All-in-one parties popular with parents and kids

Jennifer Carraher wanted to do something special for her daughter's fourth birthday without turning herself - and her home - inside out.

Her daughter, Cassandra, loves princesses and playing dress-up. So Carraher booked a princess party at Tiny Tots Tea Room in Clifton Park.

"The fun factor coupled with the (low) stress factor made it a really good time," she said.

A growing number of places around the Capital District offer birthday parties that cater to the younger set. Kids can get makeovers. They can take cooking lessons. They can make personalized pottery and stuffed animals. They can play laser tag and video games and scale indoor rock-climbing walls.

There are a variety of reasons parents are turning to these types of parties instead of simply serving the traditional cake and ice cream at home. These parties take less time and effort. They ensure the birthday child will have a memorable day. They expose kids to new experiences.

All of this has turned birthday parties into a big business, and not just in the Capital District.

"It seems to be all over the country," said Bill Doherty, a University of Minnesota professor who has studied the trend. "It's urban, it's rural, it's rich, it's poor."

Empire Zone designation to spur new jobs in town

The Albany County Legislature approved an Empire Zone designation Monday, March 10, in an industrial section of the town of Bethlehem.

World Logistics Group Inc. is a light assembly and distribution company looking to expand its business in the Feura Bush area and bring nearly 300 more jobs to town. It's an area in Bethlehem that is still recovering from 250 recent layoffs at the nearby Owens Corning plant.

This will be the second Empire Zone designation in the town of Bethlehem with the first being designated for the pending Vista Park complex.

The bill to create the new zone in Bethlehem was sponsored by the area's legislator, Democrat Tom Cotrofeld, and the Legislature's majority leader, Frank Comisso, D-Albany. When presented to the floor for a vote, the bill was nearly unanimously adopted 35-to-1, with three legislators absent.

"The bill was designed to encourage the economy and bring more stability to the area," Cotrofeld said. "This is great. ... It's nice to see

Locals come out against bypass

Some residents say open space issues should be settled first

By JARRETT CARROLL

A large contingent of Clapper Road residents responded with a resounding "No" to the proposed Selkirk bypass at a Tuesday, March 11, public hearing at Bethlehem Town Hall. However, most of the residents agreed that improvements to the town's existing stretch of Route 9W were needed.

At the hearing, engineers and the town planner presented findings of the Route 9W Corridor Study to the public and discussed options for making traffic flow easier on the busy thoroughfare and other improvement concepts. Increased truck traffic is also a concern for the roadway.

Suggested improvements to Route 9W included the possibility of several roundabouts; new traffic signals; adding a second northbound travel lane from Feura Bush Road to the Delmar Bypass, or installing a second travel lane in both directions; and installing a raised or flush center median along several different sections of the roadway.

The residents crowding Town Hall did not shy away from giving their input.

Several suggestions from residents included creating the town's open space plan before making a bypass plan; making sure money is in place from corporate sponsorship before construction begins instead of hoping that economic development occurs; and asking if a bypass was really necessary at all.

"Shouldn't the town make the open spaces plan before mak-

Police Blotter

Driver crashes car, gets third DWI charge

Bethlehem police arrested a woman for her third DWI offense in Glenmont Saturday, March 8, after her vehicle was found off the roadway.

Looise M. LaPoint, 47, of Cohoes, was arrested for DWI, third offense; operating a motor vehicle with a blood-alcohol content of 0.08 percent or greater; and aggravated DWI, operating a motor vehicle with a blood-alcohol content of 0.18 percent or greater — all felonies.

Police say they received a call about a car going off River Road, and, when officers arrived on the scene, they found a vehicle crashed off the side of the road and another vehicle in the southbound lane with its emergency hazard lights activated.

The operator of the vehicle on the road said she called police because "she had seen the vehicle off of the roadway crashed and a female staggering around," according to the arrest report.

The driver told police the woman might have been intoxicated.

LaPoint identified herself to police when she was approached and said she was not hurt and did not want medical attention, the report states. Police say a paramedic did arrive on the scene "to determine if [she] was physically sound," even though LaPoint refused medical attention.

LaPoint was not injured during the accident, the report states.

When interviewing LaPoint, she was "staggering and slurring her speech," according to police, and she failed all of her field-sobriety tests and tested positive for alcohol. She was taken into custody and transported to the Bethlehem Police station after her vehicle was towed, the report states. She voluntarily consented to a chemical test.

LaPoint was processed without incident and was arraigned by Bethlehem Town Justice Paul F. Dwyer and sent to the Albany County Correctional Facility.

In other arrests

• On Friday, March 7, Colin Kerr, 22, of Troy, was brought in on a felony arrest warrant for first-degree criminal contempt.

Police say Kerr was spotted speeding down Elm Avenue in Delmar and was stopped near Meads Lane.

A name check revealed that Troy police wanted him on an active arrest warrant, the arrest report states. Troy police were contacted and confirmed that Kerr was wanted on felony charges, and he was taken into custody by Bethlehem police without incident.

Kerr was handed over to Troy police after being issued a speeding citation, the report states.

• Darnell Q. Brabbam, 17, of Glenmont, was arrested on Thursday, March 6, on an arrest warrant for second-degree assault, a felony, and fourth-degree criminal possession of a weapon, a misdemeanor.

Bethlehem police say Brabbam was located at a residence on Elm Avenue and was taken into custody without incident. Bethlehem Town Justice Paul F. Dwyer arraigned him and set a bail bond of $2,500, which was paid for by Brabbam's grandfather, who was present at the arraignment, according to the arrest report.

• Anthony L. Robinson, 52, of Albany, was arrested by Bethlehem police on Sunday, March 2, for fourth-degree larceny, a felony.

Police say they received a call about a Wal-Mart employee in custody for larceny in Glenmont, and when they arrived they found Robinson. An investigation revealed that Robinson allegedly stole $1,473.44 worth of merchandise from the store since Sept. 1.

He was transported to the Bethlehem Police Station for processing and arraigned in front of Bethlehem Town Justice Paul T. Dwyer. Robinson was sent to Albany County jail on $2,500 bail.

• Matthew W. Zakens, 25, of Selkirk, was arrested on Friday, Feb. 29, for DWI charges and speeding.

Bethlehem Police say that Zakens crossed a double yellow line on Elsmere Avenue near Kenwood Avenue and that he failed to keep right while driving above the posted 35-mile-an-hour speed limit.

When he was stopped, police smelled alcohol and said Zakens looked impaired, according to the arrest report.

He failed a field-sobriety test and tested positive for alcohol before being transported to the Bethlehem Police Station, according to police.

Zakens submitted to a chemical test, but police say it took him four attempts to take a Breathalyzer because he "wouldn't follow directions."

School indicates 4.2 percent tax increase

Bethlehem officials release tentative '08-09 tax rate

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

During the Wednesday, March 12, meeting of the Bethlehem Central School District's Board of Education, several tentative decisions were made, including a peek into next year's possible tax rate increase, which administrators say will be just over 4 percent.

The board also gave tentative approval to maintain the teacher staffing levels for three district levels for the 2008-09 school year, which they said would enable favorable class sizes.

Superintendent Dr. Les Loomis said it was important to maintain a positive teacher-student ratio in the district, which he said was an important aspect in the schools for both teachers and parents.

"I think it's very important," Loomis said about maintaining teacher levels. "I think if you ask teachers what is most important to them working at a school... it would be on top of their list."

Loomis said it is most likely a top factor when parents select a school district to move into as well.

The projected average class size, according to the district's Communication Director Matt Leon, is 19.2 students for kindergarten, 21.8 for grades 1 to 5, and 20.8 at middle school.

At the district's middle schools, where class sign-ups have just been completed, the average class size is estimated at 21.8, he said.

These numbers may decrease as student schedules take shape, according to Leon.

Giving tentative approval to the three additional special education classrooms and necessary staffing, the board said it would allow Bethlehem Central to serve more in-district special education students.

This will reduce costly out-of-district placements, according to Loomis.

A brief status report was given to the board in the beginning of the meeting by Loomis, who said the district is in good standing under New York State Educational Department guidelines and exceeds state performance indicators for graduation rate and drop-out rate.

He also said the district is currently scoring above the state objective for students with disabilities.

The district has been ranked second or third in each of the last three years when its academic assessments are measured against Suburban Council schools and a grouping of nine upstate comparison schools, according to Loomis.

"By nearly anyone's measure, Bethlehem Central has a top-notch academic program," Loomis said.

Pupil Personnel Services Director Rita Levay gave a brief overview of department goals that included building the district's capacity to serve students, reducing costly out-of-district placements, and providing high quality, cost-effective services.

Levay reviewed the necessity for a $1,055,933 budget amendment - an addition to the current budget that was approved last January - to cover unanticipated special education costs.

She explained that seven out of 15 students expected to return from out-of-district placements did not return and will continue going out-of-district. It can cost the school between $40,000 to more than $200,000 for the out-of-district students, she said.

Levay also said there was a more than 20 percent increase in the number of students with disabilities, 80 students requiring special education services have transferred into the district, and that nine new students require out-of-district placements.

"This is a cost-effective approach and it serves the students best," Levay said. "And it keeps the kids in BC. They are our students and this is where they belong."

On the revenue end, Assistant Superintendent for Business Steve O'Shea updated the board.

O'Shea said the district is projecting about $24.2 million in state aid for 2008-09, which represents the governor's budget proposal plus $100,000. He and Loomis said this was a conservative approach and that it may be possible to count on more state aid when revenue is discussed at this week's meeting.

O'Shea said that at this point, non-tax levy revenue sources total about $31.5 million. The tax levy is calculated after all other revenue sources are applied to the total budget amount, he said.

Loomis said he met with State Sen. Neil Breslin, D-Bethlehem, and that the school will get around $225,000 in additional BOCES aid from the state. He also said that there would be a $210,000 reduction in health insurance costs because the school is collaborating with several other area districts under a plan with CDCHP.

"We have better health risks in the consortium," Loomis said about why the costs were lowered this year for a budget item that is usually a very costly area of expense for the school.

The board of education will be voting on a 4.2 tax rate increase before the April board meeting, which is used if the budget has not been voted on yet, according to Loomis.

"I think that's a reasonable increase," Loomis said, citing the $93 million capital improvement project of the new Eagle Elementary school. He credited the Citizen Budget Group with helping to get the budget rolling early this year and keeping spending and taxes in check.

