Your child can only build so many creatures in Build-A-Bear, and you can only eat so many slices of pizza at the mall food court over spring break before you both go mad from boredom.

Isn't it a way, in fact, possible to sweep up the kids and fly off to a few and exciting destination every time they have a week off from school and with the ever rising prices of gas these days, it's ever becoming a bit of a burden to take a long drive somewhere. ## Project update heard

Meadowbrook developers discuss drainage, sidewalks

By JARRETT CARROLL

Water drainage and sidewalks were the main discussion during an update from the Meadowbrook developers during the Wednesday, April 9, Bethlehem Town Board meeting.

The plan calls for single-family homes to be built on a 66-acre property near Blessing Road and Route 85, keeping about 25 acres of land as undeveloped green space. Spectra Engineering, Architecture and Surveying President John H. Shafer gave a public presentation to Town Board members and said it is a project that has been in the works for some time.

"It really started in 1984, so it probably transcends several Town Boards and Planning Boards," Shafer said of the Meadowbrooks development. "What is being proposed is 48 single-family lots, fairly small lots, with the smallest being about a quarter acre."

Shafer said that the topography varies greatly near the Normanskill, with the elevation around 108 feet at the bottom of the development

New Scotland draws up moratorium

Developers ask to show town preliminary plans for former farmland

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

The Town of New Scotland has drafted a building moratorium in light of a major commercial development deal proposed for the former Bender melon farm off of routes 85 and 85A.

The moratorium won't be voted on until late May, according to town officials, but a public hearing has been scheduled for Wednesday, May 7, at 7 p.m., at the Voorheesville High School.

Sphere Development Group out of Syracuse is looking to develop the 179-acre parcel of land, but the company has not yet closed on the property.

Currently a group of investors own the land, which is being listed through Platform Realty Group at $4 million. The town assessed the land, which has no municipal water or sewer and contains a barn structure, at $734,700.

At a Town Board meeting on Wednesday, April 9, representatives from Sphere met with the public for the second time in a month in order to field questions and follow the town's progress on a possible moratorium.

The developers have asked the town to not enact any measures preventing commercial construction plans, but according to Supervisor Thomas Dolin, representatives said they wouldn't legally interfere with the moratorium process.

"They said they would voluntarily not file [official submissions] until the moratorium process was completed," said Dolin. "They asked for an opportunity to informally present some of their ideas to the town before making an official submission to us."

When asked when Sphere will show the plans, which they have given very little detail on as

Delmar woman arrested for DWI with son

Theresa H. Raker, 29, of Delmar, was arrested on driving while intoxicated charges with her wheelchair-bound son in the back seat of the vehicle she was driving.

Bethlehem police pulled Raker over on Monday, March 24, after she was seen driving erratically and charged her with DWI, operating a vehicle with a blood-alcohol content of .08 percent or greater, and aggravated DWI, driving with a blood-alcohol content of .18 percent or greater.

Police said they received a call from a person on a cell phone who reported Raker's vehicle was being operated "in an erratic manner." When police spotted the vehicle, Raker was driving on Delaware Avenue and, according to the report, police said they saw her use her turn signal to turn onto Cherry Avenue but continued driving.

Raker then continued driving and began using "back streets," according to the arrest report. When police activated their emergency lights in an unmarked vehicle, Raker did not stop. The report states that police then activated the emergency siren and Raker still did not stop but eventually pulled over her vehicle in front of her home on Cherry Avenue.

When officers asked Raker is everything was OK, police said she responded that she "just wanted to get home," and police discovered her son in the back seat of the vehicle seated in a wheel chair.

Police said they smelled alcohol on Raker's breath when interviewing her and that she was displaying signs of intoxication. They had her pull the vehicle into her driveway in order to clear the roadway, according to the report.

Raker's husband was inside of the home and removed their son from the vehicle before Raker was given a field-sobriety test, which she failed, according to police. She also tested positive for alcohol on a prescreening device used by police, and after she was processed, she was released into the custody of her husband.

State Child Protective Services was contacted and notified of the incident, according to the arrest

In other arrests

• George L. Kirkly, 56, of Schenectady, was arrested by Bethlehem police on Wednesday, March 26, for fourth-degree criminal possession of stolen property and second-degree identity theft, both felonies, as well as petty larceny, a misdemeanor.

Police say Kirkly was arrested in the parking lot of a gas station on an active bench warrant issued by Bethlehem Town Justice Ryan Donovan on Feb. 6, and he was taken into custody.

Kirkly was then arraigned in front of Donovan and sent to Albany County Correctional Facility without bail.

An April 1 preliminary hearing was set at the time of his arraignment.

• Ronnie S. Bartee Jr., 24, was arrested on April 1 for criminal possession of a forged instrument, a felony, and petty larceny, a misdemeanor.

Bethlehem police say Bartee turned himself into police custody in the presence of his attorney for a felony warrant signed by Bethlehem Town Justice Paul Dwyer on March 11.

Bartee was processed by police and arraigned by Dwyer, according to the arrest report, and then released by Dwyer on "a continuance of his bail and ... status from Albany Police," stemming from an arrest on Feb. 29.

Town of Bethlehem gets $3 million in pork

Assemblyman nabs funding for schools, infrastructure improvements

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Even in a year of tough economic choices around the state, Assemblyman Tim Gordon managed to get a chunk of state funds for his hometown of Bethlehem.

Gordon, an Independence Party member and party chairman in Bethlehem, secured $3 million in funding for Bethlehem's Vista Technology Park and another half million for the Bethlehem School District.

These types of secured funding by legislators for their districts are commonly referred to as "pork barrel" funds.

"This money from Urban Development Corporation will go to the town ... specifically for water and sewer and other infrastructure improvements," Gordon said after the budget passed. "I'm simply delighted. ...It's smart growth and good economic development."

Gordon noted that the funding was included in the Assembly's budget, which was passed prior to the finalized budget and that he fought to get it included in the final state budget agreement.

"With the Capital Region quickly becoming a leader in technology, this funding will help capitalize on the growth of the technology market," Gordon said in a release. "This technology park can have a tremendous impact on our local economy by creating more jobs and creating a positive spin-off effect into the community."

The funding, allocated through the Urban Development Corporation, was needed to upgrade Bethlehem's infrastructure in order to support the planned technology park.

The Vista campus has been a major focus of Bethlehem's economic development initiatives to boost the local economy.

Gordon said the park's main use will be high-technology research, office and development space.

Once completed, he said, it is expected to sustain 5,000 jobs annually and inject $10 billion into the economy over 20 years.

"Companies around the world are actually taking notice, and we need be prepared and have the facility ready because they will come," Gordon said.

Town Supervisor Jack Cunningham took a moment at the end of the Wednesday, April 9, town board meeting to recognize the funding secured by Gordon.

"I would like to publicly thank Mr. Gordon for all of his hard work," Cunningham said at the meeting. "The Vista Tech Park is important not only for Bethlehem, but for the entire area."

Gordon also managed to squeeze out another $500,000 of unrestricted state aid to the Bethlehem School District from the state budget on top of what the school is already projected to get.

Gordon said he went after more state funding for the district so it could be used to fill any gaps in school funding.

He said he hoped the additional aid would help take some burden off of Bethlehem's property taxpayers. The district adopted an $87.8 million budget, which will go to vote on May 20 at the district's high school. The budget would reflect a tax rate increase of 4.14 percent over last year's if it passes.

Residents will also be voting on a proposition that approve the purchase of 18 new buses.

This year's state budget provides an additional $950,360 in high-tax aid, which is meant for high-cost school districts such as Bethlehem, according to Gordon. The additional funding for highly taxed schools is aimed at helping to ease the tax burden, he added.

"Bethlehem schools are known for the first-rate education they provide to our kids. However, sustaining that quality education for our kids should not further burden local property taxpayers," Gordon said. "I could not sit by and let Bethlehem lose funding. Cuts lead to one of two outcomes — either a program would be lost or property taxpayers would face an additional tax burden."

Gordon said that the budget also rejects shifting preschool special evaluation costs to school districts, which would have shifted $42 million in costs to taxpayers. The plan also rejects a cut of $500,000, he said, and adds $600,000 more to the Education Department's Office of School Personnel Review and Accountability, which handles background checks for school personnel.

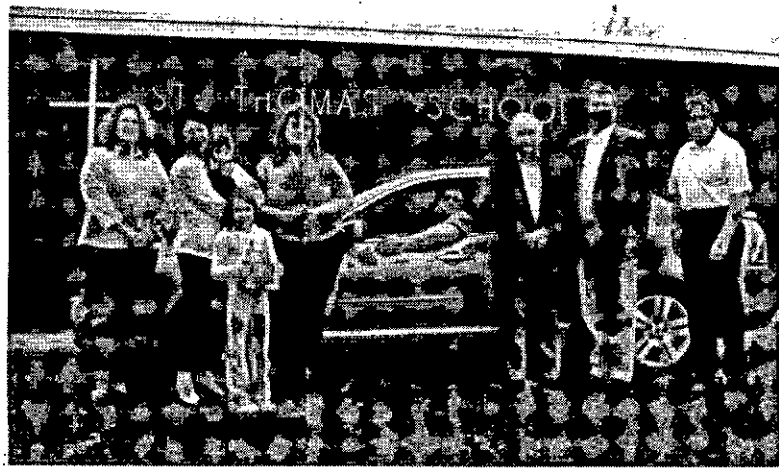

State Sen. Neil Breslin, D-Delmar, said Gordon is doing a pretty good job for a new kid on the block.

"For someone who's been around for only a little while," Breslin said, "that's a nice amount of pork for the town."

RCS superintendent steps down from post

Resignation comes amid lawsuit allegations of discrimination

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk School District officials on Tuesday, April 8, confirmed the resignation of Superintendent Viki Wright.

The resignation comes to light in the midst of a lawsuit against her and criticism in a state audit last year over a trip she took to Las Vegas in 2005 with Assistant Superintendent for Instruction Diane Albano. The two went to a two-day conference in Las Vegas but ended up staying for four days, according to the audit.

There was an $11 million lawsuit filed against Wright in February, the school's board of education president, and a middle school teacher by fellow RCS teacher Daniel Pickett. The lawsuit deals with alleged discrimination against Pickett after he spoke out against school policies at a public board of education meeting.

Pickett is also suing on the grounds that he was defamed and demoted following allegations that he had an inappropriate relationship with a student, which the student later publicly denied.

Pickett's lawyer Brendan Baynes said his client's civil rights under the first, fourth and 14th amendments were violated. The suit alleges that the three infringed upon Pickett's rights to free speech, due process, and equal protection of the law.

The school director of communications Michael McCagg confirmed that Wright was resigning and that the board of education on Monday, April 7, approved an addendum agreement to Wright's contract. The board also voted on its option to discontinue the employment relationship by no later than June 30, 2009.

There is no official word whether the lawsuit was a factor in Wright's resignation and McCagg declined comment, referring questions to Wright's lawyer. Calls to Wright's attorney and to Wright herself were not returned, but attorney David Shaw has declined comment on the matter in the past.

Wright has been with the district since 2003, and according to McCagg, will remain actively employed as the district's superintendent until June 30. After that, her salary and benefits will be paid through the 2008-09 school year or until she begins employment with another district.

Wright is budgeted to make $146,419 next year.

"It was mutually agreed upon by the board and Ms. Wright that this action represents the best option for the district and for her," said board President Mike Varney in a release. "We have great respect for much of what Ms. Wright has accomplished through her tenure at RCS. That said, we believe it is time to move in a new direction."

The Board of Education is working to identify and hire an interim superintendent to begin work on July 1, according to Varney. A search for a permanent successor will begin in the late spring or summer, he added.

When Baynes was asked for comment about Wright's resignation, he said he couldn't but added that he hoped it could be used in his client's trial against the RCS faculty members.

"I can't really speculate on what this means," he said. "I would like to hope [to use the resignation in court] ... but whether there is a paper trail that ties it, remains to be seen."

School board seats up for grabs

District looking for a few good board members

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

The deadline to declare a run for Bethlehem's Board of Education is fast approaching; petitions are due Monday, April 21.

Qualified voters in the school district who are U.S. citizens over the age of 18 can run for the board as long as they gather 102 signatures. Area voters will elect the board members during the statewide May 20 vote, which will take place at the high school this year.

In Bethlehem, there are three seats up for grabs with two current board members not seeking re-election and vice president James Dering up for re-election.

There is no limit to the number of terms a member can serve according to the Education Law. It is a voluntary office with no salary or other compensation. There are typically two or three seats open for a general election each year that coincide with the school's budget vote and local library budgets and trustee elections.

During the March 5 board of education meeting, board members Warren Stoker and Robin Storey announced they would not run for another term. Both have been on the board since 1999, and each had served as its president and vice president.

Dering has been on the board since 2005.

Current board president James Lytle made a call for candidates during the March board meeting, saying it was important that people be involved in the community and that having a child in the district in not a requirement to run for office.

"It will be a challenge next year," Lytle said at the meeting. "I do hope whoever runs and is interested ... will work with us during this transition."

He also said at the time that he was sad to see Stoker and Storey go, and he enjoyed working with them on the board.

Part of the transition Lytle referred to is the retirement of Supervisor Les Loomis, who will be leaving at the end of June after 21 years with the district.

Michael Tebanno, who is the school's current assistant superintendent of educational programs, was named Loomis' successor during the April 2 board meeting.

Nominating petitions for the three open board seats can be picked up from Deputy Board Clerk Michelle Curtis or business office staff members at the district's offices at 90 Adams Place, Delmar. For information, call 439-7481.

Why not take a pass over being in charge?

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
news@spotlightnews.com

It isn't easy being free.

I'm free to choose how I spend my time, yet I often waste it worrying or complaining. Then I waste more time feeling guilty about wasting time worrying and complaining. Then I stay up late feeling upset about all the guilt, which means I don't get a good night's sleep, and the whole cycle begins again the next day.

Further, I live under the mistaken assumption that I'm in charge of everything. There are others like me. And we'll all tell you that it's quite tiring.

Being in charge of everything means that I believe that if I plan enough, collect lots of information, and anticipate every scenario and weather condition, I can make any situation turn out right. And if success is not achieved, then it must be because I dropped the ball, missed an angle or forgot to follow through.

Passover, which begins Saturday night, celebrates the Jews' escape from slavery in Egypt over 3,000 years ago. They wandered in the desert for 40 years during their journey to freedom. And since they left Egypt in a hurry, there was no time to carefully plan and pack for that trip.

