Boy's family, friends say farewell

By ROB IRWIN
irwinr@spotlightnews.com

Hundreds of mourners filled the seats at Delmar Full Gospel Church on the afternoon of Wednesday, Feb. 21, to celebrate the life of Jonathan Carey. The 13-year-old autistic boy died Thursday, Feb. 15, after allegedly being improperly restrained by aides as he was transported from the O.D. Heck Development Center in Schenectady to Crossgates Mall.

Also on Wednesday, O.D. Heck employees Edwin Tirado and Nadeem Mall were indicted in Albany County Court on counts of second-degree manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide in connection with Jonathan's death. Both men pleaded not guilty to the charges in Albany County Court on Friday, Feb. 23.

Jonathan's parents said their faith has been a source of strength in dealing with their loss.

"Jonathan has run his race, and he has completed everything that the Father has given to him to do," said his mother, Lisa Carey.

Both she and Jonathan's father, Farewell Page 12

Districts struggle to meet nutrition mandates and still offer lunches kids will eat

By ROB IRWIN
irwinr@spotlightnews.com

School lunches are not what they used to be.

Federal and state mandates governing what students eat have resulted in healthier, more well-rounded choices at lunch time, but for those in charge of putting together school menus, the mandates add one more facet to an already challenging balancing act.

Food service directors often have to juggle making food attractive to the kids and keeping it healthy, all while keeping the operation on budget.

"It's a really big challenge," said Nicola Boehm, food service director for the Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake School District.

One of the challenges, said Boehm, is not being repetitive with the food choices and focusing on foods students enjoy.

"They don't want to eat things like meatloaf and stews. ... They'd be horrified," said Boehm.

In a typical week in January, BH-BL high school students' hot lunch options included grilled cheese, hot turkey burritos, taco salad and macaroni and cheese.

Typically, said Boehm, she tries to offer foods that are currently popular.

"Food is very fashionable," she said. "Kids want to eat things like chicken nuggets and chicken patties."

Boehm said problems sometimes arise when trying to balance what's popular with what's healthy.

"We have to have the five food groups every day," said Boehm, and students need to have three of the five, but, "We encourage them to take all five."

In addition to balancing health and selection, another challenge includes keeping the service operating in the black.

"We don't want to make a large profit by any means, but we want (the food service program) to be able to pay for itself," said Boehm.

Basic high school and middle school meals at BH-BL cost $2; elementary meals are

Local fireman collapses

Theodore Abriel was searching building as part of rescue squad

By JIM CUOZZO

Albany firefighter and Slingerlands resident Theodore Abriel died in the line of duty late Monday afternoon, Feb. 19, after going on his second fire call of the day. He collapsed inside the hallway of a burning apartment high-rise at 2 Lincoln Square in Albany.

The unit on fire was empty, but 44-year-old Abriel, a member of Engine Company Two located in Arbor Hill, did not know that when he walked up all six floors of the building wearing heavy equipment as part of the department's rescue squad to look for anyone inside. Abriel is the 48th Albany firefighter to lose his life in the line of duty.

"Our entire city grieves today as we have lost one of our bravest," said Albany Mayor Jerry Jennings. "He was one of our most dedicated public servants whose passion for firefighting and the Albany Fire Department was unrivaled."

The official cause of death is listed as a massive heart attack. Rescue workers at the scene tried to revive Abriel by performing cardio-pulmonary resuscitation before quickly getting him to the hospital. The fire was under control several minutes before Abriel was pronounced dead at

Bethlehem police charge two with DWI

A Nassau woman is charged with DWI after being stopped by Bethlehem police.

Erin Elizabeth Erno, 27, of 140 Stewart Point Road was charged with DWI, driving with more than .08 percent blood alcohol content and four other traffic infractions.

Erno was stopped on Route 9W in Glenmont, Feb. 8, after police noticed she was driving with an expired state inspection sticker.

Erno will appear in Bethlehem Town Court to respond to the charges.

• Maria Armina, 26, of 12A Meilaks Trailer Park in Selkirk is charged with DWI first offense, failure to keep right and driving with more than .08 percent blood alcohol content.

Bethlehem police stopped Armina on Wednesday, Feb. 21 along Route 9W in Selkirk after they observed her vehicle failing to keep right and crossing the solid double yellow line. Armina will appear in Bethlehem Town Court March 6, to answer to the charge.

Glenmont Man arrested for having child porn

A Glenmont man who was employed at I Love NY Pizza at the Delmar Four Corners is being charged by Bethlehem police with possessing an obscene sexual performance by a child, a felony.

Ruan Tolumi, 40, of Winne Place, Glenmont, has been arrested on charges stemming from a May 2006 incident. The arrest is the culmination of a nine-month investigation by Bethlehem police and the department's Family Services Unit.

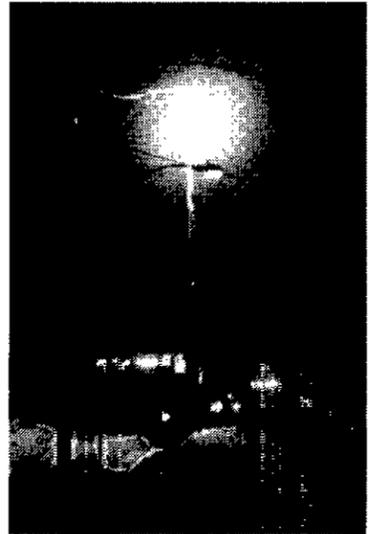

The investigation stemmed from a domestic dispute between Tolumi and a woman. At that time, an allegation was made that Tolumi was in possession of illegal pornographic material on his home computer. The computer was seized by police and a forensic analysis was conducted on the computer by the Colonie Police Department.

Tolumi was arraigned Thursday, Feb. 22, in Bethlehem Town Court and remanded to the Albany County jail in lieu of $20,000 cash or $50,000 bond bail. Tolumi was scheduled to reappear in Bethlehem Town Court Monday, Feb. 26 for a preliminary hearing.

According to police, the Four Corners is known as a hangout for many middle school children. Anyone with information is asked to contact the Bethlehem Police Department at 439-9973.

Burned out

An electrical transformer caught fire in the vicinity of 84 Adams St. Thursday night. The Delmar Fire Department closed off Adams Street, Adams Place and Hawthorne Avenue, as National Grid cut power to the electrical lines. The bright light from the fire and sparks could be seen from more than 1 mile away.

Bethlehem trolley tour a trip back in time

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Bethlehem's first historic trolley tour rolled into town Tuesday, Feb. 20, with historian Parker Mathusa, a third-generation town resident, offering 20 invited guests of the Bethlehem Chamber a two-hour charter tour of 200-year-old homes, farmhouses and other buildings in Delmar, Slingerlands, Feura Bush and Van Wie's point.

"Welcome to the Albany Aqua Ducks and Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce tour," announced Mathusa. "The town of Bethlehem is a very special place with 245 homes and sites with historic qualities."

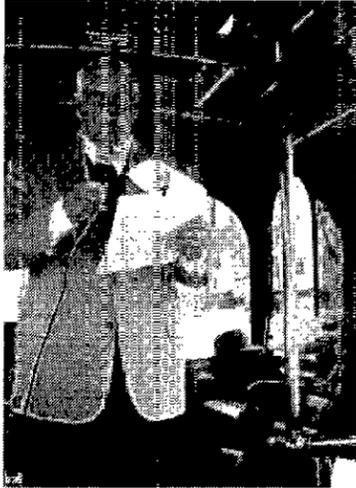

The Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce came up with the trolley tours idea in December to present the town's history to a broader audience. They teamed up with town resident and Albany Aqua Ducks owner John Giordano to make the tours a reality.

Upcoming tours are scheduled for 10 a.m. to noon March 14, featuring the town's history and also hosted by Mathusa, and 1:30-3:30 p.m. April 10, covering the town's Revolutionary War past and hosted by Ray Houghton. The tours cost $20 per person, and a reservation can be made by calling 462-3825.

A 17-page pamphlet passed out to guests at the beginning of the tour included many significant historical facts about Bethlehem, ranging from when the first human beings inhabited the area more than 8,500 years ago to how the town, which was originally called Vlorian's Kill, became known as Bethlehem.

The first part of the tour took guests down Kenwood Avenue by some of the earliest churches, including the Masonic Temple and the Methodist Episcopal Church built in the mid 1800s. Passers-by in vehicles gazed at the trolley as it made its way down Kenwood to New Scotland and Fischer Road.

Many Greek Revival and Victorian homes were viewed along Kenwood and New Scotland, including a law office that was once the home of John Slingerland in 1851, and the Dillerbeck House at 1511

Historian Parker Mathusa, above, narrates one of two Bethlehem Trolley Tours highlighting places of historical significance throughout the town. The tours, running through April 10, showcase the Nicoll-Sill House, top and bottom.

New Scotland Road, which was used during the filming of the movie based on author William Kennedy's novel "Ironweed."

Mathusa said there were once several hotels along the Delaware Turnpike, which were used to house the crews of workers who would deliver stone from quarries in the Helderbergs to the city of Albany.

"Everybody was driving on horse and wagon, and the trips were so long sometimes they had to stay overnight," Mathusa said.

One of the hotels located at the corner of Adams Street and Delaware Avenue, owned by the Adams Family, was also the former Bethlehem Town Hall.

The tour continued along Feura Bush, covering an area that was once a plank road that led to Becker's Corners. Other old homes along Wemple Road were viewed, including the private burial grounds of some of Bethlehem's founding families, including Clapper, Westervelt, Snyder and Myers.

The trolley stopped for a brief period at the Bethlehem Historical Museum, a former one-room schoolhouse. Mathusa walked people through the museum as they snacked on coffee and doughnuts, courtesy of Perfect Blend Café in Delmar.

"I came here in 1937, and now I live in Slingerlands, and the history here is amazing," said tour guest Virginia Kemington Rich.

Tim Beebe, who works for the Bethlehem Police Department and is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, said he has been inside many of the old homes featured on the tour.

"A lot of these homes along the river are spectacular," said Beebe.

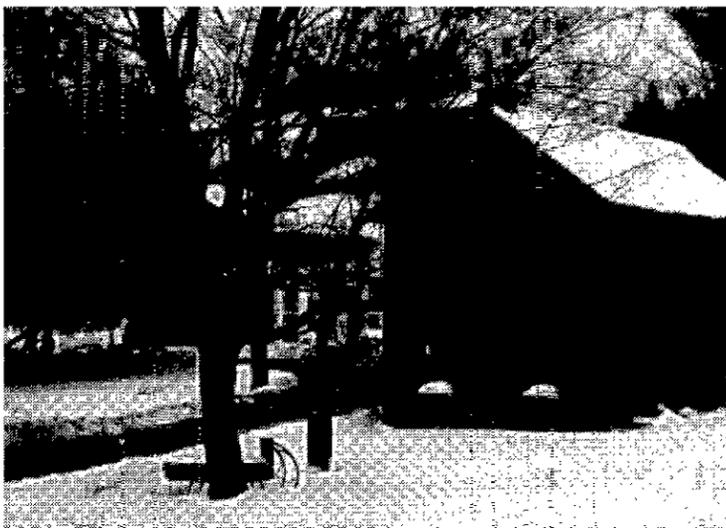

The second part of the tour featured the Nicoll-Sill House on Dinmore Road built in 1735 and considered one of the oldest homes in Bethlehem.

