The ESCOs and their offers change, so check periodically.
2. Compare prices, services and terms offered.
3. Consider customer services such as toll-free numbers, Web sites and complaint handling.
4. Check out billing and payment options.

5. Confirm the details of the agreement. Be sure to check with your ESCO about early termination fees prior to enrolling in a contract. If the fees are not clearly stated, ask the ESCO for an estimate of the early termination fee based on your energy usage.

6. Choose your supplier and monitor your bills and service. If you are not satisfied, you can switch back to your utility or to another ESCO, subject to any applicable contract terms.

For a list of ESCOs and more information, visit www.PowerToChooseNY.com, call 1-888-Ask-PSC1 (1-888-275-7721) or contact your local utility listed below:

Join over 1 million New Yorkers. Choose your energy supplier.

In the past, you had no choice of who provided you with your natural gas and electricity supply — it was your local utility. Well, things have changed.

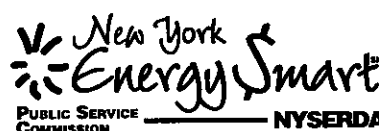

In New York State, companies other than your local utility, called Energy Service Companies (ESCOs), are competing to provide you with electricity and natural gas. No matter which supplier you choose, your utility will still deliver your energy safely and reliably, and respond to emergencies.

Competition gives you greater choice and better value including:

- Fixed, variable or capped pricing
- Appliance repairs and service contracts
- Green Power energy sources

For an energy supplier guide, visit www.PowerToChooseNY.com or call 1-888-Ask-PSC1 and we will mail you a copy.

With National Grid's New Choices program, residential and small business customers can save 7% on their energy supply for a two-month introductory period. For more information go to www.nationalgridus.com/newchoices

Porco

said, referring to statements made by Porco's defense team against former Bethlehem police Det. Anthony Arduini prior to pre-trial hearings on the case last June. Kindlon accused Arduini of a conflict of interest in the murder investigation because both of Arduini's daughters dated Christopher Porco and, Kindlon said, the officer feared one of his daughters might have run away with Porco on the day of the crime.

Szostak also said Kindlon is calling into question the performance of juror Heather Martin. Kindlon is requesting a hearing to determine whether or not juror misconduct during verdict deliberations occurred. The defense team alleges that a juror, who spoke with a local newspaper after the verdict, had stated jurors exchanged notes when deliberating. Rossi said he has not spoken with that juror, but

"I am perplexed why he (Kindlon) repeatedly goes after innocent people with these baseless and far-fetched accusations."

Patty Szostak

the newspaper did print a retraction to that story, according to the District Attorney's office.

Rossi said he expects Joan Porco, who survived the attack but said she has no memory of it, to also give a victim impact statement, and the probation department will conduct a presentencing investigation before Dec. 12.

"This includes investigating the defendant, the police and undergoing a background check of the defendant's family," said Rossi.

McDermott was chief prosecutor in the Porco case and announced two weeks ago he would be joining the private law firm of O'Connell and Aronowitz but will continue working with the district attorney's office during sentencing.

Kindlon is expected to appeal the guilty verdict shortly after sentencing. Porco could be sentenced up to 50 years in prison.

Teacher

Langevin said she estimated the 80 percent of the calls that came into her office regarding the matter were in favor of not returning Crandall to the classroom.

According to Langevin, the idea to place Crandall in the temporary position and effectively keep him out of the to Crandall's suspension was his alleged retaliation against two students in 2003 who had filed complaints against him in 2001. Both students said that in 2003, Crandall took retaliatory action that included treating them differently from other students in the class, and questioning or making comments to the students about the prior complaints. Following the initial 2001 complaints, Crandall had been given a directive not to retaliate against the students.

Vice president of the board, C. James Coffin, said he accepts that Crandall must be accepted back in some capacity.

"My position is, I don't want him in the classroom," said Coffin, citing Crandall's record of ignoring prior counseling considering issues of misconduct. "If that's the caliber of the person he is and the employee he is, he's not welcome."

According to the hearing's report, Crandall had been counseled in the past for a variety of reasons.

In 1994, Crandall was counseled for walking out of a conference and in 2001 he was counseled for "slapping students on the bottom."

In February 2003 he was issued a letter of reprimand for allowing the boys junior varsity basketball team to swim in the pool before it was open.

Additionally, he had been counseled verbally and in writing concerning inappropriate comments to students.

Langevin said it has yet to be determined in what capacity Crandall, who is also a soccer coach, would return next year.

"We'll cross that bridge when we come to it," said Langevin.

When the recommendations were initially released by the hearing officer, Langevin said that she was hoped for dismissal, not only because of the allegations but also because Crandall had been repeatedly counseled in the past.

It was the hearing officer's belief that a 60-day unpaid suspension would alert Crandall to the severity of his misconduct.

Kathy Fiero, president of the Voorheesville Teacher's Association, said, "We don't have a stance other than to respect the process and the hearing officer's decision."

Efforts to reach Crandall and his lawyer were unsuccessful.

classroom was discussed in a private meeting with the school board on Nov. 13. Additionally, Langevin said the issued was brought to the attention of the physical education department and the teachers union.

"We support her moving forward," said school board president David Gibson.

Assignment of teachers' duties does not require a resolution by the board, and is left up to administration. Gibson said as representatives of the community, the board provided input about the decision.

"It's a matter in which the board has been listening to the community," Gibson said.

Gibson said that while the board was not pleased with the circumstances of the situation, the board, as a body, is supportive of how it's being handled.

In September 2003, high school Principal Mark Diefendorf initiated an investigation of Crandall. The focus of the inquiry was an incident of misconduct that took place that same month. The misconduct stemmed from an incident in which Crandall asked a male student: "Who is that hot (sexy) blond you're running with?"

In March 2004, it was reported that Crandall made another inappropriate comment.

According to the report, while collecting information about students, Crandall asked a female ninth grade student where she lived, and when she asked why, Crandall responded something to the effect of: "So I can follow you home and come to your house and murder you in your sleep."

Panel tackles Route 9 traffic woes

By JIM CUOZZO

cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

A workshop to discuss the future of the Route 9W traffic corridor will be the main topic of conversation for Bethlehem residents and town officials at a 6 p.m. meeting Monday, Dec. 11, at the Glenmont Elementary School.

The "issues and visioning" workshop will invite people to discuss ways to improve the transportation in that area and resolve the heavy truck traffic and bottleneck issues that have plagued the Selkirk bypass.