Wow, I would have had a difficult time with all the uncertainties. I would have had a lot of questions for Moses: We have to do what? We're going where? How long will it take to get there? Why can't we take the time to bake some decent bread so we'll have something to nosh on? How do we expect the young children and the elderly to walk so far?

The holiday of Passover includes participating in a Seder (SAY-der), a lively hands-on religious ceremony celebrating the exodus from Egypt. During the Seder, Jews read from a special book called a haggadah. The word haggadah means "the telling," referring to the obligation to tell the story of Passover to our children each year so the story will be remembered and relayed from generation to generation.

physical slavery, reminds me that I need to remember to release myself from mental slavery. I need to get rid of emotional and physical clutter and use my time more wisely.

Recently, I began to indulge myself with a Saturday afternoon nap. I need time to recharge. All that worrying and complaining drains my energy.

And what do you know? Getting some rest enables me to be in charge of everything in a more productive way.

For years my husband has tried to convince me of the power of the nap. He's constantly saying, "I'm going to take a nap." Sometimes he gives no warning. He just sits down on the couch and instantly falls asleep. There's no deliberation involved. He doesn't even need a pillow. He's a pro at spontaneous napping.

Of course, this is easy for him to do. He's not in charge of everything.

My brain is constantly processing, analyzing and planning. I can't just simply put my head on a pillow and fall asleep. That would be like powering off a computer instead of using the log off and shut down functions.

Unless I'm on the brink of exhaustion, it's hard for me to drift off to sleep. When I close my eyes, a to-do list pops into my head. My brain says: How dare you rest when there's so much to be done?

With Passover approaching, the to-do list is intensified: Clean the house, plan the festive meal, shop for the food (must get Breakstone's whipped butter), and devise a creative way to keep everyone interested and involved in the Seder.

Then there's the mish mash of other thoughts: I remember fondly the Passovers celebrated at Aunt Selma's apartment in Queens. I lament the fact that it has been years since I've been to Queens. I fret that the entire family will not all be together. I rejoice in the friends and family who will join us for the Seder.

I'm forever beating myself up for a missed opportunity when my daughter was 3 years old and we were videotaping the Passover Seder. She had stood up on her chair and had started to say a version of the "Four Questions," recited by the youngest person present. I told her it was not quite time yet. And when it was time, she was no longer interested. No amount of cajoling would change her mind. You see on the video that she was ready, and then you hear my voice saying, "Not yet." Oh, if I could only go back and capture that precious baby singing!

"Just focus on the good things," my wise husband advises.

That's easier said than done.

There were days in the desert when my ancestors got discouraged. And we all know that negativity is contagious. A few disgruntled folks incited the masses to build and pray to a golden calf. Imagine how Moses felt when he returned with the tablets containing the Ten Commandments and found everyone blatantly disregarding the "no idol worship" rule. Talk about frustrating.

If I had lived back in that time, I might have assembled coalitions and gotten the people to hold off on erecting the calf. It's also possible that my attempts would have failed and I would have felt responsible for being unable to prevent the whole golden calf scene.

I have to believe I would have tried. You see I'm even retroactively in charge of everything.

I would have told the people: "Look, we're not slaves anymore, and although we are going through difficult times, it's not as bad as when we were slaves."

Hey, wait. I should be taking my own ancient advice.

I need to focus on the positive and keep things in perspective.

With freedom comes responsibility, but in reality I'm not in charge of everything.

And the sooner I accept that, the more time I'll have to perfect my napping skills.

Varying outlooks surround Tech Valley High School

School has mixed support among faculty, parents

By NICHOLAS GRAZIADE
devoew@spotlightnews.com

The 21st century classroom has emerged as an engaging stage for students immersed in our modern world.

With a new, wired world becoming the norm across the country, a technologically savvy student reflects the innovations surrounding us all. With this mindset, Tech Valley High School now offers opportunities for students to connect with the modern world by offering a new type of learning.

"Our first class began in September of 2007," said Tech Valley High School Principal Dan Liebert. The high school, initially established by joint efforts from Capital Region BOCES, Questar III BOCES and local businesses, was about five years in planning before it fully came to fruition.

It offers "project-based learning," said Liebert, giving students the chance to apply the skills they develop in school directly to real world scenarios. Initiatives such as providing a one-to-one computer ratio and collaborating with local businesses gives Tech Valley High School the ability to stay on the cutting edge of modern needs, he said.

Though there are concerns about the curriculum at Tech Valley High School, the administration maintains that their style of learning prepares children for the 21st century as well as today's state standards.

"Colleges tell us [they] need people who can collaborate and think critically. Project-based learning is really organizing instruction around New York State standards, but in a practical and applied way," said Liebert. "Kids at Tech Valley High School have to take and pass regents exams. We teach to the content and learning standards."

With these notions in mind, many question why students should be sent to Tech Valley High School. Students at the school, who are funded by their parent district's tax coffers, will each require about $18,000 in tuition for one year of study.

"[This is] an opportunity for districts to innovate. We can share that [with the rest of the community]," said Liebert. "It's like a research and development arm for districts."

Regardless, many districts still question how useful Tech Valley High School is.

"The major question is: does Tech Valley High School provide a student experience that is different or beyond that which we offer at the district's schools," said Bethlehem Superintendent Les Loomis. "People in the school district, including our staff and board of education, do not have complete information on Tech Valley High School. The board, however, did include a second slot for a freshman at Tech Valley [this year]," he added.

Guilderland Superintendent

John McGuire offers a similar outlook. "Our district has been very supportive of Tech Valley. We've seen it as a kind of magnet approach in the heart of Tech Valley," he said.

However, not every district is as supportive, nor can they afford to be. Voorheesville, for example, will not be sending an additional student for the 2008-2009 freshman class. According to Voorheesville Superintendent Linda Langevin, the board's decision was made with concern for how sending a student will benefit the school and how it can be managed financially.

"Other board members had some concerns; they see it as a rather high expense to be made on one child," added Jim Coffin, a Voorheesville school board member.

"It's a good concept. There are other operations like it around the country that generate a lot of enthusiasm, [but] the way the school is being funded needs improvement," he said.

This has angered some parents. "Voorheesville allowed kids to apply and [at that point] everyone was really excited about it. However, a few meetings ago, it became clear the board wouldn't fund another student," said Shari Hoffman-Simsek of Voorheesville. "Smaller districts are not sending students. Are we creating a caste system that excludes smaller districts? They don't realize the benefits the kids bring back."

Fun is not far away

Now that tax season has mercifully come to an end, you may be thinking of taking that hearty tax return, packing the kids into the minivan and heading south for a visit to Disney World.

Or, more likely, you may be thinking of taking what's left after you've paid your taxes and heading to one of the smaller amusement parks in the areas just outside of the Capital District.

In any case, you're looking at the hassle and hurry of a long trip with high gas, food and admission prices waiting for you at the end.

You needn't bother with any of that. Your neighborhood, and the ones surrounding it, are full of historic, educational and, most importantly, fun attractions and activities for you and your family to enjoy.

In our centerpiece story this week, you'll find things to do in Albany, Schenectady and Saratoga counties. Many are low-cost; all are less expensive than a trip to Disney World.

In Albany County, families can enjoy the Henry Hudson Planetarium, take a tour of historic Albany with the Aqua Ducks, and visit any of the myriad museums in the county.

In Schenectady, families can make their own bugs and volcanoes at Proctors, take a guided tour through the historical Stockade neighborhood, or learn about the history of aviation.

While you're in Saratoga County pining for the ponies to make their August appearance, feed your hunger for horse racing with a trip to the National Museum of Racing and Hall of Fame. When you're through there, walk along (and off) Broadway for near-limitless food and shopping options. Cap the night at one of the many nightclubs that heat up during the spring and summer months, or do some stargazing with the kids.

There is family fun to be had in our own back yards. If you've done many of the things near your own, move on to someone else's, or go for the gusto with a tri-county tour of the many attractions to be found within the Capital District.

We've tried to compile many local attractions and activities within this week's paper, but if there is a favorite local destination you have that isn't mentioned in our story, visit www.spotlightnews.com and tell us about it.

Puzzle changes not our idea

A number of readers have sent us comments regarding the change to our crossword puzzle and the absence of the "Hocus Focus" feature in our recent editions.

The decision to change the puzzle and eliminate "Hocus Focus" was out of our hands. The media outlet that supplied us with those features is no longer providing them.

At this time, the crossword puzzle in our current edition is our only option. We at Spotlight Newspapers hope you enjoy the new puzzle as we continue to look for new ways to challenge our readers' minds.

Editorial

Parents of preemies persevere

By ELIZABETH GAROFALO
news@spotlightnews.com

The writer, a resident of Saratoga Springs, was chosen by the March of Dimes to tell her family's story.

Sept. 11, 2001, as we all know, is probably the worst day in American history, but three years later on the same day, my husband, Greg, and I were celebrating — I was pregnant and my due date was May 11.

I had always wanted to be a mother, and I had also been preparing myself — I took folic acid for a year and had not had a drop of alcohol for more than eight months. And so it seemed that the stars were aligned and all was right in the universe. I had no fertility issues, and conception was easy.

On Jan. 4, in my 21st week of pregnancy, I had a Level II ultrasound, and everything looked good. That night, I thought I had indigestion, and over the next couple of days I had general malaise and some epigastric pain. I was told that indigestion is a common complaint during pregnancy and to take Maalox.

On Jan. 22, I was admitted to labor and delivery at Albany Medical Center. I was 24 weeks pregnant. I had been diagnosed with severe preeclampsia and pregnancy-induced hypertension.

My perinatologist told me that I was in liver failure and would have died over the next 24 to 48 hours if I had not sought medical treatment. Luckily, I stabilized over the next few days, but significant changes were noted on an ultrasound on the sixth day, and so Gabriela Lisbeth Garofalo was born at 10:03 p.m. on Jan. 28. She was 1 pound, 2 ounces, and 12 inches long. We heard her cry, one small cry, before the NICU team whisked her away. We would not hear her cry again for more than a year.

Ultimately, Gabriela spent 165 days in the NICU/PICU and was discharged on July 11,

Point of View

2005, on a vent, oxygen and a tracheostomy.

Gabriela has a very complicated medical history, like so many premature babies. She has undergone four major surgeries. She has been to the OR nine times and spent 12 months on diuretics, 15 months on continuous oxygen, 17 months on a ventilator and was trached for 18 months. I have had to resuscitate her on four occasions.

When Gabriela was just 8 days old, she developed severe sepsis, a common prematurity complication. And so on that eighth day of her life, she lay nearly lifeless in Nursery 2. We were told that the next 12 hours were critical. The NICU staff worked tirelessly but feared that Gabriela had probably suffered a significant brain bleed.

We had planned an informal baptism for the next day, but the attending neonatologist and our nurse told us we should have it done right away.

At that moment, my husband finally allowed himself to break down and weep. He could barely stand because his knees were buckling. I was able to remain pretty calm, and we would learn over the coming months that we could help each other get through what seemed like a living nightmare. I asked God to spare my daughter's life.

As we waited for the chaplain to baptize Gabriela, Greg and I held her tiny hands and talked to her. We talked to her about the seasons in nature. We told her that she was the most important person in our lives. We told her that we had waited for her all of our lives; and that we would not let anything happen to her.

Our nurse told us to keep talking because Gabriela's numbers were improving. At the end of the ceremony, I whispered in her ear; "I am your mother, and if you can hear me, give mama a sign," and my precious daughter squeezed my finger. I knew then with complete certainty that she would survive. Over the next 12 hours, she stabilized, and on the next day, we were told that the brain scan was normal.

Greg and I have had great support from the NICU, March of Dimes, social workers and the NICU case manager.

During that difficult time, I would wake up with such severe anxiety that I could barely breathe. I was depressed, but even more, I felt so guilty. My body had betrayed me. I was never sick in my life until I became pregnant. My baby was suffering, and I felt so responsible, so helpless.

The staff tried to prepare me for the day I would go home but Gabriela would not. A nurse encouraged me to kiss my daughter, to feel her and for her to feel me, and so I kissed her body from head to toe. I wish I could have bottled her sweet baby smell. I hated being home. The house was silent. Her room was so empty. I never missed a day visiting her, and I was told more than once to go home, to spend time with my husband because so many marriages don't survive this. And I knew they were trying to help and they were right, but I resented the advice.

In the midst of the crisis I had lifelines to certain people, one of those people being Father Frank Sullivan, our beloved priest at St. Clement's Church in Saratoga Springs. I would call him each week and give updates and ask for extra prayers when there was a surgery or when her condition was worsening. He would mention Gabriela in each of his weekly masses for almost two years, and she was also on the prayer list of the sick in congregations around the globe. Believe me, we felt the power of so many prayers. Gabriela came off her ventilator on June 8, 2006, and never went back on. She took her first steps on Labor Day weekend in 2006. Days before Christmas this past year, she said "ma-ma," and now she says "dada."

In the fall, we were given permission from the doctors to take Gabriela to church just once for the year (public places are a big no-no for her during cold and flu season due to her chronic lung disease). Father Sullivan asked if we would walk in the procession with him at the start of Mass so he could introduce us.

When he introduced us, he said, "Today is a very blessed day. Almost two years ago, Elisabeth called me when Gabriela was born and told me that, 'One day, Father, we will bring Gabriela to your Mass to meet everyone at St. Clement's,' and when that day came, Elisabeth and Greg would know that a miracle had occurred. And so standing before you is Greg, Elisabeth, and the baby you have been praying for for almost two years: Gabriela Garofalo."

At the mention of her name, our daughter clapped, and, in turn, the congregation clapped and wept.

After Mass, people flocked to us. Many were the parents of premature children. One couple told us of their preemie son, who is now a strapping 22-year-old football college star, but they wept as if he had just been born.

I am here to tell you that miracles do occur. The advances in medicine and technology are nothing short of miraculous. I am here to tell you that the power of prayer works. I am a better parent and far better person because of this experience.

My calling is to serve others and dedicate my professional life to improving the lives of premature babies and their families.

I would like to thank those of you who have supported the March of Dimes because, ultimately, you have helped saved my daughter's life, and I would like to encourage you to continue your efforts and to inspire others to do the same as this will save many more lives.

This story is dedicated in memory of Amiyah, Christian, Isabella, Michael, Billy and Amelia — Gabriela's nursery mates who died within their first year of life. May their parents find hope, courage and peace.

People depend on libraries during difficult times

Editor, Spotlight Newspapers:

New York's libraries are about to get more popular.

