more resources for schools

As more school-aged children are diagnosed with a mental disorder than ever before, schools are struggling to keep up with the necessary resources to cope with the problem.

Assistant professor of school psychology at the University at Albany Amanda Nickerson said 10 percent of children are affected by some type of mental disorder. That equals about two students per classroom, but a typical school district has only one school psychologist per 1,000 children, said Nickerson. "Schools really try to do the best they can with their resources, but a lot more resources need to be put into mental health."

According to Nickerson, the public has become more aware of the numbers of students in the classroom with mental disorders because the trend is to treat these children in regular settings rather than in private care facilities.

"Inclusion is the trend for two reasons: cost;

Town reconsiders pesticide ban as pests chew up fields

By JIM CUOZZO

Grubs are running amok on Bethlehem fields, and the parks and recreation administrator is urging the town board to review the ban on pesticides.

Nan Lanahan said she has received numerous letters and calls from residents saying the soccer park is infested with grubs, the larvae of Japanese beetles. Also, near the pool area, masses of caterpillars are clinging to trees.

Lanahan and other officials said they are concerned that when the town takes over the day-to-day operation of Colonial Acres golf course, the grubs will chew up the greens and create divots.

"It is imperative that we are able to use some kind of pesticide on the golf course," Lana-han said.

The town went pesticide-free in 2000, banning the use of all pesticides on property owned, operated or maintained by the town.

Several fathers of soccer players attended the Wednesday, May 9, town board meeting urging the board to repeal the pesticide ban.

environmental review

By JIM CUOZZO

Developers of the Vista Technology Park cleared a major hurdle on Wednesday, May 9, when the Bethlehem Town Board unanimously accepted the project's 300-page final environmental impact statement.

"This is a major milestone for them," said George Leveille, town economic development director.

The park will be located on 450 acres encompassing areas in both New Scotland and Bethlehem just off Route 85, behind Price Chopper. BBL Construction is project coordinator working with both Albany County and the town to develop 150 acres into a technology park over the next 12 years. Vista is expected to eventually employ more than 4,000 people, and generate multi-million dollar tax revenue for the towns and school districts.

"We are right on schedule with this project," said Bethlehem Supervisor Jack Cunningham.

The park will include a mix of both high-tech business and retail development. The board is expected to approve the tech park's state environmental quality review process by the end of the month.

Along with the creation of Vista Park is the construction of the $15.2 million Route 85 Slingerlands Bypass currently under way. The state Department of Transportation began work this spring to reconstruct 1.5 miles of Route 85 to allow for four lanes between Cherry Avenue Extension and Blessing Road. The highway project includes three roundabouts, all designed to

Bethlehem police charge 4 with DWI

Shawn Shelmandine, 26, of Schenectady was arrested by Bethlehem police and charged with driving while intoxicated on Saturday, May 5, after a vehicle accident in front of the post office on Delaware Avenue.

When police arrived, two vehicles were observed at the curb in front of the post office. Originally, Joseph Dembrowski, 31, of Schenectady, told police he was driving the vehicle at the time of the crash.

According to police, a witness told an officer that the driver and passenger had switched places before police arrived.

Police said Dembrowski was given multiple opportunities to tell them he wasn't driving but continued to assert that he was. While speaking with Shelmandine, police said he initially gave them the name Shawn Tompkins, which proved to be false.

According to police, Shelmandine told them he was driving and hit the other person's car. While speaking with Shelmandine police said he was visibly intoxicated, had the odor of alcohol on his breath and bloodshot eyes.

After failing field sobriety tests, Shelmandine was arrested and sent to Albany County jail on $15,000 bail. Shelmandine was charged with DWI and aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle, both misdemeanors.

Additionally, police submitted a rolled dollar bill and vial to state police for testing.

Dembrowski was charged with providing false information, a misdemeanor.

Additional arrests

• Derome William Bellamy, 44, of Albany, was arrested by Bethlehem police on Sunday, May 13, and charged with felony DWI.

Bellamy was stopped after police said he turned onto Delaware Avenue from McDonald's without using a turn signal. A license plate check showed the plate had been suspended for an insurance lapse since January.

While speaking with Bellamy, police said they observed the odor of alcohol on his breath. After failing field sobriety tests, he was arrested. Bellamy had a previous DWI arrest in 1997 in Rensselaer.

• Austin Rasheem Flowers, 35, of Albany, was arrested by Bethlehem police on Saturday, May 12, and charged with DWI.

Police said they received a report that a vehicle had hit a pole in front of Radio Shack in Delaware Plaza while making a left turn. Flowers then allegedly backed up, tried to turn again and struck the pole a second time.

When police arrived, Flowers was unable to remember how the crash occurred, said police. Due to his condition, no field sobriety tests were performed and he was transported to the hospital. A blood test was taken and submitted for testing.

• David C. Brozowski, 42, of Selkirk, was arrested by Bethlehem police on Saturday, May 12, and charged with DWI.

Brozowski was stopped along Old School Road for failure to keep right. While speaking with Brozowski police said they observed the odor of alcohol, glassy eyes and impaired speech. According to police, Brozowski admitted to drinking four beers at the Tulip Festival earlier in the day. After failing field sobriety tests, Brozowski was arrested.

• George Ernest Lynch, 58, of West Coxsackie, was arrested by Bethlehem police Saturday, May 12, and charged with DWI for driving a motor vehicle while impaired by drugs.

After a passerby told police about a vehicle driving in and out of the southbound lane on River Road, police followed the vehicle and saw the car cross the double yellow lines three times and the white fog line, almost driving off the roadway.

While speaking with Lynch, police said that they observed impaired speech, droopy eyes and that he seemed confused and slow. Lynch failed field sobriety tests and was arrested.

Blood was taken for testing. Police said that Lynch admitted to taking hydrocodone earlier in the morning.

Volunteers help lay the foundation for needy family

Locals recruiting Habitat for Humanity helpers

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Delmar residents are teaming up with Wells Fargo and Habitat for Humanity to help build a new home in the city of Albany.

Slingerlands resident Peter Smith, who works for Wells Fargo is reaching out to the community, soliciting volunteers to work from May 15 to 19 to help build a home at 27 Emmet St.

"Wells Fargo is donating $12,500 for this project, and we are responsible for having 10 people show up per day to help," said Smith who is calling on his contacts to help build the 13th Habitat home in Albany's North End in three years.

"We are trying to get as many Delmar businesses involved as possible," Smith said.

When complete, the new home will be a three-bedroom contemporary house that is EnergyStar certified for energy efficiency.

Ericka Small, director of development for Habitat, said eligible homeowners should meet three basic criteria.

"They have to have a need for adequate housing, a willingness to partner with Habitat and an ability to repay," said Small.

The average price of a Habitat home is $70,000, and buyers pay no interest. Two more homes in north Albany will be built. Albany's South End will see a makeover as well thanks to Habitat.

"We are actually ready to break ground in June on the South End renewal project on Odell Street," said Small.

The Odell Street project is part of Habitat for Humanity's Blitz Build 2007, which begins June 23. Fifty contractors from the United Group Companies will help build a home in 24 hours, similar to what's done on the popular "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition" TV show. About 600 volunteers will be needed for construction support, delegation, food, traffic control, security and maintenance.

"Long after 'Extreme Makeover' leaves, we are still going to be building homes for low-income residents," Small said.

To participate in this week's Emmet Street construction or the June 23 Blitz Build 2007, call Habitat for Humanity at 462-2993.

Jericho Drive-In adds ice cream stand

BY JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Movies at the Jericho Drive-In during its 50th anniversary season will offer an added twist. Twill, the new ice cream stand that will open to the general public on Memorial Day weekend, will sell soft and hard ice cream, shakes, sundaes and floats.

"The last two snowstorms have put us a few weeks behind, but we are trying to open up Memorial Day weekend," said Lisa Chenette, co-owner of the drive-in with her husband, Michael, since 1995.

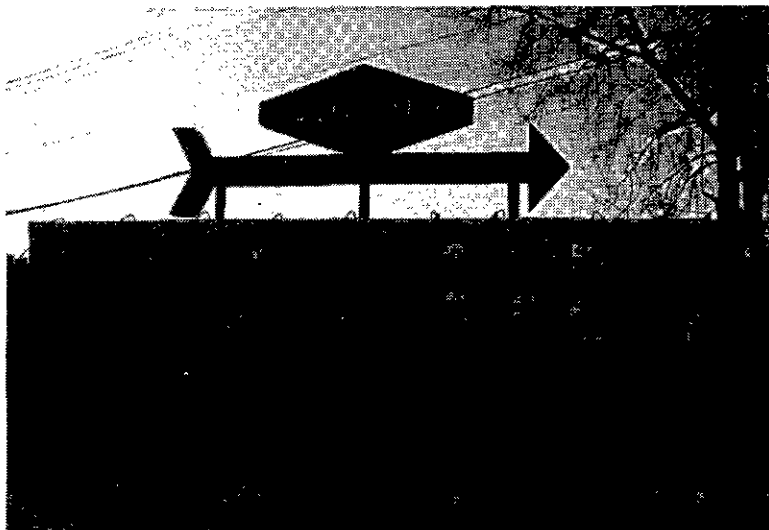

The drive-in opened in early May, and the first weekend was a busy one with "Spiderman 3," a big draw for the drive-in.

"My husband and I love the movies, and he always wanted to own his own business," Chenette said. After a few meetings with the original owners, Morris and Raphael Klein, who opened the drive-in in 1957, the Chenettes decided to purchase the drive-in and keep the theater running.

"Friday and Saturday nights are the biggest nights," said Chenette. Jericho Drive-In is one of the largest in the area, with a capacity to hold more than 500 cars.

"We are usually around 1,000 people on busy nights, but we have had 1300," Chenette said.

The Chenettes said moviegoers attend on even the soggiest of spring and summer nights.

"When it's raining, we still have a few hundred cars here," said Chenette. "It has to be pouring buckets for no one to show up."

The drive-in shows

"We have done very well."

The Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce and the drive-in are both celebrating a 50-year anniversary this year.

"I am excited and I'm not surprised - 1957 was a landmark year for a lot of Bethlehem businesses," said Marty DeLaney, chamber of commerce president.

Fifty-cent soft ice cream cones will be served on opening weekend of Twill, with other entertainment scheduled as well.

The drive-in is currently open on weekends only, but will open seven days a week through the summer beginning Memorial Day weekend. The season extends past Labor Day with the drive-in sometimes staying open through October.

Classic car cruise-ins will also be held this summer from 4 to 8 p.m. on the second and fourth Tuesdays of June, July and August. More information on Jericho Drive-In can be found online at www.jerichodrive-in.com.

everything from family films to action-adventure movies.

"We show action movies like 'Spiderman' and 'Mission Impossible' - all the blockbusters," Chenette said.

The Chenettes said they enjoy the experience of owning a drive-in and have no intention of selling anytime soon.

"A lot of drive-ins have gone by the wayside because the property is worth more than the drive-in, but that's not the case with us," said Chenette.

New Delmar deli holds celebration

Grand opening features gourmet convenience items

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

The Mobil station at 317 Delaware Ave. is becoming much more than a place for a fill-up and a soda.

New owners Barry and Marie Slaton have turned the Delmar Mobil into a gourmet delicatessen called Delish Deli. Although the Slatons opened the deli last December, the grand opening will be held Thursday through Saturday May 17 to 19.

"It will be more like a party, or our way of saying, 'Thank you,'" said Marie Slaton, who offers dishes ranging from home-cooked lasagna to real crab cakes to salmon with mango salsa.

Grand opening specials include discounted gas, free coffee and cake on Thursday, May 17, from 7 to 9 a.m., free lunch-tasting from noon to 2 p.m. and a cooking demonstration at 3 p.m.

Slaton said the Delish Deli offers convenience at a different level with a variety of gourmet items to try while waiting, or to bring home and cook.

"We've been cooking our whole life," said Slaton, who is also in the marketing business full-time in New Paltz.

"Christmas in my house is a 10-course meal and I cook for 100 people," said Slaton, who prepares all the meals at the deli. "I didn't go to the CIA (Culinary Institute of America), I went to the M.O.M."

Barry Slaton said after he retired last spring from a corporate position, he was looking for a new adventure and found it with Delish Deli.

"The reception that we have received from the people of Delmar and the surrounding towns is overwhelming," said Barry Slaton. "You won't see any hot dog rollers here, we offer big overstuffed sandwiches with fresh produce and everything is made on the premises."

"It will be more like a party, or our way of saying, 'Thank you.'"

