Tess Collins will tell you that the phrase "art community" is redundant.

"The art community is the community," says Collins, a 42-year-old Lansingburgh native who has owned the Lark Tavern in Albany for the past four years. "Luckily, we've had a mayor who supports that way of thinking. Nurturing the art community has to start with the organizers of the city."

To Collins, there is no better support system for emerging artists than open mic nights. Collins hosts one at the Lark Tavern every Thursday.

Collins said her open mics are less about the actual performances and more about the sense of growth and encouragement among the artists. There is a sense of community at an open mic night, Collins says, and it's a community that doesn't judge or measure, but nurtures and supports.

"One thing that I love about my open mics is seeing the regulars — the people who may have been doing this for years — support the people who are afraid to go up on stage."

New executive editor plans lifestyle pages

By CARI SCRIBNER

Longtime Spotlight staff member Katherine McCarthy, now serving as editor in chief, is leaving the newspapers to become senior regional director of communications in the American Heart Association's Albany office. Two Spotlight team members, Tim Mulligan and Bill DeVoe, will be moving into the positions of executive editor and managing editor.

McCarthy's last day in the Delmar office is Thursday, Jan. 24. She has been with Spotlight Newspapers for a little more than 12 years.

John McIntyre, vice president and COO, said he will miss McCarthy both professionally and personally. "She's been my right hand, go-to person for years," said McIntyre. "She was the only Spotlight person to have a sit down, one-on-one with the governor (George Pataki); a great teacher and mentor."

McCarthy came to the news field on a circuitous route. She earned her degree in German and spent two years in Germany as a graduate student. With

Clapper Road project begins

77 homes are planned for site near I-87

By WILLIAM R. DEVOE
devoew@spotlightnews.com

The Town of Bethlehem Planning Board is in the process of determining the lead agency in the State Environmental Quality Review process for a proposed 77-parcel development near Clapper Road.

Bob Walsh of Charlew Construction appeared before the planning board at its Tuesday, Jan. 15, meeting with an outline of the Brookside Meadows project. The project is a neighborhood of 77 single-family detached homes west of Interstate 87.

Walsh said an additional 12 residential units or a couple of estate homes could be added to the project, depending on the result of the ongoing Route 9W study.

"There is always a market for a few estate homes," Walsh said in a later interview. "But if the study comes back and recommends that the land adjacent to where we'd like to put those should be, say, industrial or retail, we wouldn't put estate homes there."

Planning board members indicated that they were comfortable with Charlew's site plan and said they would start working on the next level of review.

"I wanted to move that forward to just to let the developer know that we are interested," said Parker Mathusa, planning board chairman.

Mathusa asked Walsh if the project could be extended to Beaver Dam Road.

"It certainly could be, but not by us," replied Walsh.

This is a scaled-down version of a previous proposal by Charlew in which the builder would develop 173 acres between Clapper Road and Beaver Dam Road for 345 single family homes; 39 town homes of two units each;

Police Blotter

Bethlehem Police handle John Doe cases

Bethlehem police handled a pair of incidents this past week in which suspects refused to give their identities.

On Sunday, Jan. 13, police responded to reports of a man wearing a black jacket attempting to access doors on Plymouth Avenue.

The responding officer observed a man wearing blue jeans and a black jacket walking down the stairs of 2 Plymouth

Ave. then down the road away from the officer. According to reports, the officer ordered the man to stop, but the suspect continued walking.

The officer caught up with the man and asked him to take his hands out of his pockets. The man refused until the responding officer unholstered his Taser.

When the officer reholstered his Taser and asked the suspect to place his hands behind his back, the suspect tried to flee. The officer had to grab the suspect and place him on the ground before taking him into custody.

The suspect was taken to the Bethlehem Police Department for processing, where a green glass bottle and a black-handled knife were found on his person.

The suspect refused to provide his identity. Officers sent the fingerprints to the Division of Criminal Justice Services, but attempts to identify him were fruitless.

The suspect was arrested for criminal trespass and criminal possession of a weapon, and arraigned under the name of John Doe.

He was transported to Albany County jail in lieu of $5,000 bail. He has a return court date of Tuesday, Feb. 5.

On Wednesday, Jan. 16, police arrested another John Doe.

A man police believe to be Rashid Ali, 19, of 134 Ames Road, Silver Springs, Md., was brought to the Bethlehem Police Department from Albany County jail for an unidentified person investigation stemming from a previous criminal trespass charge.

According to police, the suspect would not give Bethlehem Police information as to his identity, but wrote down the name of an "acquaintance" in Montreal, Canada, who would know him.

Contact was made with that individual, as well as the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who indicated that the individual in Montreal was a relative of Rashid Ali, who was last known to be in Albany.

The suspect appeared before Judge Paul Dwyer and refused to disclose his identity. He was sentenced to 30 days incarceration for summary contempt and was returned to Albany County jail.

In other arrests:

On Saturday, Jan. 19, Bethlehem Police arrested Martin Christopher Brozowsky, 27, of 148 Old Ravena Road, Selkirk, for DWI.

According to police, they detected a strong odor of alcohol in Brozowsky's car after they stopped him on Route 9W.

Brozowsky agreed to a chemical test and was charged with DWI. His return court date was Jan. 22.

Bonding on the bus

The Bethlehem Central Board of Education has started a program recognizing outstanding displays of character. The first recipients of this honor were the "bus buddies," a group of Slingerlands Elementary School fifth graders who ensure that fellow student Jude Killar is never without a companion on the school bus. Joined by Principal Heidi Bonacquist, they are, from left, Laura Hooper, Jordan Brazis-Eberle, Hailey Bulman, Rachel Conley, Lily Killar and Madeline del Cano. The girls each received a bouquet of flowers and a letter from school board President James Lytle and had their names placed on a plaque in the Educational Services Center.

The board is seeking nominations of students who have shown remarkable character. All community members are encouraged to nominate deserving students. The act of outstanding character does not have to take place in a school setting. Nominations should include a narrative with as much detail to explain why the student is deserving of the recognition. Submit nominations to boe@bcso.net.

Farm Family asks for more parking spaces

Planning board raises sidewalk issue

By WILLIAM R. DEVOE
devoew@spotlightnews.com

Farm Family Insurance has received conditional affirmation to expand the parking lot of their Glenmont facility on Route 9W by 21 spaces.

The planning board awaits Farm Family's engineer's drawings of the expansion for the full approval. Farm Family said it needs the spaces for potential new employees.

"They did a nice job of laying that out," said Mathusa. "We amended the site plan to allow it."

Although there is continued pressure by the town to install sidewalks in front of the Farm Family property, planning board chairman Parker Mathusa said there would be no quid pro quo for the parking spaces.

"That's a separate issue and we want to keep those issues separate," he said.

Bethlehem's planning board has long advocated for sidewalks on the Route 9W frontage of the Farm Family property, which the town could install and maintain on the busy roadway.

There are a number of people who go from Farm Family to Town Squire Plaza for lunch, Mathusa said, and often they are passed closely by large vehicles.

"That's not a pretty picture," he said. "If you see a lady pushing a baby carriage and pulling a dog along the side of the road when a truck goes by, it's not a pretty picture."

Town of Bethlehem Supervisor Jack Cunningham said he met with Farm Family officials about six weeks ago. While sidewalks were not the reason for the meeting, Cunningham said they did come up.

"There is nothing specific now," he said. "Right now we don't have a plan to get sidewalks in."

Cunningham and Mathusa point to the ongoing Route 9W corridor study as a possible means to install sidewalks in front of the Farm Family property.

Though the study is still under way, both Cunningham and Mathusa said it will recommend "pedestrian pathways" along both sides of Route 9W.

Mathusa said he thinks it will give the town more leverage to have that recommendation in hand.

"The farming community does not like to give up anything," he said. "They like to preserve their land and I can respect that."

Victoria Stanton, spokeswoman for Farm Family Insurance Companies, pointed out at the meeting that Farm Family has long been a good corporate neighbor.

Efforts to reach her for follow-up comments were unsuccessful before press time.

IN BRIEF

Heart association touts 'Wear Red Day'

Even Nipper, Albany's famous RCA dog on top of the Arnoff building, will wear red on Friday, Feb. 1.

He and residents throughout the Capital District are invited to wear red and jeans on Friday, Feb. 1, "National Wear Red Day."

The American Heart Association sponsors the day, inviting people to donate $5 to help fight heart disease, the No. 1 killer of women in America.

In 2006, more than 300 Capital District companies participated in the event.

To sign your company up, call Meredith Cohn, the corporate events director at the American Heart Association, at 869-4046, or send her an e-mail at meredith.cohn@heart.org.

She'll help you appoint a company coordinator and get the event going at your company.

