Celebrating community

It's been 45 years since Jim Michaels' idea of a planned community, known as Colonial Acres in Glenmont, first formed. On Saturday, Oct. 20, current and former residents of the neighborhood will get together and celebrate those many cherished years.

They boost name recognition, but many candidates feel signs are a necessary evil in any campaign

Campaign signs are a necessary part of any election regardless of their unsightliness at times and their ability to clutter a neighborhood and cause unnecessary pollution and debris. Plus, they seem to beg for vandalism during Halloween.

"It seems like overkill, but any politician that says they won't (use signs) is a losing politician," Schenectady County Legislator Joseph Suhrada, R-Rotterdam, said. "You are forced to compete. It's like capitalism."

The point of campaign signs is to let voters know who is running, and, in essence, sell the candidate to the people — much as McDonald's uses advertising to sell hamburgers.

Getting the word out about a candidate's run for any elected position is an important part of any successful campaign.

"You are selling yourself to the voters. People like to think that isn't true, but the vast majority of the voters need to have name recognition," Suhrada said.

Campaign signs are also a relatively cheap way, compared to other types of marketing tools, to get the message out to the voters. Chairman of Clifton Park's Democratic Committee Todd Kerner said 500 campaign signs may cost $1,000, while a direct mail piece that goes out to each of the 25,000 residents in Clifton Park would cost more than $25,000.

The relatively low cost of campaign signs make them a good

Verdict brings relief but little healing to Carey family

By JIM CUOZZO

A difficult chapter in the life of Michael and Lisa Carey will come to a close on Dec. 14 when 36-year-old Edwin Tirado will be sentenced for manslaughter in the death of the Careys' 13-year-old autistic son, Jonathan.

It took five hours for an Albany County jury to reach the verdict against Tirado, one of two former O.D. Heck Developmental Center employees, who, on the afternoon of Feb. 15, left Jonathan unconscious in a van after trying to restrain the child using a "straightjacket" method and then sitting on the boy before continuing to run personal errands with co-worker Nadeem Mall.

Proposed budget to cover wage increases

Town schedules public hearing on $37.6 M plan

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

A public hearing on the tentative 2008 Bethlehem budget is scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 24, at 6:15 p.m. in town hall. The $37.6 million plan increases taxes 2.5 percent while increasing expenditures by $1.38 million. The proposed budget also calls for across-the-board cost-of-living salary increases for all 249 town employees.

Salary and fringe benefits make up the largest portion of the town budget, representing 54 percent of the overall expenditures. The 2007 Bethlehem fiscal plan appropriated almost $19.6 million for salaries and benefits. The proposed 2008 town budget calls for about $20.46 million in salary and benefits, an increase of $869,000.

Town Comptroller Judith Kehoe said that although cost-of-living adjustment increases amount to 3 percent across-the-board, fringe benefits increase that figure to 4.4 percent. Contract negotiations are currently taking place with the employees of Bethlehem's Police Department and telecommunications department. Although 3 percent has been budgeted, the salary increase for the police and 9-1-1 employees could be larger.

"It would have been an unprecedented occurrence not to give employees cost-of-living adjustments," said town board member Kyle Kotary, who believes the budget should not be balanced on the backs of employees.

"They too are residents with families, and their costs are going up as well," Kotary added.

An $84,000 increase for software and technology upgrades are in store for the recreation department. The software will allow town residents to register for recreation programs online.

"I am focused on ways to automate to increase service and reduce costs," said Supervisor Jack Cunningham, who is in charge of his first budget as town supervisor.

There were other department requests that were turned down by the board, including one for a full-time person in the town's

Faulty refrigerator probable cause of fire

A refrigerator was the cause of a structure fire in Selkirk on Saturday, Oct. 6.

Bethlehem police and the Selkirk Fire Department were called to a home on 19 Hackett St. after a call from the homeowner, Alfred E. Fargione Jr.

Fargione told 911 authorities that he smelled smoke in the kitchen just prior to the call at 2 a.m. and discovered flames behind the refrigerator.

Reports indicate that Fargione, his wife and three sons all left the home. There were no injuries but the home did sustain extensive damage.

When fire officials arrived they noticed the kitchen was engulfed in flames.

The fire is still under investigation but officials believe the cause of the fire was due to the refrigerator.

The family's three cats were also inside the home at the time of the blaze. Two of the three cats were located unharmed.

IN BRIEF

Volunteers needed for 2008 Heart Ball

The American Heart Association is looking for volunteers to help with the 2008 Capital Region Heart Ball.

The Heart Ball will take place Saturday, March 8, at the Hall of Springs in Saratoga Springs.

The 2007 version drew about 500 physicians, researchers and business people, and they raised approximately $285,000 to fight heart disease and stroke. The Heart Ball is a black-tie-optional affair, and includes dinner, dancing, and live and silent auctions.

There are three primary areas the American Heart Association needs volunteer help with:

- Auction committee members to help secure items for the silent and live auction;
- Corporate sponsor recruitment
- Members for the executive leadership team.

If you are interested in volunteering, please contact Darlene Robbiano at 869-4053 or e-mail Darlene.Robbiano@heart.org.

ELECTION '07: Town of Bethlehem Clerk

Clerk says serving people is paramount

Newkirk touts time-saving technology as example of customer convenience

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Kathleen Newkirk has been an employee with the town of Bethlehem for 30 years, starting first in the board of appeals office as a part-time clerk and working her way up to deputy town clerk in 1985 and then town clerk in 1992. Newkirk, who is running for re-election as the Republican and Conservative candidate for a fifth term in office, said she believes the role of town clerk is to "serve the people."

"Our office is unique, and one has to be versed in federal, state and local law changes," said Newkirk.

Newkirk is a member of several local and statewide organizations, including the state Association of Town Clerks, the International Institute of Municipal Clerks and the Albany-Schenectady Chapter of Town Clerks, having served at various times as president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer for each.

"I have always been proud and honored to serve as town clerk and I would like to continue if the people want me there," said Newkirk, who has seen a lot of change and growth in Bethlehem since she took over the position.

"We are a large suburban town, and the clerk's office is the hub of town government," said Newkirk, who points to the vast records management work the office is in charge of.

"We are the keeper of all town records," said Newkirk, who said the office is now more open and transparent because of technology upgrades. Town board minutes are now posted on the Internet, along with several forms for taxpayer convenience.

Fourteen local government records management grants, totaling $265,000, have been obtained since Newkirk took over as clerk. In 2005, Newkirk attained the status of Master Municipal Clerk from the International Institute of Municipal Clerks.

Customer service is another important aspect of the clerk's position, and Newkirk said she does provide service outside the regular established office hours of town clerk by appointment.

The regular office hours are Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Keeping the minutes and records of town board meetings is another duty of the clerk's office. There are currently two deputy clerks who work in the office and also interact with other town departments.

"We have been able to maintain the same staff due to computerization of the office," said Newkirk.

Newkirk said she enjoys her job and would like to continue working as town clerk.

"I like my job, I love the people, and I provide services that are appreciated," Newkirk said.

Challenger wants more user-friendly office

Foley believes accessibility is key to customer service

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Town clerk challenger Denis Foley said he can offer a more customer friendly office if elected to the position in November.

Foley, the Democratic and Independence candidate, is running against Republican and Conservative incumbent Kathy Newkirk. Foley is a 25-year veteran of Albany County Stop DWI program, serving as its administrator. His civic and public sector background includes serving as museum curator and adjunct professor, along with being a founding member of the Bethlehem Community Partnership. With other credits, including being a published author, Foley said it is time for him to offer his skills to the residents in Bethlehem as town clerk.

"I have a strong administrative background, and I believe the office of Bethlehem Town Clerk can be run better," said Foley.

Foley said the clerk's office should be more user-friendly, by establishing evening and weekend hours of operation and offering quicker access to public records for people who put in requests.

"I have asked for information and can only get it by filing a Freedom of Information request," said Foley. "The office has to be more customer friendly; it's the basic idea of what a government should be," he added.

Foley said archived records from the clerk's office are currently stored in the basement of town hall, and he feels they should be removed from that location. He points to documents stored in vaults that are not categorized and workers who sometimes can't find the keys to open the vaults.

"Our historical integrity is preserved through our documents," Foley said. "Is the basement justifiable for archives?"

Another area Foley would like to address if elected is the clerk's office itself, which he feels should be more welcoming to residents when they step inside.

"Traditionally it has been a very closed office, and I would like to totally open it up," said Foley.

As the county STOP-DWI administrator, Foley called upon senior volunteers and college interns to assist office staff in the day-to-day operations of the department. If elected town clerk, Foley said, he would offer that same guidance.

"I feel I can do a better job and respond quicker within 48 hours," Foley said.

Foley has been a resident of Bethlehem the past 17 years. His wife, Sandra, is a special education teacher and his daughter is a Bethlehem Central High School student. He realizes the race is an uphill fight, since Democrats have not served in the clerk's office for 100 years. But Foley points to the last election in Bethlehem, when 850 voters did not vote for that office.

"The substantial issue in this campaign is of style and substance," Foley said.

The town clerk's salary in the new year is proposed at $66,000.

Bethlehem hires officer for safety patrol

Veteran Troy officer to replace Jim Haker, who retired in July

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Gerald N. Young, a veteran police officer from the city of Troy is the newest member of the Bethlehem Police Department.

Young's unanimous appointment as a member of the town's traffic safety patrol was made by the Bethlehem Town Board at the Wednesday, Oct. 10, meeting.

"He comes highly recommended from the Troy police department," said Bethlehem police Chief Lou Corsi.

Young will receive the first-year officer's salary in Bethlehem of $46,074. He has already graduated from the police academy but will still need time to transition to his new role as a member of the town's road patrol.

"He will go through 10 weeks of transitional training," said Corsi.

Young was introduced to the community at the Wednesday meeting by Supervisor Jack Cunningham. Corsi said the town board has been very supportive of the needs of the police department by maintaining current staffing levels.

"They need to be recognized for maintaining the strength of the police department," Corsi said.

Young will replace Sgt. Jim Haker who retired in July. Young was an officer in the Troy police department for more than seven years. Prior to his duties in Troy, he was a member of the Hoosick Falls police force. Young

"He comes highly recommended from the Troy police department."

Police Chief Lou Corsi

said he knows many of the officers in the Bethlehem police department but not all of the public safety needs that Bethlehem residents expect.

"I have a lot of learning to do," Young said.

Young, who is married and has a daughter, is expected to be assigned to the road patrols by the end of the year. He is currently a resident of Poestenkill. There are 21 officers in the local police force assigned to road patrol.

In other town news, Department of Public Works Commissioner Josh Cansler updated the town board on the status of Bethlehem's current water supply system. The reason for the update is because some town residents have questioned if the town has an adequate water supply to accommodate the development expected from Vista Technology Park.

The Vly Creek reservoir in New Scotland is Bethlehem's main source for community water with a maximum of 3 million gallons daily that the town can use from that supply alone. Other sources for town water include two wells for groundwater, the Clapper Road water plant in South Bethlehem, and two water connections from the city of Albany. Cansler said the town has more than enough water to meet the needs of the residents and any new development that occurs in the future.

"We are pretty well off in the town of Bethlehem if you compare us with the rest of the United States," said Cansler.

Cansler believes if any one of the town's current water supplies run short, that additional water can be obtained from either Gunderland or Albany. The bigger concern for town officials and residents, according to Cansler, is the aging infrastructure of the current water lines.

"We do have some issues we are going to look at in the next year," he said.

College suitemates help make memories

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
news@spotlightnews.com

Going to my college reunion made me feel young and old at the same time. Standing inside Smith Hall, the dorm I lived in for three years, in the same room of the same suite, a rush of memories came flooding back. I could picture myself on my very first evening of college, sitting in the floor lounge talking to my new friend, Maria. And, of course, I remembered how, when I turned 19, my friends surprised me by hiding in the bathroom and shouting "Happy Birthday!" when I opened the door.

During my reunion weekend at Binghamton University, I wanted to see the inside of the suite again, but when we toured the dorm nearly all suite doors were shut and the window blinds drawn. Most of the students were still asleep. After all, it was only 1:30 in the afternoon!

By 4 p.m. I figured someone would be awake. Sure enough, when I returned to the dorm, the door to my former suite was open. Inside, four attractive co-eds were hanging out in the common area.

"Hi. I'm here for the alumni reunion weekend, and I used to live in this suite," I announced when they spotted me in the hallway. They invited me in for a look.

One of the girls asked me what year I graduated. I replied, "1987," and another of the girls felt the need to tell me that was the year she was born.

Yeah, whatever, I thought. That actually didn't make me feel old. I know that through their eyes I'm an old person, but in my mind, I don't feel that far removed from 20. In my knees and my neck, maybe, but not my mind.

"Was there a bar on campus when you were here?" one of the girls asked. I smiled and told them about the campus pub, with the wooden booths that people carved their names into.

I didn't have the opportunity to frequent the pub because I went to college during a time when the drinking age kept getting raised, from 18 to 19 to 21. I did visit the pub on my 19th birthday, when I was the legal drinking age for a short period of time. I might have had fewer drinks if I'd known my friends were planning to surprise me when I made a pit stop upon returning to the dorm.

At some point, probably not long after I graduated, the campus pub was turned into a coffee shop. They gave out free cookies last year when my friend Judy went to reunion weekend. I decided not to check the place out, preferring instead to maintain my memory of what it looked like long ago.

Even if the drinking age had not changed, I would have been more likely to frequent a coffee shop than a pub. Actually, I didn't even drink coffee, so unless they served hot chocolate, I still wouldn't have been a regular customer.

I spent a lot of time in the library. And I mean a lot. Even on the weekends.

Now, it wasn't all work and no play. I have pictures of a towel party, cousin to the toga party. And there were lots of celebrations in the dorm and dances in the dining halls. And in my freshman year the B-52s (remember the song "Rock Lobster"?) performed on campus.

But I did a lot more studying than partying. And I'm not just saying that because my mom reads this column. From the time I started kindergarten I was one of those bookworm girls. Still am. My parents, who claimed to have been average or below average students, still haven't figured out where my drive comes from.

The first evening of the reunion weekend, my former suitemate Lori arrived with her 3-year-old daughter and 3-month-old son. The four of us had dinner at Wendy's, because the wait at Applebee's was too long. I ordered a grilled chicken sandwich and a baked potato, both of which were quite satisfying. When Lori took her daughter to the restroom, I phoned home.