Marie Slaton

The idea of Delish Deli, according to the Slatons, comes from convenience stores they went to while traveling in Italy.

"You could buy bruschetta, homemade pasta, anything you wanted," said Marie Slaton. "I said if there was only a place like this where you could get real food to go."

The Slatons were looking at Middletown as a site for their new gourmet deli but opted for Delmar after doing market research.

"We live in New Paltz and never heard of Delmar," said Marie Slaton, who then realized Bethlehem was the perfect location for their new business. "Our customers are very understanding and very supportive."

Store hours for the deli are 6 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday through Saturday, 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. Saturday, and 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday. A special appearance from Elmo will be on Saturday, May 19.

Lost in the forest of summer camp options

By Robin Shrager Sutor
news@spotlightnews.com

There was snow on the ground outside my house. I spread the brochures on the table dreaming of a warmer place.

I described the choices to my family. This one has a lake. That one is less of a drive from home. There's tennis over at this other place. Oh look, here's one with an indoor pool; that'll be good in case it rains.

All of the places looked like fun to my spouse and me. But this wasn't about us. We weren't planning a family vacation. We were trying to choose a summer camp for our 10-year-old.

Why, oh, why aren't there camp consultants? There are personal trainers, wedding planners and life coaches. There are professionals who will help you pick out the right colors for your wardrobe or the best couch for your living room. But there's no one to sift through and complete the summer camp applications.

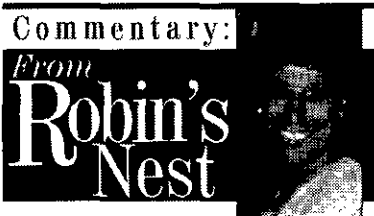

The camp information is overwhelming. The packets start pouring in before spring arrives. They come in various shapes, sizes and formats. There are small pamphlets with basic information and large booklets with glossy pages. There are lists of activities, photographs of smiling children, charts of pricing information and references to Web sites.

There are sports camps, religious camps, music camps and science camps. There are camps where you sleep away, sleep in the woods, sleep in tents, sleep in cabins or get no sleep.

So many options, so many deadlines, so little time!

Which is the best camp for your child and your family?

Some camps have transportation from various "bus stop" locations throughout the region. Other camps have buses that will come right through your neighborhood. Most camps provide a map and leave the driving to the parents.

Your child can attend half-day programs or full-day programs. Mind you, full-day camp programs still require parents to juggle work schedules because most "full-day" camps end by 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Coordinating camp and work schedules is a daunting task. Do you pay for extended care at camp? Do you hire a babysitter? Do you quit your job?

Deciphering the camp options is harder than finding the answer to those logic problems from math class.

Here's the assignment I would give to a camp consultant: Look over this pile of brochures. Consider several factors, including, but not limited to, location, cost, the variety of activities, hours of operation, and the following information:

Camp A has early drop-off beginning at 7:30 a.m., but the pool is off-site.

Camp B has a water trampoline on a lake, but it's a 15-minute drive to the bus stop plus another 45-minute bus ride to the campgrounds.

Camp C has extended hours, but only until 5:20. That's right 5:20! Not 5:30. Why 5:20?

Camp A serves free pizza on Friday.

Camp D requires you to sign up for a minimum of two-week sessions.

Camp C gives you a discount if you're a member of the sponsoring organization. If you're an out-of-town relative of a member of the sponsoring organization you also get a discount. If you're able to pick up your child by 4:20, you save $40 per week.

Camp E holds two-week sessions that start one week before Camp D.

Camp A has a site that you pass on the way to work, but that site is only open during the first five weeks of summer.

The third two-week session at Camp D starts four days before your family's one-week beach vacation.

Your child has previously attended Camps A, C, and D.

Camp E has enrichment programs, but no extended hours.

Camp D includes a box lunch every single day.

Your child is friends with two kids seriously considering Camp D, knows four kids already registered for Camp C, has met one kid who has been to Camp B, and has attended a wedding on the grounds of Camp E.

Depending on the weather, weekly theme, alignment of planets and temperature of the pool, your child alternated between enjoying or disliking Camps A, C and D. That's correct; your child will not wholly endorse any camp. On the other hand, she will not wholly renounce any camp.

Would an independent, objective camp consultant be able to make the best camp selections using the above information?

Selecting the camp or camps is only half the battle. Part two involves filling out the application forms. Each form is different.

First you need to enter basic information about your child's name, address and age.

Next you need to include the names and phone numbers of your child's doctor, dentist and the orthodontist. This has something to do with trampolines and bonfires. I just know it.

Some applications ask if your child knows how to swim. I'm never sure how to answer. If I admit that she can swim, does that mean the counselors aren't going to watch her? If I put down that she doesn't swim, will they keep her in the shallow end of the pool wearing a life vest?

It's no coincidence that the swim question is followed by the emergency contact question: In the event of an emergency, who should the camp contact if the parents cannot be reached? I would like to answer "not applicable" to that question, because I would prefer that no emergencies occur. Plus, the idea that there is an emergency and neither my husband nor I can be reached sounds quite ominous. We supply two work phones numbers, two cell phone numbers, a pager number and the ability to "press 0 and speak to a secretary." It seems highly unlikely that we couldn't be reached.

Still, I understand about backup systems, so I list Uncle Steven and Aunt Carol. Some people don't have family in the area (or their relatives are no good in emergencies), so they list friends. For example, I've agreed to be the emergency contact for my friend's child.

Now, if I'm the emergency contact for my friend's child, and my friend can't be reached and I can't be reached, does the camp then go down the list and call the emergency contacts listed for my child? In other words, do I need to tell my brother the names of the children for whom I am listed as an emergency contact? No, no. There aren't going to be any emergencies. Phew. I feel better now.

After you finish the hard questions on the camp application you get to the section you're not allowed to fill out. That's the medical information section. Your child's immunization history must be completed and signed by a physician. Apparently the phrase "up-to-date on all shots" scrawled by the parent is not acceptable.

It is acceptable to send in the camp application with a note saying the medical information will be forwarded soon. Just make sure it's forwarded before the first day of camp because otherwise your child will not be allowed at camp and your emergency contacts aren't going to take her either.

Don't worry; you'll be finished with all the camp paperwork real soon. But don't relax yet. You still need to buy the bathing suits, sunscreen, towels, goggles, bug spray and sleeping bag. See you in the seasonal aisle!

Lawmakers cheer Sematech expansion

State money slated to boost high-tech group's UAlbany location

By ROB IRWIN
irwinr@spotlightnews.com

A decision by a consortium of high-tech manufacturers to expand its existing research and development program at the University at Albany's NanoCollege, is expected to bring with it new jobs and new money.

The expansion, the largest in the history of the Sematech consortium, will significantly expand its New York operations. As part of the seven-year agreement, the consortium has agreed to locate its headquarters in Albany, increase its workforce by 450 jobs over three years, and provide $25 million to fund research at colleges and universities at five centers around the state.

Legislative leaders have agreed to introduce and pass a bill providing $300 million in funding to be made available over five years to help Sematech purchase advanced semiconductor process equipment. Additionally, Sematech has made a financial commitment of $300 million in cash and in-kind contributions.

In 2002, International Sematech (Semiconductor Manufacturing Technology) brought global attention to the strength of New York state's academic research and development facilities for semiconductor technology when it chose Albany — over competing bids from sites in the United States, Europe and the Pacific Rim — as the site for its first center outside of Austin, Texas. Since that time, Sematech North has become a leader in the development and commercialization of leading-edge nanolithography technology.

Sematech is a consortium of international computer chip manufacturers including Advanced Micro Devices, Hewlett Packard, IBM, Panasonic and Samsung.

"This decision by Sematech is an affirmation of the UAlbany NanoCollege's status as the most advanced research complex of its kind at any university in the world," said Gov. Eliot Spitzer in a press release.

Legislators say that in addition to being a boon to the state's growing tech industry, the move will likely have an impact on the local economy.

Areas like Guilderland, Colonie, Voorheesville and Bethlehem, with strong school districts and shorter commutes, will be an attractive area for those who will be beneficiaries of the jobs created by Sematech, said state Assemblyman John McEneny, D-Albany.

"I think it's going to help the housing market, and those areas will be competitive in attracting these high-salaried individuals," McEneny said.

Other elected officials have spoken out in favor of the project.

"This dynamic public/private research and manufacturing partnership will propel Tech Valley into the pantheon of world-class centers of high-tech research and development, as we envisioned a decade ago," said state Assembly Speaker Sheldon Silver, D-Manhattan.

"This announcement is tremendous news for the Capital Region because it means hundreds of new jobs and will enhance our area's reputation as a global leader in high technology economic development," said state Senate Majority Leader Joseph L. Bruno, R-Brunswick. "I support expanding Sematech as part of a broad economic development plan to create new jobs and strengthen our economy, particularly in Upstate New York."

McEneny said the promised $300 million from the Legislature was "seed money," which will generate new tax money, the creation of direct and indirect jobs and other associated benefits of expanding the area's tech industry. He said he sees it as a worthwhile investment.

Both McEneny and state Assemblyman Tim Gordon, I-Bethlehem, said there's another advantage to bringing high-tech, high-paying jobs to the Capital District.

"This is a major step forward in reversing the 'brain drain' Upstate New York has seen — as many of our most talented professionals have been heading south for better opportunities," said Gordon. "It means that young people stay in New York and don't go down to Austin," said McEneny.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

No endorsements

There's a political mailing in one of our towns that contains a pasted-up replica of a Spotlight Newspapers article boasting the Spotlight name.

This is a copyright infringement. No images from our newspaper should be used without our permission. And readers can rest easy that we won't be giving our permission when it comes to political candidates.

Editorial

Just as important, this mailing is exactly the sort of information manipulation that we must all fend off in this day of Internet and Photoshop.

Spotlight Newspapers does not endorse candidates. A newspaper's viewpoint should be irrelevant to how you vote. At Spotlight Newspapers, we strive instead to provide you with the information you need to make informed decisions at election times.

We try our best to provide you with facts about the issues you'll face at the polls. We try to interview all the candidates, so that you can learn something about them and what they think of the issues of the campaign.

We might take a stand on issues – whether we think a bond vote is good for the community or not, for instance – but we won't choose one candidate over another. That's up to you.

There's a place for the reader in our papers, too, in the letters pages. Those pages are often the first stop for many readers. It's a good place for community debate and discussion ... as long as a measure of civility is exercised. Those pages are not simply a place to blow off steam. We hope that writers will be fair and not libelous when expressing their opinions about issues and people in their communities.

At Spotlight Newspapers, we're proud of the local coverage we offer, and have full confidence in our readers' ability to make up their own minds. We are sure that you read all printed matter critically – whether it comes from us or your elected officials.

Don't forget that the awesome responsibility of maintaining our republic rests with you, at the community level. Be wary of being manipulated as your vote is sought.

Greener pastures on horizon

By ROB IRWIN
news@spotlightnews.com

Stupid is as stupid does. That's what Forrest Gump's mama used to tell him.

When I decided in early April that I would be moving to Myrtle Beach, S.C., without a job, or any real direction, just a place to live, I expected friends, family, coworkers, gas station attendants, deli clerks – just about everyone – to ask, "Why?"

Now, with the move date fast approaching, wanting to make sure I wasn't going to prove the Gump matriarch right, I decided to do some research.

While poring over details about Dixie, I found I have inadvertently joined a growing trend among young adults in New York.

A 2004 study from the Public Policy Institute of New York State showed that from 1990 through 2003, job growth in the state's largest six metropolitan areas was eight times less than the national average. The 2000 census showed that upstate New York's population grew more slowly than all but two states. That census also showed that Upstate lost 370,000 people aged 20 to 34.

Like diners fleeing a taco stand serving bad beef, many of my recently graduated friends have also moved to places like the Carolinas, Florida and Virginia. And while I wouldn't exactly compare living in New York to an E. coli infection, at times, usually during a snowstorm in April, it makes me sick.

And while this state is experiencing slow job growth, losing much of its homegrown educated youth, southern cities like Charlotte, Jacksonville and Atlanta rank among the highest in projected job growth rates.

Scouring the dozens of Web sites devoted to ranking cities based on varying criteria can help paint a more complete picture of where you want to go. Along with providing important information like cost-of-living comparisons (the Carolinas consistently average 10 to 12 percent lower than the Capital District), these Web sites provide some interesting alternative motives for moving.