No, it's not because of the good books, great resources, helpful certified librarians, or new services, like online learning materials and downloadable audio books.

As they say in political circles, "it's the economy stupid." The price of gas is up. The cost of eggs, milk and bread are all up.

Unemployment is up and house foreclosures are skyrocketing throughout the state and nation. And so too is public library traffic.

The American Library

Association (ALA) has commissioned studies in the past that demonstrate a clear connection between an economic decline and an increase in public library use.

One five-year study released in April 2002, saw a match between circulation increases at 25 of the nation's largest public libraries and time periods labeled "recessions" by the National Bureau of Economic Research.

Put simply, when our dollars shrink and expenses grow, people tend to rely more on their public libraries for free materials and services they might otherwise pay for.

The ALA studies confirm the stories we've heard in the past are once again being told by our librarians from around the state.

In fact, one of our members e-mailed me a story about two young women in their 20s who renewed their library cards because money was too tight to go to a chain bookstore.

In another part of the state, a young man went to his local public library and asked for help finding a computer technician's position. He got a job offer from a company he found listed at his library and claimed the experience had turned his life around.

We see people flocking back to our libraries at a time when library dollars are also tight, which means that state and local funding has never been so important to our local public libraries.

As the English author Ashleigh Brilliant said, "The closest you will ever come in this life to an orderly universe is a good library."

And isn't an orderly safe-harbor something we all seek—and can all support—in such turbulent and uncertain economic and political times.

Your Opinion in the Spotlight

Preserving unique land is town's responsibility

Editor, Spotlight Newspapers:

So, some in New Scotland are organizing against the Edie Abrams gang? Wow!

Here's the story.

I agree with large landowners' claims that they pay taxes for the public's "open space." You want open space, they protest, then buy it.

However, when specific land is special – its history unique, its viewshed so spectacular it affects the town's identity and very spirituality – then that landowner has an exceptional and extraordinary responsibility ... as does the community.

When the public pays extra taxes for an agricultural district and subsidies to help farmers remain viable, then citizens do have an interest in the land. We value farming. We don't pay these taxes and subsidies so farmland may be sold for a development that destroys the nature of our community.

As a Residents Planning Advisory Committee member, I recommended researched, and included a model Right-to-Farm Law in the final report. Frustrated that none of RPAC's 100 recommendations was considered, I cajoled the board to pass this law.

I also lobbied for a dedicated fund to purchase land important to residents. Residents overwhelmingly had indicated they wanted agricultural uses and open space to remain on properties bordering routes 85 and 85A.

The majority of respondents to the town-wide survey demonstrated that they wanted such a fund, and many were willing to pay extra taxes for that purpose.

RPAC didn't ask about big-box stores because it was the furthest thing from our minds. Based on respondents' replies and comments from town-wide meetings, it's obvious residents didn't want and could not conceive of such a development here.

So, when someone says the RPAC recommendations don't prohibit big boxes, that is only technically correct, but misleading, misrepresentative of the conclusions and recommendations of the entire report, and manipulative.

Residents overwhelmingly want the Town Board to "pursue development of reasonable guidelines that would improve the quality of building design, signage, and landscaping in the town's commercial districts." Residents did not want corporate or franchise prototype designs, but a hamlet-style design. Parking, residents said, should not be allowed to dominate an entire development.

Our zoning law remains silent to residents' views. Supervisor Thomas Dolin correctly says the site plan procedure will not ensure the town's vision. We need more detail in the zoning code, immediately.

Residents cannot buy the property along routes 85 and 85A. But, we can enact better zoning and guidance.

Existing law allows big boxes while prohibiting mixed use hamlet-style villages. We need a moratorium so the public participates in crafting intelligent zoning. We need to work together, and fast.

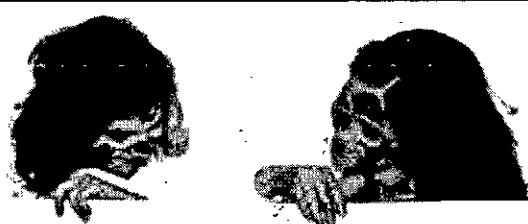

While I'm attracted to "new urbanism" concepts, and would not mind if a big box conforms to those designs instead of a huge, nondescript box, the town must weigh in. I'm sure landowners, developers, and the community can agree on guidelines that would generally satisfy everyone.

I am not a NIMBY run amok.

Programs to focus on decisions related to aging

In another cooperative effort, Bethlehem Senior Projects, Inc. and Bethlehem Senior Services will co-sponsor a series of programs in May to assist seniors and their families in making important decisions related to aging.

On May 6, ElderNetworkNY.org, an online information service for the Capital District, will feature "Setting Your Course: What Older Adults Should Know About Health Care Choices." Because health care issues are increasingly complex today, the program should be informative and helpful.

On May 13, Margaret Reed and Margaret Vella, Delmar attorneys specializing in elder law, will cover "Medicaid: What's It All about?" Discussion will include Medicaid benefits to pay for nursing home care or long-term care at home, including eligibility and application issues.

On May 20, Community Hospice staff, including a registered nurse and bereavement counselor, will discuss "Facts and Myths About Hospice Services." The presentation will include information about hospices services such as nursing, respite care, massage therapy and bereavement counseling.

All three sessions will be held at the Bethlehem Public Library, 451 Delaware Ave., Delmar, from 10:30 a.m. to noon. Be sure to put the dates on your calendar if you are interested in any or all. If you have questions, please call Bethlehem Senior Services at 439-4955, ext. 1176.

Bethlehem names Skiba language supervisor

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Patty Skiba, an 18-year veteran of the Bethlehem Central School District, who currently serves as teacher of the extended-day kindergarten program, was named subject supervisor for Elementary English Language Arts.

The Board of Education made the appointment during its Wednesday, April 2, meeting. Skiba will take over for Dianna Reagan who was named as the first principal of the new Eagle Elementary School, which opens in the fall. Both will begin their new duties on July 1. Before coming to the district 1990, Skiba was a teacher at Remsenburg-Speonk Union Free School District in Long Island. She was a third- and fourth-grade teacher in Bethlehem before helping begin the extended day kindergarten program 10 years ago.

"Patty is a skilled educator who has done great work with our extended-day kindergarten program," Superintendent Les Loomis said. "As we seek to continue to strengthen our ELA program, she is the right person to lead the effort." The extended-day kindergarten program offers half-day kindergarten students with language and motor delays an extra half-day of instruction and support.

Skiba noted that the experience of working collaboratively with kindergarten teachers and support personnel, such as occupational and language/speech therapists, will serve her well as Elementary ELA supervisor. She said she plans to continue the district's focus on literacy throughout all content areas, adding that this has been done more in kindergarten through second grade in recent years, but she plans to extend it to the upper elementary grade levels.

"Dianna Reagan has been an excellent department leader," Skiba said. "I'm excited to take on this leadership position as we continue our strong emphasis on helping our children grow and develop as readers, writers, thinkers and lifelong learners."

Skiba has a bachelor's degree in elementary education from Southampton College of Long Island University and a master's degree in special education from Adelphi University. She also has a Certificate of Advanced Study and Educational Administration from The College of Saint Rose.

Ready To Move

At least one month prior to moving into your new home, decide which items are going with you and which are going to charity, a garage sale, or other family members. When it comes to packing, tackle the job one room at a time. Begin with the least used items in the garage, basement and attic. Then proceed throughout the rest of the house ending with the kitchen. For your convenience, equip yourself with a variety of cartons, packing tape, bubble wrap and large marking pens. If possible, try to arrive at your new home one day before your belongings to check that the utilities are connected and all the major appliances are in their correct places. Moving can be an emotional and trying time for an individual or family, so being organized and prepared will help alleviate some of that anxiety. Moreover, it is also essential to have a professional real estate agent working for you to make your real estate transaction and transition smooth from contract to close. Remember, The Cooley Team is here to help you every step of the way. We offer the professionalism you demand and the service you deserve.

Week celebrates libraries' many contributions

This week is National Library Week, and we invite you to "join the circle of knowledge at your library."

The observance got started in the mid-1950s, when researchers found that Americans were spending less money on books and more on radios, TVs and musical instruments. Concerned that Americans weren't reading as much as before, the American Library Association and the American Book Publishers Association formed the National Book Committee in 1954. Its goal was to encourage people "to read in their increasing leisure time."

The first National Library Week was declared in 1958, with the theme, "Wake Up and Read!" National Library Week is now observed every year in April to celebrate our country's libraries and librarians, and to promote library use and support.

School libraries also celebrate School Library Media Month in April. Both observances are sponsored by the American Library Association.

our area's Big Read this year. This masterpiece of social mores, desire and repression has captivated readers since its publication in 1920. A dark look at New York society in America's Gilded Age, the book won the 1921 Pulitzer Prize.

We're showing two films this weekend that offer contrasting views of late Victorian society.

Join us Friday, April 18, at 2 p.m. for a screening of "The Importance of Being Earnest," a 2002 film adapted from British playwright Oscar Wilde's 1898 comedy of manners. Directed by Oliver Parker, the film stars Rupert Everett, Colin Firth and Judi Dench.

On Sunday, April 20, at 2 p.m., we will show Martin Scorsese's 1993 film "The Age of Innocence," starring Daniel Day-Lewis, Michelle Pfeiffer and Winona Ryder.

Some things are better left alone

Dear Travel Guy: I noticed they are starting to advertise for the Summer Olympics already. I have always wanted to go to a world-class athletic event. Do you think this would be a good time to visit China? The world seems to be changing so fast I'm afraid the diversity of cultures will be lost, and every corner will soon have a fast-food drive-through before I have a chance to personally experience the unique differences.

Dear Drive-Through: I hear you. It does seem like every city in the United States is so bland; they all look exactly the same. The world is losing some charm and diversity.

I liked the Saratoga flat track better when it wasn't so sterile and it didn't have betting machines. I don't like that they are moving Yankee Stadium or that our Giants play in New Jersey. Some things just don't seem right. Progress? I'm not always sure we're going in the right direction.

And I'm still not comfortable with the Summer Olympics in China. The growing tension over Tibet is something to keep your eye on before you make your flight arrangements.

Remember the 1980 Winter Olympics? We who live in upstate New York felt a sense of pride in our state. An unlikely U.S. hockey team beat Russia in what many consider the greatest sports moment in our Winter Olympics history. The small village of Lake Placid was introduced on a world stage, and the curtains closed to a standing ovation.

And after it was all over, room occupancy rates went up, restaurant sales increased and ski ticket sales soared. The prices eventually came back down, and today it is a wonderful value village to visit.

Something similar will likely happen in China as prices typically get expensive during such a world-class event.

And here is an example of how other cultures can change with time. I recently returned from a glorious golf vacation to the north of Ireland.

I never thought I would use the words "chic" and "Dublin" in the same sentence, but that is how I found the capital city - sophisticated, modern and, yes, chic. Dublin today is a true melting pot of world and European cultures.

As I reflect on my winding trail through the beautiful country, I recall the faces. I remember the warmth and sincerity of Marie Gough, the chatty greeter and starter at Ballyliffin Golf Club who got us off on time and was anxious to hear what we thought about the new Faldo design when we finished.

I still recall the smile from Frances Kelly that warmed the breakfast room early one chilly morning at her charmed Stella Maris Country House Hotel. She came in early that morning, wanting us to have a full Irish breakfast before the kitchen opened, the only way we could do it and still make our tee time. Frances runs this lovely property with Terry McSweeney, and it was voted Ireland's Small Hotel of the Year in 2006.

I remember pro Charlie McGoldrick warning us before our round at Enniscrone Golf Club, "Now on a windy links course, you've got to keep the ball where you can see it. In America you have Risk and Reward holes. Here we have Risk and Reload holes."

Then there was the hospitality of the Moylett family. Rachael, Nicole and her husband, John Raferty, who run the Downhill Inn Ballina. Their good cheer was surpassed only by a very robust but happy father of the bride, who entered the lobby of the hotel with two Jamison brandies in one hand and a warm Guinness in the other.

His ample belly heaved with laughter like a perfect Santa Claus ... until his tux pants dropped straight to the oriental carpet. Having never faced such an issue before, we offered to hold his drinks so he could raise his trousers. With a jovial "thank you," he said; "Come join m'daughter's wedding. Love to have ya."

My experience is no different from that of the thousands of visitors who tour Ireland every year. It always comes back to the natural warmth, and kind and fun-loving personalities of the people who touch us and make us want to return.

The Euopa Hotel is across the street from Belfast's famed Crown Bar Saloon.

Ask the Travel Guy

Bill Giering

But here is a warning to my Irish friends: You may hear in the midst of your building boom (where the cost of homes has doubled in the past four years) that much of the new housing is boring and repetitious and that the new housing is making the scenery along your winding roads lose some of the charm and character that made it so interesting.

I miss the thatched roofs. In the past it seemed you could almost imagine who lived in the houses and cottages just by looking them. Now they are all starting to look the same, not unlike the early housing developments in most suburban towns in America.

The more important aspect of the housing boom is the influx of foreign tradesmen who have come to work. I read on my recent visit that one in 10 now employed in Ireland are not Irish.

Ireland has always extended a warm welcome to visitors, but now in the desire to be "politically correct" the country could be creating a nightmare for future tourism.

Here's the dilemma in a nutshell: Imagine it's 2010 in downtown Belfast. Looking for some local charm, visiting golfers walk from the contemporary Europa Hotel to the Crown Bar Saloon across the street. They snuggle up to the bar in the most famous pub in Belfast, and they are greeted by, "Hi, I'm Susie. What can I get you to drink?"

Susie is a perky blonde from Kansas City with a big smile. She came to Ireland with her boyfriend, who is in the construction business.

I'm sure Susie is a nice kid, but when I come to Ireland and stop in a local pub, I don't want a Susie from Kansas; I want a guy named Paddy or Shawn to draw me a Guinness.

I don't want to walk the fairways of Ireland's world-class links with a caddie named Isaac from New Jersey or Mohamed or Sven. I want Sully or Tommy or Murphy to pick my club in the wind and tell me historic stories.

