Thousands mourn trooper

By JIM CUOZZO

cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

On Wednesday, May 2, in the town of Bethlehem, Trooper David Brinkerhoff was remembered as a hero.

Church bells rang as the beat of slow, heavy drums played outside Bethlehem Lutheran Church where services were held for the sixth state trooper to be killed in the line of duty in New York within the last 13 months.

"Trooper Brinkerhoff was one of our best citizens," said Gov. Eliot Spitzer, who attended the service alongside Lt. Gov. David Patterson and State Police Superintendent Preston Felton.

"He embodied everything it means to be to be a great New Yorker and he reminds us of the incredible bravery of all officers," said Spitzer.

About 1,000 people attended the funeral inside the church. Another 4,000 to 5,000 police officers from as far away as California and as close to home as the Bethlehem police department stood in the church's parking lot and along Elm Avenue.

"Dave was a very committed, very dedicated father, husband, and trooper, and he truly will be missed," said Bethlehem police Officer Rico Fiore, a friend of the fallen officer. Fiore and Brinkerhoff first met at the officers' police academy. They each enjoyed jet skiing

Some local municipalities give hiring preference to locals

By JAMIE D. GILKEY
news@spotlightnews.com

In an annual springtime rite that comes with the warming temperatures and blooming flowers, thousands of college students throughout the Capital District prepare to graduate. And once they have marched in their caps and gowns, many will begin the hunt for work. If they want to stay close to home, lock in job security and start a career in public service, newly minted graduates may turn to careers in local government.

The first stop for them could be a county or town personnel office where they can view job announcements detailing the requirements for positions ranging from library clerks to sheriff's deputies and public health nurses. State law gives military veterans a leg up for public employment through bonus points that are added to their scores on written exams. But in a little-noticed provision being used by municipalities throughout the Capital District, community residents can also get an added boost when they apply for a job in the area where they live.

Known as a residency rule, the idea first came into vogue when political leaders in New York City sought to require police officers, firefighters and other city employees to live where they worked.

In the Capital District, the concept is drawing fire from policymakers who believe it flies in the face of efforts to bring a more regional

School budget vote nears

Effort being made to encourage residents to support numbers

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

In May 2006, more than 5,800 Bethlehem residents turned out to vote on the school budget. With 3,473 votes cast against it, the district's budget was defeated for the first time in 20 years.

On Tuesday, May 15, residents will again decide the fate of the budget.

The $77.16 million budget for the 2007-2008 school year includes money for two new middle school teachers; two new high school deans; two house leaders; three custodians; one technology specialist; one payroll clerk; and an additional $684,000 in special education staffing. The budget raises taxes 3.98 percent for residents of Bethlehem and 0.19 percent for those in New Scotland. According to a calculator on the district Web site, a Bethlehem resident with a home valued at $200,000 and with a basic STAR exemption will pay $2,891.51 in school tax under the new budget.

"I would hope the community feels this budget merits their support and gives them really more

Police nab 3 on drug charges

A routine traffic stop by Bethlehem police resulted in the arrest of three people on a variety of drug charges, including possession of crack cocaine.

Michael S. Walker, 39, of West Coxsackie; John Krause, 43, of Ballston Lake; and Lisa Ceello, 38, of Ravena were each charged by Bethlehem police with felony criminal possession of a controlled substance third degree, criminal possession of narcotic drugs fourth degree and criminal possession of a controlled substance.

Officers pulled over the vehicle on a muffler violation on River Road in Glenmont, Friday, April 27. Police then approached the vehicle, driven by Walker, and noticed a glass pipe on the floor. They also found a silver switchblade with Krause.

A check of Walker's driver's license revealed he had four active suspensions, all for failing to answer a summons. The Albany city police department's K-9 unit was called to the scene, and a check of the car revealed two bags of crack cocaine with a total weight of 6.55 grams. A check of Ceello's license showed she also had an active suspension for failing to answer a summons. Krause also had his license revoked for several DWIs.

Krause and Walker were arraigned and transported to Albany County jail, with each held on $20,000 bail. Ceello was held on $15,000 bail.

Hundreds of people turned out on Saturday, April 28, at the Bethlehem Central Middle School on Kenwood Avenue for the first Timothy Moshier 5k Walk/Run. The race was organized by friends of the Delmar native who was killed April 1, 2006, in Iraq while conducting a combat air patrol mission. Proceeds from the race will go toward a scholarship fund in his name.

Governor adds his signature to Jonathan's Law

Parents pushed for change on behalf of autistic son, who died in February

By ROB IRWIN
irwinr@spotlightnews.com

Following the death of 13-year-old Jonathan Carey in February, his parents, Michael and Lisa Carey of Glenmont, have fought hard to bring reform to a system they believed failed their son, who had autism.

Their advocacy was rewarded by a phone call from Gov. Eliot Spitzer on Saturday, May 5.

"He called me personally at 7:30 on Saturday night," said Michael Carey. "He wanted us to be the first to know he signed Jonathan's Law."

The law ensures that parents and guardians have access to records pertaining to allegations and investigations of mistreatment of children in residential care facilities. "It is critical that parents and guardians of children housed in state facilities for the treatment of developmental disabilities and mental illness have access to records related to abuse allegations and other incidents," said Spitzer. "This bill allows them to better monitor the care their children receive."

The Careys began their fight for the new legislation prior to their son's death. They have charged that their son was abused while a resident of the Anderson School in Dutchess County. Following an investigation by several state agencies, determinations of the extent of the alleged abuse were inconclusive. The Careys were denied the records of those state investigations on which the findings were based. After the alleged abuse occurred at the Anderson School, the Careys pulled Jonathan out, eventually enrolling him in the O.D. Heck Facility in Schenectady.

Jonathan Carey died while being transported by two employees of O.D. Heck when he was allegedly restrained inappropriately while riding in the backseat of a van traveling on Central Avenue in Colonie on Thursday, Feb. 15.

"I know Jonathan's Law is going to make a tremendous impact on many people's lives," said Michael Carey. "This is going to be a really great starting point for reform to the mental health care system."

In addition to making investigative records available for parents, the law mandates telephone notification to the parent or guardian of a patient when an incident occurs. It also requires the state Commission of Quality Care to notify the parents or guardians when there is credible evidence of alleged abuse or mistreatment, and establishes a Task Force on Mental Hygiene Records to study and make recommendations on additional legislation regarding access to patient records and reports.

"This is a great victory for every child under state care, but this fight is not over. We must continue to be the voice for children who cannot speak for themselves," said state Assemblyman Tim Gordon, I-Bethlehem, who sponsored the legislation. "Working with the Careys to get this legislation passed, has been an inspiration they have turned the most tragic incident into a cause for hope for all parents of special needs children."

The Careys have been actively involved in the process of passing this law, lobbying on behalf of Jonathan, and others like him. Michael Carey has said in the past that his hope would be that Jonathan's Law would bring sorely needed change in how the state cares for its disabled residents.

"The current mental health care system is unsafe and must be changed immediately," said Carey. "Many of the developmentally disabled cannot speak or defend themselves. The parents and legal guardians are the voice and advocate for their own children. Access to important information regarding their children's care is crucial for the safety of their children. Jonathan's Law is about access to these needed records."

Carey said he and his wife would continue to advocate for the rights of the disabled.

"Right on the heels of this we're hoping to work with numerous senators and assemblymen for reforms for the mental health care system," said Carey, two weeks ago. "Lisa and I are committed advocates for the reform to the system to help developmentally disabled adults and children."

On Tuesday, April 24, the state Senate passed legislation that elevates endangering the welfare of an incompetent or physically disabled person from a class A misdemeanor to a class E felony. The legislation awaits approval from the Assembly.

"There are many problems in the system that need to be changed," said Carey. "A lot of people want to do the right thing. ... We're just trying to point them in the right direction."

Tuneful times

Getting ready for the Friendship Singers' spring concert on Saturday, May 19, at 7:30 p.m. are, from left, choreographer Muriel Welch; Marie Liddle, director; and Linda Drew, accompanist. The concert at the Delmar Reformed Church at the Four Corners in Delmar is free and open to the public. Voluntary contributions will be given to "Monday Music for Schools," a program of the Albany Symphony Orchestra. The ASO's conductor, David Alan Miller, will be present to describe how the program brings concerts to local children at their schools.

Library budget up for vote

Levy increase reflects renovation bond payments

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

It's been another busy and successful year for the Bethlehem Public Library, according to Director Nancy Pieri.

The library budget is up for vote Tuesday, May 15, and Pieri said she can't remember a time when the community has not supported it.

The 2007-2008 budget totals about $3.4 million, which would result in an overall total tax levy increase of 2.58 percent. Although the levy is up, Pieri said, overall spending is down by $100,000.

"The tax levy is slightly up only because we have debt service due to our renovation bond," said Pieri.

The bond is in the fourth year of a five-year plan with a $320,000 principal and interest payment coming due this year. The overall renovation bond approved in 2003 totals $1.6 million.

"We completely rehabbed the inside of our building," Pieri said.

The next major construction project for the library could be a new roof.

"We are anticipating the need for a roof at some point because this roof is well into its 23rd year," Pieri said.

The library board of trustees set aside $100,000 in capital reserve in the budget proposal to pay for a portion of the roof repair costs.

"We have been focusing on streamlining and trying to keep the budget as low as possible," said Paula Read, president of the library board of trustees. "Taxpayers are under a lot of pressure, and we want to be sure we keep that in mind."

Salaries and benefits account for $2.55 million of the library's budget.

"We have about 75 people on the payroll, and many of those positions are part time," Pieri said.

Along with a vote on the budget, voters will also choose one of two individuals running for a five-year term on the library board of trustees. Incumbent Michael Zalob is running for re-election and is being challenged by newcomer Yolanda Caldwell.

There are currently seven trustees on the board who serve five-year terms with staggered term expirations.

In a recent Footnotes newsletter, the board of trustees said it is committed to the plan of service goals for the library, which include information literacy, access to popular materials, learning support, cultural awareness and the library as commons.

"It's been another excellent year, and we are doing what we do best," Pieri said.

Ongoing community programs in May and throughout the spring and summer include the Big Read program, which promotes shared reading among the community. This month's selection is "Their Eyes Were Watching God" by Zora Neale Houston.

Events celebrating the Big Read selection include hosting jazz guitarist Kevin McNeal Sunday, May 13, and a discussion with journalist and critic Christopher Ringwald on Wednesday, May 23. For information on these and other events at the Bethlehem Library, call 439-9314.

"It's been another excellent year, and we are doing what we do best."

A family's reading caper draws to a close

By Robin Shrager Suito
news@spotlightnews.com

Commentary:

The school principal was holding the microphone. He asked if I was ready.

"I can't do it," I said, eyes welling with tears.

"Yes, you can," he said. His voice was very reassuring, but I still made no move to accept the microphone.

I stood with my back to the crowd, trying to gather myself.

No, this isn't a memory from my youth. This exchange happened a few weeks ago during my last evening as co-chair of the CAPER program at Hamagrael Elementary School.

CAPER, or "Children and Parents Enjoying Reading," is a PTA-sponsored program. One evening each month, families gather in the gym to listen to stories and poems. The readers are students who have signed up in advance with the librarian.

My family's been attending CAPER for five years. For the past three, my husband and I and our friend Deborah have been the co-chairs.

Getting involved with CAPER was an easy choice. CAPER provided an excellent opportunity to volunteer in an activity related to my daughter's school. The program is held after dinner, fits in with my work schedule, and is all about my favorite "sport" (reading!).

But now my daughter is moving on to middle school. She's aged out of CAPER, and, by default, so have I.

A few months ago I was picking up my daughter at her after-school program. Another mom picking up her son approached me.

"I want to introduce myself," the woman said, "I'm replacing you next year at CAPER."

"Nice to meet you," I replied, my heart sinking.

My daughter was in first grade when she expressed a desire to read at CAPER.

"You want to read a book in front of a group of people?" I asked her. She assured me that she did.

The sign-up form asks parents to make sure their children practice and to ensure that the selected reading lasts no more than about five minutes. My daughter picked "Owl Babies" by Martin Waddell.

At CAPER, audience members sit on blankets (brought from home) and listen to the readers. The readers sit on a small couch at the front of the room. Readers can bring helpers (friends, siblings and/or parents) to the couch. The helper can hold the book or the microphone, or just sit next to the reader for moral support. There's also a student announcer who keeps the action flowing by introducing each reader.

I remember the night my daughter, at age 6, read at CAPER for the first time. I had butterflies in my stomach as I watched her walk up to the front of the room.

Rachel chose her daddy to assist her. He sat next to her and held the microphone.

Her expression was focused and serious, her soft voice amplified by the microphone. One of her legs carelessly bounced up and down.

I was unbelievably proud of her. And my pride extended to all the children who read at CAPER. These kids are basically reading in front of strangers. Maybe they know some of their schoolmates, but probably not the parents. It's a way of introducing young children to public speaking in a non-threatening environment.

Most of the children who read at CAPER are excited about sharing a favorite story, some enjoy the spotlight and all love the chance to win a new book.

Each child who comes to CAPER, whether as a reader or a listener, gets a free raffle ticket for a chance to win a new book. At intermission, refreshments are served and the new books are raffled off. Kids can also bring a gently used book from home and take home a different one out of a "book swap" box.

So strong is the pull of this program that one first-grader gave up his wrestling night to read at CAPER. And a fourth-grade girl had no qualms about missing an outing to the mall.

Beginning readers are encouraged to participate in CAPER. The entire atmosphere is casual and supportive.

When I thanked the school librarian for promoting CAPER, she gave the credit to the students. Not surprisingly, students who have been to CAPER provide the best advertising.

All the readers get a certificate signed by the school principal. The principal and the librarian have opted to attend the program each month, and classroom teachers have also come in support of student readers.

The CAPER program requires only a modest budget. Parent volunteers bring cookies and juice). The program coordinators are responsible for posting fliers, submitting the text for the morning announcements and the school newsletter, providing a sign-up poster for the library door, soliciting volunteers to bring refreshments (and reminding them), and showing up to welcome the crowd and monitor the book raffle.

The only monetary expense is to cover the new books that are raffled off. I see the book raffle as an investment. Giving away books is a simple way to keep kids reading. Reading will build their vocabulary, open their minds to new ideas, and help them throughout their school years and beyond.

My husband was in charge of the raffle table. He would unpack the books and arrange them across the folding table at the back of the room. The kids who won the raffle would run to the table with big smiles to make their selection.

"You'd think we were giving away chocolate," he told me.

But now Jeff and I are being replaced. Someone else will get to greet the new readers, someone else will hear the squeals of excitement as the raffle ticket numbers are called, someone else will watch the expressions on the faces of the proud parents.

I fell in love with CAPER the first time I attended and so do many of the children and their parents. CAPER builds a love of reading and a sense of community.