"I'm eating dinner at Wendy's," I told my husband. "I hear a baby crying," he said. "Yeah, Lori's daughter had to go potty, so I'm watching the infant," I told Jeff. Then to the baby I cooed, "It's OK, don't cry, it's OK."

Have I become a party girl or what?

As it turned out, reunion weekend was even tamer than my college days, what with my two friends bringing their young children. They had connecting rooms in the hotel so the kiddies could have extra space to run. I had my own room across the hall. I knew in advance we wouldn't be going out on the town.

Not to worry. I came prepared. Before I left home I picked up a 12-pack. It was soda. Regular soda, not that sugar-free diet stuff. I went for the real deal: sugar and caffeine.

Drinks of any sort weren't really necessary on this trip. There was something so comfortable and familiar about hanging out with these people, some of whom I hadn't seen in over 15 years. College lasted only four years (for most of us), and we've spent considerably more time apart than together. And yet, the experiences we shared as students have been enough to forge a lasting bond.

Although we were together for a relatively short time, it was during a pivotal period in our lives. We were newly independent, living away from home for the first time.

On Saturday morning, Lori received a call from our friend John. He had just driven into town and was on campus. We arranged to meet him at the University Union. "You'll recognize us because we all look exactly the same," I told him. My girlfriends laughed.

When I finally arrived at the campus, I felt young and exhilarated. All I could remember was how much I loved being a student at Binghamton. I couldn't wait to go back and see the dorm.

My dorm was located in Hinman College, which was not actually a college, but rather the name given to the residential community (read: cluster of five dorms and a dining hall) where I lived. My friend Chris noted that I was prominently featured in a "History of Hinman" book that was compiled for the reunion. My claim to fame: My dedication to the fight against apathy during my tenure as editor of the "The Hinman Halitosis," a newspaper produced on a mimeograph machine.

On Sunday, just before noon, I went to visit my niece at the off-campus house she shares with eight other girls. "I'm Leslie's aunt," I said to the young lady who opened the front door before I even rang the bell. She ran upstairs to rouse my niece from slumber.

I came for the reunion celebration, I explained to the girls. I graduated in 1987, I told them. "That's when I was born!" I heard for the second time that weekend.

No, I didn't go partying downtown, I told them. I did spend time on campus, but the real reason I came to the reunion was to see my friends.

The girls seemed charmed by this concept, and announced that they too would stay friends and meet back in Binghamton in 20 years. I smiled at the thought, knowing that those decades are going to pass more quickly than they can imagine.

Build your house carefully

There's a troublesome plank in some campaigns in our area right now, one that touts the use of credit cards to pay property taxes.

There's no disputing the ease of it, for towns and residents, but we're not sure that the municipalities established to better the lives of citizens should be enabling credit card dependency.

A May 2007 statistic from the Federal Reserve shows the average interest rate across all existing credit card accounts was 13.46 percent. Visa and MasterCard reported that in 2006, there were 984 million bank-issued Visa and MasterCard credit and debit accounts in the U.S. MSN Money reports that in households that carry credit card debt, the median balance is $2,200.

While that may not seem like a number to gasp at, think about it in a different way: What if somebody handed you a check for $2,200 right now?

The ultimate financial responsibility is with the individual, of course, but we'd rather see government helping us curb the credit card habit rather than promoting it.

While most people use credit cards wisely, it can be a slippery slope. Taxes can't be put off, and we don't want to be in the position of still paying last year's taxes when this year's bill comes due. A home is the most significant investment most of us make, and it quickly moves from being a financial purchase to an emotional attachment. Bigger can often seem better, and many people purchase optimistically — stretching finances now in anticipation of higher earnings to come.

But is this wise? Assessments go up; schools need to make improvements; and both of these things usually result in higher property taxes.

Optimism, then, should be balanced with caution. Most of us recall a parent or grandparent who saved up enough cash to make big purchases. Remember layaway, when you chose school clothes in July, made payments on them through the summer and picked them up before school started? Delayed gratification is perhaps a quality we should be bringing back in our have-it-all-right-now world.

So rather than add to our credit card burden by paying taxes with pieces of plastic, think about putting something away so that taxes don't become more of a burden than they already are.

Make sure to build your home on solid ground.

The lost art of independent play

By PETER SCOTTO
news@spotlightnews.com

The writer is the president of Advanced Therapy, PLLC, of Albany, a provider of occupational, physical and speech therapy pediatric services in Northeastern New York.

I had a wonderful childhood. Carroll Gardens, a tight-knit community in south Brooklyn, was a place where everyone knew each other. My dad was born in Italy and although my mother was born in America, she spent much of her childhood in Italy. The brownstone I called home included my mother, father, brother, two sisters, my grandmother, two aunts and uncles, and several cousins. It was not, by any means, a privileged childhood. Finances were tight when I was born. When I was 7, my father died and our finances became even tighter.

Still, my childhood was wonderful. My family was very loving and always willing to give. My mother gave everything she could with the little she had. As a first-generation Italian-American, the idea of family includes the immediate as well as extended family.

Some of my best memories of childhood were our "vacations." As a child, my vacations were the occasional Saturdays in the summer when we spent the day at Manhattan Beach. Dad worked long days as a longshoreman, so the weekend was the only opportunity for relaxation. We would spend the day at the beach. Mom would prepare food and cook on the grills that were provided. Dad would speak to us in broken English, and when he got stuck he would look to my mother to supply the words he lacked. My best memories were crabbing with my father at the beach. It was fun to catch crabs that would become part of our meal. At night we would go to Coney Island and enjoy the rides. I later realized that this time with my family was as good as a trip to Disney World and of course, closer to home. Simple pleasures made life good.

Point of View

The neighborhood I grew up in was an entity unto itself. At block parties everyone would hang out together. We would have pickup games of stick ball and punch ball. The ball field was the streets of Carroll Gardens. If you wanted to play, mothers didn't call up one another to arrange play dates. Instead you went outside, walked up and down the street and organized your game, or just screamed out the window to call friends together.

I found out later from my wife, a lifelong Capital District resident, that while her childhood play consisted of activities that differed from mine, they similarly involved spending time with her friends, independent of adults. The opportunity to independently organize and socialize with friends played an important role in my childhood and provided the foundation for success as an adult.

Obviously my childhood occurred in a different time. Today safety concerns impact children's play. But still, my wife and I try to bring a little of the way we were raised into our children's lives in order to foster a growing independence and allow them to build their social skills.

It is important to remember there is a social aspect to organizing your own recreation. This is as true for children as it is for adults. Today, it seems, as parents, we have become programmed to set up play dates and social times. I hear from friends and neighbors, "This is terrible, we have to plan everything." And it is true: Parents plan everything from birthday parties to get-togethers at the town park pool, to organized sports.

In my judgment, there are two problems with parents programming child play. It is exhausting for the parents and it doesn't provide the children with the opportunity to practice decision-making and problem-solving skills. It seems that if we, as parents, don't schedule activities for our children, they don't seek it out themselves. Don't misunderstand me; I am a very big fan of organized sports. But if you look around, children rarely play a sport unless there is an organized scheduled game with adult supervision. There are no pickup games anymore, which were the staple of my childhood.

It's a hard habit for an adult to break. In our home, we've been trying to approach child's play a little differently. When my children say, "Dad, let's play ball," I tell them, "OK, I'll play with you. Go round up a few friends and let's go out and have a game." I tell them this because I realize that when my children socialize with me, they are not building skills that involve interacting with children their age. In order to learn these skills, children need to organize, make decisions and solve problems independent of adults. This way they practice social skills, foster friendships and independently solve problems that facilitate independence. These are the skills that will help them to become effective adults in the real world.

Independent play was the advantage that people of my generation had. My most useful social skills were developed interacting with friends, playing stickball on my block in Carroll Gardens. Today we have to watch our children more carefully, and each parent has to make choices depending upon their environment, child's personality, and personal comfort level.

Still, we can allow children to make the phone calls themselves, have other children over in our own backyards, or define an acceptable area for them to ride bikes with friends. On any given day there may be between five and 10 children who are not related to me in my backyard. Of course it can get pretty noisy back there, but the kids are safe and they are interacting on their own terms, and it is social contact that they initiated.

It makes for a wonderful childhood.

Plea bargain was a disservice

Editor, The Spotlight:

Neighbors and friends of the Carey family, all of us really, breathed a collective sigh of relief last week after the first and most painful part of the case involving the tragic death of their son came to an end.

This case, which should never have had less than two defendants, proceeded with only one, that being Edwin Tirado. His co-worker and former co-defendant Nadeem Mall was offered and accepted a plea deal in exchange for his testimony against Tirado. Mall has begun serving a six-month sentence as a result of that plea bargain and guilty plea to criminally negligent homicide. Tirado faces up to 15 years in prison for the two crimes he was convicted of, the same criminally negligent homicide charge as well as the charge of manslaughter.

"We the people" have come to a silent agreement of sorts regarding the need for plea-bargaining to convict criminals in certain cases. It rarely even gets discussed anymore.

Mr. Tirado was offered a plea bargain of four to 12 years and rejected it. At the time he stated through his lawyer he had every intention of taking the stand in his own defense, and did.

Should Mr. Mall have been allowed to accept a six-month plea bargain?

More important, should he have ever been offered such an insultingly small amount of time in jail at all?

Why did the same District Attorney's office that did such a stellar, exemplary job in the Christopher Porco case need to offer a plea deal when they had signed statements from both Mr. Tirado and Mr. Mall?

These two men and their combined, repulsive negligence resulted in Jonathan Carey's death.

The notion that Mr. Mall could be that much less culpable for his role should be upsetting to all citizens of Albany County, not just us, the fellow Delmar residents and neighbors of the Carey family.

Water is important to supervisor

Editor, The Spotlight:

Why am I a volunteer in Jack Cunningham's campaign for Bethlehem Town Supervisor? It is because Jack knows and cares about wastewater treatment - not a high profile issue. It will not generate great public interest or a landslide of votes on Nov. 6. Proper handling of wastewater will, however, impact our properties, the cost of treatment and our environment - quality-of-life issues in Bethlehem. It is among the many complex and mundane problems that we must feel confident the town's chief executive understands and will address. Supervisor Cunningham's private sector experience, long-term residency in Bethlehem and service in the Albany County Legislature provides a solid resume contributing toward that confidence.

His commitment to the sensitive implementation of a comprehensive plan to guide our growth, his efforts to locate new business in our VISTA park, promote senior services and contain our tax burden are all efforts most all of us support. His openness to meet and talk personally with town residents and improve access to town information are all important measures of leadership as was his efforts to work with others in preserving the Audubon-certified sanctuary at Colonial Acres. But for me it was his knowledge and passion for wastewater treatment that gave me confidence that Jack Cunningham should remain our town supervisor.

Hennessey is responsive

Editor, The Spotlight:

If Mark Hennessey won't give you the shirt off his back, it's only because he's likely to go out and buy you a new shirt. Mark introduced himself to me several years ago when I was grappling with some community issues. Here I was, a total stranger, and he walked right up to me and said, "It looks like something's bothering you. Can I help you?"

My mouth nearly dropped open. A long-time resident, Mark introduced himself, heard me out, joined me at meetings, called me regularly and provided input and encouragement - all the while taking time away from his wife and children, and a demanding work schedule.

Mark gave a great many hours of personal time and advice, at which point I realized I was dealing not just with an unusual and talented young man, but a friend.

Mark is the fresh, young blood Bethlehem's Town Board needs. Bursting with innovative ideas and practical ways to make them happen, he is strongly supports the issues we must drive forward to protect our quality of life, from balancing our tax base through economic development to the town comprehensive plan.

Vote for Mark Hennessey on Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Team will keep town on track

Editor, The Spotlight:

November elections are always exciting for all of us who strive for better government. In recent years, Bethlehem has moved in very positive directions. Our supervisor, Jack Cunningham, has a blueprint and a forward-looking team that acknowledges the benefits of planning at all levels — economic development, infrastructure, implementation of the comprehensive plan, fiscal integrity, and services dedicated to the quality of life of all residents of Bethlehem.

Town board support for Jack's leadership is solid and will further be enhanced by our support for Joann Dawson and Mark Hennessey for town board seats. I suggest you consider the proven track record of Jack, Joann and Mark in government and in our community and support their efforts to continue to give us better town government. They act with the qualities we respect — openness, solid reasoning, forward-looking planning, honesty and efficiency and they foster collaboration and partnership. This formula has resulted in unprecedented success in our community.

Voting is a privilege and a responsibility. Voting for Jack Cunningham, Joann Dawson, and Mark Hennessey is also an honor and will reaffirm the directions our supervisors and town board have taken over the last four years.

There will never be too much "good government." Let's keep Bethlehem town hall on course by voting for this team! Thank you!

Thanks for supporting walk

Editor, The Spotlight:

We are very pleased to report that the Albany Capital District Walk for Pancreatic Cancer Research was a huge success. Twelve teams plus non-affiliated walkers participated. In all, more than 150 walkers of all ages joined together on Sunday morning, Sept. 23, at the Elm Avenue Town Park to raise $19,200 (and the number is still increasing) for the Lustgarten Foundation for Pancreatic Cancer Research.

We thank The Spotlight for its article, Metroland for its public service ad, Albany Broadcasting and Clear Channel Broadcasting for numerous radio public service announcements, Benita Zahn for inviting us on her "Slice of Life," and Ann Parrillo for inviting us on "Schenectady Today." We also thank Infamous Graphics for donating our fabulous banner. We most especially thank Mona Golub for funding our light breakfast for walkers, and Pete Szary, the manager of Price Chopper's Bethlehem store, for his help.

All the publicity and the work of an amazing planning committee resulted in a walk that exceeded all expectations for participation and funds raised.

We look forward to seeing many more walkers next year. If you would like more information about the Lustgarten Foundation or our walk, please go to www.pipertech.net.

Commitment makes Scheuermann qualified

Editor, The Spotlight:

This letter endorses the candidacy of Art Scheuermann for election to the Bethlehem Town Board. After reading my observations, I am confident you will join me in voting for Art Scheuermann.

