Making drivers safer

Classes can help young and old identifying driving risks

By JILL U. ADAMS
news@spotlightnews.com

It's a fact that the youngest and oldest drivers have the most accidents. But what can be done about it?

"Realize that every [traffic-related] law is written in blood," said Roger Dames, traffic safety coordinator for AAA Hudson Valley. A retired cop, Dames said accidents involving teenagers still rile up his emotions, after years of reconstructing crashes for the Albany Police Department.

Now Dames teaches pre-

Motorists just starting out and those in their Golden Years need to take extra steps to avoid driving drama

For many travelers summer driving means a car full of camping gear, pulling over at rest stops on scenic routes and a no-hurry pace down winding roads. But the warm months also translate into busy highways, distracted pedestrians and a risk for crashes. Especially vulnerable are young and elderly drivers, two groups with more free time during the summer season and historically high accident rates year-round.

In 2005, drivers ages 24 and younger comprised almost one-fifth of all drivers involved in accidents in New York. The figure was at almost 13 percent for drivers aged 60 and higher, according to a Spotlight analysis of Department of Motor Vehicles data.

The young and the reckless

"I tell my kids at the first day of class that they really shouldn't be driving at all," said Hal Lerner, a driver's education instructor who teaches in Guilderland and other parts of the Capital District.

State auditor sentenced

Man accused of stealing $1.2 million ordered to pay it back

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

James Leggiero, former state Office of Mental Health auditor, will serve anywhere from three-and-a-third to 10 years in prison for stealing more than $1.2 million in state funds over a nine-year period.

The sentence was handed down Monday, July 2, in Albany County Court by Judge Thomas A. Breslin.

"Mr. Leggiero swindled taxpayers for nine years to support his own lavish lifestyle of luxury homes and fast cars," said state Attorney General Andrew Cuomo.

As a veteran state auditor for OMH, Leggiero created a fictitious company called Very Important Properties (VIP) and signed off on property vouchers ranging from several hundred to up to $99,000 dollars, pocketing the funds. He then opened up a checking account in the name of VIP and withdrew the state money to finance a lifestyle that included owning several vehicles, including a 1958 Corvette, and a second residential property. The abuses occurred between 1998 and 2007.

Four gear up for run

Two vacant seats up for grabs in the fall

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

It will be a busy election year in Bethlehem with four candidates running for two open seats on the town board in addition to the race for town supervisor.

Newly appointed Independent town board member Jo Ann Dawson will face three newcomers including Mark Hennessey, Art Scheuermann and Melody Burns this fall.

In December, Dawson, an Independence Party candidate who is also cross-endorsed by the Democratic party, replaced Tim Gordon, who won a seat in the state Assembly. Upon being appointed, she said she would run for the two-year term in November.

"I feel I am becoming more informed and educated about the issues," said Dawson, who believes the balance between open space planning and planned development is one of the town's big concerns.

The two candidates with the highest number of votes will be elected to the seats.

Democrat Daniel Plummer, an eight-year veteran of the Bethlehem Town Board, said he will not seek re-election.

"I really feel like it's appropriate to give someone else their turn," said Plummer, who cited a busy work schedule and three of four children in college as other reasons why he opted against running.

"I enjoy it. ... I like being active in the town," said Plummer of his service on the board.

Hennessey, also a Democrat, has received the support of the town Democratic Party and the Independence and Conservative parties. Hennessey is currently employed as legislator director for the chairman of the state Assembly Committee on Local Governments.

Phillips was traveling south on River Road when police pulled him over. A check of the vehicle showed Phillips also had metal knuckles. He was arraigned and sent to Albany County jail without bail. He was scheduled to appear in Bethlehem Town Court Monday, July 9.

• Ryan Scott, 21, of 2015 Ninth St., Rensselaer, was charged with DWI, driving with more than .08 percent blood alcohol content and failure to keep right.

Bethlehem police stopped Scott's vehicle as it was heading north on River Road. According to reports, Scott's vehicle crossed the solid double line on several occasions. Scott told police he drank seven beers throughout the night at Henry Hudson

When officers arrived at the scene, Moore tried to confront them and was immediately handcuffed after exiting his vehicle. He told police he drank three Heinekens prior to being stopped. Moore is scheduled to appear in Bethlehem Town Court on July 17.

• Randy Storm, 40, of 156 Flatbush Road, Hannacroix, was charged with DWI, speeding, and failure to keep right by police.

Storm was stopped on River Road after failing to keep right according to reports. Storm will appear in Town Court July 17.

• Donald Vice, 55, of 7 Christie Lane, Fort Edward

• Jennifer Alston, 38, is charged with two felony counts, including criminal possession of a controlled substance, after an investigation by Bethlehem police and the state Department of Health Bureau of Narcotics Enforcement.

Police attempted to contact Alston at her residence following an investigation, but she reportedly refused to answer the door. After several attempts, Alston contacted her attorney and agreed to surrender to police with her attorney present.

The investigation revealed that Alston passed stolen forged state prescriptions at CVS Pharmacy on Delaware Avenue and was charged with criminal possession of a forged instrument and with narcotics possession. Alston was processed and bail was set at $5,000. She is scheduled to appear in court July 17.

Family service agency is one of the oldest and biggest in the area

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Delmar resident Kevin M. Leyden, an executive in the Albany office of IBM Corporation, replaces Karen Carpenter-Palumbo as the new president of Parsons Child and Family Center, the region's largest family services agency.

Leyden assumed his new role at Parsons at the end of June. Palumbo left the position to become director of the New York State Office of Alcohol and Substance Abuse Services.

"I am very humbled being selected," said Leyden, who will preside over a 27-member board of directors for one of the largest private-sector programs in the Capital District, with more than 575 employees.

"Over the past six years, I realize what Parsons does and how many families it touches in the Capital District," said Leyden, who brings to the job more than 20 years of social service experience.

Before working with IBM, Leyden was the director of family placement service for the state Department of Social Services. He also served as director for the Decade of the Child, overseeing and coordinating the efforts of 18 state agencies and more than 140 programs with a total annual budget of more than $1 billion.

At IBM, Leyden's duties include management and marketing of the company's sales initiatives in government, health and human services, and storage systems.

One of Leyden's priorities will focus on Parsons' facility, now a half century old.

"Reconstruction of our residential physical plant, which is now about 50 years old, including replacement and renovation," said Ray Schimmer, Parsons executive director, of the work needed at Parsons.

"We've been blessed at Parsons to have a succession of wonderful board leaders, and Kevin Leyden fits the mold perfectly," said Schimmer.

Leyden said the future for Parsons will be ever changing as the needs of the community continue to change and grow.

"Our service model is changing from residential children's care to really getting involved more in the community and getting families the support they need to keep children in their homes," Leyden said "The agency will physically need to respond to that."

Founded in 1829 as the Society for the Relief of Orphan and Destitute Children of the City of Albany, Parsons is Albany's oldest family service organization, in existence for 175 years. Leyden said he will strive to provide better service for children in need.

Parsons provides counseling services, parenting education, prevention and treatment of child abuse and neglect, family strengthening programs, early childhood family support, youth development programs and mental health services.

"One of my hopes is that as the board evolves, we become an integral part of helping the agency grow and inspire and support staff," Leyden said.

Black bear captured in neighborhood

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

A 120-pound black bear gave Delmar residents along Salisbury Road quite a scare Tuesday morning, July 2.

Barbara Manning of 18 Salisbury Road came across the bear around 10 a.m. as she was watering her herb garden in a fenced in yard behind her garage.

"We were about 10 feet apart," said Manning. "I'm not sure who was more startled, me or the bear."

Manning said the bear was standing right in the middle of her stone patio. She quickly shut the door, went inside and called animal control officers. By the time Manning came back, the bear had hopped back over the fence and was gone.

The bear then ran into the back yard of another neighbor's home as the calls to Bethlehem's 9-1-1 emergency line started pouring in.

"I called 9-1-1 and they said, 'Is this about the bear?' And I said, 'Yes, this is about the bear,'" said Manning's neighbor Fred Strauss.

About one minute later, Strauss said, the police, along with the animal control officer, arrived on the scene and finally located the bear on Capital Street, where it had climbed a large pine tree. Moments later, the bear was tranquilized with a dart and fell to the ground where officers from the State Department on Environmental Conservation weighed it before putting an electronic monitoring collar on it. The bear was put inside a large crate, moved to Berne and released back into the wild.

Delmar residents first reported the bear a week ago in the same vicinity.

"He has been sighted several times in the area since last Thursday," Strauss said.

Neither the bear nor any residents were injured.

Manning believes the bear was looking for some food to eat after it was most likely thrown out of its den by the mother bear.

"I have some wild raspberries in my yard, but he wasn't able to get those," Manning said.

Lt Thomas Heffernan of the Bethlehem Police Department said officers received numerous calls over a 10-day period from residents who reported seeing the bear.