"For this board to be able to do that, even in these tough economic times," Loomis said, "shows how hard this board has worked and how effective the Citizen Budget group is."

Florist reopens following fire

Blaze damages second-floor apartment

Firefighters were called to 257 Delaware Ave. around 3:30 a.m. Wednesday, March 12, to douse what Bethlehem Building Inspector Gil Boucher described as a "content fire."

The florist shop, which has been open since July 1, has reopened and is running at full capacity following the fire.

"The call came in at 3:30, and they knocked the fire down very quickly," said Boucher.

The fire started in the apartment above Delmar Florist, occupied by Anthony D'Onofrio. D'Onofrio, unharmed in the blaze, awoke at approximately 3:30 a.m. to the fire and ran across Delaware Avenue to the CVS convenience store to call 9-1-1, according to Susan Jacobson, who owns the building.

According to a written statement issued by the American Red Cross, they are helping D'Onofrio.

Bethlehem police said that

Delmar Florist has reopened following a fire in its building's upstairs apartment, Wednesday, March 12. There was extensive smoke and water damage to the apartment. The flower shop suffered no fire damage and only had to close temporarily due to loss of power.

William R. DeVoe/Spotlight

when they received the call for the fire and arrived on the scene. "Flames were observed coming out of the windows of an upstairs room." The windows were quickly boarded up the next day after the fire.

One of the Bethlehem Police Officers gave D'Onofrio some of his own clothes while he waited for assistance from the Red Cross, an incident report states.

The official cause for the fire is under investigation, but officials have ruled it accidental. Delmar Florist owner Barbara Ostroff said the fire was likely caused by a space heater upstairs.

"I just want to thank the Elsmere Fire Department and the Bethlehem police for everything they have done. They were great and very supportive," said Ostroff. "They were unbelievable."

All of the florist's ceiling tiles had to be replaced, along with rugs, and everything had to be washed off, Ostroff said, describing the restoration project.

There was extensive smoke and water damage to the apartment. Fire crews had to knock out one window to fight the fire, and two others shattered because of the fire. The lots in front and to the side of the florist were littered with glass, water-soaked ceiling tiles and pieces of an air-conditioning unit that fell from a window on the building's north side.

The flower shop below suffered no fire damage, according to Boucher, but did suffer water damage and a temporary loss of power.

"It will take some time to recover the apartment, but the only reason the businesses are closed is because there is no power," said Jacobson last week.

Ostroff said the Delmar Florist reopened Saturday, March 15, after fire restoration crews completed their work inside of the store.

"I'm just glad nobody got hurt and we were able to open back up so quickly," she said.

Benefit planned for DeMeo family

Community rallies behind coach

By JARRETT CARROLL

carrollj@spotlightnews.com

The community is rallying around the DeMeo family following the news that Diane DeMeo had lost a long and courageous battle with cancer at age 51.

Long-time Bethlehem Central High School coach and Gunderland resident John DeMeo will be honored, along with his family, on June 8 in memory of his wife, Diane, and in recognition of years of community involvement.

Coach DeMeo has been a teacher and coach in the Bethlehem School District for more than 30 years, serving the last two years as the district's athletic director. Diane DeMeo lost her battle with cancer on March 7.

"John is a very humble guy and a private man... but there's a lot of people who have loved John and worked with him over the years," said Mike DeAngelis, who is organizing the event. "There are people coming to this from miles and miles away. Parents whose children remember John that graduated high school years ago and have graduated college and begun careers of their own."

The June event will take place at the Bethlehem Central High School Sports Complex at 700 Delaware Ave. A concert will be held to celebrate DeMeo's dedication to the Bethlehem community, DeAngelis said, including the many students who he has worked with in a variety of capacities.

DeAngelis said the benefit will feature the music of his band, Hair of the Dog, as well as The Lustre Kings, Rocky Velvet and the BCHS Hooligans.

"Since Coach DeMeo was such an Elvis fan, I wanted to get some rockabilly bands together," said DeAngelis. "I've enlisted more than 60 volunteers to help run the program.

... Really this is going to be for the whole community."

The concerts will take place from 1 to 5 p.m. on Sunday, June 8. The gates will open at noon. Tickets for the show are $20 for adults and $10 for students, and children under six are free.

Tickets will go on sale April 7 in the main offices at all Bethlehem Central schools, and they will also be available at Blue Sky Music Studios and the Delmar Marketplace, as well as at the door on the day of the concert. Money raised from the concert will go to the family.

In the case of inclement weather, the show will move inside to the Bethlehem High School lower gym.

DeAngelis said the benefit event will also be in honor of John and Diane's tireless dedication to their families and to the idea of putting "family first."

Along with music, he said, food and refreshments will be sold by the Bethlehem Central Boosters and there will be face painting and other children's activities.

"She was a calming force in our lives and always put others before herself. Her love and commitment to family was ever present and unconditional. Diane's compassionate and loving ways were an inspiration to all who knew her," said her family in a tribute. "We celebrate her life and the lessons she taught us. Her laughter and beautiful spirit will live in our hearts forever. Diane will be our angel for eternity!"

As a registered nurse at St. Peter's Hospital and Albany Medical Center, Diane devoted her life to caring for others.

A funeral service was held for her Wednesday, March 12.

For those interested in volunteering for the event or for more information, contact Mike DeAngelis at 477-4629 or deanmms@bcnsd.net. For those who cannot attend the concert, donations may be made to: Coach DeMeo Fund, First Niagara Bank, 197 Delaware Ave., Delmar, 12054.

School plays set the stage for winners

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
news@spotlightnews.com

Commentary:

From Robin's Nest

A lot of what is said about kids and sports is also true of kids and theater. Being a part of a theatrical production builds teamwork and self-esteem, requires practice and commitment, and involves the sale of baked goods.

Waxing nostalgic over my days in the high school drama club, I encouraged my sixth grader to get involved with the musical at her middle school. She did not want to audition for a part, but instead chose to join the technical crew. She signed up to work on the sets. I followed suit by attending a meeting for parents of children involved in the musical and signed up my husband to work on the sets.

The sets committee was a nice way to ease into being involved. Students did not have to attend all meetings since the logistics restricted the number of people who could be building, painting, etc., at the same time. This allowed Rachel to participate with minimal juggling of other responsibilities.

Then came running crew. Running crew are the people who run on and off the stage changing and positioning parts of the scenery and props. Running crew involves only short bursts of running in between a lot of waiting. However, members of the crew have to attend all the rehearsals so that they know when and where they need to run.

Needless to say, participating in running crew meant my daughter had to spend many hours at rehearsals. Fitting in homework and cello practice became a bit more challenging, meaning I had to nag her even more than usual. And just when I started to worry that maybe running crew for the musical was taking up too much time, Rachel announced excitedly that she had joined another technical crew, this time for a school production of the play "The Lion, The Witch and the Wardrobe."

No problem, I thought. According to the calendar I had quickly reviewed, the musical would be over and then the tech crew meetings for the play would begin. So, Rachel would move from one production to the other. She'd continue to be extra busy for one more month. We'd forge on.

But alas, I had only grasped part of the story. The tech crew meeting I saw on the schedule referred to the students who would be building the sets. Those students could not begin work until after the musical had ended. Rachel, however, was not on the sets crew; she'd been selected for the lights and sound crew. And lights and sound crew rehearsals for the play began a few weeks before the musical ended.

I found this out when Rachel said, "Yeah, so next week some days I have lights and sound from 3:45 to 5 and then running crew from 5:30 to 7:30."

I said, "But when I let you sign up for the play, it said tech crew wasn't starting until February."

She said, "That was for working on the sets. We can't use the stage to build the sets for the play until all the stuff from the musical is removed. But I'm not doing that, I'm doing lights and sound."

Working on one show was challenging. Simultaneous involvement in two productions was pure insanity.

I allowed it only because I have a soft spot for theater and I saw Rachel's participation as a great opportunity for her to learn new skills, meet other students, and feel a sense of accomplishment.

The students work so incredibly hard on these school shows, both on stage and off. A trio of students directed "The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe." One worked with the cast and the other two worked with the technical crew. All three student directors were eighth graders.

Yes, there was a lead teacher who guided and advised the students, but even she was quick to point out that the students built the sets, designed the programs, picked out the costumes, ran the sound board, operated the stage lights and the spotlights and pulled the curtains.

I caught some of the final dress rehearsal and then went to see the play all three nights. Each night the student actors grew more confident. It was wonderful watching them bringing their characters alive, having fun with their roles, and, by the last night, really hamming it up.

I got choked up watching other parents beam with joy as they watched their children perform. And although I could not see my daughter, I knew that she was just to the side of the curtains working the stage lights.

"Wait for the thunder and lightning scene," I whispered to my husband, and when it came I delighted in knowing that Rachel was flashing the lights.

After two shows working the stage lights, Rachel informed me that she would be up on the balcony working a spotlight for the final show.

I became quite nervous and shot all sorts of questions at her, each of which she answered without any trace of concern: You're switching roles? (Yes.) But you've been on stage lights since the dress rehearsals, haven't you? (Yes.) Did you get to practice the spots? (Sort of.) Do you know the cues? (You just light up the people on stage.)

Clearly all this theater stuff had boosted her confidence. She was obviously getting used to jumping in to new situations.

I remembered that on the night of the third performance of the musical, the student working the curtains was kept home due to illness. Rachel was asked last minute to handle the curtains along with her running crew duties. I was so proud of her for saying yes, when she could have easily declined.

And who would have guessed that I would get such a thrill to catch a glimpse of my daughter, dressed completely in black, dashing across a dark stage to position a piece of scenery. "That was Rachel who just brought the bench on!" I remember whispering excitedly to my spouse during the musical.

Each night of the play the members of the technical crew were recognized on stage before the start of the second act. And you can be sure that each night, near the end of intermission, I would abandon my bake sale volunteer duty to go inside the auditorium and watch my child take her bow.

Not every student can get an acting role in the school play, but every student can certainly play a part in the production. In that light, theater gets a winning score.

New map system streamlines data IN BRIEF

Town moves to digital format that can combine layers of information

By JARRETT CARROLL

The system that the Town of Bethlehem is implementing to streamline its information for employees and make data more accessible was demonstrated during the Wednesday, March 12, town board meeting.

A Geographic Information System, or GIS, is a multi-layered digital map that implements a broad spectrum of information and spatial data into an easily accessible format.

The system is currently set up as an intranet system that can be accessed by town employees and used on a "view and query" basis, said Jason Baum the town's technician and GIS specialist.