According to one site, Charleston, S.C., is the sixth-best city for dating in the country. According to that same Web site, Charleston also has the second-highest rate of lingerie shops per capita nationwide, painting an intriguing picture of the city's dating scene.

As a counterbalance to the women, weather and work factors, are my reasons for not moving south: differences in culture (I do not like country music); style (will lawn ornaments really be broken-down '87 Mustang convertibles on cinderblocks?); and entertainment (NASCAR is as boring as, well, NASCAR). Also, I have learned that some southerners carry resentment toward their northern brothers (though in their defense, perpetuating classic southern stereotypes is not the way to endear yourself). Oh, and hurricanes.

So when all is said and done, I concluded that as a 24-year-old single guy with no kids, nothing besides my family, friends and an unwarranted fear of southern stereotypes (and hurricanes) would keep me in the Empire State. And, for now, that's not enough.

What I do know, is that if I stayed, I'll always have wondered what would have happened if I left. Thinking about it, it reminds me of something else Forrest Gump's mama used to say. Something about a box of chocolates.

Capital District green enough

By JESSICA HARDING
hardingj@spotlightnews.com

When I graduated from Niskayuna High School, everyone told me to leave town, get out and see something else, so I did. I left and went to Boston for college, spent four and a half years there and realized the Capital District is the place to be.

I know I haven't seen many places – I've never been to Colorado, Texas, the Carolinas or Kansas – and while those places might be beautiful and nice to visit, I'm pretty sure I want to spend the rest of my life in this area.

Supposedly, the Capital District is unfriendly for 20-somethings. Well, I'm 23, and I plan on staying here for a long time. The Capital District is in the perfect location. There is a lot to do, new businesses keep moving here and it's pretty – why wouldn't you want to come here?

I grew up in Schenectady County, and as long as I've lived here, I've heard stories about the glory days of this area, when 300,000 people worked at General Electric and all of the businesses downtown thrived. Traveling in downtown Schenectady now, I can feel the city's energy. I see construction on every corner, and I know the place is coming back. There are new bars, restaurants and shops, a new movie theater, and hit Broadway shows at Proctor's.

Coming home from Boston, I thought I would be bored, but there is more for me to see and do here because I can afford it.

I love the theater, but I was never able to see many shows in Boston because they were too expensive. I have seen two Broadway shows at Proctor's and professional actors perform at Schenectady Light Opera and Capital Repertory Theater.

For a recent college graduate, an area's nightlife is a big attraction. This area has fantastic bars and nightclubs. Albany's North Pearl Street is basically equal to Boston's Faneuil Hall, and Saratoga is a short trip away.

The Capital District is in the perfect location. It is three hours away from Boston, New York City and Montreal. You can go hiking in the Adirondacks and shopping in the big city in the same weekend.

In the summer, there's Saratoga, including the race track, the performing arts center, night clubs, shops and restaurants; and the Adirondack Mountains provide the perfect getaway for skiing, fishing, camping, boating and swimming.

Stay for fall and enjoy the foliage, apple picking, cider doughnuts and haunted hayrides.

In the winter, which I admit gets a little drab, there is skiing at Maple Ski Ridge, ice fishing and pond hockey.

After a long winter, the first signs of spring are another reason to stay: the Tulip Festival in Albany, bike riding on the Mohawk Hudson Bike Trail.

Another reason for a recent college graduate to come to the Capital District is for jobs. Advanced Micro Devices is moving into Malta. Sematech is beefing up its Albany presence, not to mention established corporations including General Electric, Golub and the SI Group.

Besides all these reasons, I think the overriding reason is the sense of belonging I feel here.

I recently went for a bike ride with my father through Schenectady. We passed the house where my mother grew up, where my father rented his first apartment, my old daycare center and my church.

The families that I know have lived here for decades and generations, through economically good and bad times. Something keeps them here, I think it's that feeling of home.

Eat locally grown food to protect yourself

Editor, The Spotlight:

The contaminated Chinese protein powder that has sickened some 17,000 dogs and cats has now turned up in the human food supply. The U.S. Department of Agriculture admits that 6,000 pigs and more than 2.5 million broiler chickens were sold for human consumption after being fed contaminated pet food.

This was a disaster waiting to happen. After all, animal feed mills are generally regarded as dumping grounds for all kinds of garbage: cat and dog carcasses from animal shelters, cancerous tissue and other slaughterhouse discards, food processing waste. Why the fuss about some slightly toxic Chinese protein powder?

Our government and agribusiness will not protect our food supply, but we can. By purchasing fresh fruits and vegetables grown close to home – at farmers markets and local food co-ops. By avoiding garbage-fed meat and dairy products.

Cunningham more than a 'boss'

Editor, The Spotlight:

In the past two editions of The Spotlight, the new town supervisor has been referred to as "boss" or "new boss." As a resident of the town and as a voter, I resent the denigration and wonder why the man is not referred to by his title. From all counts, he is described as a bright, hard-working person of integrity. The term "boss" implies someone quite the opposite – and certainly not Mr. Cunningham.

I believe that we are quite fortunate to have a person of his caliber helping to shape the future of this town and so I would like to think that the next article about the town and its supervisor would do us all proud by listing Mr. Cunningham as the town supervisor, the title in fact to which he was appointed and will, I hope, be re-elected in the fall.

Time for flags and flowers

Editor, The Spotlight:

For the past several years, the Flags and Flowers Committee, in conjunction with the town of Bethlehem highway department, has decorated Delaware Avenue from the entrance to town at the Normanskill Creek bridge to the Four Corners. These beautiful banners and hanging planters truly welcome residents and visitors alike to the town.

Once again, we are asking residents, organizations, and businesses for financial support to continue and expand this program. Donations in any amount are sincerely appreciated, and can be dropped off, or sent to Flags and Flowers at First Niagara Bank on Delaware Avenue, The Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce at Main Square, or the Little Country Store at the Four Corners.

We hope you'll consider supporting this effort to make our fine community even more attractive and welcoming.

Unwrapping love for mom

Trooper's memory honored by community

Editor, The Spotlight:

To every member of the community, please accept our thanks for your prayers, support, assistance and encouragement as we mourned the loss and celebrated the life of State Trooper David Brinkerhoff. David and his family have been members of our church for a few years, and it was important for Barb (his wife) that his funeral was held here. The overwhelming love and care shown by countless people has lifted her up.

On behalf of the entire Bethlehem Lutheran Church congregation, would like to acknowledge the many people who helped to make this a moving tribute. People were generous, understanding, flexible and very cooperative. Many individuals and groups worked very hard behind the scenes and deserve our praise.

At the risk of leaving someone important out, we would especially like to thank:

The New York State Police,

the town of Bethlehem police, the town of Bethlehem highway department the town of Bethlehem parks and recreation department, the state Department of Transportation, the Albany County Sheriff's Department EMS, the Delmar Fire Department, Delmar EMS, Bethlehem volunteer Ambulance, the North Bethlehem Fire Company, the town of Colonie EMS, Bethlehem Community Church, Delmar Presbyterian Church, the Bethlehem Central School District, Time Warner Channel 9, the many other local merchants who donated time and services, and our neighbors for being so understanding of the road closures and general chaos around the event.

Thank you again for your partnership with us in honoring the Brinkerhoffs and all law enforcement officers for their many selfless sacrifices.

Teens join seasoned singers for spring concert

Mendelssohn Club hopes experience will encourage lifetime of song

By J. JUDE HAZARD
news@spotlightnews.com

After a cold and snow-filled winter, the sights of spring are finally showing up around the Capital District.

And thanks to the Mendelssohn Club and some local high school students, the sounds of spring are showing up as well.

On Friday, the Mendelssohn Club, an 80-voice male chorus, will perform "An Adirondack Spring" at The Egg in Albany at 8 p.m.

Joining the group for part of the program will be 13 students from Bethlehem Central High School.

Jason Dashew, an Albany native and director of choral activities at the high school, said he is happy the young men will get a chance to perform on a big stage.

"It's been a very positive experience for them," said Dashew. "At first they were a bit apprehensive, but they seem to be much more comfortable now."

Dr. Victor Klimash, a professor at Union College who has been the conductor of the Mendelssohn Club for the past six years, said the partnership with Dashew's students was an opportunity to introduce the teenagers to a lifetime of singing.

"They're a really nice group of young men," said Klimash. "We're trying to encourage them to continue singing after high school so they can enjoy male chorus in college and beyond."

The Mendelssohn Club was founded in Albany in 1909 and features men ranging in age from 25 to 85.

The group has performed at such venues as the Mormon Tabernacle and New York City's Carnegie Hall.

In addition to the annual spring program, the club performs a popular holiday concert in December. Klimash said the group has improved since he joined as conductor in 2001.

"I think under my direction there is a more professional sound and more attention to detail and the spirit of the text," said Klimash. "They're willing to try new things."

Klimash has spent more than four decades in music, including 23 years as a faculty member at Louisiana State University before coming to Albany. "We want to make sure that people who come to our concerts are entertained and engaged by what we do," said Klimash. "We want the audience members to find delight in the music."

The concert on Friday will feature four groups of songs, including the work of 20th century American composer and New York native Aaron Copland, who won a Pulitzer Prize in composition for his ballet and subsequent orchestral suite, "Appalachian Spring."

Dashew's group will join the men on the final set, a collection of African-American spiritual songs. Klimash said he decided to have the students join the final section because the style of the songs is well suited to their voices.

"The kids definitely get into the pieces," said Dashew. "The songs are very fun and energetic."

Stefan Weijola, a senior at Bethlehem high school, said the rehearsals leading up to Friday's performance with the Mendelssohn Club have helped him develop his voice.

J. Jude Hazard/Spotlight

"It's an experience to sing with men whose voices have matured and are able to really rock it down low," said Weijola. "I'll definitely continue doing this for a long time; it's a lot of fun."

Ross Triner, the only ninth-grader of the group, said he also has learned a lot from the accomplished singers.

"To sing in a group with the men was a great experience for me," said Triner. "I learned to be more confident with myself when singing."

Tickets, which cost $16, can be purchased by calling The Egg box office at 473-1845.

Lessons from the mountain can translate to business success: An interview with Alison Levine

By Karen Zalewski-Wildzunus
Senior Vice President
Banking, KeyBank N.A.

In the spring of 2002, six years removed from a second heart surgery that cured her of a rare heart disorder, Alison Levine and her team of five women climbers stood 270 feet away from the summit of Mt. Everest and at the edge of a fierce storm. They had climbed nearly 29,000 vertical feet to get to this point. They had planned for months and climbed for more than three weeks, with one final all-night push. And as they huddled less than a football field's length away from their goal, the world watching their every step, the group was forced to make a decision: get off the mountain or risk being killed by it.

For some people, turning around when within reach of your goal would be unthinkable. But for Levine and the American Women's Everest Expedition, the decision was easy and unanimous. The storm was just too dangerous. Or, as Levine said during a recent interview, "You can always go back. If you make a bad decision, you may not have that opportunity."

Alison Levine, captain of the first American Women's Everest Expedition and founder of Climb High Foundation and Daredevil Strategies, is the keynote speaker for the Sixth Annual Key4Women Forum, to be held June 15, 8 a.m., at the Glen Sanders Mansion in Scotia. Her presentation, "Oxygen Not Required," will highlight the life and business lessons she learned on her journey from a child with Wolff-Parkinson Syndrome to her Wall Street career and ascent into the mountains, where she quickly became one of America's leading climbers.

What have you learned from your time in the mountains that can be applied to achieving success in business?

I've learned that you cannot let fear stop you...that you have to push yourself. I've also learned that what makes you successful at work—teamwork, leadership and determination—makes you successful on the mountain. And what makes you successful on the mountain—adapting to a changing environment, thinking through difficult challenges and staying focused on goals—makes you successful at work.

You were a contributing writer to the book More than 85 Broads. In the book you write about the role Janet Hanson, founder of 85 Broads, played in making the Everest expedition possible:

"I just needed someone in my corner, working with me and supporting me instead of telling me it was a bad time, it was a bad idea, and that I should just hang up my ice ax."

Can you talk a little bit about the importance of having the support of others in reaching your goals?

It's always important. You can achieve so much more when you lock arms and work together as a team. The more support you have, the stronger your system of checks and balances, and the stronger your safety net is if you fall.

You talk about working together as a team. In extreme conditions, this must be critical. What were you looking for when you put together the American Women's Everest Expedition team?

After the team was put together, I was the least experienced climber. So experience and skill were important factors. I also had to weigh talent against the ability to work as a team player. On the mountain, and in business, someone who will not work well as part of a team puts that team in jeopardy.