"This study is a direct outgrowth of our comprehensive plan," said town board member Sam Messina.

A major recommendation of the town's comprehensive plan, adopted in 2005, was the study of Route 9W. Town officials said they feel the more input received, the better the chance for a solution.

"Supervisor (Theresa) Egan has said we need to make a decision as a town to solve this problem, and recognize that not everyone will be happy with the solution," said George Leveille, town economic development director.

"I would like to see a traffic and transportation plan design for the 9W corridor that can be agreed upon and resolve the issues surrounding the Selkirk bypass and the truck traffic on Maple Avenue," Messina said.

Major components of the study include development of a draft plan for the corridor and workshops to identify the bypass issue.

The workshop will discuss problems that stem from the truck traffic that flows out of the Selkirk railyards from Creble Road to Route 9W to Route 396, Maple Avenue, and then on to the Selkirk Thruway exit.

"There are bottlenecks, lighting situations and truck traffic issues," said Messina.

The Route 9W concerns have lingered for more than 10 years without a real solution, and Leveille said it is getting to a point where it is affecting business development along that roadway.

"The likelihood of commercial and industrial development is not good without continued improvement access," Leveille said.

One option town officials are considering is a new Thruway exit to ease truck traffic.

"I think we should certainly consider this," Leveille said.

The Route 9W corridor study committee consists of Keith Bennet, Mike Daley, Tom Dolin, Linda Jasinski, Nancy Kuivila and Peter Lauricella.

"We have experts who know about traffic systems, road design and land use," said Messina.

A "linkage" study grant from the Capital District Transportation Committee (CDTC) is helping to underwrite the costs of the committee. More information about the study can be found on the town Web site at www.townofbethlehem.org.

Four Corners Ink shop changes its name

There's a new name for several Island Ink-Jet print cartridge refilling stores in the Capital District: I Fill Inkjets.

I Fill Inkjets provides refills for inkjet and toner printing cartridges and helps protect the environment through reuse and recycling.

"Our products and commitment to high quality service will remain the same," said owner Mark Tremont. "Consumers will still pay about half the price for a refill than for a new cartridge and still protect the environment, but now we'll have a totally local direction and focus."

The name change was required when Tremont decided to leave the Vancouver, B.C.-

based Island Ink-Jet franchise and go independent.

I Fill Inkjets stores are located at Colonie Center Mall, Delmar's Four Corners, and Price Chopper stores in Clifton Park, Latham, Schenectady and Queensbury.

"It's all about reuse and recycling, and people are excited about the prospects of protecting their environment. While it's a small step, many people want to be better stewards of the environment, and our cartridge refill service is one way to conserve resources," Tremont said.

For information on inkjet cartridge and toner refills, contact I Fill Inkjets at 478-0140.

The Capital District's Quality Weeklies

Commission's report is tough medicine for some hospitals

By ROB IRWIN
irwin@spotlightnews.com

The statewide Commission on Health Care Facilities in the 21st Century recently announced a sweeping set of reform recommendations to restructure hospital and nursing home systems in New York. Some would have a significant impact on Capital District facilities.

On Tuesday, Nov. 28, the commission issued a report that proposed changes to one quarter of all the hospitals in the state. Locally, that includes a suggested merger of two Albany County nursing homes, changes to Ellis and St. Clare hospitals in Schenectady, and a recommendation to close Bellevue Woman's Hospital in Niskayuna.

In its report, the commission said Bellevue's weak financial situation and the benefits that consolidation with other area hospitals would have on the quality of care, are reasons for the proposed closure. Capturing Bellevue's patient base — many of whom are privately insured — would improve the viability of other Schenectady hospitals.

Under the law that founded the commission as part of the 2005-2006 state budget, the report's findings are recommendation only. The governor and both houses of the state Legislature would need to approve them to become law.

The plan has been publicly endorsed by Republican Gov. George Pataki and Democrat Governor-elect Eliot Spitzer.

Anne Saile, president and CEO of Bellevue, said she is challenging the commission's findings.

"I'm here to say that Bellevue is here to stay," said Saile.

Saile said the findings surprised her, and the report did not include anything about the impact that closing the only women's hospital in the state could have on the region.

"It was disappointing that there wasn't any talk about that," she said.

"We have such a special, unique, award-winning hospital," said Saile. "For that not to be recognized is very disappointing, not just for me, but the thousands of women who come to Bellevue."

In response to the report's recommendation that the hospital's maternity, neonatal, eating disorders, and mobile outpatient education and screening services be added to another hospital, Saile said she doesn't feel that other hospitals would be able to absorb all of the patients and provide them the same level of expertise.

Bellevue is one of two remaining nonprofit women's specialty hospitals in the nation. It has 55 beds and its average daily census was 22 patients in 2004.

According to the commission, its chief service is low-risk obstetrics. Because it does not offer high-risk maternity care, medical surgical care or emergency services, the report said, closing the hospital won't affect the availability of high-tech services that are already directed to large facilities.

The report also called the hospital's financial situation dire and stated "its future viability is in serious jeopardy," citing substantial debt-load and negative net worth and losses in 2004 and 2005.

Saile said this depiction of the hospital's financial situation is incorrect.

"The report is not accurate; it's not based on actual facts," she said. "It mischaracterizes the debt that Bellevue is in."

Saile said since the hospital became a nonprofit, its debt has been reduced from $17 million to $12 million — in just five years.

"We're anything but in dire straits," she said.

The report listed the hospital's 2005 net deficit as $1.3 million, and its total deficit at the end of 2005 was $17.6 million.

A number of area politicians have stepped up in support of Bellevue.

"I am not pleased with this report," said state Assembly Leader James Tedisco, R-Schenectady. "To suggest Bellevue Woman's Hospital should close, and St. Clare's and Ellis Hospital should merge based solely on the population of Schenectady County, ignores the fact that these outstanding facilities serve a broader population, including the fast-growing southern Saratoga County population."

Schenectady County Legislature chairwoman Susan Savage, D-Niskayuna, also spoke out against the commission's findings.

"These recommendations would result in dire consequences for infants, women and the elderly throughout the Capital District," said Savage. "The closure of Bellevue would result in the loss of 225 full-time jobs and 140 part-time positions and the reduction at Glendale Nursing Home would result in the loss of approximately 100 jobs."

"The report's recommendations threaten Schenectady's hospital 'safety-net' for low-income patients, could force frail senior citizens into distant nursing homes, and would eliminate specialized health care for women," said state Sen. Hugh T. Farley, R-Schenectady.