"You're probably familiar with GIS," Baum told residents during a PowerPoint presentation. "Like Google Maps, that's a GIS."

The town takes information developed by contractors, such as Saratoga Associates when they helped create a comprehensive plan, and uses it to continually update the GIS. The town is also in the process of digitally scanning thousands of engineering plans and blueprints from projects into the system. Supervisor Jack Cunningham said the scanning process should take around three years to complete.

"Better informed decision making, that is really what this is for," said Baum. "The idea is to make that information actively available in the field."

Baum said that rugged wireless laptops with GIS could be used on site.

The system has a variety of practical uses throughout the town and is used by different departments, including Town Hall and the highway, police, water and sewer, and public works departments, Cunningham said.

"We've been actively building this system for about three years now - long before I got into office," said Cunningham. "We are mapping out the entire town."

The supervisor said the town has been investing into GIS over time and that other towns, such as Colonie and Guilderland, use similar systems. During the meeting, Baum said that Colonie was a few years ahead in their GIS and have advanced to the point where real-time information is being uploaded into it.

Baum said he hopes to bring Bethlehem up to speed to do the same.

Information such as roads and maintenance; water and sewer lines; zoning districts; topography; electrical systems; home assessments; land uses; and other types of infrastructure information are all being integrated into one database system accessible by all departments.

"In theory you could throw everything on one map, but, of course, you wouldn't be able to see anything," Cunningham said.

In addition to scanning maps and documents, global positioning system units, or GPS, is being used to import detailed mapping and images for things like outfall mapping, which are maps of water and sewer and storm water output from culvert pipes throughout town.

Board member Sam Messina asked how the information would get from the GIS specialists to the town workers in the field who need it.

"The town has invested a lot in this. Our problem was getting the information from the GIS professionals to other professionals," Messina said.

Outreach and training are the focus for the solution, Baum responded.

"I'd like to do some outreach and training to different departments ... and also solicit their suggestions," Baum said. "This application is more of a view and query. ... You need something to extract the info so [department heads] can make a better informed decision."

Currently, the way the system works is that a specific range of data is requested and then the GIS compiles all the pertinent information and creates a three-dimensional readout of what was requested. It can also combine requests such as road deterioration and the zoning map or storm water discharge and population density.

"It's like maps on a computer," Baum said. "It's easier access to higher quality information."

Bethlehem Historical Association changes March program

The intended speaker cannot be present for this month's scheduled program at the Bethlehem Historical Association Thursday, March 20. Instead of a program on "The Ladies of Albany and the Army Relief Bazaar of 1864," which will be offered next season, the substitute program will feature a slide lecture titled "The Way West - 1758."

The program examines the transportation routes of upstate New York during the French and Indian War. This year is the 250th anniversary of that conflict. Robert E. Mulligan is retired from the New York State Museum where he was curator of military history. He traveled to and photographed local places important to the fighters of the colonial era, and important to later settlers of the western New York frontier following the wars.

The program will be held at the Cedar Hill School, 1003

River Road, Selkirk, beginning at 7:30 pm. The program is free to the public.

For information, call the program chair at 439-3802.

Art association to meet at library

The Bethlehem Art Association will meet at the Bethlehem Public Library, 451 Delaware Avenue, Delmar, at 6:45 p.m. on Thursday, March 27, for critiques of member works by Gail V. Roberts, G.G. Members are invited to bring a maximum of two pieces to discuss.

Nina Stanley will be conducting a drawing workshop on Saturday, April 26, at the Delmar Presbyterian Church. For details or to register, call Jacqueline Smith at 489-1882 or Bob Lynk at 439-3948. Call now, participation is limited.

The 2008-2009 BAA planning meeting will be held on Wednesday, April 2, at 7 p.m. at the Delmar Presbyterian Church.

Matters of Opinion Spotlight in the

Monday, Monday

"Oh Monday morning, Monday morning couldn't guarantee

That Monday evening you would still be here with me."—The Mamas and the Papas, 1966

On Monday, March 10, we woke up with a governor firmly seated in the state — one, who, regardless of your opinion of his conduct or policies up to that point, was ours to keep as long as the majority of voters would have him. And it appeared as though the majority was going to be behind him for a long time. He went up against a competent opponent in the Democratic primary, Nassau County executive Tom Suozzi, but won with 81 percent of the vote. A 70 percent majority voted for him in the general election — a mandate, most called it — where he was pitted against former Republican Assemblyman John Faso. When he took office in January 2007, the self-described "steamroller" looked to be eyeing the White House.

By the end of the day, we knew that Eliot Spitzer had done something so terribly wrong that it "violates my obligation to my family and violates my or any sense of right or wrong."

When we went to bed that evening, it was with the uncertainty of Spitzer's political future. As the week progressed, that future cemented itself — the governor submitted his resignation amid allegations of money laundering and the transporting of an individual across state lines to engage in prostitution.

As much as Monday, March 10, was earth-shattering for some New Yorkers, Monday, March 17, was ground-breaking for all of us. On that day, we witnessed the inauguration of New York's first African-American governor, one who promises to nurture an atmosphere of fellowship in state politics and — being legally blind himself — work to advance the quality of life for New York's disabled citizens.

During Paterson's first press conference as Governor-elect, he was asked if he had ever patronized a prostitute. He answered, "Only the lobbyists." This was a watershed moment for New York. It was a bittersweet acknowledgment of the shortcomings of some, and a humorous transition into what we hope will be an honest and forthcoming period under Gov. Paterson.

While it would be easy to be mired in the past, our thoughts are on the future. Our thoughts are with both of these New Yorkers as they deal with this difficult time in their lives. But, unlike the Spitzer family, our eyes and ears, and certainly the voice given to us within these pages, will be with Gov. Paterson as he not only weathers this storm himself, but leads the rest of New York as well.

Spring a good time to go green

By JENNIFER DEFORGE
news@spotlightnews.com

The writer is an employee of Spotlight Newspapers.

With spring fast approaching, it is only natural for the topic of "going green" to be brought up. There is no reason that all of us cannot at least start living a green lifestyle. If you look "going green" up on the Internet, there are many sites that have all sorts of tips and products in order to adjust to this lifestyle. Not to mention that it is healthier to live green than how we have been living, and we could all use a little help in becoming healthier.

I know trying to live a more healthy and earth-conscious lifestyle is difficult — especially if you are already used to doing things a certain way, but start out small. That's what I'm trying to do.

My green lifestyle is still a work in progress — I don't remember to practice environmental habits all the time, but I do think about it a lot.

I've seen television shows, and have read articles in magazines and on Web sites saying that the Earth is in worse shape than originally thought, and that scares me. When I think about that, I make sure my trash actually makes it to the garbage can and I put my cans and bottles aside to return to the grocery store.

As years go by, the problems that industry has caused have been become much more apparent. Many people agree that the environment is taking a turn for the worst. More mild winters, more humid summers — weather in the Northeast and elsewhere is becoming very unpredictable. These things can affect all of us. Pollution, littering and carelessness affect plants, animals, farming, health, water supplies and normal day-to-day living.

An article posted on www.americanprogress.org listed the Top 100 effects of global warming, which include shocking changes that came as a surprise to me. These include the vanishing of certain types of wine, due to the changes in growing patterns in certain areas; a shortage of baseball bats because the trees they are made from are becoming endangered; a shortage and eventual disappearance of wild Pacific salmon due to warmer weather; more weeds instead of forests and flowers; and more mosquitoes. The disappearance of a number of different animals could happen as well. These include polar bears, penguins, frogs, the Arctic fox, gray whales and koala bears.

That American Progress list also included some of the effects of global warming that are by now well known: the melting of northern and southern Arctic regions and glaciers, as well as more frequently occurring natural disasters and sickness.

Who would actually want these things to happen?

It is frightening to think that things we have become accustomed to enjoying and the places we have grown up studying, seeing and visiting may not be around anymore — and sooner rather than later. I don't want to think that some day my children (if I have them) and their children won't be able to enjoy the things I did or visit some of the places that I have because they no longer exist or are in the process of being destroyed. With this in mind, it helps me strive harder to be more aware that I need to help out in the fight to save the planet.

Keeping these thoughts in mind, here are some things that can be done to begin to better the situation. Though effects may not be seen in our lifetime, we should start becoming more conscious of future generations. The steps you take do not even have to be big. Every little bit helps. Examples include:

- The standard: recycling. If your area has recycling programs included with waste management, take advantage of them. In addition, some states offer cash for bottles and cans. It is a quick, easy way to make a few dollars for coffee and prevent unnecessary waste from building up in landfills or being left on the side of the road.

- If possible, walk to your destinations. If you live close to work, use a bicycle. It is a great way to keep your body and the Earth in tune. It may not seem like you are making a difference by not driving, but every little bit helps.

- Turn the lights off when you are not home or leave a room. It cuts down on energy usage.

- If it's affordable, use solar panels to aid in heating your home.

- Try switching to energy-efficient lighting and light bulbs. They can be a little pricey, but they will save you money in the end.

- Make sure your home is properly insulated and draft-free. Drafts waste energy and money.

- Try using natural cleaning products. They have fewer harsh chemicals, which means they aren't as damaging to the environment.

- Use cloth bags for groceries. You can also reuse your paper ones.

- Don't litter. Communities have trash receptacles to keep the town beautiful and trash free.

- Buy locally grown foods. This supports your neighbor's way of life and it is healthier for you because fewer or no pesticides are used to grow their food.

These are just some of the ways we can help our world. Many, many other things can be done as well. The catch is we all have to do them. It would not be as effective otherwise. Web sites such as www.greenhome.com give you room-by-room tips on how to make your home more "green." Some of those tips are similar to the ones mentioned above and some include buying "green" products such as hemp shower curtains, organic cotton clothing, and products made from recycled plastic/glass/paper. They last just as long, if not longer, than regular commercial products.

Companies and businesses are also "going green." According to an article on CNN.com, the Top 10 green companies are Honda (Japan), Continental Airlines (USA), Suncor (Canada), Tesco (Britain), Alcan (Canada), PG&E (USA), S.C. Johnson (USA), Goldman Sachs (USA), Swiss Re (Switzerland) and Hewlett-Packard (USA). According to the article, these companies have gone above and beyond what was required and expected of them. They have worked hard to make their products more efficient, safe and clean. They are serving as models for other major corporations and should influence smaller businesses to start moving in the same direction.

