The season for sneezin'

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parkerg@spotlightnews.com

April showers, or snow, bring May flowers.

May flowers trigger allergies.

Across the country, more than 60 million Americans will be sneezing and wheezing this spring, crowding doctors' waiting rooms, and costing the U.S. economy more than $25 billion annually in treatment, missed work and medication, according to the Allergy and Asthma Foundation of America.

In the past 20 years, the number of people suffering from allergies has doubled. The disease has landed 2 million people in emergency rooms, 500,000 in the doctor's office and - in extreme cases - has caused 5,000 deaths each year, according to the foundation.

May is allergy and asthma awareness month. Nationally, regionally and locally, the call is being made for greater awareness of allergies, which can cause symptoms that range from being a nuisance to severely debilitating.

Local and federal agencies arrest three counterfeiters

By JIM CUOZZO

Three Albany men were in jail Friday, April 20, for passing more than $40,000 in counterfeit money over the past several months in Bethlehem and the Capital District.

Kofi Opuku Agyemang, Joel P. Evans and Jules T. Hawkins are being charged with forgery, grand larceny, petty larceny, and weapons possession including rifles and several stun guns.

Bethlehem police have been working with various state and federal law enforcement agencies including the U.S. Secret Service ever since the fake money began circulating in Glenmont and other stores around town.

"This is far reaching and travels all across the country," said Bethlehem police Chief Lou Corsi at Friday's press conference, flanked by a group of law enforcement officials from the city of Albany, the county District Attorney's office and the Secret Service.

"This is a very large arrest," said William Leegi of the U.S. Se-

The field of candidates running for Bethlehem town supervisor has increased to three.

Glenmont resident Jim Grady announced he will run for the seat that interim town Supervisor Jack Cunningham holds.

Grady, a lifelong resident of the town, has never before run for public office. He said he made his decision shortly after Theresa Egan announced she was stepping down from

Rensselaer man charged with forgery

A Rensselaer man was arrested by Bethlehem police and charged with three felonies including forgery, identity theft and criminal possession of stolen property, fourth degree.

Bert G. Tenney, 31, of 213 Washington Ave., Rensselaer, was arrested on Saturday, April 14, and charged with allegedly forging a deed and stealing a credit card. He was arraigned in Bethlehem Town Court and sent to Albany County Jail on $20,000 bail. He is due back in court on May 1.

Schenectady man charged with DWI

A Schenectady man was arrested by Bethlehem police and charged with failure to keep right and driving a motor vehicle intoxicated, second offense.

Edward Bradt, 36, of 1609 Rugby Road, Schenectady, was traveling west on Delaware Ave., Sunday, April 15, when he was stopped by Bethlehem police for allegedly crossing into the eastbound lane. According to the police report, Bradt failed to pull over initially when officers attempted to stop his Chevrolet Blazer. He was also charged with unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle and was issued a ticket to appear in Town Court May 1.

Silent support

Hundreds of college students and staff gathered around the small fountain on the University at Albany campus Tuesday, April 17, in a show of support to the Virginia Tech community and to pay their respects to the fallen students and professors that were killed Monday, April 16, as 23-year-old Seung-Hui Cho walked into Norris Hall on the Virginia Tech campus and began firing. By the time he turned the gun on himself, 32 students and faculty were dead, and dozens more were injured. See story, page 12.

Vista Tech Park's future on the horizon

Planning board wary of site's big-box potential

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Members of the Bethlehem planning board are looking for assurances that the proposed Vista Technology Park will not end up being just another a big-box retail site for developers.

Bill Herbert, vice president of BBL Development, was asked repeatedly at the board's Tuesday, April 17, meeting if the 450-acre Vista Tech Park, located in Bethlehem and New Scotland off Route 85, will be able to bring in more technology than retail business in the currently zoned mixed-economic development district. Herbert said the proposed breakdown over 10 years is 80 percent technology-based and 20 percent retail.

"I would not want to find a tenant move out and a large retail store move in the next day," said Parker Mathusa, planning board chairman.

Herbert said locating companies for the tech park is a fluid process.

"You don't know which project could jump forward and how big that project will be," said Herbert.

The Vista Park conceptual plan requires the planning board's approval as part of the tech park's Final Environmental Impact Statement. The town board is lead agency for the project, which includes 150 acres that will be developed in phases.

Herbert said he is in discussion with a very large user of the park that could jumpstart the technology growth right away. Most experts, according to Herbert, believe the start of technology growth is more than a year away.

"We know the big technology push is a few years off, and for that reason, technology business being sited in phase one is fairly minimal," Herbert said.

Thomas Cotrofeld, who the Bethlehem Democrats have endorsed to replace Jack Cunningham, now Bethlehem supervisor, in the Albany County Legislature, said town residents have concerns that the tech park will become another retail site.

"Radio Shack is a tech business, so is Cingular and Verizon," said Cotrofeld. "I don't think that is what we have in mind here."

Assistant economic developer for the town Michael Morelli reminded planning board members this is a conceptual plan and not a site-specific plan that needs board approval.

"The resolution you send to the town board could be very specific," Morelli added.

Morelli said if the developer deviates from the specifics of the project plan, it will need to come back to the town for any approval a second time around.

"They would have to start the process all over and modify their environmental impact statement," Morelli added.

Mathusa said the goal of the planning board is to safeguard the process on behalf of the residents and not to disrupt the project.

"We don't want to stifle development," said Mathusa. "We want to protect the concept and to protect the town and county."

The final environmental impact statement on the Vista Tech Park is expected to be approved by the town board at their May 9 meeting. Development is not slated to occur at Vista until the Slingerlands Bypass road construction project overseen by the state Department of Transportation is complete in June of 2008.

Car swerves for safety

Program attempts to deter drunk driving among teens

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Several hundred Bethlehem high school students received a first-hand look at what it's like to drive drunk and the consequences that go with it.

Erie Insurance of Pennsylvania and its local partner, Whiting Insurance of Glenmont, sponsored the pre-prom season education program held in the parking lot outside Bethlehem Central High School.

More than 200 students drove a bright yellow Volkswagen called the "Safety Bug."

The coordinator of the event, Mike Martin of the Pennsylvania DUI Association, held the controls in the passenger seat while students took turns driving through several cones. When Martin pressed the control, the car shifted ever so slightly, causing the driver to hit several cones and drive in a manner that simulated being intoxicated.

"One drink slows your motor skills seven-tenths of a second," Martin said. "Driving in this car, you are in a controlled environment, but out there you don't know it's coming."

Student Olivia Kilmer put on specially designed goggles that simulated impaired vision due to alcohol consumption.

"I felt like I was falling," said Kilmer. "Every turn we went, I thought we were hitting cones."

Bruce Whiting helped bring the car and the educational program to Bethlehem High School.

"This program allows students the real-life experience of driving while impaired without the real-life risk," said Whiting. "It's not over the top, and kids are having fun."

Bethlehem Police Department D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) officer Chad Rice explained to students the consequences of driving drunk.

"Driving is a privilege in this state and not a right, and the state can take your privilege away if you drink," said Rice.

Students were asked to perform several field sobriety tests so they understood what happens when an officer pulls someone over on suspicion of DWI. The tasks included a walk-and-turn, one-leg stand and blowing into a pre-screening device that measures the amount of alcohol in a person's system.

Coxsackie-Athens also held the same educational program with the Whiting Agency and Erie Insurance.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reports that drivers between 15 and 20 years old are more often involved in alcohol-related crashes than any other age group. Car accidents are also the No. 1 cause of death for teens.

Bethlehem planners say they're not lovin' it

Board finds plans for McDonald's lack a hometown look

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

The owners of the Delmar McDonald's will go back to the drawing board after the Bethlehem planning board on Tuesday, April 17, objected to a new building design proposal for the 132 Delaware Ave. facility.

Franchise owners Jim and Sheri Fox are looking to take down the now 38-year-old building and replace it with a 4,300-square-foot facility.

"We want to have a great-looking building that is contemporary and serves customers better," said Jim Fox the day after the planning board unanimously objected to the design.

"To me it still is a box," said planning board member Howard Engel of the design. "I don't think that's what we're looking for in redoing Delaware Avenue."

Members of the board said they want new businesses along Delaware Avenue to give the town a personal, hometown look to fit in with the comprehensive plan.

"I would think they would want something that fits more with the community, something like what CVS did," said board member Thomas Cotrofeld, referring to the pharmacy's new Delaware Avenue location.

Board member Daniel Odell told his colleagues they have an opportunity with the new planning codes to "influence the process."

Chris Boyea of Bohler Engineering presented the restaurant design to the planning board. Boyea said his group has been working on the project for more than a year, and the building conforms to all current town codes.

The Bethlehem planning board objected to a new building design for McDonald's on Delaware Avenue

"McDonald's may not be able to build this building financially with too much variation," said Boyea.

"To me it still is a box. ... I don't think that's what we're looking for in redoing Delaware Avenue."

Board members said they also held out hope the new sign would be smaller than the 9-foot one that was proposed.

"Signage is very important," said Ed Beeler, assistant construction manager for McDonald's USA. "It's very easy for you to say go down to a smaller, non-illuminated monument sign. You are not writing the check for the investment."

Planning board chairman Parker Mathusa said the project needs to be reevaluated.

"We understand you have been long-term members of the community," said Mathusa. "But we have a responsibility to upgrade the community."

Jim Fox said he understands any new building development should enhance the town.

"It's a great location, and I am willing to work with the board," said Fox, who would like to have construction begin on his new restaurant by the end of the year. "We will go back and look at different designs."

Turn your focus from destination to journey

By BILL GIERING
news@spotlightnews.com

Shelly from Delmar writes: I wanted to ask the travel guy what his favorite travel destination is within three hours of Albany? That's about as far as I want to drive in a day without being too tired when I get there.

Travel Guy: We have such great choices in our area; in three hours you could drive to Boston, New York City, or for some, Montreal, all world-class destinations. Before you pull out of your driveway, let me suggest that you check out the Web sites for Albany International Airport, Yankee Trails Travel, Amtrak and AAA. You might be surprised at the ease, cost and luxury of having someone else do the driving for you. Relax and meet some new people or close your eyes ... sometimes the journey can be as much fun as the destination.

Some time ago, I was in the Amtrak bar car heading up the Hudson after a couple of days in New York City. Sitting across from me on the river side was a young man about 28. He was blind and had a beautiful, big-eyed German shepherd at his feet. As I got up to get a drink, I touched his shoulder and asked if I could get him anything from the bar. He looked up, smiled but said he didn't want anything.

Five minutes later, as I was still gloating about my natural sensitivity and caring ways, I noticed a very distinguished-looking gentleman walk up to the table. The dog thumped its tail gently on the floor. The gentleman was one of those tanned, handsome guys that everybody notices when he enters a room. Like Clint Eastwood, impeccably dressed, about 70 years old.

He asked the young man if he could join him, then after some niceties about the dog, he asked if he had always been blind. The young man answered, "Since I was about 10." The young man went on to mention the name of the disease that had taken his sight, but I can't remember it now. The Clint Eastwood look-alike then asked a question that has stayed with me for years: "Would you like me to tell you about the views, as we move up the river?"

I had taken this train for years, mostly after long hard weeks when I would sit slouched in my seat reviewing the past five days. I have also spent a lot of train-time thinking about what I would do after I got home. Then it dawned on me: I had spent a lot of time in the past and the future, and not much in the present. I had never paid attention to the Hudson River at all, the beauty of it.

I decided to eavesdrop with my eyes closed, and listen to the man reveal what he was seeing.

He began by describing the river. It was windy, and he spoke of the white caps rushing to the shoreline just below us and how the sun glistened off the water, causing him to squint from the explosive colors of white. Winter whites, snow whites, whites that turned to silver like the reflections off shiny wrinkled pieces of aluminum foil. He had a wonderful baritone voice that seemed soothing, almost magnetic. He described the boats: a dirty red tug fighting against the waves, and the colorful full sail of a clipper capturing the power of the gust on its journey south.

He drew verbal pictures of the fall kaleidoscope of leaves. First, describing the trees as if the colors were siphoned from hardy wines. The leaves in the sun were brilliant Burgundies; the leaves in the shade were a darker Chianti or port. The canvas I recalled was a simple red and yellow, but this guy was painting with brilliant shades of crimson, gold and burnt orange -- colors I hadn't seen in my Crayola box of 64. As the tracks dipped closer to river level, his voice raised to express the growing excitement because now we could see the reflection of the colors as they mirrored the river.

The Hudson River has one a yes of agreement, a yes of a shared understanding, a yes expressing an internal desire for more -- powerful in its simplicity.

The baritone voice was always satisfying, and filling the blind man's imagination with visions of what was passing by. The long silences gave the young man a chance to absorb, understand and reflect -- to see the words.

We made the usual scheduled stops on our way north: Croton, Rinecliff, Hudson -- passengers got on and off. Those were silent times. After an extended silent time, I opened my eyes, and the narrator was abrupt turn, in its 315-mile journey from Lake Tear of the Clouds in the Adirondacks to the Battery at the very end of Manhattan. It's at that bend in the river where the U.S. Military Academy sits.

"There, high above those rifle-barrel, steel-gray walls of solid stone, sits West Point, forever producing tomorrows leaders," he said. (I haven't since been in a paint store or Home Depot where I haven't looked for "rifle-barrel, steel-gray" paint. It isn't there; he made that color up.)

There were a lot of long silences when we would lose the river, broken by the soothing voice as a new scene came into view. The shadows of the bridges, the catfalls that grew in the tidal marshes, waving like golden wheat fields in the sun. There wasn't much interaction between the two. The young man mostly listened; his only words an occasional, "Yes."

That word spoke volumes:

gone. I waited, and finally asked the young man where his friend had gone? Where was he? Was he coming back?

The young man calmly said: "I don't know. I didn't notice. I am still seeing his words."

I guess my point is that experiences like this don't happen to me when I'm driving my car.

I searched the train that day and many days since, and never saw the narrator again. I wanted to thank him. So if you are him, reading this -- Thanks for the ride of my life. You changed mine.

And you changed the way I think about travel; yep, sometimes the journey can be as much fun as the destination. So try a bus or a plane or a train, relax and let your vacation begin ... during the journey.

Ask the Travel Guy will appear in the fourth week of each month.

Marshalls opens its doors

Hundreds check out the Glenmont store at grand opening

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Marshalls, the clothing retailer many Bethlehem residents have anxiously been awaiting, opened its doors in Glenmont to 192 dedicated customers at 8 a.m. Thursday, April 18.

Drivers circled the parking lot searching for a space as the crowd inside grew during the first hour. Store manager Kitty Bidwell said the customers continued to pour in several hours later.

"A lot of Marshalls customers are repeat customers, and they have been waiting for this store to open for over two years," said Bidwell.

Marshalls promotes itself as one of the leading off-price family apparel and home fashion retailers, with more than 750 stores in the United States. Items at Marshalls cost anywhere from 20 to 60 percent less than items offered by department stores and catalogs. The Glenmont Marshalls will also feature The CUBE, a trendy, high-energy juniors department.

"The CUBE represents an exciting new way to shop at Marshalls," said spokeswoman Amy Cafazzo.

Most customers already knew about the store opening before the ads appeared.

"Customers were checking our Web site daily for updates," Bidwell said.

On Thursday, some shoppers came out empty-handed, while others came out with several bags full of goods.

Marty DeLaney, Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce president, said she spotted many familiar faces entering the store in the early morning hour.

"It's nice to see all those happy shoppers," said DeLaney.

Marshalls is located Where Grand Union and Ames used to be. The space has been vacant for many years.

"The town has tried for a long time to bring the right store into this location," said town board member Kyle Kotary, who believes there is interest in filling the space next to Marshalls with another retailer.

"There is a pent-up demand for a store like this, and the demand has been met," DeLaney said.

Other Marshall store locations in the Capital District include stores at the Northway Mall, Mohawk Mall in Schenectady, New Loudon Center Plaza in Latham and the Clifton Park Center.

Marshalls will be open seven days a week, 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

"There is a pent-up demand for a store like this, and the demand has been met."

Marty DeLaney

Shoppers anxiously head into the new Marshalls store during its grand opening on Thursday, April 19 in the Glenmont Shopping Center. More than 190 people waited outside for the store to open at 8 that morning.

April showers are nation's tears

Is the third week of April destined to become one of national mourning in our country?

April 19, 1995, is the date of the terrorist attack on the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City. That attack killed 168 people and left 800 injured.

On April 20, 1999, high school students Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold killed 12 students and a teacher, and left 24 wounded at Columbine High School in Colorado.

Now we add to that April 16, 2007, the name Seung-Hui Cho, 32 dead and 29 injured.

The perpetrators of these crimes are dead, too; Timothy McVeigh, who was behind the Oklahoma City bombing, was put to death as punishment. Harris, Klebold and Seung-Hui Cho all turned their weapons on themselves to end lives that had brought about such tragedy.

How do we stop this?

Let's start with tough gun laws and tougher enforcement. Permits, licenses, a registry, mandatory gun locks: anything that might deter an unstable person from owning a weapon is a good thing.

Strong security and communications systems are necessary at colleges and universities. The students at Virginia Tech should have been notified that the first shooting had taken place. There could have been an e-mail, cell phone calls, or a loudspeaker on a truck. Are there telephones in college classrooms that could receive blanket phone calls in case of an emergency?

If the students in Norris Hall could have locked themselves into their classrooms while police and campus security looked for Seung-Hui, their classmates might have been tossing Frisbees with them rather than observing a moment of silence in their honor.

This week proves to us that we must all pay attention to our fellow man. Encourage students to tell a teacher, a parent, any adult, when somebody's behavior troubles them. Adults, seek out family and friends, medical professionals and figures of authority, including law enforcement if necessary.

We do not need to turn into a police state reporting each of our neighbor's quirks, but we share a responsibility to keep each other and society at large safe.

The next time that you are worried about somebody, but tell yourself everything will probably be all right, think of Virginia Tech, and act instead.

Let's prevent April from being the cruelest month.

Tying up some loose ends

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parkergr@spotlightnews.com

The writer covers Colonie and Loudonville for Spotlight Newspapers.

The chief of the firehouse in Stillwater does not look like Ty Pennington.

Ty Pennington doesn't even look like Ty Pennington. The TV Ty and the "real" Ty running around the Fairway Lane home in Colonie last month, which was completely rebuilt as part of ABC's "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition," look totally different.

I'm no expert, but I did see the show once for about 10 seconds after my groggy, I've-been-sitting-around-all-day-Sunday fingers accidentally mashed the left side of the TV remote keypad. Already, I was Ty'd out.

Do you have to have a mustache to be a fireman?

***

These were just some of the many things that crossed my mind as Stillwater's finest pumped hundreds of gallons of water out of my basement. It was Monday, March 26. Miles south, the home of Debbie Oatman-Gaitan and her four sons was coming together nicely, two days after her old one had been torn down.

