After injury, a father stays active advocating stem cell research

By JIM FRANCO

As a former football player, Mike Di Scipio looked forward to working out with his son and showing him the ropes of the game. But all that changed on July 3, 1999, when the father of two dove into the shallow end of a swimming pool, breaking two vertebrae, injuring his spinal cord and rendering him paralyzed from the neck down.

"I coached for many years for my son's Pop Warner and Little League teams, and I'm a hands-on kind of guy. I know how to show them how to do it, and now hav-

Aging sewer line has to go

Supervisor calls for emergency replacement of pipe section

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

A section of Bethlehem's aging main sewer line is crooked and buckling, forcing the town supervisor to declare an emergency to repair the 800-foot pipe. Jack Cunningham said Clough Harbor and Associates engineers have been hired to replace the existing 30-year-old pipe through which 4 million gallons of raw sewage flows each day.

"We have seen an increase in the movement of the pipe so we are moving ahead to replace the pipe," said Cunningham, who, along with Public Works Commissioner Oliver Holmes, has alerted the members of the town board that the work must get done as soon as possible.

Because it has been declared an emergency, the usual bidding process to hire an engineering firm has been bypassed so work can be finished sooner.

"We are seeing progressive movement of the pipe, and it could start leaking as early as this fall," Cunningham said.

Delmar woman stands up for same-sex marriage

Proposed bill would give gay couples the same options as their heterosexual counterparts

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Judy Disco and her partner of 19 years have been Delmar homeowners and taxpayers for the past 12 years. They each hold down administrative positions in their places of employment and are involved in many community activities. They have much in common with their heterosexual neighbors except for one thing: a legal document that says they are married partners.

Now the two women join several of their gay friends who are cautiously optimistic about Gov. Eliot Spitzer's landmark legislation, first proposed in April, that would create civil marriages for all New Yorkers.

"I think it's a wonderful move," said Disco, regarding Spitzer's bill, which establishes equal responsibilities, recognition, benefits and protections for all married couples in New York, regardless of sexual orientation. The bill stipulates that no clergy member or religious institution should be compelled to perform a same-sex ceremony.

"It shows he is committed to follow through on a campaign proposal," Disco said.

Spitzer's legislation would make New York the second state in the country to recognize same-sex marriages, along with Massachusetts, which ruled in court following a lengthy legal battle that gay couples have a right to marry.

"The bill allows same-sex cou-

The project cost is estimated at $800,000 to completely replace the pipe located next to the town's sewer treatment plant on Dinmore Road. The Bethlehem Town Board looked at several alternatives that would temporarily solve the problem, but each option was costly. The board is expected to pass a resolution regarding the replacement of the pipe at its Wednesday, June 13, meeting.

"The cost of constructing scaffolds around the existing pipe's joints was about $130,000," said Cunningham.

The new pipe will be built next

Two charged with DWI

An Albany man was charged with driving while intoxicated by Bethlehem police after authorities observed smoke coming out of the vehicle he was riding in as it was being towed.

Thomas Vincent, 59, of 799 Livingston Ave., Albany, was stopped on River Road in Glenmont by Bethlehem police after being observed traveling over the center line with his vehicle.

Smoke was also coming from his car as it was being towed by a pickup truck. Vincent was charged with DWI third offense, a felony, and consumption of alcohol in a motor vehicle.

He was transported to Albany Medical Center for evaluation following the arrest after complaining of chest pains. Vincent was sent to Albany County jail without bail and has a return court date of July 10.

• Gary Mangini, 39, of 130 Maple Ave., Selkirk, was charged with DWI and driving with more than .08-percent blood alcohol content after being observed by police speeding in a motorcycle on Maple Avenue. When he was stopped, he told police he has drunk some beers at his uncle's residence. Mangini was placed in custody and will appear in Bethlehem Town Court on July 10.

• David Brozowski, 41, of 34 Curry Road, Selkirk is in the Albany County jail after being charged with felony criminal possession of a weapon, third degree.

Brozowski was arrested by Bethlehem police on an active warrant from the Albany County Probation Department. He was processed and sent to the county jail on unrelated charges. The arrest occurred on Tuesday, June 5.

A driver who suffered a coughing spell hit a telephone pole, severing it in two, on Maple Avenue in Voorheesville. The Thursday, June 7, accident happened on Maple Avenue in Voorheesville. The driver was not seriously injured in the mishap. Jim Cuzzo/Spotlight

Vehicle severs V'ville power pole

Maple Road in Voorheesville was closed to all traffic for one hour on Thursday, June 7, between 9:30 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. when a man driving a gray pickup truck drove his vehicle into a telephone pole, cutting the pole in two. A large cable wire held the two sections of the pole together until crews removed the pole.

The driver was taken to St. Peter's Hospital for precautionary measures, but no other injuries occurred.

"The man had a coughing spell and then he blacked out," said Dan Coons, captain of the New Salem Fire Police.

New Salem Fire Department and Voorheesville Fire Department responded to the scene, along with Albany County sheriff's deputies and state police.

The accident occurred in front of a single-family residence at 86 Maple Road.

National Grid and Time Warner Cable were called to the scene. No power was lost, but crews from Time Warner were trying to restore cable that was lost to some nearby homes.

Cable was restored and the power pole was replaced later that day.

St. Thomas receives 7-year accreditation

Catholic school celebrates 50 years of faith-based learning

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

St. Thomas the Apostle School in Delmar got some excellent academic news on its 50th anniversary.

The Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Elementary Schools gave a seven-year accreditation to St. Thomas school in April, following a two-year evaluation by a team of academic professionals from Middle States who evaluated the school's strategic plan.

"This accreditation is a reflection and affirmation that we are who we know ourselves to be: an outstanding Catholic school," wrote Principal Thomas J. Kane in a letter to the school community.

Kane said the accreditation process by the middle states association was performed following the school's own self-study.

"We are very invested in the school, and we know we have a great school," said Mike Knight, a member of the St. Thomas school board and school development chairman. "The results we got through this process reaffirmed this is a terrific school."

Accreditation is a process of peer review designed to strengthen the quality of education. A school has to have well-defined goals consistent with its mission of higher learning and has to follow through on achieving these goals year after year to maintain the standard of excellence that goes with accreditation. St. Thomas' mission is to develop a sense of Catholic identity and unity in all segments of the school.

"With the accreditation comes challenges that we have to live up to these standards," Kane said.

St. Thomas is a Catholic educational institution that currently enrolls 235 students in pre-kindergarten through eighth grade. Next year, the enrollment at St. Thomas is expected to increase to 260 students.

Kane said he does not envision any enrollment decline when the Bethlehem Central School District's new Eagle Elementary School is built in 2008. "The parents who send children to a Catholic school send them for a reason that public schools cannot legally meet," Kane said of the faith-based curriculum provided by the school. "Parents are looking for something more."

Knight has three children enrolled in St. Thomas with a fourth who recently graduated.

"We are very fortunate that we are blessed with a supportive parish who understands our school and a parent base that works together toward goals for the kids," said Knight.

The parish was founded in 1907, and the school was constructed in 1957. One of the school's main projects during its 50th anniversary year is the construction of a new playground.

Artist focuses on starting photography school in Africa

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

A fundraiser set for Friday, June 15, in Delmar will assist a Glenmont photographer who is opening a school of photography in Ghana.

The event, which will feature a West African buffet and the Liberian Unity Dancers, is from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Delmar Reformed Church at 386 Delaware Ave.

Carrie Brown of Glenmont, known as "Adzo" to her Ghanaian friends, will head off on her third odyssey to Ghana in July to start the Kekeli School of Photography in the country's coastal region of Woe.

"Kekeli" means daylight in Ewe, the dialect of the Volta Region.

"The vocational program will work with kids who can't afford to attend secondary school," said Brown, who said she has already seen Ghanaian students selling their own portrait photography.

"They are really talented," said Brown. "I was very impressed."

The students use Olympus point-and-shoot, 35 mm cameras, while Brown uses single-lens-reflex film and digital cameras.

Brown's first trip to the area, in 2002, was a six-month internship that was part of her study at the Savannah College of Art.

"Ghana is very different," said Brown. "The people there are very welcoming so I instantly felt like I was home."

On that trip, Brown worked with many schools and several children, helping them photograph important community events. She returned in 2003 on a second journey after finishing her master's degree to begin an after-school photography pilot program in the schools. The First Reformed Church of Bethlehem helped Brown raise money for her second trip.

"Born on a Monday" is Carrie Brown's self-published book of photographs taken in Ghana. A fundraiser for Brown will be held in July to raise money for her third trip to that nation. Brown is hoping to begin a school of photography on her next trip, which will last one year.

"It was so successful, and the community I lived in was so excited about the project that a local paramount chief held a photography exhibition at his house," Brown said.

The chief, Togbe Addo, was the one who first posed the idea of starting a photography school.

Brown self-published a book of photos from that trip titled "Born on a Monday."

"People in Ghana are named by the day and week they were born," said Brown. "I was born on Monday so people in Ghana called me Adzo. That's where the title comes from."

A nonprofit organization called Cross-Cultural Solutions based in Westchester County assisted Brown on her Ghana trip that was the inspiration for her book of photography.

"It has been just so wonderful that Carrie has developed a passion and sense of connection with the people of Ghana and continues to develop that relationship," said Brandon Wick, senior manager of communications for CCS.

Through the fundraiser and several grants she has applied for, Brown is hoping to raise $30,000 to help found Kekeli School.

"I try to travel light with light clothing and my equipment. That will include as many photography books as I can bring," Brown said.

Since Brown is staying for a full year, she will trade the four seasons of the Northeast for the two major weather seasons in Ghana.

"Ghana is really warm, and there are two seasons: a dry season and a rainy season," said Brown.

The suggested donation is $10. For information, contact 465-6576.

Young dancers tap into our hearts

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
news@spotlightnews.com

It's tutu season again. Little girls across the land are donning itchy, poufy, sequin-laden costumes and bringing tears to their mommies' and daddies' eyes.

What's a dance recital if not a chance to get choked up?

There are lots of reasons for the crying. The main reason is pride. Parents beam when they see their baby up on the stage. That includes the performers that are literally babies, as young as 2 or 3 years old, and the teenagers as well.

Another reason for tears is that watching your child on stage makes you realize how quickly the years fly by. Is that my baby on stage? I can't believe how fast she's grown. When did her legs get so long?

The master of ceremonies at my daughter's recital warned parents that it takes only a blink of an eye for the babies to turn into high school seniors. This type of information causes the appearance of lots of hankies in the audience.

Sometimes the dancers themselves cry. This is most common among the tiniest tots, who get frightened when the curtain rises. It's not easy performing in front of a big crowd, especially when it's past your bedtime.

At this year's recital, one preschool ballerina, dressed as an Eskimo, ran off stage as soon as the music began. I'm not sure if she cried or not. Her parents may have cried if they had pre-paid for the video. But really, for very young children, the accomplishment of participating in weekly dance classes should not be diminished by a case of stage fright. There's always next year.

Other criers include the dancers' younger siblings, because they are forced to sit for three hours, which is about two hours and 55 minutes longer than they have the patience to stay still. They are hungry and thirsty and bored and they wear themselves out whining, "Is it over yet?" The lucky ones fall asleep in a parent's arms.