I know that most of the things I have said you already know, but we still aren't doing them. The problems with the ecosystem are not getting better, and if we don't start doing something fast, the Earth as we know it will take a turn for the worst. The problems are multiplying — and fast. If one of us did at least one of these things every day, that would bring a vast improvement and the world would be a happier, healthier place.

Receiver of taxes needs to stay local

Editor, The Spotlight:

Former Gov. Eliot Spitzer's 2009 budget (Assembly Bill No. 9806 and Senate Bill No. 6806) contains items that greatly concern me.

Part T of the budget changes the way taxpayers pay their town, county and school taxes. This budget contains bills that will eliminate the local receiver and collectors of taxes. The former governor wants tax collection to be at the county level across the state.

My key objection to this proposal is that the legislation abolishes the position of elected receivers and collectors without a vote of the people. The state constitution now requires a referendum to abolish the position of receiver of taxes. The current budget bill supersedes the state constitution "Bill of Rights for Local Governments" and mandates the elimination of an elected official without a taxpayer vote.

If passed, this proposal would eliminate my position at the end of my term in 2012. The town board would then have the power to appoint a receiver. I feel the integrity of the office will be compromised with the position becoming an appointed one. The county would be given an incentive to encourage the centralization of collection of taxes. The county is opposed to this centralization.

I believe this will change the public services that the homeowners have become accustomed to in the Town of Bethlehem. We pride ourselves with helping the new homeowners, helping the seniors, helping with STAR exemption questions, helping with reprints of receipts, helping with payment info for income tax forms, etc. If the county is appointed to collect your taxes, I believe all the services will be different.

Here are my two main objections:

People have the right to vote on if they want the position of receiver of taxes to be eliminated. The former governor is taking away your right to vote for the position.

People have the right to continue to receive the efficient public services from the Office of Receiver of Taxes that they have received for the last 50 years at the local level.

This is where you come in.

I ask that you consider writing or e-mailing your state legislator of your opposition of this proposal in the budget. If you like the services that you have received from the Office of Receiver of Taxes over the years, we need to fight this. Passage of the budget is scheduled for April 1.

Please call me at home at 767-0511 if you want further info or have any questions.

Eagle Scout says thank you

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to thank Jarrett Carroll, reporter for The Spotlight, for the coverage of my Eagle Scout Project in last week's publication (Local Scout earns Eagle status, March 12).

I would also like to thank Hillary Snare and Charles O'Hare from the Good Samaritan Adult Lutheran Home. Without their initial support, the project would have never happened. I would like to thank the residents of the Good Samaritan as well. Their interest and support during the project made it worthwhile for all involved.

Thanks are also due to the companies that donated to my project including Lowes, Home Depot, Price Chopper, Staples, Hannaford, Wal-Mart, Domino's Pizza and Brueggers's Bagels. Also, I would like to personally thank the people and organizations that donated to my project including Mr. Tom Clements, Mrs. Teri Smith, Mr. Ken Wickham, Mr. Bob Sorge (Cullen & Dykman, LLP), Mr. Patrick Seely (Hacker Murphy, LLP), Mr. Larry King (Citibank Smith Barney), Mr. William Hafner (Hafner Valuation Group, Inc), Mr. John Mako (Cushman & Wakefield, MAI) and Mr. Patrick Raymond (Raymond Law Firm). Without all of your generous donations, my Eagle project would have been far from possible.

Finally, I would like to thank my family, friends and the Scouts of Troop 58, Troop 71 and Troop 75. They gave up their own time to lend me a hand with a project that would have been impossible on my own. I would especially like to thank Mike Knight Sr. and Mike Knight Jr.; Mike and Patrick Joyce; Kyle and Julie Landrigan; Donal Erickson; Alex Cole; George Warner, my uncle; George and Rosemary Warner, my grandparents; my sister, Mary Beth; and my parents, Jim and Karen Dombrowski for all their extra help with my project.

One final note, I would just like to correct an error from last week's article. The amount of donations totaled $1,422.98 and the cost of supplies totaled $1,426.39, far more than the published $189.12. So, we actually overspent by a little more than $3.

Thanks again for all the support. The project turned out great.

Shaped Beam Surgery

Today's Powerful Tool for Cancer Treatment

With pinpoint precision, the high-resolution beam shaper targets radiation directly at cancerous tumors and lesions. This sophisticated technology allows for more uniform doses of radiation in a much shorter period of time.

WHAT IS SHAPED BEAM SURGERY?

Shaped Beam Surgery is one of the most technologically advanced stereotactic radiosurgery systems available today. It delivers high-doses of radiation beams at tumors in the body – without surgery and without anesthesia.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

Using robotics, image guidance, and highly sophisticated computer software, clinicians target tumors in the body. The patient lies on a robotic couch that automatically aligns the radiation beams with the tumors. No invasive head frame is needed for treating brain tumors. The patient breathes normally during the procedure because the system accounts for respiratory movement.

The system then continuously shapes the beams to match the size and shape of the tumors from all angles. This ensures that the tumors receive the fully prescribed dose of radiation. All the while, the surrounding normal tissue is spared.

Shaped Beam Surgery is effective even with complex-shaped lesions in difficult-to-reach locations of the body.

HOW LONG DOES IT TAKE?

Treatment time varies from 15 to 45 minutes depending on the tumor site. (And for some patients, only one treatment session may be needed.) It is a painless, outpatient procedure so patients go home the same day.

Water-quality statements untrue

Editor, The Spotlight:

In the Feb. 27 edition of the Spotlight (Town to upgrade water equipment), Supervisor Jack Cunningham stated that the town's water is safe, and it is good water.

Again, he is making statements that are not true.

The town water is over chlorinated, stinks and does not taste good. I contacted the Town Water Department recently and got no positive results. I finally spoke to a plumber and was told I needed to install filters to take out the strong chlorine odor and taste. I did so at a cost of $200, and now my water is fit to drink.

I have talked to other townspeople and workers from a local home-improvement store and was told a lot of people have bought and installed filters. Others are buying bottled water. Apparently, Supervisor Cunningham has a problem detecting odors and tasting foul water. He should talk to the citizens of the town before making untrue statements.

How about reimbursing town citizens for their expenditures to have good water for drinking and bathing? Citizens of the town should be concerned about the long-term effect of over-chlorinating, and their health and that of their children.

IT'S POTHOLE SEASON (AGAIN)

Secular, spiritual relationship in question

Editor, The Spotlight:

We are the governing body of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Bethlehem. We are writing regarding a recent set of incidents at Bethlehem Central High School that we believe highlight a crisis of priorities in our town and school system, and call into question once again the proper relationship between the secular and spiritual in our culture.

We understand that two female senior varsity athletes were cut from their respective teams last week due to their commitment to participate in a mission trip to do hurricane relief in Mississippi over the school's April vacation.

It is our understanding that there are several varsity games for each team scheduled during the school vacation, and that these young women would have to miss these games. As a result, according to team policy, they would be required to be benched for an equal number of games. We understand that these two varsity veterans were told in so many words that they either played on their respective teams or went on the mission trip.

They opted for the trip and were cut.

We are absolutely appalled that in our nation, where religious freedom is the first freedom protected in the Bill of Rights, a secular authority can make a teenager choose between playing a varsity sport and the free exercise of her religious convictions. We believe that the message sent by this action is that the school district holds the value of participation in school athletic programs higher than religious conviction and that service to the team (and coach) trumps service to God and service to victims of hurricanes. If that is indeed the position of the school district, our community is in serious trouble indeed.

Even the man most connected to the spirit of team dedication set his players' priorities in the following order: God, family and the Green Bay Packers. Lombardi himself would be shocked over this action. As a school district and as a community, we should be ashamed.

Fundraisers take steps in the right direction

Lung Association to hold stair-climbing fundraiser

By JACKIE SHER
news@spotlightnews.com

Running in a race or participating in a walk for a cause is a classic form of fundraiser, and it works, but here's a new concept: Climbing stairs to raise money.

The American Lung Association of New York State is hosting an event Saturday, March 29, called Climb UAlbany to raise money for lung disease research, education and advocacy.

Whether you or someone you know has been affected by lung disease, this is a fun and doable way to support an important cause. Many climbers are choosing to participate in honor of a "lung champion" — someone they know who has passed away from lung disease, or is currently fighting it.

"For over 38 million Americans suffering from chronic lung disease, just taking a single breath can be a struggle, so that's why we're hosting this stair climb at SUNY Albany," says Catherine McLaughlin, Community Outreach Manager of the American Lung Association of New York State.

This is the first stair climb taking place in Albany, but it has been taking place annually in other parts of the country for the past three years.

"We are looking to make this our signature event," says

McLaughlin.

The stair climb will take place in the 22-story Colonial Tower at UAlbany. Several teams are climbing it for time, while others are simply climbing it to support the advancement of healthy lungs. Anyone can participate, regardless of their physical shape.

The team that has raised the most money so far is Team MoJo, which is made up of five women from the Best Fitness gym in Schenectady — three instructors and two gym members.

"The reason I started [Team MoJo] was because my mother passed away from lung cancer 13 years ago, and I've never been able to do any kind of fundraiser for this particular cause," says Joanne LaBel, captain of Team MoJo.

LaBel and one of her team members stumbled across a flier in the gym for the event and immediately got involved. The name "Team MoJo" started out as a joke, but now seems quite fitting.

This particular group of women has, without a doubt, been gaining momentum and energy in their fundraising goals since they took this challenge on, vying to be the No. 1 team in terms of the amount of money they donate and also in terms of practice — they've been using the stair-climbing equipment at the gym frequently, and have also been practicing on real stairs, which has apparently proven to be quite difficult, even for an aerobics instructor.

LaBel said she wants to assure people, though, that anyone can do it.

"It's the cause, and it's the challenge," said LaBel about participating in the fundraiser.

The American Lung Association is still registering teams to participate, and to start, all you need is a team name. After you've chosen your team (which can have as many or as few members as you'd like), visit www.alanys.org to register your team and set up a "climb Web page."

"We're really proud of the online registration form we have. It's pretty cool because when a person registers as a team captain, they create a mini Web page off of our own page for themselves to use for fundraising," says Brian Marchetti, spokesman for the American Lung Association of New York State.

From there, family, friends and co-workers can easily visit your page and make a donation to your team.

The event takes place Saturday, March 29, at 9 a.m. at the UAlbany Colonial Quad at 1400 Washington Ave. in Albany. For more information, visit the American Lung Association of New York State's homepage at www.alanys.com.