"Good morning Parker family!"

That would have been nice.

My wake-up call, which came as I drove to the "Extreme Makeover" site, went something like this: "There're police on the way. The phone cut off when I dialed 9-1-1, so they called back, and there're flashing lights all over the place. The firemen are pumping out the basement, and the heat isn't working," sobbed my wife, rattled by the commotion. Being knee-deep in her first trimester of pregnancy wasn't helping.

All I could do was laugh. And turn around and drive home to witness the horror for myself.

Point of View

Debbie took in three children, the first of whom called Colonie home in the early '90s. Her story is compelling. She has dealt with the fear and anger of a community wary of living next to, or having their children associate with, HIV-positive children. All the while her home — their home — was sinking into the ground. I can't think of anyone more deserving of a new home, and I hope it is as nice on the inside as it looks from 200 feet away, surrounded by a sea of grade-school girls screaming, "It's Ty! It's Ty! Oh my God! Ty!"

"So that's Ty. Pffff," I chuckled to myself. "My soul patch is bigger than his."

***

Could I keep my soul patch if I were a fireman or would I have to shave it off to make way for my Doc Holiday 'stache?

I haven't taken in any children. I have one on the way. It will call Stillwater (preferably Boulder, Colo.) home in the late '00s. My story is not compelling, at least not this day.

Months before the cloak-and-dagger "Extreme Makeover" machine descended on the area, I was down in the basement petting my turn-of-the-century furnace thinking I could coax it to kick on again. It didn't. Thousands of dollars later, I would cough up the credit for a state-of-the-art German-made furnace — top of the line. I remember looking at it when it was first installed. It looked like it could have been on the cover of some furnace enthusiast magazine (assuming there is one; I hope there isn't) with a scantily clad starlet draped over it.

"The Buderus G215. Cutting edge, cutting costs," the headline would read. I've debated stenciling racing flames on it.

But on March 26, the glamour is gone, the new copper piping is corroded, and there are shoes that aren't mine floating by my precious G215, which is under three feet of water.

As I watch helplessly, the mustachioed Stillwater fireman just stares. He sees the car, my jacket, the tax-return rock on my wife's finger, my expensive dog (that I recently had to put down, which added to his expensiveness), my tax-return television and stereo, and my G215.

He's thinking I can afford this.

***

Meanwhile in Chief Gordon's office across town ...

***

Debbie's framed walls are in place, sheet rock is being fastened at record speed, the plumbing, electric, heating and fire suppression system are following, hundreds of volunteers short of sleep are working 'round the clock.

As this happens, my e-mail account fills up with a chain of messages urging me to get intrepid reporter Vicki Vail (obscure Batman reference here) to dig at Debbie's past. She is undeserving of this new home, the messages allege. It was her children who damaged the above-ground pool in the backyard. The subsequent flooding undermined the foundation. (Never mind the flood-prone Lisha Kill in her backyard, which was responsible for two road closings just last week.) Debbie doesn't deserve this home, they say. They want a scathing front-page article exposing her for taking in "unwanted children" to reap state and federal benefits. And now she gets a new home out of it, they whine.

***

One of my neighbors once blamed me for the flooding that swamps all of our homes at least a couple of times a year. I live in the hamlet of Willow Glenn.

"You would think that the name would have tipped her off," I remember saying to my wife when reading the letter, where she threatened to go to the "SUPERVISER!" It was one of several misspelled words.

She actually took a sample of the groundwater in my backyard and sent it to a lab for testing. She alleged the water was riddled with toxins emanating from the elevated leach field out back.

The same leach field, which serves two adults in a single-family home, was the single source of recent seasonal flooding.

Last week my road was closed. It takes a lot of water to overcome Route 67. Maybe I should limit my flushing. I remember a needlepoint sign above the toilet at one of my father's friends house I visited when I was young. It read, "Yellow is Mellow." No it isn't. I flushed.

***

Did people dig at Debbie like that? Forget the home's condition. Just dealing with that should be enough to warrant Ty's cackle over the bullhorn: "Good morning Oatman-Gaitan family!"

I wonder if the chief of the Midway Fire Department (which serves Debbie's new home) has a mustache. I wonder if Debbie's new home was one of the hundreds in Colonie last week that had to be pumped out? I doubt it. Debbie's flooding problems should be history thanks to the hundreds of volunteers that answered the "Extreme Makeover" call.

Debbie will never have to pay for a new computerized-fire-timing-flux-capacitor-Batarang modulator for the G215, well, at least not because it is under water. Her foundation will hold. And her family will live in comfort and style. And that's a good thing.

And on May 10, when the episode featuring Debbie and her sons' new home airs on ABC, I will watch it. And will think little of the G215 burning away below my feet and the hundreds we invested in a state-of-the-art sump pump system in the Bat Cave, which is what I call my basement.

I will forget my neighbor, rub my wife's stomach, and gently stroke my soul patch, which has at least three times the fullness of Ty's.

Watch for warning signs of suicide

Editor, The Spotlight:

The approach of spring is a trying time for those dealing with depression and anxiety, and there is often a rise in suicides. Our community has felt that pain and unfortunately, continues to do so. It is estimated that 30,000 people die by suicide in the United States each year with major depression being the leading cause. During our lifetime, 20 percent of us will have a suicide within our immediate family and 60 percent of us will personally know someone who dies by suicide. The numbers of us left behind from the loss of one to suicide are staggering. Locally, there is a wonderful support group to help those left behind to cope with that pain.

The Capital District chapter of the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention (AFSP) is working locally to educate individuals, professionals and communities about the warning signs of suicide. It is the only nonprofit national organization exclusively dedicated to understanding and preventing suicide through research and education, and to reaching out to people with mood disorders and those affected by suicide.

Our community holds many that every morning awaken and try to understand the loss of one to suicide. A healing community offers hope.

There are common warning signs of suicide, easy to remember if you use the mnemonic device "Is Path Warm."

They are:

Ideation (forming ideas/images of suicide)

Substance abuse

Purposelessness

Anxiety

Trapped (not seeing other options)

Hopelessness

Withdrawal

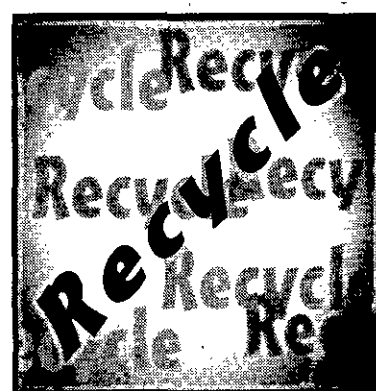

Anger

Recklessness/Impulsivity

Mood disorder/change

For information, please contact mjcoleman@afsp.org or visit the Web site, www.AFSP.org. The number of the National Suicide Prevention Line is 1-800-273-TALK (8255).

Eating meat contributes to global warming

Editor, The Spotlight:

Recently, the United Nations' intergovernmental panel on climate change, involving dozens of experts, provided a more detailed assessment of the effects of global warming on North America. The 67-page report predicts devastating droughts and hurricanes and extensive flooding of coastal areas, displacing millions.

Erratic weather fluctuations are likely to increase human and animal casualties from heat, storms, pollution and infectious diseases.

A report released by the UN Food and Agriculture Organization last November blamed animal agriculture for 18 percent (more than automobiles) of greenhouse gas emissions that cause global warming. Carbon dioxide, the chief greenhouse gas, is emitted by burning forests to create animal pastures and by combustion of fossil fuels to operate farm machinery, trucks, refrigeration equipment, factory farms, and slaughterhouses. The much more damaging methane and nitrous oxide are released from the digestive tracts of cattle and from animal waste cesspools, respectively.

The annual observance of Earth Day on Sunday provides a great opportunity to start saving our planet by dropping animal products from our diet. Details are available at www.CoolYourDiet.org.

Your Opinion in the Spotlight

The majority disagrees with current U.S. policy in Iraq

Editor, The Spotlight:

Fundamental to our democracy is the right to free speech, reserved to all citizens by the First Amendment to our Constitution. As such, I respect the rights of all to express their opinions on the war in Iraq, whether by engaging in a "honk for peace" demonstration at the Four Corners, by putting signs on one's lawn or bumper stickers on one's car, or by submitting a letter to the editor of The Spotlight. While defending his right to express his opinion, I respectfully disagree with many of the assertions contained in Mr. Crisafulli's recent letter ("Protests can be disheartening" — The Spotlight, April 18, page 7).

First, I take issue that the "silent majority" of citizens support our country's current "surge" strategy in Iraq. In fact, polls consistently show that the vast majority of Americans (and Iraqis, for that matter) would like to see our troops withdrawn from Iraq. Last November, Americans elected a new Congress and provided them with a mandate to change the direction in Iraq, and to not just "stay the course." Those of us who hold democracy dear must respect the results of this election and respect that the majority of our elected representatives support setting forth a reasonable timetable for troop withdrawal.

Second, I disagree with the assertion that the acts of Americans expressing their dissatisfaction with failed administration of this war somehow "emboldens" or encourages the daily violence in Iraq. The vast majority of the killing in Iraq is Sunni/Shiite violence. The animosity Iraqis exhibit toward each other goes back centuries and involves cultural, religious and political differences. A Sunni or Shiite who commits an act of violence in furtherance of the civil war does not do so because he or she was "emboldened" by something a U.S. citizen said or did. In fact, most Iraqis and analysts (including the bi-partisan Iraq Study Group) believe the violence would subside if foreign troops were cut back and diplomacy pursued.

Finally, I disagree that the expression of dissatisfaction with our country's war policy in any way shows a lack of respect for our troops. If we have learned anything from Vietnam, it is that there is always a clear distinction between support for the brave men and women who wear the uniform and support (or lack thereof) for an administration's war policies. Sadly, by sending troops into combat without adequate body armor, without an "exit strategy" for withdrawing them, by randomly extending tours of duty and by not providing adequate care for those who return home wounded, this administration has not shown its support for the troops.

What better way to support the troops than to bring them home safely? I will be honking the next time I pass the Four Corners and encourage others to do the same if they are so inclined.

Writer urges voters to defeat budget

Editor, The Spotlight:

It's that time of year when we are being asked to vote on May 15 on yet another increase to the school budget. In 25 years of living here, last year was the first time he budget failed, only to pass on a revised budget.

Before you walk into the voting booth and so eagerly press the lever for "yes," keep a few things in mind.

Over the past five years, the town of Bethlehem has witnessed incredible commercial growth and horrible traffic. One would think it would add to the tax base, but guess again. We have Lowe's, Wal-Mart, Price Chopper, Wendy's and Marshalls, just to name a few that are getting five to 10-year tax exemptions. That means their duty to pay taxes is being phased in. I've heard that the homeowner gets the short end of the stick; by the time they are at full value, some of these businesses just shut down and leave.

Everyone had their property assessed and was hit with an increase last year. The town assessed properties at the highest point in the real estate bubble. I now see homes for sale in Bethlehem that not only are sitting there, but in some cases, prices are being reduced.

If you look at the pamphlet which explains the school district's proposed 3.98 percent increase, it states some of the factors are earmarked for "state-mandated pension contributions." This should have been factored in years ago. Health insurance rises every year. In my company, if I pass along the double-digit increase to my customers, I would be out of business.

It is time to vote no and keep it no, and hold the Bethlehem school board completely accountable for each dollar spent and to exercise fiscal belt-tightening in every department in the district. The board needs to adopt the "stretch method," which means do more with less. Jack Welch, formerly of GE, introduced this method. GE is one of the most profitable companies in the world and it is time the Bethlehem school district runs the district as a business, keeping the academic goals in the forefront.

State legislators pass law

Jonathan's Law would improve access to state mental health records

By ROB IRWIN
irwin@spotlightnews.com

On Monday, April 23, the state Assembly passed Jonathan's Law, less than a week after it was passed in the state Senate.

The state Senate unanimously passed the law on Wednesday, April 18, two months after the death of 13-year-old Jonathan Carey, an autistic boy who died while in the care of O.D. Heck Development Center in Niskayuna.

The law now awaits approval from Gov. Eliot Spitzer.

The law ensures that parents and guardians have access to records pertaining to allegations and investigations of mistreatment of children in residential care facilities.

"The passage of this law will have a tremendous impact on thousands of New Yorkers," said state Assemblyman Tim Gordon, I-Slingerlands. "With Jonathan's Law, Jonathan's life, though short, will shine on to improve the lives of thousands of New York's most vulnerable children and adults."

Michael and Lisa Carey, Jonathan's parents, had been pushing for the law before their son's death because they believed their son had been abused while a resident of the Anderson School in Dutchess County. Results of an investigation of the abuse allegations by several state agencies were inconclusive. The Careys were not given access to the records of the investigations on which those findings were based.

After the alleged abuse occurred at the Anderson School, the Careys pulled Jonathan out, eventually enrolling him at the O.D. Heck facility.

Jonathan died Thursday, Feb. 15, while being transported by two employees of O.D. Heck when he was allegedly restrained inappropriately while riding in the backseat of a van traveling on Central Avenue in Colonie. The two men charged in his death have pleaded not guilty and are awaiting trial.

"The death of Jonathan Carey was a tragic event, and the allegations that surfaced after his death concerning his treatment at not one, but two facilities that were entrusted with caring for him have made clear the need for this legislation," said state Senate Majority Leader Joseph L. Bruno, R-Brunswick. "Families of disabled children should be confident that they are receiving proper care. Jonathan's Law will make sure parents and guardians have full access to information about their children's treatment, leading to better oversight and care for vulnerable children in these facilities."

Both Michael and Lisa Carey have been actively involved in the process of passing this law, lobbying on behalf of Jonathan and others like him. Michael has said in the past that his hope is the law will bring sorely needed change to how the state cares for its disabled residents.

The law

- It ensures that parents or guardians have access to records concerning alleged abuse or investigations of abuse when it concerns their children. Upon written request, records must be released within 21 days of the conclusion of an investigation;

- It mandates telephone notification to the parent or guardian of a patient when an incident occurs involving that patient, and upon request, a written incident report must be provided to the parent or guardian;

- It directs the Commission on Quality Care and Advocacy for Persons with Disabilities (CQCAPD) to prepare and disseminate a pamphlet on the right to access records relating to patient care and treatment;

Michael Carey said he and his wife would continue to advocate for the rights of the disabled.

"Right on the heels of this, we're hoping to work with

Four to run for two school board seats

Positions up for vote in May election

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Four candidates will be vying for two open seats on the Bethlehem school board in May.

Duane Bowman, Diane Giacone Stever, Laura Ladd Bierman and Lisa Allendorph are all hoping to be the top two vote getters to replace incumbents Richard Svenson and Stuart Lyman, who both opted not to run for another three-year term.

Bowman, of Elsmere, is currently employed with the state Dormitory Authority. He also has a master's degree in public administration and has lived in Bethlehem for the past 12 years.

"The rising cost of education has sparked my interest," said Bowman who recently served as a member of the school district's newly formed citizens budget committee.

Bowman said he did not believe the school board received enough input from

Allendorph

Ladd Bierman

Bowman

Giacone Stever

the 40-member citizens budget committee.

"I don't feel we were allowed to act as a true advisory committee," said Bowman. "We were assembled just to be spectators in the process."

Bowman said the quality of education needs to be balanced with what taxpayers can afford.

Bierman, who is seeking her first term on the Bethlehem school board, is no stranger to running for a school seat. She served eight years as a member of School District 30 in Glenview and Northbrook, Ill., before returning to Delmar in 2005.

"I really enjoyed it out in Illinois, helping shape kids education and providing a different perspective," said Bierman, who has three daughters, one a senior at Bethlehem High School, another at the middle school, and a daughter who attended Hamagrael years ago when Bierman first lived in Delmar.

"This is a great school district with an awful lot to offer," said Bierman, who said she sees the role of a board member as an intermediary between the district and the people.

"I understand the board's role is to set policy and not micromanage but to work with the superintendent setting policy and guidelines," Bierman said.

Bierman lives in Delmar and is owner of Ladd Data Designs. She also works in the office of alumni relations for the College of Saint Rose.

Stever, a resident of Slingerlands, is a special education teacher for Questar III Boces. She and her husband have three children all within the Bethlehem school district.

"I know people in the community are really upset about taxes and the tax base," said Stever, who said the district needs to explore new revenues. "I hate to see programs and services cut."

Stever said she considers herself to be a good listener and believes full-day kindergarten will be another issue the district faces in the next year.

Allendorph, who lives in Delmar, is also seeking her first term on the board. She has two children enrolled in the district middle school, and, like Bowman and Bierman, also served on the citizens budget committee. Allendorph works for Prevent Child Abuse of New York and has served in various capacities as a volunteer for Bethlehem schools. She is the current treasurer of the middle school PTA.

"I am open to listen to all community issues and would like to see the community feel that they can have an open dialogue with the school board," Allendorph said.

Bethlehem residents will go to the polls May 15 to vote for the candidates of their choice and the $77.2 million district budget that calls for a 3.98 percent tax increase. The League of Women Voters will be holding a debate inviting all four candidates for the Bethlehem school board on Monday, May 7, at 7:30 p.m. at the Bethlehem Middle School.

IN BRIEF

Community Hospice offers grief support groups for children

The Wave Riders program of The Community Hospice of Albany County helps children "ride the waves of grief" in a caring environment, Tuesdays at 6 p.m. through May 22.

The program of peer support groups, for children in kindergarten through eighth grade, will take place at the hospice office at 445 New Karner Road, Albany.

In these group experiences, children develop skills to help them cope with the losses they may encounter throughout their lives and build self esteem.

"It is important that children be able to recognize their normal feelings of sadness and grief, and have the opportunity to express them in a safe and comfortable setting. When they share with other grieving children, they feel less isolated," said Candice Van Roey, director of the program.

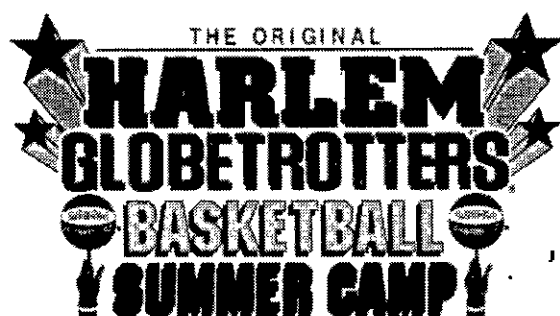

For information, call 724-0200.

Host families needed for exchange students

Host families are needed for American Field Service (AFS) foreign exchange students who will be coming to the Capital District for the 2007-2008 school year.

Local AFS volunteers provide family orientation and student support, as well as social and educational events for students, host families and host siblings.

