Town hears storm-water update

Small retention ponds spring up at developments

"Unfunded mandate" was the recurring theme during the town board's 2008 storm-water update presented by Bethlehem's engineering division.

Paul Penman, P.E., the town's senior civil engineer, explained to the board what is being done about storm-water management and what is being mandated by the county and state during the Wednesday, May 28, meeting.

"Effective Jan. 1, we adopted a storm-water law, and part of that law prohibits ... people dumping things in the storm waters," Penman told the board. "It's not a new requirement, DEC usually has to regulate it, but we now have the enforcement authority to go after people who dump things into the storm sewer that they're not supposed to."

The town has recently completed mapping all storm drains.

Two condo plans in the works

Planning board hears senior housing and Delmar Pointe proposals

By SEAN AHERN

The Town of Bethlehem Planning Board unanimously accepted two drafts for new condominium complexes on Tuesday, June 3.

Glenwood Village, presented by United Group, would be located on Glenmont Road and would include 150 units for controlled-cost senior living with rent starting at $1,250 per month. The complex would include underground parking with elevator access to the four floors of apartments, emergency pull-cords in every bathroom and bedroom, as well as access to public transportation and community programs to create a sense of community among the residents.

United Group's Executive Vice President of Development Terri A. Herubin said that Glenwood Village would "be a good product for Bethlehem."

Glenwood Village was created as a housing alternative for seniors who are still able to live on their own without the constant need of services.

Herubin said the developers are eager to manage the site with the help of the town "to be a good neighbor."

The condominium complex would be one of the tallest buildings in the area.

Planning Board members questioned the effect the development would have on traffic conditions along Glenmont Road.

Board member John Smolinsky said the development would bring diversity to the area but would also create traffic prob-

Man charged with pointing rifle at motorist

Jeffrey T. Plotzker, 19, was arrested by New York State Police out of Troop G in Loudonville, for second-degree menacing, an A-misdemeanor, after he allegedly pointed "a loaded assault-type rifle" at a motorist on Interstate 90.

State police have disclosed that Plotzker has residences in Delmar and North Troy.

Police said that at 8 a.m. on Tuesday, May 27, Plotzker allegedly became angry with another driver for "aggressive driving and speeding" on the interstate during the morning rush-hour commute.

Plotzker caught up to the other driver several miles down I-90, according to the police report.

"At that point, Plotzker managed to drive alongside this motorist and then he pointed a loaded ... rifle at this motorist in an attempt to scare him," the report stated.

The other driver then contacted the state police by cell phone, police said, and gave a description of Plotzker and of the gray 2002 two-door Toyota Solara that he was driving.

Plotzker was located several minutes later on Central Avenue and was stopped by Colonie police and taken into custody, according to the report.

Police discovered a rifle and three loaded magazine clips, which contained more than 40 rounds of ammunition, in Plotzker's possession.

He was eventually released from police custody on an appearance ticket and scheduled to appear in Albany City Police Court on the morning of Wednesday, June 4.

State police say they are interested in anyone who may have had a similar experience involving Plotzker, described a young white male with dark hair, or the driver of a gray 2002 Toyota Solara.

People with any information are asked to contact police at 783-3211.

Other arrests

• Bruce Hancock, 56, of Delmar, was charged with misdemeanor DWI and for driving a motor vehicle without a valid inspection, an infraction, on Delaware Avenue Thursday, May 29.

Bethlehem police said Hancock was driving west on Delaware Avenue when he was stopped and interviewed by an officer who noticed him display signs of intoxication.

He was then given a field sobriety test, which he failed, according to the arrest report, and tested positive for alcohol.

Hancock was placed into custody without incident.

He was transported to the Bethlehem Police Department and "agreed to chemical test but wanted to talk to his lawyer," the report states.

Police said Hancock was given 50 minutes to contact his lawyer but that he was unable to.

Hancock then refused the chemical test and was transported back to his residence.

A refusal form for the chemical test was put into the court case and Hancock is scheduled to return to town court on Tuesday, June 17.

BC senior brass to graduate

Bethlehem quintet ends on a high note

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Starting their musical career at Hamagrael Elementary, five Bethlehem students will soon be walking across the stage and ending their high school careers. But even as they head off to different colleges to pursue music and other endeavors, they will be remembered as Bethlehem's Brass Quintet.

Patrick Hoff and David Sokoler on trumpet, Cara Hannigan on French horn, Dan Paoletti on trombone, and Nina Wolinsky on tuba make up the Bethlehem Central High School wind ensemble's senior brass quintet.

From braces to commencement, this group has stuck together for the last four years playing school concerts and community performances all along the way. In addition to playing in the school's orchestra, the quintet also stepped out on its own, giving its final performances during the high school's Senior Award Nights on Wednesday and Thursday, May 28 and 29.

"We all went to Hamagrael," Hannigan said, with Wolinsky joking, "Yeah, it's our alma mater ... we were all in fifth-grade band."

An outside observer can immediately pick up on the closeness of group as members play their instruments while reading sheet music and reading one another's cues. The same sense of companionship is still there when they sit back and joke with one another after a set.

Couple the bond between musicians with the experience of growing up together through high school and then add the prospect of moving on, and you may get a sense of what's going on with the quintet.

But there's no regrets or sorrow with this group; they're ready to move on and have cherished the time they played together.

"We played at Law Day," Sokoler said, reminiscing about some shows.

"Yeah, that was probably our biggest gig," Wolinsky said. "We were going to play for the governor, but the governor didn't show up. But the attorney general was there."

The group played Friday, May 2, at the New York State Court of Appeals to commemorate the day and gave a performance to remember.

"It was the day after May Day," Paoletti said.

Although the students were picked for their talents with their respective instruments, they stayed together.

"Any one of us could have decided not to do it anymore if we didn't want to," Hoff said.

There didn't seem to be any question of not continuing with this group of musicians as they played senior citizen functions in Bethlehem, the annual St. Peter's Hospital staff party and various school concerts throughout the years.

Their final performance as the quintet ended at the high school's Senior Awards Night senior showcase event, but as Sokoler put it, "We were the showcase that night."

The group's music director, Louise Schwarz, who also conducts the wind ensemble, said she couldn't be prouder of the students.

"In terms of musical success, there is perhaps no greater experience for building confidence, listening skills and musicality than being a part of a chamber group as a part of a student's music education," Schwarz said. "It is an honor to have spent four years working with this talented group. ... This group is unique because of its level of musical excellence and the cohesiveness that comes from knowing each other so well."

Sidewalk to mask construction scars

Residents ask planning board to fix mess left behind by developer

By SEAN AHERN
Spotlight Newspapers
aherns@spotlightnews.com

At the Tuesday, June 3, planning board meeting at Bethlehem Town Hall, plans were put into place to add a 10-foot-wide sidewalk to the McCormick's Hollow subdivision, which will help mask a construction project that has been left unattended for more than a year.

Surveyor Paul Hite outlined the plans for a sidewalk that would stretch from North Street to Harding Avenue. The path would be maintained by the town and cover up work that had been left unresolved by earlier developer Key Stone Companies Inc., which was developing the McCormick's Hollow subdivision - which did not materialize - and left local residents such as Anthony Apuzzi with construction scars on their front lawns.

Hite said that a possible reason for the subdivision plans falling through is that the gradient of the area was such that a road could not be built without drainage problems and issues with pre-existing power poles in the area.

Local residents said they were fed up with the unsightly damage to their neighborhood and would like to see it resolved.

"I would like to see this done," said Audrey Watson, a neighbor to Apuzzi.

The proposed extra-wide sidewalk would allow for emergency access, but landscaping would be added to deter vehicles.

Planning board chairman Parker Mathusa suggested implementing a time line to help speed up the unfinished work.

While both the developer and town have offered few reasons as to why construction was halted or why Apuzzi has had to deal with the remnants of construction on his front lawn for so long, the planning board motioned to see the sidewalk proposal again in two weeks, although a deadline had not been set for when such a project would be completed.

After the motion to revisit the proposal in a week, Apuzzi said, "I'm happy with the proposed plan; not happy with the lack of firm deadline."

He said he has "strong feelings that it [the delay of construction] would not happen in other more visual subdivisions" in the town.

Apuzzi has lived with a damaged front lawn with weed patches and bare spots for the past 17 months and has had to deal with several unexpected construction projects, including one where his wife and her car were blocked from leaving the home as workers re-paved the end of his driveway without notice.

"I would just like to get it done," said town Supervisor Jack Cunningham.

District: No to more modified soccer teams

School board cites finances and other issues

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

At the recommendation of its president and district superintendent, the Bethlehem Board of Education voted to not add an additional modified boys' soccer team to the school's athletic division.

A large contingent of sixth-grade boys has led to a surge of student athletes trying out for modified teams at Bethlehem, according to one Delmar mother, but with only a limited amount of roster room, many students can't make the teams.

Joan Smith asked school board members to consider creating additional modified teams, especially for soccer, where 48 kids tried out for 22 spots last year and 54 students this year for 23 final positions.

Board President James Lytle said he sympathized with the situation but with the budget already in place and the district facing financial restraints, adding teams was not feasible.

"Just to be clear, the cost is a significant issue, but it isn't the only one," Lytle said. "I think the problem is trying to figure out which sports we're doing it for ... and trying to figure out how to explain to parents why we aren't doing the others."

Lytle said scheduling conflicts with the other suburban schools would also be an issue with multiple modified teams. The school's "point of view" is to have equality among all of its athletic teams, he said.

Smith said she understood that the budget was set, and it would be a costly endeavor but asked if corporate sponsors could be brought in.

"The goal is one in which we share. We certainly understand that we try to make sure that as many kids that are interested in physical activities can do so," Lytle said. "I think we would be prepared in the course of our budgetary discussions next year in ways that we can achieve, which may or may not be through expanded the numbers of modified team, but maybe there are other steps we can take."

Smith asked if it was something the board "would keep open," to which Lytle responded "absolutely."

Other parents have expressed similar concerns, according to Smith, who has twin boys in sixth grade. She said she only hopes as many options are available to students as possible but realizes there are financial and equality barriers.

"There's a huge group of kids," Smith said of those interested in school sports. "And I totally believe in gender equality, but there's just not enough girls to make a girls team."

It does not take a village to raise a child

And other fatherly advice from me to you on Father's Day

Hello and welcome to a special Father's Day edition of "Pop Culture," America's No. 1 resource for parenting advice.

You know, I've been at this fatherhood thing for a little over four years now, and that obviously makes me an expert on the subject, so in the spirit of Father's Day, I'd like to impart some fatherly advice to any expecting, new or just terrible fathers out there.

I'm sure that if new fathers and longtime dads alike follow this advice to the letter, they will wind up with well-rounded, healthy youngsters.

Setting aside 20 percent of your gross annual income for therapy is good insurance, however.

That being said, here we go:

- Don't listen to Dr. Spock.

There is no doubt Dr. Benjamin Spock's influence will reach far into many generations of children. The man who would become what some would call the most trusted pediatrician and best-selling author of all time was born in New Haven, Conn., on May 2, 1903. As the eldest of six children, Benjamin McLane Spock was immersed in the world of childcare at an early age, helping to change

Commentary:

Pop Culture

diapers, babysit, feed, and otherwise attend to his siblings. Spock authored "Baby and Child Care," in which he assured parents that they were the true experts on their own children. Spock urged parents to be flexible and see their children as individuals.

Shortly after this, Spock ventured into the great unknown by enlisting in the Starfleet academy and traipsing around the galaxy with a much better father figure: Captain James T. Kirk.

Kirk obviously was much better suited for fatherhood than Spock. This is evidenced in a lot of the advice he doled out to his comrades and subordinates.

The next time your toddler is throwing a tantrum, heed the advice of James Tiberius Kirk: "We humans are full of unpredictable emotions that logic alone cannot solve."

And the next time your young one wonders why he can't stay up late and eat ice cream, when he knows darn well that you're going to do exactly that, tell him, "One of the advantages of being Captain is being able to ask for advice without necessarily having to take it."

Bill DeVoe is not a big fan of the Village People — or at least the philosophy that it takes a village to raise a child.

I'll tell you what, you replace "Captain" with "dad" in that sentence, and you've got the parenting philosophy of about 99 percent of the fathers out there.

When your children are grown and entering the working world, you can prepare them with this little gem Kirk probably fired off as an afterthought: "A meeting is an event where minutes are taken and hours wasted."

That's wisdom, sir.

- Don't be afraid to use the undead as a motivational tool.

A few weeks ago, my wife and I took my son, Kevin, to see the movie, "Iron Man." We explained to him that, even though he may have questions during the movie, he would have to be as quiet as possible so as not to disturb anyone else. About, oh, two seconds into the film, Kevin began asking us questions rather loudly about what was going on onscreen.

After a few unsuccessful attempts to quiet him, I leaned down and said in his ear, "Kevin, I want you to be as quiet as you would be when the zombies come looking for you."

He didn't say another word for the rest of the film.

For decades the debate has raged on as to whether or not the threat of flesh-eating zombies is an effective parenting tool, but I've found that I can use the threat of a zombie invasion in nearly any difficult parenting situation. It can be as logical as, "If you don't eat your vegetables, you won't have the strength to outrun the hordes of undead that want to eat your flesh," or used as unsophisticatedly as, "Zombies think kids with dirty ears taste better."

This works particularly when kids are at the stage where they play one parent off of the other. You tell them they can't set the dog on fire, they'll go ask your wife the same thing. The sad thing is, sometimes it works. Sometimes, whether it's by accident or the result of a great deal of whining and pleading, one parent does say the opposite of what the other parent has already said.