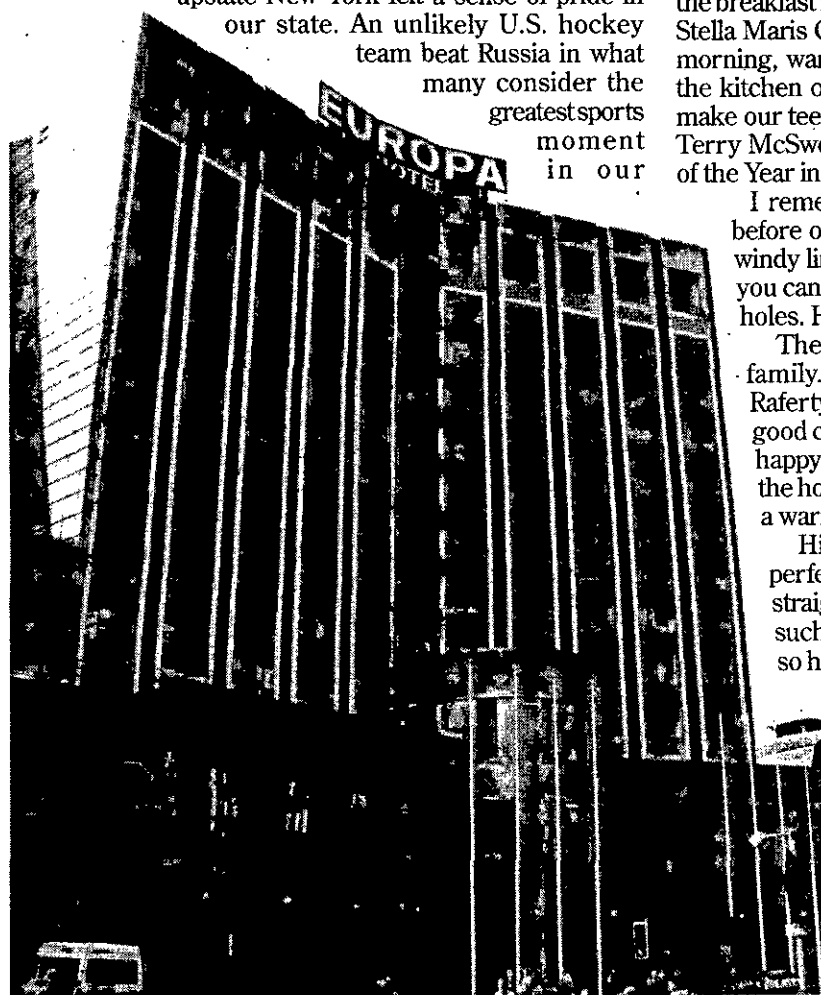

The Irish people are the frosting on the cake, the sun breaking through a cloudy day. It's the people that bring a potentially mundane experience alive with color and emotion and laughter, and it's easy and natural for them; they don't need hospitality classes. They should be teaching them.

The future of the Irish tourism industry depends on if, in a complex politically correct world, they can recognize that visitors don't want Susie pouring pints. Bring on Erin or Kathleen.

In a new and smaller world full of travel options and wonderful accommodations, it's important to remember what really warms our hearts on those chilly and damp Irish days.

Sometimes change makes me a little grumpy.

Entertainment in the Spotlight

By JACQUELINE M. DOMIN
dominj@spotlightnews.com

They Might Be Giants are no strangers to the Albany area, or The Egg, where they'll be performing on Saturday, April 19.

The group, made up of John Flansburgh and John Linnell both from Brooklyn, was so captivated by the unique performing arts center that they wrote a song about it. "Albany (The Egg)" is featured on the duo's "Venue Songs" album.

They Might Be Giants' latest trip to the Capital District, though, will break new ground. They're doing two shows, and each one has a unique focus. At 3 p.m., they'll put on a family show, and at 8 p.m., they will stage a more mature concert, recommended for those 14 and older.

While the earlier show will feature songs from the group's latest children's album, "Here Come the 123s," Egg Executive Director Peter Lesser said all ages will enjoy the performance.

"It's still rocking music," he said.

Lesser said They Might Be Giants are part of a growing trend of musical acts who are hooking the children of their fans on music geared to the younger set. In They Might Be Giants' case, their foray into children's music began with the CD "No!" in 2002, followed by "Here Come the ABCs." Both reached No. 1 on Billboard's Children's Music charts. The group also released a children's book-and-CD set titled "Bed, Bed, Bed."

There's a good chance parents and kids who have never bought a "They Might Be Giants" CD are still familiar with their music. Flansburgh and Linnell have written and performed theme songs for "The Oblongs," "Higglytown Heroes," "Resident Life," and ABC's "Nightline Primetime," as well as songs for "The Simpsons," "Home Movies," "Dexter's Laboratory" and "Courage the Cowardly Dog."

The idea of combining their two genres of music by performing two separate shows on tour stops is a new concept for They Might Be Giants, as well as the music industry in general, Lesser said. For The Egg, it was a natural fit since it already has a relationship with the band and it also holds a family music series.

"It is a popular series, some things more than others," Lesser said. He's found that acts like They Might Be Giants, who already had a core following before trying out children's music, seem to generate the most excitement.

"People love them," he said.

Jumbo Sized Performances

Group to perform 2 shows at Egg

The later show will give those long-time fans a chance to see They Might Be Giants perform hits like "Birdhouse in Your Soul," "Ana Ng" and "Snail Shell." Lesser said that the group's desire to keep that performance limited to those 14 and older isn't a result of staging a show for the younger set earlier in the day; the suggested age limit has been standard They Might Be Giants practice for years.

"They like to do some mature stuff," he said.

Tickets for the family show are $10 for children and $15 for adults. Admission to the later show is $25. Tickets can be purchased through www.theegg.org, by calling 473-1845 or visiting the box office.

DOGS SPRING into the Season

With a Few Precautions, Dogs and Their Owners Can Fully Enjoy the Blooming Season

As winter's chill gives way to warmer days and spring flowers, Bark Busters, the world's largest dog training company, offers owners some tips for helping their dogs enjoy a happy, healthy spring season.

"Spring represents a time of growth, renewal and new life—but not everything that springs forth this season is good for dogs," says Rachel Baum, Bark Busters of Upstate New York dog behavioral therapist and trainer. "With a little awareness and a few simple precautions, dog owners can prevent many of the problems that arise with warmer weather and keep their dogs safe and healthy."

Bark Busters offers the following pointers for warding off spring's primary culprits:

Heartworm infection

The American Heartworm Society recommends that all dogs be tested annually for heartworm infection. Transmitted by mosquitoes, this serious parasitic disease can be fatal. Fortunately, your veterinarian offers a variety of options for preventing heartworm infection, including an injection, daily and monthly tablets, and monthly topical medications.

Fleas and ticks

Fleas and ticks can cause a host of problems, from flea allergy dermatitis to Lyme disease and Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever. In large enough numbers, both ticks and fleas can also cause dangerous amounts of blood loss, especially in young dogs. While a number of flea and tick prevention options are available today, monthly spot-on topicals and oral tablets offer convenience and effectiveness in protecting your dog. Ask your veterinarian for more information.

Spring allergies

Blooming plants, grasses and flowers can trigger atopy, an allergy similar to hay fever. But instead of sneezing, a dog typically develops itchy skin and will persistently scratch, lick and bite to get relief. If you suspect that your pooch may be suffering from seasonal allergies, visit your veterinarian for recommended allergy treatments. These can range from oral medications (like cortisone) to skin tests that pinpoint allergies in more severe cases.

Poisonous plants

Inquisitive dogs might see those fragrant spring blooms as a tasty snack, but dogs can become extremely ill or even die from eating poisonous plants. Ask your vet for a list of poisonous plants you'll want to avoid having in your garden. You can also help prevent your dog from digging by not gardening with your dog present—he may conclude that digging is acceptable and enjoy digging to underground pipes or chewing on sprinkler heads.

Lawn hazards

If a lawn—yours or another's—has been treated with fertilizers, herbicides or insecticides, do not let your dog walk on it until these potentially dangerous treatments have dried completely.

Unpleasant odors

If your dog has taken on an offensive aroma over the winter, find out where the smell is coming from. Odor in your dog's mouth could mean dental problems, digestive problems or underlying internal diseases, such as kidney problems or diabetes. If his teeth are discolored or he has an odor worse than his usual doggie breath, have your veterinarian perform a dental exam. Next, check his ears. If the skin inside is red or sore, if the ear has a bad smell, or if your dog reacts in pain when you examine his ears, have your vet check him for an ear infection. Also check your dog's skin for the common disorder seborrhea, usually characterized by flaky dandruff or an oily, waxy feel to the coat and a strong odor. You can prevent this by frequently bathing your dog with a medicated shampoo that your veterinarian can recommend. Finally, an infection or anal gland problems can also lead to odor and discomfort, in which case your dog will need to be seen by your veterinarian.

With these minimal precautions, your dog will be your enthusiastic companion in everything that the warm weather brings. Take him on walks in the neighborhood or to the dog park, play fetch with him in the yard, or for a hike in the woods. Your dog can even wear his own life vest on your canoe, kayak, or boat. Enjoy a wonderful spring with your favorite outdoor pup!

State budget boosts aid for RCS

The state budget will increase overall aid to RCS by a little more than $100,000 from earlier budget projections.

Interim Business Administrator Dennis Geisler said state aid projections show RCS receiving $16.8 million in state aid, $119,025 more than was proposed by former Gov. Eliot Spitzer.

The majority of the funding boost the district is slated to receive will be in aid for sharing services through the Board of Cooperative Education Services (BOCES), which RCS will receive an extra $84,699, and foundation aid, in which the district will receive an additional $27,686, Geisler said.

Overall, state aid to RCS is projected to increase approximately 2 percent from the 2007-08 school year.

The Board of Education will determine how to apply the additional state in time for its planned Monday, April 21, vote to approve a 2008-09 budget proposal.

The board is reviewing a $41.8 million budget proposal that would increase spending by 1.99 percent and the tax levy by 2.85 percent.

The ins and outs of long-term care insurance: Have 'the talk' with your parents

By James C. Nickens,
Senior Vice President and Sales Manager,
Key Investment Services

Growing up, it was always our parents who were sitting us down for "the talk." Sometimes it was about dating, other times it was about being safe and making smart decisions. Always, at the core, was our well-being.

Somehow, we could always anticipate when "the talk" was coming (call it an adolescent's intuition), but it never made it any easier. Heart-to-hearts with our parents were enough to make us squeamish—whether they were good for our well-being or not.

A real issue with every day implications

Chances are, talking with your parents has gotten easier over the years. The reason is probably rooted in the fact that they are no longer your primary caregiver. But what happens when roles reverse? What happens when your parents are no longer able to care for themselves, and you become the primary caregiver? Does talking become hard again?

According to a study conducted by the University of Minnesota, one out of every two people will require long-term care during their life. While the elderly certainly aren't the only demographic who need care—accidents and illnesses can happen to anybody at any age—they are the demographic that takes the largest toll on families.

Experts estimate that by 2010 the annual cost of nursing-home care will be $78,600. Most people can't afford that, and Medicare, health insurance and disability do not provide any help. It is a cost that can deplete an individual's estate and, in many cases, deplete the life savings of the caregiver.

And still, like inheritances, most of us have a hard time talking about it.

The benefits of early planning

Long-term care insurance can help families prepare for the challenges of providing long-term care to their loved ones. It is an investment in a more secure future, and it is an investment in creating options for people who are no longer able to care for themselves. Not only can your parents be more selective of the facility they will choose to live in, but there is also the possibility that, with good planning, in-home care can be realistic and affordable.

In addition, long-term care can protect an individual's assets, as the financial burden of long-term care is transferred to a third party.

How long-term care insurance works

When an individual purchases long-term care insurance, they are purchasing a policy that pays a predetermined amount toward future long-term care costs. The benefits become payable when a person is no longer able to perform routine, daily activities, as defined by the coverage; becomes physically disabled by diseases such as Parkinson's or Alzheimer's; or when a physician determines that long-term care is needed.

Some of the costs covered by long-term care insurance include:

- in-home assistance with daily activities, such as bathing, eating and dressing;
- day care programs;
- visiting nurses; and
- nursing home expenses.

Long-term care insurance policies differ, and buyers have a lot of flexibility in choosing a plan that is right for their budget and long-range needs. However, buyers of long-term care insurance should always consider two things: inflation protection and coverage eligibility.

1. Due to the skyrocketing cost of healthcare, policies that do not account for inflation will not likely provide benefits that can cover the full range of long-term care costs.

2. Whether it is the benefit period, which is the length of time it takes to receive benefits, or the waiting period, which determines how soon after an individual qualifies for long-term care that benefits are provided, buyers of long-term care insurance must understand that choices that lower their premium cost them at the other end. For example, individuals who opt to have a waiting period of 100 days will have to pay their own healthcare expenses for 100 days. In a nursing home, this could be close to $200 a day—out of pocket.

Other things buyers of long-term care insurance should look for in their policies are renewability, coverage of preexisting conditions, downgrade and upgrade options, as well as the right to cancel the policy within 30 days of the purchase.

Who should purchase long-term care insurance?

According to the American Association of Retired Persons

How to select a long-term care insurance provider

As with any important purchase, comparing and contrasting long-term care insurance providers is the best way to make sure that your individual needs are met. More important, because you may not need to receive the benefits for decades, you want to ensure that your provider is financially stable. The following services can help you make your determination.

• A.M. Best, 908-439-2200, www.ambest.com

• Moody's Investors Services, 212-553-0300, www.moody's.com

• Standard & Poor's Insurance Ratings Service, 212-438-2000, www.standardandpoor.com

(AARP), the reason for purchasing long-term care insurance should be "to protect your assets, minimize your dependence on other family members and control where and how you receive long-term care services."

For most people, these are retirement concerns. But as healthcare costs continue to rise and the need to stretch a lifetime of savings even longer continues to grow, long-term care is really a family concern. And there is not a magic number, like 65. In fact, more than half of all Americans receiving long-term care are younger than age 65. And an estimated seven out of 10 couples older than age 65 will require home health care. It's an expense that's hard to prepare for. Not because it's unforeseeable but rather because it is a near inevitability that we prefer not to see.

Talking now can save you money and anguish later

In 2007, MSNBC ran an ongoing series, "Trading Places: Caring for Your Parents." After watching an episode, a viewer wrote in and explained that her and her brother were having such difficulties confronting their father about driving that they had planned to "steal" his car. His health was deteriorating, and they were afraid to talk him to about the danger he was posing to both himself and others. In an odd twist of fate, the father handed over his keys the very day his kids were planning the heist.

The truth is, thinking about our own mortality is hard. Thinking that we could be living but unable to provide and care for ourselves and those we love is harder. But the numbers are too overwhelming to ignore. Someone you love, maybe even you, will need long-term care at some point in your life. By talking about it now, you increase the chance that it won't derail your life later. Just think of it as an extension of your long-term financial plan. Or think of it as an opportunity to improve your family's well-being. After all, isn't that what "the talks" have always been about anyway?