"Most of the sightings were in the area of North Street, McCormick Road and Salisbury Road," said Heffernan. "The bear was pretty active, mainly in the morning hours."

Manning said she is glad the bear was safely captured.

"It was a big event for our neighborhood," said Manning.

Falling just outside the spell of Harry Potter

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
news@spotlightnews.com

There might be a wizard out there poised to turn me into a three-headed dog because I haven't read all the Harry Potter books. I hope the wizard takes pity on me, a mere Muggle, for whom the Potter series just does not move in any particularly magical way.

My initial reaction, while reading the first book, was annoyance. I wasn't annoyed at the book. I was annoyed that I didn't write the book! I was jealous of J.K. Rowling, who I'd heard had basically written the story in a coffee shop on a set of napkins.

I knew there'd come a day when I'd regret not being a coffee drinker.

The story has all the standard characters: the nice guy hero, the brainy brunette, the geeky best friend, and the bully. Most of the adults are mean or stupid, save for the one or two who are wise and protective. Parents are peripheral (deceased or "back at home").

But the author also throws in some clever stuff, like the train to Hogwarts that picks up budding wizards at platform nine and three-quarters. That's neat.

Rowling just opened up her imagination and thought like a child. And what did her imagination bring: unusual jelly beans, with flavors like boogers and barf.

It's so simple that it's genius.

Those might not be the actual flavors cited in the book, but I'm not inclined to research the matter.

I started reading the books only because I wanted to preview what my then 8-year-old was about to read. I found "Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone" easy to read, but not particularly gripping. Like, if it wasn't a national craze I may not have bothered to finish the book.

Please don't swat at me with your magic broom, but there are only so many hours in a day and millions of books I'll never get a chance to read.

Calm down, Potter fans, I finished the book. And I went on to the second book, planning to read just ahead of Rachel so we could share the experience.

The second book started out humorously and included a car that could fly. I was actually enjoying the book until it turned dark and creepy. Harry was plagued by a voice that only he could hear. And the voice was talking about death. I had to stop reading the book at night.

Needless to say, Rachel finished the book before I did.

Don't you find the book scary? I would ask my daughter. No, she'd say, that's just the snake.

And the movies? Forget it. I can't watch them. I'm still scared by Scooby Doo mysteries, even though I know the monster is just the museum curator in disguise.

My husband, a fan of "Lord of the Rings," joined the Potter frenzy. I never got past the second book and I've only seen parts of the movies, but Jeff is right there with Rachel in all the Harry Potter excitement.

The new Harry Potter movie comes out on Rachel's birthday this year. Talk about a great gift! I see some father-daughter quality time coming up.

We had a Harry Potter birthday theme two years running. I face-painted lightning bolts on everyone's forehead, we played

The second book started out humorously and included a car that could fly. I was actually enjoying the book until it turned dark and creepy. Harry was plagued by a voice that only he could hear. And the voice was talking about death. I had to stop reading the book at night.

"pin the parchment on Hedwig" and all the partygoers formed a Flobber worm using their own bodies and green balloons. I remember the guest of honor licking the frosting off the Harry figurine that had adorned the cake.

We would've played some version of Quidditch, but I didn't want anyone getting knocked out of the sky into the neighbor's yard. Just kidding, we didn't play because the stores were all out of the Nimbus 2000.

My dad, Rachel's grandpa, read all the books up through "The Prisoner of Azkaban."

He said he lost interest due to the author's use of a made-up language. He did, however, let me paint a lightning bolt on his head at Rachel's eighth birthday party

It's absolutely wonderful that so many children have been turned on to reading via the Harry Potter series. However, my daughter was already an avid reader before she became interested in the books, so I feel a bit disappointed when she chooses to re-read a Harry Potter instead of moving on to something new.

There are so many books out there waiting to be read that it seems a shame to be re-reading the Harry Potter series so soon after getting through the books a first time. Even adults are doing it.

Apparently after book two (where I stopped my journey) the novels grow considerably in size and complexity. So by re-reading you can catch something you previously glossed over, or gain a better understanding of the made-up language, or say "Aha" when you find some foreshadowing that you didn't pick up on the first time.

I'd still rather read a new book. But it's good that the kids are reading, and that their vocabularies are expanding (because most of the words are real words), and that they are taking part in an adventure.

That's all fine, except for the kids who will read only Harry Potter. I hope there aren't too many of those. A few years back I did run into a fifth grader who announced there were NO other good books out there, which meant there would be NOTHING to read until the next Harry Potter book came out. Well, that is just plain

"riddikulus."

The seventh Harry Potter book comes out in late July. Will it really be the last book in the series or just the final book about Harry's time at Hogwarts? Couldn't there be a prequel that starts when Harry's parents were young? Or doesn't the author drink coffee anymore?

I'm impressed that even after becoming a gazillionaire, Rowling kept pumping out the stories, each one more complex than the one before. I'm guessing she no longer composes on napkins, but I think I read somewhere that she writes out the stories long-hand on paper. She must have bionic fingers.

I don't think I could crank out even a single novel. "You never know, until you try," says my ever-encouraging spouse. He's my personal defense-against-the-dark-arts professor.

Maybe I should buy some parchment paper and head off to the local coffee shop. If I'm lucky I'll be inspired to write a dazzling tale. Then all I'll need is an owl to deliver my masterpiece to a publishing house.

Indian Ladder Farms,
Altamont, NY

I have a bad tendency to tune out problems I think are too big for me to solve personally. Environmental damage caused by huge corporations, our society's out-of-control consumption of nonrenewable resources, and global warming overwhelm me. I am 44 years old. I am married and have one child. My family lives and works on Indian Ladder Farms. I worry about things like: is did my son go to school wearing the t-shirt he slept in; is the Pick Your Own picked out; is my husband, who left on a restaurant delivery three hours ago, getting in on an impromptu beer and local cheese tasting; and what the heck are we going to have for dinner.

But lately I've begun to realize that my solutions to little problems can actually help solve some of the bigger problems, provided I am not alone. I can hang my laundry on the clothesline and consume less electricity. I can bring my own bags to the store to avoid using those horrible plastic ones. I can buy books as gifts for children instead of toys made in China. Small choices can add up to big changes as long as enough people are making them.

One of the most important choices we can make is what to eat. Not only does the food we eat affect our own personal health as well as the health of our families—it also affects the health of local economies and ultimately the health of the entire planet.

Locally grown food is fresher than food flown in from South America or trucked in from California. Fresh food is higher in nutrients. When you purchase food grown locally you choose not to support a long-distance system of food transportation that burns a tremendous amount of fuel. Not only does this conserve a non renewable resource, it protects the atmosphere from harmful emissions that contribute to global warming.

Purchasing locally produced food keeps local farms in business. This preserves farmland. Preserving farmland helps our community retain its unique character. Our community must remain capable of producing as much of its own food as possible. As one farm after another turns into a housing development we lose a critical resource that we may need to fall back on in hard times. In addition, preserving farmland preserves open space which provides cover for wildlife, protects watersheds and maintains air quality.

Local farms are local businesses. They buy things from other local businesses and hire local people who do the same. By purchasing locally grown food we can support our local economy instead of keeping big box stores owned by mega corporations in business.

Local farms are small. Small farms follow nature's the rules instead of making their own rules and destroying the environment in the process. Local farmers know their farm animals by name. Their farm animals go outside and eat grass instead of being confined to feed lots in the mid-west where they are fed gross volumes of genetically modified corn produced with pesticides and chemical fertilizers. A steak from a cow raised on a pasture in one of our Hilltowns may cost more than that steak on the Styrofoam tray in the grocery store. But you are paying for the cost of the meat up front instead of letting it come back to haunt your children in the form of irrevocable environmental damage.

Big ideas aside corn on the cob from the farm down the road tastes better than corn on the cob trucked in from Florida and it's more fun to go to a farm than to the grocery store. Let's enjoy the summer and eat well from the bountiful harvest of our local farms.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

Heading in big circles

They're here, and more are coming.

Roundabouts, that is. There are five in Malta; one in Voorheesville; and three planned for Bethlehem. Plus, the infamous Latham Circle, which traffic experts quickly point out isn't a real roundabout, but a traffic circle.

Reaction to these traffic devices is mixed. One Spotlight staffer called them "an elegant solution to an inelegant problem;" some of us feel that we're braving something akin to a corkscrew rollercoaster or an Evel Knievel jump over barrels when we approach them.

The state Department of Transportation touts roundabouts as safer than red lights, and a good way to keep traffic moving. Commuters who have successfully made the transition to roundabouts don't miss sitting in line at a red light.

Maybe keeping our eye on the prize of time gained will convert the more roundabout-phobic of us. Who wouldn't love more time to spend with family, to walk the dog, or to sit on the deck and enjoy the evening air?

It seems like new housing is going up all around us. The nanotechnology that we hope will keep our young people in the Capital District will require more and better infrastructure, and roundabouts are bound to be part of it.