This is why zombies are an excellent resource. No kid will argue with a zombie. No child will take what you said back to a zombie and expect it to say something different. If you tell a kid that if he doesn't pick up his toys he will have his skull bitten by a rotting, stinking ghoul, those toys will be picked up.

Try it, you won't be sorry.

- It does not take a village to raise a child.

Whoever said that must be some sort of failed presidential candidate or something. It does not take a village. By most accounts, every village has an idiot and at least one in Texas has lost theirs. If they can't even keep track of their idiots, how do you expect them to keep an eye on your kids? There are some pretty crazy people in most villages, and I'd appreciate it if they had nothing whatsoever to do with the raising of my children.

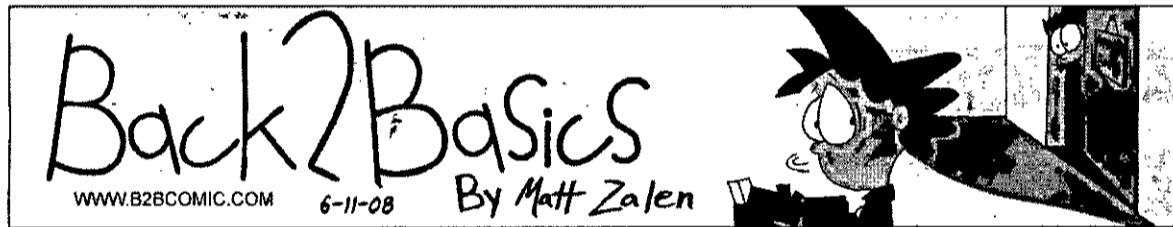

From what I understand, villages produce only a few types of people: policemen, construction workers, bikers, cowboys and American Indian chiefs. My son wants to be a racecar driver when he grows up and, from what I've seen, villages have no vocational programs for that kind of thing.

Don't get me wrong, I've been to some pretty quaint villages, but if they were so great a place, they'd be cities by now, with, you know, running water and stuff.

You know what it takes to raise good children? Good parents. Parents who are mature, supportive and caring enough to use horrific images and television shows to raise their children the best they can.

Happy Father's Day. Go mow the lawn.

IN BRIEF

Bethlehem pool users must have new ID

All Town of Bethlehem residents interested in using the town pool complex, including senior citizens, must have a new ID card this year.

To avoid long lines during the peak of summer, residents are encouraged to obtain pool passes early as all old passes are no longer valid.

The ID room at the Parks and Recreation office is now open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturdays.

As always, proof of residency is required including a photo ID and a current utility bill or tax bill.

The pool complex is open to Town of Bethlehem residents and their guests. The pools will be open daily through Labor Day from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekdays, and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekends. The pool complex includes an Olympic size pool, L-shaped shallow pool, diving tank, and "Splash Islands" sprayground.

For information, visit www.townofbethlehem.org.

Garden club tour June 11

The Bethlehem Garden Club will hold its annual garden tour and plant sale on Wednesday, June 11, from 4 to 8 p.m.

The plant sale is on the Bethlehem Public Library lawn on Borthwick Avenue from 4 to 8 p.m.

Tickets for the tour are $15 and may be purchased starting at 4 p.m. in the parking lots of the Glenmont and Slingerlands Price Choppers.

RCS appoints interim superintendent

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Board of Education on Monday, June 2, appointed longtime Capital District school administrator Dr. Michael Johnson as their interim superintendent.

Johnson will succeed current Superintendent Vicki Wright.

Johnson joins RCS with 32 years of experience in education, most recently serving as assistant interim superintendent of the Mohonasen school district. He is expected to start work in RCS July 1, said Board of Education President Mike Varney.

During his career, Johnson has served in many capacities, including that of elementary and middle school principal, high school assistant principal, counselor, teacher, assistant superintendent and superintendent. Among the local districts he has served are Averill Park, where he the progress the district has made in moving forward with educational initiatives and programs already in place," Varney said.

"I am absolutely thrilled to be able to serve the RCS school district for this coming year. I am going to give 110 percent to ensure the district operates as smoothly as possible," Johnson said.

"The Board of Education believes that he is a strong, effective leader who is professional, knowledgeable and articulate. He is a good choice to continue to move the district in a forward direction," Varney said.

He will earn $550 a day as interim, which Varney said is the going rate for an experienced professional. He will also apply for a waiver to allow him to serve RCS and collect his pension.

"Experienced superintendents are in short supply in New York and a non-retired superintendent will not come to work in any school district for only a year," said the board president.

Johnson is scheduled to meet with various personnel and community members during the month of June.

Community growth

During World War II, while American soldiers fought and died in far-off lands like Sicily and Monte Casino, back home the United States was undergoing a growth spurt of sorts. Victory gardens dotted the nation. In backyards, empty urban lots and apartment rooftops; in parks, baseball fields and schoolyards; neighbors came together, in the name of patriotism, to answer their government's call to aid the war effort.

In the 1940s, because America's resources were devoted to the war, labor and transportation shortages made it hard to harvest and transport fruits and vegetables to market.

Fast forward nearly 70 years, and America is facing similar problems. We are a nation at war, and rising energy costs have made it nearly as difficult to transport fruits and vegetables the average 1,500 miles they must go from harvest to market.

In 1943, The Department of Agriculture estimates, there were 20 million victory gardens that produced more than 8 million pounds of food. More importantly, those gardens produced an unquantifiable sense of national unity in a very tough time for the United States.

We could use some more of that unity.

Amid a controversial war, an unfavorable economy, skyrocketing gas prices and all of the other crises, problems and inconveniences that make life difficult, it's easy to lose the fact that we're all human — all Americans.

Americans share a unique national history in the sense that we come from diverse pasts, have a fractured present, but a common future. We sometimes lose sense of that last part, and perhaps by planting these modern-day victory gardens, we can reclaim some of our national identity — not in the name of the war effort, per se, but in the name of a national, and more importantly, human effort.

Try to leave politics out of it. Yes, a victory garden's historic purpose was to support the war effort, but a victory garden also could be a way to combat high energy consumption that takes place in the process of planting, fertilizing, processing, packaging, and transporting our store-bought food. Regardless of the motive, it's time for us as citizens, residents and neighbors to show a solidarity that hasn't been seen since the two towers fell.

So go ahead, turn over a patch of ground by your fence. Plant something, watch it grow. While you're over there, say hello to your neighbor. Strike up a conversation. Maybe it'll be about politics; hopefully it won't.

Reflections on the Swede life

By TOBIE ANDERSON
news@spotlightnews.com

The author is an employee of Spotlight Newspapers.

"There is only one Scandinavian language, but, the Danes can't pronounce it and the Norwegians can't spell it right."

I must admit, I changed the punch line a little to make the Swedes come out on top. Still, all Scandinavians claim they can understand one another, and as a first-generation Swedish American, that joke always makes me laugh, while at the same time it helps me remember who and what I am.

My parents came from the old country, and my much older sister was born in Sweden. I was almost born there too, since my parents did return to Sweden for a short period. But upon my mother's insistence, my father relented and they returned to Jamestown, N.Y., where I was born and, as a child, thought was the heartland of Swedish immigration.

They arrived the first time with not much more than the clothes on their backs and a couple of small trunks filled with a few possessions. All they knew about the new land is what they had heard and what relatives who were already here had written home about. They wanted to fit in and become Americans so they studied English and American history and eventually became citizens. My father even went down the path of name change from Larson to Anderson. Since everyone knew him as "Andy" Anderson, that change probably saved me from being nicknamed "Larceny" today.

Because they also wanted to keep the old memories alive and make sure I learned about my heritage, we ate Swedish food, spent a lot of time with Swedish relatives and friends, celebrated holidays in Swedish tradition, and among other things kept a small traditional Gold and Blue flag and a brightly painted red Dala horse in the living room.

Point of View

My father would tell me stories he learned as a child about Swedish heroes like Gustav Vasa, the founder of the modern Swedish monarchy, King Gustavus Adolphus a leader of Protestant armies in the Protestant Reformation, and the young Warrior King Charles XII — each of whom contributed to the history of Sweden as it is today.

Before starting kindergarten, Swedish was my first language. Once school started I easily drifted into English, but as a child I always kept that bilingual gift in the background. Our family was grounded in a circle of Swedish relatives and friends so I understood the conversations around me with no problem. Among my school friends I was always sort of embarrassed by the Swedish babble from my father, who of course they could not understand, but I always immediately acknowledged.

The year I turned 10, we visited Sweden for the summer, and I immediately lapsed into the language so completely that upon returning home I had a hard time getting back to English. That whole summer was filled with memorable events. In particular, I was exposed to the history and accomplishments of Swedish author Selma Lagerlof, the first woman to win the Nobel Prize for literature, named after Alfred Nobel, the Swedish inventor of dynamite who later created and endowed the entire Nobel Prize program.

My excuse for doing poorly in high school Spanish was that it was nothing like Swedish, but when I was required to study German in college I thought I had it made. Well, in some ways I did. I could pronounce the words and read out loud like a native German because of the similarity in sound, but I could not keep the vocabulary straight.

Sadly, both my parents passed on before I finished high school and when I moved on to college and into the real world, much of the gift slipped away. Oh, I still find myself remembering my father speaking only Swedish to me, and I even sometimes catch myself thinking in Swedish. But since I have put it aside and behind me, I really have to concentrate to even put a simple sentence together. For purposes of conversation, I have to be exposed to it for a couple of days before I can get comfortable.

Over the years I have had the privilege of knowing a number of people from various backgrounds with similar language gifts. Even when the language is completely different from my experience, I relate to them and share their emotions.

I particularly remember a single mother of Hispanic background who told me one day how her daughter in second grade was fluent enough in both Spanish and English that her school would use her as an interpreter with new students and their parents. You can imagine the pride in that woman's smile when she told the story.

Ironically, on my last visit to Sweden six years ago I was welcomed to Sweden in Swedish at the airport by a black woman wearing an official uniform. On that same trip, I enjoyed lunch in a Swedish speaking Italian restaurant that made me feel like I was in Rome or Venice; and why not, after all, Stockholm is known as the Venice of the North.

On our last evening in Gothenburg we dined with relatives in a Vietnamese restaurant. The young waitress spoke perfect Swedish and English as well as her native tongue. As one point I asked her if she was born in Sweden, at which she smiled and then said in English with a fake Swedish accent: "Oh ja, I'm a Svede." Seeing my shocked reaction, she immediately grinned and said in flawless English: "You are an American, but you're Swedish. Well, I am a Swede but I'm Vietnamese; it's the same thing." Here was a lady with a clear understanding of a multicultural world.

My late father-in-law was also first generation Swedish-American. When I first met him I was intrigued by his life story and I asked if we shared a similar childhood experience with the language. No, he said, after his parents arrived they were adamant that their children would be Americans and speak only English. But, he did know a couple of phrases which he would rattle off occasionally, I think just to show me that deep down he was indeed a real Swede.

One day at the kitchen table he tossed out one of those Swedish phrases. Not to be outdone, I responded as best I could. To my surprise, he quickly came back with something else in Swedish. Even though it was a struggle, I did manage to put something together. Now we were off and running. The conversation went back and forth for a while, during which I did not point out what was going on because I didn't want to break the mood. Finally, when it ended, I told him that we had been conversing in Swedish, albeit at a childish level. No, he insisted, he could not speak Swedish. Nevertheless it was clear to me that as a child he had heard and absorbed the language enough to be able to subconsciously reach into early memories, retrieve it and speak it again.

We are all defined by these kinds of background and experience, and as a nation of diverse immigrant influences, we should all be proud of our heritage. It defines who and what we are. I maintain that English is and should be the primary language of this nation, even to the extent of official legality. But, let us not forget who we are and where we came from, and always remember and be proud to honor and respect the significant contributions of our forefathers.

On my 10-year-old visit to Sweden we also spent a couple of days in Norway, and I understood the language well enough to know what was going on. But trying to understand Danish makes me feel like I am back in my high school Spanish class, so that puts my opening joke to rest.

Community should be proud of field

Editor, The Spotlight:

I had the pleasure of spending the Memorial Day weekend watching baseball games at the Bethlehem Elm Avenue Town Park. The Bethlehem Mickey Mantle baseball league hosted its first baseball tournament, bringing in teams from Brooklyn, Central New York and Colonie. The newly rebuilt baseball field No. 5 looked fabulous! The magnificent town park made a wonderful venue for these visiting teams to play ball as well as provide a comfortable location for their families and friends who came to Bethlehem to support the teams and patronize the local merchants and restaurants.

Bethlehem Mickey Mantle is the home of the Bethlehem

Braves, a travel baseball club made up of 14-, 15- and 16-year-olds in the Bethlehem community. I have come to learn that it was through inspiration, collaboration and cooperation amongst the Town of Bethlehem Parks and Recreation Department, the volunteer board members of BMM and many families and friends that this dream became a reality. I'm sure it is rewarding to see the fruits of these labors come to harvest.

As a community, you should be proud to see this come about. Congratulations to you all, here's to many successful years ahead for the Bethlehem Braves! Follow the Braves on their Web site at www.bethlehembraves.com.

Thanks for Pit Party donations

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am writing to thank the following local businesses that provided donations of pizza and items, including gift certificates and fun things like Webkinz, that were given out as prizes at this year's Elsmere Elementary's Pit Party, the annual fifth-grade rite-of-passage party at the middle school's "Pit."

This is a hard year for most of us financially due to skyrocketing gas

(my 69-year-old father is threatening to use his neglected stationary bike to do errands near his house in Baltimore) and food prices. These price hikes hit retailers hard.

We at the Elsmere school community so appreciate their donations, which really made our Pit Party a fun event for our rising sixth graders.