"This home entertained famous people, such as Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr, and was later a station for the Underground Railroad," said Mathusa. The home that most people know as the Bethlehem House is currently occupied and on the National Register of Historic Places.

As the tour came to a close, Mathusa took his own trip down memory lane, remembering some of his old haunts along Cedar Hill, where he grew up with his family. He recalled swimming in the Vlorian's Kill and fishing nearby after delivering papers on his paper route. Members of the Mathusa family, including his grandchildren, were also on the tour.

"Bethlehem is one of the most unique places in the world, and I hope you enjoyed the tour," Mathusa said at the conclusion of the tour to a round of applause.

"I love history, and I think it is valuable for people living here to have more knowledge of the town," said Margaret Reed, who took the morning off from her law practice to take the tour.

Engineers guide public through roundabout safety

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

A smaller-than-expected turnout was present Wednesday, Feb. 21, at Bethlehem Town Hall for a Department of Transportation presentation on roundabouts.

The session, hosted by the town, was held the same day the state DOT announced a $15.2 million contract to construct a Slingerlands Bypass, which would include the addition of three new roundabouts. Because there are only 28 roundabouts in the state, 10 of which are in the Capital District, officials had expected a bigger turnout because of the concerns some people have with driving in a roundabout.

The meeting opened on a light note, with a scene from the movie "European Vacation," in which actor Chevy Chase plays a dad who has difficulty navigating a roundabout and ends up driving in circles for hours.

Roundabouts have come into favor over the past 10 years because of their safety track record and ability to keep heavy volumes of traffic continually moving.

"If a pedestrian is hurt in a roundabout, you have an 85 percent chance of surviving," said Tom Kligerman, a transportation department design engineer. "If a pedestrian is hurt at an intersection, the chance for survival is only 15 percent."

Rich Schell, also a DOT design engineer, said roundabouts are safe because of their high capacity, low delays, geometric flexibility and aesthetics.

Cunningham to run again

Albany County Legislator Jack Cunningham, D-Delmar, said he will run for a second term representing the 34th Legislative District, which includes central Delmar and parts of Slingerlands and Glenmont in the town of Bethlehem.

"Four years ago, I asked Bethlehem voters for a chance to represent them in the Albany County Legislature with a promise that I would champion reform, bring them tax relief and deliver results based on focused advocacy and local leadership," said Cunningham. "I worked hard for the last four years to deliver on that promise and now ask for an opportunity to keep up the fight."

Cunningham said he looks forward to continuing to work with all local town, county, state and federal officials to bring about responsible governance and reform.

Cunningham said, "I believe that when we work together across party lines and among different levels of government, we can provide taxpayer relief and still provide quality

"Roundabouts reduce fatal accidents by 90 percent," said Schell.

The engineers cited statistics showing that, in 2001, more than 42,100 Americans were killed on the highway and 3 million are injured in traffic collisions.

"Forty percent of the deaths are at or near intersections," said Kligerman.

Officials said that most drivers, except seniors, say they like roundabouts once they are built.

"The Voorheesville roundabout is the only roundabout where a high percentage of senior citizens say, 'I love it,'" said Kligerman.

"Forty percent of the deaths are at or near intersections."

Tom Kligerman

Roundabouts, including the three proposed as part of the Slingerlands Bypass, are popping up all over the area, including seven in Malta, and others in Voorheesville, East Greenbush, Greenwich, as well as several downstate.

Those at the meeting received a DOT pamphlet called "A Citizens Guide to Roundabouts," which explains how roundabouts work. In it, roundabouts are defined as a circular intersection without a lighted signal engineered to maximize safety and minimize traffic delay.

Roundabouts feature splitter islands and center islands along with yield markers to slow traffic.

"There is almost no chance to have a high-speed, head-on collision when entering a roundabout," said Kligerman.

The roundabout forum was the second in a series of meetings regarding the Route 9W corridor study.

services. I am very proud to say that we're doing that in Albany County."

Beyond his legislative duties,

Cunningham

Cunningham is a softball coach and volunteer at the Albany Rescue Mission. He also serves as chairman of the Henry Hudson Quadrice-ennial Committee, which is planning events to celebrate the 400th anniversary of Henry Hudson's navigation up the Hudson River.

Cunningham is a native of Bethlehem; graduating from St. Thomas elementary school and Bethlehem Central High School. He earned a bachelor's degree in political science from the University of Massachusetts and has a 30-year career in banking and finance. He has spent the past 10 years as an information technology manager at Key Bank, a Fortune 500 company.

Outing was a defining moment 'fore' family

Editor's Note: Robin's Nest by Robin Shager Sutor will return next week.

My oldest of three sons was turning 13, and his looks of joy and innocence were turning to disdain, indignation and boredom when we talked. Which was becoming less and less.

I had reached the point as a parent where everything I said to him reminded me of my father. I seemed mad all the time; he wasn't listening any more.

I'm still not sure why I was always mad; maybe I missed the boy he was, maybe it was the constant ache of not knowing what to do about it.

Whatever ... That's the way it was, as I started reading some psychobabble in the newspaper early that sunny Sunday morning.

The article was about transactional analyses, or how we relate to one another,

Ah, psychobabble at its best, but what did I have to lose ... besides my son.

And that ... my more well-adjusted, less dysfunctional friends, was the first day our family ever played golf. Looking like the Beverly Hillbillies, but with Little League caps, five of us, playing out of one rented bag of clubs.

With sneakers — some tied, some not, Grateful Dead T-shirt (yes, mine), one bag of brand-new tees, four range and one yellow golf ball, we stood at the starter's shack, tickets in hand, like puppies waiting to be fed.

The last official tee time at our local course was 3 p.m.; the wise pro, after listening to me on the phone, gave us a 3:10.

The journey began, hacking and whiffing, laughing and running ... skipping.

Finding balls in the woods, and perfectly good tees near the ball washers. Five irons turned into rifles shooting airplanes into the blue skies above. We assumed bunkers were for running and jumping in, spraying sand all over the place.

My wife gave up being the protective mom by the third hole, as she ducked behind a tree, safe from being shot right in the heart by that dangerous five iron.

Yes, we hit the ball. Well, some of us did. My middle son decided it was easier to throw it than hit it. Smart kid. I had played twice before in my life, so my advice was sought. That felt good. On the fourth tee I hit a tremendous drive, maybe 140 yards, high with a slight fade almost landing in the fairway.

"Wow, huge! How did you do that?"

asked my 13-year-old.

My reply may have been the smartest thing I have ever said in my life.

"I don't know, but it sure felt good."

At that moment, I fell in love.

At that moment, I wasn't an adult lecturing to a child.

At that moment, my son was listening to me. Just two guys trying to figure out life.

At that moment the relationship changed, we both knew it with his simple nod, and asked my 13-year-old.

My reply may have been the smartest thing I have ever said in my life.

"Good shot, Dad."

We finished our round, all six holes, in less than two hours. That's when my middle son fell in the pond spotting and retrieving a ball he could — almost — reach.

The sun was setting, the shadows were growing. We needed something to eat, and had to return the rented clubs before they closed shop.

Almost 20 years have passed, we joined a fancy golf club and now have all the high-tech equipment. I still read the psychobabble, and will always be grateful for the joy that this adventure returned to my family.

In spite of the late snows, spring will be coming to the Capital District soon, and I'll be starting up the travel column again. The column will cover fun places to go and interesting things to try. The goal is not to share with you the luxuries of far-away places, but to encourage you to get off the couch and to try new things.

The most exciting thing about travel is never the exotic location, or the bike rides or golf courses — it's not about the foods on a cruise.

When you travel and try new adventures, it's like time is suspended: You get a chance to think. You get off life's treadmill and learn about new things ... but mostly you learn more about yourself and the ones you love.

The most exciting thing about travel is never the exotic location, or the bike rides or golf courses — it's not about the foods on a cruise.

When you travel and try new adventures, it's like time is suspended: You get a chance to think. You get off life's treadmill and learn about new things ... but mostly you learn more about yourself and the ones you love.

If you want to share a special place, let us know at askthetravelguy@spotlightnews.com.

"Good shot, Dad."

We finished our round, all six holes, in less than two hours. That's when my middle son fell in the pond spotting and retrieving a ball he could — almost — reach.

The sun was setting, the shadows were growing. We needed something to eat, and had to return the rented clubs before they closed shop.

Almost 20 years have passed, we joined a fancy golf club and now have all the high-tech equipment. I still read the psychobabble, and will always be grateful for the joy that this adventure returned to my family.

In spite of the late snows, spring will be coming to the Capital District soon, and I'll be starting up the travel column again. The column will cover fun places to go and interesting things to try. The goal is not to share with you the luxuries of far-away places, but to encourage you to get off the couch and to try new things.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

How will they remember us when we're gone?

The fate of the historic Ingersoll house in Niskayuna on State Street and Balltown Road is still undecided. The 12-acre property seems peaceful and serene in a world of big box stores and asphalt that look just as ugly in all the towns they've invaded in the last decade.

The Ingersoll property represents a bit of sanity for its pristine view and lack of commercialism. It needs to be protected.

We think replacing the Ingersoll property with a "small" mall across the street from a newly remodeled very large mall doesn't make sense. The predecessor of the large mall didn't do well in that location, and it remains to be seen whether its replacement will succeed.

There are simply too many old malls like cemeteries dotting the landscape. Is this the legacy we want to leave our children, one devoid of originality and any distinguishing characteristics? This will leave future generations the dubious honor of figuring out who we once were.

If development of more and more malls is unchecked, we won't have a clue about the true history of our suburban towns and even some of our cities. Another civilization might think all we created was a rubber stamp of malls dotting every landscape. Is that really what we valued? The ability to shop for items mostly made in China at prices we can't afford? The cost of all these malls will take its toll on consumers, when the bills finally come due. This means we're not only bankrupting our history but our personal lives as well.

The new mall proposed on the Ingersoll property would be redundant, in other words a mere coda to its big mall brother across the street. We need to exercise moderation in the way our towns and cities are "developed."

We preach diversity, but practice uniformity on all levels. Standardized tests for kids and standardized housing have become the norms in our lives. We like to think there's room for more than this cookie cutter approach to where we go to school, where we shop and even where we live. Surely, this will lead to much less diversity and choice in our lives.

We hope Niskayuna recognizes one of the treasures it has in the Ingersoll home and that developers find a more suitable 12 acres for yet another mall.

This just in! St. Patrick wasn't Irish!

By G.F. MCLAUGHLIN

The writer is a Slingerlands resident and former AP reporter, looking ahead to celebrating the feast of his ancestors.