The money raised will help fund research, professional and public education, advocacy and community-service programs.

Actor to cohost telethon in Albany

Actor/comedian Fred Willard, now appearing in the FOX sitcom "Back to You" as local sports anchor Marsh McGinley, will co-host the Center for Disability Services Telethon at the Holiday Inn Albany on Wolf Road, on Sunday, Jan. 27, from noon until 7 p.m., on FOX23 News (cable channel 8).

Willard, known for his quick wit and expertise at improvisation, won an American Comedy Award for his role as dog show announcer Buck Laughlin in the movie "Best in Show." He has numerous film and television credits including roles in "This is Spinal Tap," "Waiting for Guffman," "A Mighty Wind," "Anchorman: The Legend of Ron Burgundy," "American Wedding," "For Your Consideration," "Everybody Loves Raymond," "Ally McBeal" and "The Simpsons." An alumnus of The Second City comedy troupe, Willard heads a sketch comedy workshop, the MoHo Group, at home in Los Angeles.

Learn to travel like superspy James Bond

By BILL GIERING
news@spotlightnews.com

Ask The Travel Guy is a lighthearted look at travel questions. The writer shares his knowledge of always being in the wrong place at the wrong time. Send your questions to askthetravelguy@spotlightnews.com

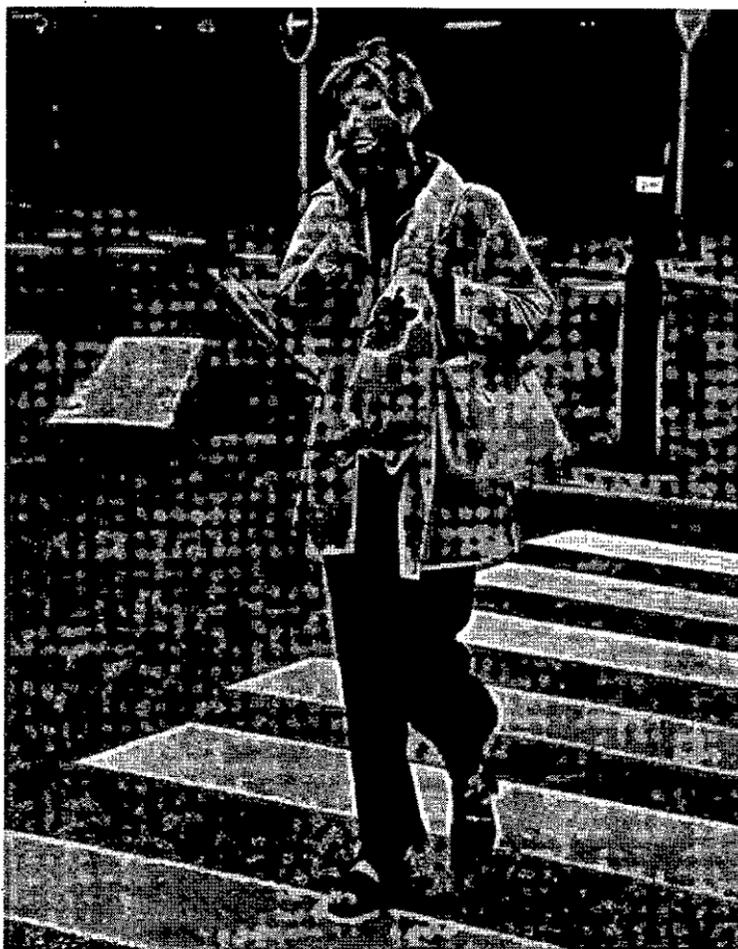

Question: Hey Travel Guy, I just retired, and my wife and I want to start traveling the world. We have been planning these trips for years and now's the time to start enjoying ourselves. Neither of us has ever been out of the country before, but we have our passports and we know where we want to go. Do you have any tips to avoid first timer pitfalls? We are planning to visit Ireland and South Africa this year.

Answer: Congratulations. What a wonderful point in your life; let the celebration begin. You have a few bucks, a girl on your arm and, most important, you have a great attitude about the future. Did you ever notice that happy couples are always talking about the future and unhappy people are always complaining about the past?

Sure, I have some international travel tips for you. Whether you are having a few pints in the pubs of Ireland or are on safari in South Africa, international travel can be exhilarating but stressful. Here are some tips that will help you avoid travel nightmares and make your first international trip a dream-come-true.

• Tip No. 1: Don't overpack. Save some room because you will come home with more than you left. And today, no matter where you are, there is almost always a store where you can pick up something you forgot to pack. So don't bring clothes for every weather condition that might occur.

• Tip No. 2: Don't overdress and make yourself a crime target. Don't wear flashy clothes and overdo the jewelry. You don't need to carry excessive amounts of local currency. Call ahead, but in most places your credit card is the best bet. Finally, don't leave your luggage and don't accept packages from strangers.

• Tip No. 3: Did you sign your passport and fill in the emergency information? Don't forget to make a copy of your passport, itinerary and visa, if required, and carry that with you in a safe place.

• Tip No. 4: Review your insurance coverage and confirm with your medical insurance provider that your policy applies overseas and covers emergency expenses like medical evacuation. If your policy does not cover you abroad, consider supplemental insurance.

• Tip No. 5: Don't forget to familiarize yourself with local conditions and its laws. While visiting a foreign country, you are subject to its laws. The U.S. State Department has useful safety and other information about the countries you will visit.

• Tip No. 6: Check with your cell phone company to see if your phone will work at your vacation destination. You have some choices about cell phones and their use in different countries. I like to rent when I travel to assure that my cell phone will be easy to use and not cost a fortune. Try www.cellularexpressphonerentals.com. It's easy and priced right.

• Tip No. 7: Another cool company is Qipit, www.qipit.com, a free service that turns your camera phone into a mobile scanner. The company allows you to make copies of your itinerary, passport and other important documents to make sure you are protected in case of theft, loss or other emergency by making it easy to access digital backup copies of these documents. The company converts them into enhanced easy-to-read digital copies that can be saved online, e-mailed or faxed right from your phone to anywhere in the world.

My final tip is a secret ... so don't tell anybody. Often when I'm traveling in a foreign country, I like to make believe I'm James Bond ... 007.

In my mind I am tall, handsome and debonair, on another mission to save the world. But always on the lookout for the clever and devious enemy who is out to foil my itinerary. Whenever I enter a plane, train or exotic hotel lobby, I quickly scan the room looking for future evildoers who are planning my demise. I check where the exits are for a quick escape. I check for ordinary objects I could use as weapons against my foe. I appear to be cool, confident and friendly but always aware of my surroundings.

As James Bond, I am well prepared, with research about my destination and about my mission, with a suitcase full of cool gadgets that may save me. Naturally, seductive women and intrigue are always just around the corner. Ladies in slinky black velvet cocktail dresses are always approaching me in the exclusive casinos I frequent, so I know all the romantic restaurants and hideaways where it is safe to entertain. I'm always one step ahead of the average guy.

I'm ready to be entertained by all the lush amenities the location has to offer but prepared and cautious of the dark side that exists in all men's soul... Bond, James Bond.

Family, dog reunited at adoption clinic

By JIM FRANCO
news@spotlightnews.com

Two months ago, Trooper went missing.

His owner, John Longton, let the 4-year-old German Shepherd run free on his 156-acre Shepherds Lane farm that sits off the main road in Slingerlands. He thought a hunter shot the dog because although he likes to run, Longton lives in the perfect spot for it, and Trooper always came back home.

That day he didn't.

Longton called the Mohawk and Hudson River Humane Society in Menands, which is where most municipalities across Albany County used to take strays. His daughter, Samantha, hung flyers up around town asking for help in the family's mission to find Trooper.

As the days turned into weeks, and the weeks into months, the family gave up hope of finding Trooper alive.

"I never thought I would see him again," Samantha said at a recent Peppertree Rescue dog adoption clinic at PetSmart in Glenmont.

Trooper had wandered into Bethlehem and was picked up by the town animal control officer. The full grown shepherd, who weighed about 80 pounds, had a decent enough temperament, even if he was a bit skittish about being in a strange place surrounded by strange people, so he was taken to Reigning Cats and Dogs, where the town now takes some of the better-behaved strays, according to Peppertree President Betsy Sommers.

Trooper stayed there for the shelter-allotted 10 days given so people have a chance to reclaim strays, and then he went into the care of Peppertree Rescue. Peppertree is an Albany-based dog rescue and adoption agency.

Peppertree, as it often does at venues throughout the Capital District, sponsored an adoption clinic Saturday, Jan. 19, at PetSmart, and Trooper was one of the many dogs they were showcasing for adoption.