Local businesses are integral to maintaining our community as a vibrant and just really neat place to live. Again, many thanks to these local businesses: My Place & Co., Beff's, New Village Pizza and Deli, The Paper Mill, I Love Books, Cookies by Design, Pizza House, Del Lanes Inc., Friendly's, The Perfect Blend, Wal-Mart Inc., Hannaford's and Price Chopper.

Parade turnout deserves recognition

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am a longtime resident of the Town of Bethlehem and was so very proud to march in the Memorial Day Parade.

The enthusiastic support of the viewers and the number of people watching reminded me of the late '50s and '60s when the streets of the town were jammed packed with people who turned out to support the members of the military, veterans, volunteer fire and EMS personnel.

A huge thank you to the town's residents for continuing to show their generous support and patriotism for this important parade.

Friendship Singers grateful for support

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Friendship Singers would like to thank everyone who came to our spring concert on Friday, May 30, for being so generous with their contributions toward the purchase of a new transportation van for the Senior Projects Inc.

A total of $1,500 was donated at the concert for this very worthy and close-to-home cause.

It was our great pleasure to entertain such an appreciative audience, and also to provide this opportunity for people to support our Town of Bethlehem Senior Transportation Program.

Thanks for coming, and see you next year!

Game organizers say thanks

Editor, The Spotlight:

On behalf of the Jackie McHugh Memorial Fund, we would like to thank the community for its support of our basketball game held at Bethlehem High School Friday, May 2. The event raised over $2,000.

Your donation, time and support of this event made it a very memorable evening. We hope to award summer camp scholarships to four students and appreciate all that you did in helping to begin this fund honoring a very special person.

A big thank you goes to the Bethlehem Central staff, who volunteered their time and played in the game, and Jackie's classmates for being a part of this event.

Future donations can be made directly to the Jackie McHugh Memorial Fund, c/o Cathy Hasselbach, Capital Communications Federal Credit Union, 384 Bender Lane, Glenmont 12077.

Police searching for burglary suspect

The Bethlehem Police Department is investigating a burglary that occurred Friday, May 30, in Glenmont, where personal checks and credit cards were stolen.

Police are asking the public to review photos of a suspect attempting to cash a stolen check at a Central Avenue bank in Colonie.

The suspect may be accompanied by a second man, according to police, and possibly in possession of an early-to-mid-1990s blue four-door Oldsmobile Cutlass Sierra.

According to police, the suspects have been attempting to cash the stolen checks over the past several days at Hannaford and Wal-Mart stores in Bethlehem, Colonie, Rotterdam, Amsterdam and Glenville.

Lt. Thomas Heffernan said that detectives are following up on some "good leads," but that no arrest has been made yet.

"The photos were taken from the Pioneer Bank in Colonie and there are several different agencies involved," Heffernan said. "Checks and credit cards were involved in the thefts."

Heffernan said police are still looking for anyone with information on the identity of the suspect or any additional information and asked that people contact the Bethlehem Police Department at 439-9973.

Sundaes for Scouts

Bethlehem Girl Scout Service Unit 195 celebrated the one-year anniversary of the realignment of its council, Girl Scouts of Northeastern New York, by holding a massive grounds and trail maintenance project at the Five Rivers Environmental Center in Delmar. More than 100 Scouts, leaders and family members turned out to perform trail checks and landscaping projects, spread wood chips, place trail markers and water new tree saplings. All were rewarded for their hard work with ice cream sundaes courtesy of Stewart's.

YMCA's child education programs move on site

The Bethlehem YMCA will offer a preschool program and a before and after-school child care program for school-aged children – both to be held at the branch facility.

The preschool will be held 9 a.m. to noon, Monday, Wednesday and Friday beginning the first Monday after Labor Day and going through the end of the third week in June. Preschoolers must be 4 years old by Dec. 1, 2008, to enroll and must be potty-trained before school starts.

The preschool program includes free-play to help develop positive social skills, gym time to help develop gross motor skills, "Healthy Me" walk and exercise time to help develop a healthy lifestyle, art projects to help develop fine motor skill and creative minds, and a pre-

K segment to help develop academic skills and community awareness.

The school-age child-care program for grades one through five has been running for several years at the Delmar Reformed Church, but beginning this fall, it moves to the Bethlehem Area YMCA. With that change, children will be able to use the gym, ice rink and swimming pool on a regular basis. In addition, the school-age program offers homework help, group games, activities, creative arts projects, dramatic play activities, table games, building blocks sets, multicultural-awareness activities, "Healthy Kids" projects, values discussions, and family and community projects.

Talk will take look at musical theater

Richard Feldman knows a thing or two about musical theater. The former Bethlehem Central High School English teacher has directed and choreographed over 125 musical productions of this unique American art form at the high school, local colleges, Albany's Lake House, the Four Seasons Dinner Theatre, and professional summer stock.

On Friday, June 13, at 2 p.m., Feldman presents "A Century of Musical Theater Highlights," a video-illustrated talk featuring the work of Irving Berlin, the Gershwins and Rodgers and Hammerstein.

Feldman taught English, creative writing and American musical theater at the high school for 33 years. He now teaches the history of the American musical for the Bethlehem Humanities Institute of Lifelong Learning (H.I.L.L.) and for elderhostels in Savannah, Ga., and Lake Como, Pa.

Plan to enjoy a relaxing day at the park

Now that the pool complex at the Elm Avenue Park is open for the season, why not enjoy "a day at the park?" Just pack a lunch, bring sunscreen and a blanket or comfortable chair, and spend the day enjoying this wonderful facility. If you don't want to bother with fixing lunch, keep in mind that the concession stand has its usual selection of fast food and cold drinks at reasonable prices.

What a great place to see young families enjoy the pools and play areas, and you will probably meet someone for some interesting conversation. Enjoy the day with fresh air, sunshine (or shade under the trees if you prefer), lots of little folks and happy sounds. You may wish to share the time with a friend, or you might possibly choose a book from our Bethlehem Public Library for company. Just have a lovely day at the park.

Upcoming program highlights

Saturday, June 14

• The week of June 14 is designated as National Flag Week. The president will issue a proclamation urging United States citizens to fly the American flag for the duration of the week. It commemorates the adoption of the flag of the United States, which happened on June 14 by resolution of the Second Continental Congress in 1777. In 1916, President Woodrow Wilson issued a proclamation that officially established June 14 as Flag Day. In August 1949, National Flag Day was established by an Act of Congress.

Sunday, June 15

• Father's Day was inaugurated in the early 20th Century to complement Mother's Day in celebrating fatherhood and to commemorate fathers and forefathers.

Tuesday, June 16

• Seniors in Motion: a low-level aerobic exercise class, Bethlehem Town Hall auditorium, 445 Delaware Ave.,

Delmar, 9 to 10 a.m. $3 fee per class.

Wednesday, June 17

• Seniors grocery shopping for residents of Elsmere, Delmar, Slingerlands, North Bethlehem and Marie Rose Manor. For reservations, call 439-5770.

Thursday, June 18

• Alzheimer's Caregivers Support Group meets at the Delmar Presbyterian Church, 585 Delaware Ave., Delmar, 2:30 p.m. Call the Alzheimer's Association at 439-2217 for information.

• Seniors grocery shopping for residents of Glenmont,

Selkirk and South Bethlehem. For reservations, call 439-5770.

Friday, June 19

• Seniors in Motion (see Tuesday's activities for details)

• Seniors grocery shopping for residents of Good Samaritan Senior Housing and Van Allen Senior Apartments. For reservations, call 439-5770.

Reading program offers fun for kids

The New York Summer Reading Program 2008 is open to young people preschool through teens. Summer reading programs encourage kids to read, develop positive attitudes about reading and books, and maintain their reading skills during summer vacation. Most of all, we want kids to know that the library is fun.

So check out our library "ant"-ics, find out what the buzz is all about, worm your way into a good book and catch that reading bug.

This year, kindergarten through grade three Crickets meet on Mondays, grades three and four Grasshoppers meet on Wednesdays, and Dragonflies in grades five and older meet on Thursdays, all at 2 p.m. Registration begins on Monday, June 16, and continues all summer. Everyone registers online; you may register from home or on a library computer. Print out your materials or pick up a folder at the library with a list of our programs, game boards, the calendar for recording your time spent reading, and a log to record all of your book titles. You can keep track of your book titles even on vacation.

Each week that you visit the library you are eligible for "buggy" surprises.

Check out our Web site (www.voorheesvillelibrary.org) for other special summer programs: technology for teens, the "Ugly Bug Ball," "Manicures for Mom and Me," game days and more! Teens who would like to volunteer to be summer aides should contact Mrs. Laiosa.

Art and display

Our gallery and showcase are garnering their share of attention already this month. Artist/poet/sculptor Tom Corrado has a new showing of his "cerchi" (formerly billed as orbs), huge canvases painted with varying textures and colors. Tom is also the sculptor of "The Reader," the yellow man standing in the main reading room, and a founding member of the Every Other Thursday Night Poets. He has been exhibiting regularly in the Upstate Artists Gallery on Lark Street in Albany.

In the display case, Joe McDonnell's exhibit of Hess trucks has been the topic of conversations every day. The kids and the older people love them, and many people know others who collect them.

Ravena Public Library schedules programs

The Ravena Public Library has a range of summer programs for children of all ages:

•Tell Me About It!

Tell Me About It is a grant-funded program that encourages participants to develop their memories of life in this area into stories to share with others.

Tell Me About it is fun and informal. Participants will gather around tables at Senior Projects of Ravena to chat with friends and peers. Storyteller Marni Gillard will help expand memories into stories that paint pictures of a bygone era.

Participants will meet at Senior Projects of Ravena on Monday and Thursday afternoons from 4 to 5 p.m. Come to one session or as many as you like. If you have any questions, call the RCS Community Library at 756-2053 and speak with Barbara or Sean.

•Teen Writers Deadline: June 14

Have you aged out of the RCS Library's Young Writers' Workshop and feel ready to take the next step with your writing? Are you a newcomer who would like to develop your unique "writing voice?" You have a special opportunity to work with one of the area's best creative writing teachers, Linda Miller. Sign up by Saturday, June 14, for this workshop, which will meet once a month during July and August. Contact Library Director Judy Felsten at 756-2053 or via e-mail at felstenj@uhls.lib.ny.us.

•The Young Writer's Workshop is for children ages 9 and older, entering grade four or above, who would like to write, illustrate and bind an original story. Sign up for either Session 1 or Session 2. Session 1 will be from July 8 to 22, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, 2 to 3:30 p.m. Session 2 will be from July 29 to Aug. 12, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, 2 to 3:30 p.m.

Guilderland town board tabs Lawlor to be top cop

Democratic majority rules in partisan vote

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Guilderland's town board voted along party lines to choose Carol Lawlor as its new police chief before a standing-room crowd that filled Town Hall Tuesday, June 2.

Three days later, on Friday, June 6, she took the oath to officially become Chief Lawlor.

A 29-year veteran who was the town's deputy chief, Lawlor had the support of the roaring crowd as the final vote of 3-to-2 secured her place as New York's 10th female police chief. She had just as much support, if not more, when she was sworn in during a full ceremonial procession, complete with bagpipes.

At age 50, she is the department's third police chief since 1977 and its first female chief.

Republican councilmen Warren Redlich and Mark Grimm voted against Lawlor's nomination. Supervisor Kenneth Runion, along with Councilwoman Patricia Slavick and Councilman Paul Pastore — all Democrats — voted to give Lawlor the job.

Lawlor has been the town's acting police chief for the past year after longtime chief James Murley retired amid scandal.

"The goal is to have the best candidate possible," Runion said at the meeting. "Tonight it gives me great pleasure to say ... the best candidate for the job is Carol Lawlor."

Runion also took a moment after the final vote to admonish his Republican counterparts on the board for not supporting his candidate for police chief.

"I have to say this is probably one moment when I feel the most embarrassed for this board as a whole," Runion said. "This is a day when we should all be cherishing an individual who has moved through the ranks and moved through great achievements for the Guilderland Police Department."

Continuing, Runion said, "But unfortunately, two of our town board members started this process ... in what I believe to be a prejudicial view of the acting chief who's here this evening."

Grimm took issue with Runion's statements following the Lawlor vote.

"I thought that was unbelievable. He's embarrassed because people disagree with him? ... We have nothing to apologize for; we did our jobs," he said. "This [appointment] was a predetermined outcome ... and another example of old-style insider politics, which is Ken Runion's calling card."

The Republican councilmen said they did not feel Lawlor was the strongest candidate out of a final pool of three applicants. They both put their support behind a Troy city assistant police chief, John Tedesco, saying that he had more education and a better background and was better suited for the job.

"It's important to all Guilderland residents that we have the best candidate for the job. With events like Columbine and the Porco case, we need the best," Redlich said. "It's a cliché, but when that call comes in at 3 a.m., we want the most qualified person we can have to take that call."

Redlich said that Lawlor was not the best based on the résumé presented on a "side-by-side comparison."

He said Lawlor's appointment represented the status quo in Guilderland Town Hall politics.

"The previous chief left under a cloud, we all know that," Redlich said at the meeting. "One of the things that came out during the interview process ... was Acting Chief Lawlor presented a memo that had come from the previous chief that was essentially a secrecy order, and the department has a culture of secrecy."

Grimm agreed with Redlich and said hiring outside of the department would prevent any insider secrecy that may occur in a department that was rocked by the sudden resignation of its former police chief amid allegations of sexual misconduct and other inappropriate behavior.

"On the merits, Acting Chief Carol Lawlor is not the strongest candidate in my view," Grimm said.

The rest of the board, and seemingly most of the residents in attendance, disagreed.

Dozens of residents filled the room June 2. Many held signs in favor of Lawlor, and they applauded loudly when each board member voted for Lawlor.