Growing up Irish in New England years ago, you took certain things for granted. One of them was the understanding that St. Patrick, that most ethnic of Roman Catholic saints, was Irish.

But ingrained notions do not always endure.

My Irish-American mother broke the news to me one day in March after school. Gazing down at the shamrocks that Sister Mary Therese at school had given me, and the picture of St. Patrick that went with them, my mother said, "St. Patrick isn't Irish, son. Nobody knows for sure, but it is pretty likely that he was born either in England or Scotland."

Quite a shock, that bulletin. It damn near drained the chlorophyll from my shamrocks. It had been an article of faith ever since we started catechism class that Patrick was our own saint, the very embodiment of Irish humanity and decency, the man who inspired descriptions of Ireland as "the land of saints and scholars."

I mean, seriously, who could believe that any other holy man, no matter how talented, could have driven the snakes out of Ireland?

My mother told me that Patrick had reportedly been carried off as a child from England or Scotland — by pirates — conveyed across the Irish Sea and assigned to take care of a flock of sheep. In the months that followed this maternal revelation, I remember thinking, "Did those pirates lead double lives? Were Long John Silver or Blackbeard really peace-loving farmers when they weren't terrifying people on seacoasts or on the high seas? Well, obviously, my friends at school and I, many of whom were of Gaelic descent, managed to digest this revision of belief. We recognized, after all, that St. Patrick was St. Patrick because he helped people to stop painting themselves blue and dancing around oak trees and persuaded them instead to accept Christianity.

Over the years, on the 17th of March, I turned up at parades honoring our English-Scot-Irish icon. OK, I told myself, so he was Irish through involuntary transportation. "Transportation" in the 19th century was the name English magistrates in white wigs gave Irish people who had offended the king or queen's majesty by trying to drive the Redcoats from their country. Those convicted were sent to Australia.

So Patrick gave up sheep herding to become a monk, and, about six years after his arrival in the Emerald Isle, escaped to France. There, he studied Christianity with the friars and did so well teaching religion, that the church gave him a miter and a shepherd's crook and sent him back to Ireland to spread the word of Jesus Christ.

Even the Encyclopaedia Britannica, never to be confused with The Irish Echo or the Irish Times, described him as the man who found Ireland "all heathen and left it all Christian."

Let me share my favorite St. Patrick's Day memory about something that happened in 1955 in south Boston, Mass., as strong as it gets in Gaelic strongholds.

St. Patrick's Day in Boston is a very big deal, ranking close to the Fourth of July and certainly outshine the lesser know celebration of Evacuation Day, also observed on March 17.

Evacuation Day marks March 17, 1776, when British troops spotted George Washington's cannons pointed down at them from Dorchester Heights and left Boston in a big hurry, courtesy of the British Navy.

In 1955, I traveled to Boston from college with my roommate, Paul Toland, a native of "Southie," as the people there called their section of the city. After downing a longshoreman's breakfast of bacon, eggs, pancakes, sausage and fried potatoes, we staggered a short distance to the route of the St. Patrick's Day parade.

Shivering in the 10-degree temperatures, with the wind cutting in from Boston Harbor, we awaited the scheduled highlight of the day, the appearance of the fabled, white-maned mayor of Boston, James Michael Curley. Curley, whose election years before had underlined the arrival into power of the city's Irish population, was so popular that he once was re-elected mayor while serving a five-month prison sentence for mail fraud. Curley enjoyed a kind of Robin Hood reputation and could do little or no wrong with the mass of his constituents. Many of them ascribed his prosecution and imprisonment to unjust, unwarranted resentment of his popularity and the Irish control of the city government.

Boston, you may have read, like Philadelphia and New York, was festooned in the 19th and early 20th centuries with signs that read "Help Wanted. No Irish need apply."

Curley's life was the stuff of legend, biography and even a motion picture, "The Last Hurrah," with a perfectly cast Spencer Tracy as the Curley-like character.

On March 17, we stood with a legion of shivering onlookers in Southie, awaiting the arrival of the mayor, who was to ride as the grand marshal. But, as it happened, he didn't show. His Honor was sick with a cold, possibly pneumonia, but he sent a substitute.

The stand-in for Curley — actually, the sit-in — was a brown-haired, blue-eyed Irish politician, Ivy League tie and all, and his gorgeous, slim brunette wife, riding, ironically, in a convertible, and sensibly, wearing overcoats.

The substitute, of course, turned out to be "himself," future President John Fitzgerald Kennedy, then a U.S. Senator from the Bay State, an exemplar of how far the Irish had risen from the social sub-strata.

I remember thinking then that a guy with a wife that good looking ought certainly to be a U.S. senator.

After the last bagpipe had skirled the final note of "The Minstrel Boy" along the snow-banked streets, we joined the crowd and hoofed it over to Dorgan's, a South Boston Mecca for the thirsty. It was loaded with parade-goers, longshoremen with their hooks, men and women from the nearby Gillette Blue Blade Company and a mixture of Erin's sons and daughters.

There, we were treated to the stories and songs of Jimmy Joyce, a beloved boson Irish comedian. His routine sprang largely from the nature of his audience, which was Irish American and Roman Catholic.

His comedy was clean, kind of like Bob Newhart without the brogue, poking gentle fun at his own people.

He closed his performance with this one:

"An Anglican bishop flies into JFK Airport in New York from London. He clears customs and walks outside the terminal to hail a cab. He climbs into a yellow cab and tells the obviously Irish-looking driver, "My good man. Please take me to Christ's Church."

The cabbie nods, drops the flag and heads for Manhattan. About a half hour later, he turns onto Fifth Avenue and pulls up in front of St. Patrick's Cathedral, a Catholic and New York City landmark.

The bishop looks out the window at the imposing Roman Catholic edifice and says, "My good man. I said to take me to Christ's Church, an Anglican church."

The drive whips his head around and barks: "Look, pal. If he ain't here, he ain't in town." That was St. Patrick's Day with Jack, Jackie, Jimmy and the Gaels of Boston.

Regardless of where the saint came from, as memories go, that day was a keeper.

Presbyterian Church hosts hospice series

The Delmar Presbyterian Church will host a series focusing on hospice services. The program, called "Your Faith Community and Hospice" will cover all aspects of hospice care, including the philosophy of hospice care, legal and medical planning, hospice resources and dealing with grief.

The program will be held 7:30-9 p.m. on three consecutive Wednesdays, March 7, 14 and 21, at the Delmar Presbyterian Church, 585 Delaware Ave., in Delmar. The program is free and open to the public.

"This program will be a great interest to families that are caring for loved ones who are suffering from disease and in need of very special care that focuses on the quality of life of both the patient and the family," said Pastor Larry Deys of the Delmar Presbyterian Church.

"This program series will feature information and discussion, a mix of services, support and spirituality, that will help families get through a very difficult time. I greatly appreciate the efforts of hospice to reach out to the community in this way," Deys said.

For more information or to register, call 439-9252.

The program will cover:

- The philosophy of hospice through a discussion of the hospice approach to serious illness and the end of life, along with cultural and religious considerations.
- Advance directions and the importance of individual planning for medical care by use of living wills, health care proxies and powers of attorney.
- Hospice resources and how to access the community hospice, who may be served; insurance coverage; what illnesses are included; and a variety of other matters.

- Bereavement services through a discussion of the dynamics and process of grief; caring for others who grieve; resources in the faith community; the needs of survivors; and other matters.

Attention and sensitivity to matters of spirituality and spiritual care will be woven through the presentations.

Resident likes waterfront atmosphere

Editor, The Spotlight:

In your Jan. 31 article "Public Hears Waterfront Ideas," Mr. Holzman's assertion that people live in this area of town because "housing there is a little more affordable" is patronizing and demeaning to those of us who live here.

We chose to live in this area, not because we were "too poor" to live in Delmar or Slingerlands, but because we like the bucolic country atmosphere. Perhaps that concept it is beyond the "group think" mentality.

It's funny that we in this area are subject to benign neglect until someone hits on another "great idea," like a trash incinerator, a garbage transfer station, a formaldehyde plant, or now a "new urbanism" concept for the waterfront.

As an example of that benign neglect, for years residents have asked the town to intercede with the state to do something about traffic conditions on River Road, where the last survey I am aware of clocked 85 percent of traffic traveling in excess of 65 miles per hour past our homes.

In light of that, it is rather condescending for the town to be looking over its neighbors, property and ordaining how it should be.

We love our homes and the area as it is.

Except for the River Road Raceway.

Local Blue Star chapter supports military families

By JILL U. ADAMS
news@spotlightnews.com

The newly formed Albany chapter of Blue Star Mothers met for the first time last week. Led by Kay Moody and Darlene Ward, the meeting attracted about 30 people describing themselves as mothers, fathers, aunts, cousins and friends of servicemen and women from the Capital District.

After getting the word out through friends and local newspapers, Moody said the response has been unbelievable.

She said she recently received a phone call from an older man who had read about the group. "He just wanted to talk — talk about his grandson."

And that was fine by Moody, who said the Blue Star Mothers is primarily a support group for families with sons and daughters in the military. The nonpolitical group also works to send care packages to servicemen and women, to raise public awareness, and "to show honor and respect for our kids," said Moody.

Loretta Hall learned about Blue Star Mothers from a girlfriend who is also a Navy veteran. Hall has two sons on active duty, both in the Army: Russell, 25, who is presently in Germany between tours in Iraq; and Ross, 22, who is in Iraq now.

"I can't stop the war, but the least we can do is support our kids," said Hall.

Hall came to the meeting because she said she wants to do anything she can to show support for the troops. She gets news from her sons via e-mail, though not as often as she would like. Her younger son's messages, limited as they are, often include a request for something from home.

The goals of the meeting were to discuss upcoming activities, like putting together care packages — called Freedom Boxes — and marching in the Bethlehem Memorial Day Parade. Other suggestions were to organize a welcome home group for returning servicemen and women at the airport and volunteering at Fisher House, which provides lodging for the families of wounded veterans close to Stratton VA hospital in Albany.

or stationed at the same base. Quickly sketched stories revealed much, like the woman whose son is in intelligence and can't tell her what he's doing — for the first time in his life.

E-mail is wonderful, said another mother, except when it suddenly stops. "Talk about not knowing. It's hard," she said.

"We want to make this a small enough group — no matter how big we get — that we feel comfortable," said Moody.

Emotions were held, but evident nonetheless. There was a very strong sense that the people who came don't have a place to share their concerns in their everyday lives. These moms (and dads) are simply trying to keep track of their children.

"It will be so great to have a group where we can help each other out," one woman said, underlining the need for reassurance in times of uncertainty.

"As a mother, you want to know where your children are," said Ward. "Right now, I know he's safe. But when he's deployed," she said, leaving her thought unfinished. "It's the not knowing."