It's easy to sit back and wish for the good old days when life felt easier. While our memories of the past can inform the vision of the future, we can't fear change ... even if it means we go through the new roundabout a couple of times before we truly master it.

We encourage the architects of our future to make things as clear as possible. Please put up big signs explaining the roundabouts far enough in advance so we can figure out what we want to do before we get there.

DOT has a special section on its Web site about negotiating roundabouts, www.dot.state.ny.us/roundabouts/howto.html.

Maybe organizations like AAA or insurance agents could offer some instruction on roundabout use. And merchants who feel their businesses might be negatively affected by drivers with roundabout concerns might want to think about creating a special set of directions for getting to their businesses via the roundabout.

These new circles are the way of the future: if we're proactive in their use, we won't feel we're being taken for a ride.

Grape expectations at barrel tasting

By KATHLEEN LISSON
news@spotlightnews.com

The writer is a member of the Society of Wine Educators and author of the Wine and Stories from the Vineyard blog at www.myspace.com/gamay.

Grapes are grown in the vineyard, but it is in the cellar that wine is truly born. It is in this damp, 55-degree room of red-stained oak casks that autumn's ripened grapes ferment and new wines slowly mature, growing in power and grace.

Though I have enjoyed drinking wine since my college days, I was introduced to the romance of the wine cellar only last year. In her "Wine Course" series on PBS, British wine critic Jancis Robinson travels around the globe, visiting lush vineyards and talking to opinionated winemakers. The entire series is enthralling, but the part where Robinson visits a winery's aging cellar, tasting newly fermented wines straight from the barrel, really captured my imagination.

Earlier this year, I jumped at the opportunity of a lifetime — a chance to taste wine at a local winery's cellar on a frigid, early-spring day. Benmarl winery, on the Hudson Valley's Shawangunk Wine Trail, opens its cellar for a weekend every spring, giving local wine lovers a chance to taste the new vintage straight from the barrel and purchase "futures," securing a quantity of wine before it is bottled and available to the general public.

If the day that a wine is released to be sold is like a debutante's coming out party, then a barrel tasting must be the vintage's first kiss.

The Hudson Valley's Shawangunk Wine Trail is an easy day trip, less than a two-hour drive from the Capital District. It winds between the Shawangunk Ridge and the Hudson River, linking Benmarl and nine other Ulster County wineries with local restaurants, shops and accommodations.

The word Shawangunk, a Dutch transliteration of a Native American word, roughly translates to the phrase "in the smoky air." Indeed, the air was thick that morning, but with snow, not smoke, as I took the Thruway south from Albany. Wet flakes changed to a steady, drizzling rain as I turned off Highland Avenue in Marlborough-Hudson, making my way past rows of bare vines to the Benmarl winery.

Dodging raindrops, I walked into the winery and glanced at the cheery, well-lit tasting room before descending the cellar stairs to meet Kristop Brown, Benmarl's winemaker. Dressed in a warm black pullover and jeans, with longish hair and a ready smile, Kristop has the engaging excitement of someone who greatly enjoys his work. Shivering in my coat, I picked up a glass from a side table and joined a few other wine lovers and Kristop at a large wooden cask lying on its side in the middle of the cellar.

Kristop explained that the Zinfandel we were going to sample was made from California grapes. He slowly lowered a long glass tube that reminded me of a giant turkey baster into the cask. After drawing the red liquid up from the open bunghole with this "wine thief," he released it into our waiting glasses. The wine was fully Zinfandel, fruity and spicy. I swirled it in the glass, took a healthy sip, swished it around in my mouth for a long moment, and swallowed.

Kristop explained that I'd entered the tour late and the Zinfandel was the last wine on the list to taste, but if I had time, he would give me a chance to taste the others. The other tour participants, members of Benmarl's Société des Vignerons, went into an adjoining room to purchase their futures, giving me a chance to take a look around. The cellar was well-lit and the air was cold and damp. Dozens of wine casks lined the walls, stacked on their sides on sturdy metal racks. The cellar's "wine library" was in a smaller adjoining room, its metal doors protecting dusty bottles of wine, a priceless and irreplaceable living record of past vintages.

Because of the storm, business upstairs was slow, so Janet from the tasting room was able to join our impromptu cellar tour. Kristop let us taste his young wines as he spoke thoughtfully about the virtues of aging Chardonnay in oak and the success of Baco Noir harvested from the winery's own vineyard. After we had sampled the wines on the tour, our winemaker took us on his own private rounds — sampling an interesting red from young vines, a foxy Steuben Rose from the spigot of its stainless steel tank, and a half glassful from the Petit Verdot cask just to see why wineries don't sell 100 percent Petit Verdot (it is extremely tannic, like sucking on a wet teabag).

Kristop's excitement for winemaking and the wide variety of different wines in the Benmarl cellar are a fitting testament to this winery's centuries-old reputation. Benmarl has the distinction of being America's oldest continuously producing vineyard and holds the first New York State Farm Winery license. Andrew Jackson Caywood planted vines on this site in the 1800s, developing new grape varieties. The Miller family purchased the property in 1957, founding a Société des Vignerons. Société members help support continued experimentation in the vineyard in exchange for a portion of the freshly bottled fruits of the vine.

Giving us a taste of each of his wines, Kristop showed us the ways of the cellar. Cleaning our glasses under the water hose, we discussed the effects of Robert Parker on winemaking. I took large mouthfuls of liquid, swishing indulgently and spitting directly into the floor grates. The rhythm of the cellar is slow, perhaps honoring the wines quietly aging in their oak enclosures. Inserting the wine thief slowly into the cask, Kristop would rest his hand softly on the wine-stained wood, pausing as the tube filled with the dark red liquid. He chose his words carefully when describing the wines, as if the grapes themselves could hear through the open bunghole. We tasted the wines deliberately, sniffing inquisitively and letting the flavors run across and under our tongues before spitting. The cellar was quiet but for our hushed voices of praise after the clinking of stemware and wine thief, the soft splash of wine into glass.

When we were done, I thanked Kristop and went upstairs. Janet led me through a tasting of the winery's offerings, including dessert wines and others I hadn't tried downstairs. Won over by Benmarl's commitment to quality winemaking, I was happy to bring home a few bottles for future enjoyment with friends.

Visiting a winery is more than just a fun day trip. It provides a living illustration of where the food we eat and the beverages we drink physically come from. This experience gives city dwellers in today's fast-paced knowledge economy a chance get back to basics, meeting and supporting those who still make their living working the land and feeding America. Perhaps even more extraordinary, a barrel tasting is a unique opportunity to get a first-hand look at the skill and dedication that goes on into creating a bottle of wine. As bright and warm as a tasting room is, it doesn't come close to the romance of accepting a glassful of precocious young wine from her winemaker in a damp, chilly cellar.

Kudos to a candidate and a fourth grader

Editor, The Spotlight:

In the past month, two poignant situations have come to my attention. The first that occurred was that I read an article in The Spotlight that a fourth grader from Hamagrael Elementary School wrote. This was no ordinary article, but one that was filled with facts that even a 50-year-old person wouldn't know, like "it takes 10 years to grow one inch of moss."

This student was writing about how unnecessary it was to cut down the trees in front of Hamagrael Elementary School. I think it is amazing that a fourth grader could recognize this destructive behavior, while elected town officials still feel like these are innocuous actions. In this town, trees are being cut down every day for new housing developments and businesses like Wal-Mart.

This growth and development is totally necessary ... right. Cheers to the fourth grader who showed great leadership and awareness.

Another positive situation that happened recently dealt with an upcoming candidate. I was playing Frisbee at the town park and when I got back to the car, I had a little spruce tree on the windshield. This baby tree had a name attached to it: Grady. It makes me so pleased to think that instead of wasting paper for campaign signs (which many people ignore), he decided to get his message out another way. Candidate Grady's tactics were responsible and far-sighted.

Town needs open space plan Share summer's bounty

Editor, The Spotlight:

It is time for the Bethlehem Town Board to prepare an open space plan for the town. Nearly all other fast-growing towns in the Capital District have already adopted open space plans and are working to implement them. Every month we delay in developing a plan, we lose opportunities to incorporate open space, parkland and trails into new subdivisions. When developers meet with town planners during the sketch plan review process, there is no coherent open space strategy to guide them in their efforts to meet local open space goals.

Aside from the intrinsic aesthetic, environmental and recreational value of open space, studies show that communities with the highest proportion of preserved open space have the lowest property tax rates. Yes, open space is a net revenue generator for towns. A town with an unbalanced tax base such as ours should jump at the opportunity to better balance it; commercial and industrial development are not the only means to do so. Many community residents believed that their initial participation in the comprehensive planning process and their responses to the community survey stressing the desirability of open space protection was enough – they trusted that the town would follow through in the development of an open space plan.

Unfortunately, we are learning that it is not enough.