MAKING SENSE OF INVESTING

Business in the Spotlight

Forget your troubles, come on, get happy

Have you ever felt as if you've hit a brick wall? Ever feel that no matter what you are doing you simply can not make any headway? Perhaps the glass ceiling that they speak of in the business world is dropping down on you, keeping you from being able to break through it. Often, it is symptomatic of something else ... something more serious or just a case of misdirected angst.

We all get anxious as the days of gray cold winter linger. The longer the cold and snow hang around the deeper the funk. Get one day that hints of a summer yet to be lived and spirits perk up, people smile and attitudes in general tend to move in a positive direction.

As managers, the negative and the positive trickle down the business ladder. One of the hardest things we must learn to do, at whatever level on the business food chain we happen to be at any given moment, is to leave your home life at home.

Had a fight with the significant other before leaving the house? Kids get a late start and not have their homework finished and you only found out about at 7 a.m. before the bus came down the street? Or perhaps the dog decided not to wait for you to get moving this morning and moved himself on the brand new carpet. Whatever the issues, and we all have them, they need to stay tucked neatly in the car in the parking lot.

When you arrive at your workplace, put a smile on your face and try a cheery "good morning" and if nothing else, be thankful for the next eight or so hours you don't have to deal with the spouse, kids or pets. There's plenty of time to get all worked up on the drive, ride or walk home.

Who knows, by the time you start that trek homeward, the morning's anxieties might not appear so horrible. The office brick wall may become a bit more flexible and that glass ceiling might just begin to show signs of cracking.

One of the truly nice things about where we work in Delmar, is the ability to go for a walk to the Four Corners and clear our heads. I feel, as people greet us, merchants chat with us and friends and acquaintances honk their horns and wave as they drive by, that in many ways this could be Mayberry ... or perhaps the Cleavers or Dr. Stone live just around the corner.

I often times feel a tinge of jealousy when I see people who live close enough to ride their bikes to and from work. They get the wind in her hair, the sunshine on their shoulders and for a few moments, they're free from the stresses left behind in the office and the ones yet arrive at home. It must be an exhilarating feeling of freedom and maybe, just maybe for a few minutes, of the lost innocence of youth.

Shooting affects Virginia Tech students from the area

UAlbany holds vigil for slain students

irwinr@spotlightnews.com

On the morning of Monday, April 16, 23-year-old Seung-Hui Cho walked into Norris Hall on the Virginia Tech campus and began firing. By the time he turned the gun on himself, 32 students and faculty were dead, and dozens more were injured.

His actions resulted in the deadliest shooting rampage in U.S. history.

The next day, more than 600 miles away, hundreds of college students and staff gathered around the small fountain on the University at Albany campus in a show of support for the Virginia Tech community and to pay their respects to the fallen students and professors.

In a somber tone, University Provost Susan Herbst mourned the victims of the tragedy.

"They had their whole lives in front of them, and they're gone in just a moment," said Herbst.

Rachel Warm, a senior at the University at Albany, said she learned of the shooting after she returned home from work.

"I wondered specifically what kind of student would do such a thing," said Warm. "It was shocking."

In the media, Seung-Hui has been painted as a loner and social misfit.

Warm said she sees how large universities' social circles could create a feeling of isolation for some individuals.

"It's easy for someone not to fit in," said Warm.

Sophomore Charles Laduc said the blame belongs to a society that "glorifies violence."

"I wasn't too surprised," said Laduc. "It can happen anywhere."

"Anywhere" was the place where some local students found themselves on April 16.

"I've been taking each day as it comes," said 2004 Guilderland grad, Heather Leeper, now a junior at Virginia Tech. "It's hard to think it could have been anyone, including yourself. These people were killed so brutally. It's not fair."

Leeper said she missed her 8 a.m. class on Monday morning, held in the building next to Norris Hall. She said details were sketchy at the time, but she was soon aware that there was a shooter on campus.

"I watched the TV just as everyone else trying to find out the details," said Leeper. "When I discovered that the shootings occurred in Norris and that there were seven or eight, then 21, then 32 people killed and even more wounded, I panicked."

Leeper said students have been looking to one another for support.

"Everyone is dealing with it differently. Some students are going on campus to write messages and leave flowers for the victims and just let any emotions they have out, while others are leaving town to get away from the reality of it all and grieve with their families and loved ones," said Leeper. "Those who are lucky enough to have not been connected to any of the individuals are the greatest support we have."

Though she didn't know any of the victims, or the shooter, personally, Leeper said she was connected in one way or another to some of the students who were killed, mainly through her dance group, the Dance Company of Virginia Tech.

Reema Samaha, 18, was a member of a fellow dance group on campus, and Leeper had watched Samaha's group, the Contemporary Dance Ensemble, perform the Saturday before the shooting. Caitlin Hammaren, 19, was a sorority sister to Leeper's "little sister" in the Dance Company, and Maxine Turner, 22, went to high school with four girls in dance group. Ryan Clark, 22, was the resident adviser of one of the group's girls and good friend of another.

"It's hard to see that my closest friends, Dance Company, were hit so hard with this tragedy," said Leeper.

Bethlehem High School graduate, Alex Kopp, a 20-year-old junior at Virginia Tech, said he spent his Monday morning and afternoon indoors at his off-campus townhouse. He spoke with friends and family, and watched the news.

"People were just thinking, 'God, I hope I don't know anyone that's involved,'" said Kopp. When he heard about the death of Ryan Clark, a friend of a friend's, he was in disbelief.

Still, Kopp said he was better off than many others.

"I've got some friends that really knew people well," said Kopp.

One of his friend's roommates was shot three times, but is home and recovering well, said Kopp.

Despite his mother's plea, Kopp did not come home and said there were reminders of the tragedy everywhere around campus last week, in memorials and signs, and maybe most visibly, in the media swarm that descended upon the community.

Leeper said that the media in Blacksburg has been compassionate, though she said she's not pleased with the decision to air the tapes that Seung-Hui sent to a television station.

"No one here in Blacksburg wanted to see that tape, even the pictures. I look at the picture where he points the gun to the camera and my heart sinks," said Leeper. "This is exactly what he wants us to see, he wanted us to see what he did to those people, and what the last image these students and faculty saw. It breaks my heart just thinking about it."

Kopp kept his response to the videos of Seung-Hui more succinct.

"He looked crazy," Kopp said.

Students here and in Blacksburg have voiced opinions about the initial response, or lack thereof, by Virginia Tech administration. Some media reports have insinuated that if Virginia Tech had responded differently, lives could have been saved.

Others said blaming the school was unproductive.

"It's tragic," said Kirsten Lauber, a University at Albany sociology grad student, who added, "It's an inevitable reality in our society. I think pointing fingers at Virginia Tech security is kind of lazy."

Laduc said that some people may just be searching for someone or something to blame, other than the actions of a disturbed, 23-year-old English major.

"It doesn't matter how great security is. It's going to happen," he said.

Leeper echoed the sentiments of the Albany students.

"I do feel as if the administration waited too long, but nothing they were going to do was going to stop this guy," said Leeper. "In no way is the Virginia Tech administration responsible for the loss of 32 lives."

Kopp disagreed, though he admits he's in the minority.

"Most of the students really support President Steeger and the Virginia Tech police," said Kopp, pointing to Virginia Tech's proud history and its alumni and students' unflinching loyalty to their alma mater.

"It's not just knowing what the right thing to do is, it's knowing what the wrong thing to do is," said Kopp. "To me, they really screwed up."

University at Albany Student Association President Nick Chiuchiolo called the actions of Seung-hui "senseless" and a reminder that the university community needs to be diligent to prevent a similar tragedy from happening closer to home.

Herbst and Chiuchiolo called on the help of students to report suspicious activity and to reach out to friends and family in tough times. With the combined cooperation of students, staff and a "vigilant" police force, Herbst said the University at Albany campus can remain a safe place to live and learn.

IN BRIEF

Five Rivers to offer landscaping program

The state Department of Environmental Conservation's Five Rivers Environmental Education Center will give an indoor and outdoor program on landscaping for wildlife on Saturday, May 5, at 2 p.m.

Center naturalists will offer suggestions on how to improve wildlife habitat in your backyard. Plants that provide food and shelter to wildlife such as hummingbirds, butterflies and song birds will be discussed.

Participants will visit Five Rivers' butterfly and hummingbird garden, as well as the water garden, for a close-up look at some simple backyard habitat improvement projects.

This program at the center, 56 Game Farm Road, Delmar, is free. Participants should dress for the weather. For information, call Five Rivers Center at 475-0291.

Nature center offers spring bird walk

The public is invited to a bird walk Saturday, May 5, at 9 a.m. at the Department of Environmental Conservation's Five Rivers Environmental Education Center, 56 Game Farm Road, Delmar.

Center naturalists will lead a field study of common migratory birds that may be seen at Five Rivers Center in early spring. Generally regarded as the height of migration, May is the best time to watch for the return of warblers. Participants will use their listening skills to try to identify birds by their calls.

This program is free. Bring binoculars and a bird identification book, if you have them. Some equipment is available for loan from the center. For more information, call Five Rivers Center at 475-0291.

Historical society to focus on granges

The Clarksville Historical Society will host a program called "Grange: Change the Face of America" by Stephen C. Coye on Wednesday, May 2 at 7 p.m.

Stephen Coye is the state grange historian. He is also an active member of the Ravena Grange in Coeymans Hollow. He will talk about the history of the grange as well as the Clarksville Grange, which was organized in 1893. The event is free at the Clarksville Community Church, Delaware Turnpike Route 443 in Clarksville. Refreshments will also be served.

Piano recital to aid Habitat for Humanity

A piano recital on Sunday, April 29, will benefit the Capital District Habitat for Humanity. Pianist William Jones will perform at 2 p.m. in Slingerlands at the Academy of the Holy Names Arts Center Recital Hall, 1073 New Scotland Road, Albany. For information, call 439-1766. Tickets are $10 for adults, $5 for students.

Friendship singers to perform concert

The Friendship Singers will celebrate their 25th anniversary at this year's spring concert, to be held Saturday, May 19, at 7:30 p.m., at the Delmar Reformed Church, 386 Delaware Ave., Delmar. The event is free and open to the public. A special program is planned to mark the 25 years of singing and dancing to area audiences.

The concert this year is a benefit for Monday Music for Schools, a school program organized by the Albany Symphony Orchestra, which funds repeat performances of Sunday Symphonies for elementary school children, including many inner city schools. Collection boxes will be available in the fellowship hall for people who wish to contribute.

Marie Liiddle is the director of the Friendship Singers, Muriel Welch is choreographer, and Linda Drew is accompanist. The 20 women in the performing group will also show special appreciation this year to their drummer, Bill Reusswig.

Stephanie Bollom and Pat Dolder are the only original members still in the Friendship Singers which began as a mothers group at the First United Methodist Church of Slingerlands. The group also now includes Kitty Murphy, Iva Zornow, Betty Thacher, Joan Graber, Janice Manning, Gail Pearsall, Linda Farrell, Suzanne Mason, Ann Treadway, Eleanor Haverly, Dodie Seagle, Mary Ellen White, Wilma DeLucco, Linda Hohn and Pam Bolton-Englehardt.

County executive, comptroller disagree on appointment

County nursing home problems need more attention, Conners says

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parker@spotlightnews.com

Just throwing another administrator into the Albany County Nursing Home isn't going to fix its problems, Albany County Comptroller Michael Conners is warning county legislators.

County Executive Michael Breslin, Delmar has selected Gene R. Larrabee, 59, currently the administrator of Tandem Health Care in West Palm Beach, Fla., to go before the county Legislature for appointment to fill the position.

That appointment will also have to clear the Legislature's social services committee.

Conners and Breslin have repeatedly been at odds over the management of the Albany County Nursing Home. Conners addressed a letter to legislators citing Larrabee's track record as a reason to lengthen the national search for a new administrator.

According to Conners' office, the facility that Larrabee runs is on a watch list compiled by the state of Florida. It also appears on a watch list assembled by memberofthefamily.net, a Web-based watchdog of adult long-term care facilities.

Although the facility hasn't been cited for conditions as serious as the two deaths in Albany that led to more than $75,000 in federal fines last year, the county nursing home has become a facility of "last resort" for many in the community, Conners wrote in the letter.

That reputation needs to be dealt with, he said. Hiring an administrator from another home with deficiencies on record is not going to do it.

"My concern is on two levels. We did the original audit (of the home) that brought out problems and the last two appointments have been disastrous," Conners said.

The audit was done approximately six years ago, he said. In that time two administrators have come and gone, leaving in their wake a string of questionable practices.

State closes Ann Lee nursing home

By ROB IRWIN
irwinr@spotlightnews.com

As part of the plan to comply with recommendations made by the state's Berger Commission on Health Care, Albany County Executive Michael Breslin announced the plan to close the state-run Ann Lee nursing-home facility.

Residents of the Ann Lee Home will be transferred to the Albany County Nursing Home beginning in late May.

"We have developed a plan to relocate residents from the Ann Lee Home to the county nursing home with the least disruption possible," said Breslin. "The transfer will be implemented in a manner that carefully considers the medical and nursing care, psychosocial and physical needs of each resident."

County spokeswoman Kerri Battle said the transition would take place over the next 14 months, with approximately 10 individuals transferred a month. Residents will be able to choose their rooms and attempts will be made to keep roommates together, said Battle, "to make it as seamless as possible."

Admissions at Ann Lee have been permanently frozen, and a temporary ban on admissions has been enacted at the other home until the transition is complete. Simultaneously occurring during the transition will be the construction of a new unified county nursing home facility.

The Berger Commission's report, which was adopted as law in January, called for the downsizing of at least 345 beds at the two facilities and the construction of the new facility. It cited the facilities' ages, unsuitability to sustain modern nursing care and low occupancy rates as reasons for the merger and new building.

"A new facility with a regionally appropriate bed count will improve quality of care and the financial standing of both the newly merged facility and the county, which will no longer have to subsidize two inefficient facilities," read the report.

The state Department of Health requires the merger and downsizing to be complete by June of 2008.

Commissioner Richard F. Daines approved the plan on Tuesday, April 19.

"I congratulate Albany County on taking this first major step to restructure long-term care services," said Daines. "When the plan is fully implemented, Albany County will have a much better nursing home facility as well as new community-based services to help people stay in their homes as long as possible."

"The leadership of the facility is it's biggest problem. Responsibility starts at the top. We need and deserve the best possible leadership we can get," he said.

That's exactly what and who Larrabee is, said Kerri Battle, spokeswoman for the county executive.

The search for a new administrator started in the last week of November, said Battle. From across the country six candidates were handpicked for face-to-face interviews among a slate of 12 potential candidates, she said.

Larrabee's track record was the best to go on. His work as a facility director has taken him throughout the country, serving at facilities in six states. And he has a record of turning troubled facilities around, she said. He wrote a 600-page manual for long-term care professionals on how to do it.

"We are in a state of transition in long-term care services. The county executive has discussed his interests in increasing community based services at the same time balancing the services with a new state of the art nursing facility," said Battle.

Conners, who was not part of the selection process, is using the nursing home once again for political grandstanding, she said.

Larrabee is being brought in as the county looks to close the Anne Lee Home, the second county run facility, and move more than 130 residents there into Albany County Nursing Home. The merger is expected to be completed by the summer of 2008. All the while the search for a new facility to replace Albany County with a state of the art 150-bed facility will go forward.

A HOME THAT WILL FLOOR BUYERS

It pays to update worn floors in the house that you are about to sell. By some estimates, refurbished flooring increases a home's value by 5% - 11%. In some cases, it may be best to just replace worn carpeting with new, updated neutral pile. However, where applicable, hardwood floors, ceramic tile and other natural stones add solidity and richness to a home. If you already have hardwood floors, consider having them refinished. If your kitchen still sports old linoleum, at least consider replacement with the most updated vinyl. These days however, buyers are especially impressed by hardwood, marble, granite and other natural stones in foyers, kitchens and baths.

Remember, I can help you prepare your home for sale and give you advice on the flooring that will maximize the price of your home. When it comes to listings, I use my knowledge of area trends and my 16 years of experience so that you can receive full market value for your property.

Library suggests thanking veterans

Memorial Day is a day of remembrance of those who have died in our nation's service. This year, let's make it more than a parade. Let's make it a living thank you to veterans at the Albany VA Medical Center who are in need of many things that you can give them.

You can donate everything from toothbrushes to shower shoes (flip-flops) to crossword puzzles to playing cards to personal items. Collection baskets have been set up at VPL for the donations, which will be delivered to the hospital on May 31. Check our flyer or our Web site (www.voorheesvillelibrary.org) for a complete list of suggestions.

The big read

Throughout the month of May, libraries, museums, schools and the state Writers Institute will offer more than 80 programs for all ages focused on the novel "Their Eyes Were Watching God" and its author Zora Neale Hurston, one of the pre-eminent writers of the Harlem Renaissance. VPL will be hosting one of these events on Wednesday, May 16, at 7 p.m.

To call Hurston's book an "African American feminist classic" is a rather dull way to introduce a vibrant novel. The beauty of Hurston's prose, her remarkable gift for comedy, the visceral terror of the book's climax, all transcend any label that critics have tried to put on this remarkable work.

The novel narrates Janie Crawford's ripening from a voiceless teenage girl into a woman with her finger on the trigger of her own destiny. The Big Read in Albany and Rensselaer Counties is cosponsored by the New York State Writers Institute and the Upper Hudson Library System.

Riverway Storytelling

You can listen to our favorite stories with renowned national and international performers at our library on Thursday, April 26, at 7 p.m. This special evening is part of the fifth annual Riverway Storytelling Festival and is free of charge, thanks to the Friends of the Voorheesville Library. You must pick up a free ticket at the library to reserve a place.

Fourth Annual Book Discussion Gala

What have you read this year that has inspired, amazed, moved or excited you? You are invited to share your favorite reads with book discussion members at our Fourth Annual Book Discussion Gala on Wednesday, May 2, at 7 p.m. Come prepared with a booktalk or simply to listen. Sign up and get a handout on how to prepare a booktalk.

Teen book discussion

Teens are invited to meet on May 10 to discuss "The Other Side of Truth" by Beverley Naidoo. Sign up necessary.

Riverway finale is storytelling at its best

We're delighted to host the finale of the fifth annual Riverway Storytelling Festival. This family event features six talented people who breathe life into words.

The storytelling "concert" caps a week-long celebration of the art of tale-spinning hosted by several venues in Albany and Rensselaer counties.

Meet the performers

• Len Cabral is the great-grandson of a Cape Verdean whaler. His ancestry informs his exuberant retelling of Cape Verdean, African and Caribbean folktales.

• Queen Nur, aka Karen Nur El-Amin, specializes in the West African story tradition. Her tales draw on mythology, African culture, folklore, and African-American history.