I have been a resident of the town of Bethlehem for nearly 30 years and I have known Art for some time. I got to know Art well through his involvement and commitment to the kids of Bethlehem through the Bethlehem Soccer Club, of which he served as president for several years. Art also coached my son and instructed my daughter at the Soccer Academy. I have personally witnessed zeal, enjoyment, dedication and integrity Art displayed working with and for our children. These character traits will serve Art and the town of Bethlehem well when elected.

Finding leaders who truly represent their neighbors in any government office is, at best, an extremely difficult task. I strongly endorse Art Scheuermann's election to the Bethlehem Town Board because he consistently has demonstrated over the years his willingness to go that extra step to listen to all members of our community, as I observed this summer when he and Melody Burns walked in the neighborhoods of Bethlehem.

With your vote and support, Art Scheuermann will do what is right for all the people of our great town.

Firefighters' families deserve benefits

Editor, The Spotlight:

A much deserved "thank you" to U.S. Sen. Charles Schumer for bringing to the forefront the issue of withholding "Hometown Heroes" death benefits for several area firefighters who died in the line of duty. The widow of Elsmere's Fire Chief Kevin Shea is one of those who are fighting for those benefits. I knew Kevin and was saddened, as was everyone in our community, by his sudden passing. It is hard to understand why the United States Justice Department would take such a hard-line position in denying those benefits to the families of such fine individuals who gave their all.

I can only hope that by Sen. Schumer raising public and Congressional awareness of this issue that it will lead to granting the families of these heroes their just dues. I strongly suggest you join me in writing your senators and congressmen in support of providing this benefit to those deserving families. As President George W. Bush said in a speech recently at the Fallen Firefighters memorial, "It takes a special kind of person to be a firefighter. It begins with a different sense of direction. When an area becomes too dangerous for everybody else, you take it over. When others are looking for the exits, our firefighters are looking for the way in."

Along with the firefighters, I believe the same can be said of our EMTs and first responders. It takes a special individual to give of their time, their energy, their own money and sometimes, unfortunately, their lives, to provide such an essential service to the community. I believe every citizen owes these volunteers a big debt of gratitude. As a candidate for county Legislature in the 36th District, I have included in my platform my commitment to support legislation to give volunteer firefighters, EMTs and first responders, a break on their property taxes as a small tangible sign of appreciation for their very important work. To all you volunteers, my sincere thank you for your dedication to service and community.

Outgoing board member endorses supervisor

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am in my eighth and last year as a town board member in the town of Bethlehem. During my two terms I have had the privilege of working with three town supervisors. I served with Sheila Fuller in my first four years on the board and with Terri Egan for a period during my second term. Both Sheila and Terri were excellent supervisors and truly great public servants. The town of Bethlehem was very fortunate that they stepped forward to serve as they did.

I have also had the pleasure of working with our current supervisor, Jack Cunningham. In my opinion, Jack's service has been equally as commendable as his two predecessors. Jack is up for election this November and I will be voting for him.

Jack has eagerly accepted the challenges of the position of supervisor since his appointment by the town board earlier this year. In my view, the position of town supervisor requires an individual who understands financing and is committed to constantly reviewing the town budget to identify efficiencies and alternatives to keep the property tax rates at an affordable level. In addition, the position requires a leader who can work with people with differing views and perspectives and adopt the position that is in the overall best interest of town residents.

The job also requires an individual with strong management skills to keep all the departments moving forward providing the essential services to the town that they currently provide and at the same time, the supervisor needs the foresight to always be working on projects and issues that will benefit the town in the future. Jack Cunningham has all of these qualities and skills and I firmly believe that he is the best choice to represent our town as supervisor.

Planning board chairman endorses Cunningham

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am writing to all the citizens of the town of Bethlehem and asking for your support on Nov. 6 to continue Jack Cunningham as supervisor of the town of Bethlehem.

Mr. Cunningham has demonstrated each day since being appointed to the office that he has the skills and presence to manage the responsibilities of town supervisor with distinction. Jack is very sensitive to the various characteristics that are found in each of the hamlets that comprise the town of Bethlehem. He wishes to build on these unique strengths through the town's comprehensive plan and create a town that addresses the priority needs of our entire community for the near and extended future.

Examples of Jack's leadership can be found in the rapid response with contractors to repair the waste water management systems and plant in the southern section of the town; the expedited steps with the state Department of Transportation to ensure that the Vista Technology Park along Route 85 in Slingerlands maintained its planned development schedule; and the recent acquisition of the Colonial Acres golf course in Glenmont as a new addition to the town park system for the long-term pleasure of our younger and older citizens.

Supervisor Jack Cunningham is totally committed to ensure that the town of Bethlehem is a great place for all its citizens to live, to safely raise our families and to create and maintain businesses that address the needs of our community.

Cunningham will be good for town

Editor, The Spotlight:

On Election Day, the residents of Bethlehem will make a choice for the position of town supervisor. I hope that they will join me in voting for the current supervisor, Jack Cunningham.

In particular, I have been extremely impressed with Mr. Cunningham's ability to involve the community in active decision-making through the citizen committees that he has established. His approach toward making government more accessible and resident-friendly should be applauded, and is one of the many reasons that I will support him in November.

As a relatively new homeowner in Bethlehem, I am proud of the job that Mr. Cunningham has done in ensuring that our town remains the crown jewel of the Capital District. Mr. Cunningham has shown that he is the best person for the job, and I look forward to watching him lead our town to bigger and better things in the years to come.

Hennessey will bring energy and new ideas

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am writing to ask everyone to support the candidacy of Mark Hennessey to the Bethlehem Town Board on Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Mark is endorsed by the town's Democratic, Independent and Conservative parties. I believe Mark will bring energy and new ideas to the town board, while continuing the good work being done by our current board. Mark has supported the town's comprehensive plan since its drafting and will work to implement it while on the board. Mark believes in "smart growth" for the town, which includes expanding our business tax base while maintaining our quality of life. He has extensive government experience, working as a legislative director for the state Assembly's chair of the committee on local government.

On the local level, he serves on our town's zoning board of appeals, has coached in the Bethlehem Soccer Club, and has been active in St. Thomas parish.

I urge everyone to visit www.markhennessey.com and to get to know Mark when he is out walking in your neighborhood. I think you'll agree that Mark will represent our interests well on the town board.

New Yorkers Take Little Steps and Save Big

offers residents tips to save energy and the environment

Albany, NY – For New Yorkers who want to join the fight against climate change, there's no better place to start than at home. That's because the energy used in homes often comes from the burning of fossil fuels at power plants, which contributes to smog, acid rain and global warming. So the less energy a home uses, the less air pollution that home generates.

The New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSERDA) is providing simple and cost-effective tips to help homeowners reduce their energy bill and help the environment at the same time.

"The average New York household really can make a positive impact on the environment simply by using energy wisely," said NYSERDA President and CEO Paul D. Tonko. "We sometimes think our individual actions don't make a big impact, but collectively, they do."

Here are three simple ways to save energy at home and help protect the environment:

1. Replace your five most used incandescent light bulbs to ENERGY STAR® qualified compact fluorescent light bulbs (CFLs) and save approximately $60 annually. CFLs use 75 % less energy and last ten times longer.
2. Use electronics that have earned the ENERGY STAR and use up to 60% less energy than other electronics. Set computers and laptops to the energy-saver mode. Plug all home electronics to a power strip and turn off the power strip when you leave to save even more!

3. Upgrade your decorative or holiday lighting with energy-efficient Light Emitting Diode (LED) holiday lighting strands. LED holiday lighting strands last up to 11 holiday seasons, rarely burn out, and will save you up to $100 per year on your energy bill!

NYSERDA uses innovation and technology to solve some of New York's most difficult energy and environmental problems in ways that improve the State's economy.

Visit
www.GetEnergySmart.org or call 1-877-NY-SMART
(1-877-697-6278) to learn more ways to save energy.

What if everybody did it?

Help New York save energy and reduce greenhouse gas emissions by taking the ENERGY STAR® Change a Light Pledge to purchase ENERGY STAR qualified lighting. Together, we can achieve big savings when we take little steps to save energy and help protect the environment.

"I PLEDGE TO DO MY PART TO SAVE ENERGY AND THE ENVIRONMENT BY BECOMING MORE ENERGY EFFICIENT IN MY HOME."

I PLEDGE TO...

- Replace my incandescent light bulbs with ENERGY STAR qualified compact fluorescent light bulbs
- Turn off the lights when I leave the room
- Replace my standard holiday lights with energy efficient LED holiday lighting
- Keep electronic products unplugged when not in use
- Purchase energy efficient ENERGY STAR qualified appliances

TAKE THE PLEDGE TODAY!

Log on to www.GetEnergySmart.org before October 23rd to take the ENERGY STAR Change a Light Pledge and learn about more ways to take little steps that add up to big savings on energy use and for the environment.

Little Steps. Big Savings.

Cunningham will be a leader Foley right choice

Editor, The Spotlight:

I write to encourage Bethlehem residents to support Jack Cunningham for Bethlehem supervisor, as well as Joann Dawson and Mark Hennessey for town board.

Jack's extensive involvement in our community is well-known. The fact that he gave up his position with Key Bank to serve the people of our town speaks volumes about Jack's commitment to Bethlehem.

Having had the opportunity to meet Jack and to hear about his vision for the future of Bethlehem, I wholeheartedly support his efforts to keep Bethlehem moving forward.

As I work full-time and try to be involved with my children's activities, I used to find it very difficult to keep up on matters relating to local government. The recent town Web site upgrade, along with the creation of the monthly "e-newsletter," have enabled me to stay "in the loop" on important local issues.

If his first few months in office are any indication of what lies ahead, Bethlehem will be very well served under Jack Cunningham's leadership.

As a regular Spotlight reader, I have to admit that I have been bewildered by the criticisms that have been leveled at our town board members and the proposed 2008-09 budget. The reality is that the proposed budget balances the need to keep spending in check with maintaining important services, including senior services. Criticizing is easy. Leading, which often requires making difficult decisions, is a challenge. I vote for leadership.

These unwarranted criticisms also demonstrate the other thing that Jack needs in order to successfully lead Bethlehem – a town board that understands and supports his vision. Joann Dawson and Mark Cunningham have shown that they share his vision – our vision – and will work with Jack to keep Bethlehem moving forward.

I look forward to supporting Jack Cunningham, Joann Dawson and Mark Hennessey this coming Election Day. I urge my neighbors to do the same.

Editor, The Spotlight:

It is with pleasure and confidence that I support Denis Foley for Bethlehem town clerk. I have known Denis and his family for more than 25 years. Denis has served in many community organizations. He is committed to our community. In addition, he has many years of experience in government administration.

Denis was a founding member of the Bethlehem Community Partnership, which dealt with youth-oriented issues.

He was an active participant in the Bethlehem Networks program with the Bethlehem Central School District. Denis was instrumental in bringing the paramedic program to Albany County.

His enthusiasm and experience will serve the town well. His pleasant disposition and administrative experience are ideal for the position of town clerk.

Where are the debates?

Editor, The Spotlight:

It is my understanding that in the past there have been debates where the candidates for various town offices debate one another with a question-and-answer session immediately following.

These debates have traditionally been open to the public.

I am wondering where and when this year's debates are being held, and if there are no debates scheduled, why not?

As a voting citizen in this town, I feel these debates are an important way to make the public aware of the current issues facing our town government and how the candidates for public office plan to address these issues.

Hennessey pleased with community's support

Editor, The Spotlight:

My name is Mark Hennessey and I am running for Bethlehem Town Board.

I am running because I love our town and I want to make sure it keeps moving in the right direction. I am a three-time soccer coach, zoning board of appeals member, and someone with more than a decade of state and local government service fighting for taxpayers. On my Web site, markhennessey.com, I have been posting updates of some things I have been doing around town since the campaign started. I have gotten a lot of good feedback from voters about keeping them informed of the campaign's progress. I will be on the Democratic, Independence and Conservative lines this Nov. 6.

I've been in touch with thousands of town residents over the last three months and asked for their vote on Nov. 6 – and I am thankful for their strong pledges of support. Everybody I have spoke to has said that they think our town's focus on preservation and holding the line on taxes – while providing enhanced senior services and top-notch family services – is some of what keeps our town a special place to live.

All of that is no accident. It is the result of an engaged community and town leadership that plans ahead, commits itself to progress and then works hard to get the job done. This commitment has led to the town comprehensive plan, which has helped limit new residential development; to the Vista Technology Park in Slingerlands which will help balance the tax base; and the preservation of Colonial Acres – an open space in Glenmont that is a gem of environmental stewardship gifted to the town by willing landowners and the Open Space Institute.

This commitment will lead to a new walking/biking trail, more sidewalks in pedestrian areas (like on Maple Ave) and further efforts to preserve and protect our town's unique character and quality of life.

Bethlehem is a special place – anyone who lives here knows that. Town Supervisor Cunningham, town board member Joann Dawson and our entire team, Patti Parsons, Denis Foley and Judge Dwyer, have all worked hard to make sure our community keeps moving forward on the progress it has already made. I am proud to stand beside them – and proud of the support shown by thousands of other across town including town board members Sam Messina and Dan Plummer, state Assemblyman Tim Gordon, state Sen. Neil Breslin and County Executive Mike Breslin.

I was talking to my son the other day and he asked me "Dad, why do we live in Bethlehem?" and I told him "Because it is the best place to live in the Capital District."

With your support, our team plans to keep it that way. So, thank you to all who have already pledged their support for me, Mark Hennessey, and the whole team. I can always be reached at 478-6710 or mark@markhennessey.com.

Book sale benefited Alzheimer's

Editor, The Spotlight:

I just wanted to thank the community for supporting RealtyUSA's Annual Book Sale to benefit the Alzheimer's Association. In addition to raising a record $1,706, many of the remaining books were collected and sent to our troops in the Middle East as well as the children's books being donated to local literacy programs.

Special thanks to Helen Hoole who coordinated the effort and to everyone in the office that unselfishly donated their time. Thanks also to Elsmere Elementary School for the use of their tables. Next year we will go for another record. Thanks again!

IN BRIEF

Book helps identify New York trees

The National Arbor Day Foundation has a resource available to help an average person identify trees in a simple, step-by-step process.

"What Tree Is That?" is a useful 72-page pocket guidebook that helps distinguish different characteristics of many species of trees in New York and the Eastern and Central regions of the United States. The book also includes dozens of detailed drawings which accurately illustrate the specific shapes and textures of different leaves, needles, acorns, berries, seed pods, cones, and other identifying features.