The center can be accessed off the district's Web site or by going to: http://www.rcscsd.org/BudgetInformationCenter2008_09.htm

The Web site includes information on the development of the budget, budget information meeting dates and the work of the Budget Advisory Committee (BAC).

The Web site will be updated frequently.

Pre-K students complete 100th book

Pre-school students at Pieter B. Coeymans Elementary School completed a milestone recently by finishing their 100th book since Jan. 2.

Teacher Michelle King said the students read all of the books while in school with assistance from student teacher Jennifer Piller and teaching assistant Diane Stumbaugh.

Through a joint program with Scholastic books, the students' effort will help save 100 acres of rainforest, as Scholastic is donating funds to preservation efforts for every class that reads 100 books through the program.

Ready To Move

At least one month prior to moving into your new home, decide which items are going with you and which are going to charity, a garage sale, or other family members. When it comes to packing, tackle the job one room at a time. Begin with the least used items in the garage, basement and attic. Then proceed throughout the rest of the house ending with the kitchen. For your convenience, equip yourself with a variety of cartons, packing tape, bubble wrap and large marking pens. If possible, try to arrive at your new home one day before your belongings to check that the utilities are connected and all the major appliances are in their correct places. Moving can be an emotional and trying time for an individual or family, so being organized and prepared will help alleviate some of that anxiety. Moreover, it is also essential to have a professional real estate agent working for you to make your real estate transaction and transition smooth from contract to close. Remember, The Cooley Team is here to help you every step of the way. We offer the professionalism you demand and the service you deserve.

NOW IS THE TIME TO MAKE YOUR HOME AN ENERGY SAVER

HOME PERFORMANCE WITH ENERGY STAR® REDUCES ENERGY USE AND COST BY UP TO 40 PERCENT

For residents who want to improve the comfort, energy efficiency, and overall performance of their homes, Home Performance with ENERGY STAR® offers comprehensive and quality solutions with significant financial incentives.

Sponsored by the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSERDA), Home Performance with ENERGY STAR helps households (one- to four-family homes) reduce energy costs by up to 40 percent.

“Our specially-trained contractors are accredited by the Building Performance Institute and take a ‘whole-house’ approach to home energy improvements,” said NYSERDA President and CEO Paul D. Tonko. “Using tried and tested building science principles, they examine how the house operates as a system, testing the energy efficiency, as well as the health and safety of each home, before and after any improvements are made.”

The first step is to schedule a comprehensive home assessment with participating Home Performance with ENERGY STAR contractor, who will assess insulation and air infiltration levels, ventilation, heating and cooling equipment, air flow, appliances and lighting. Using the latest diagnostic tools, the contractor will identify what improvements can be made, the cost of making those improvements, and what kinds of financial incentives, such as low-interest financing, are available.

“Contractors who participate in this program are able to provide financial incentives that other contractors cannot and they test the home when they’re finished to verify the results of the improvements,” said Tonko.

Is your home experiencing the following problems? If so, Home Performance with ENERGY STAR is the program for you.

- Ice damming- Icicles or ice build-up can damage roofs and eaves due to lack of insulation, air sealing, and/or ventilation problems in the attic. This means you are losing heat through your attic, causing snow and ice to melt on your roof.

- Drafty or cold rooms- Cold rooms or drafts can be a result of several things, including leaky doors, windows, lack of insulation, or leaky ductwork.

- High heating bills- Despite rising oil and natural gas prices, your furnace or boiler may be inefficient, especially if it is ten years old or older. High heating bills may also be a result of heat leaking out of your home due to lack of insulation, or air sealing problems.

For more information about Home Performance with ENERGY STAR and a list of participating contractors, visit www.getenergysmart.org or call toll-free 1-877-NY-SMART (1-877-697-6278).

If you live in the Capital Region, there's one place you can go for smart solutions for saving energy while protecting the environment.

No matter where you call home, whether you own rental property or your own home, we can show you how to save energy this winter and all year long. We have financial incentives, low-interest loans and great ideas to help you lower your energy costs for years to come.

Act now for financial incentives and low-interest loans to start saving today.

World Logistics Group Inc. moved into the warehouse in Feura Bush a little over a year ago, but with its new Empire Zone designation they plan on going bigger and better. Local lawmakers are hailing the sporting goods distributor as a "regionally significant distribution operation." The company will also be "wiring up" MP3 players into snow suits at its Bethlehem site and say they will ultimately bring nearly 300 jobs to town.

when we can encourage people to create jobs."

Empire Zones are geographically defined areas within New York that qualify businesses located within the zones to be eligible for tax breaks paid for by the state. The program was designed by lawmakers to lure businesses to the state and to specific areas of the state.

Cotrofeld was elected to represent District 34 — which lies entirely within the town of Bethlehem including parts of Elsmere, Delmar and Slingerlands — after Jack Cunningham stepped down to become the town's supervisor.

Cunningham said he sent a letter to the Albany County Legislature on behalf of the town supporting the new Empire Zone designation.

"They moved over there right around the time I took office," Cunningham said, adding that the company was interested in an Empire Zone designation in order to expand.

"They are going to be distributing snowboards and wiring up snowsuits with MP3 players," said Cunningham. "The area is already industrially zoned, and this will help bring back some more jobs in the area."

Cunningham explained that the Empire Zone designation means that World Logistics Group will now be eligible to receive state assistance on their taxes. However, because the state is picking up some of the tab, Cunningham said, the local town tax base won't be affected.

Bethlehem will still receive its taxes from the company, not to mention the effect of having an additional 300 employees driving around town.

George Leveille, the town's economic development director, said it is always good to have jobs brought to the area. He said that World Logistics Group has already benefited the town, and the new jobs will only build on that benefit to the area.

"They moved in about a year ago in a small way," said Leveille, indicating only a limited number of employees currently work there. "More importantly, this is a building that ... has been vacant for two or three years."

The company moved into the 300,000-square-foot warehouse after a stationary and paper products company moved out nearly three years ago. The previous company's tenure had been brief, according to Leveille.

"This is a real positive outcome with what was previously a disappointment," Leveille concluded.

World Logistics Group representatives did not return calls on when the expansion of jobs will begin.

The bill passed in the county legislature as Local Law A of 2008, and it grants specific access to Empire Zone benefits to a "regionally significant distribution project."

Although this isn't Cotrofeld's first sponsored bill to pass the Legislature in his first term of service, he said it was the first bill he sponsored that "directly affects the town of Bethlehem."

"We're really breaking some nice new ground here," said Cotrofeld.

Bypass

ing a bypass plan?" one resident asked.

The town announced in February that it would appoint the Citizens Advisory Committee on Conservation (CACC) to help work on an open space plan, but several area farmers and large landowners have been critical of CACC because they say they are not properly represented in the advisory group.

At the next day's town board meeting on Wednesday, March 12, Supervisor Jack Cunningham said the town might create a subcommittee made up of farmers and landowners.

Several residents also expressed concerns that their opinions and comments were either not being documented or taken seriously by the town, and some asked where the money for the proposed improvements would come from.

Jim Donovan, a senior landscape architect with Wilbur-Smith Associates, presented the plans during the public hearing and fielded many of the questions from residents.

"Transportation systems are an important component of the community," Donovan said during the presentation's introduction. "It's assumed ... that a lot of future development of the town will occur within the 9W corridor."

He said all of the proposals were consistent with the town's comprehensive plan, but, he said, the town might want to consider the residents' recommendation that the open space plan be in place first.

Steven Wiley, who lives off of Route 144, said he was worried about the cost of the project.

"It seems to me that we need to get real about taxes in this town and in this state," Wiley said during the meeting. "We're talking about spending $20 million or so to move trucks with the hopes to pay it off with the promise of future economic development."

Town Planner Jeff Lipnicky told residents the truck traffic has been an issue for years and that the neighboring municipalities of Coeymans and Ravena did not want the trucks on their roads, either.

"We've had no success in asking them to take our trucks," Lipnicky joked at the meeting. "We've been working on this for 20 years."

Donovan told residents that a new bypass route would reduce the traffic burden on Route 9W, which would divert at least 200 vehicle trips and lessen the need for major capital improvements on the road.

Cunningham said the current study has been going over a year and that it is only a series of recommendations, not a finalized plan. He said currently there is no money for the suggested improvements and that a plan needs to be put in place for when finances can be secured.

"These are a series of recommendations to be implemented over time (if approved). Unfortunately, there's no money set aside for it," said Cunningham. "Once this plan is approved and adopted, we can forward it to the DOT."

Jarrett Carroll/Spotlight

The approved plans would then be used as a tool to apply for state grants and allow the county Department of Transportation to budget money for it.

"These projects would be way, way too expensive for the town taxpayers alone," he concluded.

The recommendations from the study suggested that a new Thruway interchange could be constructed to divert the heavy truck traffic from the area, but several residents pointed out that there are no such plans with the New York State Thruway Authority.

Lisa Evan, who lives near Henry Hudson Park, asked why the bypass was necessary at all.

"Why not look at no bypass years, was a viable solution to traffic woes and whether or not it was necessary.

A CDTA bus, number seven, goes from Albany to the Towne Center Plaza's Wal-Mart and to the neighboring Price Chopper.

"If we look at the law enforcement costs," one resident said, "I don't know if we need bus services."

Donovan said more bus lines could be implemented with more frequent stops to help alleviate traffic on Route 9W.

"If the comprehensive plan was so great, we shouldn't have to re-zone," said another resident about the proposals. "The Selkirk bypass has worried the residents of Bethlehem for far too long. ... So I say remove it, make it dead, and let's not create another bypass again."

He also said that the bypass should not appear on any maps or proposals for disclosure purposes.

Town clerk Kathleen Newkirk, who described herself as a resident first, and said plans need to be in place for inevitable development that will occur in the area.

"As advancements come and development comes," Newkirk said. "We have to prepare for that."

John Vadney of Selkirk expressed his frustrations over the bypass plan and said letters and comments from previous public hearings were not being heard.

"Stop calling it the Selkirk bypass because we don't want it," he said. "I sent in petitions with between 750 and 800 people and everyone said they did not want the bypass. ... Why did we send those letters? Where do we turn? If this sounds like rhetoric, I think I'm learning it from [attending] these meetings."

Comments about the project or requests for more information about it can be sent to jlipnicky@townofbethlehem.org, or to the town planner at Town Hall.

and look at the routes that currently exists and improve them and use them," she said at the public hearing.