The right kind of cap

New York state leads the nation in education standards, quality tests and accountability, Education Week just announced ... while the national experts at Education Trust cited New York's progress in closing the gap for children in poverty. New York leads the nation in the prestigious Intel Science competition. We lead the nation in AP and SAT participation. Test scores are rising, students are working to higher standards than ever before and voters last spring approved 95 percent of school budgets — the highest rate in state history. Why would we jeopardize this progress with arbitrary tax caps? Research shows they erode local control, dismantle strong district programs and penalize the poorest communities.

Jacqueline Drozdal, center, is assisted at a car crash off Route 9W in Glenmont around 4:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 10.

Woman hurt in rollover crash

A woman was hurt in a rollover crash on Route 9W in Glenmont on Thursday, April 10, police said.

Jacqueline Drozdal, 53, was driving a 2007 Kia sedan with a 25-year-old male passenger when the vehicle in front of her suddenly stopped. She quickly applied the brakes and swerved off the road, causing her car to flip on to its hood, according to Bethlehem police Lt. Thomas Heffernan.

Heffernan said Drozdal was traveling north on Route 9W at the time. She was transported to Albany Medical Center Hospital by the Delmar Rescue Squad for treatment of a head injury.

Her passenger was not transported to the hospital but did complain of pain in his arm and hand, said Heffernan.

No tickets have been issued. Responders included the Delmar and Elsmere fire departments, Bethlehem

Police, and the Delmar Rescue Squad.

National Grid continues improvements

National Grid is continuing infrastructure improvement work in the Delmar area by replacing poles, transformers, fuses and wires in several neighborhoods.

National Grid is contracting this work with D & D Utilities, which will be working along back lot areas behind homes where many of these poles are located.

"This work is part of a larger effort in this area to improve reliability and service to our customers," said Energy Solutions Regional Director for National Grid William Flaherty. "We appreciate our customers' patience as we make these improvements."

Work is being done over the next few weeks in the Delmar areas of Winne Road, Center

Lane, Louise, Rowland and Darroch roads as well as in the Fernbank area, on Clarkson, Wellington, Palmer, Douglas and Wedge roads and a section of Elsmere Avenue.

Households in these areas may experience two short power interruptions: One 20-minute interruption, and a 90-minute interruption at the completion of the job to accommodate the switchover to the new service. Customers will be notified at least one day in advance before each interruption occurs.

The work complements the tree trimming work that was done in the community last fall to improve overall service reliability.

Trimming took place to remove vegetation and limbs from nearby electrical equipment. Crews removed limbs that were pressing on electric lines, chipped branches and raked the work area to pick up smaller twigs and disperse sawdust.

For information, call National Grid Customer Service at 800-642-4272.

Room for art

Local designer uses her skill as a painter to bring interior spaces to life

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Whether art imitates life or life imitates art, Slingerlands' own Deidre Gatta is transforming everyday objects into pieces of art one room at a time.

Gaining national recognition for her designs in magazines such as House Beautiful, Better Homes and Gardens, and Good Housekeeping, Gatta lives and works in Bethlehem with her husband and two teenage daughters.

"I really try to stay locally, due to my children," Gatta said while showing off some of the artistic touches she has incorporated into her own home. "I do receive calls from people all over wanting to purchase some of my work."

At first glance, Gatta appears to live in a relatively normal suburban home on the hillside of a cul-de-sac with an in-ground pool and two beautiful Akita dogs, but the furnishings inside her home are anything but ordinary.

Ornate curtains and sashes drape over the windows, expertly detailed faux finishes sculpt the walls, and extraordinary paintings cover the shades of her lamps. If the rooms of her home look like they came right out of the pages of a design magazine, it's probably not too far off because her work is increasingly being picked up by a variety of interior design publications.

In her living room hangs the one painting she hasn't sold and the only one she won't.

"It's called 'Open Field,'" Gatta said with a smile, pointing to the landscape scene prominently displayed. "This is my inspiration."

The painting netted her several awards from Alfred University while she was there, and her husband even used it as a label on one of his home-made wines. (She joked that her husband wishes he were a wine maker instead of the CEO of Portadam, Inc.)

Graduating from Alfred with a bachelor's degree in fine arts, Gatta has turned her skills as a painter into a blossoming design career.

Her company, Artistic Designs by Deidre, serves residential and commercial clients and offers a variety of services, from design consulting to plaster finishes and studio art. However, if you're trying to sneak a peak at her upcoming works, you may be out of luck because Gatta doesn't let anyone into her studio.

"That's off limits," she said with a gentle laugh.

Gatta uses a variety of materials when it comes to renovating a room or a home, or she focuses her creativity on transforming a single object or piece of furniture.

"Sometimes I'll do the whole space, or sometimes I get an order for a specific piece ... or sometimes I'll even get a call for the restoration of a whole house," Gatta said. "I'm always looking around and seeing materials. ... I always try to find something unique and interesting to add to the space, and, if all else fails, I usually have to make it myself."

Gatta will work with homeowners or clients to get the look that best suits them. Other times she will be given carte blanche to reinvent a living space as if given a blank canvas.

"Some people have set ideas and just let me do it," she said. "Once we come to an agreement, then we put it together. What I usually ask is, what kind of materials do you envision?"

Gatta said a common question when people see her work inside of a home is, "How long will this take?"

"I think that has a lot to do with all of these home improvement and home makeover shows," Gatta quipped. "A lot of my work is customized."

Although Gatta applies her talents to a variety of objects and furniture, from table legs and floors to outlet covers and end tables, she hasn't gotten a totally far-out request — yet.

"We're in Albany, so we're not going to get that many funky requests," she said. "I have done a dentist office where we've done a mural. ... Murals would be where you kind of get to go crazy."

Examples of her work can be found at her Web site www.adbydeidre.com.

"Her work is amazing. ...

Deidre Gatta stands in front of some of her artwork inside of her Slingerlands home. She is an area interior designer whose work has been featured in several national home design magazines. She is a painter turned designer that has turned her artwork of faux finishes into her own company called Designs by Deidre.

Jarrett Carroll/Spotlight

Deidre can see something that nobody else can see," said Howard Schaffer, a family friend and public relations specialist. "She makes all of this look very easy, but it's really not."

The lifelike qualities of Gatta's craft can be tricky to the eye as she creates faux marble floors and paints uncanny three-dimensional objects right into tables and flooring. If you visit a home that she has worked on, make sure to look before wiping your feet — you may be standing on one of Gatta's original paintings.

Project

site and rising up to 148 feet at the top of a hill on the site.

"That's a 40-foot rise to the top of the hill," Shafer said.

The nearby Bethlehem sewage pump station will be able to handle the extra flow created by the development, Shafer said, and the lots will be served by underground utilities and two 40-inch culvert pipes will serve for water and wastewater services.

The project will be constructed in five phases, according to Shafer, because Spectra's permits only allow them to disturb five acres at a time. The first phase will include 13 lots built along the property's entrance, which will have built-in temporary shut-offs for water and sewer.

"There will be a considerable amount of earth work," he said.

Supervisor Jack Cunningham asked Shafer about possible landslides along the banks of Normanskill as a result of the development's excavating.

"There was a very extensive geotech study done for this project," Shafer responded. "The concept is to keep the water saturation content low

... to prevent a slide."

Shafer said drainage pipes would be set underground along the banks of the Normanskill in order to keep the water table in the ground as low as possible. There are also plans to install two arched culvert pipes that are 36 inches high and three feet wide that cross the road that will serve both as drainage and a crossway for small animals, according to Shafer, as well as a large pond basin to catch excess runoff included on the site.

"So animals, if they feel comfortable and wanted to, can cross the road safely," Shafer said about the pipes running under the roadway.

Councilman Sam Messina asked Shafer if the pipes would be large enough for children to crawl into, citing a possible risk. Shafer responded that children could possibly climb into the pipes, but that they were standard sizes used in developments throughout the area.

Sidewalks were also brought up, with one resident questioning Shafer on what the plans called for, but a map including sidewalks for the project has yet to be completed and was not available at the meeting.

"The desire would be to get a sidewalk down Blessing Road ... down to the roundabout, where there's a pedestrian bridge that crosses the Normanskill," Cunningham said. "Eventually, you should be able to walk down to the Gold Key [restaurant] and even Price Chopper."

Draws

of yet, Dolin responded, "They acted like they wanted to do it quickly."

Dolin said the public overwhelmingly commented on the need for a moratorium and wanted to know where the Town Board stood. "The board is not unanimous at this point," Dolin said.

As it is drafted now, the moratorium calls for a six-month hold on any commercial construction over 30,000 square feet. If enacted, the town would look over its current zoning laws and look into bringing some "outside planning professionals" to help consult on possible new zoning regulations.

Former Assemblyman Bob Prentiss made his second public appearance at a New Scotland meeting to weigh in on the matter.

"I agree with the hundreds of people who turned out en masse at the April 2 workshop to express to the Town Board of New Scotland the wisdom and need for an immediate moratorium on commercial development so that the town's zoning laws and regulations can be updated to comply with the Comprehensive Land Use Plan and better reflect what residents want," said Prentiss.

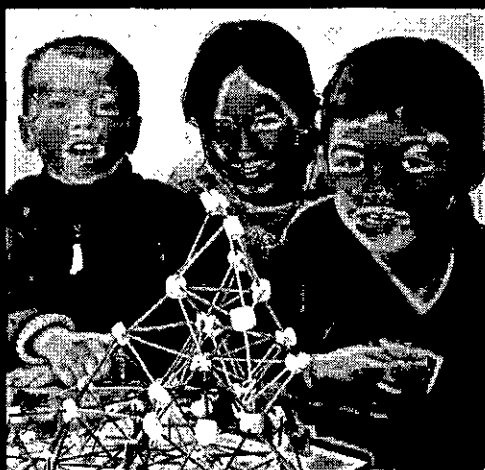

Town Attorney Michael Mackey said that Sphere developers couldn't talk about how close they were to closing the deal on the property because they said it was "subject to a confidentiality agreement."

He also said the town doesn't typically deal with developments of this size, which would max out at 500,000 square feet, according to developers.

"We don't have any great deal of experience with this type of development because of our location here in New Scotland," Mackey said.

Spring

tions families can enjoy that will most likely take up an entire day of April break.

"Don't just sit around during your spring break - get out and discover all the family fun activities that are going on around you," said Elizabeth Hosford, marketing manager of the Albany Conventions and Visitors Bureau.

Albany, Schenectady and Saratoga counties are filled with museums and attractions, as well as unique opportunities to explore the area's history. Several places even hold special programs during school vacation weeks.

"There is plenty going on in Albany in April," said Hosford.

The Henry Hudson Planetarium, for example, is showing "ZOO in the Sky," a planetarium program geared to preschool and elementary-aged children exploring the animals of the earth and the night sky, which includes puppetry and storytelling.

Afterward, skip over to Jillian's for lunch and a little afternoon entertainment for the kids at Jillian's game room. While the kids play, parents can sit back in the restaurant with a snack and a book.

Another exciting and popular activity in Albany is an Albany Aqua Ducks tour.

"A lot of people have never been on the Hudson River, and the Aqua Duck is a [great] way to enjoy the river and discover it," says Kathy Condon, marketing consultant with Albany Aqua Ducks.

The "Aqua Duck" is an amphibious vehicle the can traverse the streets of Albany and Troy, followed by a "splash" into the Hudson River for a scenic ride.

"Some people from the Capital Region have taken this tour and said, 'Wow, we didn't know that about Albany,'" said Condon. "Like living anywhere, you don't take the time to experience what the region has to offer. Here in Albany, it's a great way to see all there is out there."

Albany Aqua Ducks and Trolleys offer a variety of tours to suit every interest - the traditional historic tour is 90 minutes, highlighting historic places throughout Albany, but if you think that might be a little too long for the kids to sit through, Albany Aqua Ducks and Trolleys also offers special tours for them to enjoy, which are shorter and geared more toward young ones.

"The Ducks are just a lot of fun, and everybody enjoys it. It's one of those things you can do with great grandma, grandma, the kids, whatever," said Condon.

In Schenectady, families can make their own bugs and volcanoes at Proctors, take a guided tour through the historical Stockade neighborhood, or learn about the history of aviation.

Proctors offers activities year-round but also has a special vacation programming series during school vacation weeks to entertain and educate kids and parents.

"It's to keep up with our commitment to inspire that new generation of arts enthusiasts and to have their parents here in our facility," Sheila Backowski, school program manager at Proctors.

This April's programming includes two iWerks films, "Bugs 3D!" and "Forces of Nature." "Bugs" is a live-action nature drama that explores the dramatic and exciting lives of a praying mantis and a butterfly. "Forces of Nature" depicts real-life earthquakes, volcanoes and storms. The National Geographic movie follows scientists on their quests to (safely) figure out how natural disasters are triggered.

After each film, a workshop is held. After "Bugs" kids can build their own bugs, and after "Forces of Nature," kids can build their own volcanoes.

After a visit to Proctors, families can check out the Schenectady Historical Society.

"Spring is a lovely time to take a walking tour of the Stockade," says Nell Burrows, group services manager of the Chamber of Schenectady County.

Designated in 1962 by New York as the state's first historic district, one could spend an afternoon walking around and learning some important bits of history about the area, all while taking in the beautiful architecture. Learn about pioneer life and the role the Native Americans played in the area's very early history; see where one of the first battles reflecting the European struggle to control the New World occurred; and find out about the Erie Canal's role in the Stockade's history.

The Chamber of Schenectady County offers brochures to assist people on a walking tour, and the Schenectady County Historical Society offers guided tours of the area. The Historical Society is a worthwhile stop, exhibiting documents of rural and domestic life from 1690 to today.

Finally, in Schenectady, visit the The Empire State Aerosciences Museum.

"We've been in existence for 22 years. Our mission and our purpose is to interpret aviation, especially in New York state," said Kevin Millington, president of The Empire State Aerosciences Museum.

Featuring an airpark with more than 15 varieties of jetfighters and attack planes from the 1950s to today, the museum also boasts large exhibit galleries with many hands-on activities, such as a flight simulator and a hot-air balloon you work yourself.

"We offer a variety of aircraft types - ones you can't see everywhere," says Millington.

Last, but not least, is Saratoga County. Although the race track won't be opening for a while, there is still plenty to do and see.

Families can spend an entire afternoon perusing the shops along Broadway, stopping to eat lunch in one of the many restaurants or cafes, or make a visit to any one of Saratoga's museums - there's bound to be something to meet everyone's interests.