Sometimes a parent or grandparent falls asleep too. It's either due to the lateness of the hour or the inability to maintain interest in other people's children. These family members would be just as happy to duck out after they've seen their child perform.

That might work at a piano recital, but at the dance recital, every child is part of the grand finale, so there's no leaving until the entire show is over.

When I was a kid, my recitals were held on the afternoon of Father's Day. The performance venue was a school situated directly across the street from a golf course. I recently asked my dad what he thought about that. He said, "It was a pain in the you-know-what (he used the real word), but, hey, when it's your children, you go see them, that's what you do."

I happen to enjoy being at my daughter's recital. It's the events just preceding the recital that are a pain in my, well, neck.

The recital challenges start when the costume arrives. The costume is never a single item; it's always a package, including parts such as a leotard, tights, a hat and gloves. Plus there are often accessories like bows, tambourines, canes, maracas and parasols. And you may have to dye the tap shoes or ballet slippers your kid's been wearing all year to match the costume.

When you get the costume, the first thing you must do is label all the parts in preparation for the dress rehearsal. The goal is to come home from the dress rehearsal and still have everything you need for the recital.

With 26 identical costumes, if two kids are missing gloves and only one unlabelled pair is found, there's going to be a tug of war between moms. This is why it's vital to have your name in every piece.

The catch is that the costumes pieces rarely have tags on which you can write your child's name. Or if there is a tag, it will "bother" your child and need to be removed. And you can't use permanent marker because it will show through.

The answer to this dilemma is masking tape, which you rip into tiny strips, label and stick inside each costume part. If you sew, which I don't, there's probably a way to sew name labels in.

This year on the way to the dress rehearsal my 10-year-old daughter asked if "we" had labeled the costume. "We" hadn't. I asked her to please keep track of her parts.

My sister-in-law, Lynda, told me she still does the labeling, even though her youngest dancer is now 17. As soon as the costume comes home she gets out the masking tape.

She learned her lesson years ago, when her oldest daughter, now a college student, had not kept track of all her costume parts. It was four o'clock on the afternoon of the recital when she discovered Leslie didn't have her ballet slippers. She freaked out, ran to the shoe store and ended up with a pair too big, because it was all she could find. When they got to the theater it turned out the teacher had picked up the shoes after the dress rehearsal.

Looking back she realized she shouldn't have panicked - there would have been a ballerina in another class to borrow shoes from.

My daughter has never lost track of her tap shoes, but she does tend to outgrow them, usually about three weeks before the recital. She'll say, "Mom, my shoes are too tight." I'll say, "Then I will definitely buy you new shoes. In the fall, that is."

I can cram her feet into the shoes, but I can't get her hair into the required style. At our recital, each dancer's hair must be styled in a bun or a French braid. I cannot implement either of those hairdos. In fact, anything more complicated than a sloppy ponytail or a basic braid is beyond me. I'm lucky if I can locate a single hair band.

The first year, I started reaching out to other parents for help. "You don't know how to do a bun?" one mom asked with astonishment, "I guess your mom must have done your hair when you danced."

But this was not the case. I actually come from a long line of women who just wear their hair down. We're called moms without buns.

I can't even bobby-pin my kid's hat to her head. I ask another mom to help with that, too. I know how to work a bobby pin (and so does my own mother), but according to Rachel, I jab too hard and that's why she has to keep moving. She patiently and silently lets other moms jab her scalp. I don't know why that is, but it saves us both from a lot of yelling, so it works for me.

I want to save my voice and energy for clapping and cheering when my daughter's on stage.

Once she's in costume, hair and makeup done, I breathe a sigh of relief. At my insistence she smiles and poses so I can snap a few photographs before I run down to take my seat in the audience.

I grip my tissues and wait for the show to begin.

Challenges harder for some

The little things can really get to us: standing too long in line at the supermarket; sitting in traffic; telling our children yet again to put their dirty socks into the hamper instead of leaving them on the floor.

It's easy to forget that these aren't truly problems, until we encounter people who have overcome true adversity. Our centerpiece stories on Page 1 this week describe some of the ways that people have faced daily hurdles the rest of us can't imagine.

Editorial

What if you couldn't bend over to pick up a piece of paper on the floor? What if you needed help putting your clothes on? Imagine for a minute that the job we only ever complain about was suddenly something we just couldn't do. In that case, money issues could move from a juggling act with the credit cards to choosing between repairing a leaking roof or buying groceries.

When we learn about how people have overcome difficulties, it's normal to feel a sense of admiration for them. We can add a sense of emulation to that. People who read Quinn Coffey's obituary this week can only hope to leave a legacy as strong as the one that his grieving family can use as comfort in the years they face without him.

Life offers us many chances to gain perspective, and when we stand in the company of those who have achieved beyond what we might believe their abilities are, it should give us all a sense of perspective. For most of us, life is very good. We should be wary of turning minor hardships into major difficulties.

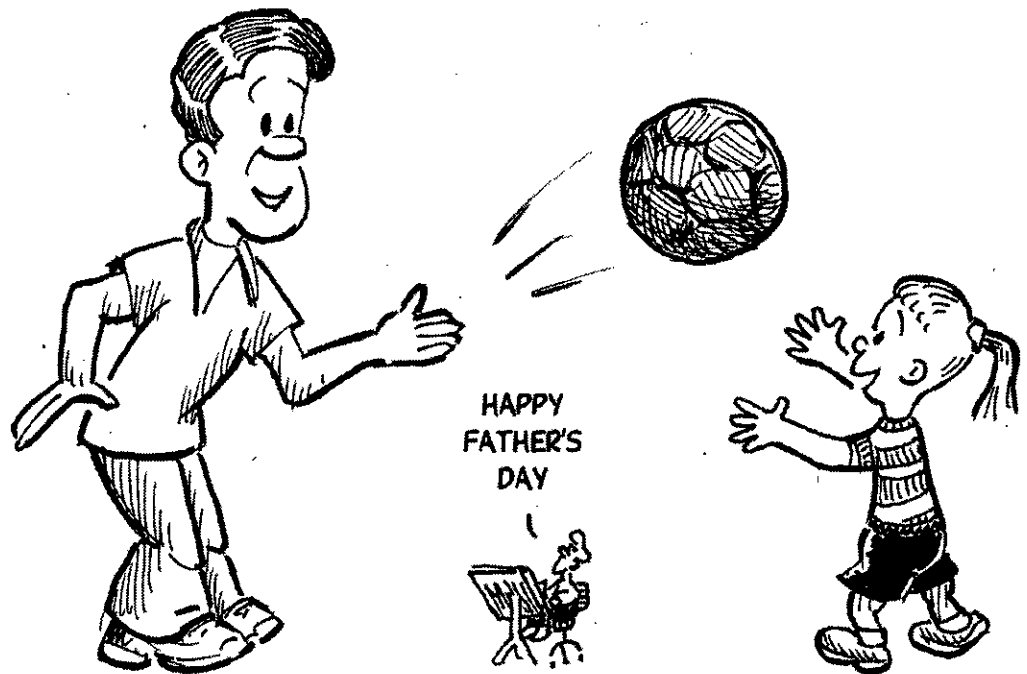

Let's learn instead from the example of those who can show us that nothing is impossible.

Thanks, Dad

He loves a chain saw, wields a mean fork at the grill, and has yet to find a televised sporting event that he'll just click past. Today's father also cooks inside the house, is a diaper-changing whiz, and has his own special lullabies to put his babies to sleep.

So, when Father's Day rolls around on Sunday, give your father a call, buy him a tie and make sure to tell him you love him.

MOST ANY MAN CAN BE A FATHER, BUT...

IT TAKES A REAL MAN TO BE A DADDY!

First Father's Day worth wait

By GRAHAM PARKER
parkerg@spotlightnews.com

I'm sure I'm not qualified to write this.

What do I know about Father's Day? Other than the fact that grooming products, sporting-goods store gift certificates and coffee make for good gifts.

I have been told I will be included in this year's Father's Day activities. That seems strange to me. First, technically, I am not a father yet. Not to hash out some spiritual debate here, but let's just say it won't be until September that I will have the physical evidence I need to say, "I am a father."

"See, here's my kid."

And second, I wouldn't feel right taking a spot at the fathers' table, and maybe a head seat, with only sonograms and a pregnant wife to show. If I am going to push in on that table, I need to bring a fat stack: baby bottles, rags, diapers, toys and the collection of rocks my child would have spent the morning prying out of the driveway.

"Look, Daddy."

"That's nice, show Mommy."

Having a child is a small fraction of fatherhood. I think.

My dad had me. I think he would agree that was the easy part. All the other things — dismantling his tools; sticking forks in the electrical sockets; setting the woods on fire; digging holes in the yard; the time Steve and I tried to make alcohol out of Fleischmann's yeast, sugar and root beer; a few attempts at flying mechanisms — that's what makes you a dad. That's the hard part.

What am I going to talk about at this Father's Day table (not that my dad squares off with my father-in-law every Father's Day with "when my boy was 10..." but really, what will I do there)?

Best beers and who's hotter can only go so far. And let's face it, no man agrees on those things. It's akin to striking up a conversation by throwing out comments about the weather to see who bites.

I'll tell you what is going to happen. On Mother's Day, all my wife got (other than maternity clothes from me — that's right) was a pat on the belly and a slew of witchcraft-like tales on how to determine the baby's sex. My wife and I decided not to find out the sex until the baby is born.

"If your third trimester begins on the same day the Queen Anne's Revenge ran aground at the Outer Banks in 1718, then you're having a boy," the women would say.

"If you dream of snakes you're going to have a girl."

"When your feet swell and their width is twice the length of your forearm, then you're having a boy, unless you are left-handed, then it's a girl."

"No more going out for you, huh?" That's what the guys — the fathers — will say.

"Kiss that Harley goodbye. You may want to rename your dream boat 'College.' You may want to trade that wide-screen in for a portable 10-inch TV and a better shed."

These guys are going to watch me sweat.

Fatherhood is a unique fraternity. And like any fraternity, the membership dues are costly, often requiring humiliation to humble the newbies.

Any one of those fathers on Sunday, June 17, could tell me that it is not as scary as people would have you think. But they won't. Many have been waiting 25 to 30 years for the day the new recruits show up. There will be no pulling punches here. This is hazing. Pass it, and maybe they will let you in on some trade secrets.

"Always dress the baby in mismatched clothes. The five-second rule is more like a guideline. Always use your sleeve to wipe the crusties off the baby's face. Always put the diaper on backwards, inside out and over the baby's head. That way you won't be asked to do these tasks again."

While I will certainly employ some of these devices, mixed with a few of my own, chances are I won't be doing a lot of those things, not to hash out some sexist debate here. But, like my father, I will be the one to solve the crime of the flaming driveway and find the missing son or daughter. It will be me siphoning the Kool-Aid out of the lawn mower. I will be the one putting the bike together, giving lessons on how far to lead the receiver, explaining why boys are so mean, why high school sucks, how to drive stick and why you should go to a college as far from home as possible.