The next meeting of the Blue Star Mothers will be 6 p.m. Monday, March 19, at the American Legion Post at 15 W. Poplar Drive in Delmar. For information, write to Capital Region 2 Blue Star Mothers of America, PO Box 243, Delmar, 12054, or call 439-5784.

The Nathaniel Adams Blanchard American Legion Post, which provided use of its banquet room, added appropriate atmosphere to the meeting. One wall carries photos of young men in uniform; the photos are in black and white or sepia-toned. A second wall is festooned with banners representing the service branches of the United States military.

For the last item on the agenda, everyone in the room introduced themselves. They spoke of their sons, ranging from 19 to 25, in the Army, the Marine Corps, the Air Force, and the Navy. Several were between tours, stationed at bases around the world, from Texas to Germany to Okinawa. Tours are mostly in Iraq, but Afghanistan and Korea were also represented.

As the introductions continued, connections were made among group members whose loved ones were in the same service branch

Farewell

Michael, said they hope that, in light of Jonathan's death, there will be renewed interest from state legislators in passing a law that would open medical investigative records to parents and regulatory agencies concerning alleged abuses of the developmentally disabled.

Jonathan's family has said that Jonathan, who was non-verbal, was the victim of abuse in 2004 at the hands of employees at his previous residence, the Anderson School in Dutchess County, yet records detailing what transpired with their son have been kept closed.

If they succeed in getting the law changed so those records are more accessible, Lisa Carey said, her son will have died "so that others who have no voice won't have to suffer like he did."

"We are grateful for the time that we had with him," said Michael Carey, who then sobbed, "I'm going to miss him so much."

Michael Carey said Jonathan gave hope and inspiration to his parents and others through all he had to overcome. Despite what he may have suffered, Michael Carey said Jonathan "still smiled every step of the way."

According to Colonie Police, Jonathan died after he was allegedly suffocated while being restrained in the back of the van in which he was being transported on Central Avenue in Colonie.

Police said Tirado, 35, and Mall, 32, both of Schenectady, allegedly drove around while Jonathan was unresponsive for up to 90 minutes before reporting his death. They were arrested later that day.

"We have forgiven them both from our hearts. That's what the Scripture says to do," said Michael Carey of the two men. "We love them, and we're praying for them, and we ask that you pray for Edwin and Nadeem, too."

The two men had taken Jonathan and another 14-year-old O.D. Heck resident to Crossgates Mall, said Colonie Police Chief Steven Heider. At approximately 6:30 p.m., the van left the mall and began heading west on Central Avenue toward Schenectady. Mall stopped to use an ATM when Tirado allegedly began struggling with Jonathan when he started acting up, eventually causing his death, said Heider.

Police said the men allegedly even stopped at one of their homes to corroborate their stories before reporting Jonathan's death.

The indictment handed down Wednesday alleges the two men inappropriately restrained Jonathan by physically compressing his body with their own, which caused the 13-year-old to stop breathing. Despite legal obligations, the indictment said the men failed to render aid or summon medical attention.

Jonathan Carey's family leaves the Delmar Full Gospel Church Wednesday.
John McIntyre/The Spotlight

"The care for the most vulnerable members of our society is a sacred trust," said District Attorney David Soares. "The callous disregard for human life shown by these two defendants is an affront to every parent, child or family member struggling to care for a dependant relegated to the care of a social service agency."

If convicted on all counts, the defendants each face a maximum term in state prison of 15 years.

A day after the funeral, Lisa Carey said she would like to know why the men did what they did, and despite her forgiveness, said, "They still need to face justice for what they've done."

At a press conference on Thursday, Feb. 22, the Careys called on the state's politicians to work together to bring immediate changes to a "broken and failing system," referring to the need to make accessible records of investigations into alleged abuses.

The Careys said they were "excited" that some politicians have already made public proclamations pushing for reforms to the system.

On Friday, State Sen. Tom Morahan, R-New City, chair of the Senate Committee on Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities, introduced a bill that would amend the mental hygiene law and the public officers law, in relation to the disclosure of certain information to parents and guardians of minors.

In 2006, legislation that would have made available investigative records passed the Assembly, but did not receive a sponsor in the Senate.

The Careys had previously been working with Assemblyman Harvey Weisenberg, D-Long Beach, to push for legislation that would make available full disclosure of investigative reports by regulatory agencies that handle cases involving the disabled.

Since their son's death, more legislators have been actively supported the law.

State Sen. Neil Breslin, D-Delmar, who has worked with the Careys for several years, said this legislation was a long overdue, and it is regrettable that it took a tragedy to shed light on the issue.

"I believe that there is a determination on the part of the legislators to quickly change the law," Breslin said.

Access to 400 pages of investigative records detailing Jonathan's alleged abuses at Anderson has been denied by the Office of Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities.

State Assemblyman Tim Gordon, I-Bethlehem, has joined politicians pushing for reform through legislation following the tragedy.

"Sadly, mental health care reform will come too late to help Jonathan," said Gordon, who is working on what is being called Jonathan's Law, which would require the OMRDD to provide access to its records and investigative reports, ultimately helping families like the Careys to get the information they need to ensure proper care and response.

The state Senate has scheduled a public hearing for Monday, March 5, to investigate the circumstances surrounding the incident. The intent is to determine how and why the system may have failed Jonathan, and what steps can be taken to change the laws to protect dependent people.

Morahan said, "We want to determine and assess the adequacy of the staff training provided by OMRDD for personnel who care for children with developmental disabilities, as well as how children who exhibit behavioral episodes are treated."

Morahan said that parents and guardians need assurance that the employees monitoring their children are properly supervised and that children in state-approved facilities are being treated properly.

In a statement, Diana Jones Ritter, new commissioner of OMRDD, said, "I have already directed a comprehensive review of our services with the goal of identifying any and all improvements which need to be made to minimize the risk that this kind of incident will happen again."

The Careys contend that withholding investigative reports and other documents allows institutions to cover up abuse and protect themselves from civil actions.

"Lord knows how many children are placed in dangerous situations over and over," said Michael Carey.

"We hope and pray that other families won't have to go through the hell we went through," said Michael Carey.

Fireman

Albany Medical Center.

The fire was ruled accidental by investigators a few days later. Fire Chief Robert C. Forezzi Sr. said investigators believe the blaze was electrical in nature.

Abriel served for 20 years as a member of the Albany Fire Department and other generations of his family have been firemen since the late 1800s, including two brothers, his father and grandfather. He was an acting lieutenant of the rescue squad at the time of his death.

Abriel's wake, which was public, was held at the Palace Theatre in Albany on Friday, Feb. 23, and was attended by hundreds of mourners, including fire fighters from several Albany County fire departments and other area departments. His funeral was held the next day in Loudonville at St. Pius X Church.

Albany Firemen's Federal

Credit Union began a fund in Abriel's name for his wife and children.

"He lived and breathed the fire department," said Sam Fresina, president of the Albany Permanent Professional Firefighters Association.

Abriel raised more than $40,000 after the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, for the families of the firemen who died in the line of duty by selling embroidered shirts and hats he made in the garage of his Slingerlands home. The money was used to buy computers for children in New York City and to purchase cars for two families of fire fighters killed on 9-11.

"He was very dedicated and very giving and always there to help everyone," Fresina added.

To send a donation, contact 453-9748 or write to the Ted Abriel Memorial Fund at the Albany Fireman's Federal Credit Union, 532 Central Ave., Albany 12206.

Group holds high standards for school lunches

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

"No hot dog for me, thank you, I'm having the salad."

If state nutrition advocates are successful, this phrase could be something students might soon utter as they wait in the school lunch line to choose among several nutritious food choices before heading back to their afternoon science labs or French class.

Aimee Hamlin, the executive director for the state Coalition for Healthy Schools based in Ithaca, said the time to stop obesity in America begins at an early age.

"Sixty-six percent of adults in this country are overweight or obese, and that's where these kids are heading," said Hamlin.

The coalition is working to ensure that school districts work to promote optional plant-based food entrees, healthy snacks, farm-to-school programs and nutrition education to encourage healthier choices.

"This group was formed because we saw there was a huge need to do something about the issue of school food and get involved in it," said Hamlin.

New dietary guidelines from the federal government in 2005 call for an average of nine servings of fruits and vegetables per day and at least half the grains eaten be whole grains. Getting rid of deep-fried foods, limiting high-sodium foods and foods with high saturated fats, and eliminating trans fatty acids in foods are just some of the coalition's recommendations. School meals currently have to meet federal regulations consistent with federal dietary guidelines calling for more fiber and less saturated fat.

"Not all schools meet the regulations, and there's not a whole lot of teeth to the regulations," said Hamlin. Hamlin said in 2004, the federal government, through the child nutrition and WIC (women infant and children) re-authorization act, mandated that all schools create a local wellness policy. The policy called for better nutrition, more exercise for students, and even offering healthier products in vending machines such as 100 percent real juice instead of sugary sodas.

"A lot of schools have very generous guidelines with no teeth, and other schools take the guidelines very seriously," said Hamlin.

The state Legislature in 2004 passed its own law mandating that districts create a Child Nutrition Advisory Committee. The committee, made up of parents, faculty and school health staff, are asked to meet quarterly to study all facets of current school nutritional policies with the overall goal to stop childhood obesity. One key component of the state legislation is to promote health and proper nutrition through vending machine sales, menus and educational curriculum.

"We have changed to whole-grain products and have eliminated hot dogs from our menu," said Margaret Lamb, director of the Saratoga Springs school district's wellness program. Lamb said the school lunch program now offers more chicken entrees and fewer processed foods. They have eliminated French fries in the elementary school. Snapple has been replaced with diet Snapple, and all snacks have to have fewer than 15 grams of sugar. The old vending machine with potato chips and cookies was replaced with a healthy snack vending machine purchased through a grant from the United States Dairy Council.

"Some of the kids like it, and some do not," Lamb said. "We have made a lot of changes." School meals might be where the most recognizable changes have taken place, but Hamlin said every aspect of a child's day in school should be based on healthy alternatives.

"Teachers need to stop giving kids food rewards, and candy fundraisers have to stop," said Hamlin.

Hamlin said she believes school food directors do the most they can to provide children with quality meals with the funding they receive. The problem, she said, is the formula for funding school lunch's forces food directors to use commodity foods like cheese, ground beef and white potatoes instead of more nutritious foods like fresh carrots and fresh green vegetables. "The fact that food service directors can pull off anything is amazing," Hamlin said.

Tom Cook, food service director for the Bethlehem Central School District, said he has increased the amount of locally grown produce on the menu, and the students are enjoying the benefits.

"The kids enjoy a fresh apple wedge or carrots in a bag instead of serving them canned carrots," said Cook, who said he agrees with Hamlin that serving fresh farm products is more costly for the overall school lunch program.

"It's an absolute challenge, no question about it," said Cook.

Other changes in the Bethlehem meal program include offering healthier fare like turkey wraps and quesadilla's and even vegetarian chili.

"The vegetarian chili we offered bombed out," said Cook, but he said that doesn't mean it won't be on the menu again in the future.