• Antonio Rocha is a native of Brazil. He performs his unique solo shows of stories and mime from Singapore to the Yukon.

• Barry Marshall and Jeri Burns have worked together as The Storycrafters since 1991. They have performed at storytelling and folk festivals around the world.

• Fran Yardley has told Adirondack stories, folktales, original stories and wisdom tales for more than 25 years. She is a board member of the Healing Story Alliance.

Seating is limited, so find your place early! This free program is made possible by a generous donation from Friends of Bethlehem Public Library. The Riverway Storytelling Festival is a project of the Upper Hudson Library System, a consortium of 29 libraries in Albany and Rensselaer counties.

Big Read events begin

The film "Their Eyes Were Watching God," based on the novel by Zora Neale Hurston, kicks off our region's Big Read celebration on Friday, May 4, at 7 p.m. The film will be screened at Page Hall on UAlbany's downtown campus. Halle Berry stars in this adaptation by Pulitzer-winning Suzan-Lori Parks. Commentary by the author's niece, Lucy Anne Hurston, follows the film, which is presented by the New York State Writers Institute. Ms. Hurston is a literature scholar in her own right, and author of "Speak So You Can Speak Again: The life of Zora Neale Hurston."

Written during the Harlem Renaissance, "Their Eyes Were Watching God" tells of Janie Crawford, granddaughter of a slave, who is sheltered, uneducated, and married off early. She comes to full and strong womanhood by novel's end. Set in the deep south of the early 20th century, Hurston's lyrical blend of history, folklore and magic-realism is a window on a unique time and place.

"Their Eyes Were Watching God" is the subject of our two adult book discussions in May: DayBooks on Monday, May 7, at 1:30 p.m. and AfterDinner Books on Wednesday, May 9 at 7 p.m. New members are always welcome in both groups. If you can't make it to the library, you can participate in the discussion online at www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org.

The Big Read is an initiative of the National Foundation for the Arts in partnership with the Institute of Museum and Library Services and Arts Midwest. It is designed to promote shared literary reading among residents, community groups and civic organizations. Our region's Big Read is cosponsored by the New York State Writers Institute and the Upper Hudson Library System.

More Big Read events are listed in the May/June issue of footnotes, the library newsletter, and on our

the position of supervisor to become deputy commissioner with the state Department of Motor Vehicles.

"When Egan dropped out, my phone started ringing with people saying, 'You would be an excellent supervisor,'" Grady said.

"The town is at a crossroads right now. This is not a small town anymore and you need a businessman at the helm."

Jim Grady

Grady now joins Cunningham and Victor Rodriguez as candidates for the $99,000-a-year position. Grady said he will be running on the Independence line. Cunningham is the Democratic candidate, and Rodriguez is running as a member of the Voters Rights Party.

Grady said he is currently a self-employed hedge fund manager who formerly owned Grady's Trees in Glenmont. He said he believes the biggest issue facing residents is rebalancing the town tax base.

"We have had lots of residential growth that added to the diversity of the town," said Grady. "Now we need planned, intelligent, controlled commercial growth."

Grady said he believes all upstate residents are feeling the weight of heavy taxes, and he believes he has a vision for the town.

"The town is at a crossroads right now," said Grady. "This is not a small town anymore and you need a businessman at the helm."

Grady calls himself an advocate of open space issues and said he sees the Slingerlands Bypass project as a good one for the town.

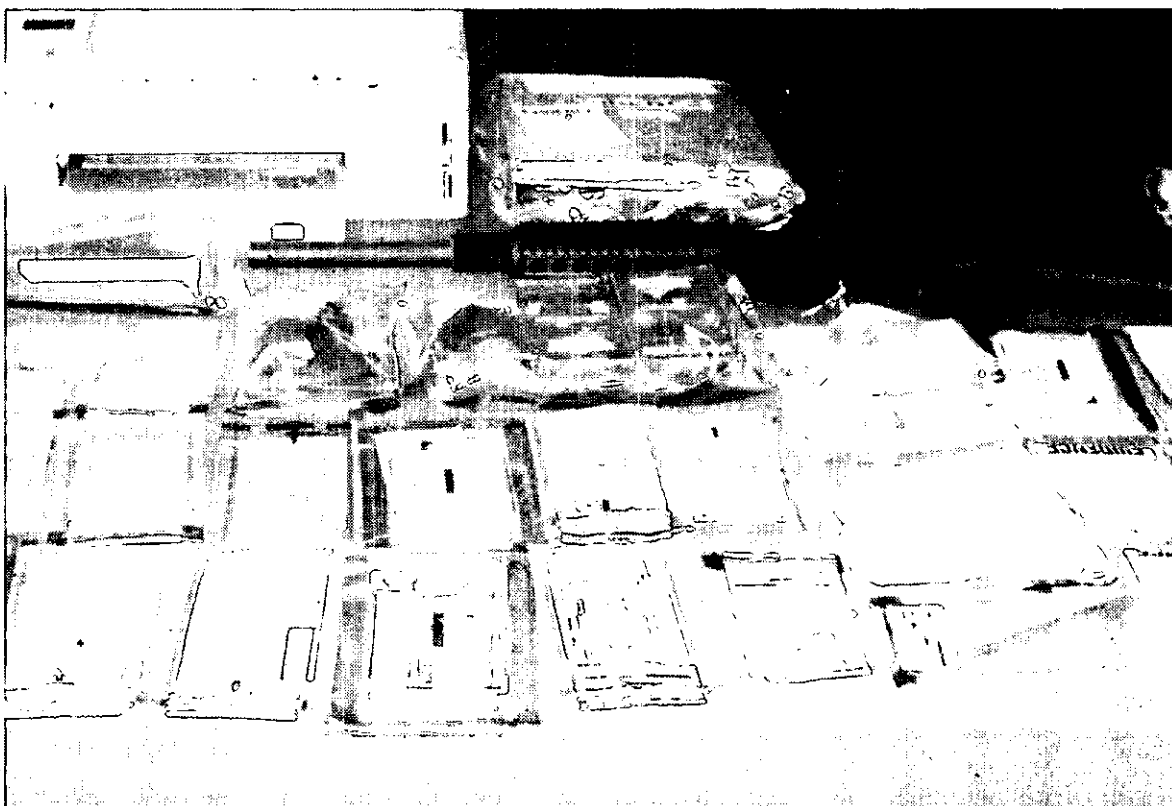

"It's nice to see the state spending some money in Bethlehem," Grady said.

Grady said he will be seeking his own petitions this summer to get on the ballot and will spend his own money to gain the nod.

"I plan on campaigning full-time now through November and will keep my campaign as independent as possible," Grady said.

Grady added that he thinks Egan served the town well as supervisor. "She has really done a great job," said Grady.

The town Republican party is expected to announce its candidate for supervisor in the next few weeks.

Several thousands of dollars of counterfeit $100 bills along with a Panther AR-15 semi-automatic assault rifle and several stun guns seized from three Albany men who were distributing fake money throughout Bethlehem. The U.S. Secret Service along with Bethlehem police arrested the trio on a variety of charges including forgery and grand larceny. Sentencing will be held in July.

cret Service.

According to the investigation, Aggemang, Evans and Hawkins allegedly went from store to store in Glenmont with counterfeit $100 bills, making change through small purchases and pocketing the legitimate currency, usually amounting to

More than 195 counterfeit $100 bills were recovered in Bethlehem alone. Phony money was passed to at least 13 Bethlehem businesses, including the Glenmont Wal-Mart, Five Guys Burgers and Fries and other shops, including several stores in the various Glenmont shopping plazas. Lt. Thomas Heffernan said an employee at Five Guys called the police department on Tuesday, April 17 after one of the three individuals tried to pass a phony $100 bill after a small purchase.

"The transaction raised the employee's suspicion and he contacted our department, who then immediately contacted the Secret Service," said Heffernan.

The source of the counterfeit money is out of state and still at large, according to police.

"We cannot disclose the source of these bills," Leegi said. "The puzzle is here in New York."

The three Albany arrests were made one week after the arrest of two men in Kingston who were caught passing counterfeit $100 bills. The Albany arrests were made following a tip of a counterfeit $100 bill being passed in Glenmont.

The counterfeit money passed was considered top quality.

"The quality of the note is relative to the person looking at them," Leegi said.

"The printing on the note is not the same quality you would get from a genuine bill."

Leegi said the act of counterfeiting has changed over the past decade, and more people are using computers to process fake bills.

"With modern technology, it is not that difficult to throw a bill on a colored copier and make similar facsimiles to a note we have out there," said Leegi.

When a business takes in a counterfeit bill and does not know it is fake, they are out that amount of money.

New Bethlehem Supervisor Jack Cunningham, once a bank teller, also said the phony money passed in his town was of high quality.

"I am impressed with the police force that they were able to close it down," said Cunningham.

Leegi said these arrests bring to an end the primary source of the counterfeit operation in the Capital District.

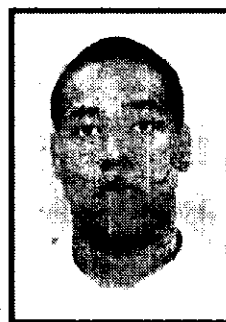

Albany County assistant District Attorney David Rossi said his office is working with the U.S. Attorney's office in this ongoing investigation.

State Archives host contest for students

To encourage students to use historical records, the state Archives, a program of the state Department of Education, is sponsoring the 17th annual Student Research Awards. The 2007 contest is open to all New York students in grades 4-12 who use historical records in their research projects.

The awards are presented each year to grades 4-5, grades 6-8, and grades 9-12. The awards consist of a framed certificate; a check for $100 from an endowment established by Regent Emerita Laura Chodos and her husband Robert Chodos; an invitation to have lunch with the Regents in Albany; and a behind-the-scenes tour of the State Archives.

Eligible projects are computer-based entries, such as websites or PowerPoint presentations; exhibits; documentaries; performances; research for a historical marker, property or district; and traditional research papers.

Julie Daniels, coordinator of the awards program, explained that in order for an entry to be competitive, a substantial portion of the research should be based on historical records from archives, museums, historical societies, libraries, local governments, or other organizations. She offered some examples of historical records: original letters, diaries, and photographs; meeting minutes; police and court records; ledgers, census records; and wills.

Although the deadline for entry is June 1, Daniels explained that the most successful projects usually take months to develop. For information about this year's program, click on Education at www.archives.nysed.gov/aindex.shtml, call 474-6926 or e-mail archedu@mail.nysed.gov.

State museum hosts weekly music jams

Every Thursday from noon to 2 p.m., the state museum has a music jam in the 4th Floor Terrace Gallery.

Everyone is welcome to play or to listen to live acoustic music. Much of what is played is inspired by the Celtic tradition of jigs, reels, waltzes, hornpipes, and marches, but occasionally tossed into the mix are folk or popular songs, jazz standards, early music, and anything else participating musicians choose.

It is organized in a "round robin" style, where each person playing music, and sometimes the audience, takes a turn selecting tunes and setting the pace.

All levels of skill on any acoustic instruments are welcome. Some people read the music while others play by ear. It is courteous to bring several copies of the sheet music for those who do not play by ear or for the tunes that are not commonly known.

A second music jam is called "Songs from the Piano Bench" and occurs on the last Wednesday of each month from noon to 2 p.m. on the 4th Floor Terrace Gallery of the state museum.

This is primarily for singers, although instrumentalists are also welcome, and it is loosely based on the 35,000-plus pieces of sheet music in the state Library Collection. Music and words are provided. It also is organized in a "round robin" style.

Contact information for "Songs from the Piano Bench": 474-2274, kstorms@mail.nysed.gov.

Acting troupe to put on annual festival

Woman tries to make sure soldiers aren't forgotten

Officials gather to commemorate Yellow Ribbon Day

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parker@spotlightnews.com

Tuesday, April 9, marked the fourth anniversary of U.S.-led forces toppling Saddam Hussein's regime in Iraq.

It also marked the day a fuel convoy traveling west of Baghdad was attacked by insurgents. Among the dead and missing was Army Reserve Staff Sgt. Keith "Matt" Maupin, who remains the only missing soldier of the five-year war in Iraq.

Local activists, military and veterans vowed to not let Maupin be forgotten in a ceremony Tuesday marking the date as Yellow Ribbon Day in New York.

"I feel everyone is important, and I feel one soldier missing is as important as 300 or 3,000 missing," said Carol Hotaling, of Ballston Spa. Most people know her as the "Yellow Ribbon Lady."

"I've been dedicated to Matt," she said. "I'm on the phone every day, and I don't go anywhere without giving Matt's photo out."

Hotaling joined Army reservists, town of Colonie Supervisor Mary Brizzell and members of the Joseph E.

Carol Hotaling of Ballston Spa holds the photo of Army Reserve Staff Sgt. Keith "Matt" Maupin, the only missing soldier of the five-year war in Iraq. Local activists, military and veterans vowed to not let Maupin be forgotten in a ceremony Tuesday marking the date as Yellow Ribbon Day in New York.

Graham S. Parker/Spotlight

Zaloga American Legion Post 1520 to commemorate the day.

Her yellow ribbon campaign is about remembering serving soldiers and remaining committed to their safe return until they come home, said Hotaling.

She and Maupin's family in Batavia, Ohio, will keep Matt in mind and yellow ribbons on their cars, trees and lapels until he returns.

Soldiers and their families need to remember, said Hotaling, especially as talks continue of pulling troops out.

Hotaling has continuously called for a greater community outpouring of troop support in the form of simple thanks, sending items overseas or displaying the yellow ribbon.

"As a soldier, we are always ready; we never ask why. We ask when, where and what do we need to bring," said Capt. Ellis Cropper, who received the call the morning of the celebration asking if he would attend.

Cropper is an Army Reservist with the 413 Combat Sustainment Support Battalion out of Schenectady. He spent 11 months in Iraq in 2004.

"It's a great feeling to know you are not forgotten. It's good to know if you are departed from your unit you are not forgotten," he said.

War is tough on soldiers and parents, he said. Parents don't know when their children are coming home and soldiers don't know whether they are coming home, he said.

Yellow Ribbon Day is a special day to remember the men and women who fight to keep America free, said Brizzell. Her comments touched upon how hard it must be for Maupin's family to not know whether their son is alive or dead.

"To not know where your son or daughter is, has got to be worse than going through hell," Brizzell said.

Yellow Ribbon Day is about keeping memories alive. Someday Matt will return home, she said.

Maupin was 20 years old when insurgents captured him. Days after his capture, footage was released by his captors showing him alive. The military classified him as a captured soldier. More than two months later insurgents released a second video allegedly showing his execution. The military has not confirmed if the footage is of Maupin. He remains classified as missing in action.

He continues to receive paychecks, said Hotaling. And has been promoted twice since he was declared missing in action, first from private first class to specialist, and then to sergeant.

What's your retirement IQ?

As children, many baby boomers went through a familiar rite of passage – the IQ test their parents forced on them to learn just how intelligent they were.

"Because everyone's situation is unique, getting a good assessment and some immediate recommendations on what to do can be critical in creating financial security for your golden years."

Pam Moret

Today, many of those baby boomers are increasingly concerned about their "retirement IQ," or where they stand on the path to a successful retirement. According to Thrivent Financial for Lutherans research, 71 percent of boomers say the lack of money is the single most important issue preventing them from accomplishing the things they wish to do in retirement.

The struggle they and many others face is getting a clear picture of where they are and what they need to do to reach their retirement dreams.

"People want help seeing the big picture of retirement," says Pam Moret, Thrivent Financial executive vice president of marketing and products. "Because everyone's situation is unique, getting a good assessment and some immediate recommendations on what to do can be critical in creating financial security for your golden years."

So where does one go to get their retirement IQ? ThriveQ (www.ThriveQ.com) is an online tool that gives users a scare-free assessment that ranks each individual on their retirement path without generating a shocking multimillion dollar savings total that leads many people to despair.

"Seventy-one percent of boomers wish they had begun saving for retirement upon landing their first job, and 86 percent advised Generation X to start saving as soon as possible," says Moret of the survey findings. "They know something needs to be done, but they need an easy, non-intimidating way to get into a better position for tomorrow."

ThriveQ is based on seven key principles for retirement. First, have a vision. Focusing on the things that inspire you will keep you motivated to do what's needed to be better prepared for retirement. Second, plan ahead because it's never too late or too early to start preparing for retirement.

Controlling spending, the third principle, is another important step toward retirement success.

"Your values are your best guide to determining your spending," says Moret. "By spending only for those things that are important to you and your family, you can keep debt to a minimum."

Fourth, once you control your spending, it's time to save and invest. Saving too much is always better than saving too little. Simple steps, like incorporating automatic savings programs, can make saving and investing as painless as possible.

In realizing retirement dreams, rethink work. This fifth principle centers on thinking of working past the minimum retirement age, or cycling in and out of work for several years. It may be the opportunity to follow your passion, a way to stay connected or a chance to be your own boss. Sixth, protect your future through insurance and other means to ensure you can withstand any financial surprises. Finally, think about giving back and making a positive impact on others in retirement. By seeking activities that enrich your life and the lives of others — via helping others through gifts of time, talents and treasures — you actually are preparing yourself for a happier retirement.

Created by Thrivent Financial in cooperation with author and gerontologist Ken Dychtwald, Ph.D., a world leader on the effects of an aging population on the marketplace and retirement, ThriveQ helps individuals find their unique retirement vision and measures progress toward that vision, while encouraging actions that will help them achieve their goals. The questionnaire takes about 10 minutes to complete, with each user receiving their ThriveQ — a score ranging from 1 to 1,000. Based on their score, participants will also be assigned to one of five groups according to their retirement readiness: Survivor, Provider, Striver, Thriver and Thrive +.

After a user receives a ThriveQ score, they also see their score as compared to other ThriveQ users and are given three customized recommended actions based on their answers. Participants can also save their score and track their progress as they accomplish the recommended actions, thus improving their score over time. The site also offers real-life examples of people taking steps to achieve their definition of retirement success.

Seniors surf, too

At age 59, Dell Housewright is the future of online social networking.

Social networking — connecting with people and forming communities using Web sites and online tools — used to be only for the young who meet new friends at sites like MySpace and Facebook. But the massive adoption of the Internet by baby boomers is changing this scene. Today, a number of social networking sites targeted toward this more mature crowd are cropping up, including Gather, which fosters thoughtful conversations and debate, and sites like 55-Alive and Eons, both of which were created specifically for 50-plus social networking. These sites are arming their users with traditional social networking tools such as profiles, which let users express their personal interests and connect with others of like minds; blogs, where “conversations” happen through posting comments and photos; and groups, which bring just a few, or thousands of people, together around a passion or interest.

“Eons is a supporting place where people can come together,” says Housewright, an author and seminar consultant who created his own blog and joined several groups at eons.com. “If you find you like the people in a group, you stay and you talk. If you don’t find a group that’s talking about what you want to talk about, you start your own group.”