Furthermore, Farley said, he would "insist that the legislature reject this all-or-nothing approach."

In Schenectady County — in addition to closing Bellevue Woman's Hospital — the commission recommended the merger of both St. Clare's and Ellis Hospitals and The Avenue and The Dutch Manor nursing care facilities, as well as the downsizing of the Glendale Home.

Rather than closing the Bellevue hospital, Saile said the answer to the improving the county's health care lies in strengthening the system as a whole.

"We have long wanted to collaborate with other hospitals in the area," she said.

In Albany County, the commission recommended that the Ann Lee Infirmary and the Albany County Home merge, downsize and rebuild a unified facility.

Albany County spokeswoman Kerri Battle said the recommendation is in line with what Democratic County Executive Michael Breslin had in his proposed 2007 budget.

"Albany County's commitment to long-term care remains strong and clear, but I have been saying for some time that the manner in which we do this needs to change," said Breslin.

Musher tells tales of the trail

Each year on the first Saturday of March in Anchorage, Alaska, men and women strike out on an adventure that forges legends and creates heroes.

Begun in 1973, the Iditarod Sled Dog Race follows a 1,200-mile course across the Alaska wilderness. The race commemorates the famous diphtheria serum run of 1925, when a dog sled relay brought lifesaving medicine to epidemic-ridden Nome.

Veteran musher Dewey Halverson will tell "True Stories from the Iditarod" on Saturday, Dec. 16, at 2 p.m. He has placed as high as second in the race and received several awards, including one for a life-saving rescue effort in 1996. He will give a history of the trail and the race, and share stories of musher heroics.

Halverson went to Alaska at the age of 19, prepared to live in the wilderness and rise to the challenge of "the last frontier." Thirty-three years later, he has many stories to tell. His involvement with the Iditarod race began as a volunteer in 1973; he ran his first race in 1977. He has successfully completed the grueling course nine times, and has placed second, third, fifth, seventh and 11th. He has received the Alascom Midway Award, the Gold Coast Award and the Sportsmanship Award, and has served on the board of directors for the Iditarod Trail Committee.

Halverson's lead dog Stevie will co-present the program. Halverson will also bring his sled, Arctic-weather gear, and mushing equipment. Audiences are welcome to ask questions, check out the sled and visit Stevie after the presentation.

This is a great program for dog-lovers, Alaskaphiles and adventurers, armchair and otherwise. It is made possible by the Al Russell memorial travel fund.

IN BRIEF

Seminar addresses legal rights when ill

Understanding your rights as an employee when you or someone you love is diagnosed with a serious illness is the topic of To Life's annual Gary Schwartz Health and Law Forum.

Presenting at this year's conference will be Ira Mendelson, III, of Buckley, Mendelson and Criscione, P.C., and Christopher J. Harrigan, of Hiscock and Barclay.

The forum will be held Tuesday, Dec. 12, from 9 until 11 a.m. at the Clarion Hotel of Albany. Those interested in attending should call To Life at 439-5975 or e-mail info@tolife.org. For attorneys wishing to receive continuing education credits (CLEs), the cost of the program is $65. For all others, the program is free, but requires pre-registration.

To Life!, a Capital District breast cancer education and support organization, sponsors the annual law forum to educate the legal community and the general public about topics impacting women and families facing breast cancer and other serious illness.

Friendship Singers to hold concert

The Friendship Singers will present their annual holiday concert on Monday, Dec. 11, at 7:30 p.m., at Delmar Reformed Church, 386 Delaware Ave. in Delmar. The event is free and open to the public.

This year's concert, "Tis the Season," will feature many lively and familiar Christmastime numbers, including "Rockin' Around the Christmas Tree," "Glory, Hallelu!" and "Happy Holiday."

The local women's performance group is marking its 25th anniversary this year. It was formed at First United Methodist Church in Sling-erlands when a few women who sang in the choir there wanted to add some more popular music to their repertoire.

Two of the original members, Stephanie Bollam and Pat Dolder, are still performing with the group. Two of its newest members, Wilma DeLucco and Linda Hohn, have joined in the past year after attending Friendship Singers concerts, deciding it looked like fun, and passing auditions.

The Friendship Singers will also be presenting this holiday program in December for eight other audiences at civic group gatherings and senior residences throughout the area.

The group rehearses at least once a week, on Tuesday mornings, at the Delmar Reformed Church. Separate dance rehearsals are also held.

Soup and sandwich with Santa on Dec. 9

Glenmont Community Church is offering soup and sandwich with Santa on Saturday, Dec. 9, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Visit with Santa, then have homemade soup, sandwich and Christmas cookies. The event is free for children younger than age 10, and $5 per person age 11 and older. Crafts and homemade baked goods will be available for sale as well.

Reservations are not required, but appreciated. Contact Rose Salisbury at 439-4078. The church is located on Chapel Lane and Weiser Street, behind Kmart.

Coalition lets hunters donate venison to food bank

By CARI SCRIBNER
scribnerc@spotlightnews.com

One large deer provides 160 servings of high-protein meat, and the statewide Venison Donation Coalition is working to get that food onto the plates of hungry families.

Over the course of the past seven years, the coalition, based in Bath, Steuben County, has helped provide 206 tons of meat, the equivalent of 1,651,748 meals to hungry families.

The process begins with hunters donating one or more of the deer they harvest during the hunting season, tagging and properly field-dressing them. The hunters can then take the deer, at no cost to them, to participating local meat processors who process and package it to meet stringent state laws.

Ground venison is highly nutritious. Venison is low in calories, fat and cholesterol. High in protein, it contains no additives or antibiotics. Once packaged, the meat is picked up by volunteers and distributed to soup kitchens, food pantries and the homes of needy families through the Food Bank of Northeastern New York, headquartered in Latham. The food bank serves a 17-county area.

The Venison Donation Coalition coordinates the process from start to finish.

"We rely on hunters to make this program work, and because we have no budget for advertising, we need people to spread the word," said Kathleen Balbierer, marketing consultant for the coalition.

Along with feeding hungry families, there are other advantages to harvesting some of the wild deer in herds across the state. According to the state Department of Environmental Conservation's Bureau of Wildlife, more than 800,000 whitetail deer roam New York. The agency said the herds cause extensive damage to crops, landscape, and vehicles. There is approximately $130 million of crop and landscape damage and $120 million of vehicle damage caused by deer annually.

"We've been trying to bring the herd number down," said Greg Fuerst, technical advisor to the coalition and staff member at the DEC. "Deer densities differ in every region across the state, but all are very high."