And Longton's sister-in-law was one of the many people checking out the dogs — including Trooper.

"It took a moment for me to realize it was Trooper, but I had a feeling it was. I started petting him and he seemed familiar, and then I noticed his eye, which he hurt in an accident, and I can't tell you how good I felt," said Kim Zwack. "It was just an awesome feeling. I really can't put it into words."

When she knew for sure it was Trooper, she immediately called Longton, who had guests and didn't answer the first phone call, nearly didn't answer the second, figured if she was calling twice in such a short time, it must be something important.

"She said 'Trooper is here' and I honestly couldn't believe it," he said. "So we hopped in the truck and raced over and sure enough, here's Trooper."

When Longton and Samantha walked into the store, they spotted the dog and called his name.

Trooper just started "going nuts," Longton said.

"I'm just really, really excited to have him back," Samantha said while stroking Trooper's back.

Trooper, no worse for wear, though now neutered as per Peppertree policy, seemed hyped-up. On occasion, he jumped straight up in the air, his snout more than 5 feet off the ground, and spun around 360 degrees — a German shepherd pirouette.

Sommers said the way Trooper's story and happy ending, unfolded is a first since she co-founded the organization in 1999, but added it probably will not be the last time an owner makes an honest effort to find their wandering dog and can't. A change in policy at the Mohawk and Hudson River Humane Society increased the cost to municipalities to house dogs, so many towns look for other options for strays.

By state law, municipalities have to pick up stray dogs, designate a place to take them and care for them and pay that place to do it.

"With all the pressures of formulating a budget and the concerns that go along with it, animals are not a high priority with everything else they are facing," Sommers said of the smaller municipalities.

Animal control officers look for ways to house the dogs during the redemption period before they go to a rescue. The village of Ravena uses its department of public works garage to house dogs before they look to a rescue group like Peppertree, and Bethlehem uses Reigning Cats and Dogs, she said, adding some animal control officers will keep the strays in their vans while they try to find the owner.

With each municipality doing its own thing, it makes it difficult for the owners to know where to look for their pets that have been picked up, Sommers said, and that is a problem across the board.

For the Longtons and Trooper, it was a matter of the right time and the right place. As they finished filling out paperwork and put Trooper's leash out, staff and visitors to the store gathered around the new celebrity — glad of a happy ending.

John and Samantha Longton are reunited with their dog, Trooper, at a dog adoption clinic sponsored by Peppertree Rescue at PetSmart in Glenmont, Saturday.

WHERE LEARNING AND LOVE COME TO LIFE

Matters of Opinion Spotlight

Mom leaves the nest

It all started in the late summer of 1998, when Executive Editor Susan Graves had an idea.

"We are starting a column," she said. "It is going to be about parenting (a long pause). I am not really asking as much as letting you know what we need to do."

Within a few weeks, "Mom's the Word" was born at The Spotlight.

The column's author was a part-time beat writer named Kathy McCarthy, a solid reporter, who, between trips to school, activities and home, would churn out stories about anything we asked. School boards, town boards, local businesses and people all received stories with the same deft McCarthy touch.

But when it came to Mom's the Word, a new passion and flair poured from her fingertips to our pages. With each week came a new roller coaster of emotion from experiences with her two young boys and her family's interaction with the world.

It didn't take long for others to notice what Sue suspected. Statewide accolades came in the form of the New York Press Association's Best Column award in 1998.

This was only the beginning of things to come.

Kathy became our premier writer. If there was a hard story, a difficult interview or one that just needed a certain touch, Mom would handle it.

She interviewed difficult candidates, state commissioners and business leaders, and she was the only reporter at Spotlight to have a one-on-one sitting with the governor. Mom was always there.

After a few years of this, we had another idea.

If we had Kathy work with our reporters, maybe we could transfer her skills to others in our newsroom. It took some convincing, but Kathy hit the copy desk, with a catch.

"I am not giving up 'Mom's the Word,'" she said. "And my family comes first."

It took adjustment both on the job and home to make it work, but Mom made it work.

She would fill in full time when an editor was on vacation or sick. She would take cell phone calls to arrange play dates and transportation. All in a day's work.

As Christopher reached high school and Cormac hit middle, Kathy made a big decision. It was time to pass the column to someone else. Our readers were not happy (and neither was Mom sometimes), but it was time.

When Susan Graves retired in 2006, Kathy became the boss. As editor in chief, she took responsibility for a staff as well as her family. She tackled problems and issues with the same fervor, passion and flair she showed as a writer and columnist. Inside she was the same.

At first I would get office visits from Kathy. "I am not sure I am cut out for this," she said after one very long production day. "Are you sure you have the right person?"

I was sure. Mom didn't let me down.

She was tough when she had to be and was always an advocate for her people. Our staff strengthened under her leadership, and we built a team that will continue the tradition.

Her tenure at Spotlight is a great story of hard work and dedication paying off. I am glad to be the one to tell it.

Kathy will be leaving Spotlight on Thursday, Jan. 24, to start a new chapter in her career. She has touched so many lives in the Spotlight community over the past 12 years that it is fitting we just say, "Thanks, Mom."

Donate blood, save a life

By ARIC AERY

news@spotlightnews.com

The writer is director of donor services for the American Red Cross.

In November, Heidi and Marc Bonner welcomed twin boys into the world. However, the twins arrived three months prematurely and were immediately in need of blood products to save their lives.

"My boys are alive because people took the time to donate," said Marc Bonner.

The twins, who are still in St. Peter's Hospital neonatal unit, have already received four or five transfusions, with one or two more expected. The couple is optimistic that the twins will go home for the first time in about four weeks.

"There's a ton of need for the little guys," said Bonner. "Every little bit helps."

Accidents, emergencies and serious illness are never planned or anticipated, yet it is estimated that one in four people will need a blood transfusion during their lifetime.

January is a particularly difficult month to collect blood. Holiday travel, illness and inclement weather offer challenges to collect and maintain adequate blood supplies to meet the demands of the local hospitals.

Dunkin' Donuts has recognized these challenges and stepped up to help the Red Cross in their collections efforts. This January, Dunkin' Donuts has partnered with the Red Cross for the first-ever "Pint for a Pound" program. During the month of January, any person who donates blood at an American Red Cross donation center or blood drive will receive a voucher redeemable for a free pound of coffee at any Dunkin' Donuts in the Capital District.

"Dunkin' Donuts recognized the critical need for blood donors, particularly during the winter months when donations traditionally lag," said Dunkin' Donuts franchisee Jerry Burke.

Burke and fellow franchise owner Ralph Delima were the first to roll up their sleeves and donate at the kickoff of the partnership on Jan. 4 at the Everett Road Blood Center.

"I feel great to be part of such a worthy cause and hope that a lot of people come out and donate blood," said Delima, who owns stores in Schenectady and Rotterdam.

There are three types of blood needs. One whole blood donation can be separated into those three parts - red blood cells, platelets and plasma. Theoretically, one donation can save up to three lives.

Patients rely on volunteer blood donations so they can survive cancer treatments or recover from severe burn trauma. There is no substitute for blood, so the supply is dependent on the generosity of volunteer donors.

Like many young boys his age, 13-year-old Christopher Brown of Albany attends school every day, plays with friends and loves sports. Yet, with his bright smile and sparkling eyes, Christopher's existence is a story of triumph over the odds.

For over half his life, Christopher has battled with

Point of View

Non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma, a cancer of the lymphatic systems. He has needed numerous platelet transfusions to help him on his path to recovery.

When diagnosed with Non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma at the age of 4, Christopher began undergoing chemotherapy treatments. The chemotherapy, which destroys cancerous and healthy cells alike, began to lessen Christopher's count of healthy, functioning platelets. Like many cancer patients, he needed platelet transfusions to strengthen his body against the cancer and the treatments. The combination of chemotherapy and platelet transfusions helped Christopher into remission only months after his initial diagnosis with cancer.

In May 2000, Christopher's cancer abruptly returned, this time in the advanced fourth stage.

Christopher successfully endured chemotherapy and a bone marrow transplant. He received platelet transfusions throughout his recovery period as well as for six continuous weeks after being discharged from the hospital.

Christopher has now been in remission for seven years.

"How do you thank a donor for helping a child to have life?" said Sharon Darnetco, Christopher's grandmother and guardian. "A simple 'thank you' just isn't enough. ... If his story encourages one more donor to help one more child, then I'm happy."

January is nationally recognized as Volunteer Blood Donor Month in honor of all the selfless people that take time out of their busy schedules to donate this gift of life.

Niki is a regular blood donor from Latham.

"Being a blood donor is more than just a responsibility, it is my way of helping those in need," said Niki. I believe it is one of the most selfless things someone can do for another."