On three occasions, when less than a full slate of kids had signed up, I took the opportunity to read a story. Once I brought one of my favorite books, "Amos: The Story of an Old Dog and His Couch." Another time I borrowed a book from the raffle offerings. It was a comedic, rhyming version of the Rapunzel story, where Rapunzel can't hear the prince all that well so she tosses down everything other than her hair. I have a soft spot for funny, rhyming books, especially when reading out loud to children. Plus the Rapunzel story had the word "underwear," which is always a crowd-pleaser.

The last time I read, it was the opening chapter of "The Phantom Tollbooth," a book of which I am completely in awe for its clever use of language, phrases and idioms.

At the CAPER finale there was no need to fill in. There was an extra-full slate of readers, and we ran over time. I wouldn't have been able to read anyway, I could barely speak.

"Welcome to CAPER" I heard the principal say. Yikes, that's my job, I thought, and I turned to face the audience. Mr. K. took the opportunity to thank Jeff, Deborah and me for our work with CAPER, and he let the crowd know that it was a bittersweet night for Jeff and me, with our time at the elementary school drawing to a close.

Finally, I was able to take the microphone, and do my job, one last time.

"Who is at CAPER for the very first time?" I asked the crowd, and several hands shot up, many belonging to first graders and their families. I smiled broadly, though not without envy, at the many CAPERS in their future.

School board hopefuls make their cases at forum

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

A crowd of 50 people including school board members, the PTA and residents, listened to responses from four candidates running for two seats on the Bethlehem school board.

Allendorph

The candidate forum held at the Bethlehem middle school on Monday, May 7, and sponsored by the Albany County League of Women Voters included Lisa Allendorph, Laura Ladd Bierman, Duane Bowman and Diane Giacone Stever. Each candidate gave opening and closing statements and up to two-minute answers during the 75-minute presentation that was taped for a local public access channel.

Stever said she is one of seven children with three children of her own enrolled in Bethlehem schools. She said it is time for her to give back to the community.

Bierman

Bierman, who served on a school board in Illinois for several years before moving back to Delmar, said she will call on her experience in community service if elected.

"To have an excellent school district, we have to invest in our teachers," said Bierman, who added that "teachers are the backbone of the district."

Bowman said he is running because he is concerned the district budget is growing at a rate two to three times faster than inflation.

'Weird Al' coming to Palace Theater

"Weird Al" Yankovic, known for his parodies of popular songs and creative polka medleys, will perform at the Palace Theater in Albany at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, June 1.

Since his self-titled debut album in 1983, Yankovic has sold more than 12 million albums and recorded more than 150 parody and original songs including "Like a Surgeon," "Eat It," "Smells Like Nirvana" and his most recent hit, "White and Nerdy."

Tickets are $36, $32, $26 and $20 and are on sale at the Palace Theatre box office at 19 Clinton Ave. in Albany. Box office hours are Monday to Friday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tickets are also available through Ticketmaster Charge-by-Phone at 518-476-1000 and all Ticketmaster outlets or online at ticketmaster.com.

"I would like to be proactive and take a look at the numbers and see our spending to improve efficiencies," Bowman said.

Bowman

Allendorph, the middle school PTA treasurer, believes the next three years in the district will be "exciting and challenging."

"We have a new school to build, redistricting to consider and the possibility of full-day kindergarten to address," said Allendorph.

Budget questions took up most of the debate from the audience from prioritizing needs to accountability to town residents.

"There are always competing demands for money," said Bierman. "School boards have to sort that out and decide the best use of money."

Each candidate said academics is the main priority. However,

Bowman, who works for the state Dormitory Authority, said there are inefficiencies and waste in all levels of government.

"This school district is a bureaucracy and finances can be tightened by making different choices," Bowman said.

Allendorph said the board should continue to open channels with the community as it decided this year with the newly formed citizens budget committee.

"I'm a firm believer in community involvement, and we should reach out to seniors and those who do not have children," Allendorph said.

Candidates were asked a curveball question about an automated service calling residents in town and telling them to vote no on the budget.

"I found out about this today," said Stever, who supports the new district budget. "I think the budget looks good."

Parents and faculty members who received the automated "No" vote call did not know the source of the calls.

"This is the first time I have encountered it," said Superintendent Les Loomis.

The Bethlehem School District budget vote is May 15 at the middle school from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. This year's school board debate is being televised cablecast on TV-18, Wednesday, May 9, at 10:15 a.m.; Friday May 11, at 11 a.m., and Sunday, May 13, at 6 p.m. The $77.1 million budget raises taxes in Bethlehem by 3.98 percent.

Stever

The top two vote getters will serve three-year terms on the board beginning in July, replacing outgoing members Stuart Lyman, the current board president, and Richard Svenson.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

Vote yes

With one pull of a lever, you can improve the future.

Next Tuesday, May 15, residents across the state will have a chance to say yea or nay to their school district's budget proposal.

We know all the reasons to vote no: the budget figure itself always looks astronomical; no matter how hard a district tries, a new budget always means an increase in taxes. For people living on a fixed income, any kind of spending increase is a tough one. In many of today's families, two incomes barely stretch from pay day to pay day. And the cost of gasoline is stretching all of our budgets.

In comparison, there's just one reason to vote yes: to ensure a good future for this republic of ours.

An educated population benefits the entire community. Our young students must learn to read and write fluently so that they can find their way down the information highway with ease. Our older students must learn to think critically so they can choose the correct turns in their lives.

They must know the history of our nation and the rest of the world so that they can make informed decisions about the direction they will lead us in as they progress down the road that will take them to careers and family.

Particularly as the Capital District seeks to attract industries that will provide good paying jobs, we must have an educated workforce to draw them here.

Every day, we are faced with expenses both anticipated and unexpected. Although the cost of a school budget can seem high, approving it is an investment we can't afford to skip.

We must keep in mind the words of civilian astronaut Christa McAuliffe, who met an untimely end in the space shuttle Challenger, but left a legacy we should all bear: "I touch the future. I teach."

On Tuesday, May 15, pull the lever that will let you touch the future. Vote yes on the school budget.

Wonders at the earth's bottom

By JAMES LOUCKS
news@spotlightnews.com

The writer is a Clifton Park resident.

On Jan. 19, a group of Clifton Park travelers embarked on a 21-day trip to Antarctica, arranged through the local travel agency Custom Travel.

Why Antarctica? You may ask. Because fewer than 250,000 people have ever stepped foot on this incredible continent. Antarctica is the coldest, windiest, and highest continent on the planet. It is the fifth largest continent, larger than the U.S. and Mexico combined. Plant life is almost completely unknown. Antarctica was once known as Terra Australis Incognita ... Unknown Land of the South.

Don't let the cold part turn you off. In December, January, and February, it's summer down there. It was in the 80s in Chile and Argentina and 30s and 40s in Antarctica — compared to minus 50 in the winter.

We took off from John F. Kennedy airport and landed in Santiago on Jan. 21. There we took a half-day trip touring the city, which was well worth it. The next day we took a day tour high in the Andes Mountains to Portillo Ski Area. The trip up to 9,500 feet consisted of 26 hairpin turns. This world-renowned ski area receives about 20 feet of snow yearly. The valleys on the way up took us through large Clementine and avocado orchards, as well as wine growing areas.

Day three took us to Valparaiso where we boarded the MV Discovery Cruise ship. Our first port stop was Puerto Monte where we took a tour of the Osorno Volcano, which is 2,652 meters above sea level. Then off to the Petrohue Falls, which amounted to turquoise water cascading from above 1,000 feet. Through various falls over lava rock and on the way back we sighted llama, alpaca, and rhea (Emu family) farms.

After another day and night at sea we stopped at Punta Arenas where we took off to see Magellanic penguins at the Otway Sound Penguin Rookery. These little guys, who do not fear humans, burrow in the ground to nest. It was funny to see a field along the sea with these nesting penguins everywhere.

In the afternoon we took an Andean trekking tour, which turned out to be a very strenuous journey. We were also given a ski lift ride to the top and back down.

All the way down the Chilean fjords we would see large salmon farms along the coast. Thirty-five percent of the world's farm-raised salmon comes from Chile. Check out your local supermarkets next time you're buying fish.

The next day we cruised the Beagle Channel and headed into the Drake Passage, the rough-churning water passage between South America and Antarctica. We were very lucky and only encountered 15-foot waves. It seems we were able to slip through two storms where the seas were in excess of 30 feet. We arrived off King George Island and headed into Admiralty Bay. This area is the site of Arctowski Station, a Polish station with about 8 to 15 residents. We landed in Zodiac rubber rafts and spent time with Adelie penguins and huge elephant seals, weighing in between 2,000 and 7,000 pounds and measuring up to 15 feet in length.

The next day we cruised Antarctic Sound and Hope Bay. This area is known as Iceberg Alley. The glaciers range in size from a large piano called growlers; to house sizes called "bergy bits" to the size of the city of Albany. About one-eighth of an iceberg is above water. Icebergs are tracked and numbered. For instance, B17 is approximately 80 x 12 miles, the size of Rhode Island. We continued through The Gerlache Strait.

The next day we cruised Paradise Harbor and the Lemaire Channel while seeing whales, penguins, seals and various birds including the famous albatross that has a wing span up to nine feet. As a note, the only living thing to inhabit both the Arctic and Antarctica is the Arctic turn, which flies from the Arctic summer to Antarctica's summer.

Penguin rookeries are protected and walking is only allowed in special areas. You are not allowed to feed or touch the birds. They have the right of way, even if it takes them 10 minutes to cross your path.

Back on ship, some of us went into outside hot tubs with glaciers and icebergs all around. It doesn't get better than this. It was 47 degrees and sunny.

The next morning we landed in Ushuaia Argentina, known as "The End of the World," where it snowed and the wind was about 50 mph. Here, the beautiful landscapes of Tierra Del Fuego are at your doorstep. Then we flew to Buenos Aires for three days. A Buenos Aires city tour let us marvel at the architecture while traveling down South America's widest boulevards, into the La Recoleta Cemetery, which holds the mausoleums of the Peron family and rich families of days gone by.

In the afternoon, we toured the Parana River Delta and took a river cruise through this giant delta, which covers an area larger than the Netherlands.

Argentina is known for its hospitality and steaks. My wife Judy and I walked down the street and across from the Sheraton Hotel we found the Las Nazarenas Steak House with a full fire pit in the front window. It was decorated in Old Argentina (Gaucha) décor with two levels and a very comfortable feeling when you walk through the door.

My steak (640 grams or 1.4 pounds) was a "demonic" at 460 grams, or 1 pound, was a sirloin. Both were the best we've ever had. Our whole meal came to about $30. The next night we took 12 of our fellow travelers and we were welcomed with a bottle of Champagne. All 12 raved about the Las Nazarenas and would have gone back the next night, but time was running out and we had to return home.

Of all the tours around the world, this Antarctica trip was the most tranquil and serene. Every moment was filled with new sights, which you can only envision by being there.

Yet, we keep looking ahead ... we hope to travel to China this September, Tahiti in 2008 and Africa in 2009.

Board president offers facts

Editor, The Spotlight:

"Just the facts, ma'am, just the facts," to quote a famous TV detective. So what about the Bethlehem Central School District and the upcoming budget vote? Our school district is consistently among the highest performing districts in statewide testing year after year.

Last year, 97 percent of the students entering high school four years earlier graduated. Our community provides our students a high quality, wide-ranging educational experience.

The cost per pupil is 13 percent lower than the average cost in New York. Among the 12 local Suburban Council Schools, seven districts spend more per pupil than we do. The instructional staff pay scale is fourth. The administrative budget per pupil ranks 10th.

This year's expected tax increase is 3.98 percent for Bethlehem and 0.19 percent for New Scotland. This amount includes the cost of construction debt for the school expansion projects that started three years ago that account for one-third of this increase.

So the facts suggest that our community provides its young members with an appropriate, high quality education at a cost that is reasonable by state and local standards.

This year's budget proposal continues this tradition. And for these reasons, I believe the community should support this year's proposed budget with their votes next Tuesday, May 15, at the middle school.

SADD addresses many concerns

Editor, The Spotlight:

We recently read with interest an article in your publication about an active SADD chapter, and I want to take this opportunity to thank you for featuring positive youth empowerment and community service stories. The article referred to the chapter as "Students Against Driving Drunk," or a variation of that name. We changed our name in 1997 and no longer allow chapters to call themselves "Students Against Driving Drunk." Chapters may use either "SADD (Students Against Destructive Decisions)" or simply "SADD." We've moved away from the old name for a number of reasons. SADD changed its name to reflect its expanded mission - addressing violence and suicide prevention along with impaired driving and underage drinking and drug use. The old name perpetuates a myth about SADD - that we're only worried about drunk driving, and think it's OK for young people to drink alcohol. Nothing could be further from the truth. We strongly oppose underage drinking, which our strong "no-use" message firmly states.

Bierman will be good school board member

Editor, The Spotlight:

Laura Bierman will be an active and thoughtful member of the Bethlehem school board.

She brings with her a strong background as a parent of children in this school system, experience as a school board trustee in another state, active community service (BOU and Tri-Village Nursery) and a formal education in public administration.

With these attributes, she will foster sensible debate, open discussion and appropriate decision-making to promote excellence in education and the best in administrative support for the professionals and staff who work every day on behalf of our children.

Local PTAs endorse school budget

Editor, The Spotlight:

As PTA co-presidents and parents of school-aged children, we are encouraging all residents to get out and vote for the school budget on Tuesday, May 15th.

As you may recall, the budget did not pass in May 2006. Many programs were reduced or eliminated from the budget to get approval.

As residents and members of the PTAs we have attended school board meetings and participated in the citizens budget advisory council. We have seen the administration and school board work diligently with the district departments to identify the needs of the district while being mindful of the tax implications to the residents.

As we head into the budget vote this year, we hope that all parents, grandparents, relatives, friends and neighbors will get out and support our school budget. There are some items that we hope are restored - field trips, sports programs and better student/ teacher ratios. There are some items that are very much needed: two additional staff at the middle school; redesign of the leadership at the middle school and high school; three custodians to maintain the middle school and high school facilities and additional intramural programs for the elementary students.

The current budget reflects a 3.98 percent tax increase. Of that, 1.31 percent will pay the bond issue that we passed in 2003. The remaining 2.67 percent reflects the increase needed to ensure our students receive the best possible educational programs.

To learn more about the budget, go to the district Web site, <http://bcsd.k12.ny.us>. We believe this budget balances the educational needs of our students with the fiscal responsibilities that we expect from our district.

Your vote matters - our children and school district need your vote.

Zalob for library board

Editor, The Spotlight:

I'm pleased to endorse Michael Zalob in his re-election bid for the Bethlehem Library board.

I served with Dr. Zalob on the library board when I was a member, and I found him to be extremely conscientious, concerned and committed to all aspects of the library's operation and role in our community. He assumed the role of board treasurer, a very responsible position, and has worked hard for the past two years to oversee the budget preparation and ongoing financial health of the library. I believe that it's largely due to his diligence and outstanding leadership that the library is proposing a very modest 2.58 percent budget increase. He also has assumed a strong leadership role in the "planning for results" long-term planning initiative, which involved many members in the community in providing direction for the library's future.