Bill Hillman, who lives off of Clapper Road and described his family as farm owners for the past 85 years, said that landowners have to disclose the possibility of a road coming through their property to potential buyers.

"Imagine your property or business is in line with this bypass ... which may or may not happen in 20 years," Hillman said. "Close your eyes tonight and imagine you are in line with this road."

Hillman said that the proposed plans have "already snatched a multi-million dollar property deal from my family," because of disclosure problems with a possible bypass.

Residents also asked if the bus service from Albany's south end, which Donovan said has more than doubled in recent

Some parents lament the move toward birthday extravaganzas

By JACQUELINE M. DOMIN
dominj@spotlightnews.com

The explosion of entertainment options for birthday parties in the Capital District makes Joan Newman nostalgic.

Newman raised three kids, who are between 25 and 35 years old now. She remembers throwing birthday parties for them in her backyard, playing games in the woods. She worries that today's kids might never know the simple fun of such things as three-legged races and pin the tail on the donkey.

"It's not crucial to childhood, but it would be a pity," Newman said.

Newman, who teaches child development as the director of educational psychology at the University of Albany, said there's nothing inherently wrong with kids having their birthday celebrations at restaurants and party centers, especially when kids have the chance to interact with one another and play games.

"At least they can run around, be kids," she said. "It's noisy, it's stimulating. That in itself is not bad."

But Newman thinks there's something to be said for taking the time to plan a one-of-a-kind party at home instead of booking an elaborate bash at an outside venue.

"That's not doing anything unique for your kid," she said. "There's nothing creative about going somewhere and

"At least they can run around, be kids. It's noisy, it's stimulating. That in itself is not bad."

being one of five kids to take the class there."

It can also be dangerous to send kids a message that their birthday is cause for a huge blowout every year, she said. When she was growing up, she didn't necessarily even have a party every year, let alone one with professional entertainment and dozens of guests.

Bill Doherty, a professor at the University of Minnesota who has studied children's birthday parties, is also wary of the sense of entitlement such parties may give to kids. He talked to one parent who recalled her son saying that his party that year was nice, but the next year he wanted to go to a horse barn, and he figured the following year he'd have his party at the Mall of America.

Doherty said the pressure to plan such parties can weigh on parents. If parents are feeling stressed about planning parties, that could be a sign that it's gotten a little out of control, he said.

Newman suggested as a rule of thumb that the number of party guest should be limited to the child's age plus one. Another good idea is to make sure the party doesn't "overly commercialize things." She suggested activities like decorating apples or clothing.

Doherty agrees with the idea of simple entertainment. In one neighborhood near him, seven kids had birthdays in a two-week span. So, the parents got together and decided to host one big party at the local park, featuring nothing more than cake, ice cream and games.

"Kids said it was the best party they ever had," Doherty said.

"There are always a million questions," Shea said. "Kids want to know if they bite and what they eat."

Allyson Thiessen of Colonie booked Shea for her daughter Laurel Genthner's 13th birthday party in February and came away marveling at the way the guests took to the animals.

"It was such a fantastic experience," Thiessen said. "It's not the thing that you would normally get at a party."

Thiessen said two guests couldn't stay overnight, but they made sure to come for the earlier part of the party so they had a chance to see the animals.

Weeks later, the girls are still buzzing about the party, Thiessen said, and they're making plans for their own unique celebrations.

"Before this, we just had gig-gly sleepovers," Thiessen said. "Now it's almost like a competition. The other parties have to be theme parties, too."

their three-course meal (vegetables, sandwiches and dessert), Cassandra got to ring a bell to signal the end of each course. When the girls put on an array of fancy gowns complemented by hats, boas and wands, Cassandra had the first choice of clothing.

Cross said she lets the girls dress however they want, even

"The fun factor coupled with the (low) stress factor made it a really good time."

Jennifer Carraher

if that means heaping on layers and layers of accessories.

"I'm a firm believer in letting kids be who they are," she said.

When Jessica Shea was a kid, she was a self-described country girl. Shea turned her childhood fascination with snakes and other animals into a business called Reptile Adventures. She brings snakes, turtles and frogs to area birthday parties, teaching kids about the creatures and letting them pose for pictures with her snakes.

Historical Association to meet in March

The Bethlehem Historical Association invites the public to attend its regularly scheduled March meeting, Thursday, March 20, at 7 p.m. at the Cedar Hill Red Schoolhouse, 1003 River Road (Route 144) Selkirk.

The meeting will feature a slide lecture on "The Albany Army Relief Bazaar of March, 1864" by Christine Robinson.

During the Civil War there was no Red Cross, no Salvation Army, in fact, no nation-wide charity/relief organization of any kind. To meet the demands of war upon America's fighting men and their families at home, the United States Sanitary Commission was formed. The ladies and gentlemen of the commission raised money to care for wounded soldiers, and widows and orphans of the North. They also supervised the disbursement of charity in the field, and established soldier's hostels and aid stations.

The ladies of Albany organized a giant fundraising bazaar during the winter of 1863-64, which raised proportionately more money per capita than any other city in the Union.

Robinson will discuss both the commission and the bazaar, with slides, artifacts and reproductions of the era. She is curator at the Saratoga National Historical Battlefield Park.

There is no charge. For information, call 439-3802.

Local pols: new governor brings new hope

Local lawmakers laud Patterson; look to his leadership

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

With many residents across New York still reeling from news of former Gov. Eliot Spitzer's downfall in a prostitution scandal resembling a tabloid story, the reality was sinking in for local lawmakers putting together the state's budget.

"I think there is a feeling of relief. ... It was obvious Gov. Spitzer lost the moral high ground, and I think he did the right thing stepping down," said Assemblyman John McEneny, D-Albany.

McEneny's district is entirely within Albany County, consisting of the towns of Guelderland, New Scotland, Berne, Knox, Westerlo, and Rensselaerville and part of the city of Albany.

He said he is glad the ordeal is over, but said the state is facing severe economic hardships and tough decisions will need to be made.

"The first two days [of the scandal], it was the shock and awe ... by the third it was very, very different," McEneny said, indicating a timely budget process was in jeopardy. "This recession is something that is very real, and it becomes more real every day."

"Right now, do we go for education or for health care? That is a very hard decision to ask of anyone," he continued. "A lot of tough decisions are going to have to be made. The money has to come from somewhere."

McEneny said that former Lt. Gov. David Paterson, who became New York's governor Monday, March 17, is someone who can bring everyone together and get the state back on track.

"He's a brilliant person. He has an absolutely wicked sense of humor - in a positive sense. ... It diffuses anger," McEneny said. "People pay attention when he speaks."

The assemblyman said he believes Paterson can help bring together both sides of the aisle for budget talks.

One of Paterson's colleagues, State Sen. Neil Breslin, D-Delmar, also said Paterson is the right man for the job.

"I served with David in the Senate for 10 years," Breslin said. "He has the ability to bring people together without a lot of arm twisting. And the result is good governing."

Breslin said that his prayers go out to the Spitzer family, "especially Silda and the children."

Paterson was the Senate's minority leader before becoming lieutenant governor.

A $5 billion state deficit is now the capitol's focus after Paterson's inauguration on Monday, according to Breslin.

"If you have a car or go to the grocery store, you can feel it," he said. "People are nervous about the economy, and they should be."

Some of the area schools sighed relief after cuts in BOCES aid were restored in new budget talks. In the Bethlehem Central School District alone, about $225,000 in BOCES aid was restored to the school for the 2008-09 budget. (See related story on Page 3.)

Breslin described Paterson's "enjoyable self-deprecating wit" as an asset to the new administration.

"He hits the ground running, and he's a quick study," he said of Paterson. "I don't think the public knows David very well yet, but I think people will be very impressed."

Many other Democrats and Republicans around the state have weighed in on the new transition of leadership in Albany, including the state comptroller, the Assembly and Senate leaders and area lawmakers.

"Our state needs stability and strong, ethical leadership. Gov. Paterson will provide that leadership in the days and years ahead," said Comptroller Thomas DiNapoli. "As state comptroller, I pledge the full resources of my office to provide any assistance Gov. Paterson needs as he transitions into the Governor's office."

Republicans, too, hope the new governor will be less confrontational and more cooperative than Spitzer.

"Gov. Paterson knows the meaning of honor and has shown in both his deeds and words that he is a man of the highest public and personal integrity," state Assembly Minority Leaders James Tedisco, R-Schenectady. "His inherent decency and desire to put advancing the interests of the eighteen-and-a-half-million New Yorkers we represent ahead of political partisanship will truly be a breath of fresh air."

In the Senate, Majority Leader Joseph Bruno, R-Brunswick, was publicly at odds with Spitzer through his short 14-month stint as governor.

When it came to Spitzer's downfall, however, the senator was relatively quiet on the matter, not demanding his removal from office as Tedisco did with calls for impeachment.

He did however make a statement that suggested it was time to move on.

"As for Eliot Spitzer, my heart goes out to his wife and family at this time," Bruno said last week. "He must deal with his own problems in his own way, but it is now time for us and all New Yorkers to move forward."

The state's Republican chairman also said it was time for a new chapter in New York history.

"It is critically important that we quickly put this sad chapter in our state's history behind us," said Chairman Joseph Mondello. "Recriminations and fulminations on the truly dark side of our former governor will serve little positive purpose as our state faces the critical choices of these challenging times."

Gov. Paterson released his own statement last week, giving New Yorkers a look into personality and willingness to get to work in his new leadership role.

"Like all New Yorkers, I am saddened by what we have learned over the past several days. On a personal level, Gov. Spitzer and Silda have been close and steadfast friends. As an elected official, the governor has worked hard for the people of New York," Paterson said last week.

"My heart goes out to him and to his family at this difficult and painful time. I ask all New Yorkers to join Michelle and me in prayer for them. It is now time for Albany to get back to work as the people of this state expect from us."

Benefits of the EHR

- Includes a Health Management Plan (HMP) with an alerting system
- Eliminates the risk of misdiagnosis that can occur from illegible handwriting
- Automatically alerts you when you are due for a test
- Helps with the overall process of your care

Many physicians in the Capital District are using a new technology called the electronic health record, or EHR. The EHR is a computerized medical record which assists physicians in the collection, evaluation and documentation of information regarding your medical care.