More than 300,000 boomers are participating in nearly 2,000 discussion communities hosted at Eons. Topics range from “50+ Singles,” — one of the most popular on the site and one where Housewright regularly converses with friends — to the playful and irreverent “Hippies for Life,” which is dedicated to “music, friends and peace,” according to its organizers. New groups are being created by users each day.

Eons’ popularity reflects how boomers’ quest to continue exploring life and making new connections that enrich their life is fueling the social networking world. With more than 44 million Americans age 50 to 64 online, social networking among this group is poised for growth.

The lines separating the real and virtual worlds are rapidly blurring.

Housewright is an example of those who are transforming social networking from a strictly online conversation to relationships that extend into the real world — even romance for some single boomers.

After a casual suggestion in a discussion group with some of his online friends that the group should try to set up a meeting, Housewright and others began to exchange ideas. Travel was an interest they shared, so the concept took shape of organizing a singles cruise where some of them could get to know each other better.

“I thought that if we had five or six people who wanted to go, that would be good,” says Housewright, whose book, “A Boomer’s Tour of the Dating World,” will be published later this year. “As it turned out, dozens of people from all over the country signed up.” And the number will most likely grow by the time the ship pushes off from its Florida port for a

Ten tips for loved ones and caregivers

There are more 22 million households in the U.S. where people are caring for someone older than 50. This can be a real challenge and doesn’t always come with a “How-to” guide.

Yet, the majority of long-term care tends to be provided informally and privately. People simply don’t know where to turn for advice or help, compounding the difficulty of the situation. Doctor Marion (aka Doctor Marion Somers, Ph. D.), author and expert in elder care topics, trends and solutions, has partnered with BoomerTowne.com, an informational Web site for baby boomers. As a member of the BoomerTowne.com Council, Doctor Marion has provided 10 simple steps to make caring for an aging loved one more enriching and less stressful for everyone involved.

“It is important for everyone to understand that they are not alone and that many people are dealing with similar situations,” says Doctor Marion. “There are simple steps that you can take to make the care-giving experience a pleasant and manageable journey.”

Here are some tips:

1. Communicate openly. It is difficult to care for someone if you don’t know his or her needs. Discuss his or her thoughts and talk about special memories and values.

2. Put safety first. Similar to baby-proofing a house, certain things can be done to make a home safer for elderly people who may not be as capable as they once were. Stick non-slip strips on the bathtub floor and remove throw rugs to prevent falls.

3. Improve the lifestyle.

While elderly people may experience changes in their lives, they still need to have one. Help keep your loved ones active to improve their happiness. Encourage them to participate in creative outlets they enjoy, such as woodworking or knitting.

4. Make life easier with adapted equipment. Add amplifiers to phones and doorbells to help those with hearing problems. Replace hard-to-fasten zippers or shoestrings with Velcro to aid people who have trouble with detailed hand movements.

5. Manage financial issues. One of the more challenging aspects of caring for loved ones is taking over their financial matters. At times, it’s best to hire a skilled professional, especially if you are uncomfortable with numbers.

6. Take care of legal issues. This important aspect is often left until the last minute. To make things easier, be sure loved ones have a will with a clearly stated beneficiary of their estate. If this is not finished, the estate will be left to the state causing legal difficulties for surviving family members.

7. Find mobility in disability. Travel may be difficult for the elderly, but it’s not impossible. Check ahead to determine if destinations are handicap-accessible to make moving around easier.

8. Find the right housing option. Moving can be a big transition, but many people aren’t capable of caring for loved ones in their own homes. Research different facilities to find the right fit for a loved one. Assisted living can be a nice middle step from independent living to a nursing home.

9. Hire help when needed. Asking for help is nothing to be ashamed about. Be sure to check references and outline a contract that specifically details what will be required of each party.

10. Learn to let go. Losing a loved one is a part of life. Preparing yourself and your loved one is the easiest way to deal with this situation. Plan for the future together and discuss what loved ones want at their funerals and what they would like in their obituaries.

Prepare properly for adventure travel

According to the Travel Industry Association, 98 million people have taken an adventure trip in the past five years. Whether it's to escape the daily grind, catch up with an old friend, connect with family, or challenge one's body physically, adventure travel can be a fit for every type of person.

In fact, according to adventure travel expert and author Ward Luthi, adventure travel can mean different things to different people. Luthi is the founder and president of Walking the World, an outdoor adventure program that encourages people 50-plus to travel to new places.

"Age doesn't have to limit your activity level. There are simple proactive measures adults can take to prepare their bodies for an adventure, and there is an adventure for every type of personality and interest."

Ward Luthi

"There are destinations and activities for every age and lifestyle ranging from light to heavy intensity," Luthi said. "It can be walking through the Costa Rican rainforests, hiking local trails in your own area or even taking a short day-trip to somewhere you haven't been before."

A recent Nature Made Wellness Advisor survey found that 30 percent of respondents reported feeling like they were adventurers, but only when they were younger.

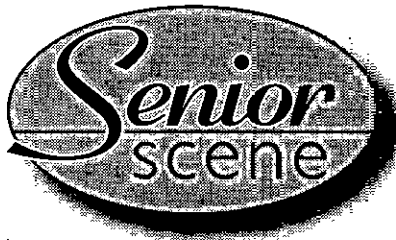

"Age doesn't have to limit your activity level," Luthi states. "There are simple proactive measures adults can take to prepare their bodies for an adventure, and there is an adventure for every type of personality and interest."

ture, and there is an adventure for every type of personality and interest."

Luthi's top five tips include:

- Do some homework. Gather any maps you may need. Check the weather forecast so you know what climate to expect. And, always make sure that someone knows where you are going and how they can contact you if needed.

- Take care of your body.

A balanced, nutrient-rich diet provides active adults with the energy and strength they need to set out on any adventure. This includes drinking lots of water and avoiding fried or fatty foods, which can lead to fatigue.

"When you are on the trail, a healthy snack I call 'GORP' (good 'ol raisins and peanuts) helps maintain travelers' blood-sugar levels and energy. Along with plenty of water, keep a small bag in your backpack for an energizing snack every hour," says Luthi.

- Jump-start your joint health.

Adventure can take a toll on the body, especially joints. Many need extra support while on a trip.

"A way to support joints naturally can be through a glucosamine-product, such as the new Nature Made TripleFlex Rapid Relief, which includes white willow bark to help relieve joint discomfort in as little as seven days. This is faster than traditional products and can prepare my travelers for an adventure in just a week's time," shares Luthi.

- Dress the part.

"Do not underestimate the power of comfortable shoes and socks," Luthi stresses. When you properly prepare your feet for the impact of uncertain and sometimes rough terrain you, your entire body will reap the benefits with fewer aches and pains. "Also, always carry a baseball or wide-brim hat to shield the sun from eyes and skin."

- Bring backup.

Protective gear can help make the most of an unanticipated situation. No matter what the weather or location, always wear and bring extra sunscreen. On larger adventures bring extra snacks, rain gear, small first aid kit, small butane lighter, compass and emergency signal to make yourself prepared in case of extreme weather, an injury or if you find yourself off-trail.

"I've found that adventure travel offers us some of the best opportunities to live life fully, to explore other lands, to experience new cultures, to make new friends and learn more about ourselves," says Luthi. "It stretches us physically, mentally and emotionally. Once many start, they never turn back."

Eons CEO Jeff Taylor, the Internet maverick who founded career site Monster.com in the mid-1990s, says he founded his new company last year with the goal of creating a social networking site that is the center of gravity for everything 50-plus.

"Boomers want in," Taylor says. "They're ready to play, and they want to be with like-minded people where they can bring all their life experiences and knowledge to bear. Eons is squarely in the middle of that conversation, creating tools that make connecting with new friends easier. When we see Dell and his group taking that leap from the online world into reality, it helps assure us that we are providing a fertile ground for those loving life on the flipside of 50."

Do's and don'ts for online socializing

- Be a self-starter.

Do be yourself. If you are passionate about a certain topic, start your own group or blog and invite your friends and online connections to join the conversation. If you build it, they will come.

Don't get discouraged if you can't immediately find a group discussion or blog that you like or are interested in, the Web changes by the moment!

- Make a love connection.

Do consider the Web a good resource for dating and meeting new people. Try visiting groups gathered around topics that you find interesting. Take time to read other people's profiles to learn their personality and find where you might click.

Don't solely rely on online dating sites and singles groups to meet people.

- Share as much as you can.

Do post a full roster of the things you like the most; your most passionate hobbies and interests. If you're an expert on a topic, make that part of your profile. Sharing more of your life will lead to greater ways you can connect with people who share your interests.

Don't post information you don't want public, like phone numbers, addresses, even your employer. It could possibly provide group members with more information than you might like. Privacy comes first.

- Put a face with a name.

Do post a picture of yourself. Find one that goes beyond appearances and really says something about your personality.

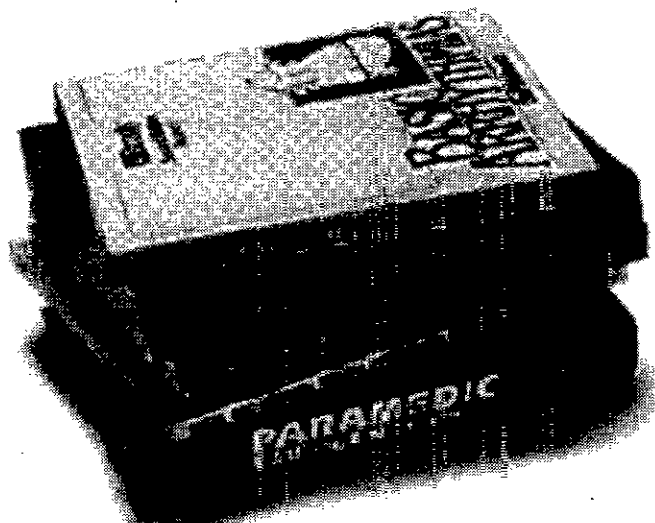

Don't post any photographs you don't want the world to see.

- Watch, listen, learn: Then speak up!

Do join online groups that interest you, and whose tone and pace you appreciate. To determine if a group is right for you, read prior posts and become familiar with the level of discussion. As you begin to feel comfortable, voice your thoughts.

Don't be overly critical of posts made by other members. Online social networking groups should be a place to voice opinions openly and frankly. If you disagree with a post made by another member, don't forget what your mom always said: "If you don't have something nice to say, don't say anything at all."

Thousands of hours of intense medical training accompany every paramedic that we entrust with your care.

A minor sacrifice for your peace of mind.

Beating the stress of incontinence

By NICK MONTALTO, M.D.

Urinary incontinence is the involuntary or unintentional loss of urine.

It is one of the most under treated problems facing an estimated 10 million women in America. Most women do not seek treatment and will modify their daily activity to avoid situations in which incontinence can be a problem. They will stop exercising, stay closer to home and avoid social situations in which they can't quickly find a bathroom. Often, it affects sexual activity and can lower self esteem. Most important, it is not a normal part of aging.

Many factors predispose women to urinary incontinence.

Among these are older age, childbirth, diabetes, asthma and other lung problems, neurologic disorders, gynecologic surgery, obesity and smoking. It can be worsened by certain medications, alcohol and caffeine. It is often a significant problem for younger women who find it difficult to be active without losing urine.

The two most common types of incontinence are overactive bladder or urge incontinence and stress incontinence. Overactive bladder results from involuntary contractions of a specific part of the bladder causing urine loss. Stress incontinence results in leakage of urine when a woman coughs, laughs, sneezes, exercises or performs any other activity that increases abdominal pressure. Sometimes a woman may suffer from a combination of both types called mixed incontinence.

Diagnosis relies on a good history and physical examination by your health care provider. Urine or voiding diaries give great insight into the type of incontinence a woman suffers from. Laboratory tests may be useful to rule out urinary tract infections and kidney disease. Sometimes evaluation of the bladder's ability to fill and store urine is helpful. This is called urodynamics and can be done simply in the office.

Treatment of urinary incontinence depends on the type of dysfunction that is diagnosed. Management options can be behavioral, medical and surgical. Lifestyle modification such as weight loss, smoking cessation, fluid management and caffeine reduction can help dramatically. Other modifications include scheduled emptying of the bladder, bladder "retraining," and pelvic muscle rehabilitation.

Medication is often prescribed to treat overactive bladder, which can decrease involuntary bladder contractions. Sometimes, side effects such as dry mouth and constipation limit the use of these drugs. The approach to stress incontinence is usually surgical if conservative treatment, such as pelvic muscle exercise, has failed. These minimally invasive procedures, performed by gynecologists and urologists, have evolved dramatically over recent years. This outpatient surgery essentially involves supporting the urethra with a sling or hammock.

Seeking care for urinary incontinence is a woman's first step toward taking back control of her active lifestyle. No woman should ever settle for losing urine as an inevitable part of aging or wearing pads to compensate. If your practitioner does not ask about incontinence then be sure to bring the subject up yourself. Don't be left on the sidelines while an active lifestyle passes you by.

Step into spring with a positive attitude

If it's spring, you're probably cleaning. Sixty-five percent of Americans routinely engage in spring cleaning, according to a survey by the Soap and Detergent Association. Take it a step further this spring by reorganizing your life to start down a path of meaning and fulfillment in all areas of your life.

"I am convinced that anyone, and I mean anyone, can become what they are absolutely determined to be and live a meaningful life," said Jim Stowers, billionaire, philanthropist and author of "The Best is Yet to Be," his autobiography. "Nothing can stop you from achieving your personal and professional goals," Stowers says.

Stowers offers the following tips to help men and women discover the power of a positive attitude and achieve their best in all areas of their lives - from home to career to finances. Armed with these ideas, people can begin taking steps toward fulfillment and positive attitude this spring.

Realize your best times are ahead. If you don't think tomorrow is going to be better than today, why get up? Believe each new day is going to be better and be determined to make it so.

Build a strong team. Surround yourself with the very best people. Everything is possible if you associate with the very best people.

Admit you don't have all the answers. One of the key factors in success is realizing and admitting you don't know everything.

Consider the consequences. In your workplace and at home, carefully consider the consequences of your actions before making a decision. Plan ahead to manage the negative and positive results of your actions.

Be persistent. The most successful people have one major attribute in common. They do not give up. Don't let anything stand in the way of you and your dreams.

Be patient. Consider the life of an acorn. When an acorn is planted and properly cared for, it slowly matures into a beautiful tree, but it takes time. Don't expect all of your dreams to come true overnight. Remember it takes patience and time to build a reputation and a moment of carelessness to lose it.

Stay positive. Achieving your dreams is possible. Don't let circumstances tell you that you can't become what you are determined to be - whether it is financially independent or playing your favorite instrument.

"Now is an excellent time to

"I am convinced that anyone ... can become what they are absolutely determined to be and live a meaningful life."

evaluate your goals and dreams and establish a plan to achieve them," say Stowers. "Instead of letting circumstances get you down, take this opportunity to decide what you want to do to achieve your goals. And then, if you are determined and persistent, nothing is impossible. Remember, the best is yet to be."

Grandma, grandson benefit from medical advancement

Nick Souleotes, 43, and his 92-year-old grandmother, Ruth Franks, were diagnosed with colon cancer on the same day and four days later had their cancer removed through minimally invasive colon surgery. Both are thankful for the minimally invasive treatment option that got them back to their lives quicker than they expected.

Nick and Ruth are two of the nearly 150,000 Americans who develop colon cancer each year. Colon cancer is the second leading cause of cancer deaths in the United States, but it can be prevented through regular screening, and if detected early, it also is one of the most treatable and beatable cancers.

Medical advancements have made minimally invasive surgery a treatment option for colon cancer patients offering less pain and a quicker return to normal activities than conventional surgery.

Nick and Ruth's Story

Nick and Ruth were both experiencing blood in their stool and abdominal pain, so they went to their individual physicians who each recommended they see a gastroenterologist and receive a colonoscopy. Neither had received a colonoscopy before nor did they anticipate what was about to happen next.

They were both diagnosed with colon cancer and were referred to the same colorectal surgeon, Dr. Mark Parker.

Dr. Parker recommended that they both have their colon cancers removed as soon as possible using minimally invasive surgery. They were diagnosed on a Monday and were scheduled for surgery the following Thursday. Nick and Ruth had approximately 14 inches each of their colons removed through three dime sized incisions.

"The procedure was nothing like I expected - it was a whole lot better," Nick said. "I was in the hospital for four days and even at 92 years old, grandma was only in the hospital for five days. I was cutting grass the day after I got home from the hospital and experienced no pain."

"Patients need to be educated so they can work with their doctor to choose the best treatment options for them," Dr. Parker said. "Minimally invasive surgery has been clinically proven to be just as effective as conventional surgery for the treatment of colon cancer when performed by an experienced surgeon."

Talk to your doctor and visit www.colonsurgeryinfo.com for more information on colon cancer and your treatment options. As with any surgical procedure, surgery for colon cancer may present risks. Individual patient results may vary and are not indicative of all outcomes. Patients should consult their physician to determine whether a minimally invasive procedure is right for them.

Eat well, stay young

Baby boomers seem willing to try anything to slow the physical aspects of growing older. A new survey reports that 25 percent of boomers would even put off retirement five years if it meant they'd never have wrinkles. The survey, conducted by the Florida Department of Citrus, sheds light on Americans' top aging concerns.

According to Cheryl Forberg, an expert on anti-aging nutrition and consulting dietitian to NBC's "The Biggest Loser" fitness reality show, the secret to prolonged youth is as close as the kitchen.

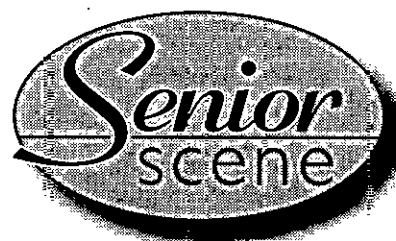

"Baby boomers can beautify themselves inside and out by selecting foods rich in nutrients," says Forberg, who also authored "Stop the Clock! Cooking." "Envision the grocery store as a virtual medicine cabinet of vitamins and minerals. Have fun mixing and matching favorite items to create a tasty, versatile menu that provides benefits for the body inside and out."

Forberg recommends the following nutrients for common aging concerns:

- Get glowing skin. Keeping skin radiant is top of mind for baby boomers. Collagen breakdown in the skin may contribute to the formation of wrinkles. Vitamin C is an essential nutrient for the production of collagen. One serving of 100 percent grapefruit juice contains 72 milligrams of vitamin C, more than a full day's supply. For the 30 percent of baby boomers concerned about weight gain, this juice is fat free with less than 100 calories in each eight-ounce serving.