Niki also has a very personal reason for donating blood. When she was just 19 years old, she experienced extreme pain from severe stomach ulcers.

"I underwent six hours of intense stomach surgery," said Niki. "At that point, I was fighting for my life. If not for the generosity of blood donors and the graces of God, I would not be alive today."

Since her experience, Niki has made a commitment to regularly donating blood.

Statistics show that 60 percent of the total population is eligible to donate blood, yet only 5 percent actually do. Whole blood donors can safely donate blood every 56 days. Double red cell donors can safely donate blood every 112 days.

For those who have not donated, maybe you would consider becoming a first time donor. The process averages less than an hour. For information, or to locate a blood drive near you, call 1-800-GIVE-LIFE, or log on to www.donatebloodnow.org.

Neighbors for Peace support many causes

Editor, The Spotlight:

This letter is in response to the writer in last week's Spotlight, who criticized Bethlehem Neighbors for Peace for their choices of holiday charity donations. The writer made several inaccurate assumptions and provided inaccurate facts.

Pro-war advocates have repeatedly tried to make a connection between the 9/11 attacks and the war in Iraq. In fact, no connection has been found between Al-Qaida and Iraq prior to the 9/11 attacks. The perpetrators of the attack were primarily from Saudi Arabia. The reasons that George W. Bush used for sending our troops into Iraq were fabricated. There were no weapons of mass destruction.

The allegation that Bethlehem Neighbors for Peace members do not support the troops is also inaccurate. The most crucial way we support the troops is to continually advocate for their safe and immediate return home.

Additionally, many of our members show support for our troops by advocating for legislation that will provide them with better pay, better health care, better equipment and a limit to their tours in Iraq.

The so-called "silent majority of those who support our military efforts" does not exist. In fact, 70 percent of Americans are currently against the war and this includes many active military members and their families.

Bethlehem Neighbors for Peace carefully considered the options for donations during the holidays, and the choices made reflect the organizations commitment to promoting peace and justice through compassion, kindness, and respect for all people, including Muslims. The donations included: Capital District Food Pantry, Bethlehem Food Pantry, Iraq Veterans Against the War, a memorial fund for an Iraq veteran who committed suicide, phone cards for Veterans in VA hospitals, and two Muslim families with several small children.

Bethlehem Neighbors for Peace will continue to hold its vigil for peace on the Four Corners in Delmar every Monday from 5 to 6 p.m., and we will continue to advocate for peace through diplomacy, and respect for all people, regardless of the country they were born in, or their religion.

The war in Iraq continues and war against Iran may be imminent. Unless our country charts a far different course than the one we are currently on, one where pre-emptive war and torture are not acceptable, we had better prepare for Delmar to lose more of its heroes.

War is not the answer.

Remember King's words

Editor, The Spotlight:

How was your Martin Luther King holiday? Mine was quite somber, thanks to some news that I read in last week's Spotlight. I was shocked and dismayed, as I suspect many of your readers were, by the front-page article that you ran titled "No place like home." The article reported that a 45-year-old homeless man was dropped into a city garbage truck from a Dumpster where he had been sleeping.

The article reminded me of how much suffering there is in the world. Not just in our local communities, but across the globe in places like Iraq, Iran, Afghanistan, Gaza, Cambodia, and Darfur, just to name a few. The pain and suffering in the world is almost incomprehensible.

Regardless of your political views, I think we can all agree that there is far too much misery in the world. Especially considering Martin Luther King's famous words "Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere."

After reporting the incident, I was very heightened to see that the reporter took the time to add a description of several organizations that serve the area. These institutions represent real leadership in our community in working to limit the suffering of our fellow human beings. I salute all the staff working in these organizations, including Bethesda House, City Mission, Better Neighborhoods, and the Salvation Army. Their efforts are exactly what is required to make both Schenectady, and the world, a better place for all of us.

So what part do the rest of us play? Perhaps it's donating time or resources to one of the organizations mentioned in the article. Or something as simple as cleaning out the hall closet and dropping off some coats and gloves at a shelter. Or helping at a local soup kitchen through your church, synagogue, mosque, or temple. Or shoveling a neighbor's driveway.

Do something. And whatever you choose, know that it helps us all. It is important to remember, from time to time, that we are all connected. We share this same earth, breathe the same air, cry the same tears, and bleed the some blood. We are inextricably connected by the web of this beautiful and mysterious force called life. We must face our challenges together, with compassion and humility, and work toward the greater good. This week, we were all reminded of this great challenge by Martin Luther King; and for me, a homeless man who sleeps in a Dumpster.

Dr. King worked for the workers

Editor, Spotlight Newspapers:

Dr. Martin Luther King's unswerving advocacy for labor is often overlooked. He was committed to workers rights as a basic civil right. When he was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn., in 1968, Dr. King was there to support working people of color in the sanitation workers' strike. These workers had to endure appalling working conditions, and low wages. They regularly faced harsh discrimination. Their union was denied recognition by the city. The striking workers demanded a living wage, decent working conditions, and the basic dignity and respect denied to them by city officials. On the picket line, the workers wore placards that simply said "I Am

A Man." Dr. King championed their cause as part of a larger movement for economic justice and social equality.

Dr. King's "I Have A Dream" speech at the Washington Monument in 1963 is his enduring image in American culture — the somewhat safe notion of integration as an end unto itself. But in the years that followed, he formed a wider working class movement, combining the interests of blacks and whites. His stirring message warned that the forces that fought against unions had also tried to keep black people from voting.

Shortly before his death, Dr. King proclaimed to the striking workers, "You are demanding this city will respect the dignity of labor." The Memphis sanitation worker's strike ended after 64 days, with recognition of the union. The strike is credited with launching a groundswell of support for organizing public employee unions throughout the south.

The virtues of economic and social justice are what Dr. King lived and died for. These ideals remain just as relevant today.

Award-winning books make great reading

What Emmys and Oscars are to television and movies, the Newbery and Caldecott medals are to children's literature. According to VPL Youth Services Librarian Joyce Laiosa, the winners recently announced were bold and excellent choices.

"Good Masters! Sweet Ladies! Voices from a Medieval Village" by Laura Amy Schlitz is a fabulous book, different in style from most (Newbery) winners," Laiosa said. "I read it a couple of months ago and have been mentioning it to everyone as a potential winner. The work was originally written as a performance piece for fifth-grade students studying the Middle Ages. What makes it so unique is 'the voice.' Through the monologues you can picture a real medieval town — the adults, the peasants, the children, the upper class. You can imagine Voorheesville residents telling about their jobs and lives. The design of the book is beautiful and the illustrations define the times. It includes definitions and explanations of words and phrases. It does not need to be performed. Reading it was a delight.

"The Invention of Hugo Cabret" by Brian Selznick is a book for you to carefully observe the text and the pictures. You can't have one without the other. It begins with many illustrations as Selznick brings you into the story, into Paris, into the world of a young boy. The black and white illustrations have a softness about them that gives the characters vulnerability. It is a very different type of Caldecott medal winner. I think young people from third grade and up will enjoy this book, and look at it over and over again."

You will find a complete list of the winners and more comments from Laiosa on her blog at <http://vplpiedpiper.blogspot.com>

Teachers: Get Energy Smart!

During the school year 2007–2008, educators across New York State will gather at teacher centers, nature preserves, college classrooms, and even downtown offices to “get smart” about energy education. More than a hundred professional development workshops are expected to take place under the New York Energy Smart Students program. Energy Smart Students focuses on how to raise the level of students’ knowledge of energy efficiency and its impact on the environment. This unique program was created by NYSERDA (New York State Energy Research and Development Authority).

Workshop Content

Each of the three workshops is targeted at students’ different educational levels.

ABCs of Energy, Grades K–3

The ABCs are one of the building blocks of primary students. Why not teach the ABCs of energy at the same time? This hands-on workshop introduces basic energy content through fun and engaging activities that will lay the ground work for energy education at an early age. Students will apply classroom learning to their own lives through a family-oriented take-home activity.

The 4 Es of Energy, Grades 4–6

Do you know the 4 Es of energy? This interactive workshop promotes an understanding of energy’s relationship with the environment, our economy, efficiency AND the all-important “E” – education. You will use hands-on activities to explore energy forms and sources, global climate change and actions we can take to address the energy challenges we face.

Energy Trilogy, Grades 7–12

Energy – we all depend upon it every day, but what are the consequences for the global community’s growing demand for it? This interactive workshop will highlight the Energy Trilogy – how economics, efficiency and the environment relate to the energy challenges before us. Don’t miss this exciting opportunity to introduce your students to the impacts of their energy use and explore actions we can take to make a difference.