The EHR has many benefits compared to the traditional system of paper charts. It is easier for physicians to access the medical records both from within the office and outside the office. The EHR accurately retains and retrieves information that might otherwise be lost or forgotten in a paper chart. Physicians can transmit clinical information easily and efficiently to consultants and specialists who collaborate in care. Prescriptions can even be faxed directly to the pharmacy via the computer system, speeding up the availability of your medication. The Health Management Plan (HMP) helps physicians to monitor and respond to recommended procedures for health maintenance and disease management. Alerts are created when an HMP item is due or overdue, alerting clinicians to clinically significant events, such as immunizations, health screening tests, or relevant lab studies. With this feature, important elements of the care plan are neither forgotten nor overlooked. In other words, the EHR provides physicians and patients with the information that they need, when and where they need it, so that they can optimize a plan of care.

Talk to your doctor about your plan for good health. You and your physician have a new tool to help document and monitor your progress - the Electronic Health Record.

Living the sweet life

Travel Tales

Throughout March and April, life gets sweeter in central and western New York.

Pancakes are plentiful throughout the state as our maple trees release their sappy nectar and sugar houses heat up to create the latest batch of maple treats.

Sugaring Off Sundays in Cooperstown occur the first four Sundays in March, focusing on historic and contemporary maple sugar and syrup production. A pancake brunch featuring local maple syrup is a highlight of each day. The event is closely tied to rural-life themes and presents activities such as tapping trees, collecting sap and making maple syrup. Also in the Central Leatherstocking region is the Maple Syrup Celebration at Critz Farms, running weekends until April 6.

Critz Farms is a family owned business that was established in 1985. Recognized by the state Department of Economic Development as recipients of the Agritourism Business of the Year Award, the farm operation centers on diversified agriculture with a family entertainment focus.

Critz Farms consists of approximately 325 acres of land, situated just three and a half miles south of scenic Route 20, in Cazenovia, Madison County. The Syracuse area is less than 30 minutes from this Central New York farm.

Owners Matthew and Juanita Critz live on the farm and their three adult children remain involved in the business during different times of the year. While the sap is running, visitors can take a hayride to the sugar bush, watch and learn about syrup production in the sugar shack and enjoy an all-you-can-eat buffet, followed by a visit to the gift shop for some tasty treats to take home.

Darien Center, in western New York, rounds out maple activities with Maple Weekend on March 29 and 30, sponsored by the state Maple Producers Association. The association is comprised of almost 500 of the finest syrup makers in the United States. Their purpose is to increase the production of maple syrup and enhance its sale across the nation.

Visit Randall's Maple Syrup Products and 37 more local maple producers who will be in full operation boiling Maple Syrup and opening their sugarhouses to the public.

Maple Weekend began more than a decade ago when Wyoming County maple producers opened their doors to the public to showcase the production of maple products from tree to table. The first event, known then as Maple Sunday, demonstrated how maple syrup was made by tapping trees, collecting sap and boiling it into syrup. Producers also provided samples and sold maple products to the public.

This year's Chautauqua-Allegheny region's annual Maple Weekend, also sponsored by the Maple Producers Association, is March 29 to 30. Visit area maple producers for tours, demonstrations and samples of maple syrup, maple cream, maple candy and recipes.

Maple Festival, in the Finger Lakes, includes a juried craft show, pancakes, sugar shack, making maple syrup, train ride and dog demos on April 5 and 6. Activities include a soap box derby; fine craft exhibits; wood cutting demonstrations; touring a one-room school house; sugar shack with free samples; maple museum and sugar shop demonstrations, sales and historic displays of antique maple processing equipment. For a fee, you can also take a horse-drawn wagon ride or get a bird's eye view when you try a helicopter ride.

For information on any of these events, visit www.iloveny.com/ezine, and remember, New York's maple syrup is a natural fat-free and cholesterol-free temptation.

Entertainment in the Spotlight

By JACQUELINE M. DOMIN
dominj@spotlightnews.com

Dr. Joel Goodman is serious about his mission to help people get more "smileage" out of work and life.

In 1977, Goodman founded the Humor Project in Saratoga Springs. It's the first organization in the world to focus full time on the power of humor, he said.

The Humor Project sponsors workshops and boasts a speakers bureau with more than 100 speakers who can give talks on such topics as humor and health, laughter and learning and humor in parenting. It has a bookshop that offers books, videos and props, and each year, it sponsors an international humor conference. This year's edition is slated for June 20 to 22 at the Silver Bay Conference Center on Lake George.

"The conference really is an oasis of sorts," Goodman said. "It's a way to literally and figuratively get away from it all."

The conference isn't meant just for standup comedians or other people who make a living being funny. Goodman said that in a typical year, 25 percent of the participants are from the business world. Another 25 percent are health care professionals and 25 percent are educators. The remaining 25 percent are a mix of occupations: clergy, writers, turf grass growers, undertakers. "You name it," Goodman said.

The common bond participants share is that they want to get more "smileage" out of life, Goodman said, invoking one of his favorite catch phrases. The conference aims to do that by "helping people develop humor in life and on the job."

To that end, the conference will offer more than 20 sessions. Topics include "Taking Serious Things Humorously and Humor Seriously," "Dealing with Difficult People with Delight and Lightness: Get Glad Not Mad" and "Put on Your Own Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz will receive "post-humorously" the Laughtime Achievement Award at the conference.

Laughter is the best medicine

Saratoga Springs 'Humor Project' prescribes a healthy dose of whimsy

Oxygen Mask First: Comedic Care Rx to Survive and Thrive." That last one speaks to a theme that Goodman is passionate about. For years, "laughter is the best medicine" was dismissed as just a cliché. But research has shown humor really can add years to your life. "When we laugh, great things happen inside our body," Goodman said. Laughter triggers the release of endorphins, the body's natural painkillers, and gives the immune system a natural boost. "Humor is a wonderful way of dealing with stress," Goodman said. "And whatever your walk in life is, we all have stress."

That's why so many conference participants from previous years have given the experience high marks, he said. "People laugh their heads off during the weekend. They can really recharge their batteries."

The sessions aren't the only way they can do that. On Friday night, Brett Leake will give the keynote address. Leake has muscular dystrophy but didn't let that stand in the way of his dream of being a professional comedian. A 25-year veteran of the comedy circuit, he has been on "The Tonight Show" five times and has always been well-received when he's spoken at highest-rated keynote speaker we've ever had." That's no small feat considering previous keynote speakers include Bob Newhart, Steve Allen, Jay Leno and the Smothers Brothers.

Speaking of comedy legends, the conference will honor Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz with the Laughtime Achievement Award. Their daughter, Lucy Arnaz, will accept on their behalf and moderate a panel discussion, "Legacy of Laughter: A Playful, Powerful Panel."

"We're very excited that Lucy Arnaz is going to be with us," Goodman said. "She's an amazing talent in her own right."

Registration for the conference is $425 before April 1. It's $455 by May 1 and $485 thereafter. Rates are also available for pre-conference and conference registration

Now is the time for nonprofits to check finances

By Jeffrey D. Stone,
President, Capital Region,
KeyBank N.A.

Nonprofits, so critical to both the economic development and quality of life in our communities, have many opportunities to become more effective in 2008. The first quarter of a new year is an excellent time to take a hard look at where you are; where you want to be in the next year, or two or five; and what steps you can take to get there.

Examining and analyzing the following 10 areas will help nonprofits get the year off to a good start.

Review board, operating and governance procedures. This is especially important with regard to Sarbanes Oxley and government reimbursement programs. Make sure your organization's operations are set up in accordance with regulations and reporting requirements.

Review existing debt structure. Is it as effective and efficient as it should be?

Have you exhausted tax-exempt leasing, tax credit or PIFs? For nonprofits, tax-exempt leasing is available on a wide range of essential equipment, including computers, fax machines, copiers, office furniture, telecommunications equipment, medical equipment and vehicles. Tax-exempt bonds are options for financing a wide range of new capital projects. Pilot Increment Financing allows for reimbursement of a portion of an organization's debt service needs and provides some tax revenue to the municipality for a property that would otherwise pay no taxes. Nonprofits can also take advantage of federal income tax credits designed as incentives to spur the development of affordable housing and small businesses in low-income communities.

Identify an advisor. If you are planning any major capital expenditures in 2008 or are evaluating the opportunity to consolidate debt, identify an advisor who can most effectively help you through the process. The right partner can help you determine if some form of tax-exempt bond financing is right for you. Many different alternative financing options are available to nonprofits. It is important to find a partner with the expertise to evaluate a range of options, determine the optimal structure for you at this time and execute effectively on it.

Consider interest rate risk management. Every organization faces financial risk from the uncertainty of global and local events. Nonprofits that rely on government funding, foundation grants and private donations can be particularly vulnerable. To hedge exposure, consider swapping variable rate bonds and loans for those with fixed rates, for example, or capping variable rates when interest rates are rising. Talk to a risk-management specialist who continuously monitors interest rates and the economic factors that influence them.

Network and engage with other nonprofit organizations. This will enable you to uncover best practices with regard to research, technology, Web sites, human resources, and marketing and development. If your local chamber of commerce has a nonprofit business council, become involved with that group. Also, look into your local community foundation, which can be a useful resource for nonprofit networking.

Evaluate your cash management process. Is it as efficient and effective as it can be? Are you using the latest technology for fraud protection and internal controls? Cash management tools can save nonprofits time and money. Among the latest technologies for cash management is remote deposit capture, a web-based technology that eliminates the need for trips to the bank to deposit checks. A complete web-based treasury management system lets an organization access real-time account data and reporting, manage disbursements and deposits, and reconcile accounts in a secure environment.

Analyze your current investment strategy. Does it make sense in today's markets? An annual investment strategy review includes a look at goals and how well the current strategy is moving toward them, a consideration of risk tolerance and – often – a reallocation of assets. Maybe goals have changed. If so, consider whether the strategy needs to change as well. In addition, make sure the current investment mix is still appropriate. Portfolios that start out with the desired asset allocation mix skew over time as the market changes, even if the organization does not actively change a thing. While you're at it, review and update your current investment policy statement to make sure it's still in line with the organization's goals. Sometimes organizations find investment restrictions written into the policy that were created by previous boards of directors and are no longer necessary.

Examine your planned giving program. What can you do differently to improve results in the coming year? Review the results from your endowment over the past year. Are your assets being invested in a way that is in sync with your risk tolerance and financial goals? Discuss with your financial advisor how changes to the endowment can improve results.