Winter weather is a huge factor in the number of wandering herds.

"This season's warm weather has made deer movement tough; they have their winter coats on and tend not to move around," said Fuerst. "But with cold snaps coming on, that will change, and the deer will be roaming again." Hunters can obtain licenses annually for using bows, muzzle loaders or shot guns to harvest deer, and are limited to six to eight deer each season, among which only two may be bucks.

"We control the herds by bringing down the number of does," said Fuerst. "We do issue deer management permits for antlerless deer only."

Fuerst said statistics show the average family is able to consume no more than two deer per season.

"I challenge hunters to donate their first deer, so their freezer is empty but not the food bank freezers," said Fuerst.

Mike Spennello of Schoharie County first became a deer donor as a direct result of a freezer problem.

"I always hunt and eat a lot of venison, but last year, my freezer broke down, so I donated it," said Spennello. "It's just an excellent cause. It's a way for sportsmen to give back to the community."

made Stan Lee, the creator of Marvel's many superheroes and villains, a well-known personage among comic book aficionados.

While his company sought bankruptcy protection to reorganize its finances in the late 1990s, Marvel is still considered a leading publisher of the monthly periodicals known as comic books. But in recent years, those brightly illustrated publications have started coming under the umbrella of a larger portion of the publishing industry known as graphic novels.

A generic term of art, graphic novels aren't limited to publications featuring the traditional superheroes that baby boomers grew up with in the 1960s. Instead, they also include a whole new variant known as manga. Originating mostly from writers and artists based in Japan, the new titles shy away from mutant heroes and slashing physical battles. Instead, manga appeals more to the intellect and emotions of the reader.

"My favorite is Samurai Champloo," said 13-year old Angelo Catalano of Delmar. "There's a girl, maybe about 13 or 14 years old, and her mother passes away. Her father left years ago and she has to deal with all kinds of situations."

The aging demographic that traditional comic books appeal to is forcing some of the changes in the industry.

"Our customer base is made up mostly of people who stop by every week to pick up their favorite titles and see what's new. On average, they are a 30-year-old male who has been reading comics for years and they follow titles like Batman or the Avengers," said Jevon Kasitch, the manager of Electric City Comics on Van Vranken Avenue in Schenectady. "And the age keeps going up by about a year per year. So let's say five years ago, the average age of a customer was 25; now we are at about 30."

Manga relies less on flashy art than traditional comic books with illustrations often done in black, white and gray. But what they don't include in colorful inks, they make up for in story lines that have lead characters, often teenagers, struggling with difficult decisions about life and death. "The traditional books remind people more of what they read growing up," said Shaun Belsito, owner of Spa City Comics near Skidmore College. "The manga titles are for people who want to see a more evolved story line."

An example can be seen in "Full Metal Alchemist", a hot manga title this season. In it, two young brothers seek to bring their father back from the dead only to nearly kill themselves in an unusual ritual gone wrong. After recovering from their near-death experience, the brothers realize that the older, Edward Elric, has lost an arm and a leg. The younger one, Alphonse, has lost everything but his soul.

Recovering from their calamity, the pair uses metal pieces to replace the body parts they no longer have and the story follows them as they travel the countryside.

The story draws readers in by playing off real life problems young people share. Other titles like Gundam Wing tap into readers interested in science fiction.

"They have giant robots protecting the Earth with young people at the controls," said Nathan Brown, a 13-year-old from Delmar. "The lead character is about 17 years old, I think it's kind of cool that it's a young person like me saving the world."

History panels

How Ben Franklin's satire became today's graphic novels

By JIM FRANCO

Comics have evolved from the one-panel political satire first drawn by Ben Franklin and published in 1754 to what are now known as graphic novels, a series of short stories with an accompanying in-depth, vibrant visual representation.

"Comic books are enduring because they are the simplest form of production to telling a complete story, with pictures and dialogue together," said Jevon Kasitch of Electric City Comics in Schenectady.

There are a few landmarks in the evolution of comic books. In 1896, Richard Fenton Outalt incorporated the balloon, where he wrote what the character said and pointed to their mouth with a tail-like swoosh, in his comic book "The Yellow Kid."

The Golden Age of comics came after the stock market crash of 1929. In the 1930s, some of the most popular enduring comic books were written, like Tarzan, Dick Tracy, Flash Gordon and Superman — which kicked off the superhero blitz when it was first published in 1938, according to comicbookwebsites.com.

Those comics, Kasitch said, came about as an accident. "In the early 1930s, printing press owners only made money when the presses were running, so when they were not printing the newspaper, they started printing comic books," he said.

The superheroes in those comics filled an important niche.

"For the longest time, the comic book was the only way a person could escape and be a superhero and help save the world," Kasitch said. "Now, that desire can be fulfilled at the movies, on television and the Internet."