Both councilmen said they would work with Lawlor now that she is chief. However, neither appeared at Town Hall during Lawlor's swearing-in ceremony four days later.

Runion acknowledged their absence during the ceremony and introduced his Democratic colleagues, Slavick and Pastore, to roaring applause. He told Lawlor that she deserved a unanimous vote on her appointment and apologized for the partisan vote that took place a few days prior.

"I think the minority turned it into a partisan appointment," Runion said during a telephone interview after Lawlor's appointment. "It was almost like they had a grudge on day one against her. ... It was just disgraceful."

The supervisor added that a new deputy chief would not.

After the final vote was taken, Lawlor said she was glad the selection process was over and is proud to lead what she described as a professional and hard-working department. She said it was time to move forward and put politics aside.

"I'm very proud to be police chief ... I want to thank the town board members who supported me," Lawlor said after being nominated. "And to those who didn't support me, I hope we can put public safety first."

Lawlor will be paid $90,000 a year as chief.

lems. He suggested having a separate driveway for emergency access or a connection to Route 9W to reduce congestion on Glenmont Road. Board member Kate Powers said that, "bus services are crucial to the approval of apartments."

Other points of interest included the need for pedestrian access along Glenmont Road in the form of a crosswalk, which Herubin said United Group was willing to work on with the town and the Department of Transportation.

Herubin also said that the senior housing would not generate "any fiscal damage on schools."

The Planning Board voted to accept the drafts with amendments, such as the alleviation of traffic on Glenmont Road and easier access for emergency vehicles, and meet later with the developers to go over those revisions.

In other business, board members heard the initial presentation for Delmar Pointe Condos on Delaware Avenue.

Luigi A. Palleschi of ABD Engineers Surveyors said the condominiums would consist of two-story, six-unit condos with prices starting at $280,000.

Board members said they wanted to see the addition of public transportation access to the site, as well as easier access for emergency vehicles and a less dense construction site than in the original plan.

Spacing between the homes and the affected wetlands of the area was also brought up, as members asked if it was at all possible to set up delineation between the wetlands and the end of a person's property.

The board will review plans and look at an amended proposal at a later date.

District names second in command

Jody Monroe to replace Michael Tebbano as assistant superintendent

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

The theme song "Movin' On Up" from "The Jeffersons" seems appropriate for the Bethlehem Central School District these days.

Former middle school principal Jody Monroe was officially named the district's assistant superintendent of educational programs and instruction, replacing Michael Tebbano as he takes over as superintendent for outgoing Les Loomis.

The school is now forming a committee to search for Monroe's replacement.

During its Tuesday, June 3, meeting, the Bethlehem Board of Education unanimously appointed Monroe.

Board President James Lytle

said teams of teachers, support staff, parents, students and administrators had met with applicants out of a pool of 60 candidates.

School officials held expansive nationwide searches for the recent positions that have opened up as a result of Loomis retiring, according to Lytle.

"We're really very delighted... Of course, we now have another vacancy to fill," Lytle joked. "One could say that's an argument for not promoting from within; that it just gives us more work to do."

Lytle congratulated Monroe, saying, "The reality is I think we should be very proud of the fact that we can find people that can compete on that sort of national basis within the district."

Monroe comes to the position with an extensive résumé from inside and outside of the district.

Coming to district three years ago, Monroe was previously the principal of Stillwater Middle/High School and also served as an assistant principal and director of technology in Stillwater for two years.

School officials said that during her interview process Monroe emphasized strengthening literacy instruction and technology use, and incorporating the two. Monroe also said she plans to use data and trend analysis to improve instruction.

"I'm very excited to take this new role," Monroe told the board. "I'm really excited to begin this, really excited to work with Dr. Tebbano and all of you, and I think I can bring a lot of great new ideas and continue some of the initiatives we've begun already."

IN BRIEF

Volunteers needed for cleanup days

Town Supervisor Jack Cunningham is seeking to enlist volunteers for the upcoming Community Cleanup Days.

Community Cleanup Days are scheduled to take place on the third Saturday of each month between 9 a.m. and noon. In the event of rain, the cleanup events will be cancelled. Participants under the age of 18 must be supervised by an adult.

The Town of Bethlehem will provide safety vests, rubber gloves, trash bags and pick-up sticks. Remember to bring a bottle of water to drink and wear long sleeve shirts and long pants to protect yourself from cuts, scrapes and insect bites.

This is a wonderful opportunity to participate in a community service project and demonstrate your concern for your town and the environment.

Assistance is needed even if it's only for part of the event.

There will be a sign-in sheet at each event, but it would be helpful to know beforehand how many people are planning to attend.

If you are interested in signing up for any or all of the Cleanup Days you may do so on the town's Web site at www.townofbethlehem.org/pages/CleanupDays/cleanupdays.asp

Update

that end up in streams and tributaries, Penman said, and the town is also required to map completed baseline water quality data to look for elevated levels of phosphorous, ammonia and other "things that shouldn't be there."

The town has initiated a program to monitor illicit discharges coming from developments and residences throughout the town.

"We've got it up and running, we're beginning to do inspections ... we're focusing on the larger subdivisions that are going in the town. ... We've completed a 100 percent review of all the projects that are in front of the planning board. We've done a review of their proposed storm-water measures that are included as part of the project."

Construction site runoff control and post-construction storm-water management has been adopted as part of the town's storm-water law, according to Penman.

He said the town now has "the ability to go out and enforce storm-water measures, erosion and sediment-control measures, on active construction sites."

Supervisor Jack Cunningham said the town is doing its best to fund and keep up with the storm-water mandates handed down by Albany County, including the enforcement of "storm-water management ponds," which are used to contain runoff water on site during construction projects.

"As you develop, you need to maintain storm water on your property," Cunningham said, adding that for new construction sites "the water runoff cannot be greater than what runs off of the property currently."

The water runoff on the new sites is diverted into small ponds, which fill up when there's runoff and dry out when there's not, Cunningham said.

The supervisor expressed concerns about possible mosquito problems as a result of the stagnate water and said the town would be discussing the issue with the county.

In the meantime, the town is in charge of monitoring and enforcing the use of the retention ponds on all construction sites.

"It's hard ... but we try to manage them as best we can," Cunningham said.

Penman explained to the board about the town's "pollution prevention and good housekeeping operations," which include over 350 hours of training for town staff, which Penman said was "a pretty significant number."

The town is also continuing 500 miles of street sweeping, has collected 50,000 cubic yards of leaves and yard waste, he said, and is looking into a more environmentally friendly way of de-icing the roads.

Penman also updated the board on the MS4 group, a grant-funded group of 12 municipalities in Albany County that focuses on the issues of storm-water management. Penman said currently the group is operating under a grant that expires in 2009, but that they were working toward the creation of a permanent storm-water coalition.

Municipalities with more than 1,000 residents per-square-mile are a part of MS4.

Public education and outreach has become a priority for storm-water management, Penman said, and the town has set up a page on its Web site to receive complaints on illicit discharge. He added that the storm-water department in Bethlehem and other neighboring communities are attempting to "regionally brand" storm-water issues through the use of standardize signs and insignias.

The branding will "let people know that dumping things in the water ... will end up in the Hudson," he said.

Councilwoman Joann Dawson said the branding was a good idea.

"It's things like that that will help make people more aware and hopefully a little more conscious of things they are dumping and may be thinking about dumping," said Dawson.

Robert Jasinski, a Bethlehem resident and a member of the town's noise ordinance task force, asked about the authority to test water on private property.

"What about private citizens that have no storm-water system along the road, or anything? What is going to be your criteria on them?" Jasinski asked. "Are you going to come knocking on my door and tell me you don't like how the rain is coming off my property?"

Penman responded that testing and enforcement measures would occur only if illicit substances are discovered coming off the property. Cunningham said that new development and construction sites would be the primary targets, but that the town now has the responsibility to test for illicit discharges into the waterways.

The town has updated its Web site, www.townofbethlehem.org, to include septic information and a list of things not to be dumped in water and sewage drains.

Obituaries in the Spotlight

Harriet Eames

Harriet Allyn Eames, 90, of Delmar, died Saturday, May 31, at Albany Medical Center.

Mrs. Eames was born in Cleveland, Ohio, and was the daughter of William Allyn and Nellie Dean. She graduated from Hirman College, Ohio, in 1940 and went on to acquire a library science degree from the University of Michigan.

She met her future husband, the late Charles B. Eames, while working at her first job in the library of Hamilton College in Clinton. They were married in the spring of 1942 and enjoyed 64 years of companionship until Charles' death in 2006.

Mrs. Eames was the elementary school librarian in Sauquoit from 1960 until moving to the Capital District in 1967, when she became a reference librarian at SUNY Albany. She remained there until her retirement in 1983.

Mrs. Eames was active in the Union Presbyterian Church in Sauquoit, the First Presbyterian Church of Titusville, Fla., and the Delmar Presbyterian Church of Delmar. She did volunteer work at St. Peter's Hospital, Child's Nursing Home and other places.

Mrs. Eames was also a longtime member of the Capitol Hill Choral Society and was very active in the Albany area International Women's Group.

"Harriet will be remembered by those she leaves behind as a devoted wife, a loving mother and a caring grandmother," her family wrote in a tribute. "Her love for books, her homemade apple pies, her excellent piano playing and singing voice will be missed by all."

Survivors include four sons, Charles Jr. of Waycross, Ga., Frederick and David, both of Delmar and Thomas of Albany; eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Services were by the Delmar Presbyterian Church in Delmar on Friday, June 6.

Interment was in Bethlehem Cemetery and arrangements were by Durant Funeral Home in Delmar.

Naomi T. Griffin

Naomi T. "Pidge" Griffin, 70, died Saturday, May 31, at her residence.

Mrs. Griffin was born in New Jersey and moved to Alcove in 1948 and Ravena in 1956. For the past nine years she and her husband wintered in Florida.

Mrs. Griffin graduated from Ravena-Coeymans High School in 1955. She worked for the state Department of Health as a supervisor in newborn screening. She was a member of the Ravena Grange and the Ravena-Coeymans Historical Society.

Survivors include her husband of 52 years, Reid E. Griffin; mother, Madeline Turner of Ravena; brother, Arthur Christian Turner; son, Brent Griffin of Troy; daughters, Jill Griffin of Haydenville, Mass., Kelly Racey of Ravena, and Tracey Hurst of Dallas, Texas; and five grandchildren.

Arrangements were by Babcock Funeral Home, Ravena. Burial was in Chestnut Lawn Cemetery, New Baltimore.

Contributions may be made to the Ravena Grange, 1363 SR 143, Coeymans Hollow 12046.

Paul J. Hollner

Paul J. Hollner Jr., of Selkirk, died Saturday, May 31, at his home.

Born in Albany, Mr. Hollner was a graduate of Philip Schuyler High School and attended Hudson Valley Community College.

As an Army veteran, he served in the Vietnam War and was a lifetime member of the Disabled American Veterans and a member of the American Legion, Blanchard Post No. 1040.

He served as Cubmaster for Pack 211 and assistant Scoutmaster for Troop 33.

"Paul's life was his family, and his most enjoyable moments were times spent with his children and camping," his family wrote in a tribute. "He also loved his Stewart's coffee."

He was the son of Ruth Anamier Hollner and the late Paul J. Hollner Sr.

Survivors include his wife, Sheila Ray Hollner; his mother, Ruth; a son, David Thomas (Amy) Hollner of Morris Plains, N.J.; four daughters, Jennifer Anne (John) McGuinness of Selkirk, Stephanie Jane Hollner of Albany, Jessica Lynne (T.J. Turner) Hollner of Cohoes, and Pamela Jean Hollner of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; a brother, William (Sherry) Hollner Sr. of Ballston Spa; four granddaughters; numerous in-laws; and several nieces, nephews, grandnieces and grandnephews.

Arrangements were by the Applebee Funeral Home in Delmar.

Services were from Historic St. Mary's Church on Capitol Hill in Albany, and burial took place in Calvary Cemetery in Glenmont.

Memorial contributions may be made to Community Hospice of Albany, 445 New Karner Road, Albany 12205 or the Mohawk and Hudson River Humane Society, 3 Oakland Ave., Menands 12204.

Edith N. Pangburn

Edith N. (Plummer) Pangburn, 102, died on Sunday, June 1.

She was the wife of the late Edmund Plummer and Raymond Pangburn, and was co-founder of Price Greenleaf Garden Center in Delmar.

"She had a warmth and love of all people, but especially her family," her family wrote in a tribute. "She will be missed by all who knew her."

Survivors include two sons, David (Joan) Plummer of Delmar, George (Irene) Plummer of Albion; two daughters, Mary Ellen Schaming of Delmar, and Charlene Hughes of California; 14 grandchildren; 23 great-grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

A graveside service was in the Bethlehem Cemetery in Delmar. Arrangements were by the Durant Funeral Home Inc. in Delmar.

*AT&T also imposes monthly a Regulatory Cost Recovery Charge of up to $1.25 to help defray costs incurred in complying with State and Federal telecom regulation; State and Federal Universal Service charges; and surcharges for customer-based and revenue-based state and local assessments on AT&T. These are not taxes or government-required charges.