Examine your development program. How can you make it stronger in 2008? Identify the major sources of funding last year, as well as untapped sources or new ones that are now available. Analyze return-on-investment for past outreach efforts and consider ways to make them more effective. Review and update your donor list. Be sure to thank current donors and to develop a plan to keep them informed about the status of programs and projects; these "soft touches" are positive reminders about organization and its value. Consider asking for increased levels of support, and ask current donors to recommend friends and associates who might also be interested in your cause.

Review and update your strategic planning for 2008. While many organizations draw up a strategic plan and then put it on a shelf, it should be a living document that is reviewed regularly. Initiate off-site "summit meetings" with the board to develop 1-year, 3-year, 5-year and 10-year plans. Bring in guest facilitators to change group dynamics and spur new thinking.

Nonprofits that take these ten steps early in the year can make the most of the finances they have and set themselves up for a productive 2008.

Olympic

the rest of the JMJC members currently ranked in the top eight will have no room for error at the team trials. Unless they're ranked No. 1 in their weight classes, a loss will knock them out of contention. The top-ranked athletes in each weight class can lose once without being eliminated.

"It's a comfortable position," said JMJC member Travis Stevens, who is ranked No. 1 nationally in the 81kg weight class. "I feel pretty confident and comfortable going on the mat and competing with anybody, especially with Jason as my coach."

"I'm very excited to be No. 1," added Katie Mocco, the top-ranked woman in the 78kg division. "You're protected in a way. You can make a mistake and lose, and you can still come back and win."

Liggett could have had that safety net had he stayed in the men's 60kg division, where he was ranked No. 1 nationally. But the 2007 Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake High School graduate moved up to the 66kg division this season, where he is currently ranked No. 4.

"It was getting hard (to stay at 60kg), and I figured I'm only 18 and 66kg is where I'd wind up anyway," said Liggett. "So, why not make the change now?"

While being ranked No. 1 adds a safety net, it doesn't take the pressure off the athletes. Still, Stevens and Mocco feel confident going into the Olympic team trials.

"I've faced every one (of the top eight) before at least once and some of them as much as five times before," said Stevens, a Washington state native. "As long as they haven't picked up anything new in terms of moves, I should know everything about them."

"I don't expect there to be any huge surprises," said Mocco, a New Jersey native. "I definitely have my work cut out for me, but I know what I have to do."

The others have their work cut out for them if their rankings don't change, but those JMJC athletes on the cusp of the top spot – including Nick Kossor (No. 2, 60kg), Carrie Chandler (No. 2, 57kg) and Justin Flores (No. 2, 66kg) – know all it takes is a good series of performances to earn them a berth on the Olympic team.

"I'm pretty confident that if I listen to my coaches, I can do well," said Kossor, a Philadelphia native who has been with the JMJC team since 2002. "I'm not worried about the competition."

Indeed, some of the toughest competition may come from within JMJC. Flores and Liggett are both contenders in the men's 66kg division, while Chandler and Martin could face off against each other in the women's 57kg weight class.

"It's going to be hard when that comes around," said Martin, who is currently ranked third in the women's 57kg division.

Morris is doing what he can to prevent a Martin-Chandler battle. "I'm trying to move Hannah (Martin) into the next division because Hannah and Carrie are two of the top women overall in the nation," he said.

No matter what happens with his JMJC athletes at the Olympic team trials, Morris said he's confident that the team he brings to China will be one of the best the U.S. has sent to the quadrennial sporting event. He cautioned that might still not mean a big medal haul, though.

"Our level of talent is higher than it's ever been. Unfortunately for the U.S. but fortunately for the sport, (the talent level has) also improved worldwide," said Morris, a four-time Olympian himself.

And given that many of the 14 JMJC athletes currently in line to make the team trials are 24 or younger, this won't be the last time they will have a shot at the Olympics.

some more second half magic in order to maintain any Siena lead

Step 5 – CBA graduate Josh Duell has to be a defensive pest like he was against Rider's Jason Thompson in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference championship game and deny Foster and center A.J. Ogilvy easy access to the basket.

If all five things happen, maybe Siena can win the game. But how often has everything fallen into place for the Saints in one game? OK, the MAAC championship game. But that was more than a week ago – an eternity during which rust can settle into even the most accomplished players. Why do you think so many major conferences hold their tournaments the weekend that the NCAA Tournament field is set, anyway? So their teams won't be rusty heading into the NCAA Tournament, that's why.

At least, the Saints won't be intimidated by Vandy. After all, this is a team that has played the likes of Syracuse, Stanford, Cornell, St. Joseph's, Memphis and Boise State this year and has a 2-4 record against them. Not great by any means, but when one of those two wins came against Stanford ... well that has to mean something, even if the game was back in mid November in Albany.

Earning the No. 13 seed also has to mean something, right? Well, maybe not. The last time Siena was seeded that highly in the NCAA Tournament (1999), it got trounced by No. 4 Arkansas. Still, the No. 13 seed shows that the NCAA Tournament committee thinks highly of the Saints.

And I'm certain that Vandy thinks highly of Siena, too. At least, that's probably what the players and coaches will say heading into Friday's first round game. They'll laud Siena's athleticism, its perimeter shooters and its scrappiness. After all, that's what every player and coach says about an opponent at the NCAA Tournament – even the No. 1 seeded teams who usually get a walkover game in the opening round.

(I say "usually" because of how close UAlbany came to beating Connecticut in the first round of the 2006 NCAA Tournament. I bet UConn coach Jim Calhoun would still have nightmares about that game had the Great Danes held on to their double digit lead.)

But I won't be fooled by all the talk. I know Siena is good, but I also know Vandy is better. The Commodores have the wins – 26 in all – to prove it.

So like the rest of the Capital District, I plan to watch Friday night's game and hope that Siena pulls off the upset. But if you ask me which team I marked down on my NCAA prediction bracket before the game, I'll tell you it's Vanderbilt.

Sorry.

Bethlehem Central High School graduate Jessica Venezia placed sixth in the triple jump to earn All-American status at last weekend's NCAA Division III Indoor Track and Field Championships at Ohio Northern University.

Venezia, a freshman at St. Lawrence University, was ninth going into her final jump, but she leapt a distance of 37 feet, 3.25 inches to move up to sixth. The top eight finishers earned All-American status.

Venezia set a St. Lawrence record in the triple jump earlier this season with a distance of 37 feet, 11.25 inches.

Bethlehem Central High School graduate Tee Ladouceur recorded a hat trick, and Guilderland High School graduate Kayla Best scored the game-winning goal to lead the University at Albany women's lacrosse team to an 11-10 victory over St. Bonaventure Sunday.

Ladouceur's third goal late in the second half tied the game at 9. St. Bonaventure went ahead a short time later, but Christine Grueniger tallied to tie the game again. Best then put the Great Danes ahead for good with 3:51 left in regulation.

Ladouceur – the reigning America East Rookie of the Week – was coming off a two-goal, one-assist performance in UAlbany's 12-9 victory over Colgate.

Bethlehem Central High School graduates Katie Rowan and Halley Quillinan came up big for the Syracuse University women's lacrosse team in a 16-13 overtime victory over Notre Dame last weekend.

Rowan scored four goals and added two assists, and Quillinan added two goals for the sixth-ranked Orange. Quillinan's second goal in the first overtime period put Syracuse ahead for good.

Rowan had another big game for Syracuse in a 21-10 victory over Hofstra last week. The junior scored five goals and added four assists. Quillinan contributed six goals in the non-league victory.

JMJC athletes try to join their coach

When Jason Morris takes his United States Olympic judo team to China this summer, he may be bringing some of his Jason Morris Judo Center students with him.

Fourteen JMJC members are ranked nationally in the top eight of their weight classes, which earns them automatic berths into next month's U.S. team trials in Las Vegas. Two of them – Jeremy Liggett (Glenville) and Hanniah Martin (Schenectady) – are Capital District natives, while the rest hail from across the country.

Morris said he's happy to be bringing a large contingent from his Glenville center to the U.S. team trials.

"There won't be a group message," said Morris. "There will be a lot of individual messages ... because everybody is young, and they're at different parts of their careers."

How young? Six of the 14 JMJC students currently in contention for the trials have not reached their 20th birthdays yet. Two of them – Angela Creutzberger and Kyle Vashkulat – are 17 years old.

"From the time I started, I always wanted to (go to the Olympics), but it didn't seem possible," said Creutzberger, who joined JMJC last year after moving from New Jersey to Morris' Glenville home. "Now that I'm here, I want it so bad."

"I'm still young, and I know I have a lot ahead of me," added Vashkulat, who moved to the United States from Ukraine seven years ago. "Of course it would be great to make the team, but I'm going for the experience."

Another Siena miracle? Don't bet on it

I'm desperately trying not to get my hopes up for a possible Siena victory Friday against Vanderbilt at the NCAA Tournament.

It's not that I want Siena to lose. I just don't want to get my hopes dashed like last year when I thought that UAlbany was going to beat Virginia in the first round because the Great Danes were a No. 14 seed. I forgot that one great player (Jamar Wilson) does not make a great NCAA team.

Fortunately for Siena, it doesn't have one great player. It has four very good players who can have a big game – Kenny Hasbrouck, Edwin Ubiles, Alex Franklin and Tay Fisher.

The thing is, the Saints are going to need big efforts from those four and anyone else that takes the floor if they have any hope of beating Vanderbilt. This is a Vandy team that beat then No. 1-ranked Tennessee, which had just beaten the previously-undefeated Memphis Tigers. By my calculations, the Commodores could beat Memphis, which beat up Siena by 46 points earlier this season.

Uh oh.

Still, just because team A beat team B which beat team C which beat team D doesn't mean that team D doesn't stand a chance against team A. Certainly, the folks over at CBS Sports seem to think Siena has a chance. In fact, college basketball analyst Seth Davis went on the air after the Midwest Region brackets were announced to say that the No. 13 Saints were capable of beating the No. 4 Commodores.

OK. Let's try to figure out how Siena can pull off this upset:

Step 1 – Fisher has to hit six three-pointers to soften Vandy's interior defense as the Commodores have to start respecting Siena's perimeter shooters.

Step 2 – Ubiles has to exploit Vandy's softened interior defense by driving to the basket and hit some layups in order to force the Commodores to foul.

Step 3 – Southeastern Conference Player of the Year Shan Foster has to either get into foul trouble or miss a bunch of shots.

Step 4 – Hasbrouck has to find