Bethlehem remains zoned for sprawl and there is no movement on an open space plan. Town residents who care about the future livability of this town should write, call or e-mail town board members to ask for an open space plan now, before it is too late.

This is a letter to the members of our community to remember those who are less fortunate than us and continue to support our local food pantries NOWS.

The food pantries such as the one at Bethlehem Town Hall need our support now as well as at the holiday times when food drives are in abundance.

Food pantries are in need of items that public assistance does not cover, or family finances just don't stretch far enough.

The following items are needed now and on a regular basis: toothpaste, deodorant, bar soap, laundry soap, cleaning supplies, shampoo, feminine products, toilet paper, canned meats (hash, beef stew), canned fruits.

With school out, families that receive assistance with breakfast and lunches are asking the food pantries for extra help. They need snacks, juices, peanut butter, crackers, jelly, cereal, and canned fruit.

Finally, it's almost July and the food pantries are looking ahead to help with school supplies. The pantry at Bethlehem Town hall assisted more than 50 children last year with needed supplies.

Let's all pitch in and help fellow community members and support our food pantries. Make use of the Buy One-Get One offers ... keep one and donate one.

Mortgage Debt
As climbing interest rates force many homeowners to face rising monthly payments, it pays to review the "28/36 Rule," which many mortgage lenders use to estimate how much debt a home buyer can afford. For a solid financial footing, prospective borrowers should limit their mortgage payments, property taxes, homeowner's insurance, and other home-related costs to no more than 28% of their gross income. Beyond that, total debt obligations, including home debt, credit card debt, auto and student loans should not exceed 36% of gross income. As some homeowners have found, if an appreciable portion of their debt is in variable rate loans, an increase in interest rates can raise monthly payments to higher loan levels than originally anticipated. Therefore, a fixed rate loan may be the answer for a consistent mortgage payment, especially if you plan to stay in the house for the foreseeable future.
Remember, I can provide you with expert mortgage lenders to assess your financial situation and provide you with the mortgage that fits your needs.

Legislator calls for close look at housing policies

Benedict says that sex offenders were placed in proximity to children

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parkerg@spotlightnews.com

Residency restrictions on sex offenders in Albany County came under the microscope again last week, as County Legislature Minority Leader Christine Benedict, R-Colonie, said a study of county records has uncovered a practice that puts children within reach of convicted sex offenders.

Since winter, Benedict has been acquiring records from county and town of Colonie offices about several motels on Central Avenue in her district. What she found has surprised and upset many county legislators.

Convicted sex offenders and families, both placed by county Social Services in the motels, were living side by side. Also, town records show that conditions within some of the motels were deplorable.

However, county officials counter that the practice has been nonexistent since October, when county legislators passed residency restrictions on where sex offenders can live.

"First and foremost, I am highly disappointed in Albany County Social Services," said County Legislator Shawn Morse, I-Cohoes. "Here we have the branch working for county government putting them (sex offenders) in the same building (with children)."

Morse was the sponsor of legislation passed last year that placed residency restriction on sex offenders. The legislation set in place a 1,000-foot buffer between post-release sex offenders and educational or recreational facilities that house children. Benedict's information brought to light serious questions about the effectiveness of such laws, especially when other county offices are undermining their intent, Morse said.

Legislators are asking for a newly formed commission to review social service policies and set in motion a feasibility study on future placement of sex offenders in Albany County.

Benedict's records have named the Best Value Inn, Blue Bell Motor Inn, Skylane and Tompkins Motel on Central Avenue. Each of the motels had at some point been used by county social services and Homeless and Travelers Aid Society to house post-release sex offenders and families. The Skylane motel was among the last on the list to be used to house families and sex offenders, according to social services and HATAS. The practice stopped in October, while the practice in the other hotels either didn't exist or was stopped as early as 2005 in the Blue Bell, said Kerri Battle, Albany County spokeswoman.

To make families who may be going through economic hardships have to live temporarily in these motels with sex offenders is deplorable, said Benedict.

Benedict and Morse are also taking issue with the conditions of some of the motels. Several of them have been cited by town of Colonie inspectors for having exposed electrical wiring, mold, "exposed feces," and faulty smoke detectors, to name a few problems, she said.

"It's a real problem. It's pretty sad," Benedict said. "These violations are most disturbing. Who in good conscience could place young children in these rooms? Look at this area. Where are youngsters supposed to play? In the parking lot? On Route 5 (Central Avenue)?"

Not only are convicted offenders living under the same roof as families placed by social services, but many of the motels abut residential areas, she said.

According to a department of social services response to Benedict's Freedom of Information Act request, between Jan. 1, 2006, and Feb. 22, 2007, 96 children were housed in five Colonie motels. They were placed there as part of HATAS's 24-hour homeless and emergency placement services. It noted that none had been placed in the motels all year.

Benedict would like the county to conduct a study of all the property it owns and take a look at the bottom line of housing the individuals. Her hope is that some properties could be used to house either one of the parties to separate them and have them living in better conditions, she said.

shelter to "everyone and anyone who needs it," she said.

Action needs to be taken soon, both legislators said, especially as neighboring counties like Schenectady continue to pass residency restrictions for sex offenders that could push them out of those areas and into Albany County.

"I really think the legislative body needs to look at the Social Services Department as a whole, to clear the air and get the real facts. The issue of trust has been publicly raised," said Morse. "We owe it to the public."

First of three roundabouts being built

Temporary traffic tie-ups expected until project completed

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

The first of three new roundabouts in the $15.2 million state Department of Transportation Slingerlands Bypass project is currently under construction.

The going may be a little difficult right now as traffic tie-ups and motorist confusion surface along the intersection of New Scotland Road and Cherry Avenue. It may take a little bit longer to get your hamburgers and hot dogs at the Slingerlands Price Chopper, but in less than two months, the traffic lights at that intersection will be removed and the first roundabout in the bypass project will be ready for use.

"This is the busiest intersection of the three roundabouts we are putting in," said Pete Van Keuren, NYSDOT regional spokesman. "It should be functional within a couple of months."

The major Bethlehem construction project is at the heart of the majority of local traffic heading to and from Albany, interstates 90 and 87 and to Slingerlands and the surrounding rural communities. The road sees 25,000 vehicles every day.

"It is a major operation, and this area is one of the main thoroughfares through town," said Lt. Thomas Heffernan of the Bethlehem Police Department.

Heffernan said many residents have called to complain about motorists speeding through side streets in the Terra Mere development to get away from the construction.

"Cutting through back streets could create a dangerous situation," said Heffernan.

"I know we are impacting a lot of people, but we try to remind people it is going to get a lot better."

Pete Van Keuren

"People really need to slow down and be aware of what's going on."

While the roundabout is being constructed, the Price Chopper entrance off LaGrange Road is closed to all traffic. Traffic entering and exiting Price Chopper is now going through the New Scotland Road entrance. Several DOT flaggers and a temporary light on New Scotland Road are currently controlling the traffic patterns.

"That pattern should be in place for about another month and a half," Van Keuren said.

The three new roundabouts at the intersections of routes 85 and 140, Route 85 and Maher Road and Route 85 and Blessing Road are designed to provide safer, more efficient travel through Slingerlands.

"I know we are impacting a lot of people, but we try to remind people it is going to get a lot better," Van Keuren said.

Town board member Kyle Kotary said the new roundabout is designed to relieve traffic congestion from Cherry Avenue to New Scotland.

"It's a little bit of inconvenience now to gain a whole lot of convenience in the long run," Kotary said.

Construction of the roundabout has been progressing on schedule.

"I think the project has been running smoothly so far," said Van Keuren.

Town Supervisor Jack Cunningham said the whole road should be accessible to traffic in October and motorists should proceed with caution.

"My expectation is that we will have a very strong police presence when we open up," said Cunningham. "The town will not tolerate reckless driving."

Other bypass work includes bridge widening and new bridge construction and the widening of the existing Normans Kill bridge to accommodate two additional travel lanes.

originally listed as Slingerlands, lives in Guilderland.

Leggiero's case was the first high-profile investigation under the new state Attorney General's office and the Public Integrity Unit. Cuomo has instituted a hot line, (800) 428-9072, for residents to report allegations of government wrongdoing.

"We have received a variety of calls since the hot line has been instituted," said Lee Parks, a spokesman in the Attorney General's office.

Leggiero's back accounts and several assets were seized immediately following his arrest.

"His crime and the length of time he was able to perpetrate it shows why my office's emphasis on public integrity cases is so important to help restore trust in government," Cuomo said in a written statement following Leggiero's conviction.

Leggiero pleaded guilty April 14 to first-degree grand larceny and immediately resigned from OMH. He also agreed not to seek any future state government employment. Leggiero had worked for the state Office of Mental Health for 25 years. His wife, Kathleen, is also employed with the agency.

evaluation background," said Hennessey, who also worked as policy analyst and senior policy analyst in the state legislature.