An Energy Smart Students workshop will raise your Energy IQ – and increase your ability to promote understanding and action among your students for their lives, now and in the future.

Each workshop centers on an innovative new curriculum created by the NEF (National Energy Foundation), a not-for-profit organization dedicated to the development and dissemination of supplementary educational programs and materials. Engaging hands-on activities that apply learning to a student’s life and experiences are modeled.

By attending, you will receive: an Energy Education Teacher’s Guide; an information-packed CD that includes the Conceptual Framework for Energy Education, basic information on energy and an Energy Glossary; color posters; and class sets of the Energy Action Challenge to use with your students. Instructional materials are correlated in an integrated manner to New York State learning standards in math, science, technology, global studies, English language arts, and family and consumer science.

Workshop Presenters

Workshop presenters are excellent, experienced educators from throughout New York who were selected to attend NYSERDA’s Energy Educator Institute in Albany last summer. To learn who will be leading workshops in your area, read the Energy Educators’ bios at www.getenergysmart.org. Click on Energy Education.

How to Sign Up

To find out when workshops are scheduled in your area, visit www.getenergysmart.org, phone 1-877-NY-SMART, or e-mail info@nyess.org. The website also offers an extensive array of free resources for educators, including lesson plans, newsletters, interviews with energy professionals, and much more. If the workshop you would like to attend is not scheduled in your area, inquire about how you or someone else in your area can become a hosting partner.

Voorheesville board of ed hears contract concerns

By JACKIE SHER
news@spotlightnews.com

After athletes from Voorheesville's various varsity and junior varsity sports teams stood to discuss their accomplishments during the fall season, the monthly meeting of the Voorheesville Central School District Board of Education took a more serious turn on Monday, Jan. 14.

Kathy Fiero, president of the Voorheesville Teachers Association and a remedial math teacher in the Voorheesville Elementary School, expressed her frustration and concern over the negotiations of the labor contract, which expired on June 30.

"Our primary goal in this negotiations was to identify areas in our contract where we do not compare favorably to other Capital Region schools, and to attempt to remedy those deficiencies," said Fiero.

Negotiations for a new contract have been ongoing since the end of June.

"As a board member and a member of the negotiating team ... negotiations do take time," said Jim Coffin, vice president of the board. "Put your thinking caps on and let's come to a resolution."

Kenneth Lein, principal of the Voorheesville Elementary school, discussed the importance and benefits of smaller class sizes, emphasizing the benefits of easier, stronger communication between students, teachers and parents, fewer students slipping through the cracks, and the evidence that smaller classes lead to higher levels of achievement.

"The research says that having a small class size doesn't magically make kids brighter and achieve more — it depends on what you're doing in [in the classroom], and we have a lot going on in the building and in mapping the curriculum," Lein said. "Combined with a smaller class size and the work that the faculty is doing, I really expect us to do well."

The board is considering a change in policy in the establishment of extracurricular student clubs and organizations, which would allow speeder establishment without approval from the superintendent.

The board discussed changing board members' terms from three to five years. Coffin said a three-year term is too short, because members barely got a chance to understand what the job is all about, but that five years is a long period of time and that it's difficult to get members to stay for more than five years.

The board will continue the discussion in future meetings.

The next Voorheesville Board of Education meeting will be held on Monday, Feb. 11, in the Voorheesville High School's cafeteria at 7:30 p.m.

IN BRIEF

Local venue seeking artists and artisans

Blue Dog Arts, a new retail art store in Delmar featuring locally and handmade arts and crafts, is seeking artists and artisans interested in selling their work on a consignment basis.

Blue Dog Arts has six local artists featured at the store. Tracie Killar, co-owner of Blue Dog Arts, is seeking to enrich the store by offering more local artists' work.

Consignment agreements allow artists and artisans to partner with retail stores, showcase their art, create a presence as an artist, and earn money selling their art. Working with artists on a consignment basis also allows a store like Blue Dog Arts the opportunity to increase inventory, carry more work by artists, and try new styles and products.

Blue Dogs Arts is seeking goods that fit in with an aesthetic that is both hip and unique. The store policy is to give 70 percent of the item's selling price to the artist.

If you are interested in consigning your art at Blue Dog Arts, e-mail Killar with your name, address, description of the items you are interested in selling, and digital photos or a Web site with your work, to tracie@bluedogart.biz.

Q: What is an electronic medical record and how will it help me?

A:

Many physicians in the Capital District are using a new technology called the electronic medical record, or EMR. The EMR is a computerized medical record which assists physicians in collecting information pertaining to your medical care.

More secure than a paper record, the EMR includes high-tech tools to monitor patients, intercept errors, provide immediate access to patient information, improve billing, and promote preventive medicine; overall, improving quality of care, enhancing patient safety and increasing efficiency.

Doctors are no longer working in the dark because a paper report isn't available or filed incorrectly in the office. Furthermore, the EMR gives the provider access to your files when they are out of the office, so your records are immediately available when they're needed.

The EMR also improves physicians' productivity by allowing better documentation that is standardized, legible and accessible by associates. Because the physician types the information into the EMR, it provides improved legibility which helps to reduce misinterpretation of clinical information, such as medication and dosage information.

All prescriptions are completed electronically as well. Your doctor can print and sign them or fax them directly to the pharmacy from the computer, speeding up the availability of your medication. Once the prescription is in the system, it is easy to renew. There is no need to question handwriting. This system also provides better documentation in prescribing medications.

With an EMR, your physicians will be able to electronically communicate, in a secure manner, with other physicians involved in your care. The EMR will eventually allow patients to communicate with their physician in a secure manner over the internet.

Computers and computer applications have changed the way we live. Today much of our activities are supported by computers. Medicine is no different. For more information on the EMR, you can visit www.communitycare.com.

Series takes viewers above the Arctic Circle

If you think it's cold here, talk to our guests this weekend. Two travelers to regions above the Arctic Circle share some pretty cool slide shows. All ages are welcome.

• Land of the great white bears

This Saturday, Jan. 26, at 2 p.m., professional wildlife photographer Gerry Lemmo will take you to the shore of Canada's Hudson Bay in northern Manitoba, where polar bears reign during the brief autumn season. Lemmo has traveled to five continents, photographing the natural environment and its denizens. His work has been published in National Geographic World, Audubon, The Nature Conservancy, Ranger Rick's, Adirondack Life and others.

• A Greenland odyssey
Melita Gesche is a retired physician and avid Arctic traveler who recently boarded a Russian icebreaker for the northeasternmost corner of Greenland — 81 degrees Lat. N. Her voyage included a landing at the Northeastern Greenland National Park, the largest national park on the planet. She also visited the native communities of Tassilak and Ittoqqortoormiit.

Join Ms. Gesche for a slide show about her adventures this Sunday, Jan. 27, at 2 p.m.

The program is part of our ongoing series in memory of the late Al Russell.

To this end, she says, open mics — or any outlet for emerging artists, for that matter — not only create better artists, but better people.

"The people in the community, their jobs are what they do, but their music is who they are," said Collins. "If people don't do what they're good at, what they can't express themselves, they're not happy. Open mics are a good outlet for people to do that."

Laura Colomb, exhibitions coordinator at the Saratoga County Arts Council, says workspace is the biggest challenge any artist faces, and open mics — for some artists, anyway — serve to alleviate that problem. Any time you can bolster the arts community in a municipality, you can work to anchor young, creative people to that area, she says.

"I think it's especially important in this area because there is a decline in the demographic of young people," she says. "So if you can nurture an environment where creativity is emphasized, you can encourage young people to stay."

"...if you can nurture an environment where creativity is emphasized, you can encourage young people to stay."

Colomb also says that a supportive arts community leads to more well-rounded citizens.

"If you get people involved in the art community, you give them the opportunity to think differently than they normally would," she says.

The Muddy Cup café, with locations in Albany and Schenectady, began its open mic nights on Monday, June 5, 2006. Josh Okun, hosts and, with his bandmate Tom Teta, performs as 1/2 Step Down, said the café hosted 35 performers the first night.

Okun echoes Collins' feelings about the artist community, and has used that familial feeling for activism in the area. Between November 2006 and January 2007, Okun and Teta hosted the Muddy Cup Open Mic Hunger Fight, a food drive with all of the proceeds going to the Regional Food Bank of Northeastern New York. They brought in more than 400 pounds of food, he says.

For Okun and Teta, open mics were one step on the path that led to their first five-song EP, "Beginnings."

"Tom and I had been playing together since we were in high school," says Okun. "We had about 20 to 30 songs that we wanted to whittle down, and put together a five-song EP."

Okun says the open mic scene helped 1/2 Step Down hone its craft and polish the songs for the album. Now the scene serves as a vehicle for promoting the band and the EP.