And I'm looking forward to it.

Prism concert was a shining event

Editor, The Spotlight:

On the evening of Wednesday, June 5, members of the Bethlehem Central High School orchestras performed in the 12th annual Prism Concert under the direction of David Beck.

The symphonic and concert orchestras — along with a jazz ensemble and percussion, string, piano, voice, flute and harp ensembles — performed classical to contemporary works. The concert culminated with "Pirates of the Caribbean," with the nearly 200 members of both orchestras participating.

As stated by Mr. Beck before the concert began, Prism is a concept developed at the Eastman School of Music, which he effectively employed to highlight individual and group efforts during the 65-minute uninterrupted program.

The concert was, simply stated, outstanding. I am quite confident the 700-plus members of the audience were equally impressed as evidenced by the five-minute standing ovation at the end.

The efforts made by the individual student members of these orchestras are to be commended. These efforts reflect highly on the quality of the music department within the school district and on the individual and group instruction these students receive. The music program in the Bethlehem Central School District is quite honestly the best in the Capital District. The orchestras and ensembles have received many accolades including gold and gold with distinction at the New York State School Music Association (NYSSMA) Festival; further, many members of these orchestras and ensembles continue to be part of area all-state and all-state orchestras. The concerts given by these students many times during the year are consistently outstanding and should be enjoyed by all members of our community.

I would encourage each member of the Bethlehem community to listen and to appreciate what I see is a great gift for our town.

St. Thomas grateful for generous neighbors

Editor, The Spotlight:

St. Thomas the Apostle School PTO and school community would like to express our sincere appreciation to the GE Selkirk Employees Good Neighbor Fund members and Lafarge North America for their generous donations of $500 each to aid us in the purchase of an automatic external defibrillator for our school.

Both of these companies operate with an emphasis on the safety of their employees, and as a school, we are aware of the safety of our students, staff and families as well. We are appreciative of the commitment of both companies in assuring us of their support of our efforts to purchase this important piece of equipment.

We are fortunate to have such caring "good neighbors!"

Thank you!

Students want bullying to stop

Editor, The Spotlight:

We would like to address the issue of harmful bullying of people due to their sexual orientation. We feel that this should be addressed because 28 percent of gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender students drop out of school because they are bullied. Twenty-two percent of gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender students skip school due to feeling unsafe. These people should not be bullied just because of their sexual orientation. Victims of this bullying are both male and female, and depression is more severe in gay, lesbian, bisexual and transsexual (GLBT) youth due to all the bullying. GLBT students hear anti-gay slurs about 26 times a day.

We would like to suggest that parents talk to their children about the consequences of bullying and also suggest they discuss the problems. If we don't take the steps to prevent this bullying, then it will just get worse.

Across the nation, there are many organizations to help gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender students deal with the bullying.

Two of them are GLSEN and NASP resources. Both of these organizations train staff members to protect people and treat them respectfully. GLSEN and NASP resources help set up programs in school to help the bullied victims.

Community loses a true gentleman and scholar

Editor, The Spotlight:

Wiley Dobbs died on May 29, and many friends and neighbors will miss him.

As a volunteer driver for Community Caregivers, I got to know Wiley during the last seven months of his life. I drove him for his monthly visits to see his sister, a resident at Albany County Nursing Home.

Chatting with Wiley during our trips to the nursing home, I became very fond of this World War II Veteran. He would never have wanted to have me call him a war hero, just as he did not want to have a memorial service held in his honor. But he was a true "gentleman and a scholar," even though he always wore a cap and an old, stained jacket to the nursing home.

Sometimes, I would ask if he'd mind if we made a quick stop on the way home for some small errand, such as dropping off the grocery order I had purchased for another client. His reply was always the same: "Sure, whatever turns y'on."

He never failed to thank me for the ride, and to ask if I had a Community Caregivers envelope with me so he could send a donation.

Wiley loved to talk about the good old days, when he used to take his grandson skiing, and the years he spent working for the state Department of Agriculture and Markets. His favorite memories, though, were of his time in the Air Force, over a half-century ago. He was very modest about his accomplishments, but he gave me a copy of the book written by his war buddy, C.B. "Red" Harper, who incorporated several excerpts from Wiley's diary into his book, "Buffalo Gal." The book also includes a few photographs of Wiley as a young crewmember of the B-17 he flew in during the war.

Wiley will be missed and fondly remembered by hundreds of people whose lives he touched, even though he would be the last to think that. Although he left strict orders not to have a memorial service, we can simply remember this quiet and gentle man and the lasting impact he made on our lives.

Whatever happened to patriotism?

Town's kindness was touching

Editor, The Spotlight:

Traveling up Delaware Avenue from the shopping Plaza to the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 3185, I counted three American flags flown at three private residences, one flag flown at a business, and flags flown at three gas stations.

What happened to our town pride?

A few years back the merchants at the Four Corners all flew a flag in front of their establishments. What happened there?

There was a great rush a few years back to paste an American symbol on our cars to show we were united and proud of our beautiful country. The popular decoration outside our homes now seems to be a colorful banner depicting a basket of flowers or a Disney character. Cute, but showing what? The American flag is a most colorful display of our pride and courage and we should wave it proudly and often.

Conners will speak up

Editor, The Spotlight:

I read in the media that Mike Conners, Albany County Comptroller, is running for reelection this fall but that the Albany County Democratic Committee may not back him.

I never knew much about Mr. Conners until recently. I have family members in Albany County Nursing Home and have found Mr. Conners to be a strong watchdog for the elderly in our Albany County Nursing Home. He is someone who cares deeply about the residents of Albany County and tries to do his best for them.

There is an old quote that says: "Evil triumphs when good people remain silent." Albany County residents need to know that Mike Conners is a good man who won't remain silent.

Photo subjects should have arms, hands straight at sides

Editor, The Spotlight:

Certain times when I am viewing a photograph of an individual or a group in the newspaper, I find that many have their arms and hands in different positions and locations.

I strongly feel that a person should have their arms and hands straight down on each side of their body.

If individuals comply with my suggestion, I am certain their photograph will be more attractive and appealing.

When our son Quinn's death became public, the outpouring of support for us, and affection and respect for him, was simply overwhelming. To Life building gets a hand from United Way

Volunteers paint and plant at cancer education center

cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

A group of 10 workers from Pearl Carroll and Associates of Latham arrived at To Life Cancer Education and Support Center in Delmar at the crack of dawn on Wednesday, June 6, armed with rakes, hoes, and other garden and painting tools to begin a daylong Hands on Capitaland beautification project.

Hands on Capitaland is a United Way of Northeastern New York annual event that brings together more than 700 volunteers from business organizations to assist in several community projects for a host of human service agencies; including To Life of Delmar.

"They were here at 7:30 a.m. this morning before I arrived with coffee and doughnuts," said Thea Hoeth, executive director of To Life.

Elizabeth Meyer, director of human resources for Pearl Carroll, said her employees are doing everything from priming walls on the second floor of the building to planting a flower garden outside as part of the company's effort to assist the Delmar organization.

"This is the first time Pearl Carroll employees have participated in Hands On Capitaland," said Meyer, who is familiar with the United Way project from working with another organization.

"I think employees get a different impression when they are involved in a project as opposed to donating money," Meyer said.

Anyone entering the To Life building on June 6 would have thought a major thousand-dollar renovation was taking place because of the amount of work that was getting done.

"What we want to do is dedicate our first floor to our client base for the boutique, support groups, exercise classes and much more," said Hoeth.

The second floor will be used as office space for staff. Hoeth said a group of Teamsters came in four years ago to paint the downstairs and work out in the yard when the agency first participated in the Hands on Capitaland event.

"I think employees get a different impression when they are involved in a project as opposed to donating money."

Elizabeth Meyer

"A lot of this work has been community support," Hoeth said. "The town of Bethlehem has been great to To Life."

Located at 410 Kenwood Ave. in Delmar, To Life is a breast cancer education and support agency that serves 5,000 people in 10 counties, including many hundreds of walk-in visitors inside the Delmar building.

Lynn Lekakis, who represents the United Way of Northeastern New York said other sites in Albany, Schenectady and Saratoga will be touched by Hands on Capitaland projects.

"Gallery space inside the Saratoga County Arts Council will be painted and Vale Cemetery will see a major cleanup," said Lekakis. "It's a very feel-good event where people can see the impact the day they are working on a project."

In-kind support donated by 30 area businesses in last year's Hands on Capitaland event valued $300,000.

"It's great," said Pearl Carroll employee Jackie Ziegler, who was manning a scraper and paint roller for the day. "We're having a good time."

Flying with the 109th

Some people are just born with it. No, I am not talking about good looks, bad skin or ear hair; but rather, a passion for news.

I started writing for newspapers in my teens and still can't give it up. Now it is time to blog about a great event I get to be part of.

The 109th Airlift Wing of the New York Air National Guard invited me to fly with them to Greenland from June 18 to 22 as they train for missions at the north and south poles. My house is in the landing pattern for the 109th, and it seems natural that I get to know the men and women who shake my china each time they fly overhead.

The 109th is based in Scotia at the Stratton Air National Guard base. They fly the C-130 Hercules aircraft, a four-engine, turbo propeller behemoth that can carry loads in excess of 150,000 lbs. The difference between the 109th and other units with the C-130s is the skis. The only planes of this type with skis are here. This is why this unit is so important to missions in the Arctic and Antarctic.

All of the structures and supplies for the research stations in Greenland and the South Pole had to be packed into one of the 109th's aircraft. Over-ice transportation is not reliable in these unforgiving environments.

So why is this important?

The buzz these days is global warming. If the winter is too warm, it is global warming. If the storms are strong, it is attributed to global warming. So how do we know the globe is warming? Research stations at the poles.

Scientists from all over the world use the 109th to get them where the ozone layer is thinnest, at the poles.

Last June, the New York Times and other media outlets ran stories about the rapidly melting ice sheet in Greenland. This event sent shockwaves through some scientific communities as a sign that the world is warming at an alarming rate. During the past 12 months, global warming has been a topic of conversation worldwide. Research usually follows conversations of this proportion.

One note: While it is true that Greenland's glaciers melted more rapidly in 2006, scientists report a more normal ice melt this year. So you can't blame the flooded basement on global warming just yet.

Now I am going up the same path with the 109th as its flight crews hone their skills flying in and around 1 million square miles of ice. It is summertime in Greenland, which means 24-hours-a-day sunlight, warmer temperatures (0-32 degrees Fahrenheit), research near the north pole and flying with the 109th.

Although I am not sure how stable modern technology will be in Greenland, I will record my trip for you. I will blog each day, take pictures, record audio and write down what I see and hear.

For those of us who live in and around Schenectady County Airport and Stratton, it is time to find out more about the 109th.

This blog will have video and text entries, so sit back, suit up and enjoy the flight.

Please feel free to comment on any story on spotlightnews.com. We want your feedback. Depending on availability, I may be able to answer questions posted to the comment areas.

So the next time your china shakes, look up, it may just be me flying overhead.