Hennessey said holding taxes down and adhering to the comprehensive plan will be a few of his priorities if elected.

"I would like to help improve our senior services and hopefully expand programs for families and children," Hennessey said.

Hennessey lives in Delmar with his wife and two children.

Republicans Scheuermann, chairman of the town party, and Burns will be up against Dawson and Hennessey this fall.

Burns has lived in Bethlehem for the past 17 years and is an organizational management consultant. She is active in the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce and said she believes overdevelopment and traffic safety are some of the main issues facing residents.

"It seems that the town is growing very quickly," said Burns. "I feel I can be part of the solution."

Burns also has the support of both the Conservative and Republican parties.

Scheuermann, a lawyer who is active in many community organizations including the Bethlehem Soccer Club, said his run for a seat on the town board is not about partisan politics.

"We need to try and make this a balanced government," Scheuermann said.

Two longtime school board members retire

Veterinarian and engineer brought insight to district's future

By CARI SCRIBNER and JIM CUOZZO
scribnerc@spotlightnews.com
jcuozzo@spotlightnews.com

Stuart Lyman, D.V.M., and Richard Svenson, both longtime and highly respected members of the Bethlehem Central School District Board of Education, have retired from the board.

Lyman had been a member of the Bethlehem Central Board of Education since 1994 and served as board president from 2004-2007. He is a veterinarian at Delmar Animal Hospital and teaches large animal health at SUNY Cobleskill. Lyman and his wife, Jane, own Lyman's Sleighbell Farm on Meads Lane, where they raise sheep and Belgian horses, grow pumpkins and pick-your-own raspberries.

Lyman said he will miss the particular synergy he experienced when the board members worked together to come up with novel solutions to districtwide challenges.

"After 13 years, it's hard to list accomplishments, but the tenor of the board and the relationships we have with each other is something rarely seen on boards," said Lyman. "We were rarely confrontational, but instead, cooperative with one another. Other boards fight among themselves, but we got the work done."

Superintendent Les Loomis called Lyman a board member with "vision and creativity."

"He would often raise questions that were full of insight and therefore moves us towards a better solution," said Loomis.

One issue Lyman pressed for during his tenure stands out as an example of the ripple effect one decision can make to the future design of school facilities.

"When we were going through construction of the high school prior to this one, it took me two years to convince the board we needed to move the tennis courts to the back of the school," said Lyman. "It seems so simple, but after that, we had the ability to put more parking out front. We wouldn't have ripped up new tennis courts to do that. It was input on one small thing; over time, you hope those small things add up to large changes."

Lyman said he takes his cues from former partner Dr. Robert Lynch, now retired and an avid watercolor artist.

"He never accepted too many volunteer roles, because he wanted to choose a few and do them well," said Lyman. "It's a good balance."

Richard Svenson was a school board member from 1997-2000, returning in July 2001. During his tenure, he served as president and vice president.

"He was instrumental in the approach we took in the structure of our operations and maintenance department and the hiring of Gregg Nolte as director," said Loomis.

Svenson is a licensed professional engineer and has worked for 30 years at the state health department's Center for Environmental Health.

"I brought my particular talents and interest to the board and have certainly had an impact in some areas," said Svenson. "It's been a rewarding and excellent experience."

Svenson is a past president of the soccer booster club and was an inter-club and travel coach for several Bethlehem soccer club teams. He has held office in community and professional organizations and was an active volunteer for the American Lung Association of New York State.

Svenson and his wife, Cathleen, have been residents of the district for more than 30 years and have three daughters, all of whom are Bethlehem Central High School graduates.

One of the longest tenured Bethlehem school board members and current president of the Capital Region BOCES Board, Lynne L. Lenhardt, said the men will be missed for their many contributions to the group.

"This is a lot of history gone," said Lenhardt. "Their perspectives have been very helpful over the years. It's healthy for a board to be represented by people with a variety of backgrounds."

Lenhardt said she admires Lyman for delving into issues to be certain all possibilities are considered.

"Stu asked very insightful questions and has a great ability to think outside the box," said Lenhardt. "For his going away gift, I gave him a large box with gems inside, because he always located the hidden gems."

Lenhardt said Svenson's background as an engineer was invaluable to both the board and community members.

"Over time, he saved taxpayers lots of money," she said. "He had strong knowledge of the facilities and buildings, and he knew about all previous bond issues."

Using CFL bulbs. How cool is that.

Do you want to save energy, money and help the environment at the same time? Use compact fluorescent lightbulbs (CFLs) year-round.

The average household spends about $100 a year (10% of their electricity costs) on lighting. Much of that expense is due to using inefficient lightbulbs and poor lighting habits.

Fortunately, you can take simple steps to control your lighting costs and save money on your electricity bills.

Save money.

Following the tips below could save you as much as

$50 a year on electricity costs:

- Close blinds or shades facing the sun and take advantage of the natural ventilation, especially during cool morning or evening hours.

- Open the shades and let the sun provide free lighting instead of automatically turning lights on during the day.

- Adopt a family rule to turn off lights when not in use.

Did you know:

- CFLs use only a fraction of the amount of electricity used by comparable incandescent lightbulbs.

- Electricity savings in the first year will more than pay for the cost of the CFL (for lights you use the most).

- CFLs last up to 10 times longer than incandescent lightbulbs.

- CFLs are available in many sizes to fit most light fixtures.

- CFLs are available for 3-way and dimmable lamps.

- You can easily find CFLs at home improvement centers, hardware stores, lighting showrooms and other major retail stores, including on-line stores.

Save time.

On average, you'll need to change CFLs just once every seven years, depending on your individual usage. This means you'll spend less time changing lightbulbs, a convenience especially in hard to reach places.

Protect the environment.

For each incandescent lightbulb that is switched to an energy-efficient CFL, you avoid more than 80 pounds of greenhouse gas emissions every year. If every household in the United States switched just one bulb to a CFL, it would be the equivalent of taking 800,000 cars off the road. Because CFLs use less energy, that means less energy is generated by power plants, reducing the amount of fossil fuels burned and creating less air pollution.

Using CFLs benefits our natural resources. You can help the environment even more by recycling your home's broken or burned-out CFLs.

For more cool energy-saving tips, visit www.AskPSC.com or call 1-888-Ask-PSC1.

Saving energy is cool.

Follow these simple steps to reduce your energy use, help the environment, and save money this summer.

- Using fans more and air conditioners less will keep you cool while reducing your electricity bills.
- If you use your air conditioner, set it at 78 degrees or higher to save on your cooling costs.
- Use a programmable thermostat on your air conditioning and a timer on your pool filter.
- Switch to CFL bulbs, which last 10 times longer and use 75% less electricity than incandescent bulbs.
- Choose energy-efficient ENERGY STAR® products when buying new appliances.

Now in its 15th year, the Ranch's Summer Residential Program hosts 950 campers from throughout the United States who spend a week at camp for free with 24-hour, on-site medical personnel.

The Double H campers are counting down the days until their Week in the Woods. A full camper sponsorship is $1,500, and there are opportunities to sponsor a child for a full week, two days of the week, one day of the week or any amount thereof. Core to the peace and well being of the campers' spirits are many dedicated people: a 24-hour medical staff, 2:1 camper/counselor ratio and hundreds of volunteer partners. The monies raised for camper sponsorship offset the expenses for the medical facility (Paul's Body Shop), program areas (children's barn, equestrian, swimming, arts and crafts), outdoor programs (ropes course), off-site trips (The Great Escape and Splashwater Kingdom, whitewater rafting), supplies and food service.

For many kids of the Double H Family, their week at camp is the only chance they have to sleep away from home, have fun outdoors and enjoy the freedom of just being a kid. For information on "A Week in the Woods" Camper Sponsorship Program, contact Linda Smith in the Development office at 696-5921, ext 238.

Storms take out trees, close roads

By JIM CUOZZO
cuzzoj@spotlightnews.com

The cleanup from Monday, July 9's powerful storms began Tuesday morning in Bethlehem and throughout the Capital District as thousands were still without power and many roads were closed.

"Last night was unbelievable because everybody's power was out," said Bethlehem police Sgt. Jim Kerr.

Route 9W was closed Tuesday near Wemple Road due to a power line bent like a twig from the powerful winds that busted through the region around 7 p.m. A tree across the yard of Joan Stahlmin at 760

Route 9W also came down from the storm.

"We had a tornado come in here about 12 years ago and took many trees down," said Stahlmin, observing the damage from her front yard. "I saw some branches flying by my picture window last night," she said.

Along Kenwood Avenue several trees were uprooted in a 2-mile stretch, many of those on property owned by Peter Kleinke. Kleinke said it's the worst storm he has ever seen.

"I saw trees bending and told my wife to come look," said Kleinke who watched the storm rip trees in his daughter's yard while she was inside her home.

"No one got hurt, that's the main thing," said Kleinke.

A portion of Delaware Avenue near town hall was closed after a large tree fell across the road, landing on top of power lines that were bending several feet.