To obtain a tree identification guide, send your name and address and $3 for each book to What Tree Is That?, The National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Ave., Nebraska City, NE 68410.

The book can also be ordered online at www.arborday.org.

LAURIE TEN EYCK
General Manager
Indian Ladder Farms,
Altamont, NY

There's no doubt about it—it is pumpkin season. Those big orange globes are on everyone's mind. At Indian Ladder Farms people can pick their own pumpkins and with the recent cold snap they are in the fields loading up on pumpkins of all sizes. Many of these pumpkins will be carved for jack o'lanterns. Other's will be left whole to decorate porches with bales of hay and cornstalks. At Indian Ladder Farms we have many pumpkin options. Along with the traditional big, orange pumpkin we have ghostly white pumpkins called Lumina. These look great carved with a candle flickering inside. We also have a yellow and white striped pumpkin and large peach colored pumpkin. We have the green and white striped La Estrella, also known as the Caribbean Pumpkin, the flesh-toned Long Island Cheese Pumpkin and the deep-orange Cinderella Pumpkin. On the smaller side we have small, round, orange Kiddie Pumpkins, Jack Be Little pumpkins, which are small and ribbed, and Baby Boo, which are essentially white Jack Be Little's. And last but not least we have the cooking pumpkin, Sugar Pie.

All pumpkins are actually squash and members of the Cucurbita family which includes cucumbers, melons and most gourds. Squash originated in Central America. Ancient seeds have been found in Mexico dating back to 5500 BC. The word pumpkin derives from the ancient Greek word "pepon" which meant "sun-ripened melon." Pumpkins are incredibly nutritious. Dark orange pumpkins are an excellent source of beta carotene. In addition pumpkins are loaded with vitamins A, C, K and E. They are also contain rich minerals including magnesium, potassium and iron.

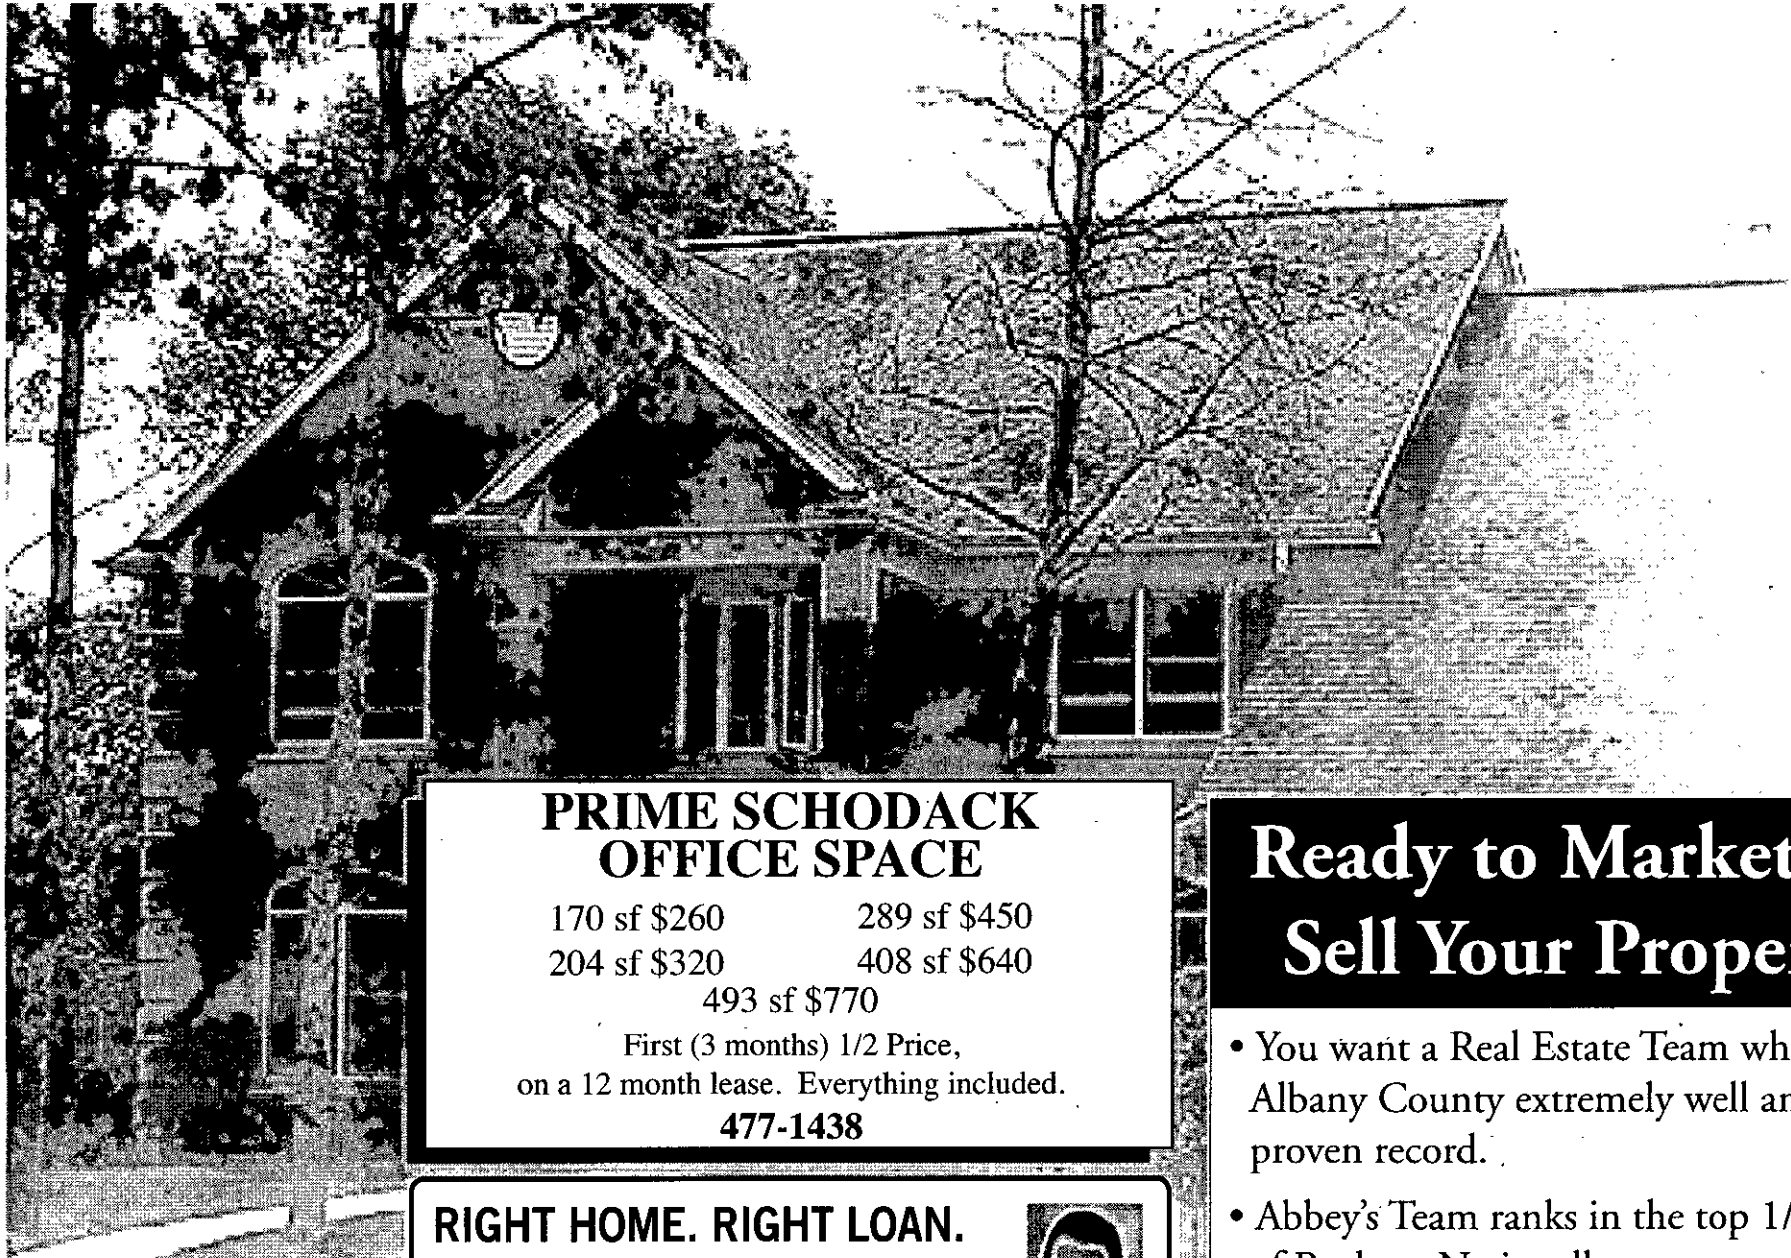

When cooking with fresh pumpkin avoid the large pumpkins bred selectively for decorative purposes. These tend to have light colored flesh, thick shells and little pulp. Head for the cooking pumpkins including varieties such as Sugar Pie and Dickinson. Many winter squash, such as the Cinderella Pumpkin, and the Long Island Cheese Pumpkin are also excellent for baking.

There are many options for preparing a fresh pumpkin for cooking. To bake the pumpkin cut it in half, scoop out the seeds and place it cut side down in half an inch of water or lightly oiled baking pan. Bake it at 400 degrees F until soft. Pumpkin can also be steamed, boiled or even cooked in the microwave. To roast pumpkin cut it in chunks, toss the chunks in olive oil and seasoning and roast it in the oven at 400 degrees F until it starts to turn brown. Put chunks of pumpkin in soups, risotto, ragout and sautés. It can also be pureed and used in for pumpkin pie, bread muffins and other baked goods as well as for pumpkin bisque and sauces. If you use fresh pumpkin puree for pie be sure to let it drain overnight so that the pie filling is not watery. To put something different on the table cut small cooking pumpkins in half and stuff them. Good stuffing seasonings include cardamom, cinnamon, allspice, nutmeg, ginger, honey, maple syrup, brown sugar, toasted nuts, apple, onion and parmesan cheese. Baked stuffed pumpkin, stuffed side up.

Come and celebrate the pumpkin at Indian Ladder Farm's Pumpkin Festival on October 20th and 21st. The pumpkin pick your own will be open. There will be jack o' lantern carving, scare crow making, Halloween crafts for kids, pony rides, hay rides and much more. See you there!

Power company to trim trees

National Grid will notify residents in affected areas

Tree trimming in the town of Bethlehem will begin on Monday, Oct. 22, and continue through mid-November according to National Grid. The company has contracted with Lewis Tree Services to complete the work.

Trimming is taking place to remove vegetation and limbs from nearby electrical equipment to enhance reliability of service to the area. Crews will remove limbs that are pressing on electric lines, chip branches and rake the work area to pick up smaller twigs and disperse sawdust. Larger pieces of wood that cannot be chipped will be cut into manageable lengths and left neatly near the tree base.

Residents who reside in the specific trimming areas will be notified by a telephone call from National Grid during the week of Oct. 15. The Feura Bush area of the town will be notified by telephone call from National Grid in mid-November and will have their trees trimmed in late November by Nelson Tree Services.

In 2007, the National Arbor Day Foundation named National Grid a "Tree Line USA" utility for exemplary vegetation management. The company has received this award each year for the past eight years. The distinction covers the company's service areas in New England and New York.

The Tree Line USA program, sponsored by The National Arbor

Day Foundation in cooperation with the National Association of State Foresters, recognizes utilities that offer a program of quality tree care, annual worker training in quality tree-care practices, and a tree-planting and public-education program.

For tree line concerns or questions, please notify National Grid Customer Service at 800-642-4272.

National Grid is an international energy delivery company. In the U.S., National Grid delivers electricity to approximately 3.3 million customers in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York and Rhode Island, and manages the electricity network on Long Island under an agreement with the Long Island Power Authority.

RCS residents sign off on capital project

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk District residents approved the proposed EXCEL capital project during voting on Tuesday, Oct. 9, but rejected a proposal to make upgrades to the district's transportation building.

The vote count for the $2.35 million proposition No. 1 – which provides funds for necessary repairs and energy efficiency upgrades to the district's four schools – was 451-to-396.

As a result of additional state aid through the EXCEL (Expanding Children's Education and Learning) program, the total combined local cost of this project will fluctuate between $1,577 to $6,409 after a first-year payment of $38,290. Those figures represent the cost of the proposition to the entire RCS district. The cost per $1,000 assessed property value would be less 1 cent for 14 of the years, and an average of 4 cents per $1,000 for the first year.

The vote count for the $390,000 proposition No. 2 – which would have funded roof repairs to the transportation garage and the installation of a modern fuel island for a local cost of less than $10,000 a year for 15 years – was defeated 451-to-393.

For proposition No. 3, Rosemary Puckett, the only candidate for the vacant ninth position on the board of education, received 491 votes. The board was expected to appoint her on Monday, Oct. 15, and she will serve until the May election. Five other individuals received one vote each as write-ins.

A total of 835 voters turned out Tuesday.

"We are delighted that the community understood the need and responded to this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to secure additional state funding to make these necessary changes and upgrades," said Superintendent Vicki Wright.

State museum slates 'War Stories' program

"War Stories," a day of World War II education, preservation and remembrances, will be held at the state Museum and Cultural Education Center on Saturday, Oct. 20.

The programs are free and will be held between 10 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Sponsored by the state Museum, Archives, Library and Office of Educational Television and Public Broadcasting, they are designed to complement the Ken Burns' PBS documentary "The War," which recently aired locally on WMHT. The seven-part series was an exploration of World War II told through the experience of individuals in four American towns.

Throughout the day, a one-hour highlight reel containing clips from the series will be shown at the Carole F. Huxley Theater in the museum. There also will be a video, produced by WMHT, featuring the memories of local veterans shared with interviewer Dan DiNicola. Outside the theater, a PBS toolkit of educator resources on "The War" will be provided by Katherine Jetter, WMHT's educational services manager.

Also, in the museum's west corridor, visitors will have the chance to step back in time to visit a portion of a recreated U.S. Army field camp as it would have existed on the coast of Normandy, France, in June of 1944. Re-enactor Craig Gravina of the New York State Museum will assume the role of a staff sergeant in Easy Company, 2nd Ranger Battalion. He will answer questions, display equipment and personal items, and show how American G.I.s in Europe lived during the weeks following the D-Day invasion.