Orange trees lure students back to elementary school

Slingerlands Elementary School third-grade teacher Jane McGinn welcomed 22 former students back to her classroom recently. When the students were in McGinn's class, they planted orange seeds, and she told them that if the seeds grew, she'd invite the students back for a picnic when they graduated.

Their knees bumped the edges of the desk, but, otherwise, the high school seniors looked pretty comfortable back in their third grade class.

"We were doing a pollination unit, and someone was eating an orange," Slingerlands Elementary School's third-grade teacher Jane McGinn explained of the reason for the reunion. "We planted orange seeds, and I told the kids if they grew, I'd invite them back for a picnic when they graduated."

Sure enough, there are two big orange trees in McGinn's classroom; and 22 out of 24 of the past students hunkered down to share pizza and stories.

"There's a group of us on Facebook (an online community), called 'Mrs. McGinn's class,'" Kevin Colbay said. "She was an awesome teacher." Star Lab, flag football, eating Japanese food at Ta-Ke in Loudonville, and of course, the song about their former principal came to mind.

"M-U-R-P-H-Y," the students sang to the tune of "Harrigan."

"Do you remember 'Animal Hospital?'" Cailie Maestro asked.

Somehow, McGinn explained, a boy had brought back a stuffed beaver from a family trip, and it led to a class mascot. Soon, prized Beanie Babies made it into the classroom.

"We had so many jokes," Maestro said.

If Beanie Babies were a sign of the students' third grade times, so was the movie "Men in Black," and a videotaped segment of some of the students lip synching the song - complete with McGinn as the alien - played on the television during the reunion.

"She hasn't changed a bit," said Lynn Horn, who was the Slingerlands school nurse for many years and attended the get-together.

McGinn thanked the students for inviting her to be the Slingerlands representative at their graduation. "I cried when I opened the letter," McGinn said. "I can't be there, but you'll be in my thoughts. At Slingerlands, everyone's eyes sparkled, and I'm glad to see they still do."

A question of learning

Board will decide whether to offer full-day K at next meeting

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

<COPY>The Bethlehem school board once again turned its attention to the topic of full-day kindergarten at the Wednesday, June 6, meeting.

School administrators made a lengthy presentation covering the taxpayer cost of a full-day program and its advantages over the current half-day schedule. Assistant superintendent Steve O'Shea said an influx of state aid in 2009 will fully support the cost of full-day kindergarten for that school year. That state aid formula changes in 2010 and beyond.

"In the second year, we would have a local cost of $379,000, and in three years, the local cost decreases to $105,000," O'Shea said.

Superintendent Les Loomis

said the district's estimates are conservative and additional state aid will likely be available.

The board also considered allowing parents the option of enrolling their children in a half-day program for the first year of the new full-day curriculum. That option increases costs by an additional $52,000 to provide mid-day transportation.

"We don't feel the half-day option is the ideal solution, we are just giving you the alternative," Loomis said.

Board member James Lytle said trying to blend a half-day and full-day curriculum "diminishes the value of the overall program."

Helen Salamone, director of the district's Early Learning Center, said increased flexibility for teachers and students along with more overall teaching time are some advantages of a full-day kindergarten program.

"It would provide a more developmental approach," said Salamone.

Exploratory arts would increase by two sessions a week for students and longer blocks of math, science and social studies would occur.

Board member Lynne Lenhardt said she was still waiting to hear some of the current advantages of the half-day kindergarten program, a question she posed at the board's previous meeting.

"Since I didn't get any (answers), I guess what we have been doing for years and years is not good," Lenhardt said.

Loomis said a half-day program has served the district well, but now is the right time to make a change.

"There is increasing interest in improving education across the board," said Loomis, referring to the state Department of Education and Board of Regents, which are in support of full-day kindergarten, along with Gov. Eliot Spitzer, who is proposing a pre-kindergarten program for children in the state.

Assistant Superintendent Michael Tebbano pointed out that 88 percent of the public school districts in the state already have full-day kindergarten programs.

Board member Richard Svenson said many high-performing Suburban Council districts still have a half-day kindergarten program.

"Our colleagues in the Suburban Council are watching what happens here," said Loomis.

The board will continue its discussion of full-day kindergarten at the June 20 meeting, when members are expected to decide whether to put the issue to voters in the fall.

Local teens charged in pellet gun robbery

By JIM CJOZZO
 cjozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Two Bethlehem youths are behind bars and a third has been arrested in connection with an armed robbery outside the Glenmont Shopping Plaza on Friday afternoon, June 1.

Daniel Stevens, 18, of 105 Jefferson Road, Glenmont, and Christopher Hartmann, 1E, of 1745 New Scotland Road, Slingerlands, are both charged with robbery first degree, criminal use of a firearm, conspiracy, and grand larceny, all felonies. Stevens was additionally charged with providing a false statement to police officers.

Bethlehem police report that

Stevens and Hartmann allegedly told two acquaintances that they would meet them for a potential drug buy outside the Glenmont Shopping Plaza. According to the investigation, when the two victims, also Bethlehem teenagers, arrived at the scene for their purchase, they were allegedly thrown to the ground and told to turn over their wallets. Hartmann allegedly pointed a loaded pellet gun to the head of one of the victims and demanded money.

Several police officers were called to the scene after the incident when one of the victims told his father what had occurred, and his father contacted the authorities. One of the victims had several cuts on his hand and grass stains on his clothing and a shoe missing. Police and a maintenance worker at the plaza found the victims' wallets near the scene of the crime.

After gathering more information, police asked Stevens and Hartmann to come to the station for questioning.

Police said the two initially denied any involvement in the crime and said they were at the mall all day. According to police, Hartmann eventually admitted to the crime and told police the location of the weapon used. Police recovered the weapon and about $100 cash that had been taken from the victims. Stevens and Hartmann were processed and arraigned in Bethlehem Town Court and sent to Albany County jail without bail. An order of protection to stay away from both victims was also issued.

A third individual, Darnel Brabham, 16, of 67 Patterson Drive, Glenmont, was charged with criminal possession of stolen property. Police said Brabham was in possession of $40 of stolen money taken from the victims who were robbed.

ples to have property ownership and inheritance, spousal benefits, child custody, pension benefits and everything that is provided for other married couples," said Jennifer Lange of the Institute for Humanist Studies based in Albany.

Disco is more outspoken about same-sex marriage than her partner, an elementary school administrator, and asked that her partner's last name not be printed.

"We met through friends in Albany," said Disco, also a member of the Capital District Gay and Lesbian Community Council.

"I make it known on any job interview that I am a lesbian," said Disco, who said she would not work for any organization that is not tolerant and accepting of gays and lesbians.

Following Massachusetts' 2004 court decision, President George W. Bush called Massachusetts' stand on the issue "deeply troubling." Views on the issue remain divided, and New York still has a long way to go before Spitzer's bill clears the Assembly and Senate.

According to his Communications Director Mark Hansen, state Senate Majority Leader Joseph Bruno, R-Brunswick, is opposed to gay marriage.

"The issue is not a priority as we look to close this year's session," said Hansen.

The Rev. Duane Motley, who bills himself as the state's only full-time Christian lobbyist, is the founder and executive director of

"There are 55 sponsors who have signed their name to the Assembly bill, and 76 votes are needed for passage," said Lange.

State Sen. Thomas K. Duane, D-Manhattan, and state Assemblyman Richard Gottfried, D-Manhattan, are the main sponsors of the bill in the Assembly and Senate.

"I am hopeful," said Disco.

Same-sex couples say they are fighting for what they believe are the same rights any married couple has, including mutual health benefits and other spousal protections.

"We are not able to file joint income tax returns," said Disco. "If something happens to my partner, I am taxed on any money left to me because we are not married."

Health-care proxies and powers of attorney are other legal issues that get complicated for same-sex couples in New York who cannot legally marry.

"We want the same civil rights as anyone else has," Disco said.

Spitzer and several members of the state Legislature agree.

"This legislation would create equal legal protection and responsibilities for all individuals who seek to marry or have their marriage protected in the state of New York," said Spitzer when the bill was proposed in late April.

Lange believes the bill will make it through the Assembly, and from there it has a fighting chance to pass the Senate.

"Lobbying will be key," Lange said. "If all advocacy groups get together, call and write, it's definitely a possibility."

"The bill allows same-sex couples to have property ownership and inheritance, spousal benefits, child custody, pension benefits and everything that is provided for other married couples."

Jennifer Lange

New Yorkers for Constitutional Freedom. His organization represents 2,000 churches and 500 Christian organizations.

Motley calls Spitzer's bill "paying off the political debt of the homosexual community."

"Same-sex marriage is wrong," said Motley. "Once you change the definition, you destroy the basic family unit."

He said the proposal would also damage the basic public school teaching structure. "This would then be taught in our public schools," said Motley. "What about our children and grandchildren?"

Motley added that he does not believe the bill will pass in the state Senate.

Others remain optimistic about the bill's chances. In the Assembly, it is bill A8590, and in the Senate it is bill S5884.

to the existing pipe and will be buried under the ground to keep the surrounding temperature consistent.

"The current pipe wasn't buried and was supported by concrete piers above the ground," said Holmes. "The piers have since taken on some movement along with the pipe."

The new line will be 1,000 feet long and 36 inches in diameter, compared with the current 33-inch diameter. "By putting the pipe underground and relocating this line, we are also taking advantage of the terrain," Holmes said.

The old sewer line will operate through the summer until work on the new line is complete by the end of August. Engineers have already wrapped insulation around the existing pipe to prevent the joints from expanding in the summer heat.

The town will pay for the project from money in the sewer capital reserve fund.

Meanwhile, surveyors have been periodically checking the pipe's movements, and Cunningham said the sewer line continues to shift.

Family and art can be the keys to recovery

By JAMIE D. GILKEY
news@spotlightnews.com

A picture is worth a thousand words, but more importantly, it can also tell the story of a person's life. In the case of 80-year old Mary Jane Fleming, that is a journey from the grit and bustle of Pittsburgh, Penn., known as the Steel City, to a quiet home in Niskayuna, where she has lived for many years.

The stories of Fleming's life and the lives of other clients of Sunnyview Rehabilitation Hospital are being told through art that has been on display at the hospital's Viewpoint Gallery since May 23.

In recent years, Fleming has struggled with the health effects of a string of three strokes that have threatened to take away her mobility and confine her life.

Through an intensive regimen of rehabilitation and outlets like the art program at Sunnyview, she has overcome the potentially lingering impacts of her strokes.

"I had my first stroke in my sleep, and I was lucky because we caught it early. When I woke up, I wasn't feeling right, and I called my daughter; she knew what to do," said the well-spoken senior. "I am still able to live a very good quality of life and enjoy a lot of activities."

Families play a crucial role in the recovery of patients who have been through strokes or are suffering from the effects of a brain injury, said Sunnyview's spokeswoman Wanda Fischer.

"We work very closely with the families to try and educate them on what to expect from the recovering patient," she said. "The understanding and support of a family can make a great difference in a patient's ultimate recovery."

Fischer said stroke patients frequently have difficulty saying words properly, and it can be very frustrating for them.

"It's important for the family to realize the patient may still understand words even though they have trouble pronouncing them," she said.