Start at the Frances Young Tang Teaching Museum and Art Gallery at Skidmore College (more commonly called "The Tang" museum).

"The Tang is a great place for families to come visit, and all of our exhibitions are interesting and engaging to all kids," says Ian Berry, curator at the Tang Museum.

"The Tang shows a wide variety of contemporary art, paintings, video, drawings and photographs that engage the whole family," says Berry.

The museum features many educational events throughout the year, including a series called "Family Saturdays," each Saturday throughout the month. Each week, time is spent in the galleries, focusing on a specific aspect of an exhibition. A discussion follows, where participants try to find meaning in the artwork. From there, adults and children work together or side-by-side on creative projects that relate to what was seen and discussed.

For a change of pace, visit the National Museum of Racing and Hall of Fame. Through various exhibits, the museum interprets the history of thoroughbred racing in America. Exhibits in the museum include a racing simulator consisting of a mechanical horse synchronized to move with jockey-cam videos (however, you must be at least 48" tall to ride), a starting gate used for horse racing, equine painting and sculpture, and an anatomy room, which examines the physiology of a thoroughbred. Be sure to bring the kids to the HorsePlay! gallery, which is designed just for kids and filled with various equine-related hands-on activities.

With all of the activities listed above, hopefully you won't hear, "I'm bored," too much during the April break, and maybe you'll have a few extra pennies in your pocket with the money you saved on gas - put it toward a new teddy bear.

Rally

key stops by the Garnet Raiders' defense helped them hold on for the victory.

Packy Dollard scored five goals, and D.J. O'Connell contributed four goals and two assists for Colonie. Brian Sleasman added two goals, while Matt Hamilton (one goal), Dan Sofia (one assist), John Charlton (one assist) and Justin Davis (one assist) chipped in points.

"We're starting to move the ball well, and as I told the guys, we have to know our roles," said Joyce. "We can't just give the ball to our two best players (Dollard and O'Connell) because other teams are going to start shutting them down. We have to (all) go to the cage."

Both Colonie and Bethlehem had busy vacation weeks planned. After hosting Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake Monday, Colonie plays Shenendehowa Wednesday and Columbia Friday. Following a non-league game against Schenectady Monday, Bethlehem hosts Saratoga Springs Wednesday before visiting BH-BL Friday and Queensbury Saturday.

"I think we have a schedule where - out of our next eight games - I feel we can win six out of the eight," said Rounds. "Certain things have to happen for us, though."

Hockey

started going through my music collection trying to find some alternatives that could be played when nothing is happening on the ice. My two rules were that it had to be rock and roll (since hockey and rock go together like peanut butter and jelly), and it had to be family friendly. Here's what I came up with:

- "Words" and "Pounding" by British rock band Doves. "Words" is at least a semi-familiar song for those who saw the NFL Network TV ads promoting its first season of game telecasts, but I like the chorus better for when players start jawing at each other ("Words/they say nothing/so you can't hurt me"). As for "Pounding," the opening instrumental part can get any crowd going.

- "Plowed" by alternative rock band Sponge. It's got all the elements of a great rock song for a hockey game - a pounding beat, loud guitars and lyrics about getting hit hard, even if the object doing the hitting is only something you usually hear, not feel per se ("I'm plowed into the sound"). This song should be played at all hockey arenas.

- "You Wreck Me" and "Runnin' Down a Dream" by Tom Petty. "You Wreck Me" sounds like the title of a good hockey song, and what American Hockey League player isn't "Runnin' Down a Dream?" I swear, Tom Petty is a hockey fan.

- "I'm the Man" by Joe Jackson. Culled from his early days when he was a post-punk-popster, this song from the late 1970s has the same elements as "Plowed," except that the song isn't about being hit hard. It's about being the man (which Rats goaltender Michael Leighton has been for 95 percent of the season).

- "C'mon" and "Walk Like You Don't Mind" by Blue Rodeo. You're going to have to take my word on these two songs, but they both rock. And besides, the guy who wrote both songs, Jim Cuddy, is a hockey player. You have to play rock songs written by a hockey player at a hockey game, don't you?

And for a little regional flavor, I offer these two songs:

- "Silver Bullets" by the Sense Offenders. Contrary to the band's name, this song is not offensive to the senses. In fact, it's a really good rock song with great hooks and a sing-along chorus. It also has a great verse for any hockey team - "Nothing's gonna stop me now/you can do what you like/you can call the cops/nothing's gonna stop me tonight/not even silver bullets."

- "Blast the Message" by Super 400. Again, it has a powerful guitar riff, which all great hockey songs should have. And what's more inspiring than to be asked to blast the message?

Add any or all of these songs to the Rats' in-game play list, and I'll promise you that you'll have a good time. So good, in fact, that you might not miss "YMCA."

That is, if you're not one of the 6,500 people who like "YMCA."

BC girls place second at CBA/LaSalle Relays

The Bethlehem girls track and field team finished second at Saturday's CBA/LaSalle Relays at Christian Brothers Academy in Colonie.

The Lady Eagles finished with 93 points, 58 points behind overall champion Colonie. Schenectady was third with 66 points.

Bethlehem's boys track team also had a strong showing at the CBA/LaSalle Relays. The Eagles placed fourth with 70 points, 10 points behind third-place Schenectady.

Shaker won the boys team title with 137 points, well ahead of runner-up Albany.

The Bethlehem baseball team withstood a last-inning rally to edge Columbia 4-3 Monday in a Suburban Council Gold Division game.

The Eagles led 4-1 entering the seventh inning before the Blue Devils made a last-ditch attempt at winning their first Suburban Council game of the season.

"A win's a win, but they came back on us and fought very hard," said Bethlehem coach Rob Helm. "Matt Nash pitched a great game and closed the door on them in the last inning."

Nash fell into a groove after a shaky start. The senior allowed five hits and walked six, but he struck out 10 batters.

"He's going to pitch (NCAA) Division I next year, and he showed it in this game," Helm said of Nash.

Bethlehem's offense didn't get going until the third inning. After a leadoff walk to Alex Sobiecki, Mike Fish drilled an RBI double to put the Eagles on the scoreboard. Will DeRuve singled Fish home and later scored on a wild pitch to give Bethlehem a 3-1 lead.

"Once the second rotation

(through the lineup) began, the boys figured (Columbia's pitcher) out," said Helm. "We don't see a lot of lefty pitchers because we don't have a lefty on our own staff. After the boys saw what they were up against, we were able to do some damage."

Designated hitter Chris Reidel added an RBI single in the bottom of the fifth inning to give Nash a three-run cushion — one that he needed after walking three batters and throwing two wild pitches in the top of the seventh to give Columbia two runs. But he struck out the last two batters he faced to preserve his complete-game win.

The victory over Columbia came two days after Bethlehem split a Saturday doubleheader with a pair of Big 10 teams. The Eagles defeated Catholic Central 13-0 in the first game behind a three-hit, 10-strikeout effort from pitcher Randy Bowers and a Matt Branigan home run. They then lost to Albany 5-1 in the afternoon contest.

Bethlehem returns to action Wednesday when it hosts Niskayuna.

Many physicians in the Capital District are using a new technology called the electronic health record, or EHR. The EHR is a computerized medical record which assists physicians in the collection, evaluation and documentation of information regarding your medical care.

The EHR has many benefits compared to the traditional system of paper charts. It is easier for physicians to access the medical records both from within the office and outside the office. The EHR accurately retains and retrieves information that might otherwise be lost or forgotten in a paper chart. Physicians can transmit clinical information easily and efficiently to consultants and specialists who collaborate in care. Prescriptions can even be faxed directly to the pharmacy via the computer system, speeding up the availability of your medication. The Health Management Plan (HMP) helps physicians to monitor and respond to recommended procedures for health maintenance and disease management. Alerts are created when an HMP item is due or overdue, alerting clinicians to clinically significant events, such as immunizations, health screening tests, or relevant lab studies. With this feature, important elements of the care plan are neither forgotten nor overlooked. In other words, the EHR provides physicians and patients with the information that they need, when and where they need it, so that they can optimize a plan of care.

Talk to your doctor about your plan for good health. You and your physician have a new tool to help document and monitor your progress - the Electronic Health Record.

Rally falls short

Bethlehem digs out of four-goal hole, only to lose by one

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

Last Thursday's Colonie-Bethlehem boys lacrosse game was a case study in character.

Bethlehem showed character by coming back from an early 4-0 deficit to tie the game in the fourth quarter, but Colonie showed character by scoring the winning goal in a 12-11 Suburban Council victory.

"I hope we build on this," said Colonie coach Mike Joyce. "In the past, we'd lose a close game like that."

"They were handling us pretty good early on, so for us to come back was a good sign for our young guys," said Bethlehem coach Dave Rounds.

It didn't look like it would be a close game after Colonie (1-1 league, 2-1 overall) jumped out to its four-goal lead in the first quarter, but Bethlehem steadily chipped away at the deficit. Led by Dylan Eder (six goals) and Matt DiFrancesco (four goals, three assists), the Eagles steadily chipped away at Colonie's lead until they tied the game at 11 in the fourth quarter.

"Dylan and Matt did the bulk of our scoring, but our younger guys also stepped up," said Rounds. "Our face-off guy is a sophomore, and he did well controlling draws in the second half, and our defense clamped down."

"We just had some mental lapses in the fourth quarter that allowed them to come back," said Joyce.

Colonie regained the lead later in the fourth quarter, and some

Hockey games should rock

Every time I go to an Albany River Rats game, I find myself enjoying the action, but not enjoying all the music played between the action.

Sure there are some good songs in the mix, but then they pull out a moldy oldie like "YMCA" or that dance remix of the bluegrass standard "Cotton-Eyed Joe" and I want to run for the exit or at least the bathroom. And when I walk out of the Times Union Center, I invariably find those songs stuck in my head for the entire drive home.

For a music lover like myself, it's hard for me to cope with driving down 787 while I'm desperately trying to get the chorus of "YMCA" out of my head. What's worse, I'm also trying to get the vision of 6,500 people doing the "YMCA" dance out of my head at the same time.

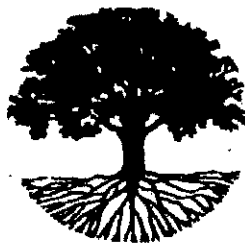

It's a wonder I haven't sideswiped a semi yet.

(Note to all "YMCA" fans: I respect the fact that you consider it a fun song and a fun dance. I just don't find it fun to contort my body to form the letters Y, M, C and A. I'd rather do 1,000 squat thrusts, and thankfully I haven't done a squat thrust since high school physical education class. Plus, I just don't like the song.)

So after watching the Rats' final regular season home game Friday, I went home and

Road safety starts with good tires

Regular auto maintenance is imperative to ensure your car is functioning at its best. While oil changes and seasonal preparation are important, one of the most critical parts of your car to maintain is also something that is often overlooked – the tires.

"The truth is that your driving experience is only as good as the tires on your car. And because your tires are the only thing that come between you and the road, it is important to get the right tires so you get the safest driving experience," says Rick Brennan, tight cornering, and quick stops. So although they cost a bit more, the tradeoff in increased safety is worth the investment.

"Even if you drive a luxury vehicle, performance tires can be beneficial. A high performance tire can deliver 2 percent better braking in a 60-to-zero situation. It appears to be a small number, but that equals about 5 to 6 feet difference, which could be the difference between an accident or not," comments Brennan.

Why put off shopping for new tires when they are such a crucial part of your safety while driving? Here are the basics to get you started:

Load Index

Your current tire will have a size stamped on the sidewall. It will look something like: 215/55R16 93V. The "93" is referred to as your load index followed by a single letter (V) identifying the tire's speed rating. The load index is the indication of weight the tire can carry safely. It is dangerous to have a load index less than the number that is specified. If you have an improper load index, you could have a blowout.

Speed Rating

A common trade-off for a higher speed rating is a less comfortable ride. For instance an "S" speed-rated tire will give a more comfortable ride compared to "H" speed-rated tire, but the "H" will function better at higher speeds. The ride comfort characteristics can be attributed to the tire's overall stiffness. A tire capable of running at high speeds requires a more stiff construction in order to provide the necessary high-speed stability and durability. A dealer will not sell you a lower speed rated tire than what is outlined in your vehicle's manual. It is a liability and not considered safe.

In addition to regular oil changes, one of the most critical parts of your car to maintain are the tires.

High Performance Tires

In order to maximize tire handling, the high performance

tread widths are wider than a typical tire. This allows maximum contact area with the road surface. The tread pattern incorporates larger tread blocks for increased stiffness that performs well on dry and wet surfaces. The stiffer construction helps when traveling at high speeds and enhances your handling abilities. High-performance tires are made with different compounds that help them perform better on the road. High performance tires typically have a speed rating of "H" or higher.

One high-performance tire perfect for luxury touring or sports sedans is the Kumho ECSTA LX Platinum. The tire features an asymmetrical tread design, three-dimensional waffle sipes, a jointless nylon cap ply, and a 60,000-mile limited tread wear warranty. With exceptional mileage, outstanding ride comfort, low noise levels, exceptional snow traction and outstanding dry and wet handling, this tire was made to keep you safe on the road. executive at Kumho Tire USA.

High performance tires are a great option to help ensure your safety on the road. Most new cars come equipped with performance tires to match today's more sophisticated handling packages – heavy-duty suspension systems, anti-lock braking systems, increased load-bearing potential and more. High performance tires not only accommodate driving at higher speeds but also perform more safely, especially in the most challenging conditions: slick, rainy roads;

1957 Chevrolet Bel Air

The car of the future: 1950s style

The 1950s was a time of inimitable optimism in the United States. After having just won WWII and defeated two mighty empires, Americans were at an all-time high. The war had created a demand for new technologies, materials and methods of production in order to create the conditions for victory. When the war ended, these new technologies were ready for use and without a market. Quickly, the innovations were put into commercial use. Combined with a newfound disposable consumer income and a move to a suburban lifestyle, the automobile was the perfect center of innovation and development.

The jet age began in the 1950s, and people were absolutely fascinated by the power and strength embodied by jet engines. They wanted some of that marquis power for themselves, and designers were eager to please them. The jet age allowed for much faster production, and the education provided to returning service men and women created a great resource for innovation and development in the car industry.

Cars became lower, longer and wider, with more materials and metals available because they were not needed for the war effort. Family cars, which were normally drab or even mundane, began to sport wings, turbines and after-burner taillights. These effects were purely cosmetic and only added to the value of the car because of the cache of the jet age. Although some detracted from the overall performance, they were such symbols of status and modernity that cars with them continued to fly off dealers' lots.