"It's cliché, but we are like a family," said Okun, a 24-year-old music industry major from the University at Albany. "A lot of people become regulars over the years. People start to really feel at home and, when they do, they start mentoring new people."

Okun says that because of this, he sees people of all walks of life intermingling.

"Open mics are a place to come if you've never played or have been playing for 30 years. They're a place where no one is going to judge you," he said.

Likewise, Collins says her open mics aren't just a mix of young and old, but of all segments of the community. She's hosted bluegrass and comedy acts; 16-piece jazz ensembles and solo acts with only a keyboard and microphone. Jazz scholar and film historian Hal Miller, an Albany native who has played with Santana, is a regular at the Lark's open mics.

"Each week we get between 14 and 35 performers of all talents — music, poetry, comedy, magic, body percussion and spoken word. If you've got talent, any talent, we'd like you come perform," he says.

Collins believes in the artists that grace her stage, and she's trying to get as many people as possible to see them.

"It's a little difficult attracting (non-musicians) to an open mic night," she says. "I don't think people want to pay for music when they go out. They want to see a live act, but they don't want to pay to see a live act. So at open mics, they can see some pretty talented performers without spending a dime."

Okun says the key to a successful open mic is that signature supportive environment — and endless promotion. Okun says he continually posts events on message boards, Web sites, and spreads the word using good, old-fashioned paper fliers.

"It's a service that we're offering. A service that, I think, people really want," he says. "Even people that are non-participants, they watch a few times and then come and perform music or write poetry. Or sometimes people watch and then they get the inspiration for a piece of music or a poem."

Spotlight on: one musician

By JIM CUOZZO
news@spotlightnews.com

Sports editor Rob Jonas spends most of his busy work week covering a wide range of Capital District athletic events from University at Albany basketball to many Section II high school activities like football and soccer. But if you're sitting inside the Lark Tavern on Madison Avenue in Albany on a wintry Wednesday night, and the moisture from the inside window glistens as a heart-wrenching breakup song or a ballad about a '66 Chevy can be heard, you are most likely listening to singer/songwriter Rob Jonas at the weekly open mic.

"It helps me blow off steam on a Wednesday night and allows me to have a social life," said Jonas, the 37-year-old sports editor for Spotlight Newspapers, who on four to five nights every week is most likely covering a local sporting event.

Jonas started playing piano at an early age and is a self-taught guitar player. In junior high school, he tried to form a house band, but all the pieces of the puzzle just didn't fit.

"I knew a drummer but not a bass or rhythm guitar player, so it never materialized," said Jonas.

Over the years, as the dream of playing in a band began to slowly fade, the desire to perform on stage lingered until one night, in the fall of 2004, everything changed. That was the evening when he began watching other musicians performing during an open mic at the Van Dyke restaurant in Schenectady.

"They had a piano there so I figured I would play a song for the piano, and that's what I did," Jonas said.

Although he had first-night jitters like most other musicians, the experience only fueled his desire to continue to play.

"After I performed, the host asked me if I had another song, so I got back up there and made up a song on the spot," said Jonas, who has written close to 40 songs since that night. "They said come back and do it again."

The open mic nights continued for a few months after that first performance, when Jonas was eventually asked by the Moon and River Café in Schenectady to sing. In 2006, he played his first paid gig at Valentine's, opening up for a rock band. Although Jonas doesn't subscribe to the belief that he will one day be a major rock 'n' roll superstar, the thought of performing live in front of thousands has crossed his mind once or twice.

Spotlight's sports editor Rob Jonas performing last year at Larklest in Albany. He frequents area open mic nights, and can be found with guitar in hand Wednesday nights at the Lark Tavern on Madison Avenue in Albany.

"It would be nice to feel like I am a musician who could travel the country and play sold-out shows, but nobody can do that right off the bat anymore," said Jonas, who performs more for the fun of it than the fame.

"I am not worried about selling CDs," he said. "I just want to put something out there and see what happens."

Jonas said he has met many people over the past few years from open mic nights that he now considers friends, and the social camaraderie is one of the main reasons he continues to perform.

"When I show up at the Lark Tavern on Wednesdays, I am waiting for someone to shout out 'Rob!' like they shout out 'Norm!' in 'Cheers.'"

His favorite open mic hangouts include Lark Tavern, the Daily Grind, the Muddy Cup in Albany and the historic Caffe Lena in Saratoga Springs.

"When you play at Caffe Lena's, you can say you performed on the same stage as Bob Dylan," said Jonas, whose musical tastes are varied and eclectic, including artists like Bruce Springsteen, John Hiatt, Lyle Lovett and Bonnie Raitt.

Jonas has one six-song EP to his credit and is working on a CD he plans to complete in the spring. As long as the cafés are accommodating to local singers and the crowds continue to be warm and inviting, Jonas said he will continue to make it to open mic nights.

"As long as I don't blow my lyrics," he said.

Big Returns

Many real estate professionals advise sellers that prospective buyers are no longer just concerned about kitchen conditions but are now equally concerned about bathrooms when they are sizing up a house. Homebuyers' expectations today are often defined by new construction in which bathrooms contain luxurious amenities. Thus, homeowners with an eye toward selling have good reason to remodel their bathrooms to increase the attractiveness of their homes.

The good news is that a bathroom remodel returns a national average of 85% when the house is sold. It exceeded in value as a home improvement only by a kitchen remodel. The bottom line is that a home will always sell for more with updated kitchen and baths.

Remember, I have the experience, resources and expertise to guide you through the remodeling process. Count on Cathy and the Cooley Team to show you how paying attention to detail will help separate your home from the competition.

AARP Tax-Aide seeks volunteers for 2008

AARP Tax-Aide, the nation's largest, free volunteer-run tax counseling and preparation service, is seeking volunteers in New York to assist in tax preparation and to become leadership coordinators.

Each year from Feb. 1 through April 15, AARP Tax-Aide volunteers prepare federal, state and local tax returns for low- and middle-income taxpayers, with special attention to those ages 60 and older.

Volunteers of all ages and backgrounds are welcome. You don't need to be an AARP member or be a retiree to volunteer. Tax counselors receive free tax training and become IRS certified by passing the IRS exam. They help customers one-on-one at tax sites and/or volunteer as Internet tax counselors. Volunteers are especially needed to assist with electronic filing of tax returns.

Last year, 1,600 AARP Tax-Aide volunteers helped more than 71,000 taxpayers at more than 500 sites across the state.

For information on becoming a local AARP Tax-Aide volunteer, call 1-888-687-2277 or visit www.aarp.org/taxaide.

Medicare mobility benefit available

All Medicare recipients should now be aware that if they suffer from conditions such as respiratory disorders, arthritis and cardiovascular disease, or if they have a mobility limitation and difficulty in propelling a standard wheelchair, they may be eligible to receive a power wheelchair or scooter paid with the assistance of Medicare.

This helps tens of thousands of people per month regain independence. If you have a condition that prevents you from functioning within your home and you are covered by Medicare Part "B" and private insurance, you could receive a powerchair or scooter with little or no out-of-pocket expense.

Medical necessity and reimbursement amounts depend on the individual circumstances and policies of beneficiary.

For information about this Federal Government Assistance Program, call 866-631-3022.

dreams of being a diplomat, McCarthy said her career path is a great tribute to a liberal arts degree.

"After studying languages, I worked in New York City doing publicity for Simon and Schuster," said McCarthy. "I also worked for the Gannett Center for Media Studies, and then my husband, Chris, and I moved upstate to Delmar."

With her two sons, Christopher and Cormac, still preschoolers, a conversation about supermarkets led to a Spotlight story OK from longtime editor Sue Graves.

"My first story was about the grocery stores in Bethlehem and New Scotland, which were Grand Union, Price Chopper, and Nichols," said McCarthy. "It was my first time going up to people and talking to them as a reporter."

As McCarthy and her family settled in to the community, she said she found reporting a great way to get to know a new area.

After Eagle Media bought The Spotlight, McCarthy launched her well-received column, "Mom's the Word," in which she shared her musings on motherhood, from the humorous to the frustrating, pushing the envelope and challenging other parents to think about pressing topics.

"My first column was about Bill Clinton shaking his finger at all of us, saying 'he did not have sex with that woman,' and how we would explain that to our kids," said McCarthy. "My second was about apple picking, and Sue asked me why it was so pretty and lyrical."

McCarthy's next gig was as part-time copy editor, which she combined with reporting. She returned to copy editing when Graves had some health setbacks, and in September 2005, she was named senior managing editor. When Graves retired in January 2006, McCarthy was named editor-in-chief of all 12 Spotlight editions.