And those recovering from strokes and brain injuries can also be helped by activities that encourage the use of their creative talents, an idea that is behind the Sunnyview exhibit, which is called "A Sense of Place." The pictures on display give viewers a look into the lives of dozens of local seniors recovering from health problems.

Done in conjunction with art students from Niskayuna High School, "A Sense Of Place" is made up of pieces that use computer technology to create visual compositions that make personal statements about the extraordinary lives of seniors.

Emphasizing her roots in western Pennsylvania, Fleming's piece includes several pictures of Bessemer converters, clippings of newspaper articles written when she attended the University of Pittsburgh, and other mementos of her younger years.

"They've taken these clippings and pictures and laid them out in a really artistic way so that it tells a story," Fischer said.

Although unique, this is not the first project of its kind.

"We've done cooperative projects with Niskayuna before. Our relationship dates back about three years," said Fischer. "It started in 2004 when we put on an exhibit that was called 'Art: A Prescription For Life.' This time we had the opportunity to put together the computer skills of the high school art students with the interests of those participating in our art program at Sunnyview."

The high school students used Adobe Photoshop to creatively manipulate the materials supplied by the Sunnyview artists.

"The result is an intergenerational exhibit that includes a series of very effective personal works of art," Fischer said.

The Viewpoint Gallery at Sunnyview is open to the public from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily. The "A Sense Of Place" exhibit runs until July 31.

ing to talk them through it can be frustrating at times," he said. "If you don't have patience, you need to get patience real quick, and still, even though you learn patience, it can be very frustrating."

Di Scipio said one of the tricks to overcome a disability is to stay active and stay positive. If not, he said, "you can really bring yourself down, and it will eat you up."

He said he still feels pain in his bones and his joints, particularly in cold weather, but that staying involved with his kids, Anthony and Ashley, both teenagers, keeps him positive.

"I go to therapy four times a week. I go to my kids' sporting events. I enjoy watching them and teach them the best I can," said the 36-year-old former Albany County corrections officer. "Family and friends are important. They play a big role in my life and they keep me busy."

"I think getting out in the community is very important. People with disabilities tend to become dormant like I did the first few years. You get cabin fever and then depression sets in and that can make things really bad."

One of his favorite pastimes is watching his son play football. The standout middle linebacker for Colonie High School said at first it was hard because his father was traveling from hospital to hospital for nine months, and he rarely saw him. But now, the family has a routine and they are really not unlike any other family.

"I'm sure it is frustrating for him," Anthony Di Scipio said of his father. "But things are not too different now than before. He is at all my games cheering me on. And he talks me through everything instead of showing me what to do and gives me everything I need. Honestly, he is the best dad in the world to me."

Eliot Spitzer will kick start stem cell research in this state. Spitzer, in his first State of the State address, called for the passage of a $2 billion, 10-year bond initiative for research and development, at least half of which would be set aside for stem cell research.

In years past, the Democrat-dominated state Assembly has passed stem cell research bills but measures have regularly stalled in the Senate.

Spitzer put Lt. Gov. David Pa-

erson, who is legally blind, in charge of stem cell research in this state and hopes to use the economic benefits of funding research as a selling point.

"A lot of these people have not had the adversity that my family has," Di Scipio said. "If they were in our situation I think, no I know for a fact, most all of them would be fighting for the exact same thing I am."

According to the Disabled Parents Online, there are 8 million households with at least one disabled parent in the United States. There are 4 million Americans with spinal cord injuries, according to the Christopher and Dana Reeve Foundation.

"We've been forced to adjust to it. Nobody said it would be easy, but we are dealing with the hand we were dealt. We are adjusting to it. We are doing well. It is not the easiest thing in the world but we are getting through it," Di Scipio said. "You need to stay positive, have faith and hold onto the hope that in the future there will be a cure for disabilities like mine or other types of disabilities so we lead a more fulfilling life."

Stay Cool! this summer and save money

NYSERDA offers summertime cooling tips for comfort and savings

According to the United States Department of Energy (DOE) and Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the average family spends $1,900 a year on energy bills, nearly half of which goes to cooling and heating.

This summer, the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSERDA) has developed Stay Cool!, a campaign that reaches out to New Yorkers with energy-saving tips to help them keep their home comfortably cool without busting the budget.

NYSERDA also encourages New Yorkers who are in the market for a new room air conditioner to purchase ENERGY STAR® qualified models that use less energy and save money. Energy-efficient air conditioning can make a real impact on comfort and monthly electric bills, as well as reduce energy use when demand is high.

"Home cooling represents a huge opportunity for New Yorkers to reduce their energy use and carbon dioxide emissions," said Peter R. Smith, president and CEO of NYSERDA. "With just a few simple changes, New Yorkers can use their air conditioners without wasting energy. It's really the way to 'stay cool' this summer."

The New York Power Authority (NYPA) is co-funding the Stay Cool! campaign to help more

New Yorkers save energy this summer.

"It's never been easier to stay cool," said Timothy S. Carey, president and CEO of NYPA. "Homeowners can do it just by switching to ENERGY STAR appliances and following basic energy-saving tips."

So you want to Stay Cool! this summer? NYSERDA and NYPA offer these simple, cost-effective tips to reduce summer energy bills.

Turn In. Turn On.

ENERGY STAR qualified room air conditioners use up to 25 percent less energy than a standard new model and up to 40 percent less energy than a model that is more than 10 years old. Look for a high Energy Efficiency Ratio (EER). Units with high EERs cost less to operate. Turn in your old, room air conditioner to your local waste management facility and turn on a new ENERGY STAR air conditioner.

Size it Right

A properly sized air conditioner will operate more efficiently and dehumidify more effectively. An oversized unit will cycle on and off more frequently. Short cycling reduces an air conditioning system's life, and a short cycling system will not reduce humidity effectively. Undersized equipment can reduce the efficiency of air distribution and accelerate wear on system components, leading to premature failure.

No Dirty Business

A dirty filter will increase energy use and can damage the air conditioner leading to early failures, so check the filter every month and replace as needed.

Work in the Morning or Evening

Use ovens, washing machines, dryers and dishwashers in the early morning or late at night when it's generally cooler outside. Use a microwave oven to cook, or barbecue outside, if possible.

Chill Out in the Shade

A unit operating in the shade uses as much as 10 percent less electricity than the same one operating in the sun.

Don't Forget the Adoring Fans

ENERGY STAR qualified ceiling fans can help cool a home without greatly increasing electricity use. They improve airflow and create pleasant breezes.

Just Chill When You're Home

For central air conditioning, a programmable thermostat allows homeowners to automatically adjust to a more comfortable temperature when they are scheduled to be home. Homeowners can set the temperature to use less cooling when they are normally away.

Residents save three percent on energy costs for each degree they turn up the thermostat from 72 degrees. ENERGY STAR window and through-the-wall room air conditioners also typically include programmable thermostats or timers.

A Home Needs Shades Too

Block out heat by keeping blinds or curtains closed during the day, especially on south facing windows.

Take the Whole House Approach

Houses work as a system. Insulation, heating and air conditioning, air sealing, water heating, ductwork, windows and doors all work together to determine efficiency. A Home Performance with ENERGY STAR contractor can perform a home energy assessment to help residents map a plan to improve a home's energy efficiency.

Turn It Off

Save electricity and reduce waste heat by shutting off lights. Seldom used home electronics should actually be unplugged from the wall. Items like DVD players, VCRs and cordless phones use 40 percent of their energy while in the off position to power functions like clocks and remote controls.

For year-round energy-saving tips and programs to help you improve the energy efficiency of your home, visit www.GetEnergySmart.org.

NYSERDA uses innovation and technology to solve some of New York's most difficult and environmental problems in ways that improve the State's economy. Visit www.GetEnergySmart.org or call 1-877-NY-SMART for more information about Stay Cool! and other energy efficiency programs.

NYPA is the Empire State's largest supplier of electricity and provides energy-saving services and clean energy technologies to public institutions such as schools, hospitals and universities. Visit www.nypa.gov to learn more about the New York Power Authority.

HOW COOL IS NEW YORK?

TURN IN, TURN ON, STAY COOL.

Turn in your old, inefficient window air conditioner and replace it with a new ENERGY STAR® qualified model. Always select a unit that has a higher Energy Efficiency Rating (EER) for even better energy savings. Find out more on how to STAYCOOL this summer. Go to GetEnergySmart.org or call 1-877-NY-SMART.

Legionnaires' death sparks probe

Officials have yet to uncover source of bacteria

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parker@spotlightnews.com

The Friday, May 31, death of an Albany County Nursing Home resident has set in motion a countywide investigation.

The resident was diagnosed with Legionnaires' disease Tuesday, May 29, after being hospitalized. News of the diagnosis and subsequent death set off a six-month surveillance of the home and residents by state and county health officials. From now until the end of the six-month period, all residents with symptoms of pneumonia will be screened for the disease.

Health officials aren't giving out details of the investigation, only that the source of the bacteria that causes the disease has yet to be located, and chances are it won't be.

"It's not unusual for there to be an isolated case (of the disease)," said Kerri Battle, spokeswoman for the Albany County Executive Office. "Over the next six months, the physical site will be monitored, as well as anyone who presents symptoms consistent with Legionnaires' disease."

State and county health epidemiologists screened 13 residents at the facility after the diagnosis last month. No one else turned up positive, said Battle. There is no reason to believe there has been any wrongdoing on the part of nursing home staff, she said.

The bacteria that causes Legionnaires' disease is very common, and in most instances water samples from natural sources, air conditioning units, whirlpools and showers will contain the bacteria, said Marcia Fabiano, an epidemiologist with the Albany County Health Department.

In many cases, the bacteria is fended off by the body's immune system, she said. But in cases of people who have weakened immune systems from disease or age, contraction of the bacteria can result in death, in her estimation, some 15 to 20 percent of the time.

"Legionnaires' can be a very serious form of pneumonia, and it usually affects people with other immuno problems. (The elderly) are just more susceptible," Fabiano said.

In most confirmed cases of the disease, air-conditioning units are the prime suspects, she said.

Fabiano wouldn't go into detail about the specifics of the county nursing home case, but she did say any large building, like a nursing home with large humidifiers, compressors and air conditioners, is more apt to have the organism present.

Last year in Albany County, there were 22 reported cases of the disease, according to a statement from the county executive's office. All of those cases were isolated and "sporadic in nature," read the statement.

Across the state, an average of 200 cases of the disease are reported annually, and since 2001 more than 100 investigations by health officials into reported cases of the disease were in hospital and nursing home settings.

B&L keeps pace with Albany County growth

Editor's Note: The following should have appeared in Spotlight Newspapers' Update II edition.

A community's expansion is the catalyst for improvements to existing infrastructure and new development projects, and consulting engineering firms like Barton & Loguidice, P.C. (B&L), play a major part in any community's growth. B&L's own growth as a company has been proportional to the growth of the communities it serves, and its Albany office is no exception.

For 45 years, B&L has been improving the quality of life for residents of New York. Since opening its Albany office in 2001, B&L has grown to employ nearly 30 professionals from a starting group of three engineers. Companywide, B&L has offices in Albany, Syracuse, New Paltz and Rochester, and has grown to an engineering, planning, environmental, and landscape architecture firm of nearly 170 professionals.