Michael is a retired dentist who has lived in our community for 16 years. He has the time, enthusiasm and dedication that serving on such a board requires. He also serves on the United Way board of trustees and is active in his synagogue brotherhood and in the Honest Weight co-op. He's a sincere, honest individual who is very direct and unbiased; he's a fair, intelligent and competent board member. I strongly urge members of the community to re-elect Michael Zalob to the library board.

Local lawyer appointed to state incarceration panel

Group to review sentencing procedures

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Michael McDermott of Delmar has been appointed to the state Commission on Sentencing Reform, which was recently formed by Gov. Eliot Spitzer to review the state's sentencing structure and practices.

McDermott

McDermott, a former assistant Albany County district attorney who was the prosecutor in Christopher Porco's murder trial last summer, has been working in the law firm of O'Connell and Aronowitz since the fall of 2006. He is among 11 members on the panel.

"I'm pleased and very thankful to again be able to serve the public," said McDermott.

The state appointment to the Commission on Sentencing Reform is an unpaid position that carries several duties with it.

"Right now the sentencing structure in the state is a hodge podge," McDermott said. "The commission will review current sentencing, alternatives to incarceration, recidivism, and the whole sentencing structure."

The commission will evaluate the impact existing sentences have on the length

"Right now the sentencing structure in the state is a hodge podge. The commission will review current sentencing, alternatives to incarceration, recidivism, and the whole sentencing structure."

Michael McDermott

of incarceration and community supervision, and the impact of early release, before making recommendations. Findings will likely be made before September with a final report submitted by next March to the governor and state leaders.

"The commission has a very broad mandate and represents a wide spectrum of knowledge and experience," said Denise E. O'Donnell, state Division of Criminal Justice

Services commissioner. "As chairperson, my objective is for the commission to make a meaningful contribution to the discussion about New York's sentencing structure and to make sound recommendations to the governor and legislature."

Appointments to the Commission on Sentencing Reform are made by the governor, State Assembly Speaker Sheldon Silver, D-

Manhattan, or State Senate Majority Leader Joseph Bruno, R-Brunswick.

Other recent appointments to the commission include Anthony Bergamo, vice chairman of MB Real Estate and chief executive officer of Niagara Falls Redevelopment; Michael Green, Monroe County district attorney; Cyrus Vance Jr. of the law firm Morvillo, Abramowitz, Grand, Iason, Anello and Bohrer; and Juanita Bing Newton, administrative judge for New York City Criminal Court.

McDermott has also served as senior associate and partner in the law firm of Bouck, Holloway, Kiernan and Casey and as chief assistant district attorney in Rensselaer County. He is a graduate of Albany Law School of Union University.

IN BRIEF

Town encourages use of special needs registry program

The Albany County Sheriff's Department has a program designed to assist the special needs community during an emergency within Albany County, whether manmade or natural.

Registrants should be physically or mentally unable to evacuate themselves from their residence without assistance. Applicant information is entered into the County's E-911 system for retrieval during an emergency.

Local police departments will have the information, as well, and this information allows emergency responders to instantly identify the special needs of callers from their residences. In situations like this, prior medical knowledge of the needs of the caller enhances the response time and efficiency of medical care.

Applications are available online at www.albanycountysheriff.com or by calling Linda Nash at the Albany County Sheriff's Department Office at 720-8030; or the Town of Bethlehem's website, www.townofbethlehem.org. Emergency Management Office, Special Needs Registry Program and forms are also available in the Bethlehem Senior Services Office, 445 Delaware Ave., in Delmar, 439-4955

STANTON FAMILY GROWN!

IN BRIEF

Network seeks 'moving' stories

TLC is looking for future homeowners, buyers and sellers for the hit series "Moving Up" with Doug Wilson.

TLC, the television network that hosts design series like "Trading Spaces" and "While You Were Out" is casting for a new season of its home design show "Moving Up," hosted by "Trading Spaces" star designer Doug Wilson.

TLC is looking for people moving between June and August who have outgoing personalities and unique, extreme taste in design. Diversity is important, so people from a wide range of socio-economic and ethnic backgrounds are encouraged to apply.

All candidates should demonstrate a strong passion for design and should have plans to change the décor of their new home right away.

Candidates must still occupy their current home. First-time buyers moving into a home that is already vacant are not eligible since the show meets with a pair of buyers and sellers.

If you are moving and are interested in applying for the show, visit <http://tlc.discovery.com/fansites/movingup/movingup.html> or e-mail TLangan@bbcnyproduction.com or SBove@bbcnyproduction.com

Special Olympics seeks volunteers

It's almost time for the Special Olympics New York's 2007 Summer Games, and volunteers are needed. For information, please visit www.specialolympicsNY.org and click on Summer Games, or email volunteer@nyso.org.

Volunteers are needed to: Present medals, support opening ceremonies, distribute lunches, set up (and break down) sports venues, and support the ice cream social and victory dance.

Staff the following athletic venues: aquatics, basketball, bowling, gymnastics, powerlifting, track and field, tennis and volleyball.

All events are free and open to the public. Opening ceremonies on Thursday, June 14, at 7:30 p.m. will feature the traditional parade of athletes plus fireworks, skydivers, dance and musical entertainment and the conclusion of the statewide Law Enforcement Torch Run, the torch relay that brings the "flame of hope" to light the Special Olympics cauldron.

Athletic competitions are on Friday and Saturday, June 15 and 16, in eight Olympic-style summer sports. For a detailed schedule visit www.specialolympicsNY.org.

Program to teach snake identification

People can learn how to identify snakes during a program at the state Department of Environmental Conservation's Five Rivers Environmental Education Center at 2 p.m. on Saturday, May 19.

Center naturalists will discuss the natural history of snakes commonly found in the Capital District area. Some live native snake species will be available for participants to view up close and learn how to identify them.

The three venomous natives found in New York also will be on display in glass-fronted, locked boxes.

This indoor program is free. The center is at 56 Game Farm Road, Delmar. For information contact Five Rivers at 475-0291.

Dog and cat foster homes needed

The Capital District Humane Association (CDHA) is in need of temporary foster and adoptive homes for dogs.

CDHA pays food and medical care expenses for fostered dogs.

For information, call 664-1237 or go to www.cdha.net.

Spotlight wins Ad Club award

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY
mccarthyk@spotlightnews.com

Drama was a prizewinner for Spotlight Newspapers on Friday, May 4.

At the Ad Club Association of Communication Professionals' 34th annual NORI awards on Friday, an ad suggesting that hometown news can be as dramatic as staged events took first prize in self-promotion.

The ad first appeared in Playbill at Capital Repertory Theater in Albany and appears in other theater programs, too.

Spotlight Newspapers Advertising Director Bill Kellert wrote the text of the ad and Spotlight Newspapers Art Director David Abbott designed it.

Abbott said he was inspired by the idea of stage lights to create the shadowing on the text of the ad.

"The dramatic lighting is in keeping with the ad," he said.

Kellert was excited to win.

"It continues the legacy I started in my own firm," he said, referring to Kellert Advertising Associates, which his father, Al Kellert started, and where Bill Kellert worked from 1978 until 2002. In 1985, after his father's death, he ran the agency.

"To see that level of excellence carried on at Spotlight Newspapers is exciting," Kellert said. "The ad is very simple. Simple and white space work well together."

Vice president of Spotlight Newspapers, John McIntyre, agreed about the effect of simplicity.

"It's creative, yet simple," McIntyre said. "Talented people come up with creative and simple things. Dave and Bill are among the best and the brightest we have here."

Al Kellert was a co-founder of The Ad Club in 1961. With around 300 members, it brings together people who work in advertising, public relations and marketing.

The Ad Club's current president, Michelle LeClair of My Graphics Co. Inc. of Chatham, Columbia County, said the NORI Awards are the region's most recognized award for marketing and advertising.

"It's an honor to win because there's so much great work coming out of the region," LeClair said. "When you go to the NORI Awards, you see so much great work and wish you could have done that. It makes everybody want to be more creative."

LeClair admired Spotlight Newspapers' ad.

"It was very clean and simple," she said.

IN BRIEF

Construction project is focus of meeting

Representatives of the Albany County Department of Public Works will conduct a public information meeting at 7 p.m. on Thursday, May 10, to discuss the Schoolhouse, Krumkill and Russell roads reconstruction project.

The meeting at the North Bethlehem Fire House, 589

Russell Road, was requested by Albany County Legislator Mary Lou B. Connolly, who represents the 32nd Legislative District in Guilderland.

Public Works representatives will update residents on the status of the project, discuss the construction schedule and answer questions.

The project, estimated to cost $6.1 million, will rehabilitate 2.5 miles of Schoolhouse, Krumkill and Russell roads in the towns of Bethlehem and Guilderland to the City of Albany line. It involves reconstruction of the pavement, repairs to curbs and sidewalks, improvements to drainage and enhanced accommodations for bicyclists and pedestrians.

Surveyors began work this week and actual construction is expected to start before the end of this month.

their expertise throughout the day.

Indian Ladder Farms owner Pete Ten Eyck will give an educational tour through the orchards during the 1 p.m. Apple Blossom Stroll. At 2:30 p.m., there will be a Honey Bee Buzz at the indoor hive where people can learn about hive life and pollination with beekeeper Anne Kelly. Falconer Richele E. Ford will present her Birds of Prey for an in-depth "Show and Tell" in the Herb Garden at 4. End the day at 5:30 p.m. with a walk on the nature trail with expert birdwatcher Chris Keefer. Don't forget your binoculars. There is no charge for this event.

The Yellow Rock Café will be open Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. It will also be open Sunday, May 13, from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. for a special Mother's Day Brunch. Each Mom will receive a poem and a flower. Reservations are required by calling 765-2956.

Indian Ladder Farms celebrates spring

Indian Ladder Farms will host several events to celebrate spring from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday, May 12.

Specialists in falconry, beekeeping, bird-watching, and pollination will share

Kids' Monthly Marketplace offers useful information

Parents may wonder, "Did Mrs. Laiosa buy that great-looking book for the library that I saw in Border's?" or, "Before I purchase this book, I wonder if my child would like it?"

Help with these questions is just a click away with innovations called NextReads and the "Kids' Monthly Marketplace." The youth services department is compiling all the new titles we get every month into "Kids Monthly Marketplace," a newsletter that will help you make viewing, listening or reading choices.

For those of you who are already using NextReads, the great online book service that helps everyone select materials, we've added two new categories - Kids' Books and Picture Books. If you haven't tried NextReads, check it out!

The Harlem Renaissance

"Their Eyes Were Watching God" by Zora Neale Hurston, one of the noted writers of the era known as the Harlem Renaissance, will be the topic of the adult book discussion on Wednesday, May 16, at 7 p.m. Hurston's book was chosen as the hallmark of the national reading initiative called The Big Read, which is being celebrated at libraries during May. Teens should save the date of May 30 for a great evening called "Blues Journey" that will explore music and poetry of the era.

More than a parade

We are receiving a gratifying response to our veterans project. Collection baskets are at VPL for donations that will be delivered to the Stratton VA Medical Center hospital on May 31. Check our flyer or our Web site (www.voorheesvillelibrary.org) for a complete list of what is needed.

Dancers celebrate 15 years at Egg

In celebration of the conclusion of its 15th season as resident company of The Egg, the Ellen Sinopoli Dance Company will perform a program featuring a guest artist, three premieres and one work by a guest choreographer at 8 p.m. on Friday, May 11, at The Egg.

The performance will feature guest artist Ramon Thielen, former principal dancer of the Dance Theatre of Harlem.

The program will also have three premieres by Artistic Director Ellen Sinopoli. "Oh My..." is a suite of five mood-swinging dances. "Into Dark Moods," an ensemble for five dancers, explores the sense of disconnect. "The Walk," a solo for dancer Melissa George, is choreographed to music by Cornelius Duffalo of the string quartet Ethel and explores the styles of walking.

A free pre-performance talk with Ellen Sinopoli begins at 7:15 p.m. Tickets for the performance are $24 for adults, $20 for seniors and $14 for children and are available at The Egg Box Office at the Empire State Plaza in Albany, by phone at 518-473-1845 or on-line at www.theegg.org.

Church seeks vendors for annual lawn sale

The First Reformed Church of Bethlehem, 38 Church Road, Selkirk, will hold its annual lawn sale on Saturday, May 12.

Whether your items are new or used, the church is looking for vendors to fill space. As in the past, vendors will not be allowed to sell firearms, pets or food concessions. The cost for a 20-foot space was $20 if paid by May 1; it is now $25. Reservations are necessary, please call 767-9505.

The church is located on Church Road off Route 9W in Selkirk.

Trustee, budget vote next week

CHECK IT OUT

Two candidates will be on the ballot next week for an open seat on the Bethlehem Public Library's board of trustees. The seat is for a term of three years.

The incumbent, Michael Zalob, has served on the library board since the summer of 2004, when he was appointed to fill a vacant seat. He was elected the following year, and has served two years as treasurer.

Zalob

A Delmar resident for 14 years, Michael has a long history of volunteer work with United Way, including two years as a board member. A retired dentist, he is a frequent visitor to the library; you'll often find him at one of the public computer stations or in the periodicals area. He is committed to clarity and transparency in budgetary matters, and continued diversity of library services relevant to the community. He recently served on the community advisory committee for the library's 2007-09 Plan of Service. This plan is available for review in the library; ask for it at the information desk.

The second candidate for the open seat is Yolanda Caldwell. Ms. Caldwell is a resident of Glenmont. No additional information was available.

The trustee vote accompanies the budget vote from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday, May 15, at the Bethlehem Central Middle School. Bethlehem residents will have an opportunity to review the budget at a public meeting Monday, May 14, at 6 p.m., prior to the monthly board meeting. The budget is published in the May/June edition of our newsletter, footnotes, and online at www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org.

Remaining trustees on the seven-member board are Aaron Baldwin, Rachel Baum, Penelope Koburger, Paula Read, John Sobiecki and Tamra Wright. You may contact any board member at bp1trustee@uhls.lib.ny.us.

Big Read event

Sonny Daye and Perley Rousseau team up with a guest bassist for "Fascinatin' Rhythms" at 7 p.m. Tuesday, May 22, at the library. They'll perform music of Duke Ellington and the Gershwins, embellished with stories about the tunes and the composers.

The husband-and-wife duo perform their broad repertoire throughout New York and New England. Three CD releases, Love Dance (1996), East of the Sun (1999) and Let It Happen (2004), have generated international air play and received critical acclaim.

This free concert is cosponsored by Bethlehem Senior Projects, Inc. with funding from the County of Albany Department of Aging.