- Boost your energy. More than 40 percent of Americans find having less energy to be the most unpleasant aspect of aging. To stay energized, avoid processed foods and sugary soft drinks. Add foods rich in iron such as lentils, lean red meats in moderate amounts, and spinach. This mineral delivers energy to every cell in the body. Drink plenty of water and limit alcohol intake to one drink for women and two drinks for men.

- Strengthen your disease defenses. According to the survey, 54 percent of American adults are most worried about increased risk for diseases as they grow older. Look for foods rich in lycopene, vitamin C and potassium. Studies suggest lycopene may help in the fight against certain cancers and heart disease. Vitamin C neutralizes free radicals to help fight cell and tissue damage that could lead to diseases.

Potassium plays an important role in cardiovascular health, and a higher potassium intake has been associated with lower blood pressure and reduced risk of stroke. Load the grocery cart with foods like bell peppers, tomatoes, fresh grapefruit and kale.

- Sharpen your mental pencil. Baby boomers commonly experience fading memory or slight changes in motor coordination skills. Spinach, onions and broccoli contain quercetin, a flavonoid found to promote brain function and prevent risk for stroke. Fresh Omega-3 rich fish, such as salmon and tuna, also contribute to improved blood flow in the brain.

- Don't forget bone health. Women are especially susceptible to postural changes or are at increased risk for osteoporosis after 40. To maintain bone strength, add calcium-rich foods and beverages to the grocery cart. In addition to milk, there are a variety of foods that contain calcium, including sesame seeds, leafy green vegetables and tofu. Dried plums and peanut butter contain boron, a mineral that strengthens bones to prevent osteoporosis through enhanced calcium absorption qualities.

CSSC treasures volunteer contributions

Your money and your life: Heart Health Linked to Financial Health

On Monday, April 30, Colonie Senior Service Centers (CSSC) will honor nearly 200 volunteers at its 14th annual volunteer recognition dinner. CSSC is extremely proud to recognize these volunteers for their unselfish caring, their untiring enthusiasm, and their indomitable spirit. Their energy and vitality is the heart and soul of Colonie Senior Service Centers. Throughout the year these volunteers give their time and talent to help seniors stay healthy, active and independent through the programs and services offered by CSSC. Because volunteers provide more than 12,000 hours each year, CSSC is able to deliver more services to more seniors, year after year.

At this year's event, CSSC will also recognize the contributions of two exceptional volunteers, Theresa Bennett, with the Mildred Best Willey Volunteer of the Year Award and Donald Miller with the Rookie Volunteer of the Year.

Diminutive, always cheerful, Bennett still has a slight Brooklyn accent. Since moving into the Beltrone Living Center almost six years ago, Theresa Bennett has become a welcome fixture at Colonie Senior Service Centers. Her list of volunteer activities is lengthy. She helps get the newsletter out, helps at the reception Desk

(her business skills honed at several law firms in New York City come in handy there), she's active on several fundraising committees, and volunteers at all the special luncheons and dinners. She is also first vice president for the Beltrone Residents Association, a member of both the Colonie Senior Citizens Club and Hart Social Center, and is a participant in the Osteoporosis Exercise and Wellness Program.

Theresa worked as a secretary at several New York City law firms, including Rogers & Wells. Her boss, William Rogers, became secretary of state for President Richard M. Nixon. After her husband, John, passed away, Theresa moved into The Beltrone Living Center to be near John Jr. and his wife, Deborah, and their beautiful daughters, Jennifer and Carolyn. Theresa is very proud of son John Jr., a cardiologist. Attracted by all the activities and benefits that are available to seniors at the Beltrone, she says she made the right decision, "because I have so many friends and keep very busy volunteering."

When Aimee Richardson, building director for Sheehy Manor where Donald Miller lives, posted a flier looking for volunteers, he said he'd like to help. And CSSC is glad he did.

"Don is a great help in Bright Horizons at Carondelet," says Erin Szesnat, site director at Carondelet.

He volunteers a few hours, two days a week. From the time he steps in the door he jumps in by asking what he can do first to help out. He enjoys working with the members, whether it's one-on-one, or in a group setting. Most importantly, though, Miller has made a great effort to really get to know the members and their needs. He is comfortable asking questions to learn more about dementia and Alzheimer's, always learning new ways to be an asset to the group.

A Korean War veteran, Miller worked in the accounting department of the D & H Railroad, and retired after 35 years. He was also a volunteer fireman in Slingerlands for 30 years. Miller and his wife, Joan, have lived in the Capital District since 1953, raising six children and now have six grandchildren.

Retirement planning requires a healthy amount of discipline and focus. You want to make sure you have enough money saved to maintain your lifestyle, but the truth is there's more to successful retirement than an oversized IRA. Your health is perhaps the most significant component in your retirement equation, since it directly impacts your ability to enjoy the fruits of your labor. Now is an excellent time to focus on making lifestyle changes - you might even be surprised to learn that in some cases, a healthier you can lead to an even healthier bank account!

McFarland, vice president, Individual Life Insurance Underwriting at Prudential. "But in response to medical advances, some insurance carriers are using new underwriting guidelines that make life insurance more readily available for some individuals who have been treated for coronary artery disease, and offer them the opportunity to qualify for significantly lower premiums." Of course, rates would vary based on each situation and the applicant's complete medical history. Speak with a qualified insurance representative to learn how these new guidelines might benefit you.

When it comes to setting important goals, whether it's saving for retirement or lowering your cholesterol, what you do today can have significant ramifications for the future. There's never been a better time to take control of your future, and make the positive changes necessary to ensure your golden years are filled with health, wealth and happiness.

The Heart of the Matter

According to figures published by WebMD in 2006, coronary artery disease (CAD) affects nearly 13 million Americans and is the leading cause of death of both men and women in the United States. Some of the risk factors for heart disease are within your control, such as quitting smoking, reducing your cholesterol and maintaining a healthy weight. Obviously, these lifestyle changes increase the likelihood of living a long healthy life in retirement. But did you know these same lifestyle changes can lower the premiums you may pay for life insurance, allowing you to keep more of your hard-earned money?

Protect your heart, increase your savings

"In the past, people being treated for coronary artery disease might assume they were automatically excluded from the valuable protection of life insurance," says Mike

Seek the right kind of relief for heartburn

If you believed the television ads, there are as many treatments out there as there are cases of heartburn - more than 60 million sufferers each month. Finding an over-the-counter (OTC) treatment option that is right for them can be a challenge, though.

"The key is to understand what type of heartburn you have, and choose a medication accordingly," says Philip Miner, MD, director of the Oklahoma Foundation for Digestive Research.

Episodic, a common type that occurs infrequently and is often predictable and manageable in the short-term.

Frequent heartburn (FHB) occurs two or more days a week. People with FHB might also find themselves using multiple OTC medications more than two days a week to get relief.

Persistent heartburn doesn't respond to OTC treatment and keeps recurring. It could be an early warning sign of gastroesophageal reflux disease, or GERD, and should be evaluated by a doctor.

If you're always tired, it could be your thyroid

Vivian Wall was tired all the time and couldn't lose weight, no matter what diet she tried. Catherine Mckinnon couldn't relax and her heart raced constantly. Both women (whose names have been changed to protect their privacy) ascribed their symptoms to the stresses of or constantly stressed, you may be tempted to overlook your own fatigue or anxiety," says Dr. Steven Petak, FACE, President of the American Association of Clinical Endocrinologists. "In today's hectic world, it's easy to convince yourself that these problems are really just signs of the times."

It's estimated that more than half the 27 million Americans who have thyroid disease remain undiagnosed.

"The disorder can be difficult to diagnose because its most common symptoms are also indicative of a host of other problems," says Dr. Petak. "Doctors may focus on one or more of these isolated symptoms without looking at the total picture that adds up to thyroid disease."

"For years, I complained to my doctors that I was tired – really fatigued – all the time," says Wall. "They all told me it was because I was overweight and that if I dropped some pounds I'd have more energy."

modern and often unhealthy lifestyles. Actually, both were experiencing the opposite spectrums of a very common problem, thyroid disease.

"If it seems like everyone you know is tired all the time,

"The disorder can be difficult to diagnose because its most common symptoms are also indicative of a host of other problems."

Steven Petak

Finally, at a walk-in clinic where she'd gone for treatment of a common cold, a doctor asked Wall if she'd ever had her thyroid checked.

"My results came back at the very edge of the normal range," she says. "And while my hormone levels were in the normal range, it turns out the level wasn't 'normal' for me and needed to be adjusted with medication."

Wall was diagnosed with hypothyroidism.

A few years ago, the American Association of Clinical Endocrinologists proposed a narrower normal TSH (thyroid stimulating hormone) range than the one used by most labs.

"Since many physicians may not be aware of this, it could lead to a patient being told their results were 'normal,' when in fact they fall outside the newly proposed range," Petak said.

"I'd had my thyroid tested in the past and was told everything was normal," says Mckinnon. "I didn't know that you can develop thyroid disease at any time. A few years ago, I noticed that I felt hyper and stressed all the time. My heart raced constantly and I always felt hot, even in a room others said was cold."

Mckinnon's doctors finally did a TSH test and diagnosed her with hyperthyroidism.

The good news is, thyroid disease is one of the easiest maladies to detect and treat, experts say.

Here are the 10 most important things to know about thyroid disease, according to the AACE:

1. Up to 27 million Americans may be affected by thyroid disorders, although more than half remain undiagnosed.
2. Thyroid disorders are more common among women.
3. Thyroid disorders tend to run in the family.
4. Fatigue is a common complaint for under- and over-active thyroid conditions.
5. TSH testing is the most useful test for thyroid screening.
6. Regular check-ups are the key to successfully managing a malfunctioning thyroid gland.
7. Changing brands and dosage that affect thyroid hormone levels should be followed by retesting.
8. Do not change your dose of thyroid medication without guidance from your physician.
9. Thyroid conditions in pregnancy warrant close attention.
10. Thyroid cancer is one of the fastest growing cancers in America – and one of the most curable.

RELIEF from page S7

"The good news is that once you know what type of heartburn you have, then you can pick the type of treatment that is most appropriate for you," says Miner. "Heartburn medications are all effective, but knowing the differences between them can increase the chances of keeping heartburn in check."

Different medications

make a difference

The stomach is lined with millions of acid-producing pumps which rely on three chemical signals that tell them to produce stomach acid. The key point of difference between the categories of over-the-counter heartburn medications happens at a cellular level in the stomach:

H2RAs (histamine-2 receptor antagonist) block one of the signals, thereby reducing the amount of acid produced. One dose works relatively quickly and can generally last from 8-12 hours.

PPIs (proton pump inhibitor) shut down the active pumps themselves. When used as directed, one daily dose can suppress acid for a full 24 hours.

Antacids don't affect acid production itself; they work to neutralize existing stomach acid. While they work the fastest of all treatments, their effects usually last only about two hours.

Small signs of spring: container gardening

The ground is thawing, tulips are poking up, birds are chirping: all signals to the container gardener that it's time to pull out the pots, planters and window boxes to get ready for spring planting. Container gardens are perfect for small yards, balconies and wherever you want to add color and interest. For first-timers or veterans, here are some tips for getting the best-looking, lushest flower pots in the neighborhood:

- Color scheme planning
Begin by thinking about color schemes you'd like to enhance your patio or deck. How will the flowers on your deck accent your kitchen's decor? Think about what you planted last year, what worked and what didn't and what exciting new varieties are available. Start looking at books and magazines for ideas and how you'd like your own containers to look.

Consider light conditions and which plants work well together. Shade foliage won't grow well in conditions appropriate for, say, a geranium. Toy with interesting textures and leaf colors in addition to bloom colors. A variety of foliage adds unique depth to your garden. Herbs and vegetables are becoming a popular trend. A corn plant, for instance, by itself as the main focal point is rather stunning. Snow peas growing up a post create curiosity. Purple basil, arugula, oregano and nasturtium are lovely flowering edible plants.

- A healthy foundation
First, remember that trying to grow anything in containers with dirt from outside is a recipe for disaster. For proper planting, use fresh, sterile potting soil that has the appropriate balance of ingredients for good nutrient absorption and water management.

The types of annuals you plant also dictate what mix you use and whether you add more or less soil conditioner. If you decide to make your own potting mix, depending on what you're planting, possible mix components include compost, sphagnum peat moss, loam, sand, vermiculite, perlite, osmocote and soil moist.

Whether you have a favorite soil brand or you make your own, any seasoned container gardener knows that replacing soil for all your outdoor pots requires large quantities. Large pots can

Every pot needs a drain hole and some type of material in the bottom so the soil doesn't run out the bottom of the pot and so drainage holes don't clog.

Some materials used to assist drainage are rocks, broken terra cotta pieces and packing peanuts. Many times these don't work, for in as little as three weeks, soil runs down into the crevices and blocks the drainage you so diligently tried to create. Also, once the pots are filled with rocks, soil, plants and water, they can get very heavy and hard to move.

There is an alternative to rocks; a non-woven, 100 percent recycled and reusable plastic mesh. This is a new planter drainage material that is placed in the bottom of containers. The precut squares can be used in either square or round containers. For a round plant container, fold the corners up or down and alternate each layer. The take up to four bags of potting mix each. Depending on how many containers you will plant, consider having a half yard of potting soil delivered.

- Soil Drainage

No matter what you plant, if planters become too waterlogged, you won't get hearty blooms and the roots will die.

Managing money on Medicare Part D

The more you know about prescription coverage, the more money you can save. Pharmacist Dr. Timothy Covington, an expert on Medicare Part D, answers your common Medicare questions below.

I just turned 65 and became eligible for Medicare. What is the Part D plan that I've been reading about?

The Medicare Part D program is a voluntary benefit that makes prescription medication coverage available to Medicare members. The program has helped millions of seniors gain affordable access to prescriptions.

I've heard about a phase in Medicare Part D called the coverage gap, but I'm confused by it.

You are not alone. Many members are confused and surprised to learn that Medicare Part D works in three phases. In Phase 1, each member typically pays a deductible and, once that is met, pays an average co-pay of 25 percent for prescriptions. The plan pays the remaining balance. But, if expenses reach an initial coverage limit before the end of the year, you arrive at Phase 2, also called the coverage gap. In the coverage gap, Medicare Part D stops paying for any portion of your prescription medications. During this phase, you have to pay 100 percent of your medication costs

An adventure of a lifetime

There are more than 70 million grandparents in the United States and many of them have a passion for travel, providing an incredible opportunity to share this love with the grandchildren. Traveling with grandkids offers a unique bonding activity that can't be experienced during a family get-together or a short visit.

Travel and lifestyle expert Nan Zimmerman has partnered with BoomerTowne.com, an informational Web site for baby boomers. As a member of the BoomerTowne Council, Zimmerman has advice for any adult traveling with younger children, including grandparents who might not do it frequently.

Test the waters

While hitting the road with the grandchildren might seem like fun, younger children might not be ready to travel without a parent. Test out the waters first by visiting a nearby museum or zoo together. This can help determine whether a grandparent can handle a situation without Mom or Dad around.

Or, consider traveling with only one grandchild at a time, which allows for one-on-one bonding and saves grandparents from being sibling referees.

Planning the trip

One of the first obstacles

when traveling with a grandchild is picking a location. The destination should be kid-friendly but also provide entertainment for the grandparents. All-inclusive resorts are great, as they provide activities to do together, as well as some entertaining kid-only activities.

Planning the trip can be a lot of fun, so make sure to involve the grandchildren. Once a location is selected, share pictures of the destination, brochures and maps with them. Go online to learn more about the trip together.

Getting ready

While grandchildren may have traveled with parents before, be sure to go over rules for the trip before embarking on the journey. Outline the consequences if the children's behavior doesn't measure up to expectations.

If flying, explain airport security so that a grandchild doesn't get scared. It might also be a good idea to go over what it feels like to fly and how people behave on an airplane.

Learn about all medications a grandchild takes, both prescription and over-the-counter, and be sure to take them along. A notarized permission letter signed by parents will authorize a grandparent to have limited power of attorney over a grandchild in case of an emergency. This is especially important when traveling outside the United States.

Traveling to another country

Children of all ages are required to have a passport when traveling outside of the United States. Plan ahead and apply for a passport well in advance, as there is a long processing time. Children under the age of 14 must apply for a passport in person.

Also, be sure to check with the U.S. Embassy of the country you're visiting and make sure you have everything you need to travel with your grandchild. Some countries may require a notarized letter authorizing grandparents to accompany grandchildren in place of a legal guardian.

Arrival

In case of an emergency, such as a lost child, be sure to have a plan in place. Share it with the grandchildren upon arrival. At the hotel, show him or her how to get to the front desk and have it be a meeting place. Tell grandchildren to go to the nearest uniformed employee if they should get lost. Give them a slip of paper with important cell phone numbers, hotel name, location and phone number so authorities can contact the appropriate person as soon as the grandchild is found.

For additional security and peace of mind, if grandchildren are over the age of 12, have them carry a cell phone or walky-talky. This will allow them to contact someone immediately if something is wrong.

out of your own pocket, unless you have a plan that bridges the gap. Once you spend enough to reach a second limit, the catastrophic coverage, or Phase 3, starts. Phase 3 is when Medicare pays nearly all of your prescription costs (95 percent).

This year, many of my friends hit the coverage gap and had to spend thousands of dollars for their prescription medications. How does someone fall into the gap and how can this be avoided?

Falling into the gap is a problem that some 4 million seniors were expected to deal with in 2006. First you have to understand the coverage gap to avoid it. Many seniors do not realize that three things contribute to the total cost of their prescriptions and count toward the gap: their deductible, their co-payments and the Medicare Part D plan contributions. In 2007, when your total Medicare prescription medication costs equal $2,400, you will pay 100 percent of these costs - until you reach the catastrophic coverage phase, usually at $3,850 out-of-pocket, or arrive at the end of the year. Each January, you start a new coverage cycle.

Patients on multiple prescriptions, or as few as 2 to 3 a day, are in danger of quickly falling into the coverage gap. You can delay or avoid the gap by managing your medication spending and making wise choices. One strategy is to substitute over-the-counter (OTC) alternatives for prescription medications when possible.

For example, if you have a condition such as frequent heartburn and regularly use an acid reducer, you can talk with your physician and pharmacist about using an OTC such as Prilosec OTC. This may be a money-saving treatment option. OTCs do not count toward reaching the initial coverage limit; therefore using these medications can help keep costs down.

My pharmacist told me that OTC medications can be as effective as prescription medications. Is this true?

Yes, they can be. In fact, many OTC medications are former prescription medications, some of which have been approved for OTC status at a former prescription strength. That is the case with Prilosec OTC, and that's why it is recommended as an over-the-counter option for frequent heartburn sufferers and is the number one doctor and pharmacist recommended OTC acid reducer.