The 1957 Chevrolet Bel Air was one of the first models to reach commercial popularity with its stylized designs. In comparison to later models, the Bel Air today seems to be a model of restraint, with large but not unwieldy fins and clean lines that have earned it a place among car enthusiasts, particularly in its convertible model. The 1959 Ford Fairlane Skyliner is often noted as the most outlandish of models from this period. Not only was the Skyliner's name intended to evoke images of flight, but the tail fins, headlights and taillights were crafted to nearly absurd proportions to reflect the stylings of contemporary aircraft. The Fairlane also featured a retractable hard-top roof that would come back into vogue 20 years later.

While this trend didn't last long, it was very popular, and these cars remain classic icons of a time of innocence and exuberance in America, when nothing was impossible and there were no damaging effects from the automobile. They represent a fascination with science and technology that could be compared to today's integration of multimedia tools and state-of-the-art electronics. Americans are obsessed with cars and with technology, and it makes sense that, in the 1950s and in the modern age, these two classic examples of Americana would meld and intertwine.

Planning a summer trip? Consider a national park

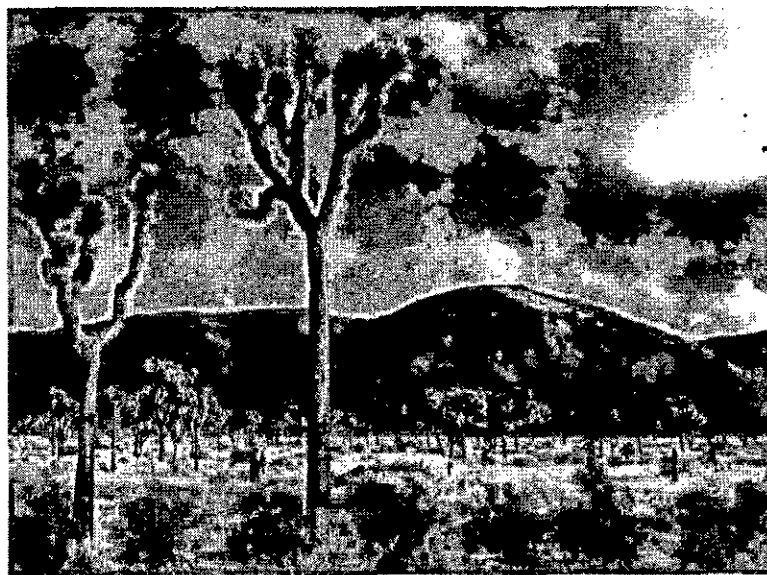

National Park Week begins April 19, the perfect time of year to start planning a summer trip. The weeklong celebration encourages Americans to recognize the diverse American history and vast natural resources that exist in the national parks. Visiting the parks this summer is a great opportunity for Americans to become active participants in park conservation.

Home to a wide variety of American ecosystems, the national parks serve as examples for how global warming is affecting our entire country. The parks offer not only a chance to witness the effects of global warming, but also an opportunity to discover how individuals can help prevent further damage.

Last year, the National Parks Conservation Association (NPCA) released "Unnatural Disaster," a report about global warming and the national parks. The report highlights multiple examples of how global warming is already impacting our parks, but also demonstrates how the most severe effects can still be halted if both individuals and the government act quickly.

"Many of the national parks are already feeling the effects of global warming," says NPCA director of Clean Air and Climate Programs Mark Wenzler, who produced "Unnatural Disaster." "Visiting the parks should inspire us to do something before it's too late. Congress and the Administration must continue to work toward cleaning up dirty, coal-fired power plants and investing in new climate-friendly technologies. Our country's heritage is depending on it."

While many travel columns offer "Places to Visit Before You Die,"

Joshua Tree National Park is one of the jewels of the Mojave Desert in Southern California.

NPCA has highlighted several national parks to visit before they die. Here are a few parks that NPCA's Wenzler urges travelers to see before global warming takes its toll:

- Joshua Tree National Park (CA) is one of the jewels of the Mojave Desert in Southern California. The park is home to a wide array of plant and animal species, including the "jumping" cholla cactus, the desert bighorn, and the desert tortoise. But it is most well-known for its namesake: the Joshua tree. The park may need to consider changing its name at the end of this century, as the beloved tree is expected to slowly disappear. Joshua trees need the temperature to drop to a certain mark in order to reproduce, and according to NPCA's report, that is less likely to happen due to global warming. The change will damage the entire ecosystem of the park, as invasive grasses move into the region to replace them. For more information on visiting Joshua Tree, please go to www.nps.gov/jotr/.

- In Alaska, the Mink Island archaeological site is located off the southern shore of Katmai National Park & Preserve (Alaska). The area is home to the remnants of native settlements stretching back 7,200 years, but they are beginning to erode as sea levels rise and storm activity increases. The park is well known for salmon fishing, both by brown bears and sport fishermen, but scientists warn that the ocean may become too warm to support healthy, wild salmon populations by mid-century. For more information on visiting Katmai, please go to www.nps.gov/katm/.

Motor oil facts, not friction

Many people don't know how to select motor oil that will help them get optimum performance out of their car. People often just select the oil their father used, or they may take the suggestion of a counter person at an auto parts store who may not know any more about cars than they do.

There are meaningful differences in motor oils, and choosing the right one can have a major impact on how well your car runs. Selecting the right oil is the quickest and cheapest way to improve your car's performance and reliability.

Two components determine how well motor oil will perform in your car. One factor is the base oil, and the other is the combination of chemicals (additives) that are added to the base oil.

Base oils

The two primary types of base oils used are mineral and synthetic. Mineral oils are by-products of refined crude oil. Refining helps reduce the impurities but leaves molecules of all shapes and sizes. Synthetic oils are manmade compounds whose molecules are all the same size and shape; consequently, synthetic oil has less friction and performs significantly better than mineral oils.

There's been sizable growth in the use of synthetic oils over the years. In fact, synthetic oils are often the factory fill in many new performance and luxury cars.

Additives

Regardless of the base oil used, chemicals must be added to give motor oil the characteristics needed to do its job. Typical additives that may be added to base oil include detergents to reduce the formation of residue, defoamants to deter absorption of air, anti-wear agents, antioxidants and others.

Although additives are typically only 15 to 25 percent of the make-up of motor oil, they can impact a lubricant's performance much more than the base oil. For instance, mineral-based motor oil with a very good additive package can easily outperform synthetic motor oil with a mediocre additive package.

There is no easy way for a consumer to determine the quality of motor oil's additive package. Price is often an indicator of quality since the more advanced additive technologies cost more to produce. Performance is the ultimate measure of additive package quality.

Advances in lubrication

Some of the biggest technological advances in lubrication are now coming through advancements in chemical additives. These breakthroughs have been developed by a handful of companies that specialize in high-performance lubricants, as opposed to major oil companies whose primary focus is refining and selling crude oil by products like gasoline and other fuels.

One high-performance lubricant company, Royal Purple, has developed lubricants that outperform both leading mineral oils and other synthetics. Their oil has been proven in numerous independent tests to dramatically reduce engine wear, increase horsepower and torque, and reduce fuel consumption and emissions. Cars using their oils can also go further between oil changes, saving the owner time

Whether they are in their cars on business or vacation, millions of Americans will wonder how they can reduce the impact their motoring has on the environment and on their wallets.

Green, gas-saving secrets of summer vacation driving

Millions of Americans will hit the roads during the warm-weather months. Whether they're in the car on business or vacation, many drivers will likely share two major concerns: how they can reduce the impact their motoring has on the environment and on their wallets.

"Gas consumption - and prices - historically rise with the temperature as more people drive for work or pleasure during the warmer months," says Sue Pinera, environmental programs director of the Hertz Corp., leaders in the rental car industry. "But you can definitely drive green and save yourself some money without having to trade in your reliable, reasonably priced family vehicle for a new one that features the latest eco-friendly technology."

Summer vacations often mean extra driving, either to your destination in your own vehicle or, if you fly, in a rental car once you're there. "Of all summer driving, vacation driving can be the most costly and least green," Pinera points out. "Whether it's spending time stuck in traffic or driving in circles looking for an attraction site in an unfamiliar location, there are plenty of opportunities to waste gas."

Car rental agents, who work in tourist areas across the country leasing a variety of vehicles, have seen everything that works - and doesn't work - when it comes to conserving gas, saving money and preserving the environment while vacation driving. Here are some tips from agents at Hertz for smart vacation driving:

In your own car

- Have your car thoroughly checked out before going on a long vacation road trip. Be sure tires are properly inflated, oil and oil and air filters are fresh, and the air-conditioning is working properly. "Just $100 in preventative maintenance can save you real dollars in terms of fuel efficiency and a great deal of aggravation if you happen to catch a potentially serious problem before you break down on the roadside," Pinera says.

- Drive smoothly and considerately. Aggressive driving - fast starts, excessive speed, abrupt maneuvers and constant braking - is not only dangerous, it significantly increases your vehicle's fuel consumption. "You'll enjoy the ride more and spend less on gas if you just drive friendly," Pinera says.

- Only use premium fuel if your car's manufacturer specifically recommends it for your engine type. Regular fuel costs less and premium will not improve your fuel efficiency in anything but a high-performance engine.

- Look for gas stations that offer pumps with vapor-recovery nozzles. They look like black plastic accordions attached to the nozzle. These curb emissions. Likewise, never try to "top off" your tank with these nozzles. They're designed to shut off when the gas tank is at its optimum fullness. Continuing to pump could lead to overfilling and spilling.

- Try to pack light and avoid putting anything on top of your vehicle. Rooftop storage may increase the risk of rollover in some types of vehicles, and increases drag, which lowers fuel efficiency in all kinds of autos.

In a rental car

- Whenever possible, choose a fuel-efficient model, such as a subcompact, compact or economy car. The good news is that these are usually the least expensive to rent from any company.

- Consider renting a hybrid. Hertz, for example, offers a "Green Collection" of rental cars that includes fuel-sipping hybrids like the Toyota Prius or other environmentally friendly vehicles like the Toyota Camry or Hyundai Sonata, which feature an average Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) highway fuel efficiency rating of 31 miles per gallon.

- Paying the extra fee for a navigation system can go a long way toward saving you time (and money) driving around lost. "Navigation systems can help you find your way in unfamiliar territory, helping you reach your list of attractions with a minimum of time and gas lost," Pinera says. "How you entertain the kids in the back seat, however, is entirely up to you."

• Great Smoky Mountains National Park (TN, NC) is the most visited national park in the country. The park is home to a thriving recreational fishing economy. But, even a slight increase in temperature could eliminate 80 to 90 percent of trout habitat in the region. Rare and ancient forests, remnants of the last ice age, may be threatened by increasing ground-level ozone and insect pests, brought about by warming. For more information on visiting Great Smoky Mountains, please go to www.nps.gov/grsm/.

• On the shore of Lake Superior, Apostle Islands National Lakeshore (WI) is experiencing global warming problems of its own. With the water level in Lake Superior decreasing, boating facilities must be redesigned and replaced in order to maintain park visitors' enjoyment and safety. For more information on visiting Apostle Islands, please go to www.nps.gov/apis/.

• Rocky Mountain National Park (CO) is known by most Americans for its natural, majestic beauty. Elk, mule deer, moose, bighorn sheep, coyotes and black bears are just a few of the types of animals that make their home in this park near Denver. The park is currently experiencing rising temperatures and diminishing snow pack, which is causing trees to take over high elevation alpine tundra. The change puts at risk animals that have adapted to this kind of ecosystem. The park is also experiencing increased wildfires, which may lead to closures of the park to visitors. For more information on visiting Rocky Mountain, please go to www.nps.gov/romo/.

• Ellis Island National Monument opened in 1892 as the nation's premier federal immigration station. More than 40 percent of Americans can trace their ancestry through the site, which is currently a museum. Today, immigration records need to be removed from the park, as they are threatened by rising seas caused by global warming. For more information on visiting Ellis Island, please go to www.nps.gov/ellis/.

• For those who do not already know, Everglades National Park (FL) is facing some of the more serious effects of global warming. More powerful hurricanes combined with sea level rise could destroy park buildings and roads, hampering visitor access. By the end of this century, we could see the entire park completely under water. For more information on visiting the Everglades, please go to www.nps.gov/ever/.

• Like Joshua Tree, Glacier National Park (MT) might also need to consider changing its name. The glaciers that the park is famous for are slowly disappearing, and could completely disappear in just a few decades. For more information on visiting Glacier, go to www.nps.gov/glac/.

Devil in the detailing

Appearances are more important than ever, and your car is no exception. It is often the first impression people have of you when you arrive at an event or work or when they arrive at your home. As such, it's important to have your car looking as immaculate as possible. Many people are willing to spend thousands of dollars on top of the car's price on extras and sport packages, but are not willing to take the time and effort to keep up the appearance of their car.

A thorough rinse is the first step in cleaning your car. Always clean the wheels and the tires before you clean the rest of the car, and don't use the same sponge or mitt on the exterior as you do for the tires. The tires are often the dirtiest parts and pick up all the road grime. You should always use cleaning products that are manufactured specifically for cars. Use a stiff brush to improve the tire's appearance, even if you don't have white walls or decorative tires. The wheels need a separate wheel cleaner that removes the brake dust, which often collects on the front of the wheels and can blacken them. The directions on each of these products will vary depending on the chemicals involved, so be sure to read them. If you can find a reliable product that you like, stick with it.

Household cleaners can strip the wax from the paint and damage the finish on your car, so it is best to use products designed for cars. Wash one section at a time, clearing away all of the soap. Soap can build up and leave spots or settle into cracks and become hard to get out, damaging the overall finish. Work from the top of the car to the front, then come around and clean the rear of the car. The backside usually has the most dust and grime, and you don't want to spread that around to the rest of your car. Use cascading water, not a high pressure to remove all of the final vestiges of soap and apply a final rinse.

Waxing is the next step, and it is one that too many people skip. Waxing is an excellent way to protect the finish and make subsequent washing easier. Look for foreign particles on or in the paint. More specialty products are manufactured to remove contaminants that might be embedded in the paint. It is often recommended that waxes not be applied in direct sunlight.

Keeping your car clean and waxed can make it more pleasurable to drive around town. It will also make a good impression on your friends and employer.

More horsepower for less than $100

Want more horsepower without paying much to get it? Here are three ways today's top engine builders get more power from their racing engines and their personal cars, without spending a lot of money to do it.