The program coincides with this month's Big Read, which focuses on the Harlem Renaissance classic "Their Eyes Were Watching God" by Zora Neale Hurston. The Big Read is an initiative of the National Endowment for the Arts in partnership with the Institute of Museum and Library Services and Arts Midwest. Its purpose is to promote shared literary reading among residents, community groups and civic organizations. Our region's Big Read is cosponsored by the New York State Writers Institute and the Upper Hudson Library System.

SINK OR SWIM

If you are thinking of installing an in-ground swimming pool in your yard, or if you already have one, you should have realistic expectations about how this feature will affect the sale of your home. In areas in which it is regarded as something of a necessity, a pool will most likely give you the return you may be looking for.

In fact, according to the National Association of Realtors, a pool increases the value of a home in the Southwest by 11% on average. Elsewhere, the returns are mixed. If a prospective buyer is a fitness devotee or longs for those friends and family gatherings, a pool may be an attractive feature that helps sell a home. In other cases, prospective buyers may be concerned about safety issues, maintenance and insurance costs.

If you are installing a pool, make sure you proceed with all the extra safety precautions. If you already own a pool, make sure you have maintained it so that it will be an asset to your home sale. Remember, as your real estate expert, I can help you make these decisions and guide you through this process.

FEMA helps those with flood damage

Albany added to counties to receive assistance following April nor'easter

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) has announced that Albany

County is being added to the list of 12 counties in New York receiving disaster assistance due to the early spring snow and rain storms that drenched Albany and surrounding areas in mid April.

The heavy rains between April 15 and April 17 caused flooding to several homes in the Capital District, according to Albany County Director of Emergency Management Terry Ryan.

"We are in the beginning stages of talks with FEMA," said Ryan, who is working in conjunction with the county executive's office to implement an outreach program to assist residents in registering for federal aid.

"Our goal is to work closely with New York to help communities recover from nor'easter damage," said Marianne C. Jackson, FEMA's Federal Coordinating Officer.

Albany County is one of six counties eligible for individual state or federal aid assistance to homeowners, renters and businesses. The program includes grants for repairs and for rent of alternative housing, low-interest disaster loans from the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA), and grants for other needs.

At the request of Gov. Eliot Spitzer, President George Bush signed a major disaster declaration for the state on April 24 following the storm. The initial designation was for Orange, Rockland and Westchester counties. Since then, nine more counties have been included. They are Albany, Columbia, Dutchess, Essex, Greene, Putnam, Schoharie, Suffolk and Ulster counties.

Additional aid to local governments for emergency work is also available through FEMA under public assistance. Certain private nonprofits that provided government assistance are also eligible. FEMA funds 75 percent of costs. Spitzer announced that the state would assume the full share of local costs amounting to 25 percent.

"This storm put a tremendous strain on our local governments as they responded to the needs of our residents as a result of the flooding," said Albany County Executive Mike Breslin.

"I thank Gov. Spitzer and FEMA for recognizing the damage we sustained and providing us the resources to make the necessary repairs," said Breslin.

A meeting will take place with FEMA for local government representatives on May 15 at 10 a.m. at the Albany County Sheriff's Department, Critical Incident Emergency Management Unit, 75 Remsen St., in Cohoes.

Residents in Albany County whose property or income was damaged by the nor'easter and subsequent flooding may register for assistance by calling (800) 621-3362 (TTY 800-462-7585) between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. daily, or online at www.fema.gov.

and Fiore attended Brinkerhoff's wedding at the Lutheran Church.

"It really hits home when someone as close as Dave is killed in the line of duty," Fiore said. "I'm still in shock."

Felton said Brinkerhoff is a true hero, unlike the false celebrity hero worship that many in our society succumb to.

"David stood at the face of danger, not just this time but many times before," said the emotional Felton, who said Brinkerhoff served all New Yorkers.

"He paid the highest price anyone can pay and his actions saved lives that day."

Brinkerhoff leaves behind a wife, Barbara, and his 11-month-old daughter Isabella. In an open written letter for the church funeral program, Barbara Anne Brinkerhoff said David was her strength, her love, her best friend.

"I remember thinking how lucky Isabella and I were to have you in our lives," wrote Barbara during difficult challenges the couple faced after their daughter was born.

"You told me that team Brinkerhoff would get through this. You touched so many lives and I know you will always be with us and will protect us," her letter read.

Investigator David Atkins knew Brinkerhoff before they both entered the police academy and were roommates living in Albany.

"He made me a better person," said Atkins. "If he were still here he would tell me to pick my head up and be positive."

Brinkerhoff was killed in the line of duty on Wednesday, April 25, by a bullet believed to have been shot by another officer in the MRT Elite Mobile Response Team that stormed a farmhouse in Margaretville, Delaware County, that day looking for 23-year-old shooting suspect Travis Trim. Brinkerhoff was shot once in the chest by Trim and once in the back of the head by a .223 tactical round. Authorities believe the shot from Trim did not kill Brinkerhoff, who was wearing a chest protector, but that a bullet from a state trooper's weapon did.

Members of New Jersey state police, and officers from Rhode Island, California Highway Patrol, Canada, and Florida all attended the funeral for Brinkerhoff. He was 28 years old at the time of his death. Roads in the town of Bethlehem were sealed off for several hours the day of the funeral.

"We are family and we will get through this together," said the pastor of the Bethlehem Lutheran Church, the Rev. Mark Mueller.

Budget

for their tax dollars," said Superintendent Les Loomis.

School officials said a town-wide reassessment that left Bethlehem residents feeling financially pinched was the No. 1 reason the budget was defeated last year. After the initial defeat, district supporters rallied their forces and the second budget was easily approved in June.

Angie Randles, co-president of the Slingerlands PTA, said the group is taking nothing for granted this time around.

"We are making plans to get out the vote," Randles said.

Those plans include having students design posters, which will be distributed throughout town. Palm cards will also be handed out at different events prior to the vote, and lawn signs are likely to sprout up over the next several days.

"A lot of people told me last year they would have voted 'Yes' but did not come out to vote the first time around," said Randles. "I do feel that people will come out this year."

Members of the school board, led by president Stuart Lyman, have tried to improve communication between the community and the district in light of last year's budget defeat by televising meetings on the public access channel; holding monthly community conversations with the superintendent; regularly updating the district's Web site and creating a 40-member citizens budget committee to assist the district in crafting this year's budget.

"I think our budget and our spending is right in line," said Lyman. "We are educating kids, and our overall spending says we are doing it as well as any other district in the state."

In an informational handout sent to the community reminding them to vote, the district lists several factors for the 3.98 percent tax increase.

Debt service related to ongoing school construction, energy costs, regulatory expenses, computer replacement, social security costs, and salaries for staff are among the reasons.

The new budget is $4.7 million more than last year's, with $1.77 million going to salary increases for staff. Salary contracts district-wide are up 4.5 percent, with teacher salary contracts increasing 5 percent.

"The key to the quality of education here is our teachers," said Loomis.

Lyman said if you factor in annual STEP, or Secondary Teacher Education Project, increases and givebacks in health insurance, the actual salary increase for teachers is around 3.5 percent.

Spending per pupil in the Bethlehem district is $13,944, compared to the state average of $16,044 per pupil.

Other highlights of this year's budget include restoring funding for varsity hockey, gymnastics and cheerleading, as well as for field trips and non-league athletic trips.

"I think it was really hard on those sports to fund-raise, and everybody at the BCAA (Bethlehem Community Athletic Association) is very happy the funding is back in the budget," said Theresa Barrowman, president of the association.

A school bus purchase proposition defeated in last year's budget vote is back this year. If approved, the proposition will allow the district to purchase 15 new buses for an amount not to exceed $1.134 million. Five of those buses will transport students to and from the new Eagle Elementary School. Construction on the new school off Van Dyke Road is expected to be complete by the beginning of the 2007 school year.

"This year's budget moves programs ahead and accomplishes major goals," said Loomis.

Four candidates are also running for two open seats on the school board to replace outgoing board president Stuart Lyman and board member Richard Svenson.

Duane Bowman, Diane Giaccone Stever, Lisa Allendorph and Laura Bierman are the candidates. The top two vote getters will each serve a three-year term on the board beginning in July.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m., Tuesday, May 15, at the Bethlehem Middle School on Kenwood Avenue.

Business in the Spotlight

Rewards go a long way toward productivity

Everyone loves to receive rewards. Whether it's for a job well done, a performance well received or the satisfaction of knowing someone else appreciates your efforts, that reward can come in many different guises. A knowing smile, look or hug from a loved one can mean as much as any concrete reward from a stranger.

The acknowledgement of your peers in a professional setting or the reward of a raise or promotion are all things that say we appreciate who you are and what you have done for us. In today's busy world, we often forget the importance of that unexpected thank you.

The flower for your secretary for "no particular reason" or buying the staff lunch, a birthday card or cake at the office are all inexpensive ways to show people you care and value them in your business. It is amazing the increased level of production people put forth when they feel they are valued.

What started me on this soapbox today? Last Friday evening I had the opportunity to attend The Ad Club's annual NORI awards banquet. (See the article on the NORIs in this week's paper.) Briefly, the NORIs recognize creative excellence in the advertising and public relations business in this region.

Having been deeply involved with the organization for almost 30 years, I have witnessed many of these evenings come and go. One thing that stands out year after year is that no matter how many awards a person wins, and whether they've received a number in the past, there is an excitement in the air that is palpable as each person or company waits for the results of a category in which they have entered.

Everyone gets wrapped up in the moment... and when your business name is called there is a great charge of electricity.

AAA offers tips for solo travelers

Eleven percent of all leisure travelers in the U.S. travel alone, and that number is growing. Travel counselors are seeing increasing business from single travelers who are looking not only for advice about destinations but also about how to travel safely.

AAA asked more than 100 professionals in the U.S. and Canada for advice for today's single traveler. The top three suggestions are to take prearranged tours, travel with a group and leave a copy of your itinerary and international travel documents (passport, visas) at home with family and friends.

In addition, they said:

Plan ahead. Know where your hotels are located, how you will get around and where you want to go. The fewer decisions you need to make when you first arrive, the less likely it is you will get lost or distracted.

Notes from the

Advertising Desk

Bill Kellert

How much of that excitement can be brought into the workplace and harnessed on a daily basis gives one pause. Employers must learn that a paycheck is not the only thing that excites employees. It is the acknowledgement of a job well done ... a thank you or unexpected gift that shows I recognize who you are and what you are doing in our company makes a difference. Try it, you may just be surprised with the rewards you will receive back.

Around the area, Jane Rothfield has been named executive director of Schenectady's Upper Union Street Business Improvement District ... Jacquelyn Colligan joined ProRealty of New York as marketing coordinator ... Albert D'Amato and Tara McLean-Couch have joined the sales team of Wiechert Realtors - Northeast Group ... Rueckert Advertising will provide marketing support for the Fourth Annual Lake George Elvis Festival this June 1-3 ...

Finally, bringing us full circle to the concept of rewards... the late David Brown was the recipient of the aforementioned Ad Club's Outstanding Achievement Award.

The award, formerly known as the Printer's Ink Silver Medal and later The Distinguished Service Award, is presented by the club for service to the community and the profession that goes above and beyond. Brown's wife, Pamela Sawchuk Brown, accepted eloquently Friday evening at the awards dinner. David's loss still looms large on the public relations landscape in this community and this honor is well deserved.

That about clears the clutter from my desk for a few weeks. Be sure to check out my online blog for updates or catch me right here. As always, if you have anything you'd like to see in the column, feel free to e-mail me at kellertw@spotlightnews.com. We can't guarantee they will all get in, but we'll give it our best shot.

Teach kids the beauty of nature

As the school year winds down, summer is the perfect time to rediscover the outdoors. Experiencing nature's wonders firsthand -- admiring a garter snake slithering in the grass, planting flowers in the yard or devouring strawberries picked fresh from the garden -- can prove as captivating as anything on the TV or video-game screen. So begin today to get your kids to celebrate and capture summer outside.

Parents searching for inspiration don't have to look far to identify great outdoor activities that are nearby, easy and fun.

"In nature, a child finds freedom, fantasy and privacy: a place distant from the adult world, a separate peace."

Richard Louv

And the benefits are enormous, studies reveal. Active kids do better academically. They score higher on tests of concentration and self-discipline.

"Unlike television, nature does not steal time; it amplifies it," said award-winning journalist and child advocate Richard Louv, whose book "Last Child in the Woods" coined the term "nature-deficit disorder" and also triggered a nationwide "No Child Left Indoors" movement.

"In nature, a child finds freedom, fantasy and privacy: a place distant from the adult world, a separate peace," said Louv.

Not as many children today are discovering the outdoors. In a typical week, only six percent of children ages 9 to 13 play outside on their own, while a typical child in the U.S. watches more than three hours of television daily. The decline in outdoor adventuring is cited as one reason why the obesity rate has more than tripled during the past three decades, to 17 percent from 5 percent, for children ages 12 to 19.

But getting your kids off the couch and out into the neighborhood for memorable adventures is easy and enjoyable.

"We realize it can be a challenge for parents to identify outdoor activities that kids will consider fun," said Jennifer Hanley, outdoor living and gardening expert at The Scotts Miracle-Gro Company. That very premise inspired the National Gardening Association -- in conjunction with ScottsMiracle-Gro -- to feature guides to creative, outdoor activities on www.kids-gardening.org. The site offers a wealth of ideas on how to get kids outside and in tune with their natural surroundings this summer.

Hanley's nature and garden-related suggestions include a stroll around the yard or the neighborhood park to introduce children to the six basic parts of plants and their functions; planting perennials that live and bloom year after year; and designating a day for immersing children in nature -- without TV, computers and video games.

Whenever a child laments, "I'm bored, there's nothing to do," recommend any of these options and add enthusiastically that you will be glad to join in the adventure:

- Starting a learning garden in the backyard or neighborhood plot. This helps kids learn about taking care of plants (and the animals drawn to the plants) and respecting the environment and nearby nature. Your kids can take photos of the garden as it grows and produces whatever they've planted.

- Bird watching and identifying trees and plants that appear in the yard. These activities often entice older kids, especially if they understand that a periodic bird or plant census helps detect any significant shifts in their populations.

- Recording sight, hearing, smell and touch observations on walks in your neighborhood, which helps kids hone their sensory-observation skills. They can log the information they gather using a scientific approach and even make drawings to chronicle their observations.

Janet Fouts, a West Virginia environmentalist, invented nature games with her daughter, Julia. In one game called "The Sound of a Creature Not Stirring," they would listen for sounds they couldn't hear -- an apple ripening, dew on the grass, an earthworm moving through the soil, and a spider weaving its web, among others. Fouts maintains that this attention to nature's details helped in her daughter's speech development, writing, artwork and keen attention to detail.

By making outdoor activity fun, parents play an integral role in helping children appreciate the beauty of nature in their surrounding areas and understand the importance of being environmental stewards, starting in their own backyard.