How important is leadership on a climb?

On a climb, everyone on the team should feel like a leader. Decision-making is a collaborative process, because the risks are so great. So you have to try to use good judgment all the time, because every decision you make, regardless of your role on the team, can affect everyone around you. It should be the same in business. People need to feel empowered in their roles and that their contributions are valued.

Planning the Everest Expedition demanded a lot of your time and energy. However, not only did you plan, train and raise the funds needed for the climb, you raised additional money for the V Foundation and Room to Read, which funded the construction of two schools in Nepal. How did you manage to do it all?

I learned that I didn't need a lot of sleep to operate. I was passionate about what I was trying to accomplish. I wanted to send a message about getting out there and going for it. I also learned that when setting a goal and trying to reach it that you can't be focused on just the summit. Too much gets lost along the way. So it's important to break the goal down into smaller, manageable tasks.

After all the work and the rigors of the climb, how hard was it to turn back when you were so close?

It wasn't difficult at all. It was very easy. We were caught in a storm and couldn't climb. The risk was too great. I think that's an important lesson for people in business. You have to be willing to walk away from a deal if it isn't right—no matter how big.

The risk/reward factor is a little different in the business world. Decisions are not life or death, and it's often touted that great reward is the byproduct of great risk.

In the mountains I learned how to evaluate risks. Risks were all around us. We had to keep moving. In business, you have to keep moving. If you do nothing, you'll fail.

But you have to understand which risks you are willing to take. You need to understand the different scenarios that will play out based on your decisions. And even when the sailing is smooth, the risks are still there. It's important to be aware of them.

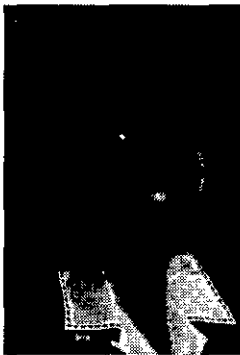

Because of your heart condition and the surgeries, were there additional health risks for you when you led the Everest climb?

No. The second surgery cured me of the disease. However, because of the surgeries, I am now more susceptible to frost bite.

Since Everest, you have trekked to the geographic North Pole and climbed in Africa's Rwenzori Mountains. The Africa expedition was part of a project to do something big with the Climb High Foundation—to get women in the war-torn region started in the trekking/mountaineering industry. Why is your work with the Climb High Foundation so important to you?

I learned early in the Everest planning that I didn't want to climb just for the sake of climbing. I wanted to do it in a way that would have some impact, some kind of lasting effect. Climb High Foundation is about adventure with impact. Our work in the Rwenzoris led to seven women getting paid jobs as porters on our climb. It was the first time any of them earned a paycheck. We celebrated like crazy when we finished that trip. I want to do similar things with Climb High Foundation throughout the world.

New Bethlehem kiosks a woodland welcome

Signs paid for by donations from Friendship Singer's benefit concert

By JILL U. ADAMS
news@spotlightnews.com

A new kiosk stands on the lawn surrounding the Mansions apartment complex, visible from Fisher Boulevard in Slingerlands. It marks the start of a woodland trail that loops around the 20-acre Phillipinkill Preserve, managed by the Mohawk Hudson Land Conservancy.

It's a welcome sight to Jill Knapp, the MHLC's executive director.

"It's been difficult to find our preserves. We haven't had good signage," she said.

The kiosk still smells of cut lumber since volunteers built the structure last month. Two others were erected at the Swift Wetland and the Normanskill Preserve, all in Bethlehem. Posted on the broad wood board is information about the MHLC, a map of the trail, and preserve rules -- reminders to stay on the trail, not to pick plants and to carry out anything carried in.

Friendship built a new kiosk that stands on the lawn near the Mansions apartment complex in Delmar. It marks the start of a woodland trail that loops around the 20-acre Phillipinkill Preserve, managed by the Mohawk Hudson Land Conservancy. Money to pay for the kiosks was raised at a Friendship Singers benefit concert last spring.

Money to pay for the kiosks was raised at a Friendship Singers' benefit concert last spring. The group consists of 19 female vocalists and a male percussionist. The Friendship Singers hold two free public performances each year, at the holidays and in the spring. They also perform for private gatherings, civic groups, and nursing homes.

At the spring concert, the group collects donations, or as member Dodie Seagle puts it, "a free-will offering," for a single worthy cause. Last year, the group decided to support the kiosk effort.

Seagle volunteers for the MHLC, serving on its Tri-Village Greenway Committee, and she helped make the kiosks. She used to teach at Five Rivers Environmental Center and she's a 46-er (meaning she's scaled all 46 4,000-foot mountains in the Adirondacks).

"I'd always been aware of the preserves," Seagle said.

A small stream lined with ferns in the Phillipinkill Preserve.

"They're a wonderful oasis from the busyness of daily life in the suburbs and city."

The Swift Wetland can be accessed from the dead end of Evelyn Drive.

"There's one tiny loop, which was built for the Bethlehem Central High School science department," said Knapp. High school students use the preserve, but the trails are open to the public as well.

Small red flags marked with elevation data are scattered along the trail.

The Normanskill Preserve can be accessed from Delaware Avenue, where it crosses the river into Albany.

"The kiosk is visible from the road," said Knapp, although there's no map displayed on it yet.

At the Phillipinkill Preserve, two parking spaces are reserved for visitors in the Mansions parking lot. The preserve's right-in-town location means it's accessible to those who might walk or bike down the broad sidewalks of Fisher Boulevard.

A dirt trail leads the way through open woods and down to a small bridge, which crosses a stream. Across the stream, a stand of beech trees, and a smattering of maple and oak provide a closer canopy of shade.

Along the trail, spring wildflowers are plentiful: trout lily, wild geranium, jack-in-the-pulpit, spring beauty, and violets. Ferns and mayapple cover large swaths of the forest floor. Above the hum of cars on Delaware Avenue, birds sing and chatter -- the caw of a crow recognizable above all.

For information on the preserves owned and maintained by the MHLC, visit www.albanylandtrust.org/index.htm.

The Friendship Singers perform their 2007 spring concert at the Delmar Reformed Church this Saturday, May 19, at 7:30 pm. Donations will support the Albany Symphony Orchestra's school programs.

Delmar church holds dance event

The First United Methodist Church of Delmar invites the community to "Dancing through the Decades," a dance for all ages in celebration of spring, starting at 7 p.m. Saturday, May 19, at the church at 428 Kenwood Ave., Delmar. Admission is free.

Dancers of all ages will enjoy music from the '50s through the '80s. Special highlights of the evening will be DJ Gregg White, and a swing dance lesson at 7:30 p.m., which includes the jitterbug and triple step timing. Also included will be an exhibition dance at 9 p.m. featuring Gene Kelly's "Singin' in the Rain" performance, which combines elements of American Fox Trot and International Quickstep.

Leading the way will be amateur dance champions Paul and Louise Guiliano. The Giulianos began dancing at the ripe ages of 45 and 50. For their 25th wedding anniversary, they took advantage of a special at a local dance studio, and after one lesson, they were hooked. Only months after they began, they were persuaded to attend a dance competition in Atlantic City, where they competed in four dances and received top awards in all four.

Nine years later, and five years after starting to compete in U.S. amateur competitions, they captured two U.S. titles — Senior Latin and Senior Ten Dance — at the 2004 National DanceSport Championships in St. Paul, Minn.

Paul and Louise Guiliano perform at a recent dance event.

Shortly thereafter, they went to Belgium to compete in the 2004 World Senior Latin Championships as one of two couples representing the United States.

Refreshment sales will benefit the RPMs, a local mission group with teenage members from the Delmar Reformed, Delmar Presbyterian and Delmar Methodist churches. The RPMs just returned from a week in New Mexico, where they worked on a Navajo reservation. The group also provides dinners for the Interfaith Homeless Shelter, and participates in Midnight Run, bringing food and clothes to the homeless in New York City.

Parents Pam Skripak and Mary Kay Skrabalak volunteer to work the Elsmere School fifth-grade plant sale last weekend, May 11 and 12. Proceeds from the plant sale go to fund education outreach programs, including a trip to nature's classroom in Becket, Mass.

Fat proposal leaves restaurants lean on time

Legislator wants to phase out trans fat, but some say deadline unreasonable

By ROB IRWIN
irwinr@spotlightnews.com

Following in the footsteps of recent New York City legislation, a resolution has been introduced before the Albany County Legislature that would phase out artificial trans fat in county restaurants.

Majority Leader Frank Commisso, D-Albany, the proposal's sponsor, is asking the Albany County Board of Health and the county health commissioner to devise a workable plan directing food service establishments to reduce artificial trans fat in oils, shortening and margarine used for frying and baking.

Commisso said that phasing out trans fat, from a health standpoint, could lead to early prevention of heart attacks, stroke and diabetes.

"That's the reason, I believe, we have to be health conscious, more than we are," said Commisso. "I feel very, very strongly about eliminating trans fat in foods."

Rick Sampson, president of the New York State Restaurant Association, said that the timetables and expectations of legislation like this create unreasonable standards.

"We're not married to trans fat, but give us time to find good alternative substitutes," said Sampson, who added that trans fat replacements like corn, canola and soy may not be readily available for use in the restaurant business. "I don't know if these vendors can fill the need for all the restaurants right now."

Sampson called the legislation intrusive and said it opens up the restaurant industry to increased government interference.

"The other thing that really concerns us is: trans fat today, tomorrow is sodium - what's next?" said Sampson. "You've got government that wants to take care of us from the cradle to the grave, without any ideas with what goes on with these things. They don't care."

"We don't want to barge into the kitchens of restaurants and other food preparers," said Commisso. "We're simply saying that we know artificial trans fat clogs arteries, and let's do what we can to serve healthy meals to our residents."

According to the Food and Drug Administration, trans fat is made when manufacturers add hydrogen to vegetable oil - a process called hydrogenation. Hydrogenation increases the shelf life and flavor stability of foods containing these fats.

Trans fat can be found

"We don't want to barge into the kitchens of restaurants and other food preparers. We're simply saying that we know artificial trans fat clogs arteries, and let's do what we can to serve healthy meals to our residents."

Frank Commisso

in vegetable shortenings, some margarines, crackers, cookies, snack foods and other foods made with or fried in partially hydrogenated oils. They are found in processed foods like cookies, crackers, pizza dough and in pre-made blends like pancake and hot chocolate mixes.

If the resolution is passed by the legislature, Commisso said it would be in the hands of James Crucetti, Commissioner of the Albany County Health Department, to develop a practical plan to amend the county's sanitary code, phasing out the trans fat.

Last December, the New York City Board of Health approved regulations restricting artificial trans fat in food served by restaurants. Restaurants must be in compliance by July 2008.

In the past few years, more food labels have been telling consumers about trans fat content. Commisso said that when people go out to eat, they are not as aware of what their food contains as when they cook at home.

"(Restaurants) may have 50, 60 items on the menu. Can you tell me what's in those foods?" said Commisso.

Sampson said this legislation is attempting to solve the problem by unfairly attacking the restaurant industry without enough focus on the responsibility of the individual.

"The sure cure for a headache is decapitation," said Sampson, "but I don't recommend it."

Mark Sweeney of Delmar also urged the board to allow pesticides on town athletic fields.

"... I have to really be persuaded it's the right thing to do in terms of safety and recreation for our youth."

Sam Messina

"The grub problem last year was quite exacerbating," said Sweeney. "There were lots of holes in the field, and it caused big problems for the kids."

Board member Dan Plummer urged his colleagues to move quickly to allow certain pesticides to be used to halt the growing grub problem.

"I know it's a real problem, and I do think it's important we act as quickly as possible because the season is upon us," said Plummer, who wanted the town to pass a series of amendments to the current pesticide code ban.

Board member Sam Messina asked members not to rush to judgment to change the current code, which has been on the books for several years.

"Before we do anything that changes that, I have to really be persuaded it's the right thing to do in terms of safety and recreation for our youth,"

Messina said.

Public Works Commissioner Oliver Holmes is in the process of completing a pest management strategy for the town to use pesticides on an as-needed basis. The board tabled the matter and will revisit it at its May 23 meeting at 6 p.m.

Vista Technology Park is the first post-master plan project in a mixed economic development district. The district calls for an integration of office space, industry, service, small-scale retail and technology-based businesses. Residential uses may be permitted along with business development of the site.

"We feel at this time, this project is ready for town acceptance," Morelli said.