The cost of a school lunch can range anywhere from $1.30 to $2.30, and most school lunch directors said they believe it is unreasonable for anyone to think that amount can provide for the kind of nutritious lunch that many parents want their sons and daughters to receive.

"We are trying to maintain financially," said Lamb, adding that next year, the federal government will provide food service directors a list of choices to pick and choose certain food that will continue to be subsidized.

"We have done a lot and feel committed to staying with it," said Lamb.

Cook said there is nothing more distressing than seeing a hungry student looking for food at the end of a school day.

"It's upsetting to me to see some kids come to me at 2 p.m. or 2:30 p.m. in the afternoon — after they have skipped lunch — and say, 'I'm starving, can you sell me a peanut butter and jelly sandwich,'" Cook said.

$1.50, and meals for adult staff, volunteers and visitors are $3.

Roland Laffert, the food service director for independent contractor Aramark, who supervises food services in the Scotia-Glenville School District, said it is a lot of work keeping up with the state's school meal initiatives.

"It's a work in progress," said Laffert. "It's a training program — a tool — for starting nutrition early with the students. Under that umbrella, what we do is eliminate stuff that kids actually like — French fries, sugar cereals, that sort of thing — and we try to train the children to make a healthy choice dietary-wise."

Laffert said that because of the nutrition standards placed on meals, it can be difficult to keep students interested in school-provided lunches.

Another challenge Laffert mentioned is trying to be mindful of differing tastes between male and female students when drawing up the monthly menus.

Male students tend not to be as health-conscious as female students, he said, even at the middle school level, and getting boys interested in health-oriented choices can be hard.

"They want their cheeseburgers," said Laffert, adding that girls are choosing more salads and healthy foods.

The Guilderland Central Schools food service program, headed by Linda Mossop, takes a different approach to providing healthy meals, and recently began offering nutritious twists on traditionally unhealthy foods. The district offers foods like whole-wheat pizzas and uses whole-wheat burger rolls.

The change to whole wheat was originally met with some resistance from the students.

"Initially, they thought we were trying to push whole wheat down their throats," said Mossop, but she said that is no longer an issue.

But the change comes with a cost. Mossop said a plain, white dinner roll costs six cents; the whole-wheat alternative costs 13 cents.

In addition to the whole-wheat substitutes, the district uses other approaches to comply with the health guidelines.

"We won't sell any snack that's larger than a single serve," said Mossop.

At the high school, students can add a la carte organic alternatives to their meals. These foods are all natural, with no pesticides or additives, she said.

"Instead of iodized salts, you would use sea salts," said Mossop. "I think that it's a healthier alternative."

The schools' food service will also be making a push toward eliminating trans fats from the school's menus, beginning with chicken and French fries next year.

Mossop said student input is still important, and she meets with student representatives regularly to get a sense of what they are looking for, but "as much as we do want to accommodate, we can't accommodate all the requests."

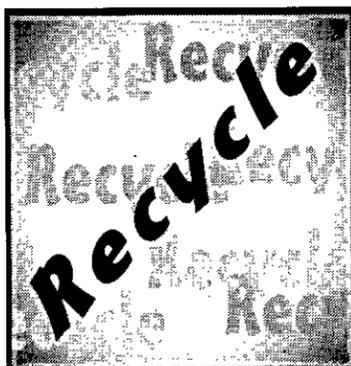

Students have made some pretty lofty requests, said Mossop, including lobster — a choice she admits would be nice but "cost-prohibitive."

The financial goals of the Guilderland food services program are similar to the other district's food service programs. As with other districts, a balancing act comes into play when offering healthy alternatives, such as whole-grain bread products, costs more than what was offered in the past. Despite the call for nutritious alternatives, many budgets for school lunch programs are holding steady at pre-mandate levels.

"You want to at least break even," said Mossop.

Despite the challenges, Mossop said, she is excited about the future of the district's food service program.

"We're really taking steps in the right direction," said Mossop.

Top entertainers find a home at the Palace Theatre

In 1931, the Palace Theatre opened its doors for the first time to welcome the movie-going public of the Capital District.

Now, 75 years later, the Palace Theatre still proudly stands as the anchor of downtown Albany's arts and entertainment district. Over the years, it has been host to many of the biggest names in entertainment and still continues to bring the top names in the industry to downtown Albany.

From the best in music and comedy to the greatest classic films, the theater offers something for everyone. The Palace's classic movie series has drawn thousands over the past two years to relive the experience that has captivated so many people for generations. It brings people back to a time when a night at the movies was something extra special, when families would gather together and make the trip to downtown Albany to spend an afternoon in the comfort of the Palace Theatre.

In addition to movies, the Palace Theatre also offers a wide array of options in every field of entertainment. Comedians like Lewis Black, Larry the Cable Guy and Bill Cosby have performed at the theater in recent years, as well as popular music acts including Michael Buble, The Goo Goo Dolls and Kenny Rogers, to name a few. World-renowned ballet companies like the Moscow Ballet frequent the Palace and amaze crowds with breathtaking performances that draw families back year after year.

avorites Widespread Panic and even classical music virtuoso Itzhak Perlman will grace the stage of the Palace in the upcoming months.

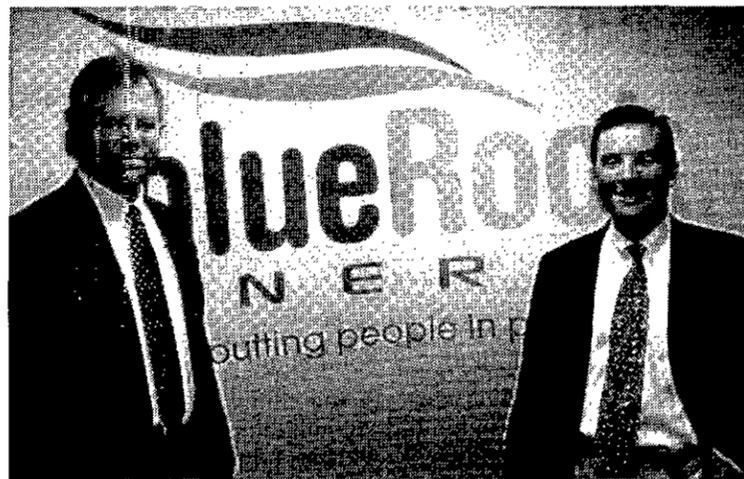

Comedy also makes a bold statement this year with comedy's "Queen of Mean" Lisa Lampanelli, up-and-coming favorite Katt Williams and, of course, the much anticipated return of Jerry Seinfeld. In addition, the Palace will continue to host great events like our Black History Month series, the Moscow Festival Ballet's performance of "Cinderella," and theatrical events like Riverdance.

Albany's Palace Theatre offers a variety of arts in a classically elegant atmosphere.

After a successful fall season, the Palace Theatre looks to match that success with what is shaping up to be an even bigger spring season. Musical acts like soul legend Aretha Franklin, southern rock jam band fa-

BlueRock Energy meets commercial needs

Providing customers with expert advice, open and honest communication and good products that produce real savings is the mission of BlueRock Energy in Syracuse.

"Our goal is simple, and simple is a theme we like to use: provide consistent savings to customers on their energy bill," said Vice-President Angelo Chambrone.

As an Energy Services Company (ESCO) licensed by the New York State Public Service Commission (NYSPC), BlueRock presents small- and medium-sized businesses with an alternative option in a deregulated energy market.

"We pride ourselves on serving everybody" said Chambrone. "We do not have minimum volume requirements and welcome all business customers. The small and medium market has largely been underserved. We relish serving small businesses."

Since July 2006, BlueRock Energy has been striving to be the premier provider of electricity products for the commercial market in upstate New York.

"We're a new company but we're not a newcomer," said Chambrone. "Our management team has over 70 years experience. We've all come from successful energy companies. Everything we do, we're trying to be a little bit different."

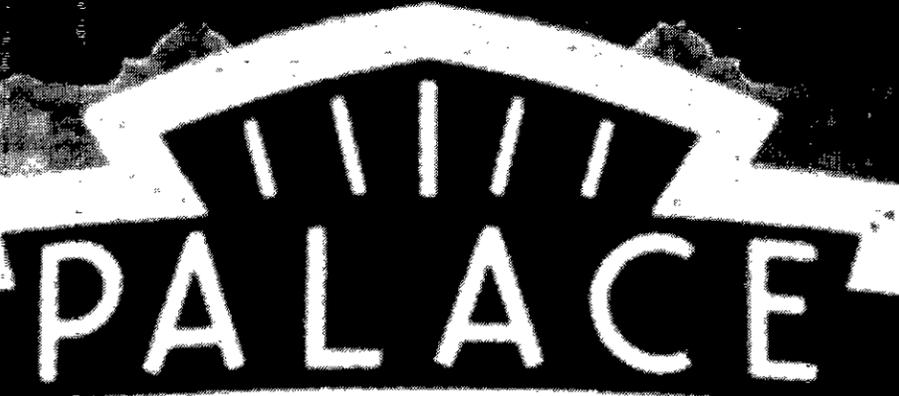

For example, Chambrone explained that when it comes to scrv-

Credit union keeps charity and community at the forefront

By JESSICA HARDING
hardingj@spotlightnews.com

The State Employees Federal Credit Union, or SEFCU, is more than an average bank. SEFCU offers a range of products and services, while helping the community and improving the lives of its members.

"We are here to enhance the financial lives of our members, not to make a profit. Everything we do is geared toward the goal," said SEFCU president Michael Castellana.

Castellana said SEFCU is committed to giving back to the community in more ways than one, and the bank has opened branches in places that are considered underserved because of lower average household incomes and higher unemployment rates, such as the Arbor Hill and Hamilton Hill neighborhoods.

Castellana said one of the well-kept secrets of SEFCU is the SEFCU Foundation, which gives money to charity organizations that serve children, such as Big Brothers, Big Sisters and the St.

Ann's Foundation.

"We do this not because we are required to, but because we believe it's the right thing to do," Castellana said.

SEFCU is also closely affiliated with SUNY Albany and has recently entered into an agreement with the college to rename its RAC Center the SEFCU Arena.

From a product and service standpoint, SEFCU's rates are aggressive on loans and deposits, and there are virtually no fees said Castellana. All prices are benefits of membership.

SEFCU offers a full complement of products, from basic checking and savings accounts to all types of loans.

Castellana said the bank was rated the 16th largest commercial lender in the Capital District. SEFCU offers a range of commercial lending options from a $5,000 Visa card to financing a number of hotels and real estate developments.

Castellana said, not just state employees, but anyone who lives, works, worships or goes to school in any of the areas that SEFCU serves could be a member.

SEFCU is also in the process of expanding locally and into other parts of the state. Castellana said there are a few branches in development in Syracuse, Rochester and Binghamton.

SEFCU has been in the state since 1934 and has more than 150,000 members.

"Our motivation is to treat the customers like owners, because that's what they are," Castellana said.