Town Hall is currently open to residents without power as a cooling station according to Kim Ryan in Supervisor Jack Cunningham's office.

Crews from National Grid are currently working at several sites to remove trees and restore power.

volving young drivers, Lerner said, as are distractions from friends and the pressure to impress peers by speeding or engaging in other unsafe behavior.

"Sometimes they tell me very shocking things they wouldn't tell their parents," Lerner said, referring to classroom discussions where students open up about bad habits.

Safer cars and more stringent seat belt laws, he said, have done little to reduce crashes among young people. Quite the opposite, such measures make young drivers less cautious, he said.

A three-year comparison of regional and state data shows some decreases in the percentages of young drivers involved in crashes since 2003.

In Albany County, for example, young drivers made up 22.5 percent of all drivers involved in accidents in 2005 compared with 24.8 percent in 2003. In Schenectady, the percentage fell from 23.1 percent in 2003 to 20.6 percent in 2005, and in Saratoga from 25.5 percent in 2003 to 23.5 percent in 2005. Statewide, the percentage decreased from 20.8 percent in 2003 to a little less than 19 percent in 2005.

Experts said population density and the differences between urban, suburban and rural driving might account for the regional deviation.

The decrease may be partly the result of a graduated licensing program the state began in 2003. The plan phases in young drivers, allowing 16-year-olds to obtain a junior learner's permit and work their way up to a restricted junior driver's license and finally a senior license by their 18th birthday.

Drivers ages 24 and younger made up almost 20 percent of the drivers involved in accidents in 2005. Drivers 60 and older comprised almost 13 percent.

But despite the drops in the percentage of young drivers involved in crashes, fatalities among the young are on the rise, said David Swarts, DMV commissioner.

"We need to focus on this issue because of the senseless waste of lives," Swarts said.

Lerner said New York's graduated licensing is not enough for drivers whose brains are not fully developed by the time they hit the road. To make young drivers more responsible, he's taken to using what he calls scare tactics, reading off crash statistics, showing gory accident films and holding in-class discussions about alcohol and drug use.

He hopes that this approach will inspire young drivers to be more careful.

Others, including Swarts, are calling for more education and outreach programs and an emphasis on the dangers of multitasking behind the wheel.

In an age of busy schedules and new distractions from devices like cell phones and MP3 players, educators say it is even more pressing to impart good driving skills.

"It's a pretty big responsibility," Lerner said.

Another world

Unlike young adults, seniors are less likely to drive with abandon, and are involved in fewer crashes. Statewide, the percentage of seniors involved in crashes between 2003 and 2005 hasn't changed much, hovering at 13 percent.

But experts point out that the impact of an accident can be more devastating for a senior larly after midnight. And then, there's the biggie: drinking and driving.

Dames developed a parent/teen workshop to enlist parental involvement with this critical period in their child's life — becoming an independent driver. But so far, people haven't come.

"We're looking at a different way to market it," said Dames. "It's free. We're selling safety for free."

As for seniors, Dames said the key issue is changes in mobility, vision, hearing, and reaction time that occur with age.

To address these issues, Dames is launching a new program this summer called CarFit. Developed by AAA in collaboration with the AARP, the American Society on Aging, and the American Occupational Therapy Association, CarFit helps seniors to better operate their own cars.

Dames will take the program on the road to senior centers in the region. There, trained technicians will use a 12-point checklist with drivers sitting in their cars.

"Do they know how to operate everything? Can they enter and exit easily?" Dames said, describing the process. Seats, mirrors and steering wheels get adjusted — Dames said many seniors don't realize their steering wheels are adjustable — and adaptors are proposed when adjustments aren't enough. These include pedal extenders, enlarged mirrors, and seat cushions that swivel.

The Northeastern New York Safety and Health Council offers defensive driving classes for drivers of all ages. Executive director Susan Johnson said 5,000 to 6,000 people enroll in the course each year at their Albany office, and another 28,000 to 30,000 people take the Safety Council's course at driving schools around the Capital District.

Defensive driving courses are six-hour, classroom-based lessons that are attended by drivers from 16 to 90-something, who can earn discounts on insurance — 10 percent on collision and 10 percent on liability — or reduce the number of points on their license.

Others attend by court order, said instructor Lisa Marcella. Judges sometimes make the course part of the penalty for a moving traffic violation.

The class is mostly lecture, said Marcella, but videos emphasize certain issues. Students look for potential driving hazards in one video of street scenes. Another features real-life stories of accident victims. Marcella also tries to encourage discussion among the attendees about topics like road rage.

Even though teens and seniors are the riskiest drivers by demographic group, that doesn't mean that every teen or every 70-year-old is a hazard on the roads, said Dames.

And anyone can benefit from a refresher course in safe driving.

"People become complacent about driving," Marcella said.

than it is for a healthy, young driver, making unsafe habits among the elderly all the more dangerous.

"As you get older, you can get hurt, and you don't heal as fast..." said George Saba, an AARP Driver Safety Program instructor in New Scotland.

Saba, 75, has been teaching the class since he first took it himself 15 years ago to save money on insurance. Among other things, he said, he sees seniors struggling with acceleration on big highways, nighttime driving and the effects of medication. In addition, reaction times slow and memory begins to fail, making it more difficult to keep track of road rules.

"People complain about tailgating or making a turn without signaling and a lot of times they're guilty of it themselves," Saba said.

For those who notice difficulties on the road, Saba recommends avoiding fast highways, driving in the off-hours or carpooling. Seniors can also take a taxi to run their errands, use the bus or get in touch with companies that assist people who opt out of driving.

States like New Hampshire and Illinois require road tests for drivers older than 75, but New York has no such measure in place. DMV spokesman Ken Brown said all drivers must pass a vision test when they renew their license every eight years. More frequent checks on seniors, he said, would qualify as age discrimination.

Saba disagrees with this approach, and recommends a test for older drivers. If not for everyone, he said, tests should be in place at least for those who have been in recent accidents.

"I think we should have a driving test for people over 65, a reaction test," he said. "It might save their own life and someone else's."

Others like Rory Fluman, an occupational therapist and certified driving rehabilitation specialist, say more frequent vision checks will help, but retesting seniors won't necessarily take bad drivers off the road.

"I think that's the wrong way to go because it's not age, it's your health conditions that make it unsafe to drive," Fluman said.

Two years ago, Fluman started an occupational therapy practice called Senior and Special Needs Driving to evaluate such things as a driver's vision, perception and on-the-road skills. The Scotia-based practice also counsels people who decide to give up driving.

Most of his clients, Fluman said, are seniors experiencing health changes.

"Because you're an older driver, doesn't mean you're an unsafe driver," he said.

Last year Fluman began the Capital Region Older Driver Assistance Network, pulling together aging specialists, law enforcement officials, AAA representatives and other professionals to address senior driving needs.

The network is applying for a $200,000 grant from the Governor's Traffic Safety Committee to fund future education programs.

"The idea is so good," Fluman said, he hopes similar groups will emerge across the state.

For now, senior drivers like Saba say it's best to look for trouble signs and take appropriate measures to reduce risks.

The Voorheesville resident, who has been driving for almost 60 years, said he's had one accident, but it wasn't his fault.

"I'm very careful," Saba said.

"I follow my own advice."

encing and driver improvement classes for AAA. For teens, he said, "It's about building up maturity behind the wheel."

New York state uses a graduated licensing system with teenage drivers to help them gain driving experience under low-risk conditions. Drivers first get a learner's permit, which allows them to drive only when accompanied by a licensed adult. Next, they get a junior license, which allows driving alone, but carries other restrictions with regard to when, where and with whom teens can drive.

How does a classroom instructor get the safety message across to teens? "You don't," said Dames, who believes the most effective messengers are parents who talk to their kids about what's at stake — accidents, injuries and insurance. Parents also can make driving privileges contingent on safe driving habits.

The two biggest problems with teenage drivers are speed and seatbelts, said Dames. Parents can influence how their children drive by setting a good example. They also can monitor their teen's driving habits with technology, a "black box" that records speed and acceleration.

Like the state, parents can also restrict who is in the car and when teens drive. The risk of fatal accidents increases by 39 percent with another teen in the care, 86 percent with two teenaged passengers, and 300 percent with three. Teen crashes also increase at night, particu-

First fair of the summer season starts next week

By CARI SCRIBNER
scribnerc@spotlightnews.com

The smells of fried dough and the screams of kids twirling upside down on midway rides will soon fill the air at the otherwise tranquil Saratoga County Fairgrounds in Ballston Spa.

The 166th edition of the summer milestone opens Tuesday, July 17, for a six-day extravaganza closing Sunday, July 22.

That means six days of admiring rabbits whose fur rivals cashmere, seeing owners dress up like their llamas to march around a ring, watching baby chicks hatch, learning how to shoot a balloon with a bow and arrow, brushing up on your ecology know-how, and posing for a photo next to a heifer large enough to squash you with one hoof. There will be draft and saddle horse shows, honey and maple sugar production, fine arts, home arts, culinary arts, and just about every other kind of art.