By purchasing medications in a smart way, you can save Medicare Part D coverage dollars to go toward more expensive prescription medications for which there are no OTC alternatives. Consult your health care professional for more information on Medicare Part D and OTC medications to determine the best strategy for you.

Dr. Timothy Covington is a professor and Director of the Managed Care Institute at the McWorter School of Pharmacy at Samford University.

material is very flexible so there is no need to trim the squares into circles. Called "Better than rocks," it is also available in a large roll of material that you can cut to your desired size to fit planters precisely or accommodate your odd shaped planters.

Your pots will be lighter and you'll use up to one third less soil in each pot.

• The greenery
Once your drainage system is in place, fill the pot with soil so the middle third of the pot is full, leaving four to five inches for plants. Next, take the plant plugs out of the flats and set them in the pot. Start with the taller, wider center plant. Then place the next largest plugs around the perimeter, in balance according to color and size, with the smallest placed last. Rearrange until you are satisfied.

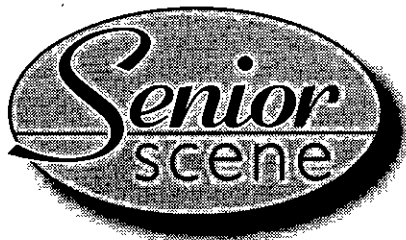

If you are creating matching planters, arrange them similarly before adding soil, in case you want to exchange plants between pots. Once all the plants are placed to your liking, begin filling with soil. Fill the soil in between each plug, ensuring that all holes and spaces are filled. Don't pack the soil and plugs down too hard, as this constricts the roots and inhibits plant growth. Water well, making sure it seeps out the bottom. Watch as holes develop between plugs and fill in with dirt. Water again.

As your containers bloom and grow, give your plants a "haircut." Pluck off dead blossoms and trim leggy growth to keep your containers blooming well into the fall.

• Fall cleanup
When it's time to put everything away for winter, dump your pots out. This soil is ideal to top off your perennials or add to your compost. If you use synthetic materials, you won't have to pick out the rocks or other material from the bottom of the pot. Pull out the plastic layers, cutting off roots that may have grown into it. Roots that have grown into it will dry out over the winter and easily come out the following spring.

• Saving money
Refurbishing container garden supplies every spring gets expensive. Synthetic material breaks down easily and lasts longer.

Healthcare costs: mystery solved

Imagine a world without price tags. You can make a purchase, but you'll have no idea of the charges until the bill comes in the mail.

Until recently, that's the world that the average American lived in when seeking health care. As part of a health care system that shielded insured patients from the actual costs of care, most Americans with health insurance never questioned the care that they received or its cost. Today's consumers, however, are being asked to take on greater financial responsibility for their health care and a more active role in making decisions about the care they receive.

In response, says Charles Cutler, M.D., a national medical director with Aetna, consumers are beginning to question cost and quality, and seek tools and information to help them make informed decisions. The movement toward providing this information to consumers is widely known as health care "transparency."

"The increase in costs has made it very important for consumers to understand what their expenses are going to be and the level of quality they can expect to receive, which helps them determine how to get the most value for their health care dollar," says Cutler.

Research points to this increased interest and involvement, and the need for transparent information on health care costs and quality. A study released in the spring by the Council for Affordable Health Insurance found that 84 percent of Americans agree that health care providers should publish their prices for all goods and services.

The good news for consumers is that both public and private organizations - including the federal government, health insurers, employer coalitions, and state agencies - have begun to respond by offering transparent price and quality information.

The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) helped lead the way this summer when it posted its payment rates for approximately 30 elective inpatient hospital procedures and other common hospital admissions. CMS also provides some quality information on hospitals at its Web site.

Albany's Prescription Drug Program gets medication to those in need
By Meredith Rose Kelly
For City of Albany residents, affordable prescription drugs may be just a phone call away. Albany Mayor Jerry Jennings and Senior Services of Albany have partnered to make prescription drugs more accessible for low income residents of all ages.
Mayor Jennings has praised Senior Services of Albany staff for their oversight of the City of Albany Prescription Relief Program and reminds City residents that this service isn't just for the elderly. "We started this program because we don't want anyone to go without the prescriptions they need."
City of Albany residents who do not have any coverage for prescriptions can call the Prescription Relief Program at 689-5350 to find out if they qualify.

Setting Your Course:
What older adults should know about health care choices
You are invited to attend a free seminar designed to give older adults and their caregivers the information they need to make good health care choices. The program will provide guidelines, pose hypothetical questions, and provide a wealth of information on making the right choices for you or someone you love.
Participants will receive a free copy of a new booklet, Setting Your Course: What Older Adults Should Know About Health Care Choices, and have the opportunity to ask questions.
Seating is limited, so call 465-3325 today to reserve your space for this informative program.

It pays to volunteer
By Melissa Browne
"Volunteers are not paid, but because they are priceless." The source of this quote is unknown, but its truth and poignancy cannot be denied. National Volunteer Week runs from April 23-29, but the contributions and sacrifices of volunteers should be celebrated every day of the year. Volunteers bring something more precious than time, energy, dedication, and enthusiasm. They bring their hearts and souls. They make a difference in the lives of our community, as well as their own. Are you looking to help make the difference? Senior Services of Albany provides several opportunities to do just that.
Volunteers are always welcome to join the Friendly Home Visiting program or become grocery shopping assistants. Becoming involved in these programs often result in meaningful relationships between volunteers and the seniors they aid. Bethany Meade, Volunteer Coordinator of Senior Services of Albany, has seen many volunteer efforts result in life-long friendships.

Assess ways to reach your financial goals

What keeps you awake at night? If you're like most Americans, you've probably found yourself awake in the wee hours of the morning having a little conversation with yourself. On the one hand, you're feeling pretty good about things. But on the other hand — and this is where you're not alone — there are those nagging little questions about finances and concerns about whether you are doing all that's needed to take care of yourself and your family.

Typical "everyday" concerns such as paying bills tend to distract people from thinking about their long-term plans. But working with a financial professional can have a positive impact on people, according to a recent study commissioned by Northwestern Mutual.

"We found that those people who work with a professional demonstrate more knowledge about financial matters than their counterparts who do not," says Janie Schiltz, vice president of Northwestern Mutual. "Moreover, the study reveals that working with a professional can have a positive effect on a person's financial behavior as well."

Making a difference

A good advisor will immediately set out to put your mind at ease when it comes to helping you answer those financial concerns that tend to keep us all awake at night.

"There are a variety of ways to begin this process of working with a professional," Schiltz says. "Some professionals will take a new client through a personal needs analysis — a detailed question-and-answer process that compares a person's current financial approach to their long-term goals regarding retirement, education funding and similar matters. The result of this process is usually a report that provides the client recommendations for accomplishing his or her goals."

In addition to providing a thorough analysis, there are a variety of other ways that working with a financial professional can make a difference.

For example, a professional can show a client how to organize the financial strategy into three buckets: Those matters related to risk and protection, those regarding savings and investing, and those regarding retirement and wealth distribution. A professional can help a client grasp the differences between term and permanent life insurance and that owning the right amount of life insurance is more important than the type of insurance.

On the theoretical side, a financial professional can help make a client smarter by making him or her aware of how "blind spots" — like loss aversion and mental accounting — can affect decisions in real-life financial situations.

"Blind spots are a product of emotion and can handicap even the savviest of clients," Schiltz says. "No one is immune and when people become aware of them they are much better equipped to build a financially secure future for themselves."

When you work with a professional

According to the Northwestern Mutual study, those who work with an advisor tend to have a more aggressive investment mix, better savings habits and more certainty about retirement, Schiltz points out.

For example, according to the study:

- Those with a financial advisor are much less likely to be concerned about the adequacy of their income or savings in retirement, or about the future of Social Security.

- When compared with those who have no advisor, those with one are more likely to have a target retirement age and are more likely to anticipate retiring at 64 or younger.

- Among younger people, those with a financial advisor are more likely to identify clear savings goals for retirement than those with no advisor.

- Those with an advisor make larger annual contributions (approximately twice as much as those with no advisor) toward reaching their financial goals related to retirement, college education, short-term needs and emergencies.

HEALTHCARE

Similarly, insurers are providing new levels of detail about the health care providers that participate in their networks. In most cases, average pricing information is provided — for example, the average cost of an office visit or strep test within a certain Zip code. Quality information is also becoming increasingly available through insurer Web sites.

According to Cutler, Aetna is taking the level of detail one step further. Aetna was the first health plan in the nation to offer its members online access to physician-specific cost and quality information. This means that Aetna members can go online and research the price tag for care from their specific physician, as well as see indicators related to the use of proven preventive interventions, adverse events and hospital readmissions, before their next appointment.

"Our focus is on providing information that is relevant to our members," says Cutler. "While we don't expect anyone to make decisions based on this data alone, we do hope to move the health care marketplace closer to providing the kind of detailed cost and quality information that we all access when making any other major purchase.

"After all," he adds, "there are few purchases in life that are more important than quality health care."

Recently, President George Bush gave a significant boost to the transparency movement with the signing of an executive order. Signed in late August, it directs federal agencies that administer or sponsor federal health insurance programs to increase transparency in pricing and quality, encourage adoption of health information technology standards, and provide options that promote quality and efficiency. The president is also asking state governments, large unions and large employers to commit to these same criteria in purchasing health care for their employees and members.

Aetna's physician-specific price and clinical quality information is available for physicians in all or parts of 11 states and the District of Columbia. Cutler says the company has plans to expand the program further. The information is available to members on the password-protected section of Aetna's Web site (accessible at www.aetna.com).

Interested in doing a little research before your next trip to the doctor or hospital? Cutler suggests logging on to your health plan's Web site to see what resources are provided there. Consumers can also access hospital cost and quality information at www.Medicare.gov. And, once you're at the doctor's office, Cutler encourages consumers to talk to their physicians about both health care quality and costs.

Storytellers tell quite the tale

By JENNIFER FARNSWORTH
news@spotlightnews.com

If you're looking for an old-fashioned form of entertainment, you'll want to pull up a chair and catch some of the Riverway Storytelling Festival. The event is growing in both recognition and popularity. With 29 libraries and 30 storytellers on board, there's bound to be as much talk about the event as there is listening to it.

The fifth-annual storytelling festival concludes this weekend throughout Albany and Rensselaer counties. Twenty-three separate events are planned, including 16 free concerts, workshops for libraries, educational and storytelling experts, students and school performances.

"I am excited about the fifth Riverway Storytelling Festival because of our outstanding tellers. No matter which concert people attend, they will be hearing wonderful stories from our dynamic storytellers," said Kate Dudding, marketing and public relations chairwoman for the festival.

Dudding said new to the festival this year are the state finalists for the National Youth Storytelling showcase who are opening some of the concerts. Storytelling concerts will also be held at four senior residences around the Capital District.

The flagship event at the Bush Memorial Center at Sage College will this year feature both family and adult concerts. Mary Fellows of the Upper Hudson Library System and producer for the Riverway Festival said the Saturday night event was the highlight of last year's festival. The night features one concert for families and a second for mature audiences.

"Last year the giggles of the kids at the early concert were positively infectious, and seeing adults bent over with laughter at the late concert made others laugh all the harder. The laughter is contagious and you be infected at our 'Laughin' Night,'" said Fellows.

Fellow said that storytelling is an endearing art because we live in a highly technological world where she feels technology can both connect and isolate people at the same time. Many of the storytellers involved feel it is important for people to have the experience of connecting with one and other through stories.

"We learn best through hearing someone else's story. We heal our individual hurts by telling our own story," said Fellows.

The storytelling festival has improved in its attendance and grown over the past few years. Fellows said each year the festival attracts more people who enjoy listening to stories and connecting with storytellers.

"Each year we hear from people who discover common ground with children or feel affirmed in their own choices, through stories they hear at Riverway. Those comments confirm what we already know, that stories can change lives," said Fellows.

The concerts throughout the weekend are free due to the support of the festival sponsors.

Locations include Friday at the Guilderland Public Library, Saturday at the Albany County Public Library and Sunday at the Bethlehem Public Library. A storytelling concert for families concludes the festival on Sunday afternoon at the Bethlehem Public Library.

In addition to the libraries making this event possible, the Community Arts Grant, "a program funded through state and local partnership program of the NYS Council on the Arts Center of the Capital Region, has contributed to it.

For information on the local storytellers and event times, visit www.riverwaystorytellingfestival.org.

It's infrequent that the title of a play overtly insults a classic, but "I Hate Hamlet" does exactly that.

The comedy, written by Paul Rudnick, will be presented by Homemade Theater (HMT), a nonprofit theater company in residence at the Spa Little Theater in the Saratoga Spa State Park.

The play zeroes in on the life of Los Angeles soap opera star Andrew Rally, who has arrived in New York City to play the role of a lifetime — Hamlet. Unfortunately he hates the play, but just happens to have rented the apartment of the late, great John Barrymore. The swashbuckler's ghost takes Andrew on as a reluctant protégé and coaches him on Shakespeare, swordplay and romance.

A recent New York Times review called the play "fast, funny ... unapologetically silly ... hilarious ..."

Christine MacLellan, HMT's associate manager, said while the play isn't slapstick comedy, it's certain to bring on chuckles.

"It's not one of those broad, physical, door-slamming farces, but it is a comedy," said MacLellan. "This hot shot television star thinks he knows it all, but then it's a case of the young learning from the more seasoned."

The interaction between young Andrew and the ghost of John Barrymore sets up the dynamics for juxtaposing acting styles that have changed greatly over the years.

"Today people are really method actors, but in the old school things were very over-the-top," said MacLellan. "Everything was on a large scale, but there's something to learn from that."

The ensemble cast of just a six ranges in age from the 30s to the 50s in the production. The show itself is designed for teens and older.

"There is a bit of romantic interaction between Andrew and his girlfriend as they try to figure out their relationship that may be over the heads of younger kids," said MacLellan. Director Stephen Pelletier said he's rarely worked with such a committed cast on any production.

"This is the most professional group I've ever worked with," said Pelletier, a former actor with HMT. "It's been a second job for the cast."

Rehearsals have been ongoing since the end of February auditions. Cast members work four nights a week and on Sunday afternoons.

"Their dedication is endless," said MacLellan. "This is their passion and they want to make it a career. HMT attracts great talent."

MacLellan likened the group to an "extended family," noting many in the cast and crew work on all the productions during a season.

Founded in 1985, HMT is a community theater with a professional edge. The company is a unique blend of the efforts of professional directors, designers, technicians, local actors, and hundreds of volunteers in all areas of production.

HMT stages four productions each season, between October and May. They also offer dinner theater packages with area restaurants for the three main stage productions. Each December, there is a "Theater for Families" production.

HMT also offers acting classes for children, teens, and adults.

HMT was incorporated in 1985, and founded by Jonathan Foster and Susan Miller.

The company has grown from a 55-seat theater at Caffé Lena, in 1985, to its first three-production season in the 496-seat Spa Little Theater in 1986. In its 1990-91 season, the Theater for Families production was added.

"This is as good a production as you'd find in New York City," said Pelletier. "Artists of all kinds flock to Saratoga Springs; it's just a beautiful place to experience the arts."

"I Hate Hamlet" continues its run on Fridays and Saturdays, April 27 and 28, May 4 and 5, at 8:15 p.m. and Sundays, April 29 and May 6 at 2 p.m.

For information or to purchase tickets, call Homemade Theater's box office at 586-4427, or visit www.homemadetheater.org.

LEGAL NOTICE

TOWN OF COLONIE NOTIFICATION NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the resolution published herewith has been adopted for the Town Board of the Town of Colonie, Albany County, on the 15th day of March, 2007. Such resolution was adopted subject to permissive referendum and the period of time has elapsed for the submission and filing of a petition for such referendum without a valid petition having been submitted and filed, and the validity of the obligations authorized by such resolution may be hereafter contested only if: (1) (a) such obligations were authorized for an object or purpose for which the Town of Colonie is not authorized to expend money or (b) if the provisions of law which should have been complied with as of the date of publication of this notice were not substantially complied with and an action, suit or proceeding contesting such validity is commenced within twenty days after the date of publication of this notice; or (2) such obligations were authorized in violation of the provisions of the Constitution of New York.

SUMMARY OF RESOLUTION
The following is a summary of a resolution adopted by the Town Board of the Town of Colonie on March 15, 2007. Said resolution authorizes the issuance and sale of a serial bond or bonds and a bond anticipation note or notes in anticipation of the issuance and sale of said serial bonds, in an amount not to exceed $500,000. The proceeds from the sale of the obligations authorized in said resolution shall be used for the specific purpose of financing the Wade Road Extension located in the Town of Colonie, which shall consist of the construction of a new roadway from NYS Route 7 to Forts Ferry Road intersection, including the installation of a traffic signal system, pavement, adjacent sidewalks, landscaping and necessary site work and the acquisition and installation of equipment, machinery and apparatus for the foregoing purposes. The period of probable usefulness for said purpose is fifteen (15) years. A copy of the resolution summarized herein is available for public inspection during normal business hours at the Office of the Town Clerk, located in the Town Hall, Colonie, New York. 5. To vote on the following proposition:
PROPOSITION #2
RESOLVED, that the Board of Education of the Bethlehem Central School District, is hereby authorized to (1) acquire school vehicles at a cost not to exceed $1,134,423, which is estimated to be the maximum cost thereof, (2) expend such sums for such purpose, (3) levy the tax necessary therefor, to be levied and collected in annual installments in such years and in such amounts as may be determined by the Board of Education, taking into account state aid received, and (4) in anticipation of the collection of such tax, to issue bonds and notes of the District at one time or from time to time in the principal amount not to exceed $1,134,423, or enter into a lease-purchase agreement at a principal amount not to exceed $1,134,423 to acquire such vehicles.
6. To transact such other business as may properly come before the meeting pursuant to the Education Law of the State of New York.
The election and budget vote shall be by voting machine or absentee ballot. The hours during which the polls shall be kept open shall be from 7:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., prevailing time or for as long thereafter as necessary to enable qualified voters who are in the polling place at 9:00 p.m. to cast their ballots.
AND FURTHER NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a copy of the statement of the amount of money which will be required to fund the School District's budget for the 2007-2008 school year, exclusive of public monies, may be obtained by any taxpayer in the District during the fourteen days immediately preceding the Annual Meeting except Saturdays, Sundays or holidays, at the Educational Services center, 90 Adams Place, Delmar, New York, and the offices of each Elementary School, the Middle School, and the High School of the District between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:00 p.m., prevailing time and also at said District Election. AND FURTHER NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT petitions nominating candidates for the office of member of the Board of Education and for the office of Trustee of the Bethlehem Public Library shall be filed with the District Clerk at the District Clerk's office at the Educational Services Center, 90 Adams Place, Delmar, New York, not later than April 16, 2007 at 5:00 p.m. Each petition must be directed to the District Clerk, must be signed by at least One Hundred Eighteen (118) qualified voters of the District and must state the name and residence of the candidate. A copy of such petitions may be obtained at the Office of District Clerk in the Bethlehem Central School District during regular school hours. AND FURTHER NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that applications for absentee ballots will be obtainable between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, except holidays, from the District Clerk.