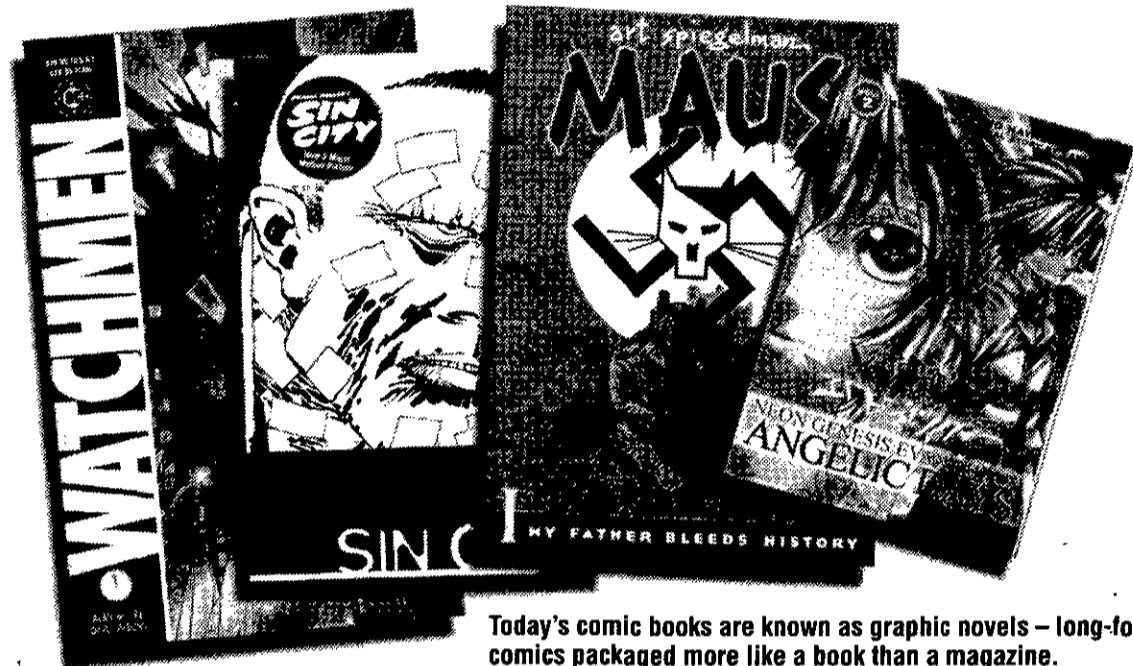

By 1945, some 400 superheroes were created in comic strips but few survived. The ones that did, however, like Batman, Superman and Spiderman, still rake in millions at the box office. It was also during this time that comics made the widespread jump from the one strip published in the daily newspaper to the magazine format of the comic book.

In the 1950s, the comic book found itself under fire and a "Comics Code" was adopted, according to Comix, A History of Comic Books in America, by the Comics Magazine Association of America. Comic books carrying the seal incorporated provisions like:

- If a crime is committed, it shall be as a sordid and unpleasant activity.
- In every instance, good shall triumph over evil and the criminal shall be punished for his misdeeds.
- No unique or unusual methods of concealing weapons shall be shown.
- Nudity in any form is prohibited, as is indecent or undue exposure.
- Suggestive or salacious illustration or suggestive posture is unacceptable. Females shall be drawn realistically without any exaggeration of physical qualities.

The Comics Code was ignored, however, through the 1960s and 1970s by underground, self-published writers and artists who are considered the pioneers of the modern day graphic novelists. The most popular of that genre, Heavy Metal, hit the stands in 1977 featuring colorful drawings of big buxom women and stories about drunken acid trips and hard core rock and roll. It later became a full featured animated movie.

Today's comic books are known as graphic novels — long-form comics packaged more like a book than a magazine.

The "Comics Code" was amended in 1971 and again in 1989, however, and both modifications were less stringent than the 1956 original set of guidelines. They also included provisions for adult comics as well as those traditional comics written for children.

Other memorable dates include 1986, when Marvel Comics was sold to businessman Ron Perelman, who tried to boost sales through the use of gimmicks like holograms and glow-in-the-dark features. In 1989, the year the first Batman movie, came out sending comic book sales through the roof. And in 1993 Superman died, causing such an outcry by fans that DC Comics brought the superhero back a few editions later.

Today, the comic book is known as the graphic novel — a long-form comic packaged more like a book than a magazine. While the format has been around for some 25 years, over the last five years or so — dubbed the "Golden Age of Writers" by comic historians — their popularity exploded.

According to Publishers Weekly, retail graphic novel sales jumped 18 percent from 2004 to 2005, with around $245 million in sales last year alone. And they are not just for kids anymore. According to a recent reader's survey by Diamond Comics, the largest distributor of comics in the United States, the average comic book/graphic novel reader is 29 years old.

That means the writing has changed, too.

"The demands of a 29- or 30-year-old are different from those of a 10-year-old," Kasitch said.

Comic books have gone global, too. According to Diamond, the Japanese Manga — comics that are largely character-oriented like wildly popular Full Metal Alchemist — are increasing between 20 and 30 percent a year. Also, whereas most of those who read the superhero comics are male, Manga brought the female readership back into the mix, and it is estimated that near 50 percent of Manga readers are female.

Comics are still evolving and are reaching beyond the traditional printed page and the movie screens. There are interactive video games and Web sites based on graphic novels and their characters.

Center Health Care covers all aspects of wellness

By BETH NICHOLS

"It is difficult, but it is not the end of the world," said Maxcine Johnson, a patient who receives treatment and other services at the Multiple Sclerosis Care Center, part of Center Health Care at the Center for Disability Services in Albany.

"It is what you make of it, and I choose to live," said Johnson.

She received a mid-life diagnosis of multiple sclerosis at an already difficult time in her life. She said she did not want to be a burden to family.

Johnson was referred to the MS Care Center, and has high praise for its holistic approach to treatment.

The MS Care Center is the brainchild of Center Health Care's Medical Director, Dr. Daniel J. Silverman, in conjunction with the Upstate New York Chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society. It provides treatment for the management of symptoms, promotes mobility and independence, seeks to avoid or minimize secondary complications, assists patients and family members with the psychological impact of a chronic disease, and supports a multidisciplinary approach to rehabilitation efforts. It also provides access to all those services in one location.

"Since MS involves every aspect of someone's life, it is good to provide treatment for every aspect which they have a problem with," said Silverman.

Center Health Care operates many medical, dental and specialty services at 314 South Manning Blvd., within the main building of the Center for Disability Services. Silverman said the purpose of the fully accessible medical facility is "to enable and support each person we serve to obtain and maintain their optimal level of health and well-being."

The idea took hold when medical professionals realized patients with significant physical, mental or behavioral disabilities experienced barriers to receiving care. Medical exams might require specialized equipment, such as a lift for patients who are unable to transfer onto an examination table. A patient might have difficulty understanding a procedure or could be fearful and in need of a pre-appointment consultation. For the medical and clinical staff at Center Health Care, these issues are part of the daily practice.

Patients come to Center Health Care through referrals, from the community, and from the Center's own residences and programs. Adult and pediatric primary care is offered, along with women's health care. Other services include neurology, behavioral health and specialty medical care including orthopedic, rehabilitation medicine, optometry, swallowing disorders, podiatry, a hand clinic and audiology.

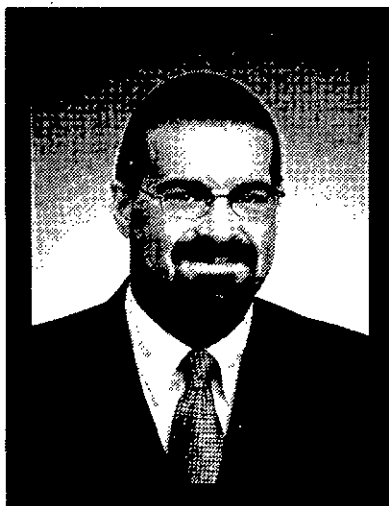

Outpatient therapy includes occupational, physical, and speech therapy, aquatic therapy, and a therapeutic horseback-riding program. Developmental assessments for children are offered and complete dental care is available. There are on-call emergency services for psychiatry, neurology and primary care patients at all times.