You can ooh and aah over prize-winning produce, cheer kids on in a spelling bee, dodge the dust during a tractor pull, and take home a tiny evergreen sapling to plant in your back yard.

Departments and shows include cattle, draft and saddle horses, goats, poultry, bees and honey, farm produce, flowers, culinary, antiques, sheep, fair pageants, education, swine, grange, and conservation.

Hungry? The fair is a gastronomic free-for-all, offering everything from freshly pulled taffy to grilled sausage and peppers to the newest phenomenon, fried Oreos and Snickers bars.

At the dairy tent, you can sip a soothing cup of cold milk for less than a dollar.

entertainment in the historic grandstand includes a demolition derby, off-field tractor pulls, an antique tractor stone boat pull, a 4x4 truck pull, a monster truck show and the Double M Rodeo from Malta. The beer garden will rock each night with great local bands. The first-ever battle of the bands will also be held this year.

If you haven't yet experienced the thrill of cheering on a bunch of sweaty swines chasing vanilla crème cookies, don't miss Rosaire's Royal Racing Pigs, located on a small grassy track near the grandstand. It's worth the assault on the ears to watch Brian Ruth carve sculptures out of hunks of blemished hardwood. If you're lucky, you might be able to see a farmer cook a turkey inside a (clean) aluminum trashcan.

This year's premiere attractions include Monster Truck rides for a nominal fee, new hypnotist Tom Bresadola, and the "Live Stingray Encounter."

"Each year we work very hard to showcase the best of Saratoga County agriculture, and this year is no exception," said Dick Rowland, general manager, who will officially move onto the fairgrounds and camp out for the week starting the night before opening day. "All we need is good weather, not too much heat or rain, and what else could we need? Nothing could be better than fair week."

Amusements of America has been the midway provider for many years at the fair, bringing a popular kiddie area with bumper boats, spinning strawberries and hugely inflated slides. There's a petting zoo, camel and pony rides, and the enticing carnival games where you can toss baseballs into baskets to win teddy bears. In the glitzy, flashy, loud loop of the midway, you can be spun, twisted, dangled upside down, scared silly, or lost in a maze of mirrors. All rides require tickets, but hand stamps are available daily for $20 and are accepted from noon to midnight in lieu of tickets for rides.

"It's just the place to go to have a good time," said Village of Ballston Spa Mayor John Romano. "I can already smell the fried dough. That's when I really know it's summer, when the fair arrives."

The Saratoga County Fair runs Tuesday, July 17, through Sunday, July 22, at the Saratoga County Fairground, 162 Prospect St., Ballston Spa.

The fair is open 9 a.m. to midnight daily; the midway is open from noon to midnight daily. Beer is served in the beer garden from noon to midnight, and the concessions are open from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.

This year's season ticket is $25 per adult (13 and older). Parking in all the fair-managed lots is free. General admission is $7 on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday; admission is $10 on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Children 6 to 12 years old are $3 every day; children under 6 are free. Wednesday is Senior Citizens Day with admission for seniors over 65 $4 until 5 p.m.

Grease at Park Playhouse: a new take on a classic favorite Cast members of "Grease" rehearse for the show that opens at Park Playhouse this week.

By ARCANGELA C. MELE
MeleA@Spotlightnews.com

The on-stage version of "Grease" will premiere at Park Playhouse in Albany this week, and fans of the 1978 movie musical will be given a taste of something familiar, yet unique.

"People will come and feel nostalgic watching something on stage, watching a live performance," said Owen Smith, the assistant producer. "But they'll have a different experience with it. It's a different energy with the live show."

"Grease" the movie has its fair share of memorable musical numbers, but "Grease" on stage has even more dancing and singing.

However, it was important to Smith, director Michael LoPorto, and other members of the creative staff that "Grease" on stage also had a strong story the audience could follow.

"You want 'Grease' to be more than just a big concert," said Smith.

Park Playhouse's "Grease" isn't all about the romance surrounding the characters that John Travolta and Olivia Newton John made famous, Danny and Sandy, but includes a more in-depth portrayal of characters the movie left out.

"There's differences in who the characters are, and the names of the characters," explained Smith. "Each couple, Doodie and Frenchy, Sonny and Marty, have their own story."

The story is not all that's different about "Grease" at Park Playhouse, but also the kind of crowd it's expected to attract.

Though many of the outdoor theatre's previous shows, like "My Fair Lady" or "Beauty and the Beast," were geared toward a more general audience, Smith and LoPorto think "Grease" will attract the kids and teenagers, since the story deals with high-school relationships and the loss of innocence. When casting the show, LoPorto made sure the actors looked the same age as the characters, unlike many other popular movies and T.V. shows that feature actors much older than the characters are supposed to be.

Smith said he was looking for a certain type of actor.

"Young people with really good energy, so that they understand what the characters are

"Grease" rehearsed six days a week for about four weeks; from 6 to 11pm. on the weekdays, and noon to 10 p.m. on the week-ends.

After the July 10 opening, the cast will perform six days a week, through Aug. 19.

Despite the rigorous performance and rehearsal schedule, Smith said the actors are expected to make each show as big and energetic as the night before.

"We have a creative staff that inspire the cast and make them want to bring that kind of energy every night," he said. "A lot of people think of acting as just this fun thing, but it's a job, and they're paid to do it."

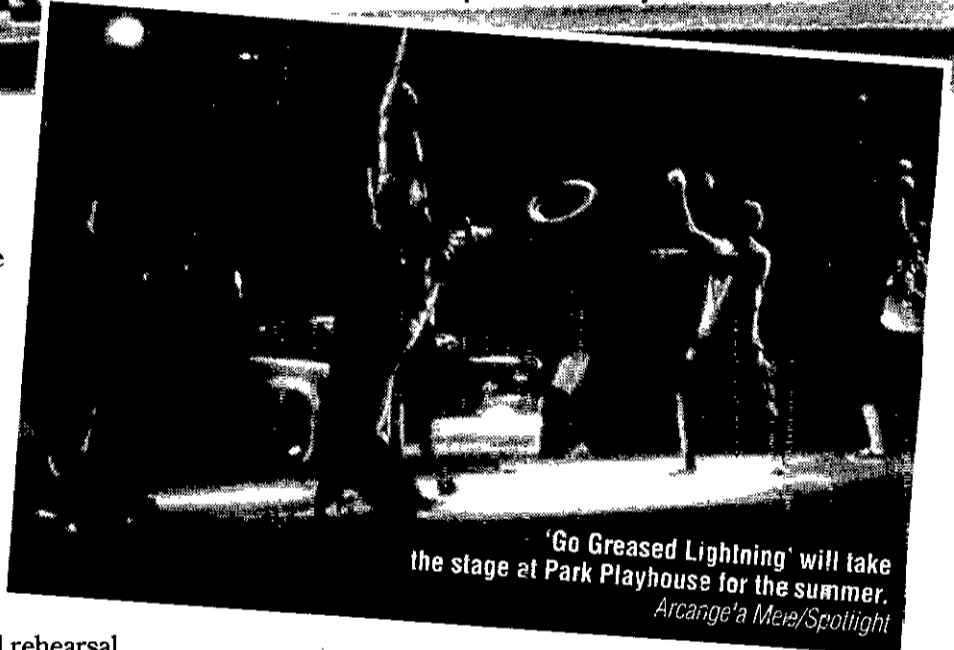

Since the stage production of "Grease" is a high-energy rock show with an emphasis on choreography, Megan McGarvey, who plays Sandy, said her role is challenging.

"The dancing and singing together was tough, you have to really keep your stamina up," she said.

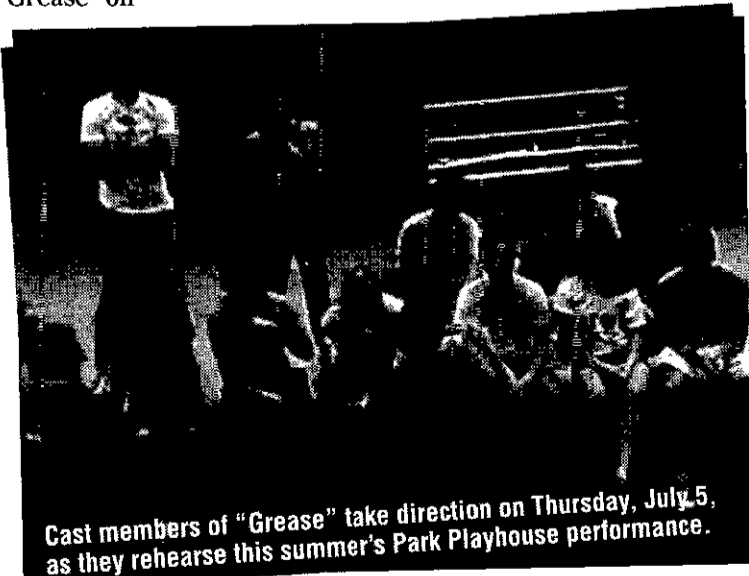

Nick Cocchetto, who plays

Danny, considers himself "an actor that moves well."