A workshop on "Caring For Your WWII Collections" will be held from 10:30 to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. on the 11th floor of the Cultural Education Center. Marie Culver, conservation specialist at the State Archives, and Gwen Spicer of Spicer Art Conservation, LLC will explain how to preserve World War II memorabilia. Visitors are invited to bring in items from their personal collections to learn how to store and display them and where they can be repaired. Culver and Spicer will also discuss the special challenges of scrapbooks and flags. No weapons, ordnance or explosives of any kind will be permitted.

"WWII Stories from the Collections of the NYS Library" will be the topic of a program, also on the 11th floor, from noon to 1:30 p.m. and 3 to 4:30 p.m. Paul Mercer and Vicki Weiss, senior librarians, will describe the library's WWII collections, many of which will be on display in the 11th floor lobby. They will also share information on how individuals can donate items or collections to the state library and help keep the memories alive for future generations.

The state library has served New Yorkers, state government and researchers throughout the United States for more than 180 years. It is the largest state library in the nation.

For information about programs and events at the museum, call 474-5877 or visit the museum Web site at www.nysm.nysed.gov.

Neighborhood celebrates its origins

IN BRIEF

This is the original "Hayfield" farm in Glenmont on Feura Bush Road that was once owned by the Michaels family. James and Marion Michaels began the Colonial Acres project on the 100 acres of property they owned in that area.

After 45 years, Colonial Acres remains a family-friendly development

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

It's been 45 years since Jim Michaels' idea of a planned community, known as Colonial Acres in Glenmont, first formed. On Saturday, Oct. 20, hundreds of current and former residents of the neighborhood will get together and celebrate those many cherished years of community with a Founders Dinner at the Normanside Country Club.

"We still have 12 founders who came here as original settlers to the Acres who are still here today," said Vince Moehringer, treasurer of Colonial Acres Association. "We want to get together to celebrate the past of this place."

With a neighborhood swimming pool, nine-hole golf course, annual Fourth of July gatherings and other seasonal events, Colonial Acres has withstood the test of time.

"This is an integrated community where the sum is greater than its parts," said Joy Ford, one of the original residents of Bayberry Road, who is now the official welcome wagon for new neighbors. "It's very community oriented."

Michaels' plan after he purchased a 100-acre farm in the early '60s was to pattern the development after Colonial Williamsburg, Va., with precise floor plans and architectural designs, along with a set of rules that a neighborhood association would abide by.

"The approach was so innovative to the area it received much praise and won several awards," said Ford, who even recalls a time when Mrs. America came to Colonial Acres to open one of the new homes.

Michaels' widow, Marion, said the family home was the original structure on the 100-acre farm.

"We had two barns with sheep, cows and offices for the business," said Marion Michaels.

The Michaels believed in 1960 that planned development would be the wave of the future, and on that 100-acre farm, the dream for Colonial Acres became a reality.

"It was the first development we ever did, and we had an architectural committee to keep it authentic," said Marion Michaels.

After 15 years, the Michaels left Colonial Acres to live in New Salem, but the neighborhood continues to thrive.

"I lived here 45 years, and I have always gone to welcome new neighbors and write about them in our community newspaper," said Ford.

More than 100 neighbors have been invited to the Founders Day Dinner, which will include a slide presentation featuring pictures of Colonial Acres from its beginning to today.

"There is a core of people that have lived here a long time, and this has been a nice place to live," Moehringer said.

Another cause for celebration in the neighborhood is the Colonial Acres Golf Course, which has recently been purchased from the original owners by the Open Space Institute. OSI is leasing the golf course back to the town for the annual cost of $1.

Ford said the value of homes in Colonial Acres has never gone down because of the neighborhood pride and community spirit that thrives there.

"People with young children move in, kids can ride bikes, skateboards and feel safe," said Ford. "It's very family oriented."

Nathaniel Mackey to read at UAlbany

Nathaniel Mackey, 2006 National Book Award winner for poetry for "Splay Anthem" and a leading authority on musical influences in African American poetry, will read from his work on Thursday, Oct. 18, at 8 p.m. in the Assembly Hall, Campus Center, UAlbany uptown campus.

At 4:15 p.m. that day, Mackey will present an informal seminar in the Standish Room, Science Library, uptown campus. The events are sponsored by the New York State Writers Institute and are free and open to the public. Call 442-5620 for information.

Jewish center offers programs for parents

The Sidney Albert Albany Jewish Community Center is offering three new programs for parents of very young children. Each program offers families an opportunity to spend time with other new families, as well as learn young and fun ways to interact with their children. The goal is to help parents connect with and bond with their infants and toddlers in a creative and social setting.

The classes offered include Mom and Baby Yoga on Wednesday mornings, Sign Language Playgroup on Thursday mornings and "Wobblers" by Cartwheels for Kids on Friday mornings. Each class will take place at the SAAJCC this fall.

For information, call 689-0039 or e-mail BethM@saaajcc.org.

'Pandora's Box' to be screened

"Pandora's Box" will be shown on Friday, Oct. 19, at 7:30 p.m. in Page Hall, 135 Western Avenue, on the University at Albany's downtown campus. Sponsored by the New York State Writers Institute, the screening is free and open to the public.

For information, contact the Writers Institute at 442-5620 or online at www.albany.edu/writers-inst.

Book-sale bonanza this weekend

Friday night, Oct. 19, from 5 to 8 p.m., is our exclusive members-only sneak preview night at the annual book sale. (If you are not a member, you can join at the door and get first crack at the best stuff.) At 10 a.m. Saturday, the second day kicks off with homemade baked goods and coffee for sale in the lobby. The best bargain of all is on Buck-a-bag Sunday, when you can bring your own tote bag or grocery bag and stuff as many books in it as you can for just $1. We hope to see you all there.

One face that will be missed is that of Bob Barron, who passed away on Oct. 2. Bob served as a library trustee from 1971 to 1976 and was an ardent library supporter. He and his wife, Joan, were frequent library visitors and enjoyed attending programs here. Bob never failed to devote hours to helping out at the FOL book sale. We will miss him.

Have you filled out your survey?

Visit our Web site at www.voorheesvillelibrary.org and click on the survey link to respond. It remains online until Monday, Oct. 22. Hard copies are available in the library.

Area caregivers write for therapy

By JENNIFER FARNSWORTH
news@spotlightnews.com

Being a caregiver, whether it be for the community or for a loved one, can be a rewarding and emotionally trying experience. Often, if you are taking care of another person, you do not have time to take care of yourself.

Community Caregivers of Altamont has found yet another innovative approach to emotional healing. Executive Director Diane Cameron, who has a love for writing, has designed a writing workshop that allows caregivers to have an accessible outlet.

"Many times our caregivers are so busy taking care of others that they find it difficult to find time to deal with what they are feeling. Writing is a form of stress relief that deals with emotions. Many times it is not possible for a caregiver to talk to a friend privately about how they are coping," said Cameron.

Cameron taught her last workshop over the summer and said she can hardly wait to hold the next session on Wednesday, Oct. 24. She said what she learned at the last session is just how amazing the stories are of the caregivers who are a mix of volunteers and people caring for family and friends.

"Hearing the stories of people who live with the everyday ups and downs of caring for someone is a heartwarming experience," said Cameron.

Cameron said Caregivers felt it needed a way to ensure its volunteers, who give so much, find a way to manage their emotions. Cameron said her love of writing brought her the idea of using a journal. She said the workshops provide people with the tools and encouragement to let go and write whatever they feel.

"We use simple exercises to make everyone feel comfortable. You do not even have to feel as though you are a good writer; you just need a pen and a notebook to get started. I love seeing people break through the fear of writing and just let go," said Cameron.

Nancy Alexander of Guilderland said she benefited from attending the last session and would encourage anyone in a caregiving situation to venture into writing.

"It's a great chance to try hands-on writing and to put into perspective being a caregiver. The workshops provide direction on how to approach using a journal to deal with feelings of hope and hopelessness, anger, sadness and fear," said Alexander.

Alexander said she and the other who attended immediately felt at ease. She also pointed out that writing is a skill that she has continued to use and hopes to expand on.

"The workshop taught me how to pinpoint my emotions as a caregiver," Alexander said. "The best part about writing is you can let go and share it with others when you want to just get it all out and then tear it up."

She also said another aspect of writing is listening, and that hearing that others feel the same way as you helps to fight the feelings of loneliness.

"Knowing that someone feels the same way as you do, even if it is a stranger, provides a sense of comfort," said Alexander.

The upcoming two-hour workshop will look at ways to keep a journal, start a memoir and use fiction and poetry. The workshop is an opportunity for anyone who wants to begin a writing project, begin a journal or expand on what they are currently writing.

The Wednesday session will run from 6 to 8 p.m. and is free. Pre-registration is required by calling Community Caregivers at 861-5181.

"I really so fortunate to be able to combine two things that I love, writing and helping others," said Cameron.

Library displays historic archives

In celebration of New York State Archives Month, Susan Leath, town historian, has installed a selection of items from the town's archives in the Local History Room of the Bethlehem Public Library.

"Being new to the job, this was a great opportunity for me to delve into the archives," said Leath. "The items displayed here are just a sampling of things that appealed to me, including a map from 1856 of John Leading's lot drawn by William H. Slingerland, and the wonderful drawing and handwriting of schoolgirl Helen Earl from 1905.

"Bethlehem has a deep and rich history," said Leath. "The display is a great way to give people a taste of the different kinds of items in the archive."

Items in the archive include records from the office of the town clerk and town historian.

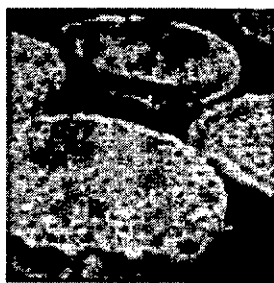

The town clerk's records are primarily related to the town administration, and also encompass judicial, town taxation, educational, public work and public assistance records.

The historian's records consist of collections that detail the histories of Bethlehem families, schools, and community organizations and include some military records, as well as maps and engineering plans.

Also in the archive is a collection of miscellaneous documents and secondary research sources, including books, some film and interviews. There is also a set of historic photographs depicting the town of Bethlehem as early as 1880.

The display will be up through the month of October.

RCS Library offers lots for teens

"Raising teenagers is like nailing Jell-O to a tree." - Unknown

Teen Read Week

There are easier things in life than getting your teenager up and out of the house. But once you've accomplished this, bring him or her to the library in honor of Teen Read Week, Oct. 14 to 20.

Need some incentives? RCS Community Library has a variety of materials which are sure to appeal to your teen, including:

- Music CDs by everyone from Rihanna to Pearl Jam to Nickelback
- Movies like "Eragon" and "The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants" on DVD
- Magazines such as Seventeen, Rolling Stone, and Teen Ink
- Lots and lots of Young Adult fiction. Check out these new titles:

"Schooled" by Gordon Korman

Cap Anderson, raised on a commune and home-schooled by his hippie grandmother Rain, knows a lot about tie-dyeing and Zen Buddhism. But when circumstances force him to attend public school for the first time, nothing can prepare him for the hilarious mess his life is about to become.

"Song of the Sparrow" by Lisa Ann Sandell

In this teen-centered "Camelot" tale, beautiful 16-year-old Elaine of Ascolat and the young Gwynivere are thrust into a situation of grave danger. They must get past their initial dislike for each other and band together in order to survive. Will they find the strength to fight for their kingdom?

"Night of the Howling Dogs" by Graham Salisbury

A disaster of unearthly proportions strikes Hawaii's Big Island one night. For Dylan and Louie, members of a Scout troop out on a hike, the struggle over leadership and survival begins now.

Wagging Tales Reading Program

Wagging Tales reading program pairs children up with special canine reading companions for 15 to 20 minutes of enjoyable, relaxing reading practice. This kind of program, nationally, has proved its value for improving children's reading abilities and attitudes. A few slots are still available for this program; call the library at 756-2053 to sign up your child.

The next reading times are:

Thursday, Nov. 1, at 7 p.m. and Sunday, Nov. 4, at 1 p.m.

'Tweens & Teens Fright Fest

RCS Community Library will host a "Fright Fest" Halloween party for 'tweens and teens on Friday, Oct. 26, from 6 to 8 p.m. Join us for Halloween-themed games, refreshments, and sharing of spooky short stories. Costumes are optional. Call the library for information.

Tech Fair has something for everyone

Some of us love all things electronic; some of us run the other way. Those of us in the middle may need a little help making informed choices.

Wherever you are on the computer chip continuum, you'll find something of interest at our Technology Fair on Saturday, Nov. 3.

Area businesses and community organizations will be in the library lobby and community room from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. to introduce the latest high-tech products and services through exhibits, mini-workshops and hands-on demonstrations.

Get a look at what's out there these days for techies and novices, kids and teens. There will also be basic information sessions on high-definition television, home computer security, home wireless access and more, plus an art project station for kids.

An exhibit by Computer Partners, the library's adult tutoring service in computer basics, will balance out the day's offerings and help make the fair a worthwhile destination for everyone.

We extend a welcome and a thank you to our local partners: AT&TStore, GE2McS, FIRST Lego League, New York Capital Region Geocachers, NYSEDA, Sinnamon Sewing Machine Service, Staples, Tangora Technologies, and Upstate NY Unix User's Group.

Environmental series continues

Our series of programs on environmental change continues next Tuesday, Oct. 23, at 7 p.m. with "Human-Induced Climate Change: What can we do about it?" Dr. John Delano will discuss the magnitude of efforts required to stabilize greenhouse gases.

Dr. Delano is a distinguished teaching professor in UAlbany's Department of Earth and Atmospheric Sciences. He has served on advisory panels for NASA and the National Science Foundation. In 2004, he was invited to give testimony at a Presidential commission to examine NASA's plans for lunar and Martian exploration.

Dr. Delano walks the walk. He and his family have taken measures to reduce their carbon footprint, including installation of solar panels that generate a significant portion of their home's electricity.

What's your opinion?

We invite you to participate in our latest environmental poll. Go to www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org, or come to the library information desk for the paper version. Paper forms are also located at Perfect Blend in Delmar.