Examples of B&L's key role in community growth can be found throughout the Capital District. B&L has been designated by the town of Bethlehem, on behalf of the Industrial Development Agency, for design and construction phase services for a new half-mile rail spur to be built this spring. The new spur promises to open up business opportunities for the region, connecting the old Daisy/Tek International Corp Building to CSX's Selkirk rail yard.

Also in Bethlehem, B&L is the review consultant for several commercial and residential development projects as well as the proposed Vista Technology Campus.

Vista is a 450-acre, 1.4 million-square-foot technology campus in North Bethlehem. B&L is also conducting a comprehensive sanitary sewer study and traffic impact study of the Slingerlands/North Bethlehem area to evaluate the impacts of anticipated growth, including the Vista Campus, on the current infrastructure.

As the Town Designated Engineer (TDE) for the town of Guiderland, B&L is called to task for a wide variety of projects. The Mill Hill Retirement Community and Mill Hollow Senior Condominium Community are two projects that will create a better quality of life for many of Guiderland's senior residents. Services provided by B&L for these projects include compliance with current zoning, highway and subdivision provisions; water, sanitary sewer, storm sewer and utility services; stormwater management; pedestrian access; and aesthetics including landscape buffers.

New housing development for residents of all ages is a sure sign of growth, and B&L has been involved in several subdivision development projects for the town of Guiderland. B&L is currently providing engineering review and construction observation services for the 20 West, Sable Terrace, and Prescott Woods subdivisions.

In most communities, sidewalks form a connective corridor for communities and promote interactive citizens. B&L is currently assisting the town of Guiderland with the design of new sidewalks on Carmen Road and McKown Road, including agency coordination, public participation, environmental processing and permitting, coordination and assistance with right-of-way issues, contract document development and award assistance, and construction inspection and administration.

B&L continues to assist Guiderland with implementation of its MS4 stormwater management program as well as water system improvements. These improvements included the demolition of the aged 500,000 gallon Depot Road water tank and rehabilitation and re-painting of the 1 million gallon Westmere water tower.

Water supply and quality are also essential ingredients to a community's growth and success. The first phase of the new water improvements project for the village of Altamont is almost ready for start-up and operation. These improvements include a new groundwater source on Brandle Road, well house, and transmission main to the existing village distribution system. B&L is also assisting the village of Altamont with a systemwide corrosion control treatment evaluation.

Work has started on the new Voorheesville Fire House expansion project and is slated for completion this July. B&L assisted the village with programming, design and construction phase services for this important project to rehabilitate its aging fire house. B&L continues to help the Voorheesville planning and zoning boards with engineering services as well as implementation of the village MS4 stormwater program.

Often, when people think of the engineer's role on a project, they envision the engineer drawing up plans and specifications and preparing cost estimates. Although the engineer's experience and competence undertaking these design phase services is very important, an experienced consulting engineering firm like B&L is needed to go well beyond these traditional services in order for growth and survival of a community.

B&L assists communities all over Albany County and throughout New York with all phases of projects, from initial planning and development stages, through design, construction, start-up, and even operations assistance. For more information, contact Barton & Loguidice, P.C., at 218-1801, or visit www.BartonandLoguidice.com.

Summer reading programs not just for kids anymore

"Get a Clue @ Your Library" means a summer's worth of detection, discovery and delight through reading for kids and teens. But why should they have all the fun? On Monday, June 25, we're launching our second summer of "Basking in Books," a reading program for adults and high school students.

"Basking in Books" participants can comment on books in any genre. Comment slips will be posted to share with other adult readers. Each slip will be entered in a weekly drawing, with prizes donated by the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce.

Comment slips will be available at the adult services information desk. You can't miss 'em — they're bright yellow. Plans are also in the works for a "Basking in Books" comments page on our Web site; watch for a link at www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org.

Summer reading for kids and teens

Registration for "Get a Clue @ Your Library" — our regular summer reading program for grades K and up — begins Monday, June 18, during library hours in the youth services area, or online anytime at www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org. Once registered, participants may add entries to their reading logs online.

Prizes will be awarded at the library Monday to Friday between 10 a.m. and noon, 2 to 4 p.m. and 6 to 8 p.m. beginning June 25.

There will also be mystery crafts, a bookmark contest and a slew of cool special events for kids and teens. Events will be listed in the July/August footnotes — the library newsletter — mailed to all residents in the Bethlehem Central School district the last week in June.

Teen volunteers wanted

Do you like to work with children? If you're entering grade 6 to 8 this fall, find out how you can help with our summer reading programs. Our volunteers staff the summer reading desk, assist with online submissions, read to children, help with activities and assist library pages. Applications are available at the library and the middle school.

Volunteers must attend an orientation session and plan to work at least six hours between June 25 and Aug. 9. Orientations are scheduled on Wednesday June 20, 7 to 8:30 p.m., and Thursday, June 21, 2 to 4 p.m.

Call 439-9314 to sign up for one.

Read stories to preschoolers

Middle schoolers can also learn the techniques of reading stories to young children, and apply their skills at our Morning Stories preschool storytimes in July and August.

Applications are available at the youth services desk. Volunteers must attend a training session and plan to work at least six hours between July 18 and Aug. 9. Training sessions are scheduled on Wednesday, July 11, and Thursday, July 12, 7 to 8:30pm.

Call 439-9314 to sign up for one.

Friends on the Green

Everyone's invited to our library Friends' annual bring-your-own picnic tomorrow, June 14, 6 to 8 p.m. on the library lawn.

Captain Squeeze and the Zydeco Moshers will add some Cajun spice to the evening. Festivities move to the Town Hall in case of rain.

'Doctor's Wife' author at library tonight

Join us tonight, Wednesday, June 13, for a great evening of literary discussion with Elizabeth Brundage, author of "The Doctor's Wife," beginning at 7 p.m.

Get a clue

Super sleuths and daring detectives are invited to join the 2007 Summer Reading Program. The program is open to young people, preschool through young adult, with weekly meetings, prize drawings, storytimes, science programs, history mysteries, D.I.Y. (Do-It-Yourself) club, anime, a ventriloquist, and a puppeteer. We want kids to maintain their reading skills this summer and to develop positive attitudes about reading and books. But most of all, we want kids to know that the library is fun.

Registration begins now and will continue all summer. Stop in and receive a folder with all the programs, the game boards, the calendar for recording your time spent reading, and a log to list all the titles you've read. Win prizes all summer long. There will be mysteries to solve right in our library and a library bee (not a spelling bee, not a geography bee—a library bee) every week after regular programs for those who love to check out clues. Meetings begin on Monday, July 9.

Summer Reading Programs prize packages are on display in the showcase. Bring the kids in to pick out what they would like to win.

The special kickoff extravaganza is Tuesday, June 26. Mark your calendars.

The family bookshelf club

Remember that registration for this year-long program will be ongoing, so it is never too late to participate in the We the People Bookshelf on the Pursuit of Happiness, a grant-sponsored national library programming initiative for all ages. Contact Mrs. Laiosa for information.

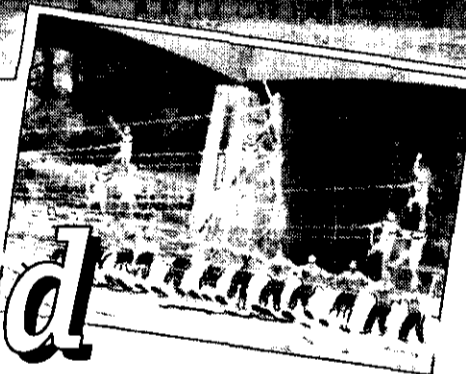

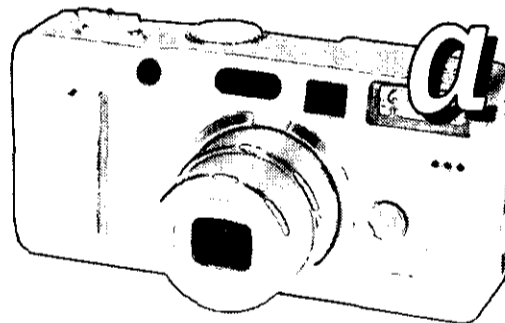

- Paintings by Judy Scanlon are on display in the hall gallery.
- Thursday Night Poets meet on Thursday, June 14, at 6:30 p.m.

Filling a need: Food bank celebrates 25 years

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parker@spotlightnews.com

Since its meager beginnings in the early 1980s, the Northeast Regional Food Bank has grown by leaps and bounds.

But the task of dealing with an ever-increasing number of people depending upon its services continues.

On Tuesday, June 5, National Hunger Day, the organization celebrated 25 years in the business of distributing tens of millions of pounds of foods to 1,000 food pantries and kitchens to 23 counties in the state.

It hasn't always been the case, said Mark Quandt, the Regional Food Bank's executive director.

"In the first year we were servicing 60 agencies in six counties. Then (1983) we provided about 400,000 pounds of food; this last year, 19.6 million pounds of food," said Quandt.

Quandt joined the food bank in 1983, a year after it opened in downtown Albany.

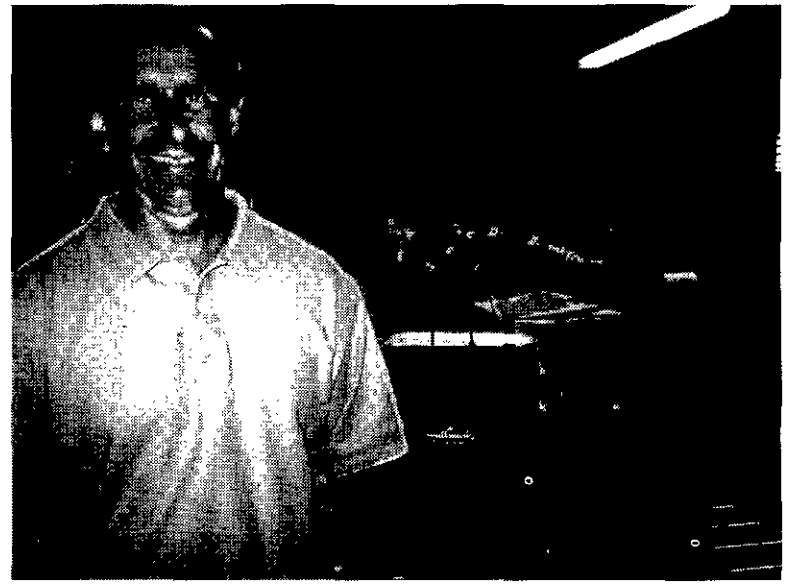

In 1983, Quandt came on as the second staff person under then executive director Laurie Cox. Operating out of a small downtown space, made available through former Albany Mayor Erastus Corning, the food bank had a handful of volunteers, little money, no office equipment and one phone line without call waiting, joked Quandt.

In its early stages, the food bank operated with a grant through Christians United in Mission, which has since dissolved. The driving force behind the food bank was a small group of people that had worked, like Cox, in larger cities that desperately needed the services of a food bank to assist in the distribution of foods to pantries, shelters and soup kitchens, said Quandt. It began with an annual operational budget under $50,000 and has since grown to $3.6 million.