Six steps make it easy to be green

You don't have to compost your kitchen waste or pick bugs off plants by hand to help the environment. From the red carpet to your favorite garden shop, new "green" products are making it easy to have a beautiful yard while being good stewards of the earth in your own back yard.

Outdoor living trend-spotter and garden guru Susan McCoy has gathered six savvy, yet surprisingly simple solutions for going "green" this summer.

• Plant, plant, plant!

One of the simplest ways to give back to the planet without breaking your budget is to plant anything. "Just plant something, anything. A single tree, shrub, bush or container will help the environment," says McCoy. "It's one of the easiest ways you can make a difference. Imagine if we all planted just one new plant every year!" Trees and other plants remove carbon dioxide from the air during photosynthesis. This improves the quality of the environment by cleaning and oxygenating the air and removing CO2. Plants also help prevent soil erosion, control water cycles, and moderate temperatures. It's the balance of nature at the most basic level.

• Start with healthy soil

Pesticides and fungicides aren't safe for people, pets or even the planet. Eliminate the need for harmful garden chemicals by pampering your plants with healthy, nutrient-rich soil from the get go. "Healthy soil, rich in minerals, nutrients and 'good bugs,' maximizes a plant's own healthy immune system to let it naturally resist pests and diseases," says McCoy. Compost your own or look for organic potting soils.

• Reduce fertilizer use

Overfeeding is not only unhealthy for plants; it also causes excess nutrient runoff that pollutes our streams, bays, rivers and other watersheds. "Plants can only absorb so much fertilizer before the excess nutrients run off into the groundwater," says McCoy. Fertilizer runoff contaminates drinking water, kills fish and other sea creatures and causes problems like Red Tide. Reduce overfeeding by using environmentally responsible feeding practices, like the new slow-release fertilizer Dynamite (www.dynamiteplant-food.com). This nine-month plant food releases nutrients to the plant when the plant needs it most, never over or under feeding so there is minimal waste and runoff. Plus, it's low in phosphate making it a nutritious yet earth-friendly plant food option.

• Water responsibly

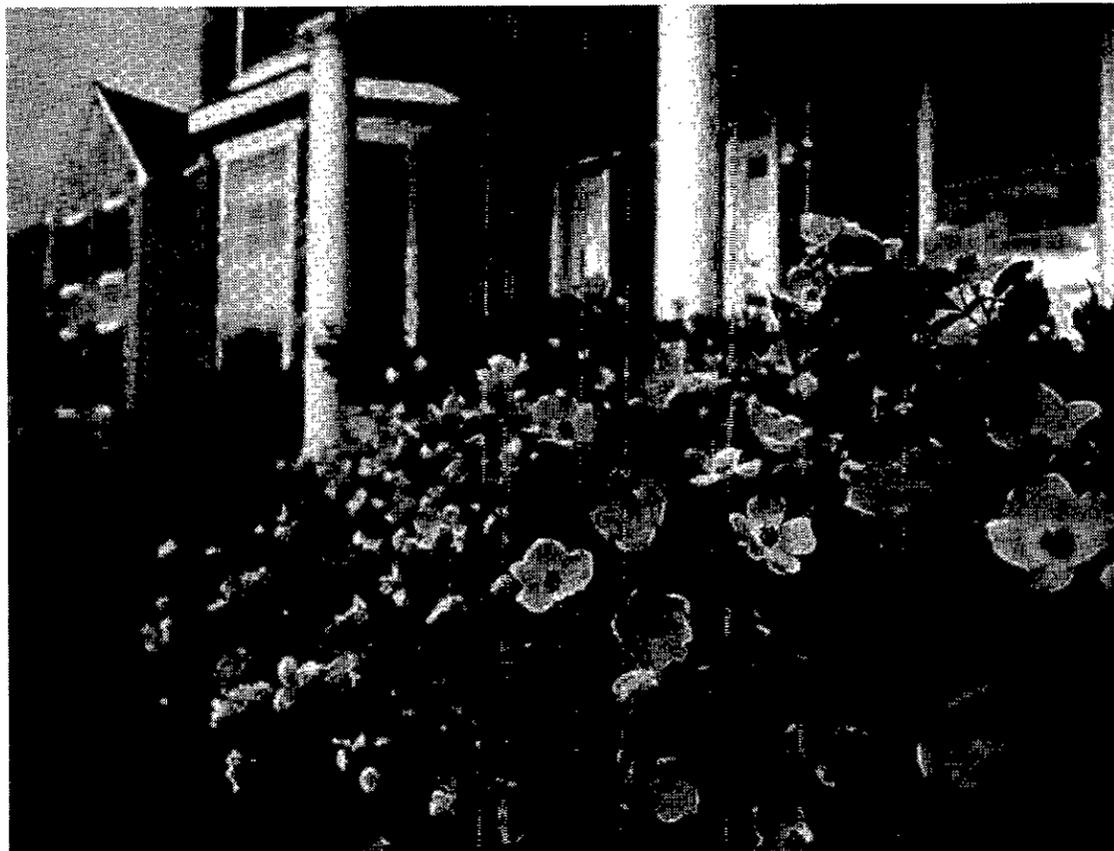

If you don't need to water your plants as often, you'll save gallons of time and money. But more importantly, you conserve water and protect the environment. "Substitute older cultivars with new and improved varieties bred 'to drink responsibly,'" says McCoy. "Updated versions of classic plants like Knock Out shrub roses (theknockoutrose.com) require much less water than older cultivars while still offering the same great look gardeners love."

• Be grass green

According to Ethne Clarke, garden editor of "Traditional Home," "Most gardens have lawns, and in some cases the lawn is the garden." She suggests mowing less frequently and cutting the grass longer so the top growth protects the roots. And water less frequently to force the roots to go deeper, which keeps them cooler and less susceptible to dry spell damage. She recommends using cornmeal or diatomaceous earth as an insecticide and pulling weeds before they set seed. For tough lawns, use a soil conditioner with good micro-organisms and aerate to encourage soil health. Try LazyMan Liquid Soil Aerator or Soil Conditioner for an easy spray on solution without back breaking work, available at outsidepride.com.

• Be kind to flora and fauna

After pouring hours of time, effort and in most cases their hearts into the garden, no one wants to wake up one morning to find that their begonia bed served as a late night snack for the neighborhood wildlife. "Keeping my hydrangea from becoming deer food was a big problem as we live in the woods in southeastern Pennsylvania," says McCoy. That was until she started using DeerStopper, a 100 percent organic deer repellent.

New rose cultivars such as Rainbow Knock Out were bred to be chemical free, so no pesticides are needed.

"All-natural products of today work just as effectively as or better than their synthetic counterparts," she says. "These products give me all the benefits with minimum health risks and harm to the environment. To safeguard our water supply and our pets and children who play outdoors, McCoy suggests trying organic and all natural animal repellents as an alternative. Learn more at www.mes-sinawildlife.com.

Welcome your feathered friends

In today's highly interactive and short attention-span society, the backyard increasingly beckons to us as that accessible personal space in which to rest from life. And life has become increasingly defined as the flickering space of a television, computer screen, personal digital assistant or smartphone. Obviously, these ever-present devices are easy to take anywhere, even our backyards. But taking them there is one thing. To disengage is to realize the natural interactivity all around, just waiting to enliven our "backyard experience."

Also, momentarily forget the other entertaining elements for backyard enjoyment to be open to one of the most entertaining, soothing and natural of backyard activities - birding.

The allure of birding can be found anywhere in a range from infrequent to dedicated pursuit, with your backyard serving as the stage. No matter how you decorate or "accessorize" your personal outdoors, keep in mind you're doing it to create a haven for birds.

So what are the building blocks for enlivening your outdoor stage to attract the little winged actors?

Trees and shrubs

For birds, trees and shrubs are elements of security within your yard. The types and densities of your trees and shrubs have a direct bearing on the amount and types of birds that visit your yard. For example, just planting shrubs in groups rather than a line and not closely pruned afford covered ground access attractive to colorful robins, blue jays and cardinals. Single plantings or groupings of pine and fir trees provide year-long insulation, cover and nesting perches. Without a doubt, tree and shrub type and arrangement are integral to optimum backyard bird activity. Visit www.howtoattractbirds.com to learn more.

Wildflowers

Wildflowers are natural magnets for attracting birds. They require minimum maintenance once the initial planting is complete. Not pruning or "deadheading" blooms is best for attracting birds through their remaining seed pods.

Birdhouses

Whether you build it yourself or buy a birdhouse, you'll find that

Bird food is the most affordable and effective birding lure. Knowing which seed your favorite bird likes guides your bird seed purchase.

putting up any house will gain residents. For certain types of birds, follow specific birdhouse structures. Details such as floor area, house depth and rise of entry hole above the floor, are a few dimensions that make a house more conducive to specific bird types. Knowing the type of birds desired should guide your birdhouse choice. Web sites like www.birding.about.com/od/buildhouses/a/completehouse.htm and www.birdhouses101.com contain house specifications for almost any bird you hope to attract.

Birdfeeders

Feeders come in general types: tube feeders, wall feeders, hopper feeders, sock feeders, suet feeders, tray or platform feeders, lantern feeders and variations on all of these. A tube feeder with a tray attracts cardinals, crossbills, finches and sparrows while a suet feeder attracts woodpeckers, chickadees, nuthatches and wrens. Feeders near the house call for a window feeder while an open area requires a tube feeder mounted on a pole. And then there are add-ons. The most common are squirrel deterrents such as baffles or cones. For information, visit the National Wildlife Federation's site at www.enature.com or the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service Web site at www.fws.gov/birds.

Bird food

If you put the right food out, the birds will come. In fact, bird food is the most affordable and effective birding lure. Whether sunflower, safflower, white millet, cracked corn or thistle seeds, knowing which seed your favorite bird likes guides your bird seed purchase. Buying higher-quality mixes versus mixes with fillers can ensure complete consumption, as well as minimize ground or patio debris from uneaten fillers. Filler debris attracts unwanted rodents under feeders or near your home. "Knowing the bird you want to attract, the quality of seed used and the ease-of-use in the packaging are the ABC's of an enjoyable birding experience," says Tony Vahedian, vice president and general manager, ScottsMiracle-Gro Wild Bird Food division. For easy Web information on bird food products, go to sites like Scotts' www.scottswildbirdfood.com and the Cornell Lab of Ornithology's Web site at www.birds.cornell.edu to learn the basics of quality bird seeds.

The limited time we have to relax in the great outdoors can also be the height of entertainment from a natural perspective. Putting in place the basic building blocks for attracting color and activity to our yards is easier than you think. First is recognizing what has always been in our midst and with just a few additions, realize that some of the best stimulation available isn't always in front of a monitor.

Top picks make every garden a star

From patio-perfect perennials to ever-blooming annuals and landscape shrubs, 2007 promises to be an exciting year for all things gardening.

"Gardeners can expect to find an avalanche of great new plants and earth-friendly garden products at their local garden shop," says Steve Frowine, author and professional horticulturist. As warmer weather approaches, Frowine reveals a few of his favorite garden superstars for 2007.

races with the perfectly petite clematis in the Raymond Evison Patio Clematis collection. These prolific bloomers steal the show, and are the first clematis bred to be grown in a container, window box or hanging basket. Available in bold reds, dark purples and mauves, the long-blooming clematis in this collection grow only 3 feet, and provide vertical columns of color from spring through fall. For more information on the Raymond Evison Patio Collection, visit www.evisoncllematis.com.

Garden stars

Looking for a great low-maintenance rose for your garden?

For bigger blooms and a healthy immune system, feed your plants food like this one, called Dynamite.

Gardeners can expect continuous blooms and outstanding disease resistance, but on a compact, vigorous plant from the 2007 AARS Winner, The Rainbow Knock Out Rose, a coral-pink landscape shrub rose.

Other new Star Roses include Liv Tyler, an irresistibly beautiful hybrid tea with a delicate coral-pink color that has a powerful apricot scent and the Drift Series of groundcover roses, which are ideal for hanging baskets and containers. To find out more about these and other fine Star Roses, visit www.starroses.com.

Pretty pots for pretty plants

This spring containers will be available in a wider selection of materials, patinas and contemporary colors than have never been offered before. You can create elegant accents inside and outside your home with one or more of the latest "designer" containers from Campania International (www.campaniainternational.com). Look for Campania's new Iron-Lite Classic Urns that are stylish lightweight replicas of cast iron urns that appear to be real, but are light enough to use inside or out.

You can start your container garden off right this season with high-quality planting soil. Homeowners on the east coast should keep an eye out for a brand new organic potting soil called Organic Mechanics (www.organicmechanicsoil.com). This all-purpose, peat-free, potting soil is 100 percent organic and promises to improve plant performance. And be sure to try Zeba (www.zeba.com) superabsorbent cornstarch-based granules to decrease water usage in your containers while increasing soil moisture retention.

Gorgeous grass and gardens

Gardeners are realizing that great gardens begin underground with nutrient-rich soil. Products like LazyMan (www.lazymangardener.com) Liquid Soil Aerator and LazyMan Organic Soil Conditioner make it easy to loosen hard packed soils and aggregate sandy soil. Now you don't have to painstakingly mechanically aerate your lawn and garden, and then after all that work, clean up the mess! Just spray on, water, and relax!

Say goodbye to pests

Once deer adapt to your garden, some experts say, they adopt it. Act now and protect your prized plants, trees, shrubs and gardens from foraging deer.

Messina Wildlife Management has developed Deer Stopper, the first pleasant smelling deer repellent that works by taste and smell, in any kind of weather, even under the snow! The product dries clear, and it will not burn your plants. Deer Stopper is OMRI certified organic and lasts for 30 days before reapplication. For information on Deer Stopper and other critter repellents, visit www.deerstopper.com. Your gardens will be glad you did.

Perpetual petunias

Pot 'em or plant 'em and they'll perpetually bloom all season long. Ride the Wave Petunia introduces the Easy Wave Beachcomber mix for 2007. This new beachy mix is a combination of Blue, Shell Pink and Coral Reef, and will add pizzazz to your patio, beds and landscapes. To view 2007 introductions and the rest of the Ride the Wave family, visit www.wave-rave.com.

Now grab a friend and head to your nearest garden center to pick up a few of these favorites, which are sure to be stars in your garden this spring.

The big beetle battle

Japanese beetles can't bite people because their jaws aren't strong enough to break through human skin. However, Japanese beetles chomp on everything else, including 238 different kinds of foliage. The National Lawn and Garden Association says Japanese beetles cause more than a billion dollars worth of damage each year to shrubs, flowers, especially roses, fruit trees, home gardens and vineyards, lawn grass and farm crops.

Japanese beetles are clumsy fliers and they don't travel very far.

You can easily shake them off of your plants into a pail of soapy water where they will quickly perish. If you pick them off your plants by hand, they will quite often stick to your fingers but are easily flicked away. Don't use Japanese beetle traps because they will draw beetles in from your neighbor's yard and you will have more than ever.