A 10-day minimum waiting period now takes place to allow the public to consider the environmental impact statement. The town board will then hold a public hearing on the Vista Park Master Plan. The planning board will recommend either accepting or rejecting the plan before the town board, as lead agency, signs off on the project.

"If the Vista Park Master Plan is approved, it then moves to the planning board for land use approval and site plan review," said Morelli.

Albany County has already invested $1 million in Vista to offset the cost of hiring engineers and consultants working on the project. The first phase of Vista development is expected to be shovel-ready by the end of 2008.

Two Bethlehem businesses were honored by the United States Small Businesses Administration as recipients of small businesses excellence awards.

Canterbury Animal Hospital of Delmar and Matchless Stove and Chimney of Glenmont were two of 20 Upstate businesses honored at the ninth annual awards luncheon at the Desmond Hotel and Conference Center Monday, May 7, in Colonie.

The luncheon was one of many events across the nation celebrating National Small Business Week.

"It's really nice as a small business to be recognized," said Tara Estra, DVM, owner of Canterbury Animal Hospital.

Canterbury, a full-service companion animal hospital, has seen increasing business since its grand opening in 2006. First Niagara Bank nominated Canterbury Animal Hospital for the award.

"It's very flattering as a new business to be receiving such a nice award," said Estra.

Tim Madden, owner of Matchless Stove and Chimney said his

According to statistics from the U.S. Small Business Administration, more than 57 million Americans are employed by a small businesses. That makes up 51 percent of the private sector workforce.

"These businesses are both excellent Bethlehem businesses, and I can see why the SBA gave them these awards," said Marty DeLaney, president of the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce.

"They make good role models for other businesses in Bethlehem," DeLaney said.

Small Business Journalist of the Year, Jack Aernecke, news anchor of WRGB Channel 6 in Schenectady was the master of ceremonies for this year's event.

President George Bush has called small businesses "the lifeblood of cities and towns across the country."

IN BRIEF

Bethlehem encourages use of registry program

The Albany County Sheriff's Department has a program designed to assist the special needs community during an emergency within Albany County whether manmade or natural. Registrants should be physically or mentally unable to evacuate themselves from their residence without assistance. Applicant information is entered into the County's E-911 system for retrieval during an emergency. Local police departments will have the information, as well, and this information allows emergency responders to instantly identify the special needs of callers from their residences. In situations like this, prior medical knowledge of the needs of the caller enhances the response time and efficiency of medical care.

"Currently, we have about 1,000 people registered in the program," said Garry G. Horne, Director of Community and Emergency Services with the Albany County Sheriff's Department. "The unique thing about our registry is that it is the first in the state that incorporates information about people with disabilities into the E911 system. Emergency workers will have valuable knowledge about the person before they arrive which could be life saving."

Applications are available online at www.albanycountysheriff.com or by calling Linda Nash at the Albany County Sheriff's Department Office at 720-8030; on the Town of Bethlehem's website, www.townofbethlehem.org. Emergency Management Office, Special Needs Registry Program and forms are also available in the Bethlehem Senior Services Office, 445 Delaware Ave., in Delmar, 439-4955.

Stay Cool! this summer and save money

NYSERDA offers summertime cooling tips for comfort and savings

According to the United States Department of Energy (DOE) and Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the average family spends $1,900 a year on energy bills, nearly half of which goes to cooling and heating.

This summer, the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSERDA) has developed Stay Cool!, a campaign that reaches out to New Yorkers with energy-saving tips to help them keep their home comfortably cool without busting the budget.

NYSERDA also encourages New Yorkers who are in the market for a new room air conditioner to purchase ENERGY STAR® qualified models that use less energy and save money. Energy-efficient air conditioning can make a real impact on comfort and monthly electric bills, as well as reduce energy use when demand is high.

"Home cooling represents a huge opportunity for New Yorkers to reduce their energy use and carbon dioxide emissions, as well as save money," said Peter R. Smith, president and CEO of NYSEDA. "With just a few simple changes, New Yorkers can use their air conditioners without wasting energy. It's really the way to 'stay cool' this summer."

The New York Power Authority (NYPA) is co-funding the Stay Cool! campaign to help more

New Yorkers save energy this summer.

"It's never been easier to stay cool," said Timothy S. Carey, president and CEO of NYPA. "Homeowners can do it just by switching to ENERGY STAR appliances and following basic energy-saving tips."

So you want to Stay Cool! this summer? NYSEDA and NYPA offer these simple, cost-effective tips to reduce summer energy bills.

Turn In. Turn On.

ENERGY STAR qualified room air conditioners use up to 25 percent less energy than a standard new model and up to 40 percent less energy than a model that is more than 10 years old. Look for a high Energy Efficiency Ratio (EER). Units with high EERs cost less to operate. Turn in your old room air conditioner to your local waste management facility and turn on a new ENERGY STAR air conditioner.

Size it Right

A properly sized air conditioner will operate more efficiently and dehumidify more effectively. An oversized unit will cycle on and off more frequently. Short cycling reduces an air conditioning system's life, and a short cycling system will not reduce humidity effectively. Undersized equipment can reduce the efficiency of air distribution and accelerate wear on system components, leading to premature failure.

No Dirty Business

A dirty filter will increase energy use and can damage the air conditioner leading to early failures, so check the filter every month and replace as needed.

Work in the Morning or Evening

Use ovens, washing machines, dryers and dishwashers in the early morning or late at night when it's generally cooler outside. Use a microwave oven to cook, or barbecue outside, if possible.

Chill Out in the Shade

A unit operating in the shade uses as much as 10 percent less electricity than the same one operating in the sun.

Don't Forget the Adoring Fans

ENERGY STAR qualified ceiling fans can help cool a home without greatly increasing electricity use. They improve airflow and create pleasant breezes.

Just Chill When You're Home

For central air conditioning, a programmable thermostat allows homeowners to automatically adjust to a more comfortable temperature when they are scheduled to be home. Homeowners can set the temperature to use less cooling when they are normally away.

Residents save three percent on energy costs for each degree they turn up the thermostat from 72 degrees. ENERGY STAR window and through-the-wall room air conditioners also typically include programmable thermostats or timers.

A Home Needs Shades Too

Block out heat by keeping blinds or curtains closed during the day, especially on south facing windows.

Take the Whole House Approach

Houses work as a system. Insulation, heating and air conditioning, air sealing, water heating, ductwork, windows and doors all work together to determine efficiency. A Home Performance with ENERGY STAR contractor can perform a home energy assessment to help residents map a plan to improve a home's energy efficiency.

Turn It Off

Save electricity and reduce waste heat by shutting off lights. Seldom used home electronics should actually be unplugged from the wall. Items like DVD players, VCRs and cordless phones use 40 percent of their energy while in the off position to power functions like clocks and remote controls.

For year-round energy-saving tips and programs to help you improve the energy efficiency of your home, visit www.GetEnergySmart.org.

NYSEDA uses innovation and technology to solve some of New York's most difficult and environmental problems in ways that improve the State's economy. Visit www.GetEnergySmart.org or call 1-877-NY-SMART for more information about Stay Cool! and other energy efficiency programs.

NYPA is the Empire State's largest supplier of electricity and provides energy-saving services and clean energy technologies to public institutions such as schools, hospitals and universities. Visit www.nyga.gov to learn more about the New York Power Authority.

HOW COOL IS NEW YORK?

TURN IN, TURN ON, STAY COOL.

Turn in your old, inefficient window air conditioner and replace it with a new ENERGY STAR® qualified model. Always select a unit that has a higher Energy Efficiency Rating (EER) for even better energy savings. Find out more about the STAYCOOL program.

Library marks Asian Pacific American Heritage Month

On Oct. 5, 1978, President Jimmy Carter signed a joint resolution proclaiming the first 10 days of May as Asian Pacific Heritage Week. In May 1990, President George H. W. Bush designated May as Asian Pacific American Heritage Month. The month of May was chosen to commemorate the immigration of the first Japanese to the United States on May 7, 1843, and to mark the anniversary of the completion on May 10, 1869, of the transcontinental railroad, which was built largely by Chinese immigrants.

CHECK IT OUT

The designation recognizes the contributions to American industry, science, art and culture by Americans who trace their heritage from all around the Pacific Rim. In addition to access to a literary goldmine (Amy Tan, Maxine Hong Kingston and others), the Bethlehem Public Library offers a wealth of historical and genealogical resources, in print and online.

Kids invited to tell tall tales

Zora Neale Hurston collected tall tales and stories in the southeastern United States and the Caribbean. In the book chosen for The Big Read, "Their Eyes Were Watching God," she wrote a hilarious sequence of "lies" about the fate of Matt Bonner's overworked mule.

On Sunday, May 20, kids are invited to a special writing workshop at the library to create their own outrageous lies. It also will feature tall tales that Zora collected. The workshop begins at 1:30 p.m. Call the library at 756-2053 to register.

The Big Visit opened the Big Read

Those of us attending the reception for Lucy Anne Hurston at the high school on Friday morning, May 4, listened spellbound as she spoke about her discovery of her aunt Zora's writing and personal history, about her own education, and her childhood adventures at the public library. She is a generous, humorous woman, and what a storyteller! RCS Community Library and RCS High School hosted the event as part of the two-county Big Read.

Lucy Hurston wrote a unique biography of her aunt, "Speak, So You Can Speak Again," that has facsimiles of manuscripts and letters in pockets and envelopes throughout. There also is a CD of Zora Hurston performing songs and folktales that she collected during the

Free directories available now

The 2007 Altamont, Voorheesville and Guilderland Area Business & Community Directories are now available.

The Guilderland Chamber of Commerce creates this helpful free publication each year as a resource for the community. They are full of detailed information about the history of our area, statistics and demographics, places of worship, lists of important phone numbers and detailed business information on Chamber businesses.

The directories can be picked up at either the Chamber office, which is located at 2021 Western Avenue or at Guilderland Town Hall, the Guilderland Altamont or Voorheesville Public Libraries.

The Chamber will also mail them out for the cost of postage. For information call 456-6611 or visit www.guilderlandchamber.com.

Make flowers with icing at fundraiser

The Helderview Garden Club and Friends of the Voorheesville Library will be hosting a fundraiser for the Voorheesville Gardens.

Colleen, head baker at Nichols Shop N' Save, will demonstrate and teach how to make flowers out of icing. The event will take place on Thursday, May 31, at 7:30 p.m. at the Voorheesville Library.

Space is limited. To reserve a spot, please send a $10 check, made out to Helderview Garden Club, and mail it to:

Bernice Hubbard, Treasurer, 150 Vaugn Drive, Albany 12203.

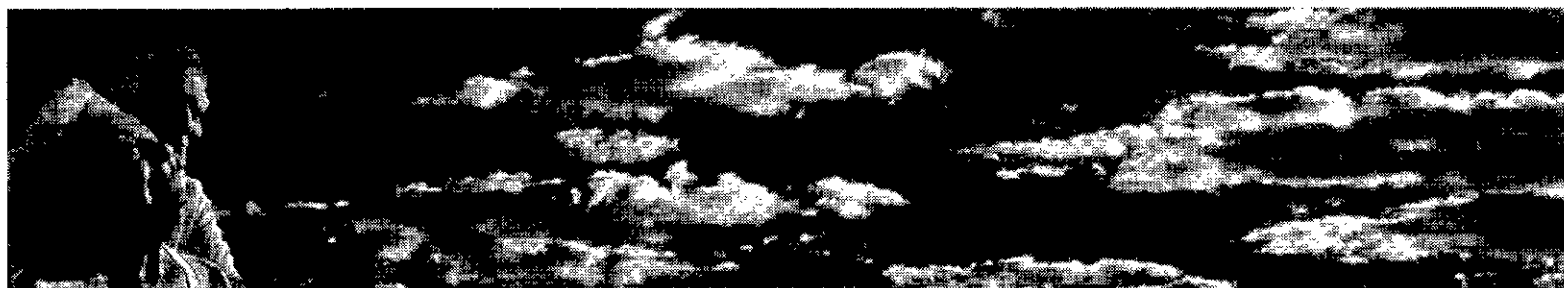

The deadline for making reservations is Friday, May 18. Not only will you learn how to make iced flowers and donate to the beautification of the Village, but you will also take home the equipment to decorate your baked goods in your own kitchen.

For more information, contact Edie Abrams at 439-5700.

Glenmont fifth-graders document 50 years of class

By JILL U. ADAMS
news@spotlightnews.com

Glenmont Elementary School first opened its doors 50 years ago, on April 29, 1957.