Get in the mood for Halloween

Explore the haunted history of one of the state's treasures, the State Capitol Building in Albany, with the Bethlehem Historical Association's timely presentation of "Strange Incidents: A Historical Ghost Tour of the New York State Capitol."

Stuart W. Lehman is education coordinator for the Office of General Services, working at the Capitol and the Empire State Plaza. Mr. Lehman has given the talk many times before.

The Bethlehem Historical Association is located at the historic Cedar Hill School at 1003 River Road (Route 144) in Selkirk and this meeting will be held Thursday, Oct. 18, at 7:30 p.m.

For information about this free program, call 439-3802.

Thacher offers workshops, programs

Thacher Nature Center, 87 Nature Center Way, Voorheesville, offers the following programs:

- Saturday, Oct. 20, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.: "Backyard Foraging" at Thacher Nature Center

This workshop is a thorough introduction to the world of wild edible plants. Learn how to safely identify edible species and avoid non-edibles, and the best ways to prepare them for the dinner table. Workshop includes study indoors, and gathering, preparing, and sampling delectable goodies from the landscape. Fee is $20 per person. Call 872-0800 to register.

- Saturday, Oct. 27, at 6 p.m.: Full Moon Halloween Campfire Program at Thacher Nature Center.

Get in the Halloween spirit with scary stories around the campfire. Come in costume and gather around the fire for s'mores and eerie tales with storyteller Claire Nolan. Program is recommended for ages 9 and up and fee is $1 per person. Please register by calling 872-0800.

- Saturday, Oct. 27, at 9 a.m.: Geology Walk at Thacher Park

Explore the karst and other landforms on the newest part of the park on a journey to High Point with Thom Engel. Wear orange, as hunting is permitted in this area and it is small game season and muzzle loader/bow season for deer. Meet at the Nature Center and carpool to the trailhead. data-processing department. Town board member Sam Messina said making budget decisions like that one is often a balancing act.

"We had to cut that and cut other requests of a similar nature," said Messina, who added that he feels the budget is a strong one.

"It's a tight budget, but I think it's going to work out very well."

Messina said he agrees that across-the-board salary increases for town employees was necessary.

"People are our most important resource at all levels," said Messina. "They are extremely valuable to the delivery of service we have."

Two new positions in the tentative budget include a new senior outreach worker and a coordinator for storm water management.

The Bethlehem town budget represents only 12 percent of a property taxpayer's overall tax obligation, according to town officials. School and library taxes make up 70 percent of the obligation, with county taxes amounting to 13 percent.

"I feel good about the budget," Kotary said. "We made difficult choices." "It's never perfect."

"I think the jury came to the right decision," said David Rossi, assistant Albany County District Attorney, who handled the case for the prosecution.

The Careys, who were in the courtroom throughout the trial, said the jury made the right decision.

"Lisa and I are relieved justice has been served," said Michael Carey. "Does it bring healing? No. ... The pain doesn't go away."

Mall pleaded guilty to a lesser charge and is serving a six-month sentence in Albany County jail. Tirado's case however went to trial earlier this month, and on Wednesday, Oct.

10, the jury came back with a guilty verdict.

Brian Donahue, Tirado's lawyer, said he was disappointed with the verdict and that Tirado's family believes he is innocent.

The Albany County District Attorney's Office cast a different light on Jonathan's death.

Jurors were told how Tirado and Mall drove around the Capital District for 90 minutes with Carey and another child in an O.D. Heck van, making various personal stops, including one at Crossgates Mall. Rossi said the prosecution focused on the fact that Tirado was trained to deal with Jonathan's behavior issues but was reckless in how he handled the boy.

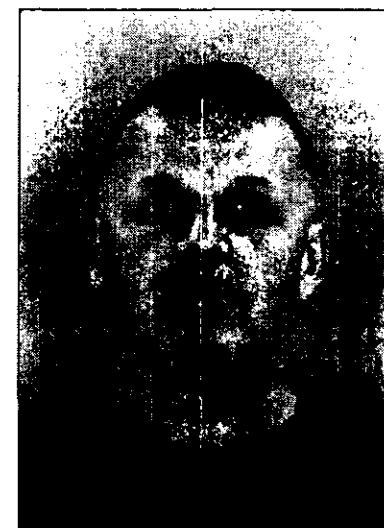

"He clearly had knowledge that what he (Tirado) was doing was risky," said Rossi.

At some point during the ride, Jonathan began to show signs of distress. That is when Tirado restrained the boy forcibly, according to Rossi. To further compound matters, according to prosecutors, Tirado and Mall never called for immediate medical attention when Jonathan stopped breathing. Instead they continued to drive the van, making further stops.

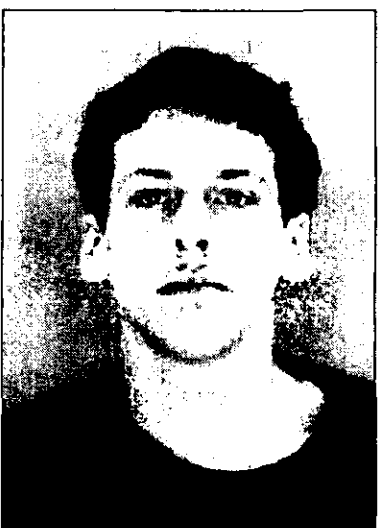

When the group returned to the Niskayuna developmental center, Jonathan was pronounced dead.

Tirado faces between five and 15 years in state prison.

"The whole situation is tragic," said Carey. "Everybody is damaged in a different way."

Carl and Travis Swenson were arrested for allegedly attempting to rob the Price Chopper Supermarket in Slingerlands.

Father, son use pit bull in robbery

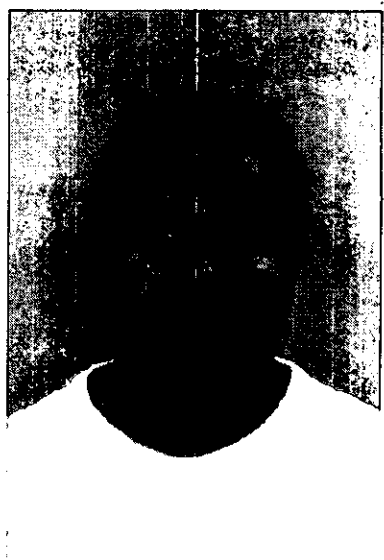

A Watervliet father and son have been arrested for robbery after allegedly leaving the Slingerlands Price Chopper with a cart full of unpaid groceries and using a pit bull to keep loss prevention employees from following them.

Carl R. Swenson, 52, and his son, Travis Swenson of Watervliet, were taken into custody without incident a few hours after they left the store on Thursday morning, Oct. 11.

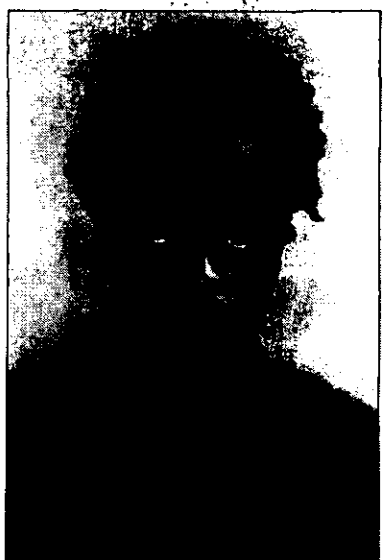

One of the two men were chased by a loss prevention employee after leaving the store with a full shopping cart. According to police reports, a struggle ensued and one of the suspects made it to their car. The suspect inside the car tried to entice a pit bull with them to attack the store employee. The dog then lunged at the employee but did not bite the person. The Swensons left the scene in a Chevy Silverado.

Carl Swenson is charged with third degree robbery, reckless endangerment, and petit larceny. Travis Swenson is charged with menacing and reckless endangerment. The two were arraigned in Bethlehem Town Court.

David Hinkle and Thomas Bryant.

Pair charged with robbery in Wal-Mart bathroom

Two men have been taken into custody by Bethlehem police and charged with two separate armed robberies that occurred inside the bathroom of the Glenmont Wal-Mart.

David Hinkle, 28, of Schenectady, and Thomas Bryant, 25, of Rensselaer, are charged with robbery, criminal possession of a weapon and unlawful possession of marijuana.

Police report that two separate male victims entered the Wal-Mart restroom on Wednesday evening, Oct. 10, shortly before 10 p.m. and were each asked if they wanted to purchase marijuana. One of the two men charged then allegedly took a knife out and held it to the victims' necks. The victims were robbed of whatever cash they had in their pockets. Hinkle and Bryant were apprehended a short time later by Bethlehem police in the parking lot and were taken into custody.

The two were arraigned in Bethlehem Town Court and sent to Albany County jail. A preliminary hearing is set for Wednesday, Oct. 17.

The lowdown on credit scores: The good, the bad and the way to excellent

Anthony Lanzillo
Senior Vice President
Key Bank

If you've ever applied for a loan or line of credit, whether it was for a mortgage, car or to score an extra 10 percent discount on an already great retail shop's sale, then there's a good chance you had a moment when you swallowed hard, your palms grew sweaty and your heart beat a little faster.

Truth is applying for credit is often a high-stress proposition. Most people apply only because they need to apply, because the money will help with a necessary expense, such as a home improvement project, caring for a sick family member or getting a son or daughter through college. The fact that the credit process is relatively unfamiliar and not clearly defined only contributes to this anxiety.

However, applying for a loan doesn't need to be so stressful. It doesn't need to feel like a showdown between consumer and loan officer. In fact, it's not a showdown. Your loan officer wants to help get you the best rates available, because that's the best way to earn your trust and win your business. And with a little knowledge and preparation, you can help make this happen and ensure a smooth transaction.

What is a FICO score?

The FICO score is the credit scoring system used by the major credit bureaus to predict a borrower's credit worthiness. The formula, which is proprietary information and not known, was developed by Fair Isaac and Company. Still, the general principles about how the three-digit scoring system (ranging from 300 to 850) works are well understood.

Here is a quick breakdown of the factors that are considered and the weight of each of these considerations.

- Payment history (35 percent) — This includes your bill paying history and the timeliness with which you pay your bills. Bills that are paid late and sent out for collection, as well as bankruptcy declarations, adversely affect your total score. The more recent this history, the more heavily it is weighted.
- Current debt (30 percent) — Accounts for your existing credit obligations, including credit cards, mortgages, car loans and any other debt you might be carrying. Obviously, the less debt you carry, the less fearful lenders will be of your inability to pay back a loan. A big culprit in this grouping that often accounts for lower than anticipated credit scores is credit card debt. Creditors look at both the number of cards you carry and the balances they carry in relationship to their credit limit. If you need to carry credit card debt, a good rule of thumb is to keep it below 25 percent of its maximum limit.
- Credit history (15 percent) — This is the length of time you've had credit. If you make on time payments, your credit history will improve with each report because you continue to establish a predictable pattern of responsible borrowing.
- Credit inquiries (10 percent) — FICO scores reflect only inquiries dating back one year. The reason why credit inquiries are weighed is because an unusual increase in credit requests can be a sign of financial troubles.
- Type of existing credit (10 percent) — This category looks at the types of credit you have, the prevalence with which you use that credit and recent activity. Of the categories that are weighted, this is perhaps the most vague and difficult to predict for potential borrowers.

To summarize, in order to earn a high credit rating it is important to have an established record of borrowing and timely repayment, to limit your borrowing activity and to carry as little debt as possible, particularly when it comes to credit cards.

What does the FICO score mean to you?

Your FICO score is a measurement of your borrowing power. The lower your rating, the more likelihood that securing a loan will be difficult and expensive. As much as a loan officer may want to help you, they cannot change your credit history. The higher your FICO rating, the more borrowing opportunities you will have, both in terms of accessing the lowest rates available and the ability to shop for the loan and terms that best suit your needs. According to Fair Isaac, the median FICO score in the United States today is 723. Half of the population is above this number, the other half is below it.

In general, FICO scores above 700 are very good and will help you secure the best rates. Once you get below 700, you will likely not be able to secure the best

The way to excellent

According to FICO, the credit scoring system developed by the Fair Isaac Company and used by most major banks and credit bureaus, the difference between a 700 and a 699 FICO score on a 30-year fixed mortgage can be $56 a month. Do the math, and that one point differential adds up to an extra $20,160 over the life of the mortgage. The difference between a 700 and a 659, as estimated on the FICO web site (www.my-fico.com), is $78,480 over the life of a 30-year fixed mortgage. So paying attention and working your credit score from bad to good to excellent really does pay. And here are five tips that can help you do it.

1. Correct any errors or inaccuracies on your credit reports. For example, I once had a client who had a vehicle on his report that the leasing company never took off after the car was turned back in. The correction resulted in a better rate. You can request your free credit report from www.annualcreditreport.com.
2. Pay down your credit card balances. It's obvious, but it makes a big difference.
3. Make on time payments. One late report on your FICO score can be costly, dropping you from a good standing to a fair standing.
4. Do not close unused accounts. Unused accounts help establish your credit history and help maintain a lower credit available to debt ratio.
5. Spread out your credit card debt among a number of cards to keep your balance-to-credit ratio below 25 percent. Of course paying your cards down is the preferred option, but this approach of spreading out debt could be a short-term, quick-fix approach that can save you thousands in the long run.

terms available, which means higher rates and more money borrowed over the life of the loan.

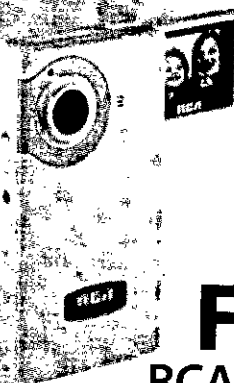

What understanding the credit process can mean to you?

Remember the cold sweat and anxiety...the feeling of helplessness that can be part of the loan application process? Understanding your FICO score, both how it works and what it records, can take away some of the mystery. More important, knowing your approximate score can help you set realistic expectations. This is good for both you and the loan officer, as you can work within a well-defined set of parameters to secure the best loan at the best rate for your given situation. Over the life of the loan, that can mean a lot of money in your pocket... not the bank's vault.

Vigil offers comfort in the wake of suicide

Group aims to support grieving families and reach out to those with suicidal thoughts

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parkerg@spotlightnews.com

It's estimated that at least six people are directly impacted by the suicide of one person.

By that math, in the Capital District alone, 540 people have lost a friend or loved one to suicide within the past year. Statewide, more than 7,000 people a year have lost someone to suicide, according to Family and Children Services of the Capital Region.