The beetle larvae (grubs) are more devastating than the adults because there are more of them.

One thousand flying adult Japanese beetles seen in early summer will lay 50,000 grubs by fall. Milky Spore is the only safe and sure way to stop them. Developed by USDA, Milky Spore will last 15 to 20 years and is guaranteed to remain viable in the soil for 10 years.

For a free booklet on Milky Spore and conducting neighborhood campaigns against the Japanese beetle, call (800)801-0061 or visit www.milkyspore.com.

Hot keys to stay cool

By Andrea Crisafulli-Russo
When the temperature outside begins to climb, many people seek the cool comfort of indoor air conditioning. Like your furnace or hot water tank, your air conditioning unit is something you may see everyday but seldom pay attention to, until you need it...or it breaks.

Take a moment to read these keys to enjoying cost-effective operation and increasing your air conditioning's life expectancy.

- One of the most common air conditioning problems is almost too obvious to mention, but it's the largest single source of inefficiency: if your air conditioning is on, be sure to close your home's windows and outside doors.

- The refrigerant charge (the amount of "cooling gas" in the system) should match the manufacturer's specifications. Inadequately trained service technicians often fail to find refrigerant charging problems or even worsen existing problems by adding refrigerant to a system that is already full.

- If the refrigerant leaks, simply adding refrigerant may do more damage. A trained technician should repair any leak, test the repair, and then charge the system with the correct amount of refrigerant.

Annual maintenance, including changing dirty filters and cleaning air conditioning coils to avoid premature failure of the compressor or fan, will allow the air conditioner to work at peak efficiency, and save potential financial headaches. Airflow is key.

- The compressor and fan's electronic controls can wear out, especially when the air conditioner turns on and off frequently. Because corrosion of wire and terminals is also a problem in many systems, electrical connections and contacts should be checked during a professional service call.

Annual maintenance is highly recommended because it insures a steady improvement in air conditioning performance while steadily decreasing your energy costs. These outdoor units deserve the attention; after all, they are subject to all the elements of living here in the Great Northeast!

Remember, good service technicians know what to look for both inside and outside your home.

Crisafulli Bros has friendly factory trained and certified air conditioning technicians that won't let you freeze or boil. Call them today for fast, reliable and expert service: 449-1782.

The National Lawn and Garden Association says Japanese beetles cause more than a billion dollars worth of damage each year.

Home improvement without the hassle

Revitalizing the exterior of your home this spring can be stress-free, simple and low maintenance with the right products. As you prepare to tackle your outdoor home improvement chores and fix ups, you should consider easy care and hassle-free products that take the aggravation out of enhancing the curb appeal of your home. With these handy tips, you can enjoy your yard and have a dazzling home exterior, with much less effort.

The right tools

The aggravation of dealing with a heavy, tangled garden hose is arguably the most stressful part of maintaining your lawn and garden. You see it all the time, a garden hose spread out all over the lawn because it's such a hassle to rewind. One device that offers a solution to this problem is the No-Crank hose reel from Hydro Industries (www.no-crank.com). This hose reel, powered by water and nothing else, offers hands-free rewinding of your heavy garden hose with just a simple push of a lever. It utilizes an internal water piston engine to rewind the hose rather than springs, electricity or batteries. There are a variety of different models with hose capacity up to 175 feet and various designs with additional features such as an auto sort guide, swivel base, hose cleaning mechanism and more.

Maintaining a meticulous lawn and garden can be a daunting and time-consuming project for any homeowner. This year, benefit from the effectiveness of combining three crucial steps for preparing and maintaining a healthy lawn and garden. Consider products like the Spray 'n Feed sprinkler with built-in feeder and measuring cup, from Garden-Essence (www.garden-essence.com) that combines the irrigation and fertilization processes automatically. While irrigating your lawn and garden, the sprinkler dilutes the required amount of fertilizer and automatically disperses it easily and efficiently. Add the Universal Sprinkler On/Off RC system to truly maximize convenience. This battery operated remote allows you to control water flow, redirect the position of the sprinkler and turn the water on or off without getting wet. The system fits all hose end products, and can also be used to turn on and off a variety of water features.

Outside appeal

The exterior of your home takes extreme abuse due to the constant exposure to the elements. A low-maintenance, durable and attractive trim alternative is the ideal way to enhance the architectural style of your home. For example, the folks at AZEK Building Products (www.azek.com) recommend their trimboards and mouldings as a wood replacement option that will outsmart Mother Nature and insects. With the beauty and striking similarity to painted lumber, you can't tell the difference, until you realize that it's not rotting, warping and the paint is not peeling! These materials can trim corners, doors, windows, soffits, fascia, columns, and there's even a beadboard product for overhangs and porch ceilings. To complete the trim detail, AZEK Mouldings are available in a variety of popular profiles including historic replications.

Deck planters, window boxes, gates and garden arbors can beautify your backyard and add charm to any home exterior, while maintaining their exquisite beauty year after year. Walpole Woodworkers (www.walpolewoodworkers.com), specialists in outdoor decor, are now using low maintenance AZEK material to manufacture backyard amenities with old-world craftsmanship. Imagine rose vines growing over a completely moisture-resistant arbor. How about a deck planter that doesn't mind being watered every day? Or, imagine a magnificent entry gate that will never need repainting. Sound too good to be true? Not anymore. These decorative accents, part of Walpole's Freeport Collection, can accent any home exterior with low-maintenance and pure elegance.

Now you can enjoy the simplicity of an auto-rewind hose reel, a hassle-free sprinkler, the easy-care style of non-wood trim and added charm of exterior accents. For information, visit the Web sites.

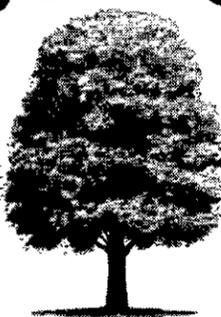

The Spray 'n Feed sprinkler features a built-in feeder and measuring cup.

Lotion helps to keep green thumbs supple

Now that winter has faded and warmer temperatures have finally arrived, one of America's favorite pastimes is once again taking center stage. According to the U.S. National Gardening Association, 85 million or 74 percent of American households participated in some kind of do-it-yourself lawn and garden activities in 2006, and that number is expected to grow in 2007.

So many people enjoy gardening because it offers an escape from our hectic lives by reducing feelings of stress and stimulating the senses, it's a great way to get some exercise while at the same time enjoying the fresh air and sunshine, and it adds beauty to our surroundings.

"I love my job as a kindergarten teacher, but it can get hectic. It's so nice to be able to come home at the end of the day and tend to the flower and vegetable plants in complete silence."

Stacy Livermore

Stacy Livermore of Beaver-creek, Ore., has always enjoyed spending time in her garden. She calls it her great escape.

"I love my job as a kindergarten teacher, but it can get hectic. It's so nice to be able to come home at the end of the day and tend to the flower and vegetable plants in complete silence," she said.

But not so long ago, participating in one of her favorite activities caused Livermore a lot of pain. Because she washes her hands so often at work, and uses hard, scratchy paper towels to dry them, she says it seemed like her hands were always cracked and hurting, and not just in the wintertime either.

"I had tried just about every cream on the market to improve the situation, but nothing worked until I stumbled upon O'Keeffe's Working Hands Creme at my local feed store," says Livermore. "They were offering samples at an opportune time. That day, my hands and knuckles were cracked and bleeding. After I put it on, they felt better, so I went ahead and bought a container. Now I use it several times a day."

O'Keeffe's Working Hands Creme was developed by Livermore's fellow Oregonian, Tara O'Keeffe, a pharmacy school graduate whose rancher father had been plagued by severe splits and cracks on the skin of his hands and feet.

"Dad's skin was so dry it cracked and bled, and it hurt to shake hands," remembers O'Keeffe. "But within a week of starting to use the formulation I had developed, his bleeding hands were cured."

A decade later, millions of people across the country swear by the cream made up mainly of water and glycerin that hydrates the skin, stimulates its growth and traps moisture in the top layers.

"They recommend that you put it on once a day right before you go to bed so your hands can heal at night, but I use it more often than that," says Livermore. "I put on a little dab every time I wash

Although some people like to garden with their bare hands, experts recommend people wear gloves to protect their hands from thorns, abrasive tools, harsh chemicals and the soil itself.

my hands. It's not greasy and it absorbs really well."

In addition to using O'Keeffe's Working Hands Creme on a regular basis to heal and protect dry, chapped hands, the experts recommend gardeners also wear gloves to protect their hands from thorns, abrasive tools, harsh chemicals and the soil itself. Pick gloves appropriate for different garden chores. Cotton jersey is good for all around work, while thick leather gloves are good for wet work or work around plants with thorns or spines. For really wet work, including handling chemicals, wear rubber or plastic gloves with cotton liners.

Use tools to work the soil instead of digging in the dirt with your bare hands. Soil and potting mixes, whether in the garden or in containers, deplete moisture from the skin on hands and fingers. Prolonged contact with soil can be very drying to your hands. Add the abrasive effect of grit in soil, and skin begins to lose its protective barrier to further water loss.

"I know I should wear gloves and use tools in the garden, but I prefer to work the dirt with my bare hands," says Livermore. "Thanks to O'Keeffe's Working Hands Creme, I can do that without having to endure pain."

Initially, O'Keeffe's Working Hands was sold primarily in the cosmetics aisle at such stores as Walgreens, but it has recently started showing up at home improvement stores like Lowe's, as well as farm stores like Tractor Supply. It's also sold online through the company Web site: www.okeeffescompany.com.

Keep your deck a safe place to hang out

Gas prices are on the rise again, the number of people traveling is down and families are choosing to spend more time at home enjoying their decks. With so many accessories available that make the yard an oasis -- from solar fountains and fire pit tables to stainless gas grills -- the deck extends the living space and creates an at-home vacation spot.

Whether for entertainment, family time or just quiet enjoyment, a well-built deck offers a safe haven for outdoor living. A deck offers increased square footage and better pay back than a kitchen or bath remodel. As with any sound investment, it's important to do proper maintenance to preserve the integrity of the deck.

The number of deck failures and resulting injuries has been increasing at an alarming rate. Between August 2004 and December 2005, the U.S. news media reported 225 injuries and one fatality from deck collapses caused by ledger connection failures. Many more deck failures -- with and without injuries -- went unreported in the media.

In an effort to save lives and prevent injuries, the North American Deck and Railing Association, Inc. (NADRA) declared May as the first Deck Safety Month in 2006. Now in its second year, the purpose of the promotion is to increase public awareness of the necessity for regular inspection and maintenance of existing decks, and proper installation of new decks.

Reasons for a deck collapsing range from age of the deck, poor maintenance, exceeding load capacity to improper building methods. Deck failures can be avoided. It's a matter of making the consumer aware of the necessity of choosing a professional deck contractor, regular maintenance and inspection, and knowing the limits of the deck structure.

Mike Beaudry, executive vice president for NADRA states, "A simple, annual deck inspection doesn't take long or require special tools, but it's a great investment. It can help prevent unnecessary acidents, and keep a deck a safe place. Each May, we will encourage homeowners to get an annual deck inspection, with the goal of reducing the number of deck injuries suffered each year."

"May is a great time to make a deck-check," Beaudry continues, "especially in locations where there's a lot of snow and ice, as a deck could develop a trouble spot over the winter. A professional inspection will examine every inch of a deck, evaluate the deck's capacity limits, identify problem areas and provide a map of what to keep your eye on in the future."

Researchers at Virginia Tech University, in cooperation with the International Code Council, have produced a "Manual for the Inspection of Residential Wood Decks and Balconies." The manual is intended for use by homeowners, home inspectors, contractors, engineers and builders interested in the inspection of residential wood decks. Frank Woeste, a deck-safety expert of Virginia Tech, who helped develop the inspection manual, notes, "I'm aware of deck collapses with no one on them, further demonstrating the need for homeowners to get involved and interested in their deck's structural integrity." For more information or to purchase the inspection manual, go to www.nadra.org.

Complete a deck check every May for Deck Safety Month, and you'll have the peace of mind that comes from knowing your family and friends can safely enjoy your deck all summer long. NADRA's 10-Point Deck Inspection Checklist is available at www.nadra.org

For extra safety, check out any deck accessories you use. As with any source of fire or heat, such as grills, fire pits, heaters of any kind and candles, make sure they are safely placed away from flammable surfaces, use caution and follow manufacturers' directions. Make sure steps and pathways are well lit and all lighting, electrical

Checklist can help with deck inspection

NADRA has available a 10-point checklist on its Web site, www.nadra.org. Here is a sampling of what to look for when you inspect your deck:

- Split or decaying wood — Check ledger board (deck connection to the house), support posts and joists, deck boards, railings and stairs for cracks, soft or spongy wood, insect holes and other signs of damaged wood.

- Fasteners — Check the entire deck for loose or corroded fasteners including nails, screws, or anchors in the ledger board. Tighten any loose fasteners, and pound in any popped up nails and, if a fastener appears rusted or corroded, consider replacing it.

- Railings and banisters — These should be secure with no give when pushed. Rail height should meet codes. Rails should be no more than four inches apart to keep small children and pets from squeezing through.

- Flashing — Be sure the flashing is sound and firmly in place to direct water away from sensitive areas like ledger boards.

- Stairs — Make sure railings, handrails, risers and stringers are securely attached and not decayed. The opening behind the stair treads should be no more than four inches high. Always keep stair pathways clear of planters, decor, toys and other items that can present a tripping hazard.

- Cleaning and protecting — Clean away any leaves and debris that can be slippery and promote mildew. If needed, apply a new waterproofing coating to help prevent split, decayed wood and loosened fasteners.

outlets and appliances are up to code, in good condition and childproof if necessary.

Test all deck furniture for sturdiness. Childproof storage boxes and benches. Store all dangerous products safely away from children, including barbecue lighter fluids and matches. If you have trees surrounding your deck, look for decaying or broken limbs that could fall on the deck.

Light the way in landscaping

Landscape lighting used to be simple. A few recessed cans lining the front path, a couple downlights tucked in the trees, and you were done. Not anymore. When it comes to the great outdoors, homeowners have seen the light.