From within the confines of its small Albany offices, the food bank began to gather steam under Quandt. Its name got out there, and before the small group had realized what was happening, Freihofer's was dropping off loaves of bread and more than food bank staff knew what to do with, said Quandt.

It was the start of a long relationship with Freihofer's and dozens of annual contributors to the food bank. Soon Price Chopper, Hannaford, Trustco Bank and Adirondack Beverages were among many

Mark Quandt, Regional Food Bank executive director, with volunteers from Citizens Bank. Over the course of the last six weeks the bank has been taking in food and monetary donations at its locations statewide.

Graham Parker/Spotlight

area businesses that were on board. The food flowed north, south, east and west to counties throughout the state, Quandt said.

Every day of every year, more and more volunteers and businesses help out with the food bank's mission.

Their new offices and warehouse off Albany Shaker Road buzzed with life last week as Christy Calicchia and a team of Citizen Bank employees stocked boxes with food.

"Food donations in summertime are less than normal, so we wanted to help restock the food bank to make up for the shortfall of donations in summertime," said Calicchia.

She also sits on the Regional Food Bank's board of directors and donates her personal time to helping out.

In the course of the last six weeks, the bank has been taking in food and monetary donations at Citizens Bank locations statewide. Just in the 40 or so branches in the Capital District, the "Carving out Hunger" drive generated 24 boxes of food and more than $1,000 in donations, she said.

This year is Citizens Bank's third year helping the food bank continue its mission, said Calicchia. And that mission has not changed in the Regional Food Bank's 25 years, Quandt said.

"We help to alleviate hunger and at the same time try to stop the waste of good food," Quandt said. "Clearly, the need has grown."

With cuts to government programs and ever-increasing utility and gas costs, the need has certainly shown no sign of slowing, he said. The mission to end hunger mostly rests now of the shoulders of private agencies like Northeast Regional Food Bank, said Quandt.

Quinn Coffey

Quinn Ennis Coffey, 23, of Slingerlands, died Monday, June 4, from complications related to muscular dystrophy.

He was an unusual young man, not only kind and generous without qualification, but blessed with a deep awareness of his own intrinsic goodness. Gifted with a far above average intelligence, Quinn resolved that his physical limitations would not impede his ability to learn and enjoy these activities like reading, drawing and painting, which gave him such great satisfaction.

He graduated magna cum laude in his master's program from The University at Albany in 2006.

Always kind and gentle, he looked for the best in others, and never surrendered the vision that the future held hope for a better life.

Even though his disease robbed him of his ability to perform physical tasks, he never became bitter with his condition. He was indifferent to material possessions and developed a lifelong passion for learning in his field of history.

He was a dedicated Boston Red Sox fan and a fan of the Pittsburgh Steelers; and enjoyed going to Fenway Park, spending a week every June at the Gettysburg Civil War Institute held at Gettysburg College, and poker games and summer bonfires with his friends. As a young boy, he vacationed with his family in Kennebunkport, Maine.

He was extremely organized, and never left matters uncompleted. He abhorred chaos, and was always prompt with his assignments and appointments. His father, Steve, adored him as did his mother, Joan, whose unconditional love and unwavering support helped him to become the man he was. Throughout his life, Quinn was extremely proud of his brother Ian, who respected and revered Quinn in return.

He also is survived by his grandmother, Dorothy Ennis and many aunts, uncles and cousins.

Arrangements were from the Applebee Funeral Home, Delmar. Contributions may be made to the Muscular Dystrophy Association, 1 Marcus Blvd., Albany 12205.

Lenore R. Kuwik, 58, of Delmar, died at home Sunday, June 3.

She went on to attend Fairleigh Dickinson University in Madison, N.J., graduating magna cum laude. She also received the Dean's Award for scholarship and athletics. She was the first woman to receive this award. She attended the Cooperstown graduate program for her master's degree. Her master's thesis was a study in early gravestone art.

She was employed by the state Office of Parks, Recreation, and Historic Preservation. While there, in addition to performing her normal duties, she was very proud to be the agency's first employee assistance coordinator. She moved on to the state Department of Environmental Conservation, where she worked in the permits division. She was a competitive rower with the Albany Rowing Center and won medals at several events.

Survivors include her husband, Frank; her father, Leonard; a brother, Erik; and nieces.

Services were from the Applebee Funeral Home, Delmar. Contributions may be made to the Community Hospice of Albany, 445 New Karner Road, Albany 12205 or to the Albany Rowing Center, P.O. Box 857, Albany 12201.

Alive at Five kicked off its 10-week summer concert series last week, once again drawing thousands of those looking to get an early start to the weekend to Albany's happening riverfront scene.

A notably more mature crowd was in attendance for 60's and 70's headliner band Felix Cavalier's Rascals, who are known for their hits "Good Lovin'," "Girl Like You," "Groovin'," "You Better Run," and "A Beautiful Morning."

This Thursday, June 14, American Idol winner Ruben Studdard is expected to draw a huge crowd of young and old alike, and on Thursday, June 21, 1970's hit-makers ASIA, who recently reunited, will take the stage with all of its original members.

Robert Johnson, a big fan of the Rascals who says he'll be back for Ruben Studdard, believes Alive At Five is the best event Albany has to offer.

"It's free, the timing of the year is right where the weather is conducive most of the time, and the people are beginning to behave themselves and come and just appreciate the music," he said.

Alive at Five was created by the City of Albany Office of Special Events and Volunteer Services, which also puts on the Tulip Festival, Albany Jazz Festival, Albany Winterfest, and The Father's Day Pop's Concert.

It has come a long way since 1990, first taking place on South Pearl Street every Friday night and attracting a crowd of a couple hundred. Yet, coordinators at Albany's special events office saw bigger and better things for the event, and it was eventually relocated to the newly renovated riverfront.

Soon, thousands began making their way over the Corning Preserve Bridge to enjoy free music from local bands and internationally established Crowds enjoy the Alive at Five kickoff at Albany's Riverfront Park on Thursday, June 7.

Photos by Arcangela Mele/Spotlight

Alive at Five keeps Thursday evenings humming artists, food from Albany's favorite local vendors, beer, and fresh squeezed lemonade.

Now in its 18th season, and a winner of the 2000 Hospitality Excellence Award, the event has evolved into more than just a fun thing to after work.

For those seeking further late night excitement, Alive at five has created a whole new night out downtown. According to Sue Cleary, director of the Office of Albany Special Events, Pearl Street bar and restaurant owners have coined the term "Alive After Five," to describe their thriving business after the riverfront festivities end.

"After 8 o'clock, 10,000 people continue their walk from our river front site across the bridge, to go and continue their weekend on a Thursday night," Cleary said. Many people leaving Alive at Five eventually gravitate toward places like Jillian's, McGeary's, The Pearl, Blue 82, and The Skyline.

Chances are that Thursday nights will continue to look very good for these places this summer. Touting a great line-up of bands already scheduled for the month of June, Cleary says she doesn't expect to see a slow night at all until the series ends on Aug. 16.

As far as Cleary's concerned, there's no big secret to Alive at Five's success.

"It's a summer, outdoor, free concert series," she said. "What's not to like?"

Alive at Five concerts will take place on Thursday evenings between now and Aug. 16. Opening bands begin at 5 p.m.; headliners go on at 6:30 p.m.; and shows end at 8 p.m. Concerts take place at Albany Riverfront Park in the Corning Preserve. loud. No championship parade should ever be held in a parking lot. How third class can you get?

• Tampa Bay (2004): The Lightning only started getting fan support when they actually made their run at the cup. Calgary — Tampa Bay's opponent — has had loyal fan support since the Flames moved out of Atlanta. I would have given anything to be on the "Red Mile" in Calgary the night the Flames won the cup, but they didn't and I didn't have the money to make the trip to Calgary anyway. Thoroughly disappointing all around.

• Carolina (2006): This one didn't bother me so much because ...

A.) It was the first Stanley Cup final following the 2004-05 lockout.

B.) The Hurricanes were saving the Albany River Rats from possible extinction (or worse, another two years of being New Jersey's affiliate).

C.) Edmonton had won the Stanley Cup five times — more than enough for a while, in my opinion.

• Anaheim (2007): Not only did the Ducks pull a New Jersey by holding its victory celebration in front of 15,000 people in a parking lot, they added insult to injury by bringing California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger to the party and having him use his "Hasta la Vista, baby" line. If Ottawa had won the cup, it would have been floated down the Rideau Canal in front of probably 100,000 hockey-crazed people. And Schwarzenegger would be nowhere near it.

I understand that the Stanley Cup is not a popularity contest. It doesn't always go to the team with the best fans. It goes to the team that is able to survive 82 regular season games and then endure four best-of-seven playoff series that are even more physical than the regular season. That's fine with me.

But just for once, I'd like to see the cup go to a city whose fans would fall over weeping if their team won it. Imagine if the Buffalo Sabres won the cup.

The post-championship party would alone last a week. There would be no school, and the only businesses still operating would be bars. Every member of the Sabres would be given a statue in their honor. And I'm certain Gov. Elliot Spitzer would leave all of his old clichés in Albany when he speaks at the championship rally.

Unfortunately, we won't know for another year. For now, Lord Stanley resides in Southern California, where hockey ranks below football, basketball, baseball, surfing, beach volleyball and stargazing in order of importance.

I think I'll organize a rescue mission to get the Stanley Cup back to Canada where it belongs. Or Buffalo. (Hey, the Sabres did have the best regular season record. That has to count for something, right?)

Give the cup to a deserving hockey city

It's been a week, but I'm still fuming over Anaheim's 4-1 victory over Ottawa in the Stanley Cup finals.

I realize I may be the only one in the Capital District who is actually fuming, but I'm entitled as perhaps the only NHL fan in the Capital District.

It's not that I have any great hatred toward Anaheim or its NHL team. That ended when Disney sold the team last year, and the word mighty was dropped from the name Mighty Ducks. (Honestly, no professional sports team should be named after a bad sports movie — let alone a bad sports movie franchise.)

It's not that I am a big Ottawa Senators fan, either. I kind of enjoyed Ottawa's past playoff flops, usually at either Toronto's or Buffalo's hands. (Running joke in Canada: What does 110 points get you in Ottawa? A first round exit.)

It's just that I'm getting tired of Lord Stanley's cup being presented to a team in a city (or a region) that could care less about professional hockey. Let's look at the last five holders of the cup.

- Colorado (2002): OK, maybe Denver appreciates the Stanley Cup a little more than most American cities because it appreciates good hockey more than most American cities. Plus, Ray Bourque had been waiting since the days of mask-less goaltenders to hoist the cup over his head. Still, the celebration wasn't as big as when the Broncos won the second of their two Super Bowl titles. (I know I'm nitpicking.)

- New Jersey (2003): The Devils were singlehandedly responsible for turning hockey into a sport that was slightly less unwatchable than soccer, and yet they managed to win the cup three times in nine years. Each time, they held their victory parades in the Meadowlands parking lot. A parking lot, for crying out

Rhodes-Devey, Crouse win titles; McManus leaps to sixth place

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

Guilderland's Brian Rhodes-Devey and Colonie's Steve Crouse won individual events at last weekend's New York State High School Track and Field Championships in Kingston.