LEGAL NOTICE

Completed applications for absentee ballots must be received by the District Clerk at least seven (7) days prior to the vote if the ballot is to be mailed to the voter, or the day before the election, if the ballot is to be delivered personally to the voter. Absentee ballots must be received by the District Clerk not later than 5:00 p.m. on May 15, 2007. A list of all persons to whom absentee ballots shall have been issued will be available in the office of the District Clerk from 8:30 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. prevailing time on each of the five days prior to the day of the election, except Saturday, May 12 and Sunday, May 13, 2007, and on the day set for the election. Any qualified voter may challenge the acceptance of the ballot of any person on such list, by making his/her challenge and reasons therefor known to the Inspector of Election before the close of the polls. AND FURTHER NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the qualified voters of the School District shall be entitled to vote in said annual vote and election. A qualified voter is one who is (1) a citizen of the United States of America, (2) eighteen (18) years of age or older, and (3) resident with the School District for a period of thirty (30) days next preceding the annual vote and election. The School District may require all persons offering to vote at the budget vote and election to provide one form of proof of residency pursuant to Education Law section 2018-c. Such form may include a driver's license, a non-driver identification card, a utility bill, or a voter registration card. Upon offer of proof of residency, the School District may also require all persons offering to vote to provide their signature, printed name and address. AND FURTHER NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that pursuant to a policy adopted by the Board of Education in accordance with Sections 2035 and 2008 of the Education law, any referendum or propositions to amend the budget, or otherwise to be submitted for voting at said vote and election, must be filed with the Board of Education at the Bethlehem Central School on or before April 16, 2007 at 5:00 p.m., prevailing time; must be typed or printed in the English language; must be directed to the Clerk of the School District; must be signed by at least Two Hundred Fifteen (215) of the qualified voters of the District; and must state the name and residence of each signer. However, the School Board will not entertain or place before the voters any proposition if its purpose is beyond the power of the voters or is illegal, or any proposition requiring the expenditure of moneys which fails to include specific appropriations for all such expenditures required by the proposition or any proposition which must be included in this notice of the annual meeting and was not received at least 60 days prior to the annual meeting. is rebounding from injury-plagued cross country and indoor track seasons.

Lauren Lochinski-Mills and Kristin Peck contributed third-place performances for Bethlehem. Lochinski-Mills was third in the 100-meter dash finals with a time of 13.20 seconds, while Peck placed third in the invitational 1,000-meter race with a time of 3:04.57.

Sara Turner finished fourth in the high jump by clearing 5 feet, and Colleen Hart took fourth place in the shot put with a throw of 32 feet, 9.25 inches. Melina Vamvas was sixth in the discus with a throw of 90 feet, 5 inches.

Colonie runners won three of the four short-distance races. Najla Singleton-McKinnon finished first in the 200-meter dash with a time of 27 seconds, four-hundredths of a second ahead of Shaker's Diana Hummel. Alicia Williams won the 400-meter race in a time of 59.14 seconds, and Nayamka Roberts-Smith took the 600-meter title in a time of 1:40.85.

Holy Names' Klarissa Ricks prevented a Colonie sweep in the sprints by winning the 100-meter final with a time of 12.81 seconds. Teammate Jordan White took the invitational 1,000-meter race title with a time of 3:02.87 and added a first-place finish in the 300-meter hurdles with a time of 49.53 seconds.

Greenwich's Caitlin Lane won the 1,500-meter race with a time of 4:41.10, and Columbia's Brina Seguire finished first in the 3,000-meter event with a time of 10:22.67. Holy Names' Sara Makowiec won the 100-meter hurdles in a time of 16.55 seconds, and Colonie's Shannon Finnegan claimed the 2,000-meter steeplechase title in a time of 7:34.50.

In field events, Cicero-North Syracuse's Monique Roberts cleared 5 feet, 8 inches to win the high jump, while Niskayuna's Patty Horan won the pole vault by clearing 9 feet. Ricks took first place in the long jump with a leap of 17 feet, 4.5 inches, and Lansingburgh's Erica Farron won the triple jump with a distance of 34 feet, 10 inches.

Berne-Knox-Westerlo's Sarah Hannay finished first in the shot put with a throw of 35 feet, .5 inches, and Ballston Spa's Kaitlyn Staulters won the discus with a throw of 114 feet, 1 inch.

Colonie, Cicero-North Syracuse and Ballston Spa won the three varsity division relays contested at the Bethlehem Invitational.

Colonie's 800-meter relay team of Williams, Singleton-McKinnon, Marisa Poletto and Laura Bolognino won its race with a time of 1:45.82. The Cicero-North Syracuse team of Roberts, Janise Harper, Rachel Bowles and Katie Duerr took the spint medley relay title with a time of 4:22.36, and Ballston Spa's distance medley relay team of Becky Martin, Jennifer Cinella, Erica Brockman and Katie Dickman won its race with a time of 12:59.06.

Thoughts

coach until 2004. Yeah, the Orange knew.

• Going back to Friday's men's lacrosse game between UAlbany and Syracuse, try not to read too much into the Great Danes loss. Syracuse needed that game more than UAlbany did, and the Orange played like it. The Great Danes will still make the NCAA tournament, even in the unlikely event that they lose their remaining regular season games. At 5-6 and with two games left, Syracuse can't afford another loss.

• NHL playoff games go on too long, especially when overtime kicks in. I have no objection to playing full 20-minute overtime periods, but with each successive overtime period, can we have one less player per team on the ice? By the third overtime, most of the players are running on fumes anyway. Give them and the fans a break by allowing only three players and a goaltender on the ice at that point.

• This just in: the NBA playoffs have begun. That means 10 more weeks of basketball on TV, when all we really need is one — the week where the NBA champion is determined. Seriously, does anyone care about the Cleveland-Washington series? No? How about Golden State-Dallas? No one? OK, moving on.

• Professional soccer may be getting more exposure on American television, but it's international soccer that's getting the exposure right now with the UEFA Cup. Maybe MLS will get on the highlight reel when David Beckham starts playing for the Los Angeles Galaxy.

• Speaking of MLS, Guilderland High School graduate Jon Busch is now a goaltender with the Chicago Fire. Just thought I'd share that tidbit of information since I didn't know he was with Chicago until I looked it up on the internet. At least, he's playing for a good team. Columbus is hardly an MLS power at 0-3.

• Finally, it might be time to change NFL Europe's name to the German League of American Football (or GLAF). Five of the six teams are now based in Germany as opposed to a decade ago, when there were teams in other European countries like England and Spain. When 5/6 of your teams are located in one European country, you may as well make the name change.

Admittedly, GLAF does not have the same ring to it as NFL Europe. Then again, NFL Europe doesn't have the same ring to it as MLS, which doesn't have the same ring to it as the NHL, which doesn't have the same ring to it as ... well, you get the idea.

Track team happy to be outside

Mother Nature gives BC Invitational a welcome gift

By ROB JONAS
jonas@spotlightnews.com

After dumping rain and snow on Delmar the previous weekend, Mother Nature decided to give the town a present Saturday. Sunny, warm weather greeted the 23 girls track and field teams that participated in the second annual Bethlehem Invitational.

"I'm extremely grateful, especially considering that during last year's meet, it was pouring rain and 38 degrees," said Bethlehem coach Tom Hurley Sr.

The host team had a strong performance, placing sixth with 42 points. Colonie took the team title with 129 points, well ahead of runner-up Holy Names.

Competing for the meet title was secondary to just competing for Bethlehem, though. Like the rest of the region, the Lady Eagles had been stuck inside through much of the first three weeks of the season.

"There haven't been many league meets because of the weather," said Hurley. "We've only had two meets this year."

Bethlehem had several top-six individual performances, led by Jessica Venezia's second-place finish in the triple jump with a distance of 34 feet. Venezia was also fourth in the long jump with a leap of 15 feet, 11.5 inches.

Kristin Kenney also came up big for Bethlehem with a second-place performance in the 3,000-meter race in a time of 10:39.13.

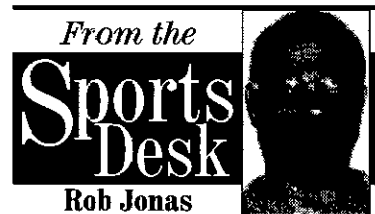

"She's looking a lot better right now," Hurley said of Kenney, who

Springtime, and thoughts are fleeting

All this good weather has made it difficult for me to focus on any one sports topic. I mean, how am I supposed to write a column about Bethlehem's need for a synthetic turf field when it feels like a beautiful summer day outside? Two minutes into my dissertation about how bad Bethlehem's fields drain, I'm thinking to myself, "At this rate, they'll be dry in two days."

So in light of the near-perfect weather we've had since Friday, here is a more randomized column:

Rob Jonas

• I won't say that the Glens Falls-Lake George hockey fans have forgotten how the Albany River Rats effectively pushed the Adirondack Red Wings out of the Capital District sports market, but when nearly 4,000 people showed up for Game 3 of the Rats' first-round playoff series with Hershey Sunday, that certainly seems to suggest that they are willing to forgive them.

Of course, the possibility of Glens Falls getting another AHL team may have also had something to do with the size of the crowd. Rumor has it that negotiations are underway to bring the

New York Rangers' top farm team to the civic center as early as next year. So by supporting the River Rats in a playoff game, Glens Falls is proving that it's ready to support another AHL franchise.

If Glens Falls gets another AHL team, it will benefit Albany. The Rats didn't seem a boost in attendance this year, despite making the playoffs for the first time in seven years and a new affiliation with two quality NHL teams, Carolina and Colorado.

Albany's best attendance years were in the first four seasons when its rivalry with Adirondack was alive and well. A new rivalry with Glens Falls can only help.

• Syracuse University had better send a big Orange thank you note to Bethlehem for giving its lacrosse teams some of its best players. Katie Rowan and Halley Quillinan have been lighting up the scoreboard for the women's team, while Mike Leveille has been one of the most consistent scorers on the men's team. Heck, Leveille was a one-man wrecking crew for Syracuse Friday against the University at Albany with five goals and two assists in a 17-13 win.

Meanwhile, Rowan and Quillinan have been the primary reasons why Syracuse won a share of the Big East title this season. Rowan leads the Orange in goals (44) and points (65), while Quillinan is second on the team in goals (40) and tied for second in points (46). The scary part for the rest of the nation — Rowan is a sophomore, and Quillinan is only a freshman. They're only going to get better.

Before you start wondering if Syracuse knew what it was getting in Rowan and Quillinan, remember that assistant coach John Battaglini was Bethlehem's head

Allergy sufferers strive to keep the dander down

By CARI SCRIBNER
scribnerc@spotlightnews.com

Gesundheit!

That's something Ann Marie Duffy of Ballston Spa hears frequently this time of year.

Duffy is one of the many adults afflicted with indoor and outdoor allergies, which leave her without a safe haven from symptoms including a stuffy nose, itchy eyes, scratchy throat and the dreaded laryngitis.

"I'm just bombarded by things I'm allergic to all year round," said Duffy, who works at an auto repair center in Ballston Spa. "Where I work is a dusty environment, and I have a cat, dog, bird and a fish."

Duffy can't bear to give up her pets, so she has researched every remedy to keep irritants such as pet fur and dander at bay. She also went shopping for a cat that looks, on the outside, more human than feline.

"The cat has hair like people; it's a fleshy-skinned cat," explained Duffy. "I have to fight the pet dander all the time, so I put a special powder cleaner on all the furniture and vacuum it all up."

Her stopgap measures also include taking over-the-counter antihistamines, which fight the symptoms but make her sleepy, and taking advantage of new products to help her breathe more easily inside her home.

"Dust is a big trigger for me, so we ripped out all our carpets and put in hardwood floors," said Duffy. "I got a special vacuum (see sidebar) to suck up the dust and mites."

Although allergy injections could be the best weapon to beat back the sniffing, itching and coughing, Duffy has a simple reason for not undergoing the treatment.

"I just don't have the time to go in every week for shots," she said.

For now, she'll continue to combat her triggers and wage an ongoing battle on the invisible enemies: dust, pollen, dander and airborne molds.

"It's a challenge to manage my allergies," said Duffy. "Every year the pollen changes with the trees and flowers, and this year, with the weather going up and down, it's been crazy for me. It can get a little frustrating."

Doctor's orders

A few short years ago, people lined up at their doctors' offices to get prescribed a symptom reliever stronger than the traditional Benadryl. Pharmacies now sell the popular name brands Claritin, Allegra and Zyrtec, as well as comparable generic labels. There are also nasal spray decongestants, recommended for limited use, and eye drops that reduce the release of optic chemicals causing inflammation. Studies are being done of the effectiveness of a single injection of steroids at the start of outdoor allergy season to keep symptoms at bay for a longer time period.

Dr. Kishan Battu said he has seen lots of miserable, red-eyed adults totting around pocketfuls of Kleenex in his years of practice at the Allergy and Asthma Center in Schenectady.

"What we try to do is cut down the body's response to triggers, and I can say there are a lot of people out there suffering as the pollen season unfolds," said Battu. "It is good to see more people coming in for treatment than trying to manage it on their own."

Selecting the right line of defense depends on the severity of symptoms and how long they linger. If people are sneezing as snow is falling, it's a sign they're battling both indoor and outdoor irritants.

"Generally, antihistamines can help anyone who has symptoms a few weeks or months a year," said Battu. Beyond that, it's time to consider allergy injections."

Considered the "big guns" in the fight on symptoms, the shots are for both kids and adults. A typical round of treatment is weekly injections for the first year or so, followed by twice weekly or once a month for another two to four years.

"The idea is that the symptoms will be reduced even once the treatment concludes," said Battu. "But I do see people returning after a few years for another round."

Battu also coaches his patients to look around inside their homes and realize what's lurking under beds may not be nighttime monsters, but something even scarier: hidden allergy triggers.

"Keep your house clean, especially where dust gathers," said Battu. "Check in the basement for molds; if you don't see them, smell the air for mustiness, and then install a dehumidifier to take moisture out of the air. Better lighting can beat back some molds. The bottom line is you can't be a 'sloppy Joe' around the house."

In sum, clean up your act, identify indoor and outdoor triggers, seek medical advice and keep updated on latest allergy busters.

"In the end, we try to reduce symptoms and suffering, but we won't likely ever remove them completely," said Battu. "If you have allergies, it's not likely we'll get the symptoms down to zero."

Sneezin'

life," said Charu Malik, executive director of the World Allergy Organization, or WAO.

WAO is an international umbrella organization with members consisting of 74 regional and national allergology and clinical immunology societies from around the world. The organization provides direct educational outreach programs, symposia and lecture programs to members in 92 countries.

Allergies affect the quality of life for people around the world, said Malik. In recent decades, the study of the causes, conditions and symptoms of allergies has increased exponentially. The disease is more than just a case of the sniffles, coughing or asthma, she said.

It has triggered an all-out offensive that involves everyone from world health leaders to doctors in the Capital District.

"From our perspective this year, because of the mild winter, patients with hay fever and pollen allergies really fill up our waiting room," said Dr. Ramez Awwad, an ear, nose and throat practitioner with Capital Region Otolaryngology.

People who suffer from allergies have an immune system that reacts adversely to otherwise harmless substances in the environment. As common as the condition is, said Awwad, it is complicated and debilitating, and warrants greater care in its treatment and diagnosis.

"It seems like a benign condition; it's not," said Awwad.

Medications and treatment work, some better than others, but doctors in the field are looking more to the outside contributors to the disease and how people can limit their exposure.

Many allergy sufferers have to give up pets, remove carpeting and avoid contact with known triggers of their reactions, including cigarette smoke and dust-laden stuffed animals.

They have to keep a keen eye on outside pollen indexes and adjust their medications accordingly.

Their symptoms range from mild, moderate, to severe or anaphylactic. Mild reactions can include a rash, itchy, watery eyes and congestion. Moderate reactions spread to other parts of the body and can trigger upper respiratory reactions. These may include itchiness or difficulty breathing. Anaphylaxis is rare. Symptoms can include pain, vomiting, swelling and can affect breathing and swallowing. The allergic reaction can be life-threatening.

Many ear, nose and throat practitioners feel that the prevalence of allergies is increasing, said Awwad. It could be attributed to changes in the environment, he said. Whether it's new plants or changing weather patterns, research hasn't pinned it down quite yet, he said.

However, research has pinned down many factors as causes of allergies, or factors in assuring people have less likelihood of having reactions in adulthood.

Research has shown that children who have been breastfed and grow up living with animals are less likely to suffer from allergies. It has also shown those who were exposed to cigarette smoke and who have a family history of allergies are more likely to suffer from allergies.

Many allergies are inherited, said Awwad.

"Allergies can involve middle ear problems, asthma or chronic sinusitis. For some it's one, two or three, for others it's just asthma, or another," said Dr. Gavin Setzen. Setzen is one of several otolaryngologists with Albany ENT and Allergy.

The appreciation for allergies has increased and the awareness of the condition's effects has warranted a heightened public health perspective, he said.

Allergies contribute to loss of work productivity and have spawned a multibillion dollar medication industry.

"Allergies are common, and they are a worldwide problem. It's a health problem that by virtue of that it is has received a certain status and attention in the U.S. and Eastern Europe," said Malik.

In recent years, treatment has returned to an interest in immunotherapy, treating patients with antigens of allergic agents so that they may build up antibodies to the allergen, said Malik.

Awwad reserves treatments such as immunotherapy and surgery for patients suffering from severe allergic reactions. If changing a patient's environment and medication fails to relieve symptoms, practitioners will explore the option of surgery or administering allergens to build up the patient's immune system.

Tips for minimizing allergens

- Try to use air conditioning, which cleans, cools and dries the air.
- Minimize outdoor activities when pollen counts are high. Peak pollen times are usually between 10 a.m. - 4 p.m.
- Keep your car windows closed when traveling.
- Try to stay indoors when humidity is reported to be high, and on windy days when dust and pollen are blown about.
- Take a shower after spending time outside - pollen can collect on your skin and hair.
- Reduce the humidity inside your home to below 60 percent to inhibit growth of mites and molds.
- Use allergenic covers on bed mattresses and pillows.
- Don't make the bed immediately after rising; let the mattress and pillows "breathe" and air out for several hours.
- Change all bedding including pillowcases weekly, washing them in hot water to kill contaminants.
- Replace pillows frequently.
- Use a wet cloth to dust floors and other surfaces daily.