Offer available on select phones. The network covers over 293 million people. Coverage is not available in all areas. Limited-time offer. Other conditions and restrictions apply. See contract and rate plan brochure for details. Subscriber must live and have a mailing address within AT&T's owned wireless network coverage area. Up to $36 activation fee applies. Equipment price and availability may vary by market and may not be available from independent retailers. Early Termination Fee: None if cancelled in the first 30 days; thereafter $175. Some agents impose additional fees. Unlimited voice services: Unlimited voice services are provided solely for live dialog between two individuals. Offnet Usage: If your minutes of use (including unlimited services) on other carriers' networks ("offnet usage") during any two consecutive months exceed your offnet usage allowance, AT&T may at its option terminate your service, deny your continued use of other carriers' coverage, or change your plan to one imposing usage charges for offnet usage. Your offnet usage allowance is equal to the lesser of 750 minutes or 40% of the Anytime minutes included with your plan (data offnet usage allowance is the lesser of 6 megabytes or 20% of the kilobytes included with your plan). AT&T Promotion Card: Offer valid until 7/3/08. Allow 60 days for fulfillment. Card request must be postmarked by 7/3/08; you must be a customer for 30 consecutive days to receive card. Feature Package may be cancelled at any time. Sales tax calculated based on price of unactivated equipment. Unlimited Mobile to Mobile Messaging: Includes unlimited text, picture, and video messages between AT&T customers sent or received while on AT&T's owned wireless network. Instant messages and any other usage not expressly included herein will be debited from your package's messaging allowance. A subscription to one of the current messaging packages or MEDIA bundles is required. Rollover Minutes: Unused Anytime Minutes expire after the 12th billing period. Night and Weekend and Mobile to Mobile minutes do not roll over. Service provided by AT&T Mobility. ©2008 AT&T Intellectual Property. All rights reserved. # Obituaries in the Spotlight

Leona Victoria Dempf
Sister M. Victoria Dempf, 79, an Albany native, died at Mercy Care Center in Oakland, Calif., on Tuesday, May 27.

As a vowed sister of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary for 55 years, she was the daughter of the late Louis and Victoria Dempf. Ms. Dempf was an educator at Saint Andrew (Pasadena, Calif.), Ramona (Alhambra, Calif.), Marin Catholic (Greenbrae, Calif.), St. Monica (Saint Monica, Calif.) and Holy Names High School (Oakland, Calif.).

"She is remembered for her innovative approaches to teaching and learning. She spent 20 years in outreach to the people of Oakland, especially at Saint Mary Community Center," her family wrote in tribute. "She was a woman of many talents and interests: artist, silk-screener, gardener, photographer, camper, stargazer, musician, quilter, sewer, whittler, baker and maker of jams and jellies."

Ms. Dempf was educated at Delmar Grade School and Academy of the Holy Names in Albany and she went on to Siena College and worked in the family's bakery for a few years before becoming a sister of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary.

Her brother, Alfons Dempf, died before her.

Survivors include her brother, Louis (Stella) Dempf, and several nieces and nephews.

Services were from the Convent of the Holy Names in Los Gatos, Calif.

Burial was in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, Hayward, Calif.

Contributions may be made to the Ministry Fund, Sisters of the Holy Names, P.O. Box 907, Los Gatos, CA 95031.

Marion J. Hoose

Marion J. Hoose, 76, of Glenmont, died Tuesday, June 3, at her home.

Born in Albany, she was the daughter of the late Arthur and Mabel (VanAlstyn) Bailey and was a 20-year survivor of breast cancer.

She was the widow of George Hoose.

Survivors include a daughter, Kathleen (Patrick) Rohl; three sisters, Arlene (Robert) Wiggand, Shirley A. Cerone, Laura (William) Howard; three grandchildren; four great-grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

Arrangements were by the Daniel Keenan Funeral Home in Albany.

Interment was in the Elmwood Cemetery in Selkirk.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Alzheimer's Association of NENY, 85 Watervliet Ave., Albany 12206, or Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation, P.O. Box 659309, Dallas, TX 75265-0309.

Richard H. Neumann

Richard H. Neumann, 77, of Delmar, died suddenly Monday, June 2.

Born in Battlelake, Minn., he was the son of the late Ted and Theca Neumann of Detroit Lakes, Minn., and a Marine Corps veteran.

Mr. Neumann served from 1949-1953 and was member of the American Legion, Blanchard Post No. 1040 in Delmar.

A teacher in the RCS School District for 25 years, he retired in 1985, and was also a former ironworker from Local 12 in Albany.

Mr. Neumann was an avid bowler for many years with the Delmar Business League and the Jolly Bunch Senior League. He was a loyal Yankees fan and enjoyed trout fishing, travel, bingo and golf and was a Boy Scout leader as well as a Little League and girl's softball coach.

"Richard was a devoted family man who took care of his family and cherished every moment he spent with his grandchildren," his family wrote in tribute. "He especially enjoyed watching them play sports. He was both revered and adored by his family."

Survivors include his wife of 57 years, Agnes R. (Schrader) Neumann; three sons, William (Marianne) Neumann of East Greenbush, James (Karen) Neumann of Rotterdam, Gary (Nicola) Neumann of Albany; a daughter, Kathleen E. Plig of Delmar; seven grandchildren; and a brother, Harvey (Sheila) Neumara of Washington.

Arrangements were by the Applebee Funeral Home in Delmar.

Contributions may be made to the American Lung Association, 155 Washington Ave., Suite 210, Albany 12210.

IN BRIEF

Summer theatre group seeks applicants

Capital Repertory Theatre is looking for applicants for its S.T.A.R., "Summer Theatre at the Rep," program.

It is looking for a show director; musical director, with a ability to play keyboard; choreographer; assistant to director and playwright; and a playwright.

Applicants need to have completed two years of college and have some experience and genuine interest in working with teens ages from 12 to 18.

The show run is from June 28 to Aug. 10. The playwright is needed from July 2 to 23.

The 2008 S.T.A.R. program provides a five-week opportunity for teens to grow together as a theater ensemble. Participants will work with a professional playwright and other theatre artists at Capital Repertory Theatre's summer education space at The Egg. Tuition for the course is $875 and includes all materials. Scholarships and tuition assistance are available.

For a brochure, registration form or information, call Maureen at 462-4531, ext. 301.

Lifestyles in the Spotlight

It was Friday night, and we were all hungry. I had a car full of kids well past 6 o'clock, and we were a good 20 minutes from home. Also, there was no warm pot of dinner bubbling on my stovetop. So I was left with no other choice: We were going out to eat. This was met with cheers from everyone in the back seat, followed immediately by the question: Where?

Paul was working late and couldn't join us. I had my three kids plus our dear friend Maggie with us. Being the adult, and the one with the money in my pocket, I made a fast decision and announced where we were going, rather than debate what people felt like eating. So it was decided that we would eat at Van's Vietnamese Restaurant (307 Central Ave. in Albany, 436-1868).

A kind waitress sat us right away. She continued to provide us with friendly service throughout our meal (not always the case when you waltz into a restaurant with four children). We started our meal with huge, steaming bowls of Pho Ga (chicken soup) and Pho Bo (beef soup). Each bowl had plenty of noodles and meat, which we divided into the smaller bowls brought by our waitress. Everyone loved the bowls and matching Asian-style spoons, which let you scoop up lots of noodles and slurp them down. I told everyone that in Vietnam it's OK to make the slurping noise when eating soup, which encouraged everyone to slurp many bowls of Pho. Pho is made with noodles, meat and a broth that is seasoned with star anise, ginger, onion and cinnamon. Small dishes filled with hoisin sauce, basil, bean sprouts and a fiery red chili sauce are served on the side. Stir it all into your bowl, and it is my opinion that this soup will cure whatever ails you.

We also had the vegetarian spring rolls — exquisite in my opinion but not loved by the rest of the group. Lucy didn't like the rubbery texture of the rice paper and Elliot eyed the contents carefully before waving it away. The rolls are beautifully presented, and filled with tofu, rice noodles and bean sprouts. They were served with nuoc mam, a clear dipping sauce made with fish sauce, sugar, water and chilies.

This sauce showed itself again in two of our entrees. We ordered three dinners to share. Everyone loved the grilled beef slices over vermicelli (Bun Bo Nuong.) This huge platter was filled with thin rice noodles, bite-sized pieces of tender beef and shredded carrots and cucumber. The whole thing was finished with the nuoc mam and chopped peanuts. The beef pieces were very tender, and I think kids like scooping up servings of meat that no one has to spend time cutting. Each bite was a little mixture of the salty beef, cool vegetables, and the noodles with the sweet and sour flavor of nuoc mam. It was just perfect for our crowd.

And then there was the curry chicken (Com Ca Ri Ga). Unfortunately, I could tell

Vietnamese chicken a hit with all ages

From a Caterer's Kitchen

Caroline Barrett

just by the look of it that I would not like it. A big curry fan, the texture and flavor of the sauce is equally important to me. This sauce tasted all right, but it was thick and had a gelatinous consistency. It was mild and fine for the kids. Lucy loved the chicken, potatoes, sauce, the whole thing. Maggie and Zoe ate small servings on their plates. Elliot took a large spoonful, spread it over all the rest of his food and declared it "yellow and good."

The overwhelming favorite was the grilled boneless lemongrass chicken (Com Ga Nuong Xa Ot.) This dish is half of a chicken, marinated and grilled to crispy perfection. The outside was perfectly brown and the meat inside was tender. There was a mild lemongrass flavor that, again, paired up very well with the nuoc mam sauce that it was served with. It may seem like too much of a good thing with this sauce but we were so happy, practically drunk on nuoc mam.

And it was this chicken dish that got me to thinking: I bet I could make grilled chicken at home that was as good, or almost as good as that one. I started out with lemongrass, which seems exotic but is readily available at the supermarket. Lemongrass has a distinctive citrus flavor, central to Vietnamese cooking. I added lime, ginger, garlic, sugar and salt. If you were making this chicken for people who like spicy foods, a chopped chili would add a kick too. Paul grilled this chicken, using the gas grill on medium low, rotating the chickens around the grate and turning them frequently. I was surprised by how good it turned out. The skin turns out brown and crisp, like Van's. But the meat inside was so juicy, and the lime, ginger and lemongrass all stand out.

With the tax and tip, the bill at Van's was $72. It may sound like a lot to spend on an impromptu dinner with kids. But I walked out with a quart of soup and containers of each of the entrees. My entire family feasted on these for our next evening's dinner. Not to mention that we really had fun sitting in Van's. The atmosphere was relaxed. Maggie showed us the "real way" to eat food with chop sticks: Simply stab each piece of meat, one stick at a time. So we stabbed, slurped and laughed our way through dinner. And I was inspired to create my own lemongrass chicken. It was worth every penny.

The author is the food writer for Spotlight Newspapers and the mother of three children, Lucy, age 8, Zoe, age 7, and Elliot, age 4. She can be reached at news@spotlightnews.com.

Vietnamese Grilled Chicken

Serves 5, with leftovers

2 whole chickens, cut in half lengthwise (ask the butcher to do this)

1 2-inch piece of ginger, peeled and chopped

4 stalks lemongrass, bottom inch and top few inches trimmed, outer stalks peeled away, and chopped

Zest and juice of one lime

3 tablespoons sugar

3 tablespoons kosher salt

4 tablespoons soy sauce

Combine the ginger through the soy sauce ingredients in a food processor. Pulse for a few minutes and then turn it on for a few more minutes until everything is finely chopped. Put the chickens in a glass dish and use a rubber spatula to spread the marinade over all. Cover tightly and refrigerate overnight.

Prepare a grill to medium low heat (approximately 300 degrees.) Grill the chickens for a total of 1-1/2 hours, turning and rotating around the grill every 15 minutes. Paul recommends using a gas grill, and only turning on the front burners, keeping the chicken near the back of the grill, away from the direct flame. The chicken will cook slowly, making it juicy with a crisp skin.

By JACQUELINE M. DOMIN

About a decade ago, leaders at Schenectady's Hamilton Hill Arts Center were looking for a fair or festival that they could make their signature summer event.

They decided on Juneteenth, a national commemoration of the end of slavery. This year, Hamilton Hill will stage its eighth annual Juneteenth celebration, a three-day extravaganza featuring food and fun for all ages, from Friday to Sunday, June 13 to 15.

"It's huge," said Tony Gaddy, Hamilton Hill's public relations coordinator. "People look forward to it all year. It's a great community event."

Schenectady isn't the only place local residents can take part in observing Juneteenth. In Albany, the Arbor Hill Community Center will hold its fourth annual Juneteenth celebration on Saturday, June 14, at 10 a.m. Other celebrations are slated throughout the state.

That's heartening for the Rev. Ronald V. Myers Sr., chairman of the National Juneteenth Observance Foundation. His organization works to bring greater attention to Juneteenth, hailed as "America's second Independence Day." Vermont recently became the 29th state to recognize Juneteenth as a state holiday or observance (New York did the same in 2004), and celebrations are held across the country, even in Curley and Diamond are admired at a previous Hamilton Hill Juneteenth annual celebration.

A June jamboree

Family events mark the anniversary of slavery's end states where Juneteenth has not been formally recognized.

"It's great to see," Myers said. "It shows how we're moving forward as a nation."

Juneteenth recognizes the events of June 19, 1865, in Galveston, Texas, when Union General Gordon Granger announced freedom for all slaves in the Southwest — more than two and a half years after President Abraham Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation. Former slaves were jubilant after the announcement, creating what is considered the country's oldest African-American holiday.

In Schenectady, an information table and books will spell out the story of slavery and Juneteenth. True to the spirit of the day, there will also be plenty of entertainment and activities that won't put a dent in anyone's wallet.

"First and foremost, it's a free family event," Gaddy said.

The festivities kick off at 4 p.m. on Friday at Jerry Burrell Park, where a basketball competition will feature slam-dunk and three-point contests. At 6, an "Honoring the Ancestors" program will be held at Vale Cemetery, followed by soul food dinners and a concert by Azaam Hameed in Central Park at 7:15.

Saturday, a parade through Hamilton Hill begins at 10 a.m.