Like his co-star, Cocchetto also thought the choreography was a bit challenging, but is very con-going through," he said.

When La Porto says he wants energy from his performers, he means it. The actors cast in fident of the finished product.

"It's quality, the dancing is amazing. It's the best choreography I've ever had."

"Knock on wood this has been a really good cast," LoPorto said. "Everyone has been working way harder than expected," he said.

With all the hard work and energy that has gone into "Grease," it's one summer crowds won't want to miss.

"It's fun, it's energetic, it's big, it's loud!" Smith said. Grease, directed by Michael LoPorto, musically directed by Adam Jones, and choreographed by Mitchell A. Fiske, runs Tuesday through Sunday at 8 p.m. from July 10 to Aug. 19 at Park Playhouse in Albany's Washington Park. First-come, first-served seating is free. There is reserved seating, which costs $10 to $12. For information, visit www.parkplayhouse.com.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING At a meeting of the Town Board of the Town of Bethlehem, held at the Town Hall, Bethlehem, New York, on June 27, 2007, a Resolution/Order was adopted by the Town Board accepting a petition, in due form and containing the required signatures, requesting the extension of Water District No. 1 in the Town. The boundaries of the proposed Extension are shown on a map of the Vista Technology Campus, Water Distribution Plan, created by Saratoga Associates, dated June 2007, and described in Schedule A, annexed hereto. The Extension of the District will allow the construction of new water mains, valves, hydrants and their connection to existing Town water mains to service properties within the Extension. The costs of said improvements would be borne by local assessment upon the several lots and parcels of land which the Town Board shall determine and specify to be especially benefited by the improvements, said assessment to be collected from the several lot and parcels of land so deemed benefited, so much upon and from each as shall be in just proportion to the amount of benefit which the improvement shall confer upon the same. The maximum amount proposed to be expended is One Million Ninety-Four Thousand Dollars ($1,094,400). The estimated cost of hook-up fees is one thousand dollars ($1,000). The cost of the Extension to the typical property within the Extension is estimated to be Thirty-Five Thousand Dollars ($35,000) per year. A meeting of the Town Board will be held at the Bethlehem Town Hall, 445 Delaware Avenue, in the Town of Bethlehem, on July 25, 2007, at 6:30 p.m. to consider the petition and to hear all persons interested in the subject of the proposed Extension of Water District No. 1 and for any other action concerning the petition and the vote of the Town Board thereon. running. I scored, and I didn't know how to celebrate. It felt good."

Clinton also coaches men's soccer at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, a Division III program. During the tournament's trophy presentation, he named Johnson, who is from Niskayuna, the MVP of the championship game.

"World class finish," Clinton said of the Johnson goal. "The truth is, I told him to go near post, and he saw a better opportunity to knock it to the far post, so all the credit to him.

"We were the ultimate team," Clinton added. "We went a lot of places and played a lot of quality teams. We worked real hard to become a team that could keep the ball."

The Clifton Park 17s were not the only local team to win their division.

The Clifton Park Cobras of the U12 boys gold division, the Clifton Park Premier 14s of the U14 boys black division, the Clifton Park Attack of the U16 girls division, the Clifton Park 16s of the U16 boys black division and the Clifton Park Celtics of the U23 boys division all won championships.

The Rose & Kiernan Clifton Park International Soccer

Classic was founded by Clinton's father, Peter, as well as Karl Gerstenberger, Spike Walsh and Peter Sands.

More than 130 teams from the United States and Canada competed in this year's tournament, which included approximately 400 games on 22 fields.

Helmut Gerstenberger, 46, and Karl's son, was the tournament director this year. Gerstenberger is also the chairman of the Clifton Park Water Authority.

"It's certainly been great to see a lot of the kids like my sons get involved in it and participate," Helmut Gerstenberger said. "It's really pretty neat."

(Pittsburgh) — all play for small-to medium-market teams.

• So much for the theory that big-market teams hog all the talent, part 2: Several of the top hitters this season play for those same small- to medium-market teams. Matt Holliday (Colorado), Dmitri Young (Washington), Miguel Cabrera (Florida), Brian Roberts (Baltimore) and Victor Martinez (Cleveland) are among the top 20 hitters in the majors. You wouldn't know this unless you lived in one of those cities because the major media outlets are focused on A-Rod, Bonds and Magglio Ordonez right now.

• By the time September rolls around, we'll have forgotten all about Bonds' home run record and the struggles in the Bronx and Chicago because we'll be fascinated by playoff races in the National League. The East will particularly hold our attention until the Mets clinch the division title in the third week of September. Then, we can turn our eyes toward the West, where the three-team race between Los Angeles, San Diego and Arizona will yield two playoff teams.

• Boston, Anaheim and Detroit will win their divisions, and Cleveland will be the American League wild card team. Despite this, Red Sox fans will still fret about their team's chances of making the playoffs until Boston clinches the East — on Sept. 1.

Five members of the Delmar Track and Field Club qualified for the Junior Olympics after strong performances at the Region 1 meet June 30 on Long Island.

Grace Smith of Slingerlands led the way with a victory in the bantam girls division high jump. Smith cleared 3 feet, 5.75 inches to earn a berth in nationals. Teammate Ella Levasalmi finished third by clearing 2 feet, 9.75 inches and also clinched a national berth.

Smith also joined Shea Coleman-Foley, Julia Nugent and Monica Vink on the Delmar Track and Field Club's bantam girls 1,600-meter relay team that placed second with a time of 5:57.5.

This is the first year of the Delmar Track and Field Club, which is coached by Chad Davey. Ten members of the team competed at the Region 1 meet.

The Junior Olympic meet takes place July 24-29 in California.

OT goals lifts Clifton Park past Alleycats

By J. JUDE HAZARD

Jake Johnson has a flair for the dramatic.

Johnson, 16, scored both goals for the Clifton Park Under-17 Premier team in a 2-1 overtime win against the Alleycat 17s in the finals of the boys under-17/19 gold division at the 31st annual Rose & Kiernan Clifton Park International Soccer Classic Sunday at Clifton Common.

With just 30 seconds left in the game, the Alleycat 17s tied the score 1-1. Prior to that goal, the Alleycat 17s had been held scoreless in the team's three previous games against the Clifton Park 17s.

"First, I had some choice words for them for blowing the opportunity to win in regulation," said Clifton Park coach Adam Clinton. "Then we all settled down, and I said, 'Look, we've played those guys for 370 minutes. They finally got a goal — they were bound to score sooner or later. Now, let's get our goal.' And we did."

Johnson's goal came on a free kick just over two minutes into the first overtime. About 20 yards from the goal, he bent a low shot around the far post.

"They set up the wall, and I could tell that the goalie couldn't really see me. So, I just looked for the far post, and I got it up," Johnson said. "I just started

What we know at baseball's midway point

We're halfway through the Major League Baseball season, and this is what we know (or at least, what we think we know):

- Barry Bonds will break Hank Aaron's home run record in the next month. It will most likely come in San Francisco because that's the only city where Bonds' milestone home run will be cheered instead of jeered. But Bonds may want to watch his back because ...

From the Sports Desk

- Alex Rodriguez will likely break Bonds' record in the next decade. A-Rod likely won't be a Yankee when that happens because there's no way that relationship will last another decade, but he can hit home runs in any uniform. It may take less time for him to reach Bonds' mark in a Chicago Cubs uniform, though — as long as the wind blows out of Wrigley Field on a regular basis.

- The New York Yankees' 12-year run of making the playoffs will end this season. Four games below .500 as of Monday, 11 games behind first-place Boston, no hitting and no bullpen equals no hope. Yet, the New York City media will follow the Yankees more closely than the Mets, who will make the playoffs.

- The Chicago Cubs are better off without catcher Michael Barrett. Could Barrett have helped the Cubs win eight of their last 10 games to move within seven games of first-place Milwaukee? Not as long as he was fighting with half of his teammates. I'm not saying Barrett was the only reason for the Cubs' slow start, but he certainly wasn't helping the situation.

- No matter how talented the team is, everyone goes through a slump. Some slumps (the Yankees, both Chicago teams, Colorado's recent eight-game losing streak) are just costlier than other slumps (the New York Mets' 3-13 start in June, Milwaukee's May struggles).

- So much for the theory that big-market teams hog all the talent, part 1: Many of the best pitchers play for teams that most of America rarely sees. Jake Peavy (San Diego), Ben Sheets (Milwaukee), Dan Haren (Oakland), Johan Santana (Minnesota), Jeremy Guthrie (Baltimore) and Ian Snell