"Growing the papers to 12 was something I was very proud to be a part of," said McCarthy. "I've loved learning about all the communities, and I'm so impressed with the commitment of the leaders and residents. People look for a mix of hard news and features from the papers, and you never know what will strike a chord and inspire them to take action, whether that leads them to contribute their time, make donations, or volunteer."

McCarthy said she has worked to impress readers with the fact that Spotlight reporters are responsible for delivering fair, balanced stories.

"The reporters are very professional," said McCarthy. "More than anything, they look at both sides of an issue and stick to the truth. Hopefully people recognize that commitment when they open our pages."

"I loved writing the columns, the features and the editorials, and I will truly miss that connection with people," said McCarthy. "I hope I've inspired them to take action by pointing out opportunities in their towns."

Tim Mulligan, who has served as managing editor since October 2005, has been appointed executive editor.

McIntyre said Mulligan's years with Spotlight Newspapers have provided a good platform for his new leadership role.

"Tim took us to a new level with our online edition, and as a managing editor, worked very well with Kathy (McCarthy)," said McIntyre. "It's a natural move for him from one role to another, and he's up to the challenge. He also has daily newspaper experience to bring to the table, and the ability to work in a fast-paced, quickly changing environment."

Mulligan earned his degree from Plattsburgh State University, where he majored in speech communications. His journalism career began as a reporter for the Malone Telegram. Mulligan then joined The Plattsburgh Press Republican as a copy editor and page designer. He then moved to Utica for a staff position at The Utica Observer Dispatch, where he was a news editor, and following that, moved into features copy editing and page design at the newspaper's presentation desk.

Mulligan then made the move to the Capital District, where he was named managing editor for Spotlight Newspapers. He now resides in Troy and has one son, Jonathan, 15.

"My goals are to continue the award-winning community journalism part of Spotlight Newspapers," said Mulligan. "With my past experience, I'm ready and looking forward to the challenge."

During his tenure as managing editor at Spotlight Newspapers, Mulligan has worked to upgrade the newspaper's Web content and accessibility.

"Getting Spotlightnews.com to where it is today is what I consider one of my greatest accomplishments as managing editor," said Mulligan.

An energetic and encouraging person by nature, Mulligan said his future goals include fostering a team environment among reporters.

"Our reporters work so closely in their own community beats, and that's important to stay on top of what's going on, but at the same time, we work as a connected unit here," said Mulligan. "We want to stay a closely knit staff."

Mulligan said he is pleased to announce the creation of a new lifestyle section, an expansion of the family entertainment story in every weekly edition.

"This will be a regular feature covering topics including cooking, travel, trends and technology, and gardening," said Mulligan. "The stories will be written in a straightforward, down-to-earth, informative format that answers the kinds of questions our readers have."

Mulligan said he hopes to become more familiar with the people that shape the character of each individual town.

"My biggest challenge will be meeting and getting to know all the people in the more than 12 communities we serve," said Mulligan.

William DeVoe, who has been the Spotlight reporter covering the city of Saratoga Springs and Saratoga County for 18 months, will take over as managing editor.

McIntyre is also looking forward to seeing DeVoe bring his background and talents to his position of managing editor.

"Bill brings a news perspective; he's a news man in his soul," said McIntyre. "He'll always look at things from this news angle. It doesn't matter if you're a reporter or an editor, if you've got the instincts to follow news, you'll develop that in other writers."

DeVoe received his bachelor's degree in English from the University at Albany. He served in the U.S. Army for three years as a tank gunner. DeVoe completed an internship at The Legislative Gazette, then worked for The Greenville Press as a news reporter for a year before joining Spotlight newspapers. In 2006 and 2007, DeVoe won a total of three awards from the New York Press Association for his news stories. The winning entries included coverage of a Greene County sheriff charged with DWI, and an accident in which a man pinned beneath a tractor was successfully rescued.

DeVoe lives in Troy with his wife, Jessica, and their two sons Kevin, 5, and Nathan, 4 months. He said his goals include spreading the word about the comprehensive coverage of all the weekly editions.

"We are a chain of newspapers, but there's a misconception out there that since the papers are done in a similar format, they're not specific to each community, and that's not the case," said DeVoe. "We have reporters out there in each individual community, covering school boards, government and elections, zoning and planning, health, and features people need to know about. We're far from a 'one edition fits all' mentality."

DeVoe said while established editions in Delmar, Colonie and Schenectady County have long been regarded as mainstays for local news, the newer Saratoga County editions are quickly gaining momentum.

"We have a strong readership in Burnt Hills, Ballston Spa, Malta and Milton, where growth and change is explosive and stands to affect the entire Capital District," said DeVoe.

The ability to work with a staff of seven reporters, plus freelance writers, some of whom are new to the field, was one of the reasons DeVoe sought the promotion.

"This is a great opportunity for me, and I enjoy nurturing new talent and seeing people get bit by the news bug," said DeVoe. "That's something that happened to me long ago, and I'm enthusiastic about what's ahead for the newspapers."

14 condominiums of six units each; and 10 apartment houses of eight units each.

Walsh said that project was withdrawn due to the possible Selkirk Bypass and an overall "lack of progress," and the builder came back with the most recent proposal.

Mathusa said he would have liked to have seen some of the lower-cost homes that were in the first proposal included in the most recent one.

"I was interested in the high-end and the low-end homes, because our comprehensive plan calls for a mixture of homes with different values," he said.

Mathusa said the least expensive properties in the development would be well above $250,000.

Mathusa said the next step is to determine lead agency in the SEQRA process and further review the proposal.

"And I'm sure that the state Office of Parks, Recreation, and Historical Preservation will be interested because of all the historic components of the Hillman Farm," said Mathusa, who had a paper route near the development and remembers going to square dances on the property.

"Clapper Road is a very special place for me, so I'm very interested in seeing it done well," he said.

Incorporated in 1967 by Charlew President Lawrence Lewandowski and brother Charles Lewandowski, Jr., Charlew Construction has built and sold more than 2,000 homes in 36 neighborhoods across the Capital Region, Walsh said.

He said he would like to appear before the Planning Board again in April or May of this year. If everything goes smoothly, he said, Charlew Construction could have shovels in the ground in 18 months.

"Certainly not sooner," he said.

Submitted photos.

By JACKIE SHER
news@spotlightnews.com

If you and yours are suffering from a nasty case of cabin fever due to chilly temperatures and bad weather, the Albany Pine Bush Preserve has the cure. The preserve has activities all year round to get you learning about and appreciating nature, whether it's outside tromping through the woods on a guided snowshoe tour (don't worry, you won't get lost), watching an educational film, or doing a hands-on activity the whole family can enjoy.

The Albany Pine Bush Preserve, located in Albany, offers an area people can visit for outdoor recreation, education and nature study. Located on an inland pine barrens ecosystem, it is home to an array of plants and animal life, including 20 rare species.

The Pine Bush Discovery Center offers a variety of educational programs to school groups, special interest groups, families and individuals. In the coming months, the Pine Bush Preserve Discovery Center is offering a number of activities for families.

"We have a lot of snowshoeing programs if people want to come out," says Wendy Borden, the communications outreach director for the Albany Pine Bush Preserve. If you're thinking, "I don't have snowshoes. This is going to be a big investment if my whole family is going to try it out," don't worry — the preserve has a whole stock of snowshoes for you and your family to romp around in.

"It's a good way for people to explore the preserve if they haven't been here before," says Broden.

The hikes are guided, eliminating the risk of getting lost. If there isn't any snow on a scheduled snowshoe day, guides are more than happy to lead walking tours of the preserve instead. The next session will be held Saturday, Jan. 26.

Other upcoming events include a wildlife-tracking program on Saturday, Feb. 2, led by Rowland Kayes, curator of mammals at the state museum. In honor of Valentine's Day, on Sunday, Feb. 10, a program about animal courtship will be held. The breeding season for barred owls, great-horned owls and screech owls, all residents of the Pine Bush Preserve, occurs during the mid-winter months. During the nighttime hours you're likely to hear territorial calls as male owls defend their territory. Join members from the Pine Bush Preserve for a night hike and learn more about the habits of these creatures and their mating calls.

The Pine Bush Preserve is always trying to work with its partners on various programs. For example, the preserve offers a course on how to use a personal global positioning system.

Teaming up with members from the Department of Environmental Conservation, the course not only teaches you how to use your GPS unit, but also shows you some fun activities you can do with your GPS. During the course, you spend time in the classroom and on the outside, so come prepared to spend some time in nature. Again, if you don't have your own GPS unit, don't worry — the Pine Bush can provide one for you.

The preserve has movie nights, about once a month. The next showing is "Over the Hedge," on Friday, Feb. 15.