Labor options are a mom's decision

The tendency these days is for increased intervention with the laboring mother, and often it is not necessary. Patients should communicate their desires for the conduct of their labor to their obstetric provider. Likewise, it is the provider's responsibility to respect and facilitate those wishes. The provider should be there to assist mothers in having the most enjoyable and safe experience possible, while keeping in mind it is the patient who should be in the driver's seat.

Indeed, pregnancy complications do occur that require interventions by the obstetric provider in order to induce labor or expedite delivery. This is done to assure the safety of both mother and baby. When this situation arises, excellent communication must occur so that the mother is empowered to be part of the decision-making process.

However, most pregnancies are low risk, and a mother's choices for her labor and delivery should be respected. For instance, being confined to the bed is usually unnecessary. Frequent changes of position, walking and rocking can help with labor pain. Taking showers or soaking in the tub or whirlpool can bring relaxation and stress relief during labor.

During uncomplicated and low-risk labors, prolonged fetal heart rate monitoring is not necessary. Often, the nurse can intermittently listen to the fetal heart to determine that it is within normal range. Patients can then continue labor unencumbered by contraction and heart-rate monitors, free need for cesarean section. In contrast, some women decline any drugs in labor, and they should be provided with alternative techniques to minimize pain.

At birth, it should be the patient who decides whether the baby is placed immediately on their abdomen or breast or brought to the warmer. Rarely is it necessary for the newborn to be whisked away for resuscitation efforts. Immediate bonding with skin to skin contact between mother and baby is generally thought of as best. Patients should make their desire to immediately hold their newborn known to the provider and nurse so that they may best assist this effort.

A birth plan is one of the best ways for a patient to take control of the labor and delivery process. Be sure to go over this plan with the obstetric provider to ensure that it is reasonable. Likewise, be flexible and open-minded to adjusting plans as labor unfolds. Often, it is difficult to know how you may feel during labor until real contractions begin.

The birth of your child will be the most special event of your life.

A birth plan is one of the best ways for a patient to take control of the labor and delivery process. Be sure to go over this plan with the obstetric provider ...

to actively move about.

Pain relief during labor should be the patient's choice and nothing should be withheld unless medically justified. Epidural anesthesia provides superior pain relief and should be the patient's decision in conjunction with her provider. It is well recognized that having a prescribed cervical dilation for epidural is unnecessary. While it may slightly prolong labor, early epidural does not increase the

Energy company has been warming homes for decades

In 1930, Art Main attached a 275-gallon tank to his flat-bed truck and began delivering kerosene. Spenser Main soon joined the growing business, and Main Brothers Oil Company (Main-Care) came to be. The Main family presided over the company until the mid 1960s. Having no heirs, they left their legacy to the employees of Main-Care Energy.

"Today we are a company of dedicated employee-owners who are committed to maintaining the high standards established by our founders," said David Tarsa, president of Main-Care Energy. "Our employee-owners are also customers residing in your community. As customers, we want the same thing you do – the security of knowing you will receive dependable fuel delivery and reliable service. 'Service That Never Sleeps – 24 hours a day, 365 days a year' has been our long-standing motto. Day or night an employee-owner will take your call, assuring you prompt response to your heating and cooling emergencies."

Main-Care Energy is a full-service energy company selling fuel oil, propane, motor fuels and with the approval of deregulation, natural gas. In fact, Main-Care Energy is one of the few full-service upstate natural gas suppliers.

Several years ago, with the importance of energy conservation for their customers as well as the environment, they chose to become partners with Energy Star. As an Energy Star Partner, Main-Care's heating and gestions and developed convenient programs that roll their energy needs and our unbeatable service into economical bundled service and energy packages. We offer service plans you customize to fit your specific needs, some that even include warranties for your heating oil tank. Our customers also helped design our Price Protection programs that offer Double

Protection -- whether the price of fuel goes up or down, you are protected. This year especially, our customers on a Price Protection program realized the benefit of our "downside" protection since most of our oil and propane deliveries were made at a lower price than their capped price this season. Most companies only offer a fixed price, so you are only covered if the price of fuel goes up."

Main-Care Energy falls back on more than 16 million man-hours of service in area neighborhoods to keep homeowners warm and secure. With strong roots in local communities, the company plans to be serving Capital District residents for another 77 years and beyond.

The Radisson development in Central New York.

Central N.Y. development merges community and industry

The Radisson planned community, a development in Central New York, features trees, winding drives, and lakes and ponds, which, at this time of year, are covered with snow. A natural beauty and activity are prevalent, and those factors play a large part in the community's popularity as a residential area.

Radisson offers a variety of amenities to its residential and commercial occupants.

Visitors to the development will notice a thoughtful, measured approach to the creation of an area that attempts to balance the natural environment with a lifestyle many people seek.

The site was purchased in 1969 by the New York State Urban Development Corp., which is Radisson's developer. The goal behind the development was to offer a diversity of housing selections, as well as create a major site for business and industry. Developers attribute the success and continued growth of Radisson to its visionary approach to create a community as part of one of Onondaga County's most attractive areas – the town of Lysander and the village of Baldwinsville.

Currently, Radisson offers single-family homes, available in traditional and contemporary styles. Several subdivisions are in various phases of construction. Four other subdivisions are in planning stages.

Townhouses, patio homes, condominiums and apartments are also available.

Ranging from luxury styles to senior subsidized, there is an option for everyone. Those interested in an apartment can call 638-9370.

Baldwin Estate, an affiliate of the DiMarco Group out of Rochester, purchased a 50-acre parcel to build new apartments. The project, River Knoll at Radisson, which will be completed in four phases, will ultimately result in 200 new apartments. Also, Camillot Properties has begun construction of the Silverwood Apartment complex, which will contain 36 units when complete.

The 950-acre Radisson Corporate Park also provides building sites for industry and offices. More than 30 firms have located in the park to date, employing more than 3,000 people. Businesses include Anheuser-Busch, Inc., Ball Plastics Corporation, Gypsum Express, Northern Graphics, Plumley Engineering, ProLinks, Seneca Beverage, Specialized Packaging and ABB/SSAC.

The Radisson Health Center, recently purchased by Longley-Jones is now open and leasing space. In addition, there are approximately 300 acres, zoned industrial/commercial, available for sale. This prime land is suitable for manufacturing, distribution and warehousing.

provide these savings?

First, customers receive incentive credits, simply for switching providers. Second, businesses will also see an immediate sales tax reduction.

"When you switch to an ESCO and you're a taxable entity, you no longer pay sales tax on the delivery portion of your bill," said Chambrone.

Finally, BlueRock provides savings through expert portfolio management and low overhead costs.

"Our solution is a variable rate program. It's a mutual fund style managed energy product. The price changes every month and that's where our expert portfolio management comes in to save you money."

A fixed rate program is also available.

As a private held company with four principals, BlueRock emphasizes customer satisfaction and operational ethics, earning endorsements from groups such as the NYS Restaurant Association, the NYS Automobile Dealers Association, and the NYS Hotel and Tourism Association.

"We're a highly ethical company," said Chambrone. "We were one of the first ESCO's to voluntarily adopt consumer protection ethics principles approved by the NYSPSC. We really believe in that. Ethics is very important to our company."

Open and honest communication with customers is another priority.

Committed to the Central New York area, BlueRock has exciting plans for future growth including offering natural gas products in June and expanding into the New England and Mid-Atlantic states in late 2007.

Job opportunities will also increase as the company builds its sales and analytical support staff, said Chambrone.

"We are expecting significant growth in the company in terms of employees. We really believe in the region and think it's a great place to live and build a company. Syracuse offers a lot. We believe there's a good talent pool with the local universities. We think the regional economy will benefit by our expansion and success."

Home Performance with ENERGY STAR® Helps New Yorkers Save Up To 40 percent On Energy Costs

Program connects North Country homeowners with trained and accredited 'whole-house' contractors

For residents who want to improve the performance and comfort of their home, Home Performance with ENERGY STAR offers comprehensive and quality solutions.

Whether a home is old or new, it could be wasting energy due to inefficient heating and cooling systems, poor insulation, and air leaks through cracks and gaps in the attic, basement, plumbing fixtures and duct systems. Many homes have drafts, rooms that are too hot or cold, poor indoor air quality or problems with ice building up on the roof that may cause structural damage. These are often common signs that a house is not properly sealed, ventilated, insulated or heated.

Sponsored by the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSERDA), Home Performance with ENERGY STAR can help households save up to $600 on energy bills every year. With Home Performance with ENERGY

STAR, homes of any style or size can be improved to reduce energy use and costs by up to 40 percent.

"Our specially trained and accredited contractors take a 'whole house' approach to improving home energy performance," said Peter R. Smith, CEO and president of NYSERDA. "They test the energy efficiency, health and safety of each home before and after any improvements are made."

Under the program, a contractor accredited by the Building Performance Institute (BPI) will measure a home's energy efficiency, insulation and air infiltration levels, heating/cooling equipment efficiency, appliances and lighting. Unlike traditional contractors, participating BPI Accredited contractors are specifically trained to check heating equipment, ovens and water heaters to help ensure that dangerous combustion gases like carbon monoxide do not leak into the home. They assess airflow and moisture levels, which can lead to structural damage and poor indoor air quality if left unchecked. The contractor conducts these tests during the initial home assessment and after any work is done to the home.

When the assessment is complete, the contractor will identify what improvements can be made, the cost of making those improvements and what kinds of financial incentives, such as low-interest financing, are available to homeowners who decide to have the improvements made. Income-qualified applicants may be eligible to receive additional incentives through the Assisted Home Performance with ENERGY STAR program.

"When we bought our 1860s-style fixer upper, the previous owner told us that we wouldn't be able to afford to heat the house so we picked Home Performance with ENERGY STAR for the energy efficiency and environmental results. After the work was completed, our heating bill went from $450 to $90 in one month," said Martin Clement of Watertown.

10 easy tips to save energy

Reduce wasted energy and improve comfort at home this winter with these simple tips:

1. Make sure storm windows are down and secure, and lock double-hung windows to be sure they are sealed.
2. Add weather-stripping to drafty doors.
3. Use tight-fitting glass doors on fireplaces and close doors and damper when the fireplace is not in use.
4. Move carpet, furniture or other objects away from heating vents and radiators. Blocked vents can affect air circulation and cause an imbalance in a home's heating system.
5. Install an ENERGY STAR qualified programmable thermostat and set it to automatically lower the temperature at night and when you are regularly away from home.
6. Set the thermostat to 50-55 degrees overnight or while away from home. Maintain a comfortable temperature while at home and away.
7. Replace incandescent light bulbs with ENERGY STAR qualified models that use up to two-thirds less energy and last up to 10 times longer. Turn off lights when not in use.
8. Use money-saving ENERGY STAR qualified appliances in the kitchen and the laundry.
9. Set the refrigerator temperature at 37-40 degrees and the freezer at 5 degrees. Clean the coils and seal the fridge gaskets regularly.
10. Install efficient showerheads and faucet aerators to save water and reduce water-heating costs.