"It's a great way to get people in the spirit," Gaddy said. The festival officially gets under way at 1 p.m. at Central Park, with inflatable rides for kids, art exhibits, vendors, food and workshops. People can learn and play chess with Maurice Ashley, the first African-American to earn the coveted title of "grandmaster," and they can meet The Black Cowboys, who are committed to keeping the legacy of America's first black cowboys alive.

Sunday brings an interfaith service and the presentation of the Father of the Year award. Gaddy said a popular component of the day is the chance for people to take the stage to share a few words about their fathers.

Highlights of the Albany event, meanwhile, include an essay and poster contest, a talent show, arts and crafts and information booths and displays.

To Myers, who lives and works in Mississippi, it's all a terrific way to acknowledge the country's history of slavery while at the same time moving forward.

"Juneteenth provides the best opportunity for the nation to bring healing to the legacy of slavery," he said. "It's a time for the nation to come together. I'm just delighted to see it."

record that included the Suburban Council Gold Division title.

"When he showed up, we'd all take note, and we'd all go out and greet him," said Nash. "To turn to the other side of the bench and see him there fighting away, it was inspirational."

"When he showed up, we almost never lost," added Helm.

Helm and his Bethlehem players are well versed in dealing with cancer. Helm's parents both died of cancer, as did second baseman Mike Bellizzi's father - longtime College of Saint Rose manager Bob Bellizzi. Another player, Lucas Nitsche, has a father who is fighting cancer.

With that understanding also came a sense of purpose. Bethlehem strove to win the Sectional title for Dorwaldt, but came up one game short of playing for the championship when LaSalle pulled out a 6-1 victory over the Eagles in the semifinals.

"They wanted to win it for him, they really did," said Helm. "They really wanted to win that Sectional title."

"This is a great group of guys. They've all been great to me," said Dorwaldt.

Dorwaldt is hoping to see more Bethlehem baseball games in the future. Despite his grim diagnosis, he said he isn't going to let cancer keep him sidelined.

"This is what I've got to live with, so there's no sense dwelling on it," said Dorwaldt.

TU schedules June meeting

Salmon River Riverkeeper Fran Verdoliva is the guest speaker at Trout Unlimited Clearwater Chapter's next meeting June 16 at 6:30 p.m. at the Best Western Sovereign Hotel on Western Avenue in Albany.

Verdoliva will update chapter members on the latest fishing, especially Atlantic Salmon. There will also be a fly tying demonstration by Ed Andrejko.

News & Notes

Soccer club slates sign-ups

The Bethlehem Soccer Club is holding a registration session for its fall recreation and spring 2009 travel team programs June 18 from 7 to 9 p.m. at Bethlehem Public Library, Delaware Avenue in Delmar.

The fall recreation program is open to all children born prior to Dec. 1, 2004, that reside in the town of Bethlehem or attend the Bethlehem Central School District. The season begins Sept. 1, and there is a $70 registration fee.

The travel program is divided into age divisions from under 8 and up. Players wishing to participate in the travel program can play in the fall recreation league.

Representatives from both programs will be available at the registration session to answer questions.

Parents may also register their children online at www.sportssignup.com/bsonline.start.

For information, visit the club's Web site at www.bethlehemsoccer.org.

Smith wins pentathlon title

Bethlehem's Sam Smith placed in the top three of all five pentathlon events to win the Division I title at Friday's Section II Track and Field Championships in Johnstown.

Smith won the shot put and placed second in the high jump and 1,500-meter run on his way to the overall title with 3,212 points. He also placed third in the 110-meter high hurdles and the long jump.

Jake Platel also won an individual title for Bethlehem. Platel took first place in the pole vault by clearing 14 feet, 3 inches.

The Voorheesville 3,200-meter relay team of Ryan Allison, Nathan Bub, Ian Powell and Mackey Lloyd won the Division 2 title with a time of 8:06.35.

Cadets pull away from Eagles

Three-run fifth inning helps LaSalle remain undefeated

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem baseball team saw its chance to beat New York's No. 1-ranked Class AA team evaporate in one inning.

LaSalle scored three times in the bottom of the fifth inning and pulled away for a 6-1 victory over the Eagles in last Wednesday's Section II, Class AA semifinal at Troy's Joe Bruno Stadium.

Bethlehem (19-7) had tied the game at 1 in the top of the fifth, but back-to-back singles by LaSalle's Kyle Charron and Jared Henkel to lead off the bottom half of the inning forced Eagles coach Rob Helm to make a pitching change. He replaced starter Randy Bowers with Matt Nash, who pitched a complete-game five-hitter in a quarterfinal win against Shaker.

"With the two base hits, I had to take out Bowers," said Helm.

"That was a hard spot to put Nash in."

It got harder for Nash when a wild pitch and a walk loaded the bases. Brian Beaury then walked to bring in one run. That was followed by an infield single and a sacrifice fly that gave LaSalle (26-0) a 4-1 lead.

That was enough of a lead for Charron. The junior pitcher shut down Bethlehem over the final two innings to pick up the complete-game win. Charron limited the Eagles to four hits and struck out seven.

"The real story was Charron. He pitched a great game," said Helm. "He held us to four hits. I don't think anyone's held us to four hits this season."

LaSalle tacked on two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to seal the victory and advance to Saturday's Class AA final against Columbia—a game it won 3-2.

Bethlehem graduates several key players from this year's team, but Helm said he's optimistic about next year. "We had seven juniors this year, and they're all players," he said.

Dorwaldt refuses to stay sidelined

Pete Dorwaldt sat beside the Bethlehem baseball team's dugout for last Wednesday's Section II, Class AA semifinal game against LaSalle at Joe Bruno Stadium—hoping for an Eagle win.

It was all the longtime baseball coach could do, since he couldn't be in the dugout to assist Bethlehem coach Rob Helm as he had done the last four years.

"It's a lot different," said Dorwaldt. "I miss being in the dugout, and I miss being with the kids at practices."

That's the price Dorwaldt has paid since he was diagnosed with cancer earlier this year—a cancer that is steadily killing him, despite radiation and chemotherapy.

"Nothing's worked—they stopped all the chemo," said Dorwaldt.

"It's going to be sad for me," said Helm. "He's always calmed me down. I'm one of these guys who paces in the dugout wondering what my next move should be, and he'd tell me, 'You're OK.'"

From the Sports Desk

Dorwaldt, the former Albany Academy coach, has done what he can to be there for Helm and his Bethlehem baseball team. He attended most of the Eagles' games during the regular season, often sitting near the dugout to offer advice when called upon.

"I was at a lot of the home games," said Dorwaldt. "When it was cold out, I didn't go. I've been to a few away games—the ones that were easy for me to get to."

Senior pitcher Matt Nash said Dorwaldt's presence was often enough to light a fire under the Eagles, who finished with a 19-7

Yoga — I'm sure all of you have seen this word many times and come to associate various images and ideas with it: the meditating ascetic with legs folded sitting atop a mountain; the miraculous yogi with arms and legs wrapped in unusual noodle-like shapes; or the New Age granola woman or man who lives down the street, wears Birkenstocks, drinks wheatgrass, carries a yoga mat and is exceptionally friendly.

All of these ideas and more are associated with this one word that has permeated our pop culture over the past 30 years and come to mean various things to various people. In the United States, yoga is most often associated with the physical practice of a series of postures. In reality, yoga postures are only one small (but important) part of a highly developed ancient Indian-spiritual philosophy, originating around 3000 B.C.

Yoga promotes well-being in the practitioner by integrating breath and movement into postures (asanas), which allow for the development of concentration in the mind, the development of the physical anatomy of the body, and the exploration of the spirit. Our breath is our life force. It is no wonder that cultivating our breath and our body in a systematic way translates into our well-being — physical, psychological, mental and spiritual. Yoga is appropriate for all ages and all sizes of people (as long as your family doctor gives the go-ahead for exercise). The yoga postures can be adjusted with the help of props (blankets, blocks, straps) and a good teacher, so everyone young and old can gain strength, stability and greater range of motion in the physical body.

There are many different forms of yoga which are currently being practiced and life and an important quality in choosing a good yoga teacher.

A local yoga studio that has provided classes, workshops, inspiration and community to many local yoga students is The Yoga Loft at 540 Delaware Ave. in Albany (www.TheYogaLoft.net). Gerry McDonald and Marge McGreevy opened The Yoga Loft in 2002. Both teachers had been teaching yoga in the community for many years and both felt the desire to create a spacious and warm studio space that welcomed yoga teachers and all practitioners interested in studying various forms of yoga. In addition to offering Iyengar style yoga, the studio now offers classes in Kripalu, Jivamukti and Svaroopa yoga. The Yoga Loft has grown to such a degree over the past six years that Marge and Gerry are offering a 10-month, 200-hour Yoga Teacher Training beginning in September 2008. The training will be conducted by Eileen Muir of Karuna Yoga in Northampton, Mass. It is open to aspiring yoga teachers and also to students of yoga who simply desire more in-depth learning over the course of the year. All are welcome to register. See the Web site or call 438-2557 for more information.

No matter your age or flexibility, join in this exploration of yoga and begin or deepen your path of well-being. After all, a tradition that has lasted 5,000 years is surely based on highly tangible results.

taught in the United States and around the world. Having such a wide variety of choices would seem exciting to some people and yet, for others, choice sometimes leads to confusion — Which form of yoga is the best? Where should I begin? There is no one right answer to these questions. But most important in discovering which form of yoga best suits you, is finding a yoga teacher who is attentive to your physical limitations, inspirational, and knowledgeable. Often it is necessary to try out a number of teachers before choosing a teacher to work with for a longer period of time. Perseverance is an important quality in

Lyme disease: Prevention and treatment

By KEITH FREEMAN AND PAUL PAGNOTTA

The late spring and early summer months bring an increase in outdoor activity but, unfortunately, this is also the time of peak tick activity and Lyme disease transmission. People venturing outdoors should be vigilant for and guard themselves against tick bites. This is especially important for people here in the Northeast, as Lyme disease risk is very high in this region. In 2006, New York had the nation's ninth highest incidence of Lyme disease. Its 4,460 cases made up nearly 23 percent of the all U.S. cases of Lyme disease that were reported to the Centers for Disease Control that year. Although Lyme disease is a serious risk in our area, simple measures can be taken to minimize the risk of disease transmission and most cases can be easily treated with antibiotics.

What is Lyme disease?

Lyme disease is an infection caused by the bacteria, Borrelia burgdorferi. The bacteria are spread by the bites of infected black-legged (deer) ticks. Dog ticks and Lone Star ticks do not spread Lyme disease. The risk of disease transmission is greatest after at least 36 hours of tick attachment. The most common early sign of infection is a circular, expanding rash called erythema migrans that is more commonly known as a "bull's-eye" rash. Other early symptoms include: fatigue, headache, chills, fever, muscle and joint aches and muscle weakness. Untreated Lyme disease can progress to other areas of the body causing severe bouts of arthritis, heart disease, and various nervous system problems such as nerve pain.

How is Lyme disease prevented? Is there a vaccine?

The best way to prevent Lyme disease is to avoid entering tick habitat (tall grassy areas, brushy or wooded areas) when possible. Clear brush and leaf litter, and keep areas of heavy use mowed regularly. When entering tick infested areas, wearing light-colored, long-sleeved shirts and long pants will aid in visualizing ticks on clothing and reduce the amount of exposed skin available for ticks to attach. Tucking the shirt into the pants and the pant-legs into the socks will provide another physical barrier.

Insect repellents containing 20 to 30 percent DEET are effective at preventing tick bites and are safe to use infrequently and in low concentrations. DEET should be applied only to exposed areas of the skin and not underneath clothes. The product needs to be reapplied every few hours (check the product label). To limit exposure to DEET do not apply it to broken, wounded or sun-burned skin and wash the treated area and clothes with soap and water after returning indoors. Concentrations above 30 percent DEET are not recommended for prolonged or frequent use. For children under age 5, use products containing less than 10 percent of DEET and try to avoid repeated applications. Spray the product on your hands first and then apply it to your child to avoid children transferring the product from their hands to their eyes, nose or mouth. Permethrin, an insecticide, is proven to repel and kill ticks when applied to clothes, shoes and camping gear. Treated clothes will retain their effect even after several launderings. Permethrin should NOT be used on the skin. Lastly, thoroughly inspect your entire body for ticks after outdoor activities.

A Lyme disease vaccine was discontinued in 2002 due to lack of demand.

What do you do if you are bitten by a tick?

Tick removal within 36 hours of attachment greatly reduces the risk of infection, so remove them promptly when discovered. Grasp the tick's mouthparts with tweezers close to the skin and gently pull it out. It is OK to leave a portion of the mouthparts in the skin. It does not affect disease transmission and efforts to remove them may cause further tissue injury. Do not crush the body of the tick, and do not use chemicals or to try to loosen the tick. After removal, wash your hands and the bite site with soap and water and disinfect with either rubbing alcohol or hydrogen peroxide. Monitor the bite site and overall health closely for early symptoms of Lyme disease. Tick identification and testing is usually not recommended to determine if a patient requires treatment, but these services are available in some areas.

Preventative antibiotics for adults and children age 8 and older are only recommended when the following are met: The removed tick can be identified as a species of black-legged tick, the tick was attached for at least 36 hours, it is within 72 hours of the time of tick removal, when 20 percent of black-legged ticks in the area are infected, and it is safe for the patient to take the antibiotic. Patients should consult their physician after a tick bite to determine if treatment is warranted.

How is Lyme disease diagnosed and treated?

Lyme disease in its early stages is usually diagnosed based on signs and symptoms (especially the bull's-eye rash) and a recent history of a tick bite. The bull's-eye rash can occur between seven to 14 days after tick attachment, but it does not occur in all patients, chance that symptoms will persist and develop into a chronic illness. In these cases, physicians can prescribe medications to manage any remaining symptoms.