To commemorate the occasion, four current Glenmont students, one from each fifth grade class, created a documentary style video remembrance for the school's 50th anniversary celebration, which took place on Monday, May 14.

"We took a video camera and interviewed past principals and old teachers," said fifth-grader Peter Africano. "Some were nice and funny. Some were shy, just answered questions."

Nicholas Russo said he, Peter, Rachel Anderson and Aria Shi took turns doing the different jobs: shooting the video, conducting the interviews and editing the tapes.

During the process, the students learned about the building's 1990 addition; they heard about balloon day, when messages were attached to helium balloons and sent skyward; and they discovered that in the old days, most students came from farm families.

Their video was the highlight of the community celebration held at the school Monday. Among the audience were retired teachers, former principals, past students, as well as Bethlehem Central school board members and administrators.

School-wide celebrations included a family fun night and a school assembly held in previous weeks.

Karen Bysma was a second-grade student on Glenmont's first day.

Later she returned to the school to teach third grade for 20 years. She retired last year, but still comes to school to volunteer in the Jump Start program.

"It felt like I came full circle," said Bysma. "But it's very strange to come back as a guest."

Dorothy Weiss was a kindergarten teacher for 33 years at Glenmont and she still serves as a substitute teacher. Recently, she subbed for a former student of hers, the now Mrs. Flanagan who teaches third grade.

If this is starting to sound like a family affair, it is. Weiss recognized Andrea Crisafulli Russo, Nicholas's mom.

"I had most of the worth of school yearbooks.

Two themes emerged, the first of which was how much things have changed Weiss remembered that teachers used to make home visits and another alumnus recalled skating on the frozen pond. The school has grown in size and population and the surrounding area has morphed completely with a Wal-Mart supplanting the old Normanskill Dairy and an office building where haystacks used to stand.

Bysma recalled not only how much lunch used to cost (25 cents), but also how good the food was. She described her favorite food — cherry squares with a warm sauce.

"I still remember after all these years," she said.

Other memories supported the opposite theme, how much things stay the same. Favorite games at recess were kickball and wall ball, then and now.

After the video, school Superintendent Les Loomis invited all the retirees in the room to come forward and say a few words.

Former principal Don Robillard remembered that when Glenmont competed for the School of Excellence award, a reviewer of the application commented, "Check out this school, see if it's for real."

"When they came to visit, the comment was, 'If anything, they understated their programs,'" said Robillard.

"When I think of Glenmont, I always think of the garden," said former principal Teresa Snyder, who is now assistant superintendent for the Shenendehowa school district. It started when she noticed a patch of too-tall grass outside her window.

"I said, 'We should have a garden there,' and next thing I knew the ground had been turned over," she said.

Then, the plants came in so fast, there was nothing to do but pop them in the ground.

Snyder couldn't help but see the metaphor.

"It's like watching children blossom," she said.

"We took a video camera and interviewed past principals and old teachers. Some were nice and funny. Some were shy, just answered questions."

Peter Africano

Crisafullis," she said. "One came back as a student teacher in my class. One's my plumber now."

Fifth graders provided music for the event, with a percussion group playing as people arrived and mingled. Later, a small choir sang the happy birthday song to the school.

The video included sequences of still photos, like flipping through 50 years'

Hospice offers children's groups

The Wave Riders program of The Community Hospice of Albany County helps children "ride the waves of grief" in a caring environment. Peer support groups, for children in grades K through eight, are held Tuesdays at 6 p.m. through May 22 at the Hospice office at 445 New Karner Road in Albany.

In these group experiences, children develop skills to help cope with losses and build self-esteem. For information, call 724-0200.

"It is important that children be able to recognize their normal feelings of sadness and grief, and have the opportunity to express them in a safe and comfortable setting," said Candice Van Roey, director of the program. "When they share with other grieving children, they feel less isolated."

A program for pre-school children, ages 3 through 5, called "Big Hurts/Little Tears," will take place at the Community Hospice offices at 159 Wolf Road, Albany, on Saturdays at 10 a.m. through March 31. For information, call Lauren Savage at 377-8846.

Donald J. Hendrickson

Donald J. Hendrickson, the unofficial mayor of Clarksville, died Saturday, April 21.

He was a professional firefighter and an EMT for the city of Albany for 29 years before retiring in 1999. He was a volunteer firefighter and EMT for the Onesquethaw Fire Company for 35 years, the last seven of which were solely devoted to driving the rescue squad five days a week with his wife, MaryAnn, at his side.

He taught new members of the Onesquethaw Fire Department or the rescue squad.

He walked daily through Clarksville, talking to neighbors and fixing problems along the way, like a lawn mower, light and electrical plug, a car and many other things. His warmth and sense of humor encouraged all.

His pockets were full of candy for kids, whose toys and bikes he fixed, and for dogs he met along the way.

Kids and kids at heart visited him at home to play with his train village, wear the engineer's hat and blow the whistle.

On Thursday, April 26, more than 1,300 friends and family members attended his burial as the Albany Fire Department Honor Guard and his Onesquethaw Fire House family stood beside his casket in a solemn service.

He was carried to his final resting place in his beloved ambulance. As the ambulance drove through town, church bells rang and neighbors stood in their driveways and saluted. The ambulance siren sounded in front of Mr. Hendrickson's home. At the firehouse, the tones rang three times.

The family wishes to thank the community of Clarksville, the Onesquethaw volunteer Fire Department and especially Debbie Lobdell, Jake Houck, Fred Spaulding, Mike Dorgan, Jeff Mudge and Geoffrey Stein.

IN BRIEF

AAA offers tips for solo travelers

Eleven percent of all leisure travelers in the U.S. travel alone, and that number is growing. Travel counselors are seeing increasing business from single travelers who are looking not only for advice about destinations, but also about how to travel safely.

AAA asked more than 100 professionals in the U.S. and Canada for advice for today's single traveler. The top three suggestions are to take prearranged tours, travel with a group and leave a copy of your itinerary and international travel documents at home with family and friends.

In addition, they said:

Plan ahead. Know where your hotels are located, how you will get around and where you want to go. The fewer decisions you need to make when you first arrive, the less likely it is you will get lost or distracted.

Have the proper documentation when traveling. You may need internationally-valid passports and visas, medical and trip cancellation/interruption protection for unexpected emergencies, and an International Driving Permit if traveling by car.

Try to exude a calm, no nonsense air in public places. You may not always feel calm and confident, but others will pick up on your cues and sometimes just acting confident will do the trick.

If it's May, it's time for the Greek Festival at St. Sophia's Greek Orthodox Church in Albany.

But be prepared: in addition to souvlaki and baklava, The Greek Warriors will be adding a live taste of ancient Greek warfare to the festival. Expect at least four members of the historical re-enactment group to be showing off their hand-made arms and armor, and a few battle stances, between Friday and Sunday, May 18 to 20.

The Greek Warriors grew out of Staten Island native George Mercinek's collection of ancient Greek art and architecture. After crafting his own helmets — complete with horsehair helmet crest — and shields, he looked for a way to put them to use.

"I wanted to do something with this, and I got my brother enlisted," Mercinek said. "The best medium for this was Greek festivals." Peter Giakoumis joined up with the Mercinek brothers to form the band of warriors. They're now at 22 members, and were one of the favorites at the April Greek Independence Day parade in New York City.

"Some of our church members saw them there and said they were amazing," said Maria Neal, publicity spokeswoman of the St. Sophia's festival.

Both Mercinek and Neal agreed that the movie "300," about the Spartans' stand against the Persians at the Battle of Thermopylae in 480 BC has made Greek warriors — and all things Greek — more popular.

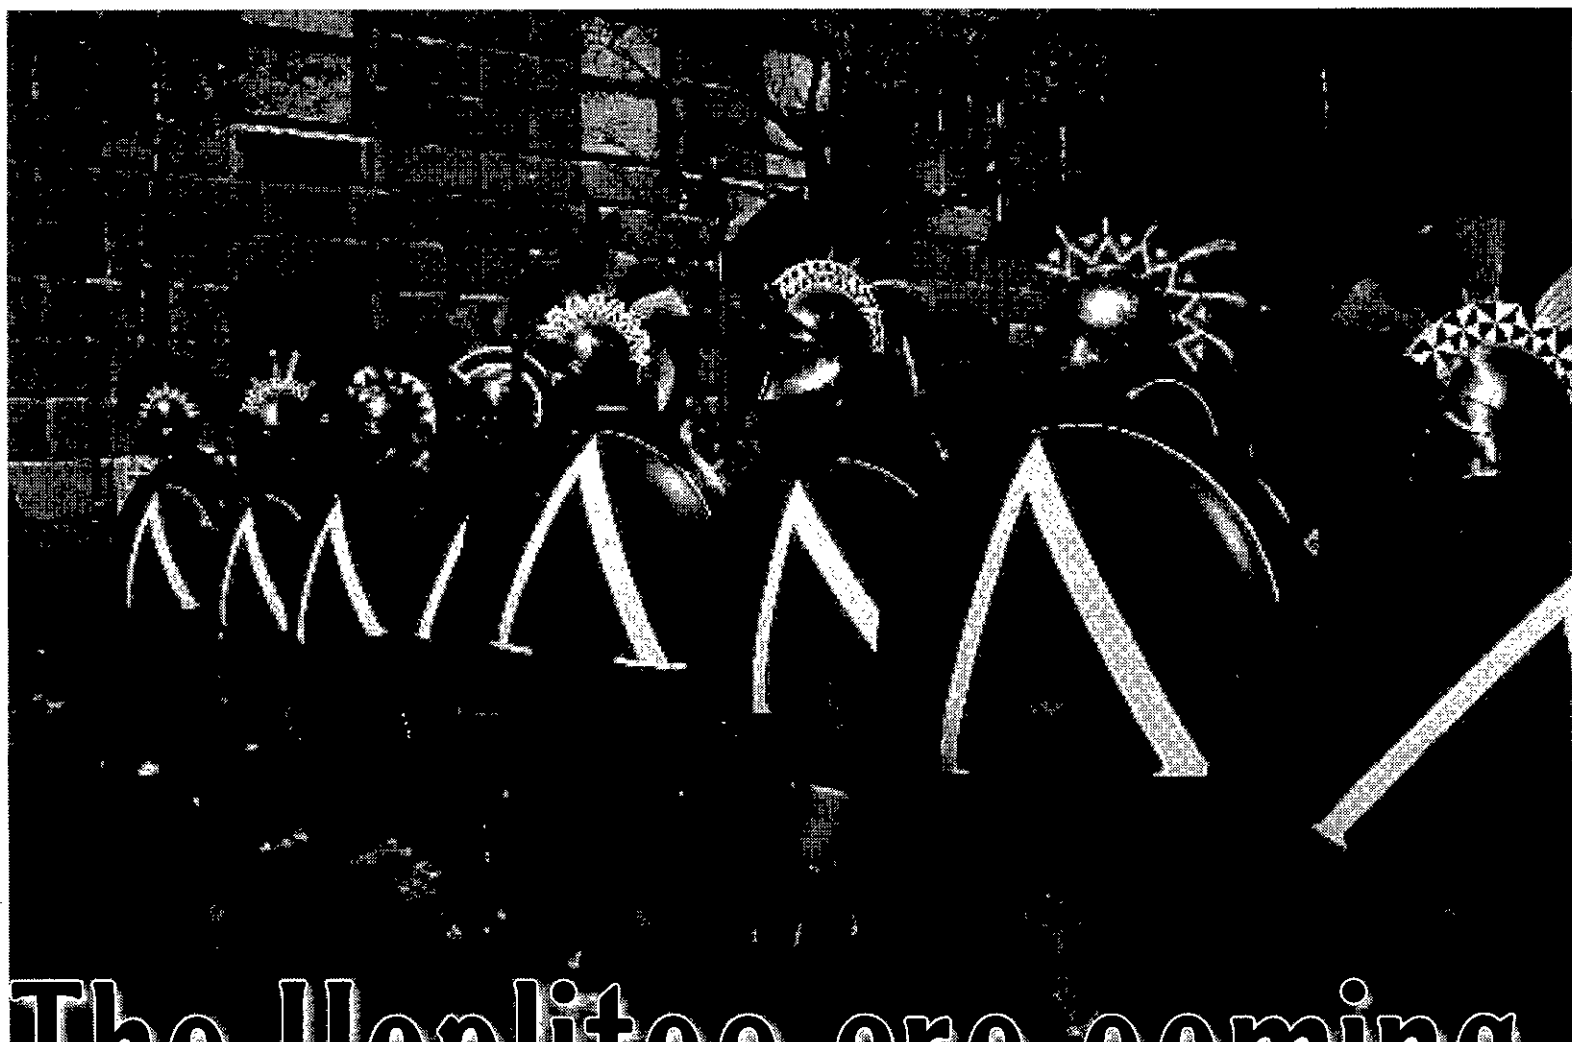

Not that St. Sophia's festival needed much of a push in the popularity department. Now in its 37th year, more than 25,000 visitors attend the festival each year.