Theodore J. Abriel

Theodore J. Abriel, 44, Albany firefighter, of Slingerlands, died Monday, Feb. 19, in the line of duty while serving as acting lieutenant of the Rescue Squad.

Born in Albany, he was a 1981 graduate of Christian Brothers Academy and was a 20-year veteran of the Albany Fire Department. He was a member of the Local, State and Federal Firefighters Unions and unit leader of the Albany Firefighters Honor Guard. Ted was the owner and operator of Firefighters Embroidery and had worked previously for 10 years for the Golub Corporation. He also had coached in the Westland Hills Little League when his children were playing baseball.

Survivors include his wife Linda Torrisi Abriel; three sons; Christopher Abriel, Matthew Abriel and Teddy Abriel Jr., daughter Erin Abriel; two brothers; Warren W. Abriel and Henry Abriel, a sister; Linda A. Meservey.

He is also survived by many friends and brother firefighters.

Services with full departmental honors were held at St. Pius X Church, Loudonville and in charge of the McVeigh Funeral Home, Albany. Contributions may be made to the Ted Abriel Memorial Fund at the Albany Firemans Federal Credit Union, 532 Central Ave., Albany 12206.

Jonathan M. Carey

Jonathan M. Carey, 13, of Glenmont, died Feb. 15.

Born on Sept. 12, 1993, Jonathan has brought love and joy to his family. Even though he couldn't speak with many words, except "Daddy," his smile would light up a room and could speak a million words. He was very loving and affectionate. He was a precious gift from the Lord and he will be deeply missed by his family and friends. One of Jonathan's greatest joys was riding horses and he loved being with horses.

Survivors include his parents, Michael and Lisa Carey, and his younger brother, Joshua, paternal grandparents, Joseph and Mary Carey of Glenmont; and his maternal grandfather, Bill Krug of Colonie.

Services were held at Delmar Full Gospel Church and under direction of Fredendall Funeral Home of Altamont. Contributions may be made in Jonathan's memory to Hearts of the Father Outreach, to help feed and save orphaned, abandoned and abused children at Hearts of the Father Outreach, P.O. Box 491, Sheffield, Mass., 01257.

Coral E. Alger

Coral E. Alger, 85, of Delmar, died Monday, Feb. 19, at Albany Medical Center Hospital.

Born in Round Lake, Minn., she was a longtime member of the First United Methodist Church of Delmar.

Survivors include her husband, Victor L. Alger; son, Michael Alger of Delmar; daughter, Jan Prystupa; two grandsons, one great-granddaughter and a step great-granddaughter.

Services were from the Applebee Funeral Home, Delmar.

By CHRIS SGROI

A quirky cast of characters filed in and out of the audition space at the Capital Repertory Theatre in downtown Albany on Monday, Feb. 12. It was audition day for both Equity and non-Equity actors hoping to land a role in Cap Rep's upcoming production of "The Crucible," scheduled to open in April.

An equity actor is one who belongs to a union. Because Cap Rep is a member of the League of Professional Theatres (LORT), it is required to give a percentage of roles, including featured parts, to union actors.

When an optimistic thespian delivers his or her monologue and sheds the everyday veneer for the few moments of an audition, Director Maggie Mancinelli-Cahill looks for those who make a connection with the audience as a believable character in a world created onstage.

"I look for an actor who can be very focused and very relaxed at the same time so that it doesn't look like they're acting," Mancinelli-Cahill said.

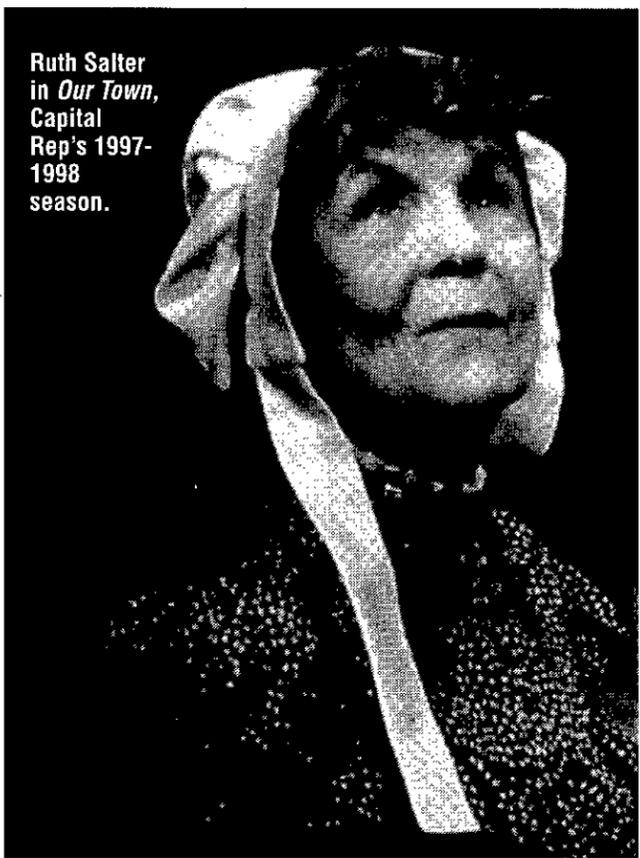

When Ruth Salter enters the room, it is hard to ignore her vibrant personality. She brings the eccentricities of Sarah Goode to life during her audition.

"Your rags will be glamorous," said Mancinelli-Cahill, referring to the costume her character will don.

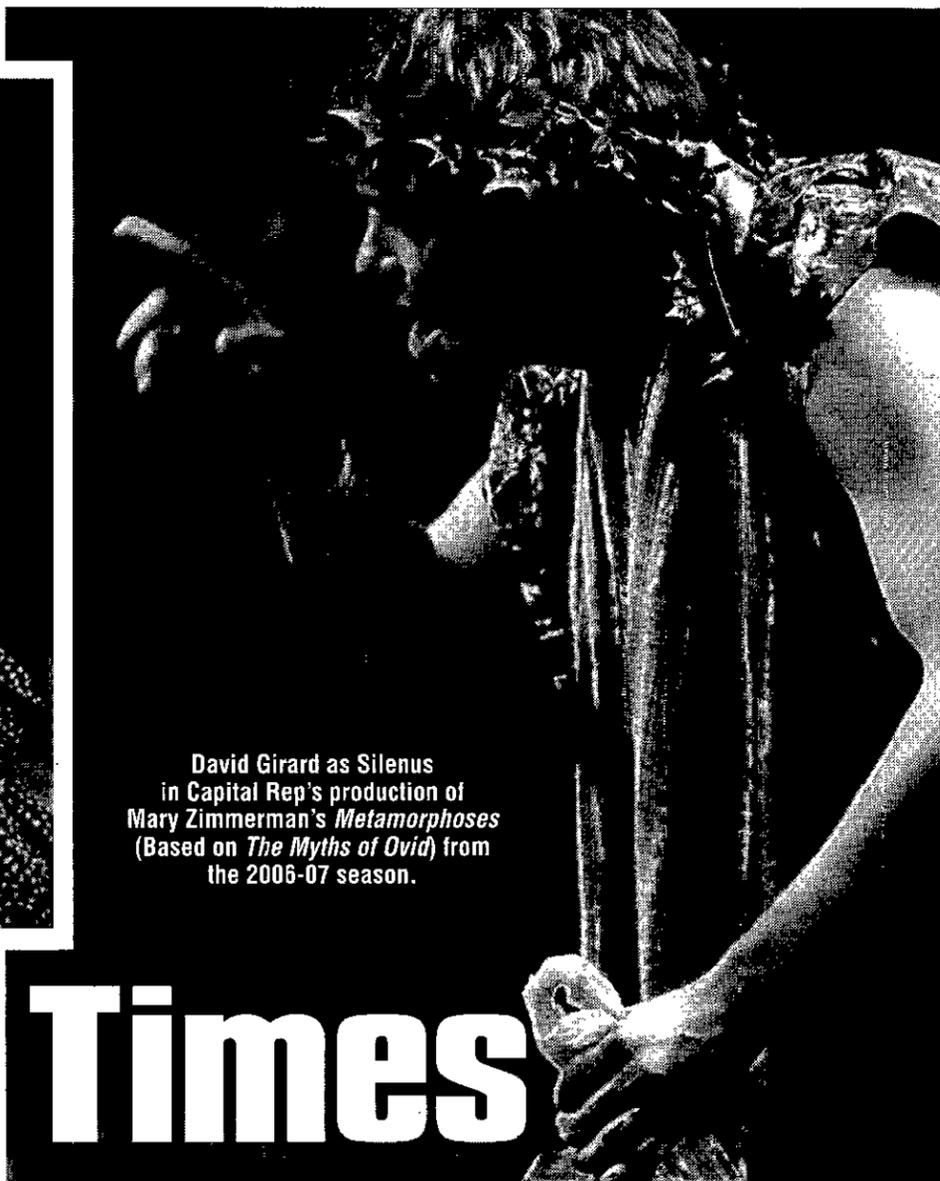

"Can I take that as an offer?" Slater, an Albany resident who is a non-Equity actor, asked.

Salter has been working with Cap Rep since landing the role of Granma Joad in the "Grapes of Wrath" in 1996. It is the artistic expression of creating a persona on stage that has Ruth Salter in Our Town, Capital Rep's 1997-1998 season.

David Girard as Silenus in Capital Rep's production of Mary Zimmerman's Metamorphoses (Based on The Myths of Ovid) from the 2006-07 season.

Trying Times

Capital Repertory Theatre puts 'Crucible' hopefuls to the ultimate test inspired her to participate in more than 30 productions.

"I tend to have supportive roles, bit parts," said Salter. "But those can be fun and bring you into the company of a theater, which is an experience in and of itself."

Salter also believes in the importance of exposing people to the theater.

"I think school classes are a good way to start interest," said Salter. "There are a lot of opportunities for kids to get involved in theater classes, which creates an interest in a new audience."

Mancinelli-Cahill said theater is a venue that embodies a social dynamic modern cinema and television are unable to capture.

"In our society right now, there are fewer and fewer places to have a communal experience," said Mancinelli-Cahill. "In the theater, everyone is there at the same time having the same experience."

Set in Salem, Mass., during the famous witch hunts of the late 17th-century, Arthur Miller's "The Crucible" was written during the McCarthy Era, a period in American history typified by anti-Communist vehemence.

"The Crucible" embodies themes and motifs that are appropriate when considering the political and social climate of society today, said Mancinelli-Cahill. "Theater has the greatest ability to connect the past to the present."

"The Crucible" is part of the theater's "Classics on Stage" featuring a special week of student matinees.

"Each year, a classic production is chosen to correspond with school curriculum," explains Mancinelli-Cahill. "Students and teachers can get an opportunity to see what it's really supposed to be like when it's off the page."

David Girard, a veteran Equity actor, who auditioned for the role of Rev. Hale, considers "The Crucible" a pivotal play in American culture.