On Sunday, Oct. 14, Samaritans Suicide Prevention

Center operated by Family and Children Services and the state Office of Mental Health, held a hope vigil for those statewide who have been affected by suicide.

The organization aims to provide support to those who have lost someone to suicide. They are referred to as survivors.

The intent is to provide a place for people, who have lost someone to suicide, to come together and gain some sense of comfort together, said Jill Ordoñez, program director of Samaritans Suicide Prevention Center.

Attendance at the vigil is typically sporadic, she said. People come who have lost someone in 1985; some have lost someone to suicide as little as two weeks before.

The vigil includes audio and visual presentations and speakers, including bereaved parents and social workers. Each year, it concludes with a presentation of the names of those who have committed suicide within the past year.

Some people find comfort in hearing others' stories, said Ordoñez. Others do not, and don't attend. Her organization attempts to deal with those people through an outreach program. The grief process is different for everyone, she said.

Some families are torn with questions of what they could have changed, was it them, or how could someone do that to themselves? How could someone do that to them?

"When folks get so worn down by depression, they reach a point that it (suicide) makes sense. People can ask how they can do that. They do it because it's a whole 'nother point of thinking," said Gary E. Nelson, author of "A Relentless Hope: Surviving the Storm of Teen Depression."

Nelson is a pastor and counselor in West Virginia. He wrote the story of his son, who suffered from depression and began showing all the signs that he had reached that point, said Nelson.

His family pulled together and got through it, he said.

Samaritans is also working to prevent suicides by providing outreach to family members and those concerned about possible suicide.

Both Nelson and Ordoñez agree that family and friends of people who have committed suicide need compassion and understanding. A loved one's suicide can give rise to cycles of depression. For survivors to have a forum like the vigil is important to help them resolve their feelings and help them understand that it wasn't about them but about an illness — depression.

While Nelson's book deals specifically with teen depression and suicide, which, according to most recent figures, increased in recent years by 18 percent in people under 20 years old, local numbers tell a different story.

In the Capital District, of the 90 who commit suicide annually, only 13 are under the age of 20, said Ordoñez. The No. 1 age group locally includes white men, age 75 and older.

They do call into hot lines, she said, but typically the greatest frequency of calls are from people between 30 and 40 years old.

It's important to offer a two-tiered support structure when it comes to suicide, said Ordoñez. On one hand, you always want to deter a person from committing suicide; on the other, you want to be sure that the support is there for those who have suffered the suicide of a friend, husband, wife, son or daughter.

When a simple sign won't do

Campaign goodies get the word out

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Candidates running for elected office have a variety of options to get their message out to voters when campaigning.

They can run an ad in a local newspaper or radio station, send a letter to constituents outlining their goals, or write a press release to distinguish their political platform from opponents. Placing outdoor signs on lawns is one of the more popular ways of showing support. Designing a Web site where people can access information on someone's candidacy is quickly becoming more commonplace. Candidates with Web sites running in November's election include James Grady and Jack Cunningham, candidates for Bethlehem town supervisor, and Valerie Keehn and her opponent Scott Johnson, running for mayor in Saratoga Springs.

If candidates really want to get fancy, they can purchase bumper stickers, palm cards, postcards, rally signs, coffee cups, pens, pencils, shopping bags, door-knob hangers and more. State Sen. Hugh Farley, R-Niskayuna, has been in office for three decades, and his campaign staff has used a variety of methods to keep the Farley name in the forefront over the years, from fans in the summer that say, "I'm a Farley Fan," to safety kits and signs proclaiming: "Another Family for Farley."

"I think that it is dynamic because it shows the family supports the candidate," said Robert Geddes, special assistant to the senator. "We try different things to get the senator's name out, and what we find is that everybody copycats so we change over the years whatever we do." The Farley campaign team often purchases items in bulk to save on costs.

Matchbooks with the senator's name were a campaign item used years ago, but that has since become out of vogue.

"Matches phased out because of smoking," said Geddes.

Carrying boxes of coffee mugs with a candidate's name on the cup can become a bit cumbersome for staffers, who often have to carefully consider what campaign item goes best with a particular venue the can-wooden sign has been replaced by electric drills and wired signs with plastic faces that are easy to put up.

Geddes said he remembered a time when he had to go out and hammer and nail large, three-sided plywood diamond-shaped campaign signs for Farley.

"I had the pleasure of putting those up in five counties," said Geddes. "What a pain they were."

Loy's companies also sells bumper stickers and badges that have replaced the once-popular campaign buttons of many early presidential elections of the late 1800s and early 1900s in America.

Campaign volunteers who still have political lawn signs in their basements or campaign buttons inside a forgotten drawer might want to hold on to the items because they could have value one day.

Rob Lehman, a member of the American Political Items Collectors, has been collecting and selling antique political collectibles for 35 years. He said the hobby of collecting campaign artifacts has grown and evolved over the years.

"Celluloid pins from 1896 are still plentiful," said Lehman, who has a 1929 Herbert Hoover inauguration pin, a 1900s Teddy Roosevelt/William Jennings Bryan celluloid pin, and one of the famous "I Like Ike" pins from the 1952 Dwight D. Eisenhower presidential campaign.

The "Holy Grail" of political memorabilia collectors is to find a rare 1920 presidential celluloid pin showing Democratic presidential candidate James Cox and his running mate at the time, vice-president Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

"There are only 14 or 15 in existence, and the price range for one of these pins is anywhere from $75,000 to $100,000" said Lehman, whose Web site for political memorabilia is www.reededge.com.

"I think that it is dynamic because it shows the family supports the candidate. We try different things to get the senator's name out, (which) everybody copycats so we change over the years..."

marketing tool for any candidate, but especially for newcomers with small budgets who are running against incumbents with larger resources.

"My opinion is, I wish we didn't have to use signs, but then incumbents would have a distinct name advantage," Suhrada said. "If we limit signs or ban them to an extent, we ensure incumbents have an advantage."

There are many different decisions a candidate makes regarding his or her campaign signs, including colors, words or slogans, and the placement and size of a sign. Also to consider: how many signs to spread throughout a district.

According to Edward Lewi, president of the public relations firm Ed Lewi Associates, the main thing for anyone who wants to market themselves is to know the needs and wants of their audience.

"It's important for a candidate to know the needs of their constituents and to market themselves accordingly," Lewi said. "Different areas want different things."

Suhrada said a good campaign sign has boldly written words, uses color and attracts the eye.

"All it's doing is getting the name into your mind subliminally. It's like billboards on the highway," he said.

Suhrada said he prefers to place his campaign signs when he runs for office on lawns rather than in public right-of-ways. To him, voters showing their support by displaying his sign

"You are selling yourself to the voters. People like to think that isn't true, but the vast majority of the voters need to have name recognition."

Joseph Suhrada

means more than displaying a sign in a public place.

"I like it when every other house has my sign on the lawn. It is like an endorsement from people who actually vote," he said.

Kerner said the case is very different in Clifton Park, where people like their lawns to be neat and clean and free from sign clutter.

"We try not to clutter up the town. We put them (signs) out in a reasonable manner," he said.

Currently, municipalities across the Capital District have different ordinances limiting the use of campaign signs, including where to place them, when to start putting them out and for how long.

For example, in Clifton Park, candidates can't start displaying campaign signs until Sept. 1 for a general election and 30 days prior to a special election.

While campaign signs may be a good way to get the message out to the voters about a person's run for office, most committee chairmen would agree that going door to door is a better way.

Schenectady County Republican Chairman Tom Buchanan said the use of signs is a minor part of his campaigns. Buchanan said his candidates use them out of tradition.

"Signs are not as important as getting out the message about why it's important to vote Republican," he said. "Going door to door is the No. 1 aspect of running any local campaign."

Kerner said he agrees and said his candidates in Clifton Park are trying to his every door in the town.

"All our candidates feel that going door to door is the most important thing," he said.

Charities team up to help students

Two local nonprofits, the Rotary Club of Delmar and the Bethlehem Festival Fund, presented $800 in school supplies to Hakim Jones, principal of the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk High School, and school nurse Karen Randio on Friday, Sept. 28. Students at the A.W. Becker Elementary School in Selkirk, the P.B. Coeymans Elementary School in Coeymans and the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk middle and high schools will share the supplies.

"It is great to have the opportunity to work with the Festival Fund so that we can pool our resources and not duplicate efforts," said Vicky Plotsky, president of the Rotary Club of Delmar, who approached Festival Fund president Greg Jackson about collaborating on a project to benefit local students.

"The Rotary Club of Delmar hopes to do its part in helping our young people learn and grow and is very pleased to work with the Bethlehem Festival Fund to provide school supplies," she explained.

Jackson said the collaboration will maximize the Festival Fund's impact on the local community.

"It is a pleasure to be able to team up with another service club in the Bethlehem area to help local students," Jackson said.

Rotary International is a worldwide network of volunteers dedicated to making the world a better place by improving health, alleviating hunger and promoting literacy around the world. The Rotary Club of Delmar serves the greater Bethlehem community by providing community service and grants to organizations and individuals. Providing school supplies is the Rotary Club of Delmar's way of helping local students learn.

The Delmar Rotary also sponsors international youth exchange by sending a local student to study abroad and accepting an international student into host families in Bethlehem or RCS school districts; provides vocational scholarships to graduates of RCS and Bethlehem high schools; and supports services for seniors and youth in Bethlehem and Ravena, as well as international projects to provide clean water and foster economic self-sufficiency.

The Festival Fund is an all-volunteer nonprofit organization that has served Bethlehem residents since 1942. All of the money donated to the Festival Fund is used to help individuals and families with needs that are not met by traditional assistance programs. Assistance is targeted to students, senior citizens and local residents with health concerns and economic difficulties attributable to job loss or life changes such as divorce or illness. The Festival Fund collaborates with school personnel and the Bethlehem Senior Services Department who make the majority of referrals for assistance. Requests are handled confidentially and are considered on a case-by-case basis. The fund covers items such as eyeglasses and hearing aids, medications, clothing, utility bills and tutoring services for children.

For information about the Rotary Club of Delmar or to apply for membership, contact Plotsky at 439-0242 or vplotsky@yahoo.com.

For information about the Festival Fund, contact Greg Jackson at 462-6731 or e-mail BethFestFund@aol.com.

Hazel C. Arsenault

Hazel C. Arsenault, 78, of Ravena died, Tuesday, Oct. 9.

She was a loving mother and grandmother. She enjoyed being with everyone at the family reunions. She was a waitress at Schraff's Restaurant in Glenmont and at various Moose Lodges. She was a lifetime member of Women of the Moose and a lifetime member of Onesquethaw Fire Auxiliary in Clarksville.

She was the widow of John Arsenault and the late Joseph Rappazzo.

Survivors include five daughters, Joan (James) Moutray, Hazel (Kenneth) Perkins, Josephine (Vincent) Vindittie, Rosie (Ronnie) Watson and Angela (Ian) Novinger; two sons, Joseph (Gilda) Rappazzo Jr. and Charles (Beth) Rappazzo; a sister, Edna Willsey and a brother, Robert Peck; 24 grandchildren; 42 great-grandchildren; and two greatgreat-grandchildren.

Services were from the Meyers Funeral Home. Interment was in Westerlo Rural Cemetery. Following the funeral, a reception was held at the Bethlehem Grange, Beckers Corners, Selkirk. Contributions may be made to the American Cancer Society, Capital District Office, 260 Osborne Rd., Colonie 12211.

Walter K. Kelle

Walter K. Kelle, of Slingerlands, died Sunday, Oct. 14, at home.

He enjoyed a life filled with family, good friends, music and laughter. He was a social worker at St. Peter's Hospital and he continued in private practice in Slingerlands after his retirement. He spent his happiest times at home with his wife Mary and their children, Walt W. Kelle of Slingerlands, Christine Kelle of Albany, Jack Kelle of Delmar, and Sheila Kelle of Slingerlands. He was also survived by a grandson.

Services are by the Meyers Funeral Home of Delmar and will be held Wednesday, Oct. 17, from 3 to 6 p.m.

Catherine Relyea

Catherine Relyea, 98, of Delmar, died Thursday, Oct. 11, at Community Hospice, Albany.

Born in Albany, she was the mother of Robert C. Relyea of Slingerlands and Paul B. Relyea of Salem.

Services were private at the convenience of the family.

Arrangements were by the Tebbutt Funeral Home of Albany.

Memories make a play

Playwright Warren Leight's father was a traveling musician, and he relied on those memories to write the Tony Award-winning play, "Side Man." Now almost 10 years after the play's release, the Home Made Theater is performing the play at the Spa Little Theater in Saratoga Springs.

The play focuses on a young man's memories of his childhood as the son of a jazz musician. The "memory play" features a number of flashbacks and narrations by the main character, Clifford, who is played by Peter Burleigh.

"This script was very well written and there was very little that I couldn't get that wasn't written into the script as far as character motivations," Burleigh said. "Anger isn't that hard to do."

Clifford's father, Gene, is a dedicated musician, and his mother, Terry, is an alcoholic. Set between Clifford's childhood in the 1960s and his life as a young adult in the 1980s, the play follows the rise and decline of jazz music.

"His writing of this show is almost jazz in a way in that it's not told in a strict chronology," Burleigh said. "There are so many jumps back and forth between time, and there's just a looseness to the telling that is very similar to jazz."

Director Steve Coats has worked with Burleigh on five shows.

"He had a natural gift for comedy and he was very flexible and willing to try new ideas. He's just an all-around great guy," Coats said. "His personality is one of great openness for the character, and that's kind of crucial."

Coats said the play is fast-moving and cinematic.

"It's a very fluid approach to the idea of time and memory," he said. "Because the play is essentially taking place in Clifford's memory, the audience is left to the vagaries of how his mind works."

Coats said that the play includes adult language and themes.

"It does deal with artistic and somewhat Bohemian people who don't have much recognition of the taboos of language, so the language is going to be a little hotter than what some people might be used to," he said. "I think it's an accurate representation of the period and the people."

During some of the show's tense moments, Clifford breaks away from the scene to narrate the action.

"My character breaks the fourth wall and speaks directly to the audience," Burleigh said. "I go in and out of scenes. Even during those scenes, I'll skip out and I'll talk to the audience. My mother, Terry, and Patsy, both ask me who I'm talking to at some point."