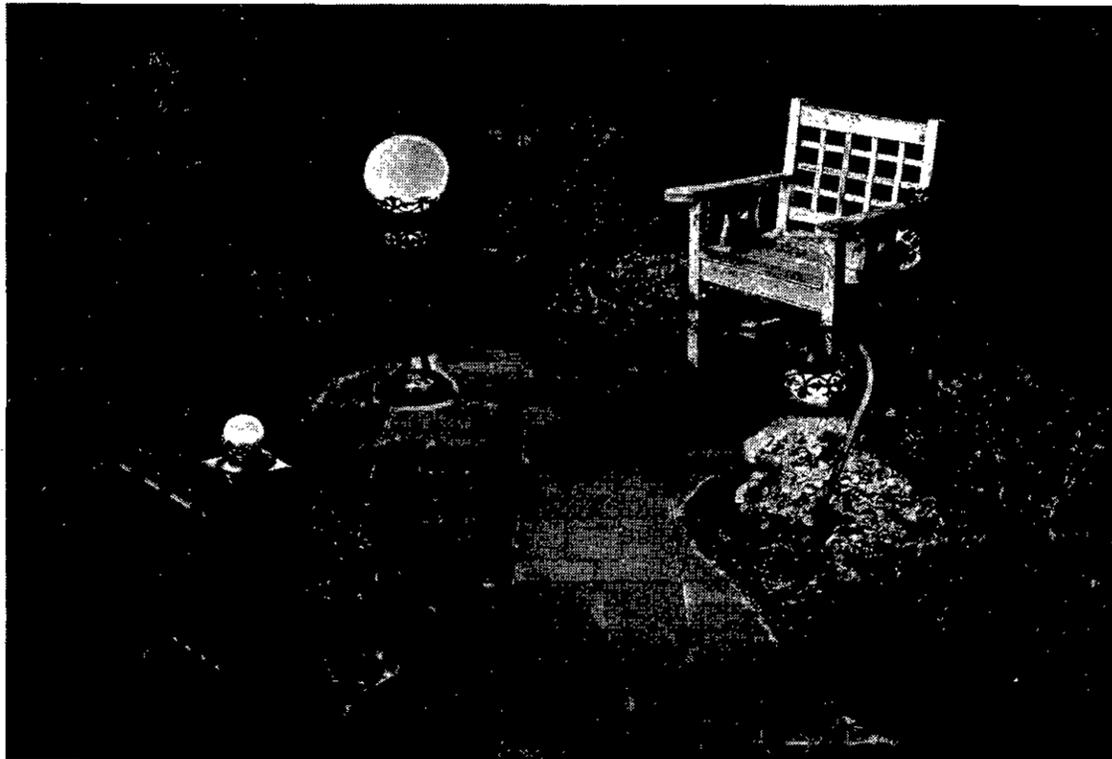

"Today, people aren't just lighting up the walkways so they can see their way to the door at night, and putting floods near the garage. They're finding ways to illuminate the landscaping they've spent so much time and money on so they can enjoy it at night," says Joe Rey-Barreau, education consultant for the American Lighting Association and associate professor at the University of Kentucky.

Rey-Barreau tracks the latest trends among lighting dealers and designers and says, "This spring, we're going to see a lot of changes in outdoor lighting practices. Landscape lighting is now being used as a means to extend living space so people can enjoy the best of both the inside and outside worlds. I see the focus this spring being on techniques that bring light closer to the house, and make the space more aesthetically pleasing in an unobtrusive manner," he says.

Gone are the days of the big, bold lanterns that used to line people's walks. Rey-Barreau says this year, the hottest trend will be to instead decorate with light from non-visible sources. Among the options for this: uplighting, downlighting and shadowing.

Uplighting is produced by shining a light up on a tree, statue or bench in the yard to highlight to give it definition, texture or even dimensionality. Downlighting is created by hanging the light source in the trees or from the rooftop and shining it on the area below. This technique is often used to improve visibility for security reasons. And with shadowing, you use spot or flood lights placed at ground level, or in-ground fixtures placed in front of an object to throw its shadow on a wall behind it as a decorative feature.

Richard Lentz, president of Lentz Landscape Lighting in Dallas, Texas, says people's desire to enhance their outdoor living space has played a big role in his business in recent years. "People have come to realize it's a shame to just ignore all those great spaces they've created outdoors because it's dark outside, so they're hiring us to come up with ways to incorporate the landscape into their night life," says Lentz.

Lighting dealers and designers have seen a boom in business from people who want to enhance the lighting in their outdoor living space.

Two examples of how Lentz

uses lighting to transform a space for his clients:

- Creating a moonlighting effect.

For a courtyard off the dining room, kitchen or even a bedroom, it is possible to create a moonlight effect that makes it seem like the courtyard is part of the space. "In this situation, we would install a Mercury Vapor light that casts cool light high in a tree to create the effect of moonlight, and complement it with a halogen lamp that lights up a fountain, sculpture or bench in the courtyard," says Lentz.

- Lighting the way.

One of the most popular ways to light a walkway is with a runway effect where there are lights on both sides of the path, but Lentz says that distracts from the environment. "I prefer to filter light through the trees above to light up a sidewalk or steps. It gives you a real nice, natural effect."

While expanding living space and decorating with lighting are popular reasons to put in landscape lighting, security is also an important factor. Chris Primous, product manager for Progress Lighting says he's seeing a trend towards people installing lighting that will keep their homes bright and visible from the road.

"Just because the purpose of the light is security doesn't mean it shouldn't be decorative," Primous says. "You can use spotlights and flood lights to both light the area and accent prevalent architectural features of the home's structure or notable landscaping elements."

For instance, if the home has a beautiful stone facade, a grazing technique with carefully placed accent fixtures (ideally six to twelve inches from the surface) will bring out the texture to create a visually stunning picture from the curb. Similarly, tall columns can be highlighted by using closely placed ground-mounted spotlights or in-grade fixtures with very narrow sources that will really bring out the height and showcase the architectural features of the column.

Jeff Dross of Kichler Lighting points out, "People have come to realize that if you want your home's lighting job done right, you need to bring in a professional. As you get more creative people involved, it leads to more creative solutions and a better result. We're seeing a definite maturing of the field."

IN BRIEF

Nursing home plans home safety seminar

Good Samaritan Lutheran Health Care Center will hold a seminar on home safety and design with the senior citizen in mind on Thursday, May 17, from 6:30 to 8 p.m. It's in the large dining room at the center, 125 Rockefeller Road, Delmar.

Led by Dean Whittemore, director of rehabilitation services, the seminar will highlight ways individuals can adapt their living spaces so they can remain at home into their senior years. The benefits of intensive home safety assessments will also be discussed. Professionals from local durable medical equipment companies will be on hand to demonstrate products designed to maximize safety and functionality in the home. Church offering contemporary service

The Slingerlands Community United Methodist Church, 1499 New Scotland Road, Slingerlands, is offering a contemporary worship service titled "A Gathering" Thursday evenings from 6:30 to 7.

During the service lay persons of the church will offer spirituality, including meditation, discussions, Christian teachings, music and song.

Informality will be the theme throughout, and participants are encouraged to dress informally, and suggest subjects for discussion.

Jane Conklin, laity coordinator for the church, said that the new program is being introduced "to offer an alternative time and approach to the conventional Sunday morning worship. We want to really be comfortable as well as informal at the Gathering and as part of that we will meet as a group in our sanctuary or in our library."

Children are welcome, and child care will be provided.

Methodist church to hold dance

The First United Methodist Church of Delmar will hold a dance Saturday, May 19, at 7 p.m. in Fellowship Hall. Admission is free. Proceeds from the sale of refreshments will benefit the RPMs, a local youth group affiliated with several area churches.

Come enjoy music from the '50s through the '80s. There will be a DJ, a swing dance lesson given by Louise and Paul Guiliano at 7:30 p.m. and an exhibition dance at 9 p.m. This is a family event and all are welcome.

The church is at 428 Kenwood Ave. in Delmar.

Plant sale fundraiser at St. Thomas

Representatives from the St. Thomas youth ministry program will be selling a variety of plants after all Masses during the weekend of May 12 and 13 outside the church and school. The plants have been purchased from "Our Family's Harvest." All proceeds will support the six youth attending the National Catholic Youth Conference in Columbus, Ohio, in November.

Joseph O'Leary

Joseph O' Leary, 67, of Ravena, died Sunday, April 29, at his residence after a long illness.

Born in England, he lived in Ireland until he was 7. He then moved to the United States and lived in Germantown before moving to Ravena. In 2002, he retired from CSX, where he had worked for many years. Currently, he was working at Wal-Mart in Glenmont. He was an Army veteran who volunteered at the Stratton VA Medical Center in Albany.

Survivors include his wife, Betty A. O'Leary of Ravena; four daughters, Lisa Rogers of Delhi, Tammy Whiting of Selkirk, Shelly Gouza of Freehold and Amanda O'Leary of Delmar; two brothers, Timothy and James O'Leary; a sister, Mary Kilmer; and five grandchildren.

Services were from the Babcock Funeral Home, Ravena. Contributions may be made to the Ravena Rescue Squad or to the Hospice Unit at the Stratton VA Medical Center, 113 Holland Ave., Albany 12208.

with Gen. Eisenhower's Allied Headquarters in Britain, France and Germany. She completed her master's and doctoral studies at Syracuse University and served in home economics and educational research positions in Mississippi and New York. She married Frank J. Mack in 1952. They resided in Delmar until 2004, when they moved to Hampden. In addition to her husband, survivors include her daughter, Mary Ann McGuire of Brewer, Maine; and three grandchildren.

Services were from Brookings-Smith, Clark-Piper Chapel, 55 South Main St., Brewer, Maine. Interment was in Glens Falls. Contributions may be made to St. Matthew's Church, 70 Western Ave., Hampden, Maine 04444 or the Food Pantry of St. John-St. Ann's Church, 88 Fourth Ave., Albany 12202.

Cavan Kelsey Jr.

Cavan Kelsey Jr., of Albany, died Saturday, May 5.

Survivors include his wife, Mary Louise Kelsey; a son,

John Kelsey; two daughters, Theresa Kelsey and Caroline Smith; a brother, Meldon Kelsey; 10 grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

He graduated from Christian Brothers Academy in 1948 and was active in the alumni association, working on their yearly phone-a-thon, bingo and class reunions. He was a past president of the academy's alumni association. He enlisted in the Marine Corps during the Korean War, serving in the 7th Tank Battalion. He was a motor pool dispatcher and a drill instructor at Camp Pendleton, discharged with the rank of sergeant.

He became active in veterans affairs, serving in the Capt. William Dale O'Brien Detachment of the Marine Corps League. He was the detachment commandant during the Vietnam War and Desert Storm. He served on the City of Albany Joint Veterans Committee for more than 50 years. Cavan retired from Pitney Bowes after 32 years as a service technician. After his retirement, he worked at the Albany Cardio Thoracic Surgeons as a courier. He was a life member of the Marine Corps League, Tamara Post, American Legion and Korean War Veterans. He was a communicant of St. Teresa of Avila Church.

Services were from the McVeigh Funeral Home, Albany. Interment will follow the Mass in Calvary Cemetery, Glenmont. Contributions may be made to St. Teresa of Avila School, 8 Hollywood Ave.

Everything's coming up tulips

Festival celebrates city's Dutch heritage with music, food and fun

Amanda Benincasa will conclude her reign as Tulip Queen this weekend.

Dutch treat: costumes and tulips are the order of the day during Albany's Tulip Festival.

By ROB IRWIN
irwinr@spotlightnews.com

This weekend, thousands of visitors from across the region will descend upon Albany's Washington Park to welcome spring at the city's 59th annual Tulip Festival.

Featuring live music, food, activities for kids and, of course, hundreds of thousands of tulips, the 2007 Tulip Festival has something for everyone.

"Tulip Festival weekend is always an exciting time in our city. From the annual street scrubbing on Friday to the festival's closing hours on Mother's Day, this event draws thousands of people from near and far," said Albany Mayor Jerry Jennings. "I encourage everyone to visit our beautiful and historic Washington Park which will be brimming with fun and entertainment for all ages."

The event kicks off at 11:30 a.m. Friday, May 11, with a carillon concert, followed by the traditional Dutch street scrubbing at noon. A reservation-only luncheon and fashion show at 12:30 p.m. bids farewell to last year's Tulip Queen, Amanda Benincasa, and her court. Beginning at 5:30 p.m. that evening, Washington Park will be the scene of the festival's official kick-off party, which will feature acoustic entertainment by the Empire State Wind Orchestra, Ramblin' Jug Stompers and Ten27. Food and beverages will be available.

Things start up again Saturday, May 12, at 10:30 a.m. with events leading up to the 2007 Tulip Queen's coronation at noon.

At 12:30 p.m., Saturday's rock heavy main stage shows get under way.

"As always, there's fantastic entertainment on all the stages," said Susan Cleary, the city's director of special events.

Saturday will feature performances from several artists, including the legendary Joan Jett and the Blackhearts, known for their hit, "I Love Rock 'n' Roll." Other acts on Saturday include Buddahead, The Cinematics Saturday events wrap up with the Royal Tulip Ball, an evening of dining and dancing to honor the Tulip Queen and court. Tickets are required.

On Sunday, Mother's Day, the main stage musical selections mellow down a bit, featuring a performance by jazz musician Chris Botti. The eighth annual Mother of the Year award will be presented by Bellevue Women's Hospital.

Over at the amphitheater, audiences can enjoy performances by Lara Herscovitch, Johanna, Mudfunk and rock band Stephen Kellogg and The Sixers.

On both Saturday and Sunday, in addition to the music, the Tulip Festival will host more than 100 crafters from all along the Eastern Seaboard, a fine arts show and a KidZone area featuring a stage and tent area. KidZone will have face painters, design-a-doll activities, magic shows and the Tri-City Valley Cats.

And the event's namesake — the tulips — should be popping up for a visit.

This year, the city planted 207,000 tulip bulbs. Cleary said due to the cooler weather, they have gotten a really good start.

"It looks like we're in really good shape for the festival this year," she said. "We're nicely on schedule."

During the festival's 59 years, the event has taken on a new identity.

"Over the years, it has become a rite of spring in the area," said Cleary.

"It began as a celebration of Albany's Dutch heritage," the wooden shoes.

"One of the nice things about (the Tulip Festival) is the basic framework of the event is basically the same, we just change the core of what goes into it," said Cleary.

Visitors who come year after year can still "expect great new things as they're walking through," she added.

Cleary said the Tulip Festival, which draws anywhere from 80,000 to 100,000 people, is one of the city's annual marquee events.

"It's the largest outdoor festival the city puts on," said Cleary. "We're looking forward to a great three-day event."

Still lovin' rock and roll: Joan Jett will appear at the Tulip Festival on Saturday.

and Under the Influence of Giants.

At the same time, the amphitheater stage will feature performances of blues, bluegrass, jazz and party songs.

Eagles move into contention

The Bethlehem baseball team did exactly what it set out to do last week — earn some valuable Suburban Council victories.

The Eagles defeated Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake, Mohonasen and Shaker to raise their league record to the .500 mark and position themselves for a Section II, class AA playoff berth.

In last Tuesday's 10-2 victory over Burnt Hills, Bethlehem (5-5 league, 8-6 overall) broke open a close game with a four-run fourth inning and put the Spartans away with three runs in the seventh.

Alex Sobiecki hit a double and two singles and drove in two runs to lead the Eagles' 10-hit attack. Kevin Dumicich added a home run and a single.

Bethlehem came back last Wednesday with a 4-1 home win against Mohonasen. The Eagles scored twice in the bottom of the fourth inning and added two runs in the bottom of the sixth to seal their victory.