"It's my favorite play," said Girard. "It's one of these plays that I don't think I could stop learning from. It's an incredibly important piece of theater, symbolically. The mistakes being made in the play are still being made today."

Girard said that theater has the ability to break down social walls both on stage and in the dressing room.

"There's a great sense of camaraderie; gay, straight or whatever, guys are guys," said Girard.

Auditions are still continuing.

You'll be able to find out if Salter and Girard made the show when "The Crucible" takes to the stage from April 27 to May 26.

Capital Repertory Theatre is located at 111 N. Pearl St., Albany.

Skaters win gold medals as part of Saratoga Stars

Tara TenEyck of Glenmont and Molly Bieman of Delmar were part of the gold medal-winning Saratoga Stars figure skating team at last weekend's Empire State Winter Games in Lake Placid.

TenEyck also competed individually at the winter games, placing 14th in the novice ladies A division.

Three Slingerlands skaters also competed at the winter games. Christina Lombardi finished seventh in the intermediate ladies D division, while her sister Stephanie placed 12th in the intermediate ladies E division. Gina DiNapoli took 12th place in the intermediate ladies C division.

In other winter games action, Delmar's Melissa Behr won a bronze medal in the open women's ski orienteering competition. Behr completed the cross country skiing event in a time of 1 hour, 35 minutes and 32 seconds.

Berkshire eliminates Blackbirds

The Voorheesville boys basketball team saw its season end with a 62-61 loss to Berkshire in last Tuesday's Section II, Class B first round game in Voorheesville.

The Blackbirds (12-9) built an 18-13 lead in the first quarter before the Bears (5-8) went on a second quarter run. Osei Austin scored 12 points in the second quarter to help Berkshire outscore Voorheesville 23-10 and take a 36-28 halftime lead.

The Blackbirds rallied to within a point of Berkshire at the end of the third quarter and traded the lead with the Bears several times in the fourth quarter before Berkshire pulled out the one-point win.

Austin finished with 21 points, and Andrew Baxter scored 22 points to lead Berkshire, which entered the class B tournament as the No. 11 seed.

Evan Christner had 15 points, Justin Arico contributed 14 points and Tim Robinson chipped in 11 points for sixth-seeded Voorheesville. Joey Klembczyk added 10 points.

In class B girls playoff action last Tuesday, Voorheesville pushed Hudson into overtime before losing to the Blue Hawks 64-59 in an opening round game.

The Blackbirds (5-16) took a 39-34 lead into the fourth quarter, but Hudson (16-3) scored 23 points in those eight minutes to tie the game at 57. The Blue Hawks won the overtime period 7-2 to avoid the upset.

Allison Connor had 23 points, and Jessica William contributed 19 points for Hudson. Casey Becera led Voorheesville with 21 points, and Mary Kate Prendergast added 10 points.

Maginn turns back BC

The Bethlehem boys basketball team couldn't keep up with Bishop Maginn in a 70-54 loss in last Wednesday's class AA Sectional opener.

"In our locker room (before the game), we did our cheers, and we came out strong," said Alex McCullough, who scored six points in the first half.

Shen (17-4) didn't help itself in the second quarter. The Plains-only four points after the first quarter, but the Golden Griffins (19-3) turned up the defensive pressure in the second quarter to outscore Bethlehem 17-7. The Eagles scored 32 points in the second half, but they couldn't catch Bishop Maginn.

James Torres had 18 points, Talor Battle chipped in 16 points and Shimeek Johnson added 14 points for Bishop Maginn, which reached the Sectional semifinals with a 67-59 victory over Colonie Sunday.

Senior guard Kevin Stempsey had 18 points in his final high school game for Bethlehem. Gleason Judd contributed 11 points, while John Drazan and Dan Stevens each added eight points.

men tried matching Bethlehem by taking several driving layup attempts, but their shots didn't fall. By period's end, the only points Shen scored were from the free throw line, where it went 4-for-6.

"You know those practice lids that you use to practice rebounds? It's almost like they didn't take them off," said Strube.

third quarter by putting five reserves in to start the period. Though it didn't help the Plainsmen in the scoring column, the move boosted Shen's defense, as the reserves forced several Bethlehem turnovers in the first three minutes.

"All year long, different players have come up and gotten the job done," said Strube. "The group that started the third quarter, we call them the vets. They're a tight group of kids that play well together, and we hoped they'd do the job."

With Bethlehem having trouble holding on to the ball, Shen began chipping away at the double-digit deficit. The Plainsmen pulled within 11 points by the end of the third quarter, and then Bre O'Dell opened the fourth quarter with a three-pointer to make the score 35-27.

The Eagles pushed the lead back to 13 points midway through the fourth quarter, but the Plainsmen didn't go away. Another three-pointer by O'Dell and five points from Carey Turner late in the quarter got Shen within five points before three free throws from McCullough in the final minute sealed Bethlehem's victory.

"We were a little shaky (in the final four minutes), but we encouraged each other, and we got through it," said McCullough, who finished with 11 points.

"We didn't shoot great from the free throw line, but we got to the point where we got into the double bonus (two free throws), so some of the pressure was taken off," said Nealon.

Swete led Bethlehem with 12 points, while Meg Olsen matched McCullough's 11-point performance. O'Dell had 14 points for Shen.

Bethlehem will face another familiar Suburban Council foe in Wednesday's class AA semifinals at Hudson Valley Community College — Gold Division rival Guilderland. The Lady Dutch defeated Catholic Central 37-32 their quarterfinal game Saturday.

"I've got a lot of respect for coach (Frank) Cacckello and the Guilderland program. You know they'll play great defense, and they'll play hard," said Nealon.

News & Notes

Hernandez receives at-large bid

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk's Emanuel Hernandez was one of 19 Section II wrestlers who received at-large bids last Wednesday to this weekend's New York State High School Championships in Albany.

Hernandez, a 119-pound wrestler, will join R-C-S teammates Cody Legg, Nate Graham and Donnie McBride at states. Legg, Graham and McBride won their weight classes at the Section II, Division II championships Feb. 17 in Glens Falls.

With Hernandez's addition, R-C-S tied Shenendehowa for most wrestlers from one school on the Section II team.

The state tournament begins Friday at the TU Center, with the finals taking place Saturday night.

Dolphins schedule spring clinic

The Delmar Dolphins will hold a two-week clinic for swimmers age 7 to 12 who have not been on a team and wish to learn competitive skills.

The clinic takes place March 26 through April 5 at Albany Academy for Boys. Sessions run 6 to 7 p.m. Monday through Thursday both weeks.

Basic swimming ability (a 25-yard front crawl with good breathing to the side without stopping) is needed to participate in the clinic.

The cost is $60 per swimmer.

For information, contact Doug Gross at 369-9733 or e-mail dolphincoach@juno.com.

ARC accepting spring registration

The Albany Rowing Center is accepting applications for its spring rowing program, which begins March 12.

ARC teaches the fundamentals of sweep rowing and sculling to students in grades seven through 12. Several ARC rowers have qualified for the national championships in recent years.

The program is open to students from across the Capital District.

For information, visit the club's Web site at www.albanyrowingcenter.org or call Donna Quinn Holloway at 479-0469.

Eagles fly past Shen

BC jumps out early and hangs on for quarterfinal win

By ROB JONAS

The first time Bethlehem met Shenendehowa this girls basketball season, the Plainsmen rallied from a big deficit to defeat the Eagles by four points.

A similar scenario developed in Saturday's Section II, Class AA quarterfinal game between the two Suburban Council teams, only this time, Bethlehem hung on for a 49-42 victory over Shen in Clifton Park.

The Eagles (14-8) built a 15-point halftime lead and fended off a late Shen rally to advance to their first Sectional semifinal appearance since winning the 2003 class A title — the year before class AA was added.

"They played well from the outset," said Bethlehem coach Mark Nealon. "They may not have finished as strong as they would have liked, but they played well."

"We dug ourselves quite a hole, and the big reason was Bethlehem. They played a tremendous first half," said Shen coach Ken Strube.

After building a 12-9 lead in the first quarter, Bethlehem took off in the second quarter. Three-point plays by Christine Murphy and Kiersten Swete sparked a 16-

Great Danes' win is a very big deal

With so much focus on basketball these days, it's hard to believe that a spring sport would generate any kind of buzz in the Capital District.

Then along came the University at Albany men's lacrosse team's 8-7 victory over Johns Hopkins Saturday.

Those in the know realize that's a big deal. For those who aren't in the know, believe me it's a very big deal.

You see, Johns Hopkins is one of the elite college lacrosse programs in the United States. The Blue Jays have won eight NCAA Division I titles, and when they haven't won titles, they are usually in the hunt.

As for the University at Albany, its Division I lacrosse pedigree looks something like this:

- Three America East championships
- Two victories over the University of Massachusetts
- Three losses to Syracuse, although the Orange needed overtime to beat Albany 14-13 last year

• No NCAA tournament wins.

Not exactly the pedigree of Johns Hopkins. Heck, it's not exactly the pedigree of Hobart College (which has a win against Syracuse to its credit).

But the nice thing about lacrosse is that if you catch an opponent off guard, anything can happen. That was the case Saturday, as Albany scored five goals before Johns Hopkins realized that — as the No. 1 ranked team in the nation — it was in a game against a good opponent. The Blue Jays came back to take a 7-5 lead in the fourth quarter, but the Great Danes tallied three times late in regulation to pull out the one-goal win.

How much should be read into Albany's performance? Consider the following:

• The game was played at Johns Hopkins, where the Blue Jays had won 44 out of their last 47 home games

• The game was shown on national TV — well, on ESPNU anyway, which is sort of a national network in that it can be ordered through cable companies and satellite providers

• It was Albany's first win over a No. 1 ranked opponent in any sport since the school moved to the Division I level in 1999, and the Great Danes looked every bit as good as the ranked team they were facing.

Of course, this was also the first game of the year for Albany and the second for Johns Hopkins. Where these two teams wind up in May could be very different places.

Johns Hopkins will certainly bounce back from this loss. The Blue Jays have too much talent — including Niskayuna High School graduate Mark Bryan — to slip that far down. They'll get their fair share of conference wins on their way to the NCAA tournament.

As for Albany, it's a great win to build on, but there are more obstacles for the Great Danes to clear. They still have to win the America East title, and to do that, they have to beat quality teams in SUNY Stony Brook and University of Maryland-Baltimore County. There are road games with Drexel and Syracuse. And if the Great Danes clear those obstacles, they still have to earn a NCAA tournament win to change their pedigree.

But make no mistake about it — beating Johns Hopkins on the road is a giant step for Albany, no matter how early in the season it happens. It says that the Great Danes are a good team capable of beating anyone. It says that the hard work coach Scott Marr (a Johns Hopkins graduate, no less) has put into building Albany's program is paying off.

Most importantly, though, it says that the Albany men's lacrosse team bears watching this season — even as this region is still wrapped up with basketball.

The Great Danes could be a very big deal come May.