"This is a unique festival," Neal said. "It's like a big party. Our chairman, George Sokaris, is always looking for new things."

If the Greek warriors are new, the sit-down restaurant and the more casual outside tent are part of the draw.

"We're the only festival with a sit-down restaurant," Neal said. Neal's father, Ted Kondoprias, runs the kitchen, and parishioners volunteer as waiters, waitresses, bartenders ... wherever they're needed.

"We have more than 400 families," Neal said. "People work shifts, and lots of them

There will also be sommeliers at the festival, offering samplings from Greek wineries.

"Greg Taylor of Frederick Wildman and Sons will have two sommeliers there all Past attendees of the festival know to head first for the pastry table.

"There are more than 20,000 pieces of pastry," Neal said. "We usually sell out by 2 p.m. on Sunday."

In their colorful costumes and sometimes fierce stance, The Greek Warriors will show the fiercer side of Greek culture. At the dessert table, you can sample the sweeter stuff. And if you take a tour of the church, you can see where Greek Americans worship

Bethlehem in familiar role ☐ Dutch

Eagles need one league victory in last two games

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

For the third time in the last four years, the Bethlehem baseball team's playoff hopes hinged on what it did in the final week of the regular season.

The Eagles (8-8 overall) entered Monday's game against Ballston Spa with a 6-6 Suburban Council record. A win against either the Scotties Monday or Averill Park Tuesday would assure Bethlehem a .500 league record and a Section II, Class AA playoff berth.

"If we make Sectionals, I think we have as good a shot as anybody because we have the pitching," said Bethlehem coach Rob Helm.

Things haven't gone well for the Eagles the last two times they were in this position. Each time they've needed a win in their final two games to make the playoffs (2004 and 2006), they've lost both games.

Helm said he did what he could to line up his pitching rotation to make certain his top three hurlers were available for the stretch run. He used Jason Daniels and Matt

Nash in limited roles during a victory over Colonie at Saturday's Troy Wood Bat Tournament, and he rested Oren Rasowsky for Tuesday's finale against Averill Park.

"If we can't win one out of the two with those guys pitching, then we don't deserve to be in the playoffs," said Helm.

While the pitching was in place, Helm said he was hoping his hitters would respond. Outside of a seven-run spurt in last Friday's 9-3 victory over Shenendehowa, Bethlehem has struggled to push runs across on a consistent basis. And even in that seven-run spurt, the Eagles needed a little help from Shen's defense to get going.

"Shen made an error with the bases loaded, and that started things off," said Helm. "We were able to take advantage of their error, which was nice because other teams have been able to take advantage of our errors."

If Bethlehem gets the victory it needs to make Sectionals, Helm said his team is capable of going deep into the playoffs.

"I still think anybody can beat anybody," said Helm. "I've seen all the Suburban Council teams, and I've seen all the Big 10 teams. Anybody can beat anybody."

Bethlehem's defense and scored to give the Lady Dutch a 2-1 lead, Jen Kaye made two saves on point-blank shots by the Lady Eagles. A short time later, Danielle Tetreault tallied to make the score 3-1.

"A great goalie save turns many games around, and the kids see that," said Chatnik.

Branchini doubled Guilderland's lead to four goals with a pair of late first half tallies — the first of which required the University at Albany-bound senior to use her field hockey skills. Branchini lost the handle on a shot in front of the Bethlehem goal, but she scooped the loose ball by Rae Mahon for a 4-1 lead.

"There's no turning back after that," said Branchini, who tallied again a couple of minutes after her first goal. "Once you have the momentum, you can't let it go."

Bethlehem stayed close through the first five minutes of the second half, but Guilderland pulled away for good with a three-goal spurt. Chelsey Newman got the run going with a free position tally to make the score 7-3. Best then scored from a tough angle, and Courtney Davis added a free position goal after being fouled by Mahon to put the Lady Dutch ahead by six goals.

"Nobody on this team is afraid to go to the goal, and nobody's afraid to take a shot," said Chatnik.

Best, Branchini, Fashouer and Newman all scored two goals to lead a balanced Guilderland attack. Ladouceur and Kayleigh Hynes each tallied twice for Bethlehem.

Though Guilderland locked up the league title and the top seed with the win against Bethlehem, both coaches acknowledged the Sectional championship is up for grabs, especially when Shaker and Saratoga are factored into the equation.

"We've been saying all year that you can't take anybody for granted," said Chatnik. "Any one of six teams could win it."

"We've split with Shaker, we've split with Guilderland ... and that's the way a tough league should be," said Austin.

☐ Glory

run for the Los Angeles Dodgers in Game 1 of the 1988 World Series against Oakland

- Kerri Strug breaking a bone in her leg trying to stick a landing in the vault and then coming back and nailing a one-legged landing to help the United States women's gymnastics team take the gold medals at the 1996 Olympics

- Michael Jordan putting a stomach bug and dehydration aside to score 38 points — including a game-clinching three-pointer — in game 5 of the 1997 NBA finals between Chicago and Utah

- Curt Schilling pitching on a stitched-up ankle during the 2004 playoffs and helping the Boston Red Sox end their 86-year World Series championship drought.

That's probably only the tip of the iceberg, too. Surely, there have been athletes in the early part of the 20th century who had a doctor tape up a broken finger or a busted ankle so they could go out and play.

Naturally, there are many risks involved when an athlete plays through pain. And maybe we shouldn't be so quick to admire somebody for recklessly endangering his or her body for fame and glory. But that goes against human nature. I don't think anybody (other than an Oakland A's fan) was horrified to see Gibson jogging the bases after belting Dennis Eckersley's pitch into the right field bleachers. Everybody thought, "That is one courageous athlete."

So when Boston pitcher Josh Beckett goes on the disabled list with a torn flap of skin on the middle finger of his throwing hand, don't call him a wimp. He knows — as do the Red Sox — that this is only May. If this happened in the middle of a pennant chase, Beckett would go out there, even if the trainer had to duct tape his pitching shoulder into place.

Eagles edge Brothers in OT

The Bethlehem boys lacrosse team bounced back from a 16-3 loss to Guilderland with an 11-10 overtime victory over Big 10 champion Christian Brothers Academy last Friday.

The Eagles outscored the Brothers 3-1 in the fourth quarter to forge a 10-10 tie before scoring in the first overtime period to earn the non-league victory.

Matt DiFrancesco and Matt Johnson each had hat tricks for Bethlehem, which began its week with a 4-3 victory over defending Section II, Class A champion Niskayuna. Ryan Wall contributed two goals and two assists, and Dylan Eder added a pair of goals.

The Eagles visited Saratoga Springs Monday.

It's here. But not forever.

News & Notes

Rowan leads Syracuse past Vanderbilt

Bethlehem Central High School graduate Katie Rowan continued her stellar sophomore season with the Syracuse University women's lacrosse team.

Rowan scored a game-high five goals to lead the Orange to a 16-10 victory over Vanderbilt in last weekend's opening round of the NCAA Division I playoffs.

In the process, Rowan recorded her 100th career goal — only the second Syracuse player to reach the mark. She also set a school record for needing the fewest games to score 100 goals.

Rowan has 58 goals and 83 points this season — both single-season school records.

Fellow Bethlehem grad Halley Quillan scored a goal for Syracuse in the Vanderbilt game.

Marro earns league honor

Bethlehem Central High School graduate Jenn Marro was named the Empire 8 Softball Player of the Week after helping Ithaca College win the league tournament title.

Marro batted .444 with two runs scored, two RBI and two stolen bases in the tournament. She belted a two-run home run in a victory over Utica and had a hit and a stolen base in the Bombers' 1-0 victory over St. John Fisher in the championship game.

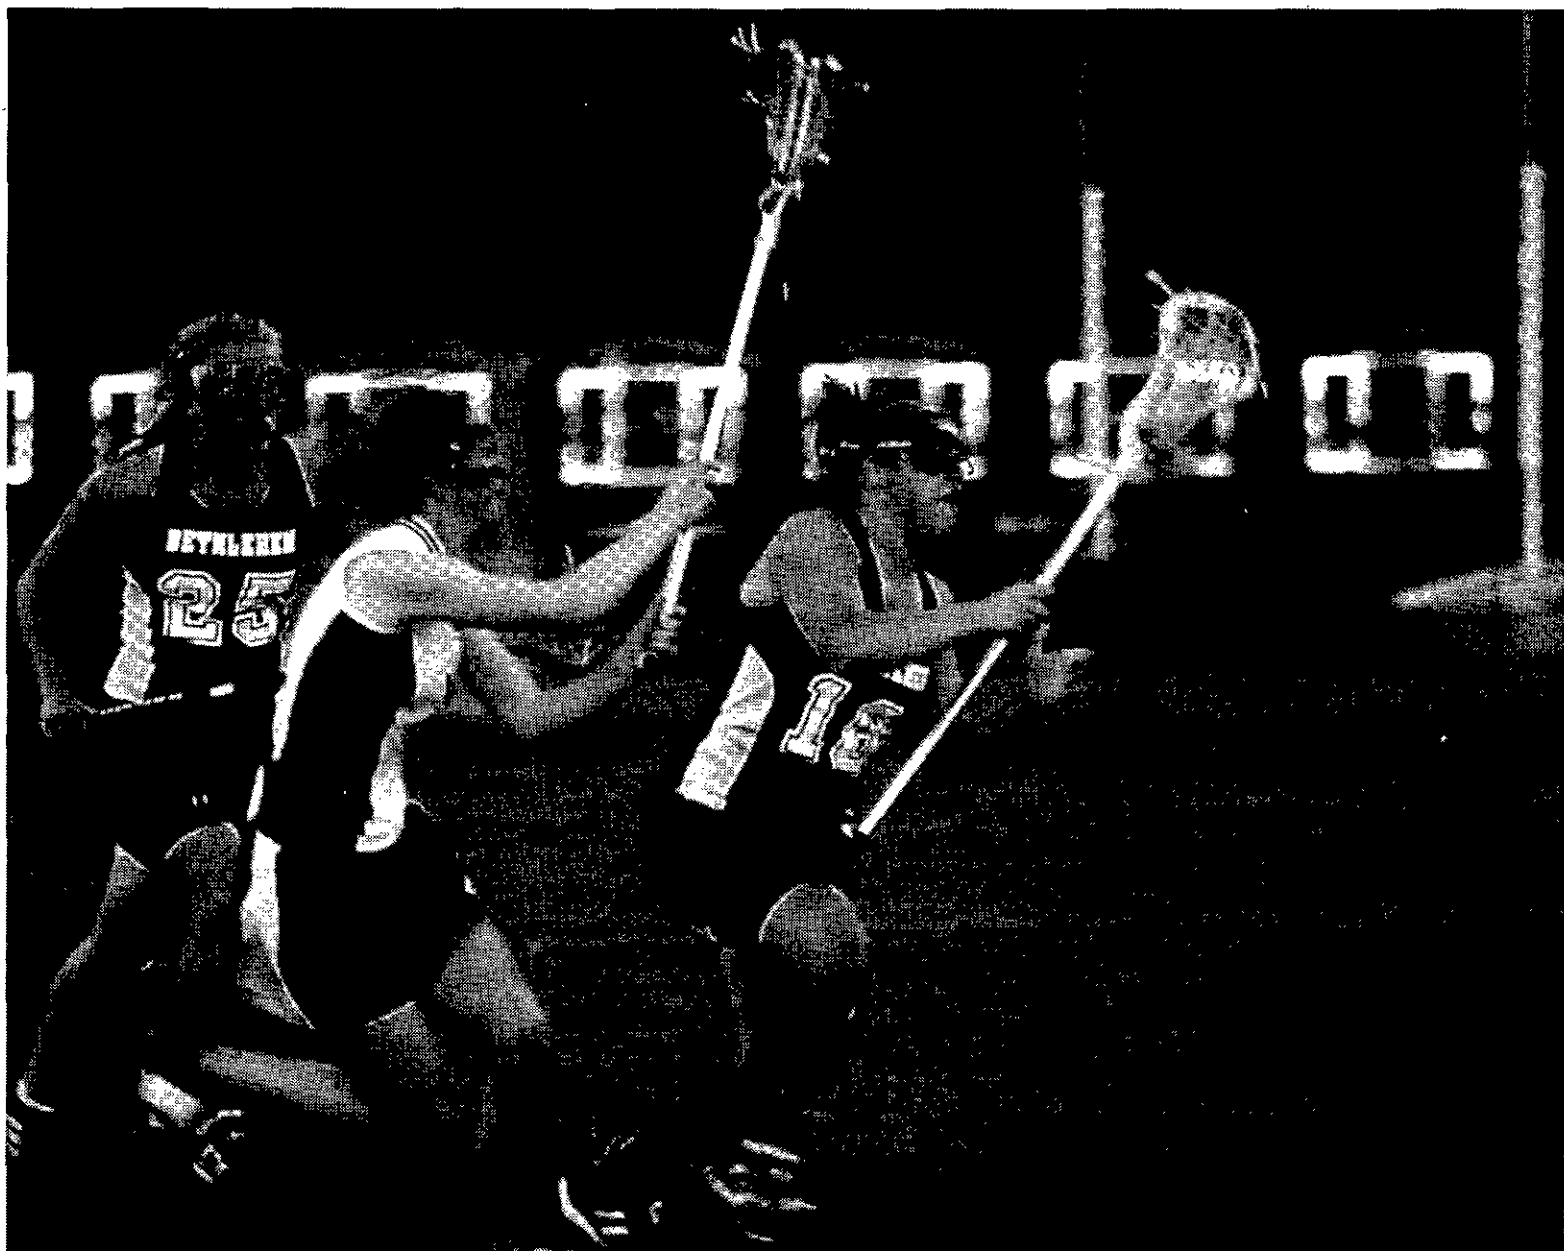

Marro was also named a member of the Empire 8 all-conference first team.