There are also opportunities outside of traditional approaches, such as a yoga class specifically for participants who have disabilities. Johnson attends those classes regularly, and said she is puzzled when people ask why she bothers to exercise. "Why not?" she responds. "Everybody else does. We're no different. We just have a disability."

Join us in continuing our discussion of the future of Bethlehem!!

RT. 9W CORRIDOR STUDY PUBLIC WORKSHOP

The Town of Bethlehem adopted its first ever Comprehensive Plan in 2005 and is actively implementing its recommendations. One of these recommendations was to conduct a transportation and land use linkage study of the Rt. 9W corridor. Residents, property owners, business owners and all interested parties are encouraged to participate in this study.

Issues and Visioning Workshop

How do you envision the Route 9W corridor looking and functioning in five, ten or twenty years? The workshop will provide an opportunity for community members to define a vision for the future of the corridor. Within the framework of the Town Comprehensive Plan, the NYS Dept of Transportation's previous work for the Selkirk Bypass and a recently completed profile of existing conditions in the corridor, participants will work to confirm and prioritize major issues, concerns and opportunities with regard to transportation, land use and the visual environment. Discussions will help the study team move toward developing a refined vision for the corridor.

By JILL U. ADAMS

As we are comforted by the rituals of the holiday season, so are we enlivened by revisiting their lessons anew.

The New York State Theatre Institute (NYSTI) is offering one of those lessons in its holiday offering of "A Wonderful Life" at the Schacht Fine Arts Center on the Russell Sage College campus in Troy through Saturday, Dec. 16. It's the classic story, adapted from the 1946 film, made all the more familiar with television reruns of the movie.

"It's a musical, but it's the same story," said Patricia DiBenedetto Snyder, who directs the play and is the founder and producing artistic director of NYSTI. "It clings pretty close to the movie story line. I wouldn't want to change it."

George Bailey, played by Timothy Booth, dreams of getting out and seeing the world, but one crisis after another prevents him from doing so.

With the help of Clarence the angel, played by John Romeo, George realizes that each of these occurrences, while laced with disappointment, helped a neighbor in a significant way, and helped build a close and caring community.

The familiar words of moviemaker Frank Capra are present, says Booth, "but it's the beauty of live theatre. It's like a living being that they're part of. I think they really go through the journey with George and Clarence and the townspeople."

Theatrical touches add to the immediacy — sounds, smells, sights, lights — that aren't in the movie.

"And the costumes are absolutely gorgeous," Booth said. True to the 1940s period, Booth said wearing the costume enhances his performance.

"It's a lot more clothing than we're used to," he said. "You find the way to walk."

NYSTI debuted "A Wonderful Life," adapted by Sheldon Harnick with music by Joe Raposo, in 1998, and performed it again in 1999. This will be the first time since then that it was performed at NYSTI. Booth, who played George Bailey in the earlier productions, says it feels great to revisit the role.

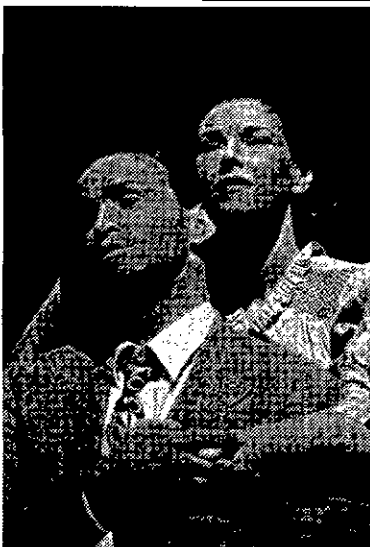

"It's a little more informed, just being older," he said of his performance. "I'm George's age now."

The stage production includes musical numbers, including a rousing version of the dance, the Charleston.

John Romeo, as Clarence the novice angel, imagines earning his wings in a scene from 'A Wonderful Life' with Byron Nilsson as Joseph. The holiday musical, adapted from the classic film, will play at the NYS Theatre Institute, Schacht Fine Arts Center at Russell Sage College in Troy, Friday, Dec. 1 through Saturday, Dec. 16.

When the spirit moves you NYSTI presents musical twist to holiday classic

Timothy Booth and Catherine LaValle star as George Bailey and Mary Hatch who realize their growing attraction as they share a phone for a long distance call.

"It's huge," said Booth. "Forty-two people jumping around on the stage doing the Charleston. It's a lot of energy."

His favorite moments in the play are the "indulgent ones," said Booth. Those are the ones that piece everything together. One is when George's daughter Zuzu, played by 6-year-old Sophie Whiteman, says "every time a bell rings, an angel gets his wings."

"And I just look at that little girl and say, 'I hope so,'" said Booth. "He's so grateful that he's back," he said of his character. "And he hopes that the angel gets his wish too."

Working with child actors is wonderful, said DiBenedetto Snyder.

"They're quick and they're eager and they're so excited about the show," she said. "For me, the holidays are about that, about the children."

DiBenedetto Snyder shows her commitment to children at the holidays by giving away tickets to the Northeast Parent and Child Society, for children residing at the center as well as children in foster homes and their foster parents. She believes that theater is an instrument of hope, and in the theme of the play.

"This community pulls together to help George Bailey," said DiBenedetto Snyder. "A Wonderful Life" sets an example of concentrating on the positives and of the timeless message that it is better to give than receive, she says.

"I feel that if more people in this world would do that with one another, we'd have a better world," she said.

Many shows are sold out, but remaining tickets can be purchased at the NYSTI box office, 274-3256, or online at www.nysti.org.

Eagles fall short in Niskayuna

The Bethlehem boys basketball team had a hard time getting its offense going in losses to Mohonasen and Niskayuna at last weekend's Niskayuna Invitational Tournament.

Kevin Stempsey scored 26 points, but no other Eagle reached double figures in a 53-42 loss to Mohonasen in Friday's opening round.

Bethlehem led 12-11 after the first quarter, but Mohonasen bounced back to take a 24-23 halftime lead. The Mighty Warriors then outscored the Eagles 10-4 in the third quarter and added 19 points in the fourth quarter to pull away for the 11-point win.

Pat Barnes had 18 points, and Paton Couball added 14 points for Mohonasen, which went on to defeat Schalmont 60-40 in Saturday's championship game.

In the consolation game, Bethlehem and Niskayuna battled back and forth before the Silver Warriors pulled out a 48-45 win.