Several programs offered require a small fee, but not all. The Discovery Center at the Albany Pine Bush Preserve is open six days a week, from Tuesday to Sunday and admission is free. Weekday hours of operation are from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.; weekends from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Pine Bush Discovery Center is located at 195 New Karner Road in Albany.

quickly and he gives me a different feel. He's willing to help you accomplish what you can."

"The heavier you get, the harder it is to find partners who can challenge you," said John Meys. "I guess the same thing goes for the better you get."

The incredible part is Meys usually beats Geleta, despite the weight difference.

"It's tough, but it's great because he teaches me a lot and is constantly trying to make me better," said Geleta, who is quickly becoming one of Section II's top large school heavyweights. "If I didn't wrestle him all season, I wouldn't be where I am now."

The training has worked well for Meys, as well. He pinned all of his opponents through the Shen Invitational to extend his streak to 42 consecutive falls.

Ultimately, though, Meys has his sights set on the state championships, where he hopes that he not only earns his second consecutive title, but also that Shen can earn another large school division team title.

"Hopefully, the team should do well at states," said Meys.

The possibility exists that Hunter won't be the only Meys standing atop the medal podium at states in Rochester, either. Younger brother Austin was also undefeated heading into the Eastern States Classic, and the junior already has a state title under his belt from 2005.

"That would be awesome," said Austin, who is wrestling in Hunter's old weight class at 171 pounds. "There's only a handful of brothers who have won it in the same year, so that would be a great accomplishment."

In a career full of great accomplishments, John Meys said it would be a fitting final act for Hunter to win a state title the same year as Austin.

"I think the boys get disappointed in their brothers' failures," said John. "I don't see any sibling rivalry between them. They're very quiet and humble."

Aggressive, efficient and humble. A fitting description for the new national high school record holder for career pins, Hunter Meys.

"If you put a lot of effort in, you can get a lot out of (wrestling)," said Meys.

Bethlehem boys prevail over Columbia

By MIKE CIOFFI

The bench players on a basketball team play a vital role in the team's success as they are asked to perform when starters are having an off night, are in foul trouble or are out due to injury.

The Bethlehem boys experienced two of those scenarios on Friday night, but managed to prevail with a hard fought 76-65 victory over Columbia in a Suburban Council Gold Division battle at Bethlehem High School.

The Eagles played most of the game without two starters who found themselves in early foul trouble. They were also without starting perimeter shooter Dan Lanchantin, who is out for the season with a torn ACL.

"I was trying to protect guys that were in foul trouble. When you change your personnel it obviously effects the flow of the game a little bit," Bethlehem coach A.G. Irons said. "Were a pretty deep team, but the five that were on the court to begin the game have been practicing together for the last two days so they're used to playing with each other."

In the first quarter, it looked as if the Eagles would cruise to an easy victory as they raced to a 17-point lead with two minutes to go in the first. The early advantage was due to the play of senior guard Joe Kane, the team's leading scorer, who was four for five in shooting with nine points in the first quarter.

Kane hit a three pointer on Bethlehem's first possession, just 30 seconds in, and then nailed a jump shot later in the quarter to make it 23-6.

"In the first, it looked like we were going to blow them out and I think everybody got that feeling. I think it was a good experience for us, knowing we can win close games," Irons said.

After Bethlehem's Connor Muncil knocked down a three with 4:52 left in the half, making the score 31-16, Columbia stormed back behind Joe Keefe, who tallied 11 of his team's 22 second-quarter points. Keefe finished with a game-high 28 points.

"Even though we gave up a ton of points in the second quarter, I still think we held our own," Irons said.

The Eagles (7-3 overall, 10-4 league) held a 36-33 lead heading into halftime after a 26-11 advantage after the first. They were outscored 22-7 in the second, with all of Bethlehem's points coming from the foul line.

Bethlehem was forced to sit Kevin Wendth and John Drazan (eight points, five blocks) after they picked up their second personal fouls early.

After halftime, Columbia started where it left off and tied it at 38 with 6:22 left in the third. After a missed three by Muncil, the Blue Devils got back-to-back scores in the paint by Barry King (14 points) and then a foul shot by King to knot it at 38. Drazan picked up his third foul on the play and was replaced by Matt Branigan, who added 16 of the team's 20 bench points.

"Matt has earned his place. He has been playing well since our Christmas tournament at Proctor, and we've been trying to get him more minutes. He proved tonight that he deserves more minutes. I thought he did a really nice job," Irons said.

The Eagles took control after Columbia (2-8, 4-10) tied it, outscoring the Blue Devils 19-9 for a 58-47 advantage after the third. Branigan paced the run with nine points, while Muncil added six. With 22 seconds left in the third, Kane made a steal and hit a triple before being fouled for a four-point play. He finished with a team-high 20 points and two threes.

"We looked at his statistics in the locker room and said he didn't have a Joe Kane night. It was an off night for Joe, and he's going to have an off night once in a while, we just have to ride that out," Irons said of his versatile star. "That's an average night for most guys."

Bethlehem held a 15-point lead in the fourth quarter after a basket by Kane. A three by Bobby Smith brought Columbia to within nine, but Wendth (12 points) drained four foul shots to make it 76-65.

The Eagles' next test comes against Mohonasen this week. "Were not looking past Mohonasen for a second. We have a week to prepare and that's what we'll be doing," Irons said.

Shenendehowa senior is always in the hunt

Effort, focus and a gift pin Hunter Meys to a national record

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

For someone who doesn't think of himself as a natural athlete, Hunter Meys certainly acts like one on the wrestling mat.

The Shenendehowa High School senior often makes quick work of his opponents, rarely letting a match go beyond the first round before recording a pin. That tactic has led to nearly 230 career victories and nearly that many pins, a national high school record.

"I'm usually focused on going for a pin," said Meys. "I'm more interested in going for backpoints (for a near fall) than going for the takedown."

"That's his style - he wants to get a match over quickly," said Shen wrestling coach Rob Weeks.

Meys' record-setting pin at the Shen Invitational Jan. 5 was a prime example of his wrestling style. A split second after the opening whistle, Meys took down his opponent - Ian Morgan of Cathedral in Springfield, Mass. - with an ankle pick. Morgan dragged himself out of bounds to prevent Meys from getting the pin on the initial move, but on the restart, Meys turned Morgan on his back. Within 50 seconds of the opening whistle, Meys had his 189th career fall to pass Steve Mocco of Blair Academy, N.J., who set the national record in 2001.

"I wouldn't say it has soaked in," said Meys following his historic pin. "I've been very fortunate to wrestle with coaches who can help me accomplish this."

Wrestling wasn't Meys' first sport. In fact, there was a point when he was younger that he wasn't involved in any sports.

"I'm not really naturally gifted (as an athlete). When I was younger, I tried a couple of sports, and I wasn't very good at it. So, I stopped for a couple of years."

I wasn't very good at it. So, I stopped for a couple of years. Then for Christmas in third grade, I gave my dad a gift by trying wrestling, and I found that I liked it."

His father, John Meys, quickly began working with his eldest son, passing on the knowledge and skills that helped him win a Pennsylvania State College title during his high school career in the 1970s.

"I would actually wrestle him a lot, and he had to pin me 10 times a session," said John, who

"I'm not really naturally gifted (as an athlete)," said Meys, who will be wrestling for NCAA Division I Boston University on a full scholarship next year.

"When I was younger, I tried a couple of sports, and is now an assistant on Weeks' coaching staff at Shen. "If it didn't hurt, it wasn't a pin, and if he didn't take advantage of a pinning combination I gave him, I'd probably punish him a little."

"It definitely helped a lot," said Meys. "It created my style of wrestling."

It didn't take long for Meys to show his skills on the wrestling mat. From the moment he joined Shen's varsity team as a seventh grader, he was a force in Section II, averaging 41 wins a season.

"Back when I wrestled in the 1970s, we didn't wrestle as many bouts as Hunter does now," said John. "My best record in high school was 24-1."

The last year and a half have been Meys' best. He didn't lose a single match on his way to winning the Section II and state 171-pound titles in the 2006-07 season, and he had yet to lose a bout entering the Eastern States Classic Jan. 12 - the toughest tournament Shen competes in before states.

As the wins piled up last year, so too did the pins. Meys closed the season with a 28-match pin streak to get him within striking distance of Mocco's mark - not that Meys always knew he was close.

"It used to be earlier in my career that there was another kid (on the team) who was keeping track of my record, but he graduated several years ago," said Meys. "So, I lost track until my coaches told me at the end of last season that I was close."

To get ready for his senior season, Meys started training with teammate Adam Geleta, who is nearly 100 pounds heavier than him.

"He's a good athlete," said Meys of Geleta, who wrestles in the 285-pound weight class. "He hustles, he picks up technique