Lyme disease is a potentially

ASK THE PHARMACIST

so monitor for other early symptoms of disease, such as joint pain and weakness. Blood tests are available to diagnose the disease in its later stages. Lyme disease is treated with antibiotics and the length of treatment varies according to severity and how early the disease is caught.

Are there any chronic effects of Lyme disease?

Although antibiotic therapy can rid patients of the bacteria that cause Lyme disease, there is a serious disease that we should all be mindful of as we venture outdoors this summer. Fortunately there are steps to be taken to minimize the risk of infection and the majority of Lyme disease cases are easily treated. Being proactive in terms of preventing and identifying tick bites can go a long way toward ensuring that our outdoor adventures remain enjoyable, healthy experiences.

Active summer days call for a good night's sleep

Professional athletes know that adequate sleep is as crucial to peak performance as any other aspect of training. Sleep not only provides physical rest for our bodies, but mental rest and renewal for our minds. Most people recognize the benefits of sleep, so why don't we make it a priority?

"Too many people dismiss sleep as an activity that can be reduced when life gets too busy, when in reality it is one of the most important things you can do to live a healthy and productive life," says Dr. Howard Fidler, a chiropractor in St. Louis Park, Minn. "Lack of sleep can lead to loss of focus and productivity at work and in other areas of life. It can even make it difficult for your muscles to bounce back after a tough workout."

According to the Tempur-Pedic's 2008 Night-time Renewal Survey, people agree with Dr. Fidler. Of those surveyed, 92 percent say that quality sleep is nighttime renewal for the mind and body and 90 percent agree that when they sleep well, they're more productive the next day.

"Playing in the NBA, I'm always pushing my body to the limit. At night, I know I need to get the best sleep possible so I remain in optimal physical condition," says Sam Cassell, point guard for the Boston Celtics.

Dr. Fidler suggests Cassell, other athletes, and anyone looking for a better night's rest follow these tips to get the best sleep possible:

Comfort

Comfort is an important part of getting a good night's sleep. Choose sheets and blankets that are comfortable and allow for air circulation. Make sure your bedroom is dark, quiet, cool and free of interruptions. Finally, select a mattress that is supportive and relieves your body of pressure so you can sleep soundly.

"Pressure management is the process of absorbing and redistributing pressure evenly across the entire surface of your body," says Dr. Fidler. "Equalizing pressure on your joints and spine reduces pain and disturbances to help you get a restful, deep sleep."

This is especially important for people with back problems or for those who are very active at any level. "I use a Tempur-Pedic mattress because it helps take the pressure off my back and joints so my body heals and I get the rest I need for the next big game," says Cassell.

Diet

Just as a healthy diet can increase your quality of sleep, an unhealthy one can disrupt it. For quality sleep,

A growing number of Americans are enjoying the comforts of returning to familiar places when they vacation.

Re-run season

Boomerang vacationers return to familiar fun year after year

It may be true that you "can't go home again" to recapture the comfort of a simpler time, but a growing number of Americans are enjoying the comforts of returning to familiar places when they vacation. If you're a "repeat guest" - as the travel industry calls boomerang vacationers - you stand to reap social and even financial rewards that may be missed by those who go somewhere new each year.

"The travel industry has long recognized the value of repeat guests," says Colleen Hodson of The Dude Ranchers Association, an organization that represents more than 100 ranches in the western United States and Canada. "Hotels, resorts, dude ranches and even destinations often offer incentives and a highly personalized level of service to encourage guests to return year after year."

Repeat guests have always been a significant percentage of the traveling public, but their numbers seem to be increasing. Travel experts and repeat travelers themselves say the main reason to return to the same vacation spot year after year is the unique experience of engaging in some activity or recreation outside their everyday actions, yet still have the comfort of familiar surroundings. Of course, certain destinations, like national parks, and dude ranches, lend themselves to repeat vacation experiences.

Deen Buttorf of Colorado has visited Rainbow Trout Ranch annually for the past 12 years, first as the father of two young sons, and later after his marriage ended - as a single. While the variety of activities are a plus, what draws Buttorf back year after year, he says, is the camaraderie among repeat guests and the familiarity of staff who know his name.

Nursing at Maria College:

A history of service, a commitment to caring

When Linda DiVirgilio felt it was time to make a career change in 1989, one thing she knew was that she wanted to work in one of the helping professions. At the time, she noticed a growing need for registered nurses throughout the community, and began to think that, armed with her bachelor's degree in sociology from the University at Albany, as well as her many years of work in the social services field, nursing might well be worth further research.

That research brought her to Maria College. Once she was accepted, she began the two-year nursing degree program, taking a year off during that time when she had a child. She was able to switch from the day to the evening program, to give her schedule more flexibility, and was even able to use the lab during that year to ensure her skills remained up-to-date.

"They were very understanding about me taking a year off," she remembered. "I wanted to devote all my time and attention to being a mother, and they were very accommodating."

Looking back, DiVirgilio said that the intensive coursework, as well as the formal and informal recognition she felt at Maria, enhanced her training as a nurse.

"I found the academic rigors at Maria much more difficult than my undergraduate work. The coursework was much more demanding. Their attitude was just a lot different, my advisor was really there every step of the way," said DiVirgilio. "At Maria, there were set times when you sat down with the academic advisor so you couldn't go through that nursing program anonymously."

DiVirgilio's story is just one of thousands. Going back to its beginnings, the nursing program at Maria College has, over the past 40 years, turned out graduates who staff a large number of our region's health-care facilities, and it continues to do so today.

"A great percentage, roughly 60-percent-plus, have gone on to obtain either a BS or an MS in nursing," said Renée Cudhea, director of Maria's Career Development Office. "They work in just about every state, and just about every health facility in the greater Capital Region and outlying areas."

In 1900, St. Peter's Hospital School of Nursing was opened, staffed and supported by the Sisters of Mercy, the same order that still sponsors Maria College today.

The first graduating class of 1903 was made up of three students. Two years later, the school was chartered by the State Board of Regents and continued to operate on the hospital site until 1966.

Starting in 1966, in a cooperative effort, the St. Peter's nursing students received all of their first-year, full-time instruction at adjacent Maria College, which had opened eight years earlier. So, when St. Peter's phased out its diploma school in 1968, Maria was in the position to establish the associate in applied science degree in nursing, a program offered to students wishing to prepare for bedside nursing. Upon approval by the New York State Education Department, it combined liberal arts and nursing classes, held on the college campus, with applied learning experiences in the clinical areas of St. Peter's Hospital and other community health agencies. Satisfactory completion of the program qualified the student to sit for the state examination for the registered nurse license, and if that examination was passed, the candidate received legal status as a registered nurse by the state of New York. The program was granted initial accreditation by the National League for Nursing in June 1973, and received its most recent accreditation in 2005.

Today, according to Margie Byrd, Ph.D., Academic Dean at Maria College, there are 140 students in the freshman class of the nursing degree program, 100 returning students in the senior class, and the program employs 10 full-time teaching faculty members and a lab coordinator. In the Licensed Practical Nurse (LPN) certificate program, introduced in 2005, there are about 40 students, one full-time teaching faculty and a lab coordinator.

The mission of Maria's nursing program, addressed throughout the curriculum and in all program activities, is clear - focus on caring, on a teaching-learning environment, and on personal and professional growth. The program's commitment to service, lifelong learning and respect for the dignity of each person go hand in hand with the longstanding values of the college. From nursing theory, to the art and science of patient care, the nursing curriculum integrates clinical experiences with formal classroom work, and is offered in both the day and evening divisions.

"There's a lot of changing careers, a lot of people that are in the position where they can get tuition reimbursement, a lot of people who have decided health care is what they want to do," said Linda Millenbach, RN, Ph.D., chairperson of and professor in Maria's Nursing Department. "There are a lot of returning students; the average age is 32."

Of the degree and certificate program students, most are part-time, and most, since they work during the day, attend classes in the evening. Going to school full-time, a student would earn an associate of applied science degree in nursing in two years; part-time, evening students finish in three. The certificate program meets on the weekends, and is typically completed in 15 months. During the first semester, LPN students attend classes every other weekend, and then every weekend for the following three semesters.

One of the requirements that a Maria nursing student must meet is participation in the preceptorship program. Each student may choose from a large group of local facilities with which the college has contracted, and then he or she works directly with a staff nurse there, getting individual training in the day-to-day nursing responsibilities at that facility. Many of the students choose a place where they think they might like to work after graduation. Facilities include Albany Medical Center, Bellevue Women's Hospital, St. Peter's Hospital, Ellis Hospital, St. Margaret's Center for Children, Capital District Psychiatric Center, and Our Lady of Mercy Life Center.

So what does happen after graduation?

"The majority go into the field and work, mostly as staff nurses in hospital settings," said Millenbach. "More than 90 percent stay local and work within a hospital."

Millenbach's statement rings true in light of the Religious Sisters of Mercy's original mission for Maria College: "to educate for service to the Greater Capital Region, in order to serve the communities in which its graduates live and work."

It began that way in 1958 and it's still true today.

And DiVirgilio is a perfect example. Now a clinical coordinator at Albany Medical Center's Hemophilia Treatment Center, and with almost 15 years of work experience at Albany Medical Center, her Maria education is serving her well.

"They educate you so well and so intensely and so personally that you really can't slip through the cracks and coast," she said. "And would you really want a nurse, or any medical professional, who had coasted through his or her education? Nursing is something that I've really wanted to stay with because there are so many things you can do - bedside, administrative - you really can never get bored. It's so flexible - you can work evenings, work nights, and in so many different settings - there's no way I could grow tired of it."

Tips to prevent injuries this gardening season

Summer is here and many people are anxious to get out and spruce up their yards. Sometimes this relaxing and enjoyable activity can turn painful, or even dangerous, if completed without caution.

Repetitive movements associated with gardening, such as raking, weeding and digging, can put stress on the neck, shoulders, wrists, hands, back and legs. Many gardeners spend hours performing these activities. Without proper form, this can lead to a variety of problems. Also, simple scrapes, blisters and bites can turn into serious problems if not treated promptly.

To reduce the possibility of injury, the therapists of St. Peter's Physical Therapy and Fitness offer the following suggestions:

• Warm up before gardening. Walk around the yard or garden for five to 10 minutes.

• Stretch your shoulders. To do this, link hands together, turn palms out and raise over head, hold for eight to 10 seconds, repeat six times.

• Next place hand behind opposite elbow, pull across chest toward shoulder, hold for eight to 10 seconds, repeat six times. Repeat with left and right side. Last raise arm up, bend elbow, using opposite hand, pull elbow back further, hold for eight to 10 seconds, repeat six times. Repeat with left and right side.

• To stretch your forearms, hold arm out straight, palm facing down, bend wrist down, use other hand to stretch down further, hold for eight to 10 seconds, repeat six times, and repeat for opposite side. Now, turn palm up, extend wrist back, use other hand to stretch further, hold for eight to 10 seconds, repeat six times.

• Stretch your legs and back. Sit on the ground with one knee bent and the other leg straight out in front of you. Slowly reach forward for your toes. Hold for eight to 10 seconds, repeat five to six times.

• Wear gloves: Bacteria thrive in soil. A small cut can easily become infected without the use of the appropriate type of glove. Heavy leather or suede gloves will protect your hands from thorns or scrapes while pruning. Rubber-coated gloves will help you grip when working in soil or with tools.

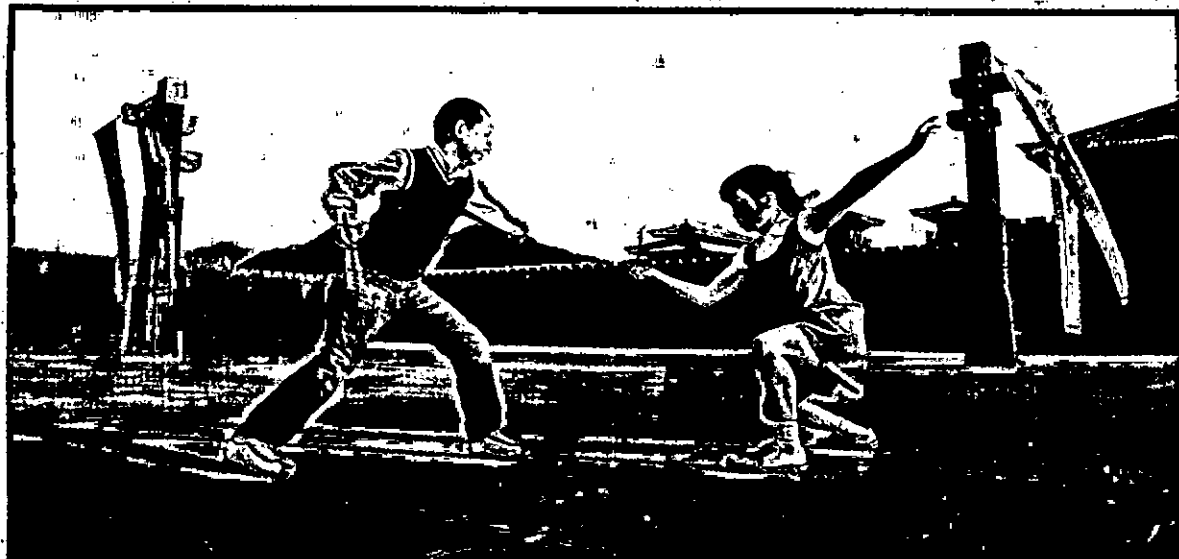

• Use well-designed tools. Use tools with non-slip rubber or padded handles to reduce stress on the small joints of the hands. Make a circle with your index finger and thumb - this is how big the grip of your tool should be. Make sure the shape of the handle provides equal pressure along the palm. When using shovels, rakes or other long-handled tools, make sure they are the right size for you. You should be able to stand upright when using them, rather than bending over. Use good body mechanics. Don't bend over to work on the ground. Squat, semi-squat or kneel, keeping your back straight, or use a specially designed garden stool or bench. Be careful lifting. When lifting heavy objects, squat and bend your knees, using the large muscles in your legs and buttocks. Keep the object close to your body. This will cause less strain on your back and will allow you to use your arms in a more efficient way as well. Avoid reaching overhead for prolonged periods of time to avoid excessive strain on your neck and shoulders. Use a ladder for overhead work.