The Eagles led 24-23 at halftime, but Niskayuna outscored them 25-21 in the second half to take third place in its own tournament.

Stempsey provided much of Bethlehem's offense with 18 points. Gleason Judd contributed six points, but no other Eagle had more than four points. Garrett Bush paced Niskayuna with 17 points, and Will Burkey added 10 points.

The Eagles played their first home game in more than a year Tuesday when they hosted Columbia in their Suburban Council opener. Bethlehem's basketball teams played their home games at Sage College of Albany last year following a flood in the main gym that damaged the floor.

Bethlehem hosts Niskayuna Friday.

Marler signs with Binghamton

Bethlehem Central High School senior Andrew Marler has signed a national letter of intent to play for the Binghamton University golf team next year.

Marler joins a Bobcats' squad that has reached the NCAA Division I regionals three of the last four years.

"Andrew is the No. 1 junior player out of the Albany area and has a well-rounded game," said Binghamton coach Nick Lasky. "He is long off the tee and is extremely dedicated and motivated. I think he's ready to hit his prime, and I'm very happy he has chosen Binghamton University to continue his education and golfing career."

Marler was the Suburban Council champion and the runner-up at the Section II championships earlier this year. He also reached match play at the New York State Amateur Championship, and he qualified for three national tournaments.

talented guards such as Talor Battle and Jamel Lyde, and now they have an inside presence with forward Shimeek Johnson, who transferred from Albany.

The Brothers won't see Johnson Saturday when they play Maginn at the Washington Avenue Amory, but it will still be an interesting early-season Big 10 game. The rematch, though, will be a war — one worthy of the big-game atmosphere that only the Pepsi Arena can provide.

- The Bethlehem girls team looks to re-join the Suburban Council elite. The Lady Eagles have nearly everyone back from last year — a season in which they earned a victory over traditional power Colonie and challenged the likes of Shenendehowa and Guilderland. Figuring that they will build on that success, the Lady Eagles are primed to have their best finish since winning the 2003 class A Sectional championship.

- The Amsterdam girls are ready to join the Section II elite. Watching the Running Rams handle Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake in the Lady Spartans' tournament Saturday, all I can say is defending class AA champion Catholic Central will have its hands full when it plays Amsterdam. The Running Rams may be young (three juniors and a freshman are part of their starting lineup), but they play like veterans.

- Watervliet is back. Three words that usually send chills through the Colonial Council boys basketball universe. The Cannoneers won their own tournament and beat Ballston Spa — a Suburban Council school more than three times Watervliet's size — in the process. When Voorheesville won the Section II title two years ago, one of its first significant victories was beating Catholic Central in its season opener.

I'm not saying Watervliet is going to win a Sectional title because it beat Ballston Spa, but it's something to keep in mind because it's not often that a Colonial Council team beats a Suburban Council team. The same thing goes for Schalmont, which beat Niskayuna at the Niskayuna Invitational. The Sabres are going to be good, but they still have a tough Colonial Council schedule to deal with.

- Any small school with the word Christian in it. The Loudonville Christian boys team is off to a fast start after knocking off Waterford 49-18 in its Central Hudson Valley League opener.

The Eagles have a veteran lineup and a favorable league in which to build a nice résumé for Sectionals.

Meanwhile, Schenectady Christian's girls team is as dangerous as it was when it won the class C title last year, despite the graduation of the school's all-time leading scorer, Katie Kaidas. Sarah Child and Rosa Pardee are more than capable of picking up the scoring slack. The only question is, who will play the National Anthem on the violin before each game like Kaidas did?

It's a long season, but all of these teams will have a say in their respective leagues.

games until something like that (flood) happens," said Nealon.

Ironically, the Lady Eagles must hit the road this week for games against Columbia (Tuesday), Niskayuna (Friday) and Troy (Saturday). But they will be home soon enough to show their fans that they're ready to challenge for a divisional title in the Suburban Council.

"We're going to be a team that not a lot of people are going to want to play come January," said Nealon.

to their nestGirls team re-opens gym by splitting tournament games

By ROB JONAS

The last time the Bethlehem girls basketball team played a true home game, it was at the tail end of the 2004-05 season.

In between then and last weekend's Bethlehem Tip-off Tournament, the Lady Eagles spent a year playing "home" games at Sage College of Albany because the high school gym floor had been damaged by a flood. They used the adversity to transform themselves into a strong Suburban Council team.

Bethlehem showed the home fans how far it's come by splitting its two games in the tournament — beating Averill Park 51-25 Friday, and losing to Colonie 44-33 Saturday.

"If this weekend is any indication of how our season is going to go, I think we're going to do just fine," said Bethlehem coach Mark Nealon.

The Lady Eagles wasted little time establishing control over Averill Park, last year's class A Sectional champion. Bethlehem jumped out to a 15-5 lead in the first quarter and used a 22-7 third quarter spurt to seal the victory.

Colonie was another matter. The Lady Raiders opened Saturday's game with a 9-3 run before Bethlehem began chipping away. By halftime, the Lady Eagles trailed 20-19 and forced Colonie to abandon its famed full-court press for a mix of zone and man-to-man defenses.

"They did change defenses on us, and I take it as a compliment," said Nealon.

Bethlehem remained within striking distance until the last four minutes, when Colonie went on a late run to seal the victory.

"They had to play well to beat us, and that's great," said Nealon. "You're never happy with a loss, but I felt we played well."