Rhodes-Devey — a University of Texas-bound senior — capped his high school career by winning the Division 1 (large school) boys 800-meter race Friday with a time of 1:52.37, while Crouse took first place in Saturday's Federation triple jump with a distance of 46 feet, 10 inches.

It was Rhodes-Devey's first state outdoor track title, though it didn't look like he had won the race at first glimpse. Six runners starting from the lower-seeded outside box crossed into the lanes Rhodes-Devey and the other higher-seeded runners were in 20 meters too soon.

"I guess some people wanted to run the 780 instead of the 800," Rhodes-Devey said. "It really threw me off because when that happens, you have to adapt, but I had to throw my game plan out the window."

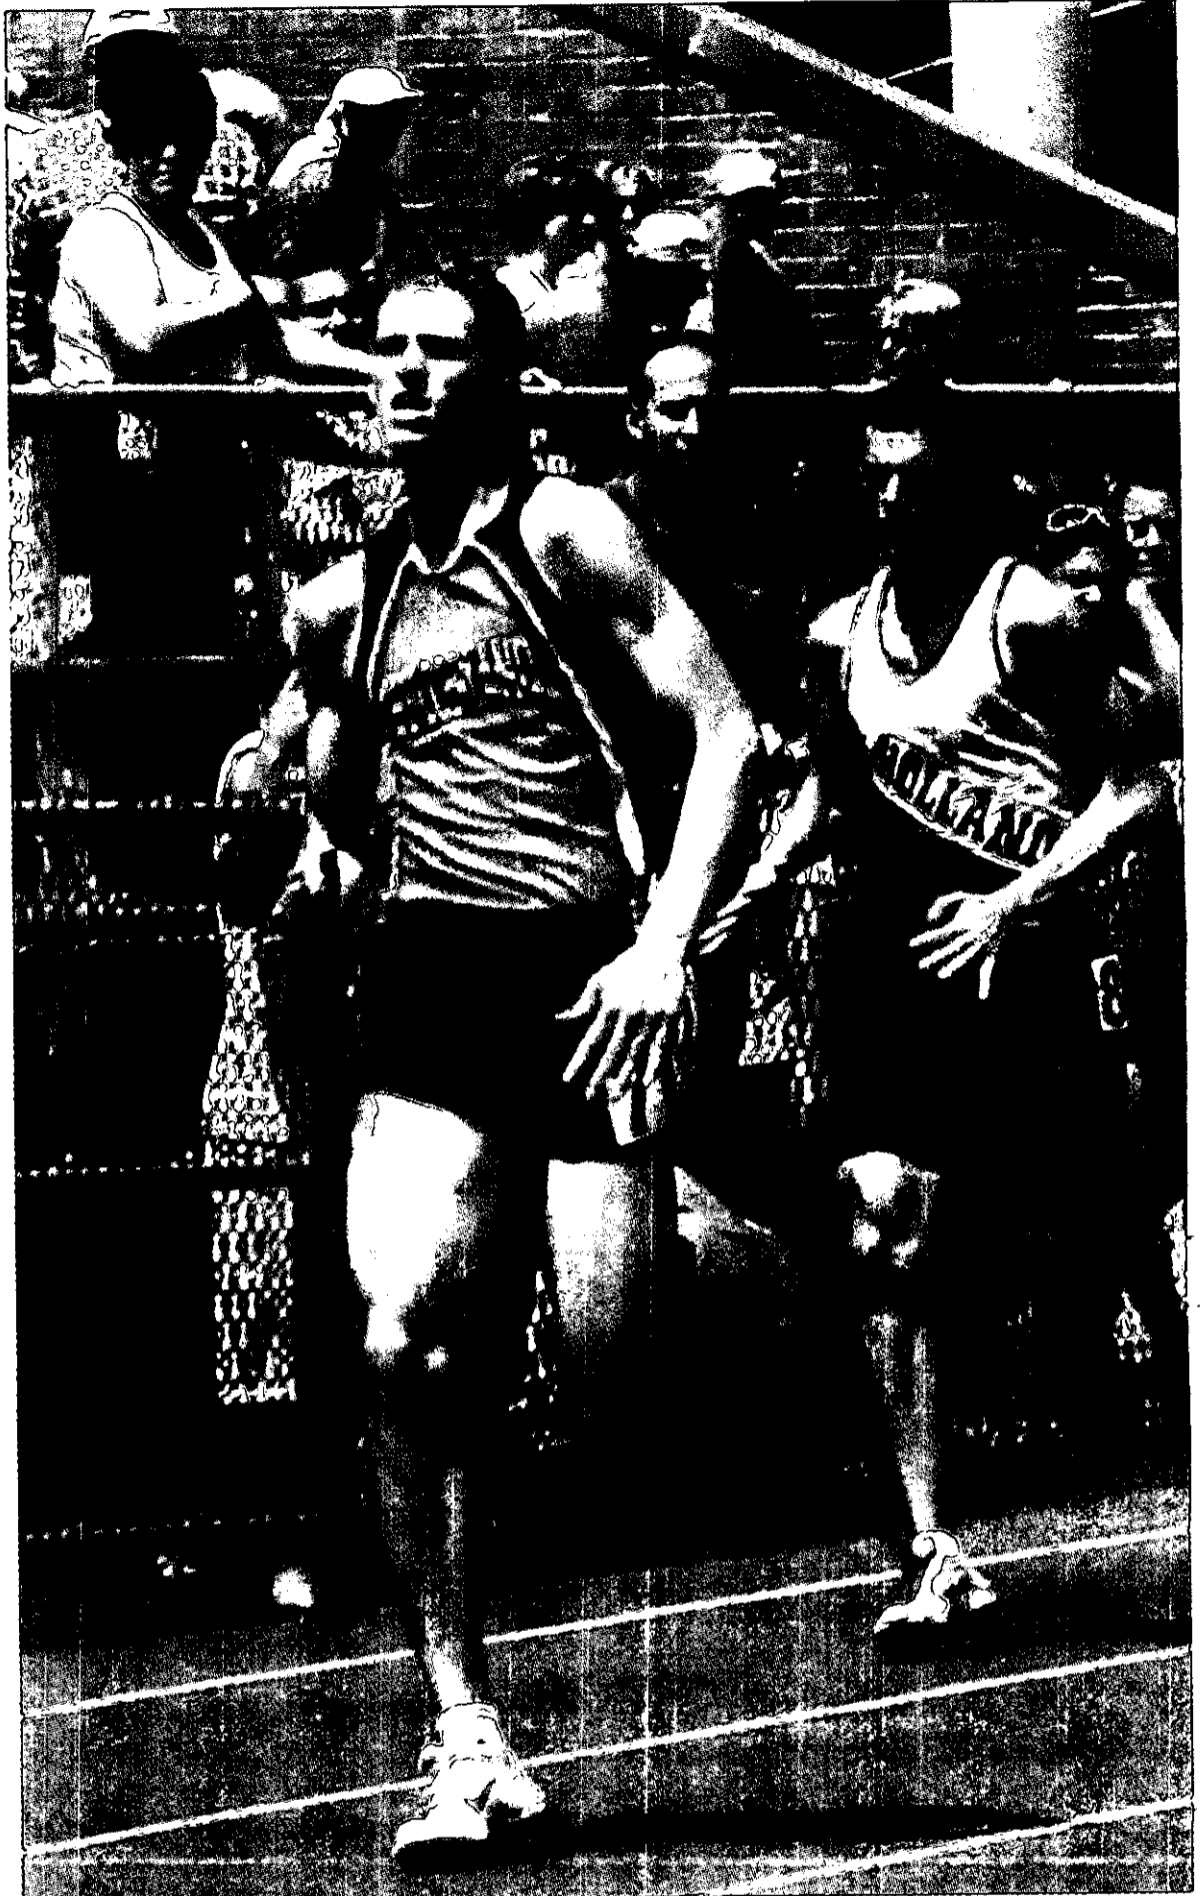

Rhodes-Devey was able to pass most of those runners, but he couldn't catch all of them before the finish line. It wouldn't matter because in the end, the six offending runners were disqualified, leaving him with the state title.

"I definitely can't complain about that," said Rhodes-Devey. "It's my first state title in track, and I'm happy about that."

Rhodes-Devey struggled a bit in Saturday's Federation 800, but he hung on for third place with a time of 1:54.12.

"It was a really physical race," said Rhodes-Devey. "Right from the start, I got cut off in lane three. I spent most of the time trying to push the leaders, and I got outkicked at the end."

Crouse had a similar experience. He struggled in Saturday's Federation triple jump by comparison to his effort in Friday's Division 1 event. The difference was that while Crouse's

Guilderland's Mark Domaracki heads down the home stretch of Saturday's Federation 400-meter race at the New York State Track and Field Championships in Kingston. Rob Jonas/Spotlight distance of 47 feet, 3.25 inches was only good enough for fourth place Friday, his distance of 46 feet, 10 inches Saturday earned him the Federation title.

"This competition is so close that whoever jumps the best wins," said Crouse.

Crouse got his Federation-winning jump on his last attempt, but he said he was nervous about the chance that his mark of 46-10 would hold up.

"I only had two kids who could have beat me," he said. "I knew they could go 47 feet, but I knew they'd need good jumps to do it."

Several more individuals had top-six performances at states. Guilderland's Mark Domaracki placed third in the Federation 400 with a time of 49.38 seconds after finishing fifth in the Division 1 finals with a time of 48.95 seconds, while Colonie's Jim Kehrer was third in the Federation 110 high hurdles with a time of 14.31 seconds. Kehrer was coming off a sixth-place finish in the Division 1 110 hurdles earlier in the day, Saturday.

"I'm definitely happy with my results," said Domaracki. "If you said coming in that I'd get fifth in the state and third in the Federation, I'd take it."

Bethlehem's Michael McManus finished sixth in the Federation high jump by clearing 6 feet, 6 inches — one inch off his season-best height of 6-7.

On the girls' side, Colonie's Najla Singleton-McKinnon placed fifth in the Division 1 400 dash with a time of 56.26 seconds and finished sixth in the Federation 400 with a time of 57.57 seconds. Academy of Holy Names' Claire Hardwick, a Loudonville resident, was fifth among Division 2 (small school) runners in the 3,000 with a time of 10:32.61.

Singleton-McKinnon was also part of a Colonie girls 1,600 relay team that placed second in Saturday's Federation meet with a time of 3:55.75. The team of Singleton-McKinnon, Laura Bolognino, Marisa Poletto and Nanditha Badami was coming off a fourth-place finish in Friday's Division 1 final and rallied from fifth to second place in a tight pack during the Federation race.

"You just have to give it your all, and I just wanted to make it my best run," said Singleton-McKinnon, who ran the anchor leg both days.

"I'm going to miss them," said Colonie coach Jen Petersen of her senior-dominated relay team. "They ran their season best (time) both days."

Two other relay teams featuring Colonie runners fared well at states. The Colonie boys 400 relay team of Crouse, Kehrer,