Upgrade your lubricants - Friction and heat from engine components and the drive train rob horsepower and performance. Minimizing this power loss can be as easy as upgrading to one of the newer high performance lubricants that are available. For instance, in a recent test by Horsepower TV, upgrading to high performance motor oil freed up 8 horsepower in a V8 engine. Video of the test and more information on upgrading lubricants can be found at www.royalpurple.com.

Replace and/or upgrade your air filter - During the life of your engine, thousands of cubic feet of air will pass through the engine cylinders. Dust and other material in the engine can cause excessive wear and operating problems. It's imperative that you keep air filters clean by regularly replacing them.

To further enhance performance, upgrade to a performance air filter, which can free up an additional 2 to 3 horsepower. While not a tremendous power gain, the relatively low cost of a filter and ease of installation (about 5 minutes) more than make up for it.

Use higher octane gas or an octane booster - Go for the good stuff the next time you're at the pump. Depending on your vehicle, high octane gasoline can provide an increase in horsepower. Even a marginal gain in switching from the lowest octane gasoline to the highest octane may be worth a few extra pennies at the pump to you.

For those who want to see a more measurable increase in power, a racing blend of gasoline will work well or one of the numerous brands of octane booster commonly available at auto parts stores.

Upgrading your gas, lubricants and air filter are a cheap and easy way to increase horsepower. These simple steps will also extend the life of your engine and help prevent expensive repairs.

AAA: A history of service

Almost immediately after the first horseless carriages appeared on America's roads, motorists began organizing automobile clubs. In 1902, only 23,000 cars were in operation in this country compared with 17 million horses. Yet, motoring enthusiasts had formed approximately 50 small auto clubs across the country.

Nine of those clubs met in Chicago on March 4, 1902, to create a national motoring organization, and the American Automobile Association was formed with 1,500 members. The first headquarters office was one shared with the Automobile Club of America, on Fifth Avenue in New York City.

Over 100 years and 51 million members later, AAA's most basic premise remains the same: safe, efficient transportation is a fundamental underpinning of our society.

The Fight for Better Roads

At the turn of the century, existing roads had been designed for the horse and buggy - not the auto. Traveling on those dirt paths was often risky, and AAA's earliest goal was to lead a fight for improvements in the nation's roads to more safely accommodate automobile traffic.

Although there have been many roadblocks, AAA's successes have helped to make road travel easier and safer for all Americans. In 1902, AAA began its long journey as a legislative advocate with bills which called for the appropriation of federal funds for the improvement of national highways and establishing the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads (now the Department of Transportation). Through the years, AAA and its affiliated clubs have worked with government at all levels to ensure the public's interests would be represented.

Traffic Safety Endeavors

The rapidly increasing number of cars on the road in the early 1900s brought about a similar increase in motor vehicle crashes, and prevention of traffic mishaps became an early concern of AAA clubs. Pedestrian safety was also a primary concern. In 1917, AAA issued a resolution advocating that pedestrians abide by signals of traffic officers and cross streets only in designated places. Since that time, AAA has been a staunch advocate for motorist and pedestrian safety, with school safety patrol programs, publishing textbooks and instructional manuals, creating and hosting driver improvement programs, and leading a nationwide effort to pass graduated driver licensing (GDL) laws to ensure teens get the practice and guidance they need to become safe drivers. Data show these laws help reduce the number of teen driver crashes and save lives. AAA also has been actively involved for more than 40 years in combating impaired driving. Special AAA educational programs have been used by thousands of communities and schools to educate students and the public on the seriousness of drinking and driving. In 1985, AAA launched a campaign to promote seat belt and child restraint use, and in 2001 supported legislation or regulations that would mandate the use of safety belts and approved child restraint systems by all occupants of passenger vehicles.

Automotive Issues and Assistance

Auto breakdowns have always

AAA's earliest goal was to lead a fight for improvements in the nation's roads to more safely accommodate automobile traffic.

been a source of frustration to car owners. In 1915, the Automobile Club of St. Louis was the first to introduce an emergency service for motorists. Their First Aid Corp - a group of five motorcyclists - would drive the streets of St. Louis on Sundays looking for stranded motorists and making minor engine and tire repairs.

This service was so successful that it became a nationwide program called Emergency Road Service (ERS) and has now become one of the most valued features of AAA membership. AAA ERS - which responded to nearly 26 million calls in 2007 - is coordinated through a network of more than 116 AAA call centers and 9,340 independently-owned towing services, as well as club-owned towing operations.

In 1982, AAA established a toll-free ERS number, 1-800-AAA-HELP for traveling U.S. and Canadian members. AAA counselors handle ERS calls and respond to inquiries about travel-related subjects and approved auto repair facilities. Hearing impaired members use the 1-800-955-4833 TDD number toll free.

To ensure members receive reliable and quality workmanship in auto repairs, AAA developed its Approved Auto Repair program in 1975, which identifies automotive repair facilities that have met AAA's stringent criteria in customer satisfaction, equipment requirements and trained technicians.

The AAA Approved Auto Repair program is now the largest independently inspected and approved network of repair facilities in North America with more than 7,000 participating service facilities. These facilities provide special benefits to AAA members including a courtesy safety inspection if the owner arranges to have maintenance or repairs performed on the vehicle and mediation by AAA if needed.

Geographic Information Systems

AAA issued its first map in 1905, a street map of Staten Island. In 1911, AAA produced its first state map, a map of New York, and its first booklet of strip maps detailing a pathfinder's route from New York to Jacksonville. Pathfinders were early road reporters who even today keep AAA's map details up-to-date.

Those strip maps were the forerunners of AAA's famous TripTik® routings, which were trademarked in 1932. TripTik® routings - now available on the Internet at AAA.com - include driving times, mileage, points of interest, current highway conditions, construction and detours, and are individually tailored for each trip. Since the early 1900s, AAA has been a leader in the development of maps and atlases of North America, Europe and many other areas of the world.

This position of leadership perhaps resulted in AAA's greatest cartographic contribution to the United States when, in 1942, AAA placed its mapping facilities at the disposal of the Department of the Army in support of the nation's war effort. This generous offer was made again in 1951 to the National Defense Department during the Korean War.

But times of war are not the only times that AAA has aided the government through its mapping resources. AAA frequently provides maps to support emergency service providers in times of natural disasters such as wildfires or hurricanes.

Today, there are lots of reasons to be glad you have AAA. Getting back on the road is just one of them.

How to keep your car cool this summer

After spending the long, cold winter bundled up, a lot of people are itching to take a road trip. Whether that means you'll be heading half way across the country or just to the next town, there's just something about that feeling you get when you hop into the car, roll down the windows and drive.

But when your car feels like it's 200 degrees inside on those warm sunny days, it's hard to get in, much less going. So what can you do about it? The best solution would be to park in a garage or in the shade all the time, but a more realistic answer to this age-old problem is to add window vents to your car.

These decorative "eves" allow you to leave windows open a crack in the summertime so air can circulate. Warm air vents out and the cooler outside air finds its way in, and you don't have to worry about a sudden rainstorm. "AVS Ventvisors are a simple and elegant solution to a problem made worse in recent years by vehicle design. Today, many vehicles have side windows that slant inward at the top, to reduce wind resistance. As a result, when it rains, water runs off the roof and into the vehicle if a window is open even slightly. Ventvisors will keep the rain out and let the fresh air in," says Peter May, spokesman for AVS, a brand name known for its quality line of car customizing accessories.

His company offers two window vent styles that you can install yourself. The original Ventvisor attaches easily to the exterior of your car with strong 3M tape. The AVS In-Channel Ventvisor installs inside the window channel, giving your car a sleek, streamlined appearance.

An added bonus is that no exterior tape touches the vehicle's paint.

Made from heavy-duty acrylic, the window vents can be painted to match your car, or you can choose to use them as is, in a stylish smoke tint or chrome. Window vents are available for both the front and rear doors, and assisting with air exchange isn't their only benefit. While you're on the road, a window vent can also decrease wind noise for a more pleasant driving experience. For more information on AVS products, or to access a store locator, visit www.lundinternational.com.

In addition to taking steps to make your car feel cooler, it's also important to make sure its systems will function well in warmer weather. Here's a checklist to follow before setting out on a road trip:

- Change oil and oil filter
- Inspect radiator coolant, hoses and belts
- Have a fuel system inspection done to make sure the intake valve and combustion chamber are free from deposits
- Inspect the suspension system and replace the shocks if worn to ensure a smooth ride.
- Check brakes
- Check the tire pressure

With the AAA Show Your Card & Save® discount program, savings are available on products and services at over 160,000 locations across the country and throughout the world.

AAA members saved $91 million more in 2006 than the previous year, when members saved $1.101 billion. When surveyed, AAA members reported saving an average of $98 over the past year, an increase of 13 percent over 2006. In 2007, AAA began using a more comprehensive system of tracking member savings, which revealed that AAA members have been saving more money than previously reported.

"Over the years AAA has developed relationships with companies who are leaders in their industry, and we're glad to know that our members are taking advantage of the great discounts we have negotiated for them," said Tom Wilt, managing director, AAA Partnership Programs. "Many AAA members are learning their membership card can save them money on more than just a hotel room or a car rental."

Both local merchants and international brand partners participate in the Show Your Card & Save program. In 2007, popular merchants such as Linens 'n Things, DIRECTV, and The UPS Store joined the ever expanding list of over 5,000 national, international and local Show Your Card & Save partners.

To help find valuable discounts for AAA members, log on to www.AAA.com/save and access the Search for Savings tool. The easy-to-use database allows users to search for savings by city, type of merchandise, business name or method of purchase.

AAA Roadside Assistance

Roadside Assistance is designed to aid members in an emergency when the vehicle they are driving or riding in becomes disabled. Services that fall within the provisions of the AAA membership incur no additional charges for emergency and towing services.

AAA's no-charge service applies regardless of distance to the scene of disablement and includes towing for a minimum of three miles in any direction from the point of disablement or back to the responding station. Towing charges beyond the free towing mileage limit are set by AAA clubs and are consistent with local commercial rates. If AAA is contacted but cannot provide service, members may obtain their own service and submit the bills for reimbursement at prevailing commercial rates for the region.

AAA Road Service Online® P

AAA pioneered road service delivery in 1915 and continues to introduce new services to meet the real-world needs of members. Today, a request for road service can be made online. Members simply go to AAA.com and look for the AAA Road Service Online® P icon. One click and participating club members are linked to a simple electronic request form that, once completed, gets immediate attention — any time, day or night.

How to pay less at the pump

With gasoline prices still hovering near $3 per gallon in many areas of the country, you may be wishing you could afford a hybrid. The good news is, you can probably increase your fuel efficiency and reduce fuel costs right now – without shelling out thousands more for a hybrid car or waiting a few more years until automakers produce cheaper, more plentiful hybrids.

"Many Americans are already driving vehicles that can run on an alternative fuel, but they may not be aware of that fact," says Ed Lonergan, president of EMTA Holdings Inc., a company involved in developing alternative fuels. "Fuel treatments currently on the market can also help improve fuel efficiency."

So what are alternative fuels and why should consumers care about them?

"Simply stated, an alternative fuel is one that is not entirely derived from petroleum," says Lonergan. "That means the product, distribution and, ultimately, the cost that is passed on to the consumers is not controlled by foreign oil producers or domestic oil companies. Alternative fuels generally cost less than regular gasoline and are better for the environment."

Biodiesel and ethanol may be two alternative fuels you've already heard about. Biodiesel is largely used in commercial applications, while ethanol is most often used in passenger vehicles. Both fuels can only be used in vehicles with engines specifically designed to run on them. Ethanol-gasoline blends, however, are more versatile. More gas stations across the country are beginning to offer ethanol blends, like E85 and E10.

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, E85 is a blend of 15 percent gasoline and 85 percent ethanol. While E85 can't be used in conventional gas-only engines, Flex Fuel Vehicles (FFVs) can run on ethanol, gasoline or any blend of the two. There are more than 6 million FFVs already on the road, and many automakers have announced plans to increase production and the variety of FFVs, according to the EPA. If you're unsure whether you're driving an FFV, look inside your gas tank door for an identification sticker.

E10 is a blend of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent ethanol and virtually every car built after 1980 can run on it. If you haven't already seen it offered at gas stations in your area, chances are you'll be seeing it soon.

Using alternative fuels not only makes sense for your wallet, it can help the economy as well, Lonergan says. "Alternative fuels are made from renewable resources grown on farms, so farmers have an immediate benefit. The second major economic benefit is reduced dependency on foreign oil."

Regardless of gas prices, alternative fuels – and the vehicles that can run on them – are here to stay, experts agree. "New developments are taking place on a continual basis," Lonergan says. "New alternative fuel plants are being constructed across the nation, and new additives that improve performance of alternatives are just now being introduced."

EMTA markets the XenTx line of fuel treatments, largely used in commercial applications that reduce fuel consumption by increasing fuel economy. "It adds up to cleaner air because when you increase fuel economy, you also reduce harmful exhaust emissions," Lonergan says.

The hottest trend in alternative fuels is the conversion of different crops into fuels, he adds, with new additive technology a close second. Domestically grown crops like soy, corn, palm and sugar cane are now being converted into fuel that may soon be sold at a fueling station near you.

Choosing the right motor oil can have a major impact on how well your car runs. It is the quickest and cheapest way to improve your car's performance and reliability.

and money, and reducing the impact on the environment. More information about their products is available at the Web site www.royalpurple.com.

How to Choose

Mineral-based (conventional) motor oils. These are the cheapest and most widely available oils. They typically use standard additive packages that provide minimum levels of performance and protection.

Synthetic motor oils. These man-made oils are more expensive than mineral-based oils but are still widely available. Their performance advantages come predominantly from the synthetic base oil used. They have a longer service life and offer some improvements in protection. They typically use the same additive packages found in mineral-based oils.

High-performance 'specialty' motor oils. These motor oils are the most technologically advanced oils. Although they significantly outperform mineral based or synthetic motor oils, they are about the same price as standard synthetic motor oil.

They are typically only available through auto parts stores and select oil change centers. These oils primarily differ in their use of more advanced, proprietary additive technologies.

Still confused? For a used car with little life left in it, stick with the cheap mineral-based motor oil. For a car you plan to keep for a few years and want to get a little better performance from, you should at least upgrade to synthetic motor oil. To get the most performance out of your car, truck or RV, or to protect a vehicle you really care about and want to last, upgrade to a high performance motor oil.