Lucas Nitsche and Craig Wilcox had two hits apiece for Bethlehem. Nitsche and Wilcox doubled and singled.

The Eagles capped their three-game sweep of Suburban Council opponents with a 6-1 victory over Shaker Friday. Bethlehem spotted Shaker a first inning run before tying the game in the top of the second and taking the lead for good with three runs in the fourth inning.

Mike Fish singled twice for the Eagles, who took advantage of four Shaker errors.

After visiting Ballston Spa Monday, Bethlehem hosts Suburban Council Gold Division leading Guilderland Wednesday. The Eagles take on Troy Saturday in a non-league game.

Sectional

— Ballston Spa and Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake — that have been at the varsity level for less than three years.

If Niskayuna can't take advantage of this field this year, it will be a surprise.

• Can a top seed win the Section II, Class AA baseball title? As of now, it looks like a distinct possibility.

Guilderland has been the most consistent team in the Suburban Council, which is a good sign for the Dutchmen. In previous years, Guilderland had the offense and the pitching to be a top-tier team, but errors did the Dutchmen in against such Suburban powers as Shaker, Shenendehowa and Colonie. But Guilderland's defense has improved each of the last two years, which has vaulted the Dutchmen to the top.

Over in the Big 10, league co-leaders Christian Brothers Academy and LaSalle have the tools for Sectional success — solid lineups, good pitching and defenses that don't make mistakes. LaSalle owns a slight advantage over CBA after beating the Brothers last month, but if CBA beats the Cadets in Wednesday's rematch, the Brothers can position themselves for a deep playoff run as the Big 10's No. 1 seed.

One disclaimer about the class AA playoffs: it's a wide open field. Colonie, Niskayuna, Shaker, Bethlehem, Troy, Amsterdam and Schenectady are all quality teams capable of pulling off upsets. If Guilderland, CBA or LaSalle are going to win the class AA title, they can't suffer any breakdowns along the way.

• Finally, will this be the year a Big 10 team wins the class AA softball championship? Unless it's Troy, the answer is no, and I don't think Troy will win it.

The Flying Horses are the last remaining unbeaten class AA team, and that includes a victory over four-time defending champion Shen. But here's the catch — Troy's league schedule isn't nearly as tough as Shen's league schedule. Troy doesn't play Colonie, Shaker and Saratoga twice like Shen does. If the Flying Horses are fortunate, they get challenged by a team like Catholic Central or Schenectady. Shen, meanwhile, is challenged by nearly every Suburban Council team.

Strength of schedule won't factor into where Troy and Shen are seeded for Sectionals, but it will factor into which team winds up hoisting the class AA championship plaque. On that front, I would favor Shen or any other Suburban Council team that reaches the title game.

Ladouceur leads BC offense

Tee Ladouceur had a big week for the Bethlehem girls lacrosse team.

The senior scored 12 goals and added two assists to lead the Lady Eagles to Suburban Council victories over Colonie and Columbia last week.

Ladouceur's scoring spurt began with last Wednesday's 16-2 victory over Colonie on Senior Night. Ladouceur led the way with six goals, while Erica Hill contributed four goals. Lauren Wendth added a hat trick for Bethlehem (8-2 league, 8-3 overall).

Ladouceur remained red hot the next day against Columbia. She scored six more goals and dished out two assists to help the Lady Eagles earn a 19-2 victory.

Hill also came up big for Bethlehem against Columbia with a four-goal, two-assist performance. Kayleigh Hines chipped in two goals and four assists, and Wendth added two goals.

Bethlehem has a critical week ahead of it in its pursuit of another Suburban Council title. After facing Shaker Monday, the Lady Eagles travel to Niskayuna Wednesday and league-leading Guilderland Friday.

District and must state the name and residence of the candidate. A copy of such petitions may be obtained at the Office of District Clerk in the Bethlehem Central School District during regular school hours. AND FURTHER NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that applications for absentee ballots will be obtainable between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, except holidays, from the District Clerk. Completed applications for absentee ballots must be received by the District Clerk at least seven (7) days prior to the vote if the ballot is to be mailed to the voter, or the day before the election, if the ballot is to be delivered personally to the voter. Absentee ballots must be received by the District Clerk not later than 5:00 p.m. on May 15, 2007. A list of all persons to whom absentee ballots shall have been issued will be available in the office of the District Clerk from 8:30 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. prevailing time on each of the five days prior to the day of the election, except Saturday, May 12 and Sunday, May 13, 2007, and on the day set for the election. Any qualified voter may challenge the acceptance of the ballot of any person on such list, by making his/her challenge and reasons therefor known to the Inspector of Election before the close of the polls. AND FURTHER NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the qualified voters of the School District shall be entitled to vote in said annual vote and election. A qualified voter is one who is (1) a citizen of the United States of America, (2) eighteen (18) years of age or older, and (3) resident with the School District for a period of thirty (30) days next preceding the annual vote and election. The School District may require all persons offering to vote at the budget vote and election to provide one form of proof of residency pursuant to Education Law section 2018-c. Such form may include a driver's license, a non-driver identification card, a utility bill, or a voter registration

Eagles

Eagles overcome slow start

Bethlehem had some difficulty Saturday dealing with another Big 10 team, LaSalle. But the Eagles outscored the Cadets 6-2 in the second half to pull out a 9-6 non-league win.

The game was delayed for 35 minutes when LaSalle arrived late because of a miscommunication as to what time the game was supposed to start. The Cadets quickly made up for it, though, by scoring the first two goals to take a 2-0 lead into the second quarter.

"Being on the field warming up for 90 minutes and having to wait for the other team to arrive deadened our legs," said Rounds. "But once (our players) saw it was going to be a tight game, they really stepped it up."

Matt DiFrancesco and Matt

Johnson led Bethlehem's surge. DiFrancesco scored four goals, and Johnson added a hat trick to help the Eagles turn the tables on LaSalle.

Bethlehem entered its non-league game against LaSalle off Suburban Council Gold Division victories over Ballston Spa and Colonie last week.

Against Ballston Spa last Tuesday, the Eagles jumped out to a 4-1 lead after the first quarter and cruised to a 10-5 victory. Johnson and DiFrancesco were Bethlehem's main weapons in that game, with Johnson leading the way with four goals. DiFrancesco contributed three goals and three assists, and Adam Nye stopped 17 shots.

Last Thursday was senior night for Bethlehem, and appropriately a pair of seniors led the Eagles to a 10-6 victory over Colonie. Johnson scored five goals, and Carlos Mancilla added three goals. Nye made 18 saves to fend off the Garnet Raiders.

Adjustments work for Eagles

BC enters critical week with winning streak

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem boys lacrosse team isn't scoring goals at the same breakneck pace it did at the start of the season, but it isn't giving up goals at a breakneck pace either.

That second fact has helped the Eagles go on a four-game winning streak that has raised their record to 9-4 entering Tuesday's Suburban Council game against Niskayuna.

"We made some adjustments with our defensive alignment, and that's really helped us out," said Bethlehem coach Dave Rounds. "It's cut down on our penalties, and it's forced teams to shoot from the outside, rather than from point-blank range at our goalie."

The contrast has been noticeable. The Eagles have allowed fewer than seven goals in each of their last three games. Prior to that stretch, Bethlehem allowed fewer than seven goals only twice.

Besides changing the defense, Rounds and his coaching staff have encouraged Bethlehem's high-powered offense to hold on to the ball a little longer before shooting it. The extra possession time has cut down on the Eagles' goal totals, but it's also helped the defense gain some valuable down time.

"The points being reduced from the beginning of the year was all planned," said Rounds. "The scoring is down, but we're possessing the ball better and getting better looks (at the goal)."

The Eagles will have to continue their improvements under hostile conditions this week. After facing league-leading Niskayuna Tuesday, they battle Guilderland Thursday and Big 10 leader Christian Brothers Academy Friday.

"We've looked forward to this week all year because we think we're a top four team, and in order to be a top four team, we have to beat one of those teams," said Rounds.

Sectional storylines to watch for

Some interesting spring sport story lines to follow as we speed toward Section II playoff time:

- Is the Bethlehem girls lacrosse team's long reign as Sectional champions about to end? That could be the case.

The Lady Eagles are still one of the top teams in the region, but the gap has tightened to the point where they might not even win the Suburban Council.

From the
Sports Desk
Rob Jonas

Guilderland owned the top spot by 1 1/2 games over Bethlehem and two games over Shaker entering Monday's action. And with Bethlehem playing Shaker Monday, Guilderland had a chance to build a bigger lead as long as it beat Shenendehowa and Shaker defeated Bethlehem for the second time this season.

Not winning the league title isn't necessarily a death knell for Bethlehem, though. The Lady Eagles have enough talent to make a run at the Sectional championship. But so do Shaker, Guilderland and Saratoga. That makes four class A girls lacrosse teams with legitimate title hopes — something this region has rarely seen.

If Bethlehem is going to extend its streak to nine consecutive Sectional championships, it will have to earn it by beating some top-notch competition.

- Staying with lacrosse, this could also be the year where the Niskayuna boys and girls teams win Sectional titles.

The Niskayuna boys have had a couple of hiccups this season, but the Silver Warriors still look like the team to beat for the class A title. Despite graduating most of last year's starting lineup, Niskayuna has maintained a balanced attack and has received good goaltending from James Manchester. The Silver Warriors will certainly be tested in Sectionals by the likes of Guilderland, Christian Brothers Academy and Bethlehem, but they should be up to the challenge.

As for the Niskayuna girls, they were given a golden ticket this year by being moved down to class B. Instead of dealing with Bethlehem, Guilderland, Shaker and Saratoga, the Lady Warriors get a field that includes a Scotia-Glenville team that is not at the level it was at when it was a perennial Sectional champion the first half of this decade and two Suburban Council programs approach to the area. But supporters say local residents should take priority over out-of-towners when it comes to employment.

Under a provision of state civil service law, local governments are allowed to give preference to applicants who can show they have lived in the local community before taking a written test for a municipal job.

In Halfmoon, that means a person is more likely to get hired for its permanent coordinator of grant writing position if they've lived in town for at least four months before taking the June 16 written exam. In Bethlehem, anyone with the qualifications to become a supervising nurse is given a better shot at the job if they have lived in the jurisdiction for a month before applying for the job. In most of the towns in Albany County, the same rule applies for those seeking a job in local government.

In both Saratoga and Albany counties, suburban school districts like Ballston Spa, Shenendehowa, North Colonie and Guilderland rely on county civil service offices to test and rank those applying for positions. Each district has the option of giving preference to local residents as part of their hiring process.

That option hasn't blocked non-residents from taking high-profile positions and in Schenectady County, two top key officials live outside of the community where they work. One of those, John Paolino, was the subject of some criticism when he was hired as the city of Schenectady's top financial officer. Mayor Brian Stratton defended the choice, saying Paolino, a former Rotterdam town supervisor, is the best person available for the job.

In the neighboring school district of Niskayuna, Matthew Bourgeois, the assistant superintendent for business, lives outside the district. But unlike the criticism faced by Paolino, Bourgeois has been universally praised for his work. "Matt doesn't live in the district, but he works harder for this district than just about anyone else," said school board president Barbara Mauro.

The idea of giving residents a better shot at municipal jobs is a good one, said Schenectady County Legislator Joseph Suhrada, R-Rotterdam, but it doesn't always work the way it's planned.

"It's fair to say that someone who lives in the community should be given preference when local governments are hiring, but the problem comes in when they give out waivers to the rules," said Suhrada.

"If it's applied equally to everyone, a residency requirement is a good idea," he added. "But a lot of times they give out waivers to the fat cats with the big jobs, and they don't do it for the little guy. I have almost never heard of a waiver being given to a guy who drives a truck with a snow plow."

Not everyone agrees that giving preference to locals works the way it is intended to.

Mauro, who is a commissioner with the Capital District Regional Planning Commission, questioned whether residency rules are helpful. Having personally experienced the impact of New York City's requirements when her husband, Frank Mauro, worked for the city more than two decades ago, she said the rule could hurt the ability of school districts and municipalities to attract skilled workers.

"I feel very strongly about this. When Frank was working for a temporary charter revision commission in New York, we had to juggle where we were going to live and how we were going to afford it," Mauro said. "If you lived in an upscale community like Scarsdale, you would have to pay a janitor $300,000 for them to afford to raise a family. That's just a number I am taking out of the air as an example, but clearly, if you are in a high-cost suburb and require everyone to live there, you will have to dramatically raise the wages for your workforce."

"And I don't think it is very productive for our region to pit one school district, let's say Guilderland or Bethlehem, against another one like Niskayuna," said Mauro.

Towns juggle residency requirements for cops

Some require officers to live in town; others don't

By JIM FRANCO
news@spotlightnews.com

Residency requirements for police officers can be a sticky topic, as some municipalities adjust them to meet their hiring needs.

In some areas, too-strict requirements have caused officers to seek work elsewhere. For example, Troy recently lost an officer to the Bethlehem Police Department because, in part, Troy officers have to live within the city's borders whereas Bethlehem officers, after their first year of service, are only required to live in Albany County and within 25 miles of the station. During their first year with the department, however, Bethlehem officers must live in the town.

Bethlehem police Lt. Tom Heffernan said the residency requirement is not the main reason officers seek transfers to the town's department.

"We get a lot of lateral transfers, but I don't believe it is due to the residency requirement," he said. "People do come to us. Other officers seek employment with the Bethlehem Police Department; we don't look to recruit other officers from other agencies."

Some departments are forced to open up the residency requirements depending on how hard it is to recruit officers, said John Grebert, executive director of the New York State Association of Chiefs of Police.

"It would be common that most Police Benevolent Associations (PBA) would prefer not to have any residency requirements," he said. "They don't like to impose too many restrictions on themselves, and it would give them more freedom."

Proponents of residency requirements say municipal employees are paid by taxpayer dollars and should contribute to the tax base of the municipality by living there. They also claim the employees will officers can live outside the city, but it comes with a price, said Lt. Peter Frisoni. For the first six years they forfeit their annual holiday check, which officers get each December for 12 holidays whether they work them or not. The first year's check is worth $1,400, and it tops out at $2,500.

The city did change its policy of requiring officers to live within the city borders, he said, so the residency requirement is not an issue.

"The city and PBA looked at it as a win-win for both sides," he said. "Officers were not restricted to where they could live, and the city could save some money if they did not want to live in the city by not having to pay them their holiday check."

The Niskayuna Police Department, said Sgt. Daniel McManus, follows Schenectady County Civil Service law, which does not include a residency requirement but gives the municipalities the authority to give residents preference when considering new hires despite where they score on the list.

"(The PBA doesn't) like to impose too many restrictions on themselves, and it would give them more freedom."

take more of an interest in working for the community where they live.

Opponents claim it reduces the pool of qualified candidates and, in the case of police officers, makes it more difficult for employees to do their jobs because they may be less inclined to arrest their neighbors.