• Vary your tasks: Avoid too much stress on any one area of your body by frequently changing your tasks. Break up large tasks into short sessions, rest and stretch every hour.

• Pace yourself: Too many hours of gardening at once can put you out of commission for days. Respect your pain and your body. Stop work before you become tired.

St. Peter's Physical Therapy & Fitness provides personalized, comprehensive clinical care at its offices in the Slingerlands Medical Arts Building at 1240 New Scotland Road. Hand-therapy patients work with a certified hand therapist who coordinates their care with a physician; patients are seen, one-on-one, for 30 minutes as often as needed. Call 475-7186 or 475-1818 for information.

Rather than sending your children to another year of art camp, sign them up for a kung fu class.

Inspire your kids to stay active

Summer break will be here before you know it, and if you're like most parents, you're looking for something constructive for your kids to do. Rather than sending them to another year of art camp, expose them to something that will really change their lives for the better this summer. Sign your son or daughter up for a kung fu class.

This sacred martial art, which has been around for nearly 4,000 years, originated in ancient China as a way for people to keep their bodies strong and healthy, the mind sharp and alert and the spirit calm and tranquil. "Kung Fu teaches all qualities that are good for a youngster to master early in life," says Master Yuen, who studied under the same trainer as Kung Fu legend Jackie Chan. Master Yuen started his kung fu training when he was just eight-years-old and says it has served him well.

"It (kung fu) is a good way of living after you get over the hardship of training. It helps keep you in shape, and it helps you be focused on life," says Yuen, who adds that children learn many lessons from kung fu. Among them:

- When you are less strong than your opponent, you will work hard to change the situation.

- When you are stronger than your opponent, you do not take advantage of your strength.

- How to clear your mind.
- How to be confident and have a strong sense of self esteem.
- Kung fu is not for fighting.

If anything, kung fu is just for the opposite of fighting. It is about fighting without fighting.

Yuen says in his experience, children who have taken classes in kung fu tend to do better in school

June marks cancer survivors celebration

Dolores (Lori) Zeh is a competitor. She likes to win and has a cupboard full of trophies and awards to prove it. Tennis was her game; singles, mixed doubles - anytime, anywhere.

Trim and athletic, she was diagnosed with breast cancer in 1996, while in her mid-sixties. It wasn't the disease that put her on the sidelines. On the contrary, Zeh underwent a mastectomy, chemotherapy and radiation and was ready to "get right back into the game," she says.

"But," she continues, "my serve was off. If I couldn't compete and play well, I needed to find something else to do."

She set her sights on snowshoe racing.

To become a serious competitor, Lori says she needed to train. She took up jogging on the rural roadways in East Berne, where she and her husband, Bob, have lived for the past 30 years. In the winter months, when snow is plentiful in the Hilltowns, Bob would tamp down a trail along their property line - his large snowshoes helping to pave the way for his wife's smaller ones.

"I became quite proficient at it," she says.

In 2004, she competed in the Empire State Winter Games - the only entrant in her age group - and was named Snowshoe Athlete of the Year. Although it was never her intention to become a role model, she says it gives her "great pleasure knowing that other people have taken up the sport because of me."

Mr. and Mrs. Zeh are, in the truest sense, lifelong companions. Married for 55 years, they met during their college days at Hofstra University. He became an engineer, building scientific instruments used to measure continental drift. She was a homemaker, wife and mother. They raised their children, built a home and developed many shared interests, including history, hiking and biking. Together, they survived the ups and downs of marriage and parenthood and life in general - not the least of which was cancer.

The Zehs were introduced to cancer for the first time when their 18-year-old son was diagnosed with melanoma. They sought treatment from Dr. Janet Garguilo, a medical oncologist with New York Oncology Hematology (NYOH) in Latham. Their second encounter was Lori's bout with breast cancer. Three years later, she underwent surgery for colon cancer. Bob, too, is a cancer survivor, having had multiple occurrences of malignant melanoma.

"The Zehs are very bright and intelligent, very motivated, very eager to learn and do new things and very anxious to take advantage of all that life has to offer," says Dr. Garguilo. "They do whatever they are asked to do to stay healthy, but their cancers do not control their lives."

Now, well into their 70s, Lori and Bob Zeh are still going strong. They speak enthusiastically of road trips, visits to historic sites and walking tours that await them. Lori is considering archery as the next test of her competitive spirit.

They are among the tens of thousands of cancer survivors whose lives are celebrated during National Cancer Survivors Day activities, traditionally held during the month of June. Established more than two decades ago, the celebration has grown into a worldwide affirmation that life, after a diagnosis of cancer, is a reality.

"Things in life can go wrong easily," says Lori. "It's important to enjoy the things that go right."

"Survivorship celebration time is a very special time, not only for patients and their loved ones, but for physicians," notes Dr. Garguilo. "It's an opportunity to reflect on our successes, to reenergize us in our efforts to find a cure and to give thanks for the wonderful patients and families whose lives we are privileged to share."

Married for 55 years, Bob and Lori Zeh are both cancer survivors who lead active and joyful lives. They are the patients of Dr. Janet Garguilo, a medical oncologist with New York Oncology Hematology in Latham.

Summer skin beauty essentials

Summer is around the corner, and that means more time outside in the sun. While we are aware of the dangers associated with sun-bathing, many still long for that sun-kissed glow. So how can you achieve the look of a bronzed beauty this summer without risking the health of your skin? Use the right tools to enhance features and protect skin.

Here are six essentials every woman should keep in her make-up kit this summer to keep skin looking healthy, glowing and gorgeous:

Foundation that offers SPF protection

Do double duty - hide imperfections and be protected from the sun's ultraviolet rays. The Body Shop's Flawless Skin Protecting Foundation with SPF 25 is an innovative cream-to-powder foundation that provides medium to full coverage. A perfect color blend for a healthy-looking, flawless complexion and has a mineral defense shield to protect skin to boot. The unique formula contains Vitamin C to brighten skin and Community Trade marula oil to condition and moisturize.

A bronzing powder to mimic that sun-kissed glow

Housed in a retro-style compact, Sun Lustre Bronzer, which is part of The Body Shop's new limited edition Summer Make-Up Collection, comes in two colors: Bronze Gleam which is a natural sun-kissed bronze and Radiant Blush, a pretty, pink illuminating shade.

A waterproof mascara

You never know when the mood might hit to take a spontaneous jump in the pool, and you don't want your make-up to suffer. Find a mascara that will survive the water, and also coat lashes with long-lasting color, while helping to condition and protect. The Body Shop's Waterproof Mascara is a great find, and contains Community Trade marula oil.

Bright eyeshadow

Bright, bold, colorful eye shadow helps to enhance the sun-kissed look. The Body Shop's Summer Shimmer Cubes come in Sea Blue which is a deep ocean blue with a hint of silver; Fiery Red which is an intense, vibrant red with softer pink overtones; Green Meadow, a stunning, bright emerald green; and Golden Sun which offers a rich, warm, golden glow.

Sparkly, sheer lipstick to brighten up face

Dark, heavy lip color is best worn in winter, for the summer months try a sheer color that still adds some color to your look. The Body Shop Sheer Lip

The beauty of Botox®

Botox® and fillers, both of which treat wrinkles, are the two most common cosmetic procedures across the world. The main reason for their wide popularity and acceptance is that they achieve the desired results in nearly everyone. Millions of people across the world have been treated with both Botox® and various fillers. Few side-effects have been reported.

Botox® injection of fine wrinkles is the most common cosmetic procedure in the U.S. Botox® is designed to treat wrinkles that are caused by contraction of muscles. The main locations for treatment are the forehead, between the eyebrows (glabellar region), and wrinkles at the edge of the eyes (crow's feet). Botox® works by interrupting the muscle's function temporarily. It takes several days for the Botox® to integrate in the muscle bed to see its effects and within two weeks, peak results are seen. The results will normally last three to four months. It can be quite amazing to see the difference. This is the simplest way to quickly look younger, more youthful without any down time or surgery.

The injections are virtually painless since a very fine needle is used. It is necessary to have this performed by a skilled provider since every person will require a different amount of Botox® and too much could create that frozen forehead appearance. Botox® is less effective in persons older than 65 since the thinning muscle may not respond as well.

Fillers have no age restrictions since these just fill in the static wrinkle, the type seen in the mirror with no facial expression. The commonly used fillers include Juvederm™, Radiesse®, and Restylane®. Both Juvederm™ and Restylane® are structured after the most common component in the skin, hyaluronic acid. Juvederm™ will last about 1 year since it is more tightly cross-linked than Restylane® and takes longer for the body to naturally break it down. Radiesse® is the newest generation of fillers and is comprised of tiny calcium spheres, which allows the body to deposit collagen in the area of injection, so it lasts 18 months. Fillers are great in that results are immediate. Nearly any wrinkle or scar can be treated and softened with fillers.

At Fusion Spa, the board certified physicians will perform a complete assessment and make recommendations for Botox® or which filler is most appropriate. The physicians perform all injections to achieve optimal results. A two-week follow-up is scheduled for all clients.

If you have ever even considered Botox® or fillers, or wish to learn more about these options, then call for a free consultation at Fusion Spa 439-4700 or visit www.fusionspaofalbany.com for a full menu of spa services.

Come join us on Wednesday, June 18, 6 to 7 p.m. for an educational seminar on minimally invasive cosmetic procedures and summer skincare. Call us today and reserve your spot.

SEASON

"Going to new places is always exciting," Buttorf says. "But there's great comfort in the staff at the ranch knowing who I am. They remember what I like and don't like." In fact, he says, when his marriage ended, the support of ranch staff, owners and other familiar guests was "better than any therapy."

Jim Larson, a retired farmer from Minnesota, also enjoys the social aspects of repeat vacationing at a dude ranch. Larson visits several ranches several times a year with a group of like-minded vacationers he met years ago "on the trail." While he enjoys the experiences that a dude ranch vacation offers by combining modern comforts with a rustic environment, the camaraderie is what draws him most.

"My girls have already asked if we can come back next year," one Florida mother said after a visit to the Laughing Water Ranch in Montana. The appeal of the dude ranch as a repeat vacation apparently also spans cultures. A family from Scotland who visited the JJJ Ranch in Montana so enjoyed their experience that they sent the ranch a letter pledging: "We will be back."

Anyone thinking of making a dude ranch vacation their annual get-away should keep a few tips in mind, Larson and Buttorf say.

"Really check out the ranch," Larson advises. "Ask the right questions, like 'What's your return ratio?' If a place has a 70 to 80 percent return rate, you know they must be doing something right."

Be sure the ranch's attractions match your interest. While all will offer horseback riding and similar outdoor activities, other offerings vary widely. At the Three Bars Cattle and Guest Ranch in British Columbia, guests can also partake of activities from tennis, volleyball and golf to hiking, fly-fishing and river rafting. "Decide what your priorities are," Larson says.

To learn more about a dude ranch vacation or to find a ranch that's right for you, visit www.guestranch.com.

INSPIRE

and excel in sports because they have learned to be self disciplined. Additionally, kung fu can really empower kids to become leaders in life and show others that you can have fun while staying active.

Not sure if your kids will like it or not? This summer's Dreamworks film, "Kung Fu Panda" (rated PG) is sure to serve as inspiration. Two of Yuen's students are featured in a McDonald's Happy Meal commercial to celebrate the movie and its theme of discipline and empowerment.

McDonald's is also helping kids discover their own kung fu skills online at www.happymeal.com with Po from "Kung Fu Panda," which debuts in theaters on June 6. There is one Kung Fu Panda toy inside every McDonald's Happy Meal.

Whatever you do though, Yuen recommends you be sure to sign your child up for a class with a trained professional. "These instructors can show your kids the proper way to perform poses and sparring techniques without getting hurt," he says.

SLEEP

eat a healthy diet throughout the day and try to follow these general rules:

- Avoid alcohol and caffeine products before bed. If you need to drink something, choose water, non-caffeinated tea or hot chocolate (which has very little caffeine).

- Try not to eat two hours prior to bed. If you do need a snack before you sleep, keep it light.

- Nicotine is a stimulant and should be avoided before bed.

Exercise

"Most people don't realize that your work-out can affect your sleep but I find that exercising helps me use up energy so that I sleep better," comments Cassell.

Because many of us sit behind desks all day, society in general is much less active than it was 100 years ago. Utilizing these warm months to stay active will help you live healthier and sleep better.

"It's best to do these activities during the daylight hours because if you exercise too close to your bedtime, your body will remain alert, making the process of falling asleep more difficult," says Dr. Fidler. "Do any physical activities at least 2 to 3 hours before you plan to go to sleep."

Relaxation

Planning a regular sleep schedule can drastically increase your ability to fall asleep and stay asleep. Some people choose to take baths or read before bed. This regular activity becomes a signal for the body to relax and prepare for sleep. Relaxation techniques such as light yoga and meditation can also aid the body in preparing for sleep.

"It is essential for the body to get proper support and adequate rest to stay healthy. Whether you are an NBA basketball player, a daily walker or simply a fan of summer fun in the sun, the value of sleep cannot be overlooked," says Dr. Fidler.