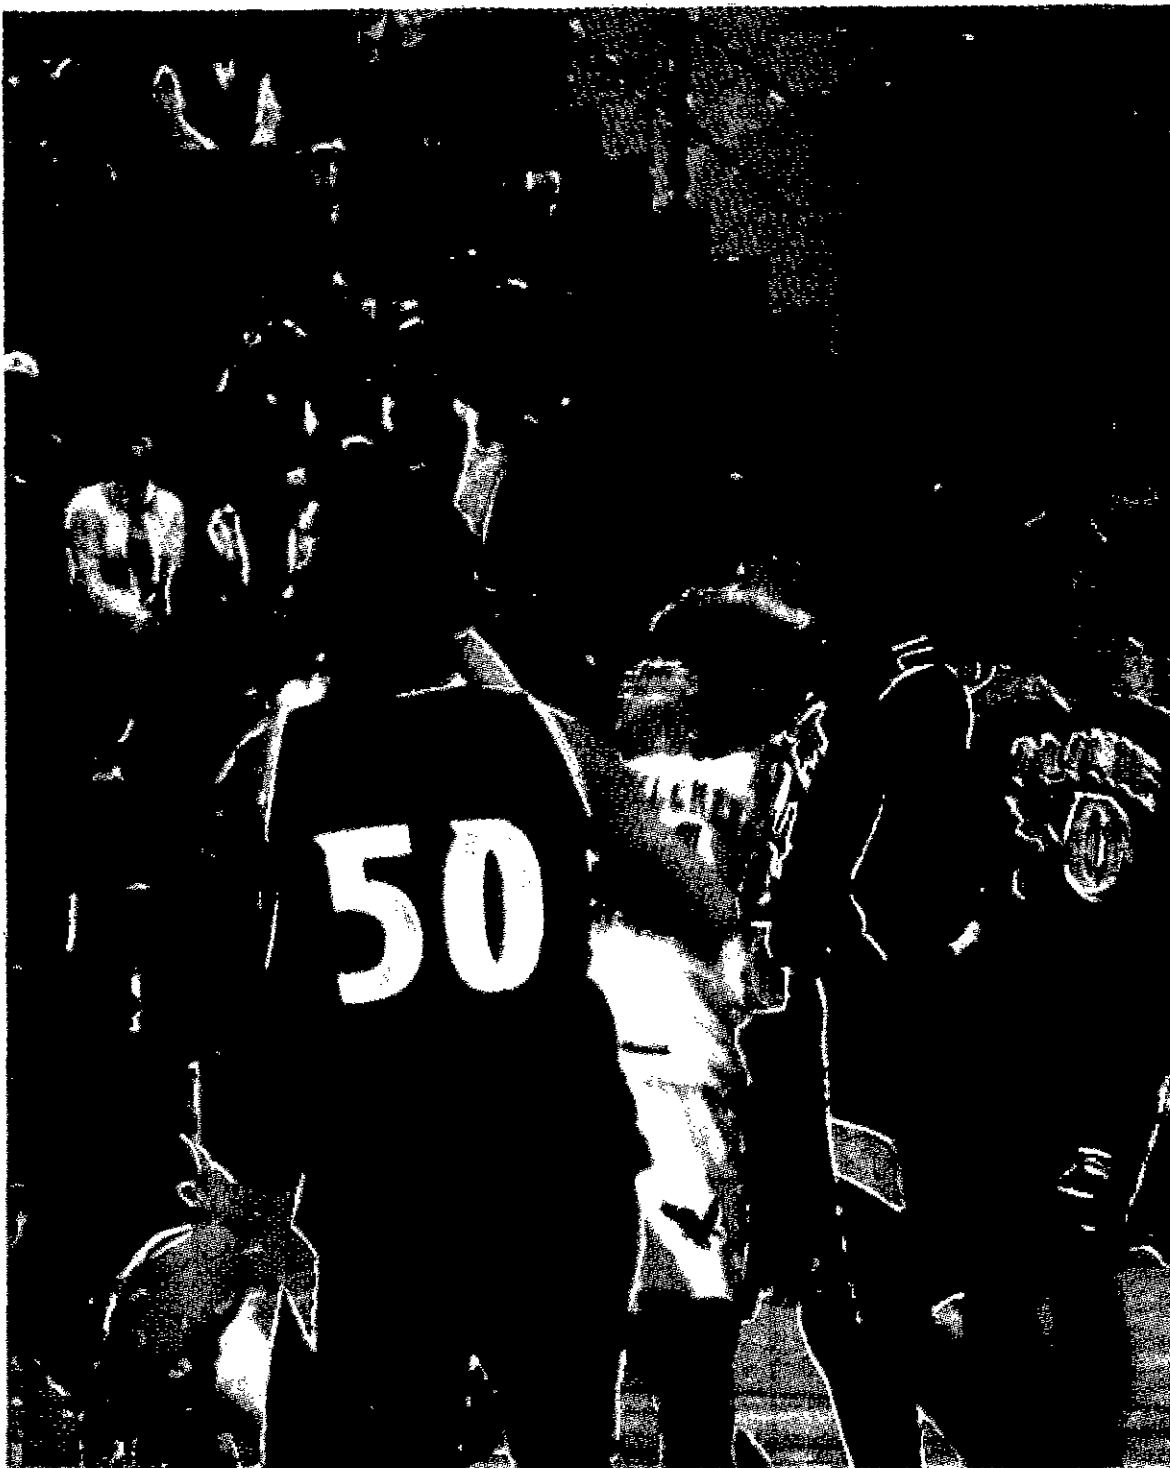

Sophomore center Alex McCullough played well for Bethlehem in both games, scoring 11 points against Averill Park and Colonie. Sophomore forward Kiersten Swete led the Lady Eagles with 12 points in Friday's victory, and senior forward Leah Gillham had 10 points against Colonie.

Nealon said those types of efforts will be common for Bethlehem this season. "With the girls we have coming back from last year, we have a lot of (scoring) options. So, no team can focus on any one player," he said.

Being able to play true home games will also help the Lady Eagles, who return four starters from last year's team.

"You never realize how much of an advantage it is to play home

this hoop season

One week may be too early to declare favorites for the Section II basketball championships, but there are some teams to keep an eye on.

- Mohonasen boys and girls. If their tournament exploits are any indication, these two teams may be contenders in the Suburban Council.

Mohonasen's boys team arguably had one of its best opening weekends in the last decade with double-digit victories over Bethlehem and crosstown rival Schalmont at the Niskayuna Invitational. The Mighty Warriors demonstrated a penchant for putting away opponents in the second half — something they had trouble with last year. If they continue to play like they did, they stand a chance to finish first in what could be a tough White Division (see below for more details).

As for Mohonasen's girls team, a second-place finish at the Shaker Tournament showed that the Lady Warriors are ready to build on last year's Sectional run that ended in the class A semifinals. Leading scorer Rachel Kimball may have graduated, but Michelle Aviza, Brittany Armstrong and Nicole Adach should take up the slack.

- The rest of the Suburban Council White Division. Outsiders often look at the league's Blue Division with its marquee programs at Shaker, Shenendehowa and Colonie and think that it has to be the toughest division, but the White Division promises to be tougher from top to bottom.

Besides Mohonasen, Averill Park's boys and girls teams seem poised for Sectional title runs, while Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake has enough talent to challenge for the division crown. The Niskayuna girls team will also be a factor with its veteran lineup.

- If CBA is No. 1 in class AA, Bishop Maginn is No. 1A. The Golden Griffins are loaded with