Club schedules summer camps

The Capitalland Lacrosse Club is offering four summer camps for boys in grades two through 11 at Clifton Common.

One-week sessions begin July 9. Players will be assigned by age and skill levels. Fees range from $90 to $120 per week.

The Guilderland girls lacrosse team wasn't about to let the opportunity to win a Suburban Council title slip away.

The Lady Dutch controlled play from the opening draw and pulled away to an 11-6 victory over Bethlehem last Friday to clinch the program's first league title and the No. 1 seed for the Section II, Class A playoffs.

"We've been knocking on the door (the last two seasons), and we finally went through," said Guilderland coach Gary Chatnik. "We're growing up."

"It feels awesome," said Nikki Branchini, one of four seniors on Guilderland's roster. "Just the team effort we put forth was incredible."

Guilderland's effort had to be incredible. Bethlehem (10-3 league, 10-4 overall) — which has won the last eight Sectional championships — was coming off close victories over Shaker and Niskayuna that kept the Lady Eagles within a game of the Lady Dutch. Moreover, a win would have given Bethlehem a sweep of its regular-season series against Guilderland and a tiebreaker for the league title.

However, it was clear from the opening draw that the Lady Dutch (13-1, 15-2) would set the tone in this game. Guilderland consistently won battles for draws and ground balls, and it maintained possession nearly twice as long as Bethlehem.

"Bethlehem was just as aggressive as we were," said Chatnik. "It's a credit to our team that we kept battling and answered whenever they scored."

"It's an intensity-level thing when it was a 50-50 ball," said Bethlehem coach Dawn Austin. "Guilderland was a little more intense than us."

Sacrificing the body for playoff glory

I will never call a professional athlete a wimp, but around this time every year, I'm reminded of how athletes treat the postseason differently from the regular season.

While several baseball teams could open a hospital with all of their injured players, hockey and basketball players are taking ice baths between periods and crawling their way from their lockers so they can help their teams win a championship.

For example, take last month's tales of New York Yankees pitchers Chien-Ming Wang and Mike Mussina and Pittsburgh Penguins forward Sidney Crosby. Wang and Mussina tweaked leg muscles and headed directly to the disabled list. Crosby broke his foot and kept playing because the Pens were in the Stanley Cup playoffs for the first time in several years. If that happened in October, you can bet Crosby would be sitting in the stands, while Wang and Mussina would be in the rotation.

(Side note: Crosby has nothing on Bobby Baun. In the 1964 Stanley Cup finals against Detroit, the Toronto defenseman suffered a broken ankle blocking a Gordie Howe shot, but he came back later in that game to score the game-winning goal in overtime and then played game 7 to help the Maple Leafs win the series.)

You see, professional athletes know when to listen to their bodies and when to tell their bodies to shut up. They'll listen to their bodies during the first four or five months of the regular season, but if they even get a whiff of a playoff berth, they'll put their aches and pains aside to help their teams.

Think back to all the great moments in sports history. How many of them involve players ignoring their health?

- Willis Reed hobbling from the locker room to help the New York Knicks beat the Los Angeles Lakers in the 1972 NBA finals and earning MVP honors in the process

- Jack Youngblood helping the Los Angeles Rams reach the 1980 Super Bowl despite suffering a broken fibula earlier in the season

- Kirk Gibson dragging himself from the dugout as a pinch hitter and belting a game-winning home

Putting the cap back on the bottle

Some professionals say medication should be last resort for behavioral problems

By WILLIAM R. DEVOE
devoew@spotlightnews.com

American journalist, humorist and social critic H.L. Mencken once said, "For every difficult problem, there's a solution that's simple, neat and wrong."
As the push to medicate children with behavioral problems enters schools as well as living rooms, some health-care professionals are agreeing.

"I believe medication should be the absolute last thing any physician tries," said Saratoga Springs-based social worker Donna Bird, who uses holistic approaches to behavioral issues in adults and children. "Many of my clients struggle with anxiety, high stress, trauma, depression, eating disorders, life transitions, career and health challenges and performance issues."
Bird holds a master's degree in clinical social work and also has national certifications in eye movement desensitization & reprocessing (EMDR); Ericksonian hypnosis; interactive imagery, Wave Work II; HypnoBirthing; thought field therapy; and wellness coaching. She has been a student of meditation since 1984 and began teaching stress reduction and meditation in 1990. She uses meditation, hypnotherapy, music therapy and relaxation techniques to make patients aware of the underlying causes of their behavioral ailments.

"This awareness subsequently assists them in understanding the origin and nature of their blocks," she said. "These techniques help people integrate past negative experiences and reduce anxiety, which is the underlying cause of most of our behavioral ailments."

State Education Commissioner Richard Mills said at a recent celebration of National Children's Mental Health Awareness Day, "We must remove barriers to learning. We must put the right systems in place to identify and treat children with mental health issues. Even a few students with untreated problems can take a whole school off its educational mission. Working together, educators and mental health professionals can build the systems that will ensure children get the help they need to succeed."

But some child psychiatrists say mental disorders have become all-purpose labels for reclusive or aggressive behavior — or any behavior that is deemed abnormal.

"These behaviors are absolutely being overdiagnosed in children," said Dr. Gabrielle Carlson, professor of psychiatry and pediatrics at Stony Brook University School of Medicine on Long Island. "And the major downside is that people then think they have a solution and are not amenable to listening to alternatives, which may not include drugs."

Carlson said the rising rates of diagnosis and medication use strike some patient advocates as a dangerous fad that exposes ever-younger children to powerful drugs. Antipsychotics like Seroquel or Risperdal, which are commonly prescribed for bipolar disorder, can cause weight gain and changes in blood sugar — risk factors for diabetes.

Bird said schools are the worst offenders of what she calls the "instant gratification" model of dealing with issues such as attention deficit and hyperactivity disorder, depression, aggression and just plain stress.

"I think schools are very eager to put kids on medication," she said, adding that some schools will stipulate parents of "troubled" kids agree to a regimen of medication in order for their kids to stay in school. She said this makes some of her younger patients — Bird said about one out of eight is in school — "school phobic."

"There is so much pressure on our kids already — in school and out — add the fear of being medicated to that and it can overwhelm a child," she said.

Bird said when she encounters parents of children who have been put on medication for the school year, she advises them to take the child off the drugs for the summer.

When asked if she thought that was dangerous advice to give, she replied, "No more dangerous than putting them on the drugs in the first place. You've got to bear in mind, there is very little research as to what those medications can do, long-term, to a child's brain."

Bird said she recognizes that in some cases — chronic depression, for example — medication should be an option, but only as a short-term solution.

She said that her programs of self-evaluation, meditation and other holistic therapies can still help those diagnosed with a chronic illness, and that these approaches should be exhausted before a long-term regimen of medication is accepted.

"Patients should try natural resources before what I believe should be a last resort," she said.

Priority

it is expensive to have children or adults in inpatient settings; and philosophically, because people feel they shouldn't be treating these kids differently," Nickerson said.

Nickerson said school psychologists spend most of their time evaluating and identifying students for special education and don't have a lot of time to take care of the 100 to 150 students suffering from depression, anxiety or attention-deficit disorders.

Having a child in school with an undiagnosed or misdiagnosed mental disorder can be detrimental to the child and to the school. Left untreated, a student with a mental disorder could have a difficult time learning, may become violent, and may be more likely to use drugs and develop poor relationships, Nickerson said.

According to Nickerson, schools are held more accountable for safety under the No Child Left Behind Act, which requires districts to report any violent incident to the state Department of Education. If a district has too many incidents, it may be designated as "persistently dangerous," and parents would have the choice to send their child to another school.

Also, in extreme cases, lawsuits have been brought against school districts for not taking care of a child with a mental disorder after that child committed suicide.

Nickerson said the onset of a mental disorder can happen at any age. Some, such as attention deficit hyperactivity disorder and autism can be detected during preschool years, while others, such as anxiety and depression, can spring up during middle school. Severe disorders like schizophrenia don't usually develop until adulthood.

With limited resources, school districts refer students to other facilities. Nickerson said the likelihood of a child seeing an outside therapist is not great.

"People advocate for children's mental health services in school because all kids go to school," she said.

Vice president for children's mental health services for Northeast Parent and Child Society Joseph Gallagher is one outside community resource. He agrees that students should be getting mental health care in schools.

"The easier the access to care, the more effective it's going to be," he said.

Gallagher said schools need to take a larger role in caring for children's mental health.

"Schools are not approaching this issue in a proactive way. Nothing against the school districts, they are doing a wonderful job; however, in most cases there are a limited number of social workers and they have large caseloads," he said.

In the field of mental health, experts agree that early detection is important. According to the state Office of Mental Health, early detection is more likely to provide a positive effect on a child's emotional growth, social relationships, intellectual development and overall wellbeing.

The state Office of Mental Health is launching a program called Child and Family Clinic Plus. The program is committed to catching early signs of mental disorders through periodic screenings of a child's mental health.

"Rather than inadvertently waiting until kids got seriously disabling conditions, we try to help those kids and their family much earlier," said David Woodlock, deputy commissioner for children and family services at the Office of Mental Health.

As an example of how the program works: A 14-year-old girl who is suffering from depression is also doing poorly in school. Her parents are constantly yelling at her because she is failing, which causes conflicts within her family. All of these factors are piling up on her at a time when she is changing and trying to define herself. The Child and Family Clinic Plus program would catch her depression and treat it before it caused conflicts in her family or other issues.

According to Woodlock, emotional disturbance produces the highest dropout rate of any other disability, and only 30 percent of children over 14 with an emotional disturbance graduate from school with a regular diploma.

"We clearly have to do better at this," Woodlock said. "If we don't begin helping kids and families before multiplier events happen, we'll always be swimming upstream."

About $33 million is budgeted for this Child and Family Clinic Plus, which is part of a larger initiative called Achieving the Promise, which has a $62 million budget. Woodlock said the program is the largest single-year investment in mental health in the state's history.

The program gives money and resources to different non-mental health agencies, such as foster homes, to screen children for mental disturbances only with parental consent. If something is found during screening, the program provides resources for treatment.

Additionally the program provides resources for counselors to work with families.

"One of the critiques that we heard from families across the state is too often, even when a child gets care, what is talked about in the office doesn't make itself to the dinner table," Woodlock said.

The program doesn't specifically give money to schools, but Woodlock said licensed mental health providers are encouraged to do screening in places, such as schools, where children already are.

Besides going to where the kids are, Woodlock said he wants this program to put an equal value on screening for emotional wellbeing with screening for things like vision and hearing in order to do away with the public stigma surrounding mental illness.

"I really do think this is one of, if not the most significant reform effort in children's mental health reform going on throughout the country," Woodlock said.