Winnie Bowen plays Clifford's mother.

"Winnie came to this show from the very first day with a tremendous emotional investment and really blew us all away with how powerful her performance is," Burleigh said. "Her performance, probably more than anyone else, is more emotionally draining."

Christine MacLellan is the associate manager of the Home Made Theater.

"I am not a big jazz music fan, but when I read this script I just immediately liked it. It's the repartee among the characters, they're very witty, amusing characters," MacLellan said. "They're all very flawed characters but very funny."

Tickets are $22 for the center section and $19 for the sides. Remaining performances are on the coming Fridays and Saturdays, Oct. 19, 20, 26, and 27 at 8:15 p.m. and Sundays, Oct. 21 and 28, at 2 p.m. For information, call 587-4427.

Kenney places eighth at BH Invitational

Bethlehem's Kristin Kenney was one of four runners not from Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake or Greenwich to finish in the top 10 at Saturday's Burnt Hills Invitational at Saratoga Spa State Park.

Kenney placed eighth in the Division III race, with a time of 18:50.3. Scotia-Glenville's Jillian King (second place, 17:19.6), Mount Anthony's McKenzie Krause (sixth, 18:42.2) and Ballston Spa's Katie Dickman (10th, 19:02.6) were the other non-Burnt Hills and non-Greenwich runners in the top 10.

Kenney's performance helped Bethlehem finish fourth in the team standings with 105 points. Greenwich won the Division III title with 46 points, five points ahead of Burnt Hills.

In other weekend cross country action, Voorheesville's Macky Lloyd had a top-10 finish in his division at the Manhattan Invitational at Van Cortlandt Park in the Bronx.

Lloyd placed eighth in the boys varsity C race with a time of 12:59.55 to help the Blackbirds finish 16th out of 42 schools.

The Voorheesville girls finished seventh in the F division with 236 points. Hilary Edmunds led the Blackbirds with a 31st-place performance in a time of 16:44.7.

Garry wins title at SCCA event

Delmar resident Jim Garry won his second career national title at the Sports Car Club of America (SCCA) Solo National Championships last month in Topeka, Kan.

Garry won the C modified class title 23 years after claiming his first national title.

"Solo" is the name the SCCA uses for its autocross competition, which emphasizes the driver's abilities and the car's handling. Courses are laid out in parking lots or inactive airstrips using traffic cones.

More than 1,100 drivers participated in the four-day event, which is the largest motorsports competition in the world.

Bethlehem's Kevin Wendth (23) and Austin Hughes (16) battle Niskayuna's Jeremy Beneit (3) for the ball during Saturday's Suburban Council game. Hughes and Wendth accounted for all of the Eagles' goals in the 4-0 victory.

Hughes' huge day lifts BC

Senior scores hat trick against Niskayuna

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

Bethlehem's Austin Hughes grimaced as his shot went wide of the Niskayuna goal late in the second half of Saturday's Suburban Council boys soccer game. Then, he shrugged off the missed opportunity with a smile.

After all, Hughes already had three goals. One more might have been overkill.

"He couldn't seem to miss - except for that last shot," said Bethlehem coach Phil Ridgway. "He played a great game."

Hughes' hat trick sparked the Eagles to a 4-0 victory over Silver Warriors and moved Bethlehem (7-3-1 league, 8-3-2 overall) within one-half point of Niskayuna (6-4-1) in the Blue Division standings heading into the final week of the regular season.

"Defensively, we played one of our best games, and we capitalized on some nice counterattacks," said Ridgway.

"We're scratching our heads right now because it certainly shouldn't have been a 4-0 game," said Niskayuna coach Jeff Ormsbee.

After a scoreless first half, Hughes went to work on Niskayuna's defense. The senior midfielder forced a turnover less than three minutes into the second half, chipped the ball past a Niskayuna defender and shot it past goalkeeper Luke Citrinitti, who came out from the goal line to cut down the angle.

"The (Niskayuna) defense was playing slow, so I just got lucky that time," said Hughes.

Sean Fishel had a chance to tie the game for the Silver Warriors 90 seconds later. Fishel had an open look at the Bethlehem goal, but his shot sailed wide past the left post.

That turned out to be an unfortunate break for Niskayuna. Less than two minutes later, Nick Jackson lofted a long, high crossing pass on goal, and Couldn't this wait until after the playoffs?

We interrupt this highly entertaining baseball postseason to bring you this announcement: George Steinbrenner is stepping away from the day-to-day operations of the New York Yankees.

Oh joy. Oh happy day. Now we have to endure Steinbrenner career retrospectives before we can watch highlights of the Colorado-Arizona series.

And here's the bonus - with the reins being turned over to George's sons Hank and Hal, this delays any decisions on Joe Torre's future, which delays any decisions by Mariano Rivera,

From the Sports Desk
Rob Jonas

Roger Clemens, Andy Pettitte and Alex Rodriguez. So on top of the Steinbrenner retrospectives, we also get a healthy dose of Yankee speculation.

Talk about lousing up a perfectly good postseason.

Of course, we should have seen this coming. If there's one thing the Yankees are good at other than making the playoffs, it's dominating the local headlines when they don't win in the playoffs. Never mind that we could be on the brink of a Colorado-Cleveland World Series (which would be great for baseball, but bad for Fox Network executives hoping for good ratings). Our day can't be complete without some pinstriped drama out of the Bronx.

At first, it was going to simply be whether Torre would survive another first-round playoff exit. After all in George's world, if you don't win a World Series, you're a failure. And since Torre hadn't won a World Series since 2000, that suddenly made him a failure in Steinbrenner's eyes. Never mind the fact that it took all of Torre's player management skills to get a bunch of over-the-hill veterans and wet-behind-the-ears rookie pitchers into the playoffs in the first place.

Steinbrenner even pulled his trump card when he was interviewed by a New Jersey newspaper after Cleveland took a 2-0 lead in the divisional series. When asked if Torre should be fired if the Yankees didn't bounce

Lining up the shot

Bethlehem's Ali Greenberg keeps an eye on the ball as she prepares to return the serve during last Wednesday's Section II, Class A quarterfinal match against Saratoga Springs. Greenberg and the rest of the Lady Eagles cruised through the field to win the class A team title. Bethlehem finished the regular season with a 14-0 record and the Suburban Council championship.

Eagles shut out Blue Devils

The Bethlehem field hockey team evened its Suburban Council record to 6-6 with Friday's 2-0 victory over Columbia.

Jess Finkle and Courtney McCall each scored goals, and Devon Keir stopped four shots to lead the Eagles (8-7 overall), who were coming off a 1-0 loss to Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake last Wednesday. Shirah Fudin and Morgan Skrabalak had the assists.

Kim Spica and Katie Burke each had two saves for Columbia.

Indians seal division title

Fortier leads R-C-S to victory over Academy

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk football team won the Reinfurt Division title and earned a measure of revenge along the way.

Jared Fortier rushed for 181 yards, and Zach Deering scored five touchdowns to lead the Indians past Albany Academy 48-6 in Friday's regular season finale in Ravena.

Like last year, the two teams entered the game tied for the Reinfurt Division lead. But unlike last year, R-C-S (5-0 division, 6-1 overall) established control of the game early on and never looked back in ousting Albany Academy (4-1, 4-3) from first place.

Fortier capped the Indians' first series with a 2-yard touchdown run in the first quarter. Deering then scored on a 9-yard run, and Fortier added the extra point to double R-C-S's lead to 14-0.

Scott Strohecker gave Albany Academy some life with a 27-yard touchdown run in the second quarter, but Fortier countered with a 26-yard scoring scamper before halftime to run the Indians' lead to 20-6. Deering took over in the second half, scoring on runs of 6 and 31 yards and adding a 34-yard touchdown reception off a Rob Nolan pass.

Deering finished with 114 rushing yards on 14 carries and 34 yards on his only catch, and Tyler Hughes contributed a 32-yard touchdown run for R-C-S, which had won several consecutive Reinfurt Division titles before Albany Academy unseated the Indians last year.

The victory earned R-C-S a first-round home playoff game as the class B No. 1 seed out of the Reinfurt Division. The Indians welcome 4-3 Fonda-Fultonville to Ravena Friday.

Voorheesville was also in the hunt for a No. 1 seed last weekend, but Saturday's 20-14 loss to Coxsackie-Athens dropped the Blackbirds to the No. 4 seed in class C out of the South Division.

The Blackbirds (5-2) had a 14-0 lead on touchdown runs by Jay Conde and Daniel Whiteley before the Indians (6-1) got their offense going. Quarterback Ryan Kane rushed for one touchdown and threw for another in the second quarter to tie the game at 14. Kane then capped C-A's first drive of the third quarter with a 2-yard touchdown run to put the Indians ahead for good.

Without starting tailback Pat Jones in the lineup, Conde carried much of the load for Voorheesville. The senior signal caller rushed 27 times for 127 yards and completed 7 of 19 passes for 88 yards. Whiteley added 55 yards on 14 rushes.

The Blackbirds' loss sends them into an opening round match-up against North Division champion Cambridge Saturday. Cambridge completed a perfect regular season with a 33-19 victory at Corinth.

Bethlehem was hoping to gain the Empire Division's No. 4 seed for the class AA playoffs last weekend, but it couldn't complete a comeback in a 21-16 loss to Christian Brothers Academy Friday.

The Eagles (2-5) took a 16-14 lead in the third quarter on Sam Smith's 32-yard field goal, but Jack Reilly's 38-yard touchdown run put the Brothers (3-4) ahead for good. Bethlehem had several more possessions to try to regain the lead, but CBA's defense held firm to pull out the win.

Sean Murphy rushed for 92 yards and a touchdown, and Kevin Ray returned an interception 95 yards for a touchdown to lead the Eagles. Nick Signore led CBA with 100 rushing yards on 12 carries.

Bethlehem drops into the crossover bracket for the final two games, beginning with Friday's contest against Columbia.

Hughes headed the ball into the left corner of the net to give Bethlehem a 2-0 lead.

"I was waiting for one of those to come across all season, and it happened," said Hughes.

Niskayuna turned up the offensive pressure after Hughes' second goal, but goaltender Dan Maddock and the Bethlehem defense denied the Silver Warriors time and time again. In one instance, Maddock dove to block a Jake Johnson shot that was destined to enter the lower right corner of the goal.

"For a sophomore, the kid is playing fantastic," Ridgway said of Maddock, who finished with seven saves. "He's a very good shot blocker."

Hughes put the game out of Niskayuna's reach with 6:55 left in the second half. After watching two Silver Warriors play a long pass, Hughes stole the ball, sprinted past a Niskayuna defender and launched a shot past Citrinitti to complete his hat trick.

"Austin found the opposite side of the net, and he was very composed out there when he had the shot," said Ridgway.

"We fell asleep in the back," said Ormsbee. "We let him have spaces he shouldn't have had. Credit him for taking advantage of his opportunities."

Kevin Wendth capped Bethlehem's victory in the 78th minute with his fifth goal of the season.

Niskayuna will have another shot at Bethlehem Friday when the two teams meet in Delmar.

"They're going to be very angry (about the 4-0 loss), and they're going to come out fighting," said Ridgway. "You can never count Niskayuna out."

"We've got to do a better job of opening (their defense) up," said Ormsbee. "We need to see if we can get them to come out and play (the ball)."

Prior to Friday's rematch with Niskayuna, Bethlehem has a score to settle with Blue Division leader Shenendehowa Wednesday in Clifton Park. The Plainsmen — currently ranked No. 1 in the state — defeated the Eagles 2-0 last month.

Playoffs

back, Steinbrenner said he should go. No caveats for making the playoffs for a 12th consecutive season or winning four World Series during a five-year span. If the Yanks don't come back, Torre should just keep walking out of the stadium and into baseball oblivion.

Ironically, that interview may have been the final straw for Hank and Hal. They were already dealing with the fact that their father's health was starting to decline. Now, they had to deal with a potential public relations fiasco if he went through with firing Torre — not to mention the possible player fallout if Rivera and Pettitte went through with their threats to leave the Bronx in response.

So Hank and Hal are taking the only logical step they can take. They're telling their father that it would be best for everyone involved if he'd just stay in Tampa and let them run the team. He'd still have a say because he's still the majority owner. He just won't have the final say.

But how will Steinbrenner's sons run the Yankees? Will they be like their father and insist on buying the best team they can, or will they take general manager Brian Cashman's approach and try building through their farm system. It seems to me that the latter approach is what saved the Yankees this year. Imagine if Phil Hughes, Ian Kennedy and Joba Chamberlain had been left in the minors this year. The Yankees probably wouldn't have made the playoffs — not with Torre likely having to rely on Clemens, Mike Mussina and Kyle Farnsworth. If they give Cashman a chance to continue rebuilding the farm system, the Steinbrenner sons could reap some nice benefits down the road.

The four teams left in the baseball playoffs are a prime example. Arizona, Colorado and Cleveland all built their rosters through their farm systems, while Boston has quietly introduced such budding superstars as Jacoby Ellsbury and Dustin Pedroia into their lineup. They're all teams that are built to be successful over the long haul.

As for the Yankees? They have a good core of young pitchers who — if they stay together — will give them a fighting chance to win for years to come. But at some point, they're going to need replacements for guys like Jorge Posada, Hideki Matsui and Bobby Abreu. And heaven help them if A-Rod opts out of his contract and finds another team willing to pay him $300 million for the next 10 years ...

Wait a second. I've fallen into the Steinbrenners' trap. I've spent nearly this entire column talking about a team that's no longer in the playoffs instead of talking about how Colorado has won 20 out of its last 21 games or how the Indians could lift Cleveland's spirits by winning the World Series. Heck, I could have even talked about the possibility of the Boston Red Sox becoming the new American League dynasty.

Curse you, George Steinbrenner and your sons. You've succeeded in distracting me from the baseball playoffs — again.

New York State United Teachers invites you to a groundbreaking conference Every Child Counts: A symposium dedicated to ending the gap

Oct. 25-27, 2007
Desmond Hotel
Albany, NY

The achievement gap is a pressing social issue facing nearly every legislative district. NYSUT is breaking new ground with a symposium featuring state and national education and policy experts for three days of lively and frank discussion on how to end the achievement gap in New York and ensure educational equity for all students. This symposium extends beyond educators to include parents, business leaders, policymakers and community members.
